or foure places, and then deliuereth the child, whereunto euery of the Godfathers and Godmothers lay a hand: then the priest chargeth them, that the child be brought vp in the faith & feare of God or Christ, and that it be instructed to clinege and bow to the images, and so they make an end: then one of the Godfathers must hang a crosse about the necke of the child, which he must alwayes weare, for that Russe which hath not a crosse about his necke, they esteeme as no Christian man, and therevpon they say that we are no Christians, because we do not weare crosses as they do.

Of their Matrimonic.

Their matrimony is nothing solemnized, but rather in most pious abhominable, and as neere as I can learne, in this wise following.

First, when there is loue betweene the parties, the man sendeth vnto the woman a small chest or boxe, wherein is a whippe, needles, thred, like I haue seen, & such necessaries as the shall occupy when she is a wife, and perhaps sendeth therewith ball rebons, figges or some such thinges, giuing her to vnderstand, that if she doe offend he must be beaten with the whippe,

whip, & by the needles, chym, cloch, &c. that she should apply her selfe diligently to sewe, and do such things as she could best doe, and by the raisins of fruite she meaneth if she doe well, no good thing shall be withholden from her, nor be too deere for her: and the friends vnto him a shirt, handkerchers, and some such things of her owne making. And now to the effect.

When they are agreed, and the day of marriage appointed, when they shall go to worde the church, the bride will in no wise consent to go out of the house, but she sitteth and striueth with them that would haue her out, and saimeth her selfe to weepe, yet in the end, two women get her out, and lead her to wards the church, her face being couered close, because of her dissimulation, that it should not be openly perceiued: for she maketh a great noyse, as though she were sobbing and weeping, vntill she come at the church, and then her face is vncouered. The man cometh after among other of his friends, and they cry with them to the church a great pot with wine of meade: then the priest coupleth them together much after our order. one promising to loue and serue the other during theyr liues together, &c. which being done they be gine to drinke, and first the woman drinke to the man, and when he hath drunke he letteth the cuppe fall to the ground, halting immediately to tread upon it, and so doeth she, and whether of them tread first vpon it must haue the victory and be maister at all times after, which commonly happeneth to the man, so he is readied to set his foot out it, because he letteth it fall himselfe, then they go home againe, the womans face being vncouered. The boys in the streets cry out and make a noyse in the meane tyme, with very diuine words.

When they come home, the wife is set at the vpper end of the table, and the husband next vnto her: they fall then to drinking till they be all drunke, they perchance haue a minstrell or two, and two naked men, which lead her from the church, dance naked a long time before all the company. When they are weary of drinking, the bride and the bridegrome get them to bed, for it is in the euening alwayes when any of them are married: and when they are going to bed, the bridegrome putteth certaine money both golde and siluer, if he haue it, into one of his bootes, and then he setteth downe in the chamber, crossing his legges, and then the bride must plucke off one of his bootes, which she will, and if she happen on the boot wherein the money is, she hath not onely the money for her labor, but is also at such choyce, as she need not euer from that day forth to pull off his bootes, but if she misse the boot wherein the money is, she doth not onely loose the money, but is also bound from that day forth to pull off his bootes continually.

Then they continue in drinking and making good cheere three dayes following, being accompanied with certaine of their friends, and during the same three dayes he is called a duke, and she a dutches, although they be very poore persons, and this is as much as I haue learned of their matrimony: but one common rule is amongst them, if the woman be not beaten with the whip once a weeke, she will not be good, and therefore they looke for it orderly, and the women say, that if they husbands did not beat them, they should not loue them.

They vse to marry there very young, they soune at 16 and 18 yeeres olde, and the daughters at 12 or 13 yeeres of pounger: they vse to keepe theyr wiues very closely, I meane those that be of any reputation, so that a man shall not see one of them but at a chance, when she goeth to church at Christmas or at Easter, or els going to visite some of her friends.

The most part of the women vse to ride a stride in laddies with stirrups, as men do, and some of them on sleds, which in summer is not commendable.

The husband is bound to finde the wife coulers to paint her withall, for they vse ordinarily to paint themselves: it is such a common practise among them, that it is counted for no shame: they grease their faces with such coulers, that a man may discern them hanging on theyr faces almost a flight shoe off: I can not so well liken them as to a millers wife, for they looke as though they were beaten about the face with a bag of meale, but theyr eye browes they couler as blacke as asiear.

The best property that the women haue, is that they can so we well, and imbroder with silke and golde excellently.

Of their Buriall.

When any man or woman dyeth, they stretch him out, and put a new payre of shoes on his feet, because he hath a great iourney to goe: then do they winde him in a sheet, as we do, but they forget not to put a testimonny in his right hand, which the priest giueth him, to certifie vnto S. Nicholas that he dyed a Christian man or woman. And they put the corse alwayes in a coffin of wood, although the partie be very poore: and when they go to wards the church, the friends and kinsmen of the party departed carry in theyr hands small waue candles, and they weepe and howle, and make much lamentation.

They that be hanged into heauen, it is There are a great
which is a pittifull yeeres, about 80 per has straw and where to dip straw lynes. In the summer
ment with them at
as to the poutrie in to relieve others more of hunger in the
It is a comerey they haue opinion, to which he heatey com therin.

The

The
leo cou
and
of

The first meade small reyon, and great
The fourth meade
The fifth meade is There is also a del Berozeites, which d three monthes of the they cannot haue it.

The voyage

Mosco i

The
the
ua
wa
ca

one leagur beyond Sofco fallct, and vnto a cattie called T second day of Spay,
on one right hand,
two most of it ruine
we passed by a cattie cattie called Cassim Empoy of the wo Cassim on our left lagun, where we e

The women of Russia
paint theyr faces.

They

They that be hanged or beheaded, or such like, haue no testimony with them: how they are receiued into heauen, it is a wonder, without their praye.

There are a great number of poore people among them which die daily for lacke of sustentance, which is a pittifull case to beholde: for there hath bene buried in a small time, within these two yeeres, about 80 persons young and olde, which howe they dyed onely for lacke of sustentance: for if they had had straw and water enough, they would make shift to liue: for a great many are forced in the winter to dip straw and stampe it, and to make bread thereof, or at the least they eat it in stead of bread. In the summer they make good stuff with grasse, herbs, and roots: barks of trees is good meate with them at all times. There is no people in the world, as I suppose, that liue so miserably as do the poouertie in those parts: and the most part of them that haue sufficient for themselves, and wish to relieue others that need, are so mercifull that they care not how many they see die of famine or hunger in the streets.

It is a countrey full of diseases, diuers, and euill, and the best remedy is for any of them, as they haue opinion, to go often vnto the hot houses, as in a maner euery man hath one of his owne, which he heateth commonly twice euery weeke, and all the household sweat, and wash themselves therein.

bread made of straw.

The immensitie of the Russe toward the poore.

houses of baths usual with the Russe.

The names of certaine sortes of drinckes vsed in Russia, and commonly drunke in the Emperours Court.

The first and principall meade is made of the iuyce of licco taken from a berry called in Russia, Malieno, which is of a maruellous sweet taste, and of a catmo sane couler, which berry I haue seene in Paris.

reported by Cho. Bulley.

The second meade is called Viskoua, because it is made of a berry so called, and is like a blacke goose berry: but it is like in couler and taste to the red wine of France.

The third meade is called Amarodina, or Smorodina, hox, of a small berry much like to the small reyon, and groweth in great plenty in Russia.

The fourth meade is called Chereunikyna, which is made of the wilde blacke cherry.

The fifth meade is made of honny and water, with other mixtures.

There is also a delicate drinke by nature from the root of the Byech tree, called in the Russe tongue Berzeuices, which drinke the noble men and others use in April, May, and June, which are the three moneths of the spring time: for after those moneths, the sappe of the tree byech, and then they cannot haue it.

The voyage of M. Anthony Jenkinson, made from the citie of Mosco in Russia, to the citie of Boghar in Baetria, in the yere

1558: written by himselfe to the Merchants of London of the Moscouie companie.

The 23 day of April, in the yeere 1558 (hauing obtained the Emperour of Russia his letters, directed vnto sundry kings and princes, by whose dominions I should passe) I departed from Mosco by water, hauing with me two of your seruants, namely, Richard Johnson and Robert Johnson, and a Tartar Colmach, with diuers parcels of wares, as by the iumentory appeareth: and the 28 day we came to a towne called Collom, distant from the Mosco 20 leagues, & passing one league beyond the said Collom, we came vnto a riuer called Occa, into the which the riuer Mosco falleth, and loastly his name: and passing downe the said riuer Occa 8 leagues, we came vnto a castle called Terreuentisko, which we left vpon our right hand, and proceeding forward, the third day of May, we came vnto another castle called Perossau, distant 8 leagues, leaving it also on our right hand. The third day we came vnto the place where Olde Rezan was situate, being now most of it ruined and ouergrown, and distant from the said Perossau 6 leagues: the 4 day we passed by a castle called Terecouia, from Rezan 12 leagues, and the 6 day we came to another castle called Cassim, vnder the government of a Tartar prince named Vizar Zegoline, sometime Emperour of the worthy citie of Cazan, and now subiect vnto the Emperour of Russia. But leaving Cassim on our left hand, the 8 day we came vnto a saye towne called Morom, from Cassim 20 leagues, where we tooke the soune, and found the latitude 56 degrees: and proceeding forward the situated at the fall of the said M...

11 day

Nouogrod, on both the land of Russia of a captaine whith
the number of munition: and Nysc Nouogrod,
we left upon our ho was called Va-
iagorod, is to say,
from the Tartares,
good success in his especially against ered the famous ri-our journey the 25
we left on our right Mardouts, and the
this Emperour of lehoue towne of ha-

ow share of sayd ague from the citie
to the fore said Volastle, situated upon Emperour of Russia
free stone. It hath it was a kingdome
but 9 yeeres past,
g but young is now
ings of the said Ca-
ough civil discop,
at this present there Cazan, whom the

ence: and the same to be a place where and diuers other na-
and standeth without to Mare Caspium, ama, which we left
er of Volga, and is the said river Ca-tilis, and liue in the Volga ouer against Tartares, and all the
and so following the Turkemen, is tal-habonnet, and were es among them, so
and yere there was the like plague was of grece pasture, it had cruell warres

into diuers compo-ng, and was called erry Hurle of King hauling

having his flocks of people about him, with their wives, children and cattell, who having consu-ued the pasture in one place, remooued vnto another: and when they remooue they haue houses the houses set upon waggones or carts, which are drawn from place to place with camels, and therein they haue their children, and all they riches, which is very little, is carried about, and euery man hath at the least foure or five wives besides concubines. Use of money they haue none, but doe barter they cattell for apparell and other necessaries. They delight in no arte nor science, except the horses, wherein they are expert, but for the most part they be pasturing people, and haue great flocks of cattell, which is all they riches. They eate much flesh, and especially the horse, and they drinke mares milke, wherewith they be oftentimes drunke: they are seditious and inclined to steal and murder. Come they soue noe, neither doe eate any bread, mocking the Christians for the same, and disabling our strength, saying we liue by eating the toppes of a weede, and drinke a drinke made of the same, allowing they great deuouring of flesh, and drinking of milke to be the increase of they strength. But now to proceed forward to my iourney,

All the countrey vpon our right hand the river Volga, from ouer against the river Cama vnto the towne of Astracan, is the land of Crimme, whose inhabitants be also of the law of Mahomet, and liue for the most part according to the fashions of the Magages, hauing continuall wars with the Emperour of Russia, and are valiant in the field, hauing countenance, and support from the great Turke.

The 16 day of June we passed by certaine fishermen houses called Petowle twentie leagues from the river Cama, where is great fishing for sturgeon, and so continuing our way vntill the 22 day, and passing by another great river called Samar, which falleth out of the aforesayd coun-trei, and runneth through Nagay, and entereth into the sayd river of Volga. The 28 day we came vnto a great hill, where was in times past a castle made by the Crimmes, but now it is ruined, being the iust midway betwene the sayd Cazan and Astrachan, which is 200 leagues of therabout, in the latitude of 51 degrees 47 minutes. Vpon all this soyle groweth abundance of licorish, whose root runneth within the ground like a vine.

Ricott in great plenty.

Thus going forward the first day of Iulie we came to a place called Perouolog, so named because in times past the Tartares carped their boates from Volga into the river Tanais, othe-wise called Don, by land, when they would robbe such as passed downe the sayd Volga to Astra-can, and also such as passed downe by the river Tanais, to Afophe, Cassa, or any other towne situated vpon Mare Euxinum, into which sea Tanais falleth, who hath his springes in the coun-trei of Rezan, out of a plaine ground. It is at this streight of Perouolog from the one riuer to the other two leagues by land, and is a dangerous place for thieves and robbers, but now it is not so still as it hath bene, by reason of the Emperour of Russia his conquests.

Departing from Perouolog, hauing the wildernesse on both sides, we saw a great heard of Nagayans, pasturing, as is abovesayd, by estimation aboue a thousand camels drauing of carts with houses vpon them like centers, of a strange fashion, seeming to be a farre off a towne: the Doy was belonging to a great Hurle called Smille, the greatest prince in all Nagay, who hath killed and byuen away all the rest, not sparing his owne brethren and children, and hauing peace with this Emperour of Russia he hath what he needeth, and ruleth alone, so that now the Russes liue in peace with the Nagayans, who were wont to haue moxall warres together.

The 14 day of Iulie passing by an olde castle, which was Olde Astracan, and leauing it vpon our right hand, we arrived at New Astracan, which this Emperour of Russia conquered five yeeres past, in the yeere 1552. It is from the Moscovito Astracan five hundredth leagues, or there about. The towne of Astracan is situated in an Island vpon a hill side, hauing a castle within the same, walled about with earth and timber, neither saye nor strong, the towne is also walled about with earth: the buildings and houses (except it be the capitaines lodging, and certaine other gentlemen) most base and simple. The Island is most destitute and barren of wood and pasture, and the ground will beare no corne: the ayre is there most infected, by reason (as I suppose) of much stie, and specially sturgeon, by which onely the inhabitants liue, hauing great partie of flesh and bread. They hang up their fish in they streets and houses to dry for they pro-uision, which causeth such abundance of flies to increase there, as the like was neuer scene in any land, or their great plague. And at my being at the sayd Astracan, there was a great famine and plague among the people, and specially among the Tartares called Nagayans, who the same time came thither in great numbers to render themselves to the Russes their enemies, and to seeke succour at their hands, their countrey being destroyed, as I said before: but they were but ill recei-ued, or reliued, for there dyed a great number of them for hunger, which lay all the Island through in heapes dead, and like to beastes, unburied, very pittifull to beholde: many of them were

Astracan.

were also sold by the Russes, and the rest were banished from the Island. At that time it had bene an easie thing to have converted that wicked Nation to the Christian faith, if the Russes themselves had bene good Christians: but how should they shew compassion vnto other Nations, when they are not mercifull vnto their owne. At my being there I could haue bought many goodly Tartars children, if I would haue had a thousande, of their owne fathers and mothers, to say, a boy or a wench for a loose worth five pence in England, but we had more need of victualles at that time then of any such merchandize. This Astracan is the furthest houle that this Emperour of Russia hath conquered of the Tartars towards the Caspian Sea, which hee keepeth very strong, sending thither euery yere provision of men, and victualles, and timber to builde the castle.

There is a certaine trade of merchandize there vsed, but as yet so small and beggerly, that it is not woorth the making mention, and yet there come merchantes thither from diuers places. The chiefest commodities that the Russes bring thither are, robe lynes, robe therye skins, wooden vessels, bydes, and saddles, knives, and other trifles, with come, bacon, and other victualles. The Tartars bring thither diuers kindes of wares made of coeren wooll, with diuers kindes of woughe silkes: and they that come out of Persia, namely from Shamackie do bring sowing silke, which is the courtest that they vse in Ruffeland, Crasko, diuers kindes of pipe silkes for girdles, shirts of male, bows, swoords, and such like things: and some yeres come, and walnuts, but all such thinges in such small quantitie, the merchantes being so beggerly and poore that bring the same, that it is not woorth the buying, neither is there any hope of trade in all those parts woorth the following.

This foresaid Island of Astracan is in length twelue leagues, and in bredth three, and lieth East and West in the latitude of fortye seuen degrees nine minutes: we arriued there vntill the last day of August, and hauing bought and provided a boate in companie with certaine Tartars and Persians, we laded our goods, and imbarked our selues, and the same day departed I, with the said two Johnsons hauing the whole charge of the Nauigation downe the said riuer Volga, being very crooked, and full of flax toward the mouth thereof. We entered into the Caspian sea the tenth day of August at the Easterly side of the said riuer, being twentie leagues from Astracan & foresaid, in the latitude of fortye five degrees twentie seuen minutes.

Volga hath seuentie mouthes or falles into the sea: and we hauing a large winde, kept the Northward spere, and the eleuenth day we sailed seuen leagues Eastnortheast, and came vnto an Island hauing an high hill therein, called Arcurgar, a good Marke in the sea. From thence East ten leagues, we fell vnto another Island called Bawhyata, much higher then the other. Within these two Islands to the Northward, is a great bay called the Blew sea. From thence we sailed East and by North foure leagues, and hauing a contrary winde, we came to an anker in a shallow water, and so ride vntill the sixteenth day, hauing a great storme at Southward, being a most contrary winde, which we ride out. Then the winde came to the North, and we weped, and set our course Southward, and that day sailed eight leagues.

Thus proceeding forwards, the seventeenth day we lost sight of land, and the same day sailed thirtie leagues, and the eighteenth day twentie leagues winding East, and fell vnto a land called Baughleata, being seuentie foure leagues from the mouth of the foresaid Volga, in the latitude of fortye five degrees fiftie foure minutes, the coast lying nearest East and by South, and West and by North. At the point of this land lyeth buried a holie Prophet, as the Tartars call him, of the Hebrews, where great deuotion is vsed of all such Spahomettes as doe passe that waye.

The nineteenth day the winde being West, and we winding Eastnortheast, we sailed some leagues, and passed by a great riuer called Yake, which hath his spring in the lande of Siberia, and runneth vnto the foresaid riuer Cama, and runneth through the land of Nagay, falling into the Mare Caspium. And by this riuer one dayes journey is a towne called Serachicke, subject to the foresaid Tartar prince called Murie Smille, which is now in friendship with the Emperour of Russia. There is no trade of merchandize vsed, for that the people haue no vsf of money, and are all men of warre, and pastures of cattell, and giuen much to theft and murder. Thus being at an anker against this riuer Yake, and all our men being on lande, sailing I, who laye some licks, and saw Tartars, wherof one was reputed a holy man, because hee came from Mecca, there came vnto vs a boate with thirtie men well armed and appointed, who hooyed vs, and beganne to enter vnto our barke, and our holy Tartar called Azy, perceiuing that, asked them what they would haue, and withall made a prayer: with that these rowers stayed, declaring that they were Gentlemen, banished from thei countrey, and out of living, and came to see if there

The length of the Island of Astracan.

Volga.

Baughleata.

Serachicke.

there were any Russes Azic most souerely an which lightly they w and so through the st our men being come o Call and Southward, th
The 2 day we sail two Islands at the So the land reuised North ging out of the land of

The 22, 23, and 24
The 25 the winde c
two land and there abo ch in a great bay, but being much troubled w east 10 leagues, and se 10 leagues the furthe
The 27 day we cro
point of land and being vntill we should haue a port called Mangolla the Caspian sea is 23 foresaid storme, were by goulaue being very low winde helde people wh But yet here we sen will for our good vifag the same sea vnto a pl the dayes journey, Di things.

Wherfore the 3 day we were gentlly intere stern, we founde the left vs, either by sight double, that the wone could vs to hasten a tw pire of furs as wee by euery camels laden and foure wooden dist hurches, namely, 9
And thus being reat Carauan of 1000, can the Dominion, and by armed, and seruants by Mangoslaue, where we had but not disappoint and opened our wares we, but for such thing vnto the same Prince, a wile through his count to me, and increasid milke: for bread and he for such things as hee but hee gaue mee his being glad that I was gone vnto him, I vnto destroyed.

The Soltan liued

there were any Russes or other Christians (which they call Caphars) in our barke: to whom this Azic would shortly answered, that there were none, avowing the same by great othes of their lawes, (which lightly they will not breake) whom the rowers beleued, and vpon his wordes departed, and so through the sterilitie of that Tartar, I with all my companie and goods were saued, and our men being come on boorde, and the winde faire, we departed from that place, and winding East and South-east, that day being the second of August sailed 16. leagues.

The 2. day wee passed ouer a bay of 6. leagues broad, and fell with a Cape of land, hauing two Islands at the South-east part thereof, being a good marke in the sea: and doubling that Cape the land turned North-east, and maketh another bay, into which falleth the great riuer Yem, springing out of the land of Colmacke.

The 22. 23. and 24. dayes, we were at an ancre.

The 25. the winde came faire, and we sailed that day 20. leagues, and passed by an Island of this land, and there about are many flats and sands: and to the Northward of this Island there groweth in a great bay, but wee set off from this Island, and winded South to come into deepe water, being much troubled with shoals and flats, and ranne that course 10. leagues, then East South-east 10. leagues, and fel with the maine land, being full of copped hills, and passing along the coast 20. leagues, the further we sailed, the higher was the land,

The 27. day we crossed ouer a bay, the Southshore being the higher land, and fell with a high point of land, being ouerthwart the Cape, there rose such a storme at the East, that we thought verily we should haue perished: this storme continued 3. dayes. From this Cape we passed to a place called Mangoslaue. The place where wee should haue arriued at the Southermost part of the Caspian sea, is 2. leagues within a bay: but wee being sope tormented, and tossed with this high storme, were diuined vnto another land on the other side the bay, ouerthwart the said Mangoslaue being very lowe land, and a place as well for the ill commoditie of the haue, as of those wilde wilde people where neuer barke nor boate hath sope arriued, nor liked of vs.

But yet here we sent certaine of our men to talke with the gouernour and people, as well for our good usage at their handes, as also for psonion of camels to carry our goods from the same sea side to a place called Sellyzure, being from the place of our landing five and twenty dayes iourney. Our messengers returned with comfortable wordes and faire promises of all things.

Wherefore the 3. day of September 1558. we discharged our barke, and I with my companie were greatly entertained of the Prince, and of his people. But before our departure from thence, we founde them to bee very badde and brutish people, for they ceased not dayly to mangle vs, either by fighting, stealing or begging, raping the pisse of horse and camels, and victuals waste, that the want was there to see, and forced vs to buy the water that wee did drinke: which cost vs to hasten away, and to conclude with them as well for the hire of camels, as for the pisse of such as wee bought, with other psonion, according to their owne demaunde: so that for every camel's lading being but 400. waight of ours, wee agreed to giue three hides of Russia, and foure wooden dishes, and to the Prince of gouernour of the saide people one nithe and two burths, namely, 9. fewer all things, and twisse 7. fewer all things: for money they vse none.

And thus being ready, the fourteenth of September wee departed from that place, being a Carauan of 1000. camels. And hauing trauailed five dayes scuriney, wee came to another Prince's Dominion, and vpon the way there came vnto vs certaine Tartars a horsebacke, being well armed, and seruants vnto the said Prince called Timor Solcan, gouernour of the said Countrey of Mangoslaue, where we went to haue arriued and discharged our barke if the great storme aforesaid had not disappoynted. These foresaid Tartars slayed our Carauan in the name of their prince, and opened our wares, andooke such things as they thought best for their said prince without money, but for such things as theyooke from me, which was a nithe, (after much dissension) I ridde vnto the same Prince, and presented my selfe before him, requesting his fauour, and paymēt to tra- uel with his comerey, and not to be robbed nor spoiled of his people: which request he graunted me, and entertained me very gently, commanding mee to be well feasted with flesh and mares milke: for bread they vse none, nor other drinke excepte water: but money he had none to giue mee for such things as heeooke of mee, which might bee of value in Russe money, fifteen rubbles, but hee gaue mee his letter, and a horse worth seven rubbles. And so I departed from him being glad that I was gone: for hee was reported to bee a very tyrant, and if I had not gone vnto him, I vnderstoode his commandement was, that I should haue bene robbed and destroyed.

This Solcan liued in the fieldes without Castle or towne, and saze at my being with him, in a litle rounde house made of reedes covered without with felt, and within with Carpets. There was with him the great Metropolitane of that wilde Countrey, cheifem of the people, as the bishop of Rome is in most parts of Europe, with diuers other of his chiefe men: the Soltan with this Metropolitane demanded of me many questions, as wel touching our kingdoms, lawes, and Religion, as also the cause of my coming into those parts, with my further pretence. To whom I answered concerning all things, as vnto me seemed best, which they took in good part. So by using leave I departed and overtooke our Carauan, and proceeded on our iourney, and trauielled 20. daies in the wilderness from the sea side without seeing towne or habitation, carrying provision of victuals with vs for the same time, and were diuised by necessitie to eate one of my camels and a horse for our part, as other did the like, and during the said 20. daies we found no water, but such as we drue out of olde decaye wells, bring very brackish and sale, and yet sometimes pastur'd in three daies without the same. And the 5. day of October ensuing, we came vnto a gulph of the Caspian sea againe, where wee founde the water very fresh and sweete: at this gulph the ambassadors of the king of Turckeman met vs, whoooke custome of eury 25. one, and 7. mitches for the said king and his brethren, which being received they departed, and we remained there a day or two to refresh our selues.

Note that in times past there did fall into this gulph a great riuer Oxus, which hath his spring in the mountaines of Parapontus in India, and now commeth not so farre, but falleth into another riuer called Ardocke, which runneth toward the North, and consumeth himselfe in the ground, passing vnder ground about 1000. miles, and then issueth out againe and falleth into the lake of Kirghay.

After hauing refreshed our selues at the foresaide gulph, departed thence the 4. day of October, and the 7. day arrived at a Castle called Sellizure, where the king (called Azim Can) remained with 3. other of his brethren, and the 9. day I was commaunded to come before his presence, to whom I deliuered the Emperours letters of Russia: and I also gaue him a present of a nimbe, who entertained me very well, and caused mee to eate in his presence as his brethren did, feeding me with flesh of a wilde horse, and mares milke without bread. And the next day sent for mee againe, and asked of me diuers questions, as well touching the affaires of the Emperour of Russia, as of our Countrey and lawes, to which I answered as I thought good: so that at my departure he gaue me his letters of safe conduct.

This Castle of Sellizure is situated vpon a high hill, where the king called the Can hath whole palace is built of earth very basely, and not strong: the people are but poore, and little trade of merchandise among them. The South part of this Castle is lowe lande, but very fruitful, where growe many good fruites, among which there is one called a Dynie of a great bignesse and full of moisture, which the people doe eate after meate in steade of dynike. Also there growes another fruite called a Carbusc of the bignesse of a great cucumber, yellow and sweete as sugar: also a certaine coyne called Legur, whose halke is much like a sugar cane, and as high and the graine like rice, which groweth at the topp of the cane, like a cluster of grapes; the water that serueth all that Countrey is drawen by dykes out of the riuer Oxus, vnto the great destruction of the said riuer, for which cause it falleth not into the Caspian sea as it hath done in times past, and in those time all that lande is like to be destroyed, and to become a wilderness for want of water, when the riuer of Oxus shall falte.

The 14. day of the moneth we departed from this Castle of Sellizure, and the 16. of the same we arrived at a citie called Vrgence, where we payde custome as well for our owne heads, as for our camels and horse. And hauing there solour'd one moneth, attending the time of our further trauiell, the king of that Countrey called Aly Soltan, brother to the foresaid Azim Can, returned from a towne called Corozan within the borders of Persia, which hee lately had conquered from the Persians, with whom hee and the rest of the kings of Tartaria haue continuall warres. Before this king also I was commaunded to come, to whom I likewise presented the Emperours letters of Russia, and he entertained me well, and demanded of me diuers questions, and at my departure gaue me his letters of safe conduct.

This Citie or towne of Vrgence standeth in a plaine ground, with walles of earth, by estimation 4. miles about it. The buildings within it are also of earth, but ruined and out of good order: it hath one long streete that is covered aboue, which is the place of their market. It hath bene wonne and lost 4. times within 7. yeeres by ciuill warres, by means whereof there are but fewe marchants in it, and they very poore, and in all that towne I could not sell aboue 4. carseis. The chiefe commodities there solde, are such wares as come from Boghara, and out of Persia, but in most small quantitie not worth the witting. All the land from the Caspian sea to this Citie of Vrgence,

Sellizure, or Sapizure.

gence, is called the which hee in nombe chered causing in his some portion, and on them, by reason that flames, either Chyristia of Sukan, hath at the
and when there are come if hee be not slain there liueth in the wild my Carauans of Harat wicked life, vntill such gainre. From the Ca
the said sea, the people are to another in g horses, and sheepe bo waping 60. or 80. yoe times kill with their

The haukes are in fines and soze beating horse with his arrowes heard wher: on the ca

The Tartars neuer
or any other pleasure, ple haue not the vse of cellaries, they haue et they be great deuouce wily, especially the h of the Nagayans, and this countrey, vntill po iourney, except it be i daies iourney and mo uether them, and so als round in great compa

The 26. day of No the riuer Oxus: 100. m taine peate custome. T and passing about 10 sing vnder the same al
haue before declar'd.

The 7. of Decemb Suman Soltan, who feare of his brother th who willed vs to make Castle for custome, of Thus proceeding came vnto vs foure ho bowed them, and haui my hostmen, and no theeres ahynde: for in companie of Carau were to be doubted, T to the said Soltan of suspected men which such sort, that they com who lay in waite to de The Soltan therel well armed with a C

Carpetts. These people, as the the Solkan rooms, labors, reference. To whom good part. So ney, and trauciles carrying provisions of my camels
no water, but sometimes passed into a gulph of the gulph the
7. miche for there a day

th hath his springs all lech into another leth in the ground, eth into the lake of

4. day of October, (m Can) remained
foze bis presence,
presence of a niche,
relpen did, feeding
day sent for mee emperor of Russia, at my departur

ed the Can it poore, and ade, but very ynic of a great ynike. Also bello and rane, and as l grapes; the
into the ch done in dernes for want of the 16. of the ome heads, as time of our med Azym Can, oe lachly had ia haue contin wise presence

diuers questions.

of earth, by out of good cket. It hath there are but e 4. carleis. The at of Persia, but in this Citie of gence,

gence, is called the lande of Turkeman, and is subiect to the saide Azim Can, and his brethren which be 5. in number, and one of them hath the name of the chiefe king called Can, but he is little esteemed sauing in his owne Dominion, and where he dwelleth: for every one will be king of his owne portion, and one brother seeketh al waies to destroy another, hauing no natural loue among them, by reason that they are begotten of diuers women, and commonly they are the children of slaves, either Chyistians or Gentiles, which the father doth keepe as concubines, and euery Can of Sukan, hath at the least 4. or 5. wiues, besides yong maydens and boyes, liuing most viciously: and when there are warres betwix these brethren, (as they are seldome without) hee that is ouercome if hee be not slaine, flieth to the field with such companie of men as will followe him, and there liueth in the wilderness rejoycing to watering places, and so robbeth and spoyleth as many Carauans of Marchantes and others as they be able to ouercome, continuing in this sort his wicked life, untill such time as hee may get power and ayde to inuade some of his brethren againe. From the Caspian sea unto the Castle of Sellzure aforesaid, and all the Countreys about the said sea, the people liue without towne or habitation in the wilde fieldes, remoouing from one place to another in great companies with their cattle, whereof they haue great store, as camels, horses, and sheepe both tame and wilde. Their sheepe are of great stature with great buttocks, weighing 60. or 80. pound in waight. There are many wilde horses, which the Tartars doe many times kill with their hantes, and that in this order.

The hantes are hired to leape vpon the beasts neckes or heads, which with chasung of themselves and soze beating of the haukes are cired: then the hunter following his game, doeth slay the horse with his arrowe or sword. In all this lande there groweth no grasse, but a certaine husk of heath wher-on the cattell feeding, become very fat.

The Tartars neuer ride without the bowe, arrowes, and sword, although it be on hauking, or at any other pleasure, and they are good archers both on horsebacke, and on foote also. These people haue not the vse of golde, siluer, or any other coppe, but when they lacke apparell or other necessaries, they haunter their cattell for the same. Bread they haue none, for they neither till nor sow, they be great deuourers of flesh, which they cut in small pieces, and eat it by handfuls most greedily, especially the horse flesh. Their chieffest drinke is mares milke sozued, as I haue said before of the Nagayans, and they wilde drinke with the same: they haue no riuers nor places of water in this countrey, untill you come to the aforesaid gulfe, distant from the place of our landing 20. dayes iourney, except it be in wells, the water whereof is salish, & yet distant the one from the other two dayes iourney and moze. They ease their meate vpon the ground, sitting with their leggs double vnder them, and so also when they pray. Arte or science they haue none, but liue most idly, sitting round in great companies in the fieldes, deuising, and talking most vainely.

The 26. day of November, wee departed from the towne of Vigence, and hauing traualled by the riuer Oxus 100. mile, we passed ouer another great riuer called Ardocke, where we paid a certayne petite custome. This riuer Ardocke is great, and very swift, falling out of the aforesaid Oxus, and pulling about 1000. mile to the Northward, it then consumeth it selfe in the ground, and passing vnder the same about 500. mile, issueth out againe, and falleth into the lake of Kitay, as I haue before declared.

The 7. of December following, wee arrived at a Castle called Kaic, subiect to a Solkan called Saramer Solkan, who ment to haue robbed all the Chyistians in the Carauan, had it not bene for feare of his brother the king of Vigence, as we were informed by one of his chieffest counsaillers, who willed vs to make him a present, which he took, and deliuered: besides we payde at the saide Castle for custome, of euery camel one red hide of Russia, besides petite gifts to his officers.

This proceeding in our iourney, the tenth day at night being at rest, and our watch set, there came vnto vs foure horsemen, which we took as spies, from whome wee took their weapons and bound them, and hauing well examined them, they confessed that they had seene the tract of many horsemen, and no footing of camels, and gaue vs to vnderstande, that there were rousers and theues aboade: for there traualled fewe people that are true and peaceable in that Countrey, but in companie of Carauan, where there be many camels, and horsefeeding ne we without camels were to be doubted. Whereupon we consulted & determined amongst our selues, and sent a poste to the saide Solkan of Kayte, who immediately came himselfe with 300. men, and met these foure suspected men which we sent vnto him, and examined them so straightly, and threatened them in such sort, that they confessed, there was a banished Prince with 40. men 3. dayes iourney forward, who lay in waite to destroy vs, if he could, and that they themselves were of his companie.

The Solkan therefore vnderstanding that the theues were not many, appointed vs 80. men well armed with a Capetaine to goe with vs, and conduct vs in our way. And the Solkan himselfe returned returned backe againe, taking the 4. cheues with him. These souldiers trauailed with vs two dayes, consuming much of our victuals. And the 7. day in the morning very early, they set out before our Carauan, and hauing ranged the wilderness for the space of foure houres, they met vs coming towardes vs, as fast as their horse could runne, and declared that they had found the trace of horses not farre from vs, perceiuing well that wee should meete with enemies, and therefore willed vs to appoint our selues for them, and asked vs what we would giue them to combat vs further, or els they would returne. To whom we offered as we thought good, but they refused our offer, and would haue more, and so we not agreeing they departed from vs, and went backe to their Sokane, who (as wee coniectured) was puiue to the conspiracie. But they being gone, certaine Tartars of our companie called holy men, (because they had bene at Mecha) caused the whole Carauan to stay, and would make their prayers, and deuine howe wee should prosper in our iourney, and whether we should meete with any ill companie or no, to which, our table Carauan did agree, and they tooke certaine sheepe and killed them, and tooke the blade bones of the same, and first sodde them, and then burnt them, andooke of the blood of the saide sheepe, and mingled it with the powder of the saide bones, and wrote certaine Characters with the saide blood, vsing many other ceremonies and wordes, and by the same deuined and sounde, that wee should meete with enemies and cheues (to our great trouble) but should ouercome them, to which I accerie, I and my companie gaue no credite, but we found it true: for within 3. houres after that the souldiers departed from vs, which was the 15. day of December in the morning, we chieftaine sent our officers horsemen which made towardes vs, and we (perceiuing them to be rourers) gathered our selues together, being 40. of vs well appointed, and able to fight, and we made our prayers together euery one after his lawe, professing to liue and die one with another, and so prepared our selues. When the cheues were nigh vnto vs, we perceiued them to be in number 37. men well armed, and appointed with bowes, arrowes and swords, and the Captaine a prince banished from his Countrey. They willed vs to yeelde our selues, or els to bee slaine, but wee defied them, wherewith they shotte at vs all at once, and wee at them very hotly, and so continued our fight from morning vntill two houres within night, diuers men, horses and camels being wounded and slaine on both partes: and had it not bene for 4. handgunnes which I and my companie had and used, we had bene ouercome and destroyed: for the cheues were better armed, and were also better archers then we: But after wee had slaine diuers of their men and horses with our gunnes, they durst not appoche so nigh, which caused them to come to a truce with vs vntill the next morning, which we accepted, and encamped our selues vpon a hill, and made the fashion of a Castle, walling it about with packes of wares, and layde our horses and camels within the same to save them from the shotte of arrowes: and the cheues also incamped within an arrowe shotte also of vs, but they were betwixt vs and the water, which was to our great discomfort, because neither we nor our camels had drinke in 2. dayes before.

This keeping good watche, when halfe the night was spent, the Prince of the cheues sent a messenger halfe way vnto vs, requiring to talke with our Captaine in their tongue, the Carauan Basha, who answered the messenger, I will not depart from my companie to goe into the halfe way to talke with thee: but if that thy Prince with all his companie will sweare by our Lawe to keepe the truce, then will I sende a man to talke with thee, or els noe. Which the Prince vnderstanding as well himselfe as his companie, swore so lowde that wee mighte all heare. And then wee sent one of our companie (reputed a holy man) to talke with the same messenger. The message was pronounced aloude in this order. Our Prince demaunded of the Carauan Basha, and of all you that be Buffarmans, (that is to say circumcised) not desiring your bloods, that you deliuer into his handes as many Caphars, that is, unbelieuers (meaning vs the Christians) as are among you with their goods, and in so doing, hee will suffer you to be part with your goods in quietnesse, and to the contrary, you shall be handled with no lesse crueltie then the Caphars, if hee ouercome you, as he doubteth not. To the which our Carauan Basha answered, that hee had no Christians in his companie, nor other strangers, but two Turkes which were of their Lawe, and although hee had, hee would rather die then deliuer them, and that wee were not afraid of his chyeatnings, and that should hee knowe when day appeared. And so passing in talke, the cheues (contrary to their othe) carried our holy man away to their Prince, crying with a lowde voyce in token of victorie, Ollo, ollo. Where with we were much discomforted, fearing that that holy man would betray vs: but hee being cruelly handled and much examined, would not be deach confesse any thing which was to vs prejudiciall, neither touching vs, nor yet what men they had slaine and wounded of ours the day before. When the night was spent, in the morning we prepared our selues to battel againe, which the cheues perceiuing, required to fall to agreement & asked much of vs And to be byt like to loose, & asked (that is to say) 20. m crues, the cheues de lyment. And that m dres without water horses and camels, an againe of such like, wildernes of sand, an with the water being males, being forced to

In this wilderness red, there came certai from the Carauan, w mels and departed be ous againe, and the
that he has gotten th covered vs, we know

So vpon the 21.
This Boghar is situ with diuers gates int and the 3. part is fo by themselves. The so many houses, tem bathhouses so artifi long to rehearse.

water thereof is most cially in them that be betwixt the flesh and Surgeons being nu
cuery say the comm And yet it is there fo is found to be ake th there are officers ap scarce if hee haue e people the drinke, and come but by the bea rape their handes.

There is a Specter
he is more obeyed th
sure, as hee did by th of the saide Petroppo was a Prince that is

This Countrey o
sian tongue, but yet the saide Persians at warres is, for that the all other Tartars doe as they doe the Chy

The king of Bog maintained by the C the craftes men as b pech in great subiect saide Sparthans to ind to pay mee certai and copper, for golde pence English, and r said 12 d. and is mo

of the two to be yefle, the most part of our companie being loth to go to battel againe, and hauing little to looke, & safeconduct to passe, we were compelled to agree, & to giue the cheues 20. ninebe (that is to say) 20. times 9. scuerall things, and a camell to carie away the same, which being re- ceived, the cheues departed into the wilderness to their olde habitation, and we went on our way forwards. And that might come to the riuer Oxus, where wee refreshed our selues, hauing bene 3. dayes without water, and vyinke, and carried there all the next day, making merry with our slaine beasts and camels, and then departed from that place, & for feare of meeting with the said cheues againe of such like, we left the high way which went along the saide riuer, and passed through a wilderness of sand, and trauailed 4. dayes in the same before we came to water: and then came to a well the water being very blackish, and we then as before were in neede of water, and of other victuals, being forced to kill our horses and camels to eat.

In this wilderness also we had almost fallen into the hands of the cheues: for one night being at rest, there came certaine scouts, and caried away certaine of our men which lay a little separated from the Carauan, wherewith there was a great shout and cry, and we immediatly labored our camels, and departed being about midnichte and very darke, and dyaued soze till wee came to the riuer Oxus againe, and then we feare nothing being walled with the said riuer: and whether it was for that we had gotten the water, or for that the same cheues were farre from vs when the scouts discovered vs, we knowe not, but we escaped that danger.

So vpon the 27. day of December wee arrived at the citie of Boghar in the lande of Bactria. This Boghar is situated in the lowest part of all the land, walled about with a high wall of earth, with diuers gates into the same: it is diuided into 3. partitions, whereof two partes are the kings, and the 3. part is for Marchants and markets, and euery science hath their dwelling and market by themselves. The Citie is very great, and the houses for the most part of earth, but there are also many houses, temples and monuments of stone sumptuously builded, and gilt, and specially bathouses so artificially built, that the like thereof is not in the world: the manner wherof is to long to rehearse. There is a little Riuer running through the middle of the saide Citie, but the water thereof is most unholysome, for it byedeth sometimes in men that dyinke thereof, and especially in them that be not there borne, a wombe of an ell long, which lieth commonly in the legge betwixt the flesh and the skinne, and is plucked out about the ancle with great art and cunning, the surgeons being much practised therein, and if thee byeake in plucking out, the partie dieth, and euery day he commeth out about an turbe, which is rolled by, and so worketh till thee be all out. And yet it is there forbidden to dyinke any ocher thing then water, & mare's milke, and whosoeuer is found to byeake that lawe is whipt and beaten most cruellly through the open markets, and there are officers appointed for the same, who haue authoritie to goe into any mans house, to searche if hee haue either Aquauitz, wine, or byage, and finding the same, doe byeake the vessels, spoyle the vyinke, and punish the masters of the house most cruellly, yea, and many times if they perceiue but by the byeatch of a man that he hath dyinke, without further examination hee shall not escape their hands.

There is a Metropolitane in this Boghar, who causeth this lawe to be so straggely kept, and he is moze obeyed then the king, and will depose the king, and place another at his will and pleasure, as hee did by this king that reigned at our being there, and his byedeceitfull, by the meanes of the saide Metropolitane: for hee betrayed him, and in the night slewe him in his chamber, who was a Prince that loued all Christians well.

This Countrey of Boghar was sometime subiect to the Persians, and doe now speake the Persian tongue, but yet now it is a kingdome of it selfe, and hath most cruel warres continually with the saide Persians about their religion, although they be all Mahometians. One occasion of their warres is, for that the Persians will not cut the haire of their upper lippes, as the Bogharians and all other Tartars doe, which they accompt great sinne, and call them Caphars, that is, unbelieuers, as they doe the Christians.

The king of Boghar hath no great power or riches, his reuenues are but small, and he is most maintained by the Citie: for he taketh the tenth parte of all things that are there sold, as wel by the craftes men as by the Marchants, to the great impouertisement of the people, whom hee keepeth in great subiection, and when he lacketh money, hee sendeth his officers to the shoppes of the saide Marchants to take their wares to pay his debtes, and will haue credite of foize, as the like hee did to pay mee certaine money that hee owed me for 19. piereces of cartep. Their money is silver and copper, for golde there is none currant they haue but one piere of silver, & that is worth 12. pence English, and the copper money are called hoodles, and 120. of them goeth to the value of the said 12. p., and is moze comon paiement then the silver, which the king causeth to rise and fall to his

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

1.8 2.0 2.2 2.5
3.6 3.2 2.8
4.5 5.0 5.6

10 11 1.5 1.8 2.0

most advantage every other moueth, and sometimes twice in a moneth, not caring to oppress his people, for that hee looketh not to raigne about 2. or 3. yeeres before hee be either slain or driven away to the great destruction of the Countrey and marchants.

The 26. day of the moneth I was commanded to come before the said king to whom I presented the Emperour of Russia his letters, who interceded vs most gently, and caused vs to eate in his presence, and diuers times he sent for me, and deuided with me familiarly in his secret chamber, as well of the power of the Emperour, and the great Turke, as also of our countries, lawes, and religion, and caused vs to shote in handgunnes before him, and did himselfe practise the vse thereof. But after all this great intertainment before my departure he thewed himselfe a very Tartar: for he went to the warres obtaining me money, and saue mee not payde before his departure; And although in deed hee gaue order for the same, yet was I very ill satisfied, and forced to rebate part, and to take waeres as payment for the rest contrary to my expectation, but of a better, better payment I could not haue, and glad I was so to be payde and dispatched.

But yet I must needs praise and commend this barbarous king, who immediately after my arrivall at Boghar, having understood our trouble with the cheues, sent 100. men well armed, and gaue them great charge not to returne before they had either slain or taken the saide cheues. Who according to their commission ranged the wilbernes in such sort, that they met with the said companie of cheues, and slew part, and part fledde, and foure they took and brought unto the king, and two of them were sore wounded in our skirmish with our gunners: And after the king had sent for me to come to see them, hee caused them all 4. to be hanged at his palace gate, because they were Gentlemen to the example of others. And of such goods as were gotten againe, I had part restored me, and this good iustice I found at his handes.

There is yeerely great resort of Marchants to this Citie of Boghar, which trausile in great Carauans from the Countreys thereabout adjoining, as India, Persia, Balke, Russia, with diuers others, and in times past from Cathay, when there was passage, but these Marchants are so beggerly and pooze, and bring so little quantitie of waeres, lying two or 3. yeeres to sell the same, that there is no hope of any good trade there to be had worthy the following.

The chiefe commodities that are brought thither out of these foresaide Countreys, are these following.

The Indians doe bring fine whites, which the Tartars doe roll about their heads, and all other kinds of whites, which serue for apparell made of cotton wooll and crasko, but golde, silver, precious stones, and spices they bring none. I enquired and perceived that all such trade passeth to the Ocean sea, and the vaines where all such things are gotten, are in the subiection of the Portingals. The Indians carie from Boghar againe, wrought silkes, redde hides, slates and bowles, with such like, but of carlets and other clothe, they make little accompt. I offered to barter with Marchants of those Countreys, which came from the furbest parts of India, even from the Countrey of Bengala, & the River Ganges, to giue them carlets for their commodities, but they would not barter for such commodity as cloth.

The Persians doe bring thither Craska, wollen cloth, lianen clothe, diuers kindes of wrought yde silkes, Argomacks, with such like, and doe carrie from thence redde hides with other Russe waeres, and slates which are of diuers Countreys, but cloth they will buy none, for that they bring thither themselves, and is brought unto them as I haue enquired from Aleppo in Syria, and the parts of Turkie. The Russes doe carrie unto Boghar, redde hides, beere kinnes, wollen cloth of diuers sorts, wodden vessels, byddles, saddles, with such like, and doe carrie a way from thence, diuers kindes of waeres made of cotton wooll, diuers kindes of silkes, Craska, with other things, but there is but small vterance. From the Countreys of Cathay is brought thither in time of yeare, and when the way is open, muske, rubarde, saccon, damaske, with diuers other things: at my being at Boghare, there came Carauans out of all these foresaid Countreys, except from Cathay, and the cause why there came none from thence, was the great warres that had durd 3. yeeres before my coming thither, and per durd betwixt 2. great Countreys and cities of Tartars, that are diuersly in the way betwixt the said Boghar and the said Cathay, and certaine barbarous fielde people, as well Gentiles as Mahometists bordering to the saide Cities. The cities are called Tashkent and Caskayre, and the people that warre against Taskent are called Cassaks of the late of Mahomet, and they which warre with the said countrey of Caskayre, are called Kings, Gentiles & solaters. These 2. barbarous nations are of great force living in the fieldes without house or to wne, & haue almost subdued the foresaide cities, & so stopped by the way, that it is impossible for any Carauan to passe without, so that 3. yeeres before our being there, no Carauan had gone, or used trade betwixt the Countreys of Cathay, and Boghare, & when the way is cleare, it is 9. moneths journey.

not caring to oppresse his hee be either slaine or diuen the said king to whom I present ost gently, and caused vs to with me familiarly in his street urke, as also of our countries; him, and did himselfe practise departure he thewed himselfe meere not paide before his de-I very ill satisfied, and fore-my expectation, but of a beg-and dispatche.

ng, who immediatly after my sent 100. men well armed, fine of taken the said thewes, 100. that they met with the said yooke and brought vnto the gunners: And after the king ed at his palace gate, because as were gotten againe, I haghar, which traualle in great sia, Balke, Russia, with diuers these Merchants are so beg-3. yeeres to sell the same, that ng.

these Countreys are the our their heads, and all other cracko, but golde, silver, preceined that all such trade pa-are in the subiection of the s, redde hides, slaues and bympe. I offered to barter with of India, euen from the Com-commodities, but they would the, diuers kindes of wrought redde hides with other Russe l buy none, for that they bring from Aleppo in Syria, and the wepel kinnes, wollen cloth of e carrie away from thence, di-rasca, with other things, but ighte thither in time of peare, ers other thinge: at my being ad dured 3. yeeres before my s of Tartars, that are directly e barbarous fierbe people, as cities are called Talcant and slaks of the late of Mahomet, Kings, Gentle & Idolaters, without house of colone, & haue impossible for any Carauan an had gone, or used trade are, it is 9. moneths iourney.

 Co

To speake of the said Countrey of Cathay, and of such newes as I haue heard thereof, I haue thought it best to referre it to our meeting. I hauing made my sojourn at Boghar, in the Winter time, and hauing learned by much inquisition, the trade thereof, as also of all the other Countreys thereto adjoining, and the time of the peere being come, for all Carauans to depart, and also the king being gone to the warres, and newes came, that he was fled, and I aduertised by the Metropolitan himselfe, that I should depart, because the Towne was like to be besieged: I thought it good and meete, to take my iourney some way, and determined to haue gone from thence into Persia, and to haue seene the trade of that Countrey, although I had enioyed my selfe sufficiently thereof, as well at Afracan, as at Boghar: and perceaued well the trades, not to be much vnlike the trades of Tartaria: but when I should haue taken my iourney that way, it was let by di-uers occasions: the one was, the great warres that did newly begin betwixt the Sophie, and the kings of Tartaria, where by the waies they were destroyed: and there was a Carauan destroyed with rowers, and theewes, whiche came out of India, and Persia, by safe conduct: and about ten daies iourney from Boghar, they were robbed, and a great part slaine. Also the Metropolitan of Boghar, who is greater then the king, tooke the Emperours letters of Russia from me, without which I should haue bene taken slaue in euery place: also all such wares as I had receaued in barter for cloth, and as Iooke perforce of the king, and other his Nobles, in payment of monie due vnto me, were not vendible in Persia: for which causes, and diuers others, I was constrained to come backe againe to Mare Caspium, the same way I went: so that the eight of March, 1559. we departed out of the said Citty of Boghar, being a Carauan of 600. Camels, and if we had not departed when we did, I and my companie had bene in danger to haue lost life and goods. For ten daies after our departure, the king of Samarcand came with an armie, & besieged the said Citty of Boghar, the king being absent, and gone to the warres against another prince, his kinsman, as the like chanceth in those Countreys, once in two or thre yeeres. For it is maruell, if a king raigne there about thre or foure yeeres, to the great destruction of the Countrey, and marchants.

The 15. of March, we came to the foresaid towne of Vrgence, and escaped the danger of 400. Vrgence. rowers, which lay in waite for vs backe againe, being the most of them of kindred to that companie of thewes, which we met with going south, as we perceaued by foure spies, which were taken.
 There were in my companie, and committed to my charge, two Ambassadors, the one from the king of Boghar, the other from the king of Balke, and were sent vnto the Emperour of Russia: and after hauing taried at Vrgence, and the Cattle of Zellysur, eight daies for the assembling, and making ready of our Carauan: the second of Apill we departed from thence, hauing foure more Ambassadors in our company, sent from the king of Vrgence, and other Soltans, his brethren, vnto the Emperour of Russia, with answers of such letters as I brought them: and the same Ambassadors were also committed vnto my charge, by the said kings, and princes: to whom I promised most faithfully, and swore by our lawe, that they should be well used in Rusland, and suffered to depart from thence againe in safetie, according as the Emperour had written also in his letters: for they somwhat doubted, because there had none gone out of Tartaria into Russia, of long time before.

The 27. of Apill, we arrived at the Mare Caspium againe, where we founde our barke which we came in, but neither anker, cable, cocke nor saile: neuertheless we brought hempe with vs, and spunne a cable our selues, with the rest of our tacking, and made vs a saile of cloth of cotton wool, and rigged our barke, as well as we could, but boate or anker we had none. In the meane time, being desirous to make an anker of wood of a cart wheele, there arrived a barke, which came from Afracan, with Tartars, and Russes, which had two ankers, with whom I agreede for the one; and thus being in a readines, we set saile, and departed, I, and the two Johnsons being Master and Purcellers our selues, hauing in our barke the said six Ambassadors, and 25. Russes, which had bene slaues a long time in Tartaria, nor euer had before my coming; libertie, or meanes to gette home, and these slaues serued to rowe when neede was. Thus sailing sometimes along the coast, and sometimes out of sight of land, the 13. day of Maye, hauing a contrary winde, we came to an anker, being thre leagues from the shoare, & there rose a foye storme, which continued 44. houres, and our cable being of our owne spinning, byake, and lost our anker, and being off a lee shoare, and having no boate to helpe vs, we hoised our saile, and bare roomer with the said shoare, looking for present death, but as God provided for vs, we came into a creeke full of oze, and so saved our selues with our barke, we liued in great discomfort for a time. For although we should haue escaped with our liues the danger of the sea, yet if our barke had perished, we knewe we should haue bene, either taken slaues by the people of that Countrey, who liue wildely in the fields, like beasts, without house of habitation. Thus when the storme was ceased, we went out of the creeke againe:
 and

and hauing sette the lande with our COMPASSE, and taken certaine markes of the same, during the time of the tempest, whilst we riode at our anker, wee went directly to the place where wee riode, with our barke againe, and founde our anker which wee lost: whereat the Tartars much marvelled, howe wee did it. While wee were in the creeke, wee made an anker of woodes of Cart wheeles, which wee had in our barke, which we tye we away, when wee had founde our yron anker againe. Within two daies after, there arose another great storme, at the North-east, and we lay a drie, being driuen farre into the sea, and much adoe to keepe our barke from sinking, the billow was so great: but at the last, hauing faire weather, wee tooke the Sunne, and knowing howe the lande laye from vs, wee fell with the Riuer Yake, according to our best, whereof the Tartars were very glad, fearing that wee shoulde haue bene driuen to the coast of Persia, whose people were vnto them great enemies.

The English
Rage in the Caspian sea.

Note that during the time of our navigation, wee sette vpp the redde crosse of S. George in our flagges, for honour of the Christians, which I suppose was neuer seene in the Caspian sea before. We passed in this voyage diuers fortunes, notwithstanding the 28. of Maye, wee arrived in safety at Astracan, and there remained till the tenth of June following, as well to prepare vs small boates, to goe vp against the streame of Volga, with our goods, as also for the companie of the Ambassadors of Tartarie, committed vnto me, to be brought to the presence of the Emperour of Russia.

This Caspian sea (to say something of it) is in length about two hundred leagues, and in bredth 150. without any issue to other seas, to the East parte whereof, ioyne the great desert Countrey of the Tartars, called Turckemen: to the West, the Countreys of the Chyrcasies, the mountaines of Caucasus, and the Mare Euxinum, which is from the saide Caspian sea a hundred leagues. To the North is the riuer Volga, and the land of Nagay, and to the South part, ioyne the Countreys of Media, and Persia. This sea is fresh water in many places, and in other places as salt as our great Ocean. It hath many goodly riuers falling into it, and it avoideth not it selfe, except it be vnder ground. The notable riuers that fall into it, are first the great riuer of Volga, called in the Tartar tongue Edell, which springeth out of a lake in a marish, or plaine ground, not farre from the Citie of Nouogrod, in Russia, and it is from that springe, to the sea, about two thousand English miles. It hath diuers other goodly riuers falling into it, as out of Sebaria, Yaick, and Yeim: Also out of the mountaines of Caucasus, the riuers of Cyrus, and Arrah, and diuers others.

As touching the trade of Shamakye in Media, and Tebris, with other towncs in Persia, I haue enquired, and doe well vnderstande, that it is euen like to the trades of Tartaria, their little vnderance, and small profite: and I haue bene aduertised that the chiefe trade of Persia is into Syria, and so transported into the Levant seas. The fewe shippes vpon the Caspian Sea, the want of Harre and port Townes, the pouertie of the people, and the ice, maketh that trade nauight.

At Astracan, there were Merchants of Shamakye, with whome I offered to barter, and to giue them kerries for their wares, but they would not, saying, they had them as good cheape in their Countrey, as I offered them, which was five rubbles for a kerrie, that I asked: and while I was at Boghar, there were there brought thither out of Persia, cloth, and diuers commodities of our Countreies, which were solde as good cheape, as I might sell ours.

The tenth daie of June, wee departed from Astracan, towards the Musko, hauing a hundred Gunners in our companie, at the Emperours charges, for the safe conduct of the Tartar Ambassadors, and me. And the eight and twentieth daie of July following, we arrived at the Citie of Cazan, hauing bene vpon the waye from Astracan thither, five weekes, and more, without any refreshing of victuals: for in all that waye there is no habitation.

The seuenth of August following, we departed from Cazan, and transported our goods by water, as farre as the Citie of Morons, and then by land: so that the second of September, we arrived at the Citie of Musko, and the fourth day I came before the Emperours Palace, killed his hand, and presented him a white Cowes taile of Cathay, and a drumme of Tartaria, which he accepted. Also I brought before him all the Ambassadors that were committed to my charge, with all the Russe slaves: and that day I dined in his Palaces presence, and at dinner, his Grace sent me meate by a Duke, & asked me diuers questions, touching the lands, & Countreys where I had bene. And thus I remained at the Musko about your affaires, vntill the 17. day of February, that your wares were sent to home: & then hauing licence of the Emperours Palace to depart, the 21. day I came to your house at Vologhda, and there remained vntill the breaking vp of the peere: and

His arrival at Spisco the 2.
September.

ta, fed
vestra Dei, a comm licitat se effu (pro q omni cipien lenkin his nor missu ciendi
lum, v Imper
villo pe
stram mina h tis nob

markes of the same, during erely to the place where we : whereat the Tartars much made an anchor of woode of ay, when we had founde our at home, at the Mouth, eepe our barke from sinking, wee tooke the Sunne, and e bene dyiuen to the coast of redde crosse of S. George in uer scene in the Caspian sea the 28. of Maye, wee arrithe following, as well to ptr goods, as also for the comto the presence of the Em so hundred leagues, and in of, toyneth the great belm reys of the Chyrcales, the saide Caspian sea a hundred and to the South part, to yve places, and in other places as and it avoideth not it selfe, sp-the great riuer of Volga, a marvell, or plaine growen, that springe, to the sea, about alling into it, as out of Se-the riuers of Cyrus, and A-other towncs in Persia, I e trades of Tartaria, that is the chiefe trade of Persia es vpon the Caspian Sea, and the ice, maketh that tra-he I offered to barter, and in had them as good cheape in e, that I asked: and while I and diuers commodities of urs, ardes the Musko, having a s, for the safe conduct of the e of July following, we ar-from Astracan thither, the I that waye there is no hat-nd transported our goods by e second of September, we aremperours Gate, the kils his me of Tartaria, which he committed to my charge, and and at dinner, his Grace sent os, & Countreys where I had the 17. day of February, that urs spairt to depart the 21.

he speaking by of the peere:

and then having scene all your goods laden into your boates, I departed with the same, and arri-ued without in safetie at Colmogro, the 9. of Maye, 1560. And here I cease for this time, intrea-ting you to beare with this my large discourse, which by reason of the varietie of matter, I could make no shorter, and I beseech God to prosper all your attempts.

The latitudes of certain principall places in Rufsia, and other Regions.

	Deg.	Min.
Moscow	55	10
Nouogrod the great	58	26
Nouogrod the lesse	56	33
Colmogro	64	10
Vologda	59	11
Cazan	55	33
Oweke	51	40
Astracan	46	27
At the entrance into the Caspi- an sea,	46	27
Virgençe in Tartarye 20. daies iourney from the Caspian sea.	42	18
Boghara Citie in Tartarye, 20. daies iourney from Virgençe.	39	10
Manguslaue beyond the Cas- pian sea,	45	00

The Queenes Maiesties letters to the Emperour of Rufsia, requesting licence, and safe conduct for Master Anthony Jenkinson, to passe through his kingdome of Rufsia, into Persia, to the Great Sophie.

Lizabeta Dei gratia, Anglia, &c. Regina, Serenissimo & potentissimo principi, D. Ioanni Basiliwichej Imperatori totius Rufsia, Magno Duci, &c. Salutem, & omnium rerum prosperarum felicissimum incrementum.
Potentissimo Princeps, res est nobis ad memorandum longe gratissima, illa vestre Maiestatis, erga nos & nostros amicitia. Quæ tempore felicissimæ memorie Regis Edwardi Sexti, fratris nostri charissimi, Dei benignitate incepta, deinceps verò vestra non solum singulari humanitate alta atque fota, sed incredibili etiam bonitate aucta atque cumulata, nunc autem omnibus benevolentia vestre officijs sic firmata est atque constabilita, vt iam minimè dubitemus, quin ea ad laudem Dei, ad gloriam vtriusque nostrum, ad publicam nostrorum vtrobique regnorum immensam commoditatem, ad priuam singulorum vtriusque subditorum optatam spem, certamque felicitatem multis sic deinceps seculis duratura. Et quanquam hæc vestra bonitas, plenissimè se-se effudit in omnes nostros subditos, qui sese in vllas imperij vestri partes vnquam receperunt, (pro qua ingentes nostras, vt par est, gratias vestre Maiestati habemus, vestrisque vicissim in omni opportunitatis loco libentissimè feremus,) tamen abundantia benignitatis vestre, in ac-cipiendo, tamque humaniter tractando nostrum fidelem & perdilectum famulum Antonium Jenkinson, qui has perferet literas, seorsim nobis gratissima existit. Nam præterquam quòd nullis non locis vestri Imperij & magna libertate, & summa humanitate vestre serenitatis non permissu solum, sed iussu etiam frueretur, vestra bonitas tamen non in hac domestica benignè fa-ciendi ratione conqueuit, sed perlibenter & vltro eundem nostrum hunc perdilectum famulum, varijs exeris principibus, quo quouersus ipse iter suum instituerat, literis suis, suo magno Imperiali sigillo consignatis commendauit. Quod beneficium illi vbiuis gentium, & viam sine vilo periculo, propter publicam vestram fidem, & aduentum cum magno fauore, propter vestram commendationem, optatè quidem, & feliciter communiuit. Itaq; quemadmodum ge-mina hæc vestra benevolentia, cum illa generalis exhibita in vestro regno negotiantibus subditis nostris vniuersis, tum ista seorsim præstita huic Antonio Jenkinson, perfideli nostro famulo nobis

nobis in mente; non solum ad gratiam perpetuamque memoriam, verum etiam ad quantum vel opportunam compensationem, firmissimè devisa est: ita, petimus à vestra Maiestatis ut vtriusque benevolentia vestre rationem & communem nostris vniuersis, & priuatam huic nostro dilecto famulo, vtrisque deinceps dignetur tueri, atque conseruare. Neque nos quidem diffidimus, quin quem fauorem vestra Maiestas antea sua sponte Antonio Jenkinson, cum quidem priuato ostendit, eundem nunc nostro regni principis, Anthonio Jenkinson iam famulatum cooptato benignè velit denuò declarare. Et propterea petimus à vestra Maiestatis, ut dignetur iterum concedere eidem nostro famulo, literas suas conuicatus, publicæ fidei, ac saluconductus, quantum tenore, autoritate, atque præsidio, sit illi, familiaribus suis, & seruis, tutum, liberumque, cum mercibus, farris, equis, & bonis suis vniuersis, inuehendis euehendisque, per vestra regna, domicilia, atque prouincias, proficisci, ire, transire, redire, abire, & istic morari, quamdiu placuerit, & inde recedere quandoquæ illi aut suis libitum fuerit. Et sicut non dubitamus, quin vestra Maiestas hæc omnia humanitatis gratia officia, pro immensa bonitate suæ naturæ benignè & largitè huic famulo nostro sit concessura, ita valde optamus, adeoque petimus, ut vestra Maiestas eodem modo eundem nostrum famulum, vnà cum omnibus suis familiaribus, ac bonis, exteris alijs principibus literis suis dignetur commendare, præsertim verò atque scorsim, Magno Sophi, Persarum Imperatori, in cuius ciuium imperia & ditiones idem noster famulus gratia potissimè experiundi peregrina commercia, proficisci vnà cum suis constituit.

Confidimus igitur hæc omnia nostra postulata pro famuli spe, pro nostra expectatione, pro vestra bonitate, pro nostrorum vtrinque subditorum commoditate, fausta illi, gratia nobis, accepta etiam vestre Maiestatis, & nostris vtrouique perquam vtilia euasura. Deus vestre Maiestatis, &c. Datum in celeberrima nostra Ciuitate Londini, Anno mundi, 5523. Domini, ac Dei nostri Iesu Christi, 1561. regnorum verò nostrorum tertio.

The same in English.

ELizabeth by the grace of God, Queene of England, &c. to the right excellent, and right mightie Prince, Lorde Iohn Vasiluiche, Emperour of all Russia, &c. greeting and most happie increase in all prosperitie. Right mightie Prince, the amitie of your Maiestie towards vs, and our Subiectes, is very pleasant to vs to be remembered, which being begonne by the goodnes of God, in the raigne of our most deere brother of happie memorie, King Edward the first, and afterwards, though your not onely singular humanitie, feede, and nourished, but also though your incredible goodnes increased, and augmented, is now so firm, and established, with all manner of tokens of your beneuolence; that now we doubt not, but that from hence forth, during many ages, the same shall endure to the praise of God, to both our glories, to the publicke great commoditie of our Realmes on either part, and to the priuate desired hope, and certaine felicitie of all our Subiectes.

And although that this your goodnes hath bene abundantly extended to all our Subiectes, that haue at any tyme repaired into any part of your Empire, for the which wee giue (as reason is) your Maiestie right hartie thanks, and will againe shewe the like vnto yours, right willingly, whensoever opportunitie shall require: yet the abundance of your benignitie both in recreauing, and also in entertayning our faithfull, and beloued seruant, Anthonie Jenkinson, the bringer of these our letters, is vnto vs for him priuately very thankfull. For besides this, that in all places of your Empire, he not onely by your Maiesties sufferance, but also by your commandement, enioyed much libertie, and great friendship, your goodnes not ceasing in this your domestickall disposition of clemencie, did right willingly, and of your some abundant grace, commend the same our welbeloued seruant, by your letters, sealed with your Imperiall seale, to sundry forren Princes, vnto whom he was minded to iourney: which your magnificence did purchase vnto him happily, and according to his desire, both passage without all perill, though your nocable credite, and also archieuing of his iourney though your commendation.

Wherefore like as these your duplicated beneuolences, both that one generally exhibited to all our Subiectes, frequenting that your Realme, and also this the other extended apart to this our right faithfull seruant, Anthonie Jenkinson, is right assuredly fastened in our remembrance, not onely for a perpetuall, and gratefull memorie, but also for a mutuall, and

verum etiam ad munus petimus a vestra Maestate re niversis, & privatam huc do sertare. Neque nos quidem Antonio Jenkinson, tum in, postquam iam fam etimus a vestra Maestate, ut omneatus, publicæ fidei, ac illi, familiaribus suis, & ser onis suis uniuersis, inuehendis proficisci, ire, transire, redi uandocunque illi aut suis libi mnia humanitatis grata offi mulo nostro sit concessura, ita o eundem nostrum famulum, bus literis suis dignetur com um Imperatori, in cuius ei periundi peregrina commet pe, pro nostra expectatione, moderate, fausta illi, grata no quam vitia euasura. De uitate. Londini, Anno mun gnorum verò nostrorum ter is Mason d'oll

the right excellent, and right Russia, &c. greeting, and most nitie of your Maestie towards which being beguine by the re memorie, King Edward the tie, fedde, and nourished, but is notue so firmes, and establi wee doubt not, but that from asse of God, to both our glo part, and to the private desire extended to all our Subiects, to the which wee giue (as re twe the like unto yours, right hdance of your benignitie both o seruant, Anthonie Jenkin very thankfull. For besides Maesties sufferance, but also hippe, your goodnes not cea willingly, and of your owne by your letters, sealed with was minded to iourney: which to his desire, both passage with his iourney through your com that one generally exhibited to his the other extended apart to is assuredly fastened in our re ll, but also for a mutuell, and meete

neces compensation: so wee desire of your Maestie, to vouchsafe from hence forth to conferre and continue the geminate disposition of your beneuolences, both generally to all our Sub iects, and also private to this our beloved seruant. And we doubt not, but that at our re quest, you will againe graciously betwe unto the same Anthonie, notue admitted into our ser uice, the like fauour as heretofore your Maestie of your meere motion, did exhibite vnto him, being then a private person. And therefore wee desire your Maestie etisoues to graunt to the same our seruant, your letters of licence, passport, and safe conduct, though the emoz, au thoritie, and helpe whereof, he, his seruants, together with their marchandizes, baggages, boxes, and goods whatsoeuer, that shall be brought in, or carried out, by or through all your Empire, kingdome, dominions, and prouinces, may surely, and freely iourney, goe, passe, repalle, depart, and there tarry so long, as it shall please him: and from thence returne, whensoeuer it shall seeme good to him, or his: and as wee doubt not, but that your Maestie in the goodnes of your nature, will graciously and abundantly grant all these good offices of humanitie, so wee doe hartely desire, that your Maestie will like wise vouchsafe to commend the same our seruant, together with all his goods, by your letters, to other foreign Princes, and specially to the Great Sophie, and Emperour of Persia, into whose Empire, and Iurisdictiones, the same our seruant purposeth with his for to iourney, chiefly for trial of forreine marchan dizes.

Wee therefore doe trust, that all these our demands shall tende, and haue effect, according to the hope of our seruant, and to our expectation, for your wealth, for the commoditie of both our Subiects, luckie to him, thankfull to vs, acceptable to your Maestie, and very profitable to our Subiects on either part. God graunt vnto your Maestie, long and happie felicitie in earth, and eternall in heauen. Dated in our famous Citie of London, the 25. day of the moneth of A prijl, in the yeere of the creation of the world, 5523. and of our Loyde God Iesus Christ, 1561, and of our raigne, the third.

The Queenes Maiesties letters to the Great Sophie of Persia, sent by Master Anthony Jenkinson.

Elizabeth Dei gratia, Angliz, Francie, & Hibernie Regina, &c. Potentis simo & inuicissimo Principi, Magno Sophie, Persarum, Medorum, Partho rum, Hyrcanorum, Carmanorum, Margianorum, populorum cis & vltra Tygrim fluiuium, & omnium intra Mare Caspium, & Persicum sinum nati onum atque Gentium Imperatori salutem, & rerum prosperarum felicissim um incrementum. Summi Dei benignitate factum est, vt quas gentes, non solum immensa terrarum spacia, & insuperabiles marium vastitates, sed & ipsi etiam celo rum cardines longissime distunxerunt; ipsæ tamen hierarum bonis & mentis certa cogitata, & humanitatis grata officia, & intelligentie mutue multa commoda facile inter se & oppor tune possint communicare. Itaque cum per dilectus, & fidelis noster famulus Antonius Jen kinson, qui has literas nostras perfert, cum bona venia, fauore, & gratia nostra hoc Angliz nostræ regnum excedere, & in Persiam vsque, vestrasque alias ditiones Dei benignitate pe netrare constituerit, hoc illius institutum per laudabile quidem grato nostro fauore proficui, & promouere studuimus: id quod eo nos libentius facimus, quoniam hoc eius propositum ex honesto studio commercij constituendi potissimum cum vestris subditis, alijsque peregrin is hominibus, ad vestra regna confluentibus, omnino extortum sit. Propterea nobis & scri bendum ad vestram Maestatem, ab eaque petendum esse duximus, vt nostro rogatu digne tur concedere huic famulo nostro Antonio Jenkinson, literas publicæ fidei, & salui conduc tus, quarum autoritate atque præsidio, licitum, liberumque sit illi, vnâ cum suis familiaribus, seruis, sarcinis, mercibus & bonis vsuersis, per vestra regna, donacilia, ditiones, atque prouincias libere, & sine impedimento proficisci, ire, transire, redire, abire, & istic mora ri, quamdiu placuerit, & inde recedere, quancocunque illi vel suis lubitum fuerit. Si hæc sancta hospitalitatis iura & dulcia communis humanitatis officia, inter nos, nostra regna, no strisque subditos libenter constitui, sincerè colli, & constanter conseruari queant, spera mus nos, Deum Optimum Maximum effecturum, vt ab hijs paruis initijs, grandiora rerum momenta, nobis ad magna ornamenta atque decus, nostris ad summa commoda atque v sua, aliquando sint occurrat: si quidem, vt non terra, non mare, non cælum, ad nos longis sine separandos, quàm diuina ratio communis humanitatis, & mutue beneuolentie ad nos fir missimè

missimè coniungendos plus virium habuisse videatur. Deus salutem omnem, & felicem in terris, & perpetuam in coelis, vestra concedat Maiestati. Datum in Anglia, in celebri civitate vrbe Londino, 25. die Mensis Aprilis, anno mundi, 5523. Domini ac Dei nostri Iesu Christi, 1561. Regnorum verò nostrorum tertio.

7 The same in English.

This letter was also written in Hebrew, and Italian.

Elizabeth, by the grace of God, Queene of England, &c. To the right mightie, and right victorious Prince, the Great Sophie, Emperour of the Persians, Medes, Parthians, Hyrcanes, Carmanarians, Margians, of the people on this side, and beyond the River of Tyrus, and of all men, and nations, betwene the Caspian Sea, and the gulph of Persia, greeting, and most happie increase in all prosperitie. By the goodness of the Almighty God, it is ordained, that those people, which not onely the huge distance of landes, and the invincible widenes of Seas, but also the very quarters of the heavens doe moste farre separate, and sette asunder, may nevertheless through good commendation by writing, both ease, and also communicate betwene them, not onely the conceaued thoughts, or deliberations, and gracefull offices of humanitie, but also many commodities of mutuall intelligence. Therefore whereas our faithfull, and right welbeloued seruant, Anthonie Ienkinson, bearer of these our letters, is determined with our license, fauour, and grace, to passe out of this our Realme, and by Gods assistance to trauell euen into Persia, and other your Iurisdictiones: wee minde truely with our good fauour, to sette forward, and aduance, that his right laudable purpose: and that the more willingly, so that this his enterpryse is onely grounded upon an honest intent, to establish trade of merchandise with your Subjects, and with other strangers traffiking your Realmes. Wherefore we haue thought good, both to write to your Maestie, and also to desire the same, to vouchsafe at our request, to grant to our saide seruant, Anthonie Ienkinson, good passports, and safe conducts, by means, and authoritie whereof, it may be free, and lawfull for him, together with his familiars, seruants, cariage, marchandize, and goods whatsoever, through your Realmes, Dominions, Iurisdictiones, and Shouinces, freely, and without impeachment, to iourney, goe, passe, repasse, depart, and carry so long as he shall please, and from thence to returne, whensoever he or they shall thinke good. If these holpe duties of entertainement, and sweete offices of naturall humanitie, may be willingly concluded, sincerely embraced, and firmly obserued betwene vs, and our Realmes, and Subjects, then we vpe hope, that the Almighty God will bring it to passe, that of these small beginnings, greater moments of things shall hereafter spring, both to our furniture, and honours, and also to the great commodities, and vse of our peoples: which will be knowen, that neither the earth, the seas, nor the heavens, haue so much force to separate vs, as the godly disposition of naturall humanitie, and mutuall beneuolence haue to vntie vs strongly together. God grant vnto your Maestie, long, and happie felicitie in earth, and perpetuall in heauen. Dated in England, in our famous Citie of London, the 25. day of the moneth of Apill, in the yeece of the creation of the world, 5523. and of our Lord Iesus Christ, 1561. and of our Raigne the third.

A remembrance giuen by vs the Gouvernours, Consuls, and Assistants of the companie of Marchants, trading into Russia, the eight day of May, 1561. to our trustie friende Anthonie Ienkinson, at his departure towards Russia, and so to Persia, in this our eight iourney.

Here you shall vnderstand, that we haue laden in our good shippe, called the Swallowe, one Chest, the keyes whereof wee doe here deliuer you, and also a bill, wherein are written particularly the contents in the saide Chest, and what euery thing did coste: and because, as you knowe, the saide Chest is of charge, wee desire you, to haue a speciall regarde vnto it, and when God shall sende you vnto Muscovia, and will is, that you, with the aduise of our Agents there, doe appoint some such presents for the Emperour, and his soune, either wine, clothe of golde, scarlet, or plate, as to your good discretion shall be thought salutem omnium, & felicitem in Anglia, in celebri oratione ini ac Dei nostri Iesu Christi, the right mightie, and right Persians, Medes, Parthians, and beyond the River of Tyre, and the gulph of Persia, grace of the Almighty God, it is aplandes, and the inuincible victoe farre separate, and sette a-both east, and also communications, and graefull officers of Therefoze whereas our faith of these our letters, is betwixt Realme, and by Gods iustice wee minde truly with our good wofe: and that the more willing-content, to establish trade of trading your Realmes. Wherefore we desire the same, to bountifull n, good passports, and safe conatfull for him, together with soever, throught your Realmes, impeachment, to tourney, goe, from thence to returne, when retainment, and sweete offices of aced, and firmly obserued so that the Almighty God will of things shall hereafter spring cies, and use of our peoples: his his, haue so much foze to shew all beneuolence, haue to impo-d happie felicitie in earth, and of London, the 25. day of the and of our Lord Iesus Christ, urs, Consuls, and

ing into Russia, the onie Lenkinlon, at in this our laden in our good shippe, called whereof wee doe here deliuer n particularly the contents in did colle: and because, as you we desire you, to haue a speciall de you vnto Musko, our minde of our Agents there, doe approu, and his soune, either with, to your good discretion shall be thought

thought meete, and when you haue deliuered vnto him the Quenes Stateletters, & our sayd present in the name of the company, we thinke it good that you make your humble suite vnto his highnesse in our name, to get his licence of safeconduyt for you and all other our seruants or Agents at all times hereafter, with such waeres and merchandize as you at this time, or they hereafter at all other times shall thinke good, to passe out of his dominions towards Tartaria, Persia, or other places, and also to returne vnto Mosco with such waeres and merchandizes as you shall bring of land from any land or countrey that is not in his dominions, and if it be thought good by you and our Agents there to make composition with the Emperoz of his officers for some certaine custome or tale vpon such goods as we shall passe that way, to the intent we might be the better fauoured, we referre it to your discretion, foreseeing that the opening of this matter be not preiudiciall vnto our former priuileges.

And for the sale of our cloth of golde, plate, pearles, sapphyres, and other ietwels, we put our trust and confidence in you principally to sell them for ready money, time to good debtors, or in barter for good waeres, so that you make our other Agents priuy how & for what price you sell any of the premises, and also deliuer such summes of money, bills of waeres as you shall receiue, vnto our said Agents thinking good, further, that if you perceiue that the plate or other ietwels, or any part thereof will not be solde for profit before your departure from the Mosco, that then you cause them to be safe packed, and set order they may be sent hither againe in our shippes the next yeere, except you perceiue that there may be some profit in carrying some part of them into Persia, which we would not to be of any great value.

We haue also laden in the said Swallow and the other two shippes, 80 sardles, containing 400 kardles, as by the enuoyes do appeare, which sardles be packed, and appointed to be carped into Persia, where the lesse if you chance to finde good sales for them in the Mosco, we thinke it were good to sell part of them there, and to carry the lesse quantity with you, because we be incertaine what vent of sale you shall finde in Persia or other places where you shall come.

If you obtaine the Emperours licence to passe out of his dominions, and to returne, as aforesaid, and that you perceiue you may safely do the same, our minde is, that at such time as you thinke best and most convenient for that your purpose, you do appoint so many, & such of our hyred seruants or apprentices as you thinke necessary & meet for our attaynes, and may best be spared to go with you in your said voyage, whereof we would one to be such as you might make priuile of all your doings for others considerations and causes that may happen: which seruants & appentices, we will and command, by this our remembrance, to be obedient vnto you as vnto vs, not onely to go with you, and to do such things as you command them in your presence, but also to go vnto such countreies or places as you shall appoint them vnto, either with waeres or without waeres, and there to remaine and continue so long as you shall thinke good, and if they or any of them will refuse to do such things as you do appoint them, as aforesaid, or that any of them (be he hyred seruant or appentice) do mislike himselfe by any manner of disobedience or disorder, and will not by gentle and saye meanes be reformed, we will that you send him backe to the Mosco, with straight order that he may be sent from thence hither, and let vs haue knowlege of his euill behauior, to the intent that if he be a hy-red seruant we may pay him his wages accordyng to his seruice, and if he be an appentice we may debt him accordyng to his desertes.

We will also that you take with you such kardles, scarlet, & other clothes, or any other such waeres of ours, as you shall thinke good, and so in the name of God to take your tourney towardes Persia, either by the way of Astracan and Mare Caspium, or other wise, as you shall see cause: and when God sendeth you into Persia, our minde is, that you repayre vnto the great Sophie with the Quenes Stateletters, if he be not too farre from the Caspian sea for you to trauell, and that you make him such a present as you shall thinke meete, and if you passe by any other kinges, princes, or gouernours, before or after you come to the presence of the Sophie, likewise to make them some present, as you see cause accordyng to their estate and dignitie, and withall to procure letters of priuilege of safeconduyt of the sayd Sophie or other princes in as large and ample maner as you can, by the sure establishing of further trade in merchandize by vs hereafter to be made, frequented and continued in those parts, not onely that we may freely sell in all places within his dominions such waeres as we carry thither, but also buy and bring away any maner of waeres or merchandizes whatsoeuer it be, that is for our purpose and commoditie within his dominions, with free passage also for vs at all times, to passe as often as we will with our goods and merchandize into any part of India or other countreies thereunto adioynning, and in like maner to returne through his dominions into Russia or els where,

And for the sale of our hartles or other wares that you shall haue with you, as our trust is that you will doe for our most profite and commoditie: euen so we referre all vnto your good discretion, as well in the sale of our sayd goodes, as to make our reuerue in such things as you shall finde there, and thinke best for our profite. But if passage can not be had into Persia by Astracan, or otherwise, the next Summer, which shall be in the yeere 1562, then our minde is that you procure to sell our hartles, and other such wares as are appointed for Persia, in the Spota, or other the Emperours dominions, if you may sell them for any reasonable price, and then to employ your selfe with such other of our seruantes, as you shall thinke meete for the search of the passage by Noua Zembla, or els you to returne for England as you thinke good. Shoulded alwayes, that if you doe perceiue or vnderstand, that passage is like to be had into Persia the Summer following, which shall be in the yeere 1563, and that you can not sell our hartles in the Emperours dominions, as aforesayd, at a reasonable price: then we will rather they may be kept till the sayd Summer in the yeere 1563, and then you to proceed forwards vpon your iourney towards Persia, as aforesayd. If passage into Persia can not be obtained the next yeere, neither yett hope of passage in the yeere 1563, neither yett in the meane time, good sale of our hartles in the Emperours dominions, then we thinke good for you to see if you can practise to carry your sayd wares by safe conduct through Polonia, or any other wayes vnto Constantinople, or els where you thinke better sale may be had, then in Russia.

The passage of Noua Zembla.

Thus haue we giuen you to vnderstand our meanings in this intended adventure: but that much as we do consider and know, that if we should prescribe vnto you any certaine way, or direct order what you should doe, we might so worke cleane contrary to our purpose and intent: therefore knowing your approued wisdom with your experience, and also your carefull and diligent minde in the achieving and bringing to good successe (by the helpe of almighty God) all things that you take in hand, we doe commit our whole affaires concerning the sayd adventure wholly vnto your good discretion, praying God so to prosper you, as may be first for his glory, secondly for the honour and commoditie of this realme, and next for our profite, with the increase of your good name for euer.

And yett further desiring, and also most earnestly requiring you as you tender the state of our company, that you will haue a speciall regard vnto the order of our houses & our seruantes, as well at Colmogro and Vologda, as at Mosco, and to see and consider if any misgouer be amongst our seruantes or apprentices, whereby you thinke we might hereafter be put to diuerrance or loss of any part of our goods or priuilege there, that you do not ouerly see the same reformed, but also to certifye vs thereof by your letter at large, as our trust is in you.

And for the better knowledg to be had in the prices and goodnesse of such things as we do partly suppose you shall finde in the parties of Russia, we doe here with deliuer you a quantitie of certaine bugges, whereby you may perceiue how to know the best, and also there is noted the prices of such wares and bugges as be heere most vendible: also we deliuer you heere with one pound and one ounce weight in vialle to the end, that you may thereby, and with the bill of prices of wares, know what things be worth better. As for the knowledg of silks, we need not to giue you any instructions thereof, other then you know.

Weights and things deliuered
to M.
Jenkinson.

Also if you vnderstand that any commoditie in Russia, be possible for vs to haue with you to Persia or other places, our minde is that our Agents shall either prouide it for you, or deliuer you money to make you selfe. And because the Russes say that in travelling Eastward from Colmogro thirtie or forty dayes iourney, there is the maine sea to be found, we thinke that Richard Johnson might employ his time that way by land, and to be at Mosco time enough to goe with you into Persia: for if it be true that he may trauell to the sea that way, and that he may know how many miles it is towards the East from Colmogro, it will be a great helpe for vs to finde out the straight and passage that way, if any be there to be had.

The maine sea
which thirtie dayes East ward of Col-
mogro.

William Gerrard. } Thomas Lodge. } Gouernours.

William Merrike.
Blas Sanders.

A compendious and briefe declaration of the iourney of M. Anthonie Ienkinson, from the famous citie of London into the lande of Persia, passing in this same iourney through Russia, Moscouia, and Mare Caspium, aliàs Hircanum, sent and employed therein by the right worshipfull Societie of the Merchants Aduenturers, for the disquerie of Lands, Islands, &c. Being begunne the fourteenth day of May, Ann. 1561: and in the third yeere of the raigne of the Queenes Maiestie that now is: this present declaration being directed and written to the forefayd Societie.

In imbarcking my selfe in a good Shippe of yours, named the Swallow, at Grauesend, hauing a fayre and good winde, our anker then weyed, and comming all to the protection of our God, hauing in our sailing diuersitie of windes, and thereby forced to direct and obserue sundry courses (not here rehearsed, because you haue bene thereof heeretofore amply informed) on the fourteenth day of July, the yeere aforesaid, I arrived in the bay of S. Nicholas in Russia: and the sixe and twentieth day of the same moneth, after conference then had with your Agents there, concerning your worshippes affaires, I departed from thence, passing through the countrey of Vago, and on the eight day of August then following, I came to Vologda, which is distant from Colmogro seuen hundred miles, where I remained fouete dayes, attending the arrivall of one of your boates, wherein was laden a chest of iewels with the present, by your worshippes appoynted for the Emperours Maiestie: which being arrived, and the chest receiued, I there with departed toward the citie of Moscouia, and came thither the twentieth day of the same moneth, where I immediately caused my comming to be signified vnto the Secretarie of the Imperiall Maiestie, with the Queenes highnesse letters addresed vnto the same his Maiestie, who informed the Emperour thereof. But his highnesse hauing great affaires, and being at that present ready to be married vnto a Lady of Chircassia, of the Paphonticall law, commanded that no stranger, Ambassadour, nor other, should come before him for a time, with further straight charge, that during the space of thre dayes that the same solenne feast was celebrating, the gates of the citie should be shutte, and that no person, stranger or natieue (certeine of his householders excepted) should come out of the sayd houses during the sayd triumph, the cause thereof vnto this day not being knowen.

The Queenes letters to the Emperour of Russia.

The first of September following, the Emperour made a great feast, whereunto were called all Ambassadours and strangers being of reputation, and hauing affaires: amongst whom I was one, but being willed by the Secretarie first to come, and to shew him the Queenes Maiesties letters, I refused so to doe, saying I would deliuer the same vnto the Emperours owne hands, and not otherwise: which heard, the Secretarie answered, that vntill he might first peruse the said letters, I should not come into the Emperours presence, so that I was not at the feast. Heerethefore, I was aduertised by a noble man that I was inquired for by the Emperours Maiestie, although the cause of my absence was to his Maiestie unknowen. The next day following, I caused a supplication to be made, and presented it to his highnesse owne hands, and thereby declared the cause of my comming, signified by the Queenes Maiesties letters, and the answer of his sayd Secretarie, most humbly beseeching his Grace that he would receiue and accept the same her highnesse letters, with such honoz and friendship, as his letters sent by Oscepp Napeya, were receiued by the handes of our late Soueraigne lady Queene Mary, or els that it would please his highnesse to dismisse me, saying that I would not deliuer the said letters but vnto his owne handes, for that it is so used in our countrey. Thus the matter being pondered, and the effect of my supplication well digested, I was forthwith commanded to come with the sayd letters before his Maiestie, and so deliuered the same into his owne handes, (with such presents as by you were appoynted) according to my request, which were gratefully accepted, and the same day I dined in his Graces presence, with great intertainment. Shortly after, I desired to know whether I should be licensed to passe through his highnesse dominions into the land of Persia, according to the Queenes Maiesties request: hereunto it was answered, that I should not passe thither, for that his Maiestie ment to send an armie of men that way into the land of Chircassia, wherby my iourney should should be both dangerous and troublesome, and that if I should perish therein, it would be much to his Graces dishonour, but he doubted other matters although they were not expected. Thus having received his answer, neither to my expectation, nor yet contentation, and there remaining a good part of the yeere, having in that time solde the most part of your hartles and other wares appointed for Persia, when the time of the yeere required to returne for England, I desired passage, and post voyles for money, which was granted: but having received my passage, ready to depart, there came vnto our house there Olip Nepeya, who perswaded me that I should not depart that day, saying that the Emperour was not truly informed, imputing great fault to the forwardnesse of the Secretary, who was not my friend before whom comming againe the next day, and finding the same Secretary and Olip Nepeya together, after many allegations and objections of things, and perceiving that I would depart, I was willed to remaine vntill the Emperours Spairthe were spoken with againe touching my passage: wherevnto I was content, and within three dayes after sending for me, he declared that the Emperours pleasure was that I should not onely passe thro ro his dominions into Persia, but also haue his Graces letters of commendations to soynne princes, with certaine his affaires committed to my charge, too long here to rehearse: whereupon I appointed my selfe for the voyage, and the 15 day of March, the yeere aforesaid, I dined againe in his Spairthes presence in company of an Ambassadour of Persia and others, and receiving a cuppe of drinke at his Spairthes hands, I tooke my leaue of his highnesse, who did not onely giue me letters, as aforesaid, but also committed matter of importance & charge vnto me, to be done when I should arrive in those countries whither I intended to go, and having all things in readinesse for the same voyage, I departed from the citie of Mosco the 27 day of April 1562, downe by the great river of Volga, in company of the said Ambassadour of Persia, with whom I had great friendship and conference all the way downe the same river vnto Astracan, where we arrived all in health the 10 day of June.

Request to passe into Persia, the roba of Moscouia.

Olippe Nepeya Ambassadour from the Emperour of Russia to St. Mart.

Astracan.

And as touching the situations of the cities, townes, castles and countreyes, as well of Spahometans as also of Gentils adjoining to the same, wherby I passed from Mosco vnto Astracan, I omit in this beuial to rehearse, for that I heretofore haue declared the same most amply vnto you in my voyage to Boghar. Thus being arrived at Astracan, as is aforesaid, I repayed vnto the capitaine there, vnto whom I was commended from the Emperours Spairthe, with great charge that he not onely should ayd and succor me with all things needfull during my abode there, but also to safeconduct me with 50 gummers well appointed in two strooges of bygantines into the Caspian sea, vntill I had passed certaine dangerous places which pirates & rowers do accustome to haue, & having prepared my barke for the sea, the Ambassadour of Persia being before departed in a barke of his owne, the 15 day of July, the yeere aforesaid, I and my company tooke our voyage from the said Astracan, and the next day at a West sunne, passed the mouth of the said riuer being twentie miles distant, lying next Southeast. The 18 at a Southwest sunne, we passed by three Islands being distant nine miles from the said mouth of Volga, and Southsouthwest from thence, sailing Southsouthwest the next day, at a West by North sunne we fell with the land called Challica Ostriua, being foure round Islands together, distant from the said three Islands fortie miles. From thence sailing the said course the next day, we had sight of a land called Tuke, in the countrey of Tywmen, where pirates and rowers doe vse: for feare of whom we hailed off into the sea due East fortie miles, and fell vpon shallowes out of the sight of land, and there were like to haue perished, escaping most hardly: then the 22 day we had sight of a goodly Island called Charalet, distant from the said Challica Ostriua a hundred miles, the winde being contrary, and a stiffe gale, we were not able to seize it: but were forced to come to an anchor to the lee ward of the same six miles off in three or foure fathom water, being distant from the maine land to the Westward of vs, which was called Skafeyllor Connyke, a countrey of Spahometans, about _____ miles, and so riding at two anchors a head, having no other provision, we lost one of them, the stowme and sea being growne very large, and thereby our barke was so full of leakes, that with continuall pumping, we had much a doe to keepe her above water, although we thre w much of our goods ouerboard, with losse of our boate, and our selues thereby in great danger like to haue perished either in the sea, or els vpon the lee shoare, where we should haue fallen into the handes of those wicked indiuels, who attended our shipwacke: and surely it was very vnlike that we should haue escaped both the extremities, but onely by the power and mercy of God, for the stowme continued seuen dayes, to wit, vntill the thirtieth day of the same month: and then the winde comming vp at the West with large weather, our anchor weped, and our saile displayed, lying South, the next day sailing to the shore with a West sunne, we were nigh a lande called by the inhabitants Shyruantha, and there we came againe to an anchor, having the winde contrarie being distant from the sayd Shatalet

St. Fenkinsons voyage to Boghar.

We passed the Caspian sea.

The countrey of Tywmen.

The Island of Chatalet.

The land of Shyruantha.

th therein, it would be much to were not expected. Thus ha-vacation, and there remaining our hartles and other wares ap-for England, I desired passage my passage, ready to depart, me that I should not depart the great fault to the forwardnesse again the next day, and finding actions and obediencies of things, neill the Emperours Spairthe content, and within three dayes that I should not onely passe the of commendations to foreyn prin-to rebearse: wherupon I spe-aforesaid, I dined againe in his obeders, and receiving a cuppe of who did not only give me letters, to me, to be done when I should things in readinesse for the same 62. done by the great riuer of I had great friendship and conserruied all in health the 10 day of and counterpes, as well of Pales from Moico unto Afracan, d the same most amply unto you is aforesaid, I repayed into the ours Spairthe, with great charge during my abode there, but also es of byganticnes into the Capiss & rowers do accustom to haue, being before departed in a bark company tooke our voyage from outh of the said riuer being twensunne, we passed by three Islands

th south west from thence, sailing
with the land called Chhalica Opreee Islands forty miles, from d called Tuke, in the countrey of he baled off into the sea due East there were like to haue perished, Island called Chatalet, distant ig contrary, and a stiff gale, we he lee ward of the same five miles nd to the Westward of vs, which out miles, and so riding them, the storme and sea being at with continuall pumping, we uch of our goods overboard, with haue perished either in the sea, or pes of those wicked indidels, who should haue escaped both the one we continued seven dayes, to wit, unning by at the West with saye
, the next day hailing to the shore nes Shyruanha, and there we distant from the sayd Shatalet

150 miles, and there we continued twiell the third day of August, then hauing a saye winde, winding Southward, and sailing threestoye miles, the next day at a Southward sunne we arrived at a cite called Derbent in the king of Hyrcans dominion, where comming to land, and salu-ing the capaine there with a present, he made to me and my company a dinner, and there taking fresh water I departed.

Derbent.

This cite of Derbent is an ancient towne, hauing an olde castle therein, being situated vpon an hill called Castowe, builded all of freestone much after our building, the walles very high and thick, and was first erected by king Alexander the great, when he warred against the Persians and Medians, and then he made a wall of a wonderfull height and thickness, extending from the same cite to the Georgians, yea unto the principall cite thereof named Tewlish, which wall though it be now rased, or otherwist decayed, yet the foundation remaineth, and the wall was made of the stone that the inhabitants of that countrey then we wily conquered by the said Alexander should not lightly see, nor his enemies easily invade. This cite of Derbent being now vnder the power of the Sophy of Persia, bordereth vpon the sea, adioyning to the foresaid land of Shalfeall, in the latitude of forty one degrees. From thence sailing Southeast & Southsoutheast about 80 miles, the first day of August, the yeere aforesaid, we arrived at our landing place called Shabran, where my barke discharged the goods layd on hoare, and there being in my tent keeping great watch for feare of rowers, whereof there is great plenty, being fild people, the gouernor of the sayd countrey named Alcan Murcy, comming vnto me, intercaptined me very gently, vnto whom giuing a present, he appointed for my safegard forty armed men to watch and ward me, whom he might haue taken from the king of Shyruan. The 12 day of the same moneth newes did come from the king, with order that I should repayne vnto him with all speed and for expedition, as well ransoms to the number of five and forty to carry my goodes, as also hopes for me and my company were in readinesse; so that the goods laden, and taking my iourney from thence the said twelfth day, on the 18 of the same moneth, I came to a cite called Shamackye, in the said countrey of Hyrcan, otherwist called Shyruan, and there the king hath a saye place, where my lodging being appointed, the goods were discharged: the next day being the 19 day, I was sent for to come to the king named Obdolooran, who kept his court at that time in the high mountaines in tents, distant from the said Shamackye twentie miles, to auoid the injury of the heat: and the 20 day I came before his presence, who gently intercepted me, and hauing killed his handes, he bad me to dinner, and commanded me to sit downe not farre from him. This king did sit in a very rich pavilion, wrought with silke and golde placed very pleasantly, vpon a hill side, of threene fathom long, and five fathom broad, hauing before him a goodly fountaine of lorde water: wherof he and his nobilitie did drinke, he being a prince of a meane stature, and of a steepe countenance, richly apparelled with long garments of silke, and cloth of golde, imbodored with pearles and stone: vpon his head was a colipane with a sharpe end standing vpwards halfe a yard long, of rich cloth of golde, wrapped about with a piece of India silke of twentie yards long, wrought with golde, and on the left side of his colipane stood a plume of fetters, set in a crunke of golde richly inameled, and set with precious stones: his earerings had pendants of golde a handfull long, with two great rubies of great value, set in the ends thereof: all the ground within his pavilion was covered with rich carpets, and vnder himselfe was spred a square carpet wrought with siluer & gold, & thereupon was laid two sitable cushions: Thus the king with his nobilitie sitting in his pavilion with his legs a cross, and perceiving that it was painefull for me to sit, his highnesse caused a stoole to be brought in, and did will me to sit thereupon, after my fashion. Dinner time then appoyching, diuers clothes were spred vpon the ground, and sundry dishes serued, and set in a ranke with diuers kindes of meates, to the number of 140 dishes, as I numbred them, which being taken away with the table clothes, and others spred, a banquet of fruites of sundry kindes, with other banquetting meates, to the number of 150 dishes, were brought in: so that two seruices occupied 290 dishes, and at the end of the said dinner & ban-ket, the king said vnto me, Quo the queldes, that is to say, welcome: and called for a cup of water to be braynen at a fountaine, and taking thereof, did deliuer me the rest, demanding how I did like the same, and whether there were so good in our countrey or not: vnto whom I answered in such sort, that he was therewith contented: then he proposed vnto me sundry questions, both touching religion, and also the state of our countrey, and further questioned whether the Emperour of Al-maine, the Emperour of Russia, or the great Turke, were of most power, with many other things too long here to reheale, to whom I answered as I thought most meet. Then he demanded whether I intended to goe any further, and the cause of my comming: vnto that I answered, that I was sent with letters from the Queene most excellent Spairthe of England, vnto the great Sophy, to increas friendship and free passage, and for his safetionduot to be granted vnto

It might be called by Cappis.

Fortie one degrees.

Shabran.

Alcan Murcy
the gouernor.

King Obdolooran.

The medall & arripe of king Obdolooran.

and counterpes, as well of Pa-
les from Moico unto Afracan,
d the same most amply unto you
is aforesaid, I repayed into the
ours Spairthe, with great charge
during my abode there, but also
es of byganticnes into the Capis-
s & rowers do accustom to haue,
being before departed in a bark
company tooke our voyage from
outh of the said riuer being twensunne, we passed by three Islands
th south west from thence, sailing
with the land called Chhalica O-
preee Islands forty miles, from
d called Tuke, in the countrey of
he baled off into the sea due East
there were like to haue perished, Island called Chatalet, distant
ig contrary, and a stiff gale, we
he lee ward of the same five miles
nd to the Westward of vs, which
out miles, and so riding
them, the storme and sea being
at with continuall pumping, we
uch of our goods overboard, with
haue perished either in the sea, or
pes of those wicked indidels, who
should haue escaped both the one
we continued seven dayes, to wit,
unning by at the West with saye
, the next day hailing to the shore
nes Shyruanha, and there we distant from the sayd Shatalet

The Querees
letters to the Sophy.

English merchants to trade into his Sogonias, with the like also to be granted to his subjects, when they should come into our countreys, to the honour and wealth of both realmes, and communitie of both they subjects, with diuers other words, which I omit to rehearse. This said king much allowing this declaration, said that he would not onely giue me passage, but also men to safeconduct me vnto the sayd Sophie, lying from the foresaid cite of Shamake thirtie dayes iourney, by into the land of Bersia, at a castle called Cashin: so departing from the king at that time, within thre dayes after, being the foure and twentieth day of August the yeere aforesaid, he sent for me againe: vnto whom I repayned in the morning, and the king not being risen out of his bedde (for his maner is, that watching in the night, and then banquetting with his women, being a Cashin. should ride an hawking with many Gentlemen of his Court: and that they should let me so much game and pastime as might be, which was done, and many cranes killed: we returned from hawking about thre of the clocke at the afternoone. The king then risen, and ready to dinner, I was invited thereunto, and approaching nigh to the entering in of his tent, and being in his sight two gentlemen incountered me with two garments of that countrey fashion, one of silke, and the other of silke and golde, sent vnto me from the king, and, after that they cauled me to put off my bypper garment, being a gowne of blacke velvet furred with Sables, they put the sayd two garments vpon my backe, and so conducted me vnto the king, before whom doing reuerence, and kissing his hand, he commanded me to sit not farre from him, and so I dined in his presence, he at that time being very merry, and demanding of me many questions, and amongst other, how I like the maner of they hawking. Dinner so ended, I required his high nesse safeconduct for to depart towards the Sophie, who dismissing me with great fauour, and appointing his Ambassadors (which returned out of Russia) and others, to safeconduct me, he gave me at my departure a fayre hoise with all furniture, and custome free from thence with all my goods. So I returned to Shamake againe, where I remayned vntill the first of October, to prouide camels, horses, and other necessaries for my sayd intended iourney.

The description of Hyrcan.

But now before I proceed further, I purpose to write something of this countrey of Hyrcan, now called Shyrvan, with the townes and communitie of the same. This countrey of Hyrcan in times past was of great renowne, hauing many cities, townes, and castles in it: and the kings thereof in time of antiquitie were of great power, able to make warres with the Sophies of Bersia: but now it is not onely otherwile (for that the cities, townes, and castles he decayed) but also the king is subject to the sayd Sophie, (although they haue they proper king) and be at the commandement of the sayd Sophie, who conquered them not many yeeres passed, for they diuerse in religion, and caused not onely all the nobilitie and gentlemen of that countrey to be put to death, but also oner and besides, rased the walles of the cities, townes, and castles of the said realme, to the intent that there should be no rebellion, & for they great terror, caused a turret of free stone and flints to be erected in the sayd cite called Shamake, and in a ranke of flints of the sayd turret, did set the heads of the sayd nobilitie and gentlemen, then executed: this cite is distant from the sea side, with camels seuen dayes iourney, but now to the same being much decayed, and chiefe inhabited with Armenians, another cite called Arrash, bordering vpon the Georgians, is the chiefe and most opulent in the trade of merchandize, and thereabouts is nourished the most abundant groweth of raw silke, and thither the Turkes, Shyrans, and other strangers doe resort and traffike. There be also diuers good and necessarie commodities to be prouided and had in this said realme: videlizer, galls, rough and smooth, cotten wooll, allome, and raw silke of the naturall groweth of that countrey. Besides, were all kinde of spices and mygges, and some other commodities, which are brought thither from out of East India, but in the lesse quantitie, for that they be not assured to haue vent or deterrance of the same: but the chiefe commodities he there, raw silke of all sortes, whereof there is great plenty. Not farre from the sayd cite of Shamake, there was an olde castle called Gullistone, now beaten downe by this Sophie, which was esteemed to be one of the strongest castles in the world, and was besieged by Alexander the great, long time before he could winne it. And not farre from the said castle was a sumptuous building, wherein was buried a kinges daughter, named Amalecke Channa, who slew her selfe with a knife, for that her father would haue forced her (he professing chastitie) to haue married with a king of Tartary, vpon which occasion the maidens of that countrey doe reioyce thither once every yeere to lament her death.

The strong castles of Gullistone besieged.

All in the said countrey there is a high hill called Quiquiff, vpon the toppe whereof (as it is commonly reported) did dwell a great Giant, named Arneolte, hauing vpon his head two great houses, and eares, and eyes like a horse, and a tayle like a colue. It is further said, that to be granted to his subiectes, of both realmes, and to commande to be heard. This said king me passage, but also men of Sharnakpe shirke vapes departing from the king at that August the yeere aforesayd, being not being risen out of his riding with his women, being a one commandement that I that they should shew me in shes killed: we returned from risen, and ready to dinner, I cent, and being in his light ey fashion, sde downe to the from the king, and, after that beluet furred with Sables, vnto the king, before whom erre from him, and so I knowe me many questions, and a embed, I requierd his high ie with great fauour, and apes, to safeconduct me, he gave free from thence with all my vntill the sixt of October, to me.

of this countrey of Hyrcan. This countrey of Hyrcan d castles in it: and the kings with the Sophies of Pers d castles be decayed) but also upper king) and be at the comes passed, for they durdric at countrey to be put to death, castles of the said realme, to used a turret of free stone and ke of flints of the sayd turret, in this cite is distant from the g much decayed, and chidie in the Georgians, is the chid nourished the most abundant angers do resort and traffike, and had in this said realme: like of the naturall groweth and some other commodities, quantitie, for that they be not odities be there, raw fishes of ie of Sharnakpe, there was e, which was esteemed to be under the great, long time binner of sumptuous building, a, who shew her selfe with a cite) can haue warried with a doe. before thither once cur?

on the toppe whereof (as it being upon his head can be. It is further said, that this this monster kept a passage thereby, vntill there came an holy man (termed Haucoire Harnshe) a hindman to one of the Sophies, who mounted the said hill and combatting with the said Giant, did kill not onely him in chains, but also his woman called Lamisache, with his soune named After: for which virtuous they of that countrey haue this holy man in great reputation, and the hill at this day (as it is written) fauoureth so ill, that no person may come nigh vnto it. But whether it be true or not, I referre it to further knowledg.

Now to returne to the discourse of the proceeding in my voiage towards the great Sophie, The 6. of October in the yeere aforesayd, I with my company departed from Sharnachie aforesayd, and hauing iourneyed threer foye milles, came to a towne called Yuaate, wherein the king hath a faire house, with orchards and gardens, well replenished with frutes of all sorts. By this towne passeth a great riuer called Curre, which springeth in the mountains of the Georgians, and passing through the countrey of Hircania aforesayd, falleth in to the Caspian of Hircan sea, at a place betwene two ancient towne called Shabran and Bacowe, situate within the realme of Hircane, and from thence smyth further, passing through a fruitful countrey inhabited with pasturing people, which dwell in the Summer season vpon mountaines, and in Winter they remooue into the valleys without resorting to towne of any other habitation: and when they remooue, they do iourney in Carraunnes of troopes of people and cattell, carrying all their wiues, children and baggage vpon bullocks. Now passing this wild people ten dayes iourney coming into no towne of towne the 16. day of October we arriued at a cite called Ordowill, where we were lodged in a house builded with faire stone, and erected by this Sophie's father named Ismael, onely for the fauour and lodging of strangers and other traueilers, wherein all men haue victuals and feeding for man and horse for 3. dayes, and no longer. This foyersayd late prince Ismael, lieth buried in a faire Meskie, with a sumptuous sepulchre in the same, which he caused to be made in his life time. This towne Ordowill is in the latitude of 38. degrees, an ancient cite in the prouince of Ader-ragan, wherein the princes of Persia are commonly buried, and there Alexander the great did keepe his court when he inuaded the Persians, foure daies iourney to the Westward is the Citie Tauris, in old time called Tauris, the greatest cite in Persia, but not of such trade of merchandize as it hath bene, or as others be at this time, by meane of the great inuasion of the Turke, who hath conquered from the Sophie almost to the sayd Citie of Tauris, which the sayd Turke once liued, and thereby caused the Sophie to forsake the same, and to keepe his court ten dayes iourney from thence, at the sayd Citie of Casbin.

The 21. day wee departed from Ordowill aforesayd, travelling for the most part ouer mountaines all in the night season, and resting in the day being destitute of moob, and therefore were forced to vsit for fewell the dung of horses and camels, which we bought deare of the pasturing people. Thus passing ten dayes iourney the yeere aforesayd, the second day of Nouember we arriued at the foyersayd Citie of Casbin, where the sayd Sophie keepeth his court, and were appointed to a lodging not farre from the kings pallace, and within two dayes after the Sophie commaunded a prince called Shallie Murzey sonne to Obdowcan king of Shiruan aforesayd, to send for me to his house, who asked me in the name of the sayd Sophie how I did, and whether I were in health, and after did welcome me, and invited me to dinner, whereat I had great entertainment, and so from thence I returned to my lodging. The next day after I sent my interpreter vnto the Sophies Secretarie, declaring that I had letters directed from our most gracious Soueraigne laudie the Queenes most excellent maiestie of the Realme of England, vnto the sayd Sophie, and that the cause of my comming was expressed in the same letters, desiring that at convenient time I might come into his maiesties presence, who aduertising the Sophie thereof, shortly after answered mee that there were great affaires in hand: Which being finished, I should come before his presence, willing mee in the meane time to make ready my presence if I had any to desire.

At this time the great Turkes Ambassadors arriued foure dayes before my comming, who was firste thither to conclude a perpetuall peace betwixt the same great Turke and the Sophie, and brought with him a present in gold and faire horses, with rich furnitures and other giftes esteemed to be worth foure thousand pound. And thereupon a peace was concluded with foyfull feates, triumphs and solemnities, corroborated with strong othes, by their lawe of Alkaron, for either to obserue the same, and to liue alwayes after as twaine brethren, ayding the one the other against all princes that should warre against them, or epter of them. And vpon this conclusion the Sophie caused the great Turkes sonne named Baizer Soltan, a valiant prince, (who being new from his father vnto the Sophie, had remayned in his court the space of foure yeeres) to be put to death. In which time the sayd Turkes sonne had caused manyall warres betwixt the sayd princes,

The towne of Yuaate.

The cite of Ordowill.

The cite of Tauris.

Antb. Fenkinson arriued at the Sophies court. 2. Nouember, 1562.

The Turkes Ambassadors to the Sophie.

princes, and much prevailed therein: The Turke demanded therefore his soune to bee sent vnto him, and the Sophie refused thereunto to consent. But now being slaine according to the Turkes will, the Sophie sent him his head for a present, not a little belieued, and acceptable to the vnnaturall father. Discouraging at my first arrivall with the king of Shirvan of sundry matters, and being incertained as hath bene before declared, the sayd king named Obdolocon, demanding whether that wee of England had friendship with the Turkes or not, I answered that we never had friendship with them, and that therefore they would not suffer vs to passe through their countrie into the Sophie his dominions, and that there is a nation named the Venetians, not farre distant from vs, which are in great league with the sayd Turkes, who trade into his dominions with our commodities, chiefly to batter the same for rawe silkes, which (as wee understand) come from thence: and that if it would please the sayde Sophie and other princes of that countrey, to suffer our merchants to trade into those dominions, and to give vs passport and safe conduct for the same, as the sayde Turkes hath granted to the sayde Venetians, I doubted not but that it should growe to such a trade to the profite of them as never before had bene the like, and that they should bee both furnished with our commodities, and also haue utterance of theirs, although there neuer came Turke into their land, persuading with many other wordes for a trade to be had. This king vnderstanding the matter liked it maruailously, saying, that he would write vnto the Sophie concerning the same: as he did in very deede, assuring me that the Sophie would graunt my request, & that at my returne vnto him he would giue me letters of safe conduct, and priuiledges. The Turkes Ambassadour was not then come into the land, neither any peace hoped to be concluded, but great preparation was made for warre which was like much to haue furthered my purpose, but it chaunced otherwisse. For the Turkes Ambassadour being arrived, and the peace concluded, the Turkish merchants there at that time present, declared to the same Ambassadour, that my comming thither (naming mee by the name of Franke) would in great part destroy their trade, and that it should bee good for him to perswade the Sophie not to fauour me, as his highnesse ment to obserue the league and friendship with the great Turke his master, which request of the Turkish merchants, the same Ambassadour earnestly persecuted, and being afterwards dismissed with great honour hee departed out of the Realme with the Turkes some head as aforesayd, and other presents.

The Turkes
merchants withland of Jenkinson.

Shaw the mas the Sophie his name.

The 20. day of Nouember aforesayd, I was sent for to come before the sayd Sophie, otherwise called Shaw Thamas, and about thre of the clocke at after noone I came to the court, and in lighting from my horse at the court gate before my feete touched the ground, a paire of the Sophies owne shoes termed in the Persian tongue (Basmackes) such as hee himselfe weareth when hee ariseth in the night to pray (as his maner is) were put vpon my feete, for without the same shoes I might not be suffered to tread vpon his holy ground, being a Christian, and called amongst them Gower, that is, vnbelleuer, and vnclaine: esteeming all to bee infidels and Pagans which doe not beleue as they doe, in their false filthy prophets, Mahomet and Murezzalie. At the sayde court gate the things that I brought to present his maiestie with, were deuoid by sundry parcels to sundry seruitors of the court, to cary before me, for none of my companie or seruants might be suffered to enter into the court with me, my interpreter onely excepted. Thus comming before his maiestie with such reverence as I thought meete to be vsed, I deliuered the Queenes maiesties letters with my present, which he accepting, demanded of me of what countrey of Franke I was, and what affaires I had there to do: vnto whom I answered that I was of the famous Citie of London within the noble realme of England, and that I was sent thither from the most excellent and gracious soueraigne Ladie Elizabeth, Queene of the sayd Realme for to treat of friendship, and free passage of our merchants and people, to repaire and traffique within his dominions, for to bring in our commodities, and to carrie away thence to the honour of both princes, the mutuall commoditie of both realmes, and wealth of the subiects, with other wordes here omitted. He then demanded me in what language the letters were written, I answered, in the Latine, Italian and Hebrew: well sayd he, we haue none within our realme that vnderstand those tongues. Whereunto I answered that such a famous and woorthie Prince (as hee was) wanted not people of all nations within his large dominions to interpret the same. Then he questioned with me of the state of our countreies, and of the power of the Emperour of Almanie, King Philip, and the great Turke, and which of them was of most power: whom I answered to his contentation, not disparaging the great Turke, their late concluded friendship considered. Then hee reasoned with me much of religion, demanding whether I were a Gower, that is to say, an vnbelleuer or a Muselman, that is, of Mahomets faith. Vnto whom I answered, that I was neither vnbelleuer nor Mahometan, but a Christian. What is that sayd hee vnto the king of Georgians

The Sophies
questions.

sonne,

... his sonne to bee sent being slaine according to the desire, and acceptable to of Shirvan of sundry man-named Obdolocan, do Turkes or not, I answered not suffer vs to passe through nation named the Venetians, Turkes, who trade into his do-mines, which (as wee understand) the Sophie and other princes of that and to give vs passport and the sayde Venetians, I doubt as never before had bene the us, and also haue utterance of with many other wofull miraculously, saying, that hee would, assuring me that hee would give me letters of safe come into the land, neither warre which was like much Turkes Amballadour being at time present, declared to the name of Frankes) would in persuade the Sophie not to with the great Turke his about earnestly preferred, the Realme with the Turkes

... the sayd Sophie, other I came to the court, and in the ground, a paire of the Sophie hee himselfe weareth when etc. for without the same shoes tian, and called amongst them idels and Pagans which doe Murtezallie. At the sayde ere desired by sundry parcels manie of seruants might be ed. Thus coming before deliuered the Queenes maie of what countrey of Frankes ed that I was of the famous was sent thither from the most sayd Realme for to create of e and traffique within his do-mine to the honour of both prin-cers, with other words here written, I answered, in the realme that understande shoulde Prince (as hee was) wanted the same. Then hee questioned our of Ainaie, King Philip, n I answered to his comeny considered. Then hee read ver, that is to say, an unbelie-were, that I was neither bu-into the king of Georgians sonne,

sonne, who being a Christian was fled unto the sayd Sophie, and hee answered that a Christian was he that beleuech in Iesus Christus, affirming him to bee the sonne of God, and the greatest prophet: Doest thou beleue so sayd the Sophie unto me? Hee that I doe sayd I: Whou unbeleuech sayd he, we haue no neede to haue friendship with the unbelueers, and so willed mee to depart. I being glad thereof did reuerence and went my way, being accompanied with many of his gentlemen and others, and after mee followed a man with a Blauet of sand, sifting all the way that I had gone within the said passage, euen from the sayd Sophies sight unto the court gate.

Thus I repaired againe unto my lodging, and the sayd night Shally Murzge some to the king of Hircanes aforesayd, who fauoured mee very much for that I was commended unto him from his father, willed me not to doubt of any thing, putting me in hope that I should haue good successe with the Sophie, and good intertainment.

The curtesie of Shally Murzep.

Thus I continued for a time, daily resorting unto me diuers gentlemen sent by the Sophie to conferre with me, especially touching the affaires of the Emperour of Russia, and to know by what way I intended to returne into my countrey, either by the way that I came, or by the way of Ormus, and so with the Portugals shipped. Unto whom I answered, that I durst not returne by the way of Ormus, the Portugals and wee not being friends, fully perceiving their meaning: for I was advertised that the sayde Sophie meant to haue warres with the Portugals, and would haue charged me that I had bene come for a spie to passe through his dominions unto the said Portugals, thinking them and vs to be all one people, and calling all by the name of Frankes, but by the prouidence of God this was prevented.

Warres intended against the Portugals.

After this the sayd Sophie conferred with his nobilitie and counsell concerning me, who persuaded, that he should not entertaine me well, neither dismisle mee with letters or gifts, considering that I was a Frank, and of that nation that was enemye to the great Turke his brother, persuading that if hee did otherwise, and that the newes thereof should come to the knowledge of the Turke, it should be a meane to breake their new league and friendship lately concluded: dis-suading further because hee had no neede, neither that it was requisite for him to haue friendship with unbelueers, whose countreys lay farre from him, and that it was best for him to send mee with my letters unto the sayde great Turke for a present, which he was fully determined to haue done at some meete time, meaning to send his Amballadour unto the sayd great Turke very shortly after.

But the king of Hircanes some aforesayd, understanding this deliberation, sent a man in Post unto his father, for to declare and impart the purpose unto him, who as a gracious prince, considering that I had passed through his dominions, and that I had iourneyed for a good intent, did write to the Sophie all that which hee understood of his sayd determination, and that it should not stand with his maiesties honour to doe me any harme or displeasure, but rather to giue mee good entertainment, seeing I was come into his land of my free will, and not by constraint, and that if hee used me euill, there would few straungers resort into his countrey, which would be greatly unto his hinderance, with many other persuasions: which after that the sayd Sophie had well and thoughtly pondered and digested (much esteeming the same king of Hircane, being one of the valiantest princes vnder him and his nigh kinseman) changed his determined purpose, and the 20. day of March, 1562. he sent to me a rich garment of cloth of gold, and so dismissed me without any harme.

The king of Hircanes testified letters in sp. Irish sons behalf.

During the time that I sojournd at the sayd citie of Casbin, diuers merchaints out of India came thither unto mee, with whom I conferred for a trade of spices: whereunto they answered that they would bring of all foyses so much as wee would haue, if they were sure of vent, whereof I did promise to assure them, so that I doubt not but that great abundance thereof may from time to time be there prouided and had.

Conference with Indian merchants.

The same twentieth day of March I returned from the sayd citie of Casbin where I remayned all the Winter, hauing sent away all my cammels before, and the thirtieth day I came to the sayde Citie of Ordowill, and the sixteenth of Aprill unto Zauant aforesayde, where king Obdolowcan was at that present, who immediately sent for mee, and demanding of mee many questions, declared that if it had not bene for him, I had bene utterly cast away, and sent to the great Turke for a present by the Sophie, though the euill persuasion of his wicked counsell, and that the Zicities and holp men were the chiefe and principall procurers and mo-uers thereof: but the Sophie himselfe meant mee much good at the first, and thought to haue giuen me good entertainment, and so had done, had not the peare and league returned to haue

Sp. Fenkin-
 sons returne.

Priviledges obtained of Shahworan, which are hereafter as followeth.

An Armenian sent to Mather Ienkinson fro
the king of Georgia.

Teneruke
king of Chircass.

have bene concluded betwene them and the great Turke, Neuertheless, sayd he, the Sophie hath written unto me to entertaine you well, and you are welcome into my countrey, and so hee treated mee very gently, in whose court I remayned seven dayes, and obtained of him letters of safe conductes and priviledges in your names to be free from paying custome, which I deliuered unto your seruants Thomas Alcocke and George Wain, at their departure to wards Persia for your affaires: and his highnesse did giue mee two garments of silke, and so dismissed me with great fauour, sending with me his Ambassadour againe unto the Emperour of Russia, and committed the chiefest secrete of his affaires unto mee, to declare the same unto the Emperours maiestie at my returne: and thus departing the tenth day of Aprill, I came to the Citie of Shamachie, and there remayning certaine dayes for prouision of cammels downe to the Sea side, I sent from thence before, men to repayre my barke, and to make her in a readinesse, And during my abode in Shamachie, there came unto me an Armenian sent from the king of Georgia, who declared the lamentable estate of the same king, that being enclosed betwixt those two cruell tyrans and mighty princes, the sayd great Turke and the Sophie, he had continuall warres with them, requiring for the loue of Christ and as I was a Christian, that I would send him comfort by the sayd Armenian, and aduise how hee might send his Ambassadour to the sayd Emperour of Russia, and whether I thought that hee would support him or no: and with many other wordes required mee to declare his necessitie unto the same Emperour at my returne: adding further that the sayd king would haue written unto mee his minde, but that he doubted the safe passage of his messenger, Unto whom I did like wise answer by worde of mouth, not onely persuading him to send his Ambassadour to Russia, not doubting but that hee should finde him most honourable and inclined to helpe him, but also I directed him his way how the sayd king might send by the countrey of Chircassi, through the fauour of Teneruke king of the sayd countrey, whose daughter the sayd king had lately married. And thus dismissing the sayd Armenian, within two dayes after I sent Edward Clearke your seruant unto the Citie of Arrash, where the most hope of silkes is to be had, giuing him Commission to haue passed further into the sayd countrey of Georgia, and there to haue repaired unto the sayd king. And after my commendations promised, and my minde declared to haue pursued for safeconduct of the same prince for our merchants to trade into his dominions, and that obtained to haue returned againe with speede. The same your seruant journeying to the sayd Citie of Arrash, and there finding certaine merchants Armenians, which promised to goe to the sayd Citie of Georgia, comming to the borders thereof, was perceiued by a Captaine there, that he was a Christian, and thereupon demanded whether he went, and vnderstanding that hee could not passe further without great suspicion, answered that hee came thither to buy silkes, and shewed the king of Hircaenes letters which hee had with him, and so returned backe againe, and the 15. of Aprill came to Shamachie: from whence I departed the sixtene of the same moneth, and the one and twentieth thereof comming to the Sea side, and finding my barke in a readinesse, I caused your goods to be laden, and there attended a faire wind.

But before I proceede any further to speake of my returne, I intend with your fauours somewhat to treat of the countrey of Persia, of the great Sophie, and of his countrey, lawes and religion.

The description
of Persia.

The chiefest
cities of Persia.

This land of Persia is great and ample, deuised into many kingdomes and prouinces, as Gilan, Corasan, Shiruan, and many others hauing diuers Cities, Townes and Castles in the same. Every prouince hath his seuerall king, or Sultane, all in obedience to the great Sophie. The names of the chiefest Cities be these: Teueris, Casbin, Keshan, Yesse, Meskit, Heirin, Ordowill, Shamachie, Arrash with many others. The countrey for the most part toward the Sea side plaine and full of pasture, but into the land, high, full of mountaines, and sharpe. To the South it bordereth vpon Arabia and the East Ocean. To the North vpon the Caspian sea and the lands of Tartaria. To the East vpon the prouinces of India, and to the West vpon the confines of Chaldaea, Syria, and other the Turkes landes. All within these dominions be of the Sophies, named Shaw Thomas, some to Imael Sophie. This Sophie that now reigneth, is nothing valiant, although his power be great, and his people martiall: and though his pusillanimitie the Turke hath much inuaded his countreies, euen nigh unto the Citie of Teueris, wherein he was wont to keepe his chiefest court. And now hauing forsaken the same, is chiefly resident at Casbin as before, and alwayes as the sayd Turke pursueth him, hee not being able to withstand the Turke in the field, trusting rather to the mountaines for his safegard, then to his forces and castles, hee hath caused the same to be rased within his dominions, and his ordinance to be molten, to the intent that his enemies pursuing him, they should not strengthen themselves with the same.

This

lelle, sayd he, the Sophie to my countrey, and so hee and obtained of him letters of custome, which I deliv-de parture to wards Persia ke, and so dismissed me with perour of Russia, and comto the Emperours maie to the Citie of Shamachie, to the Sea side, I sent from elle. And during my abode of Georgia, who declared hose two cruell tyrants and uall warres with them, red send him comfort by the he sayd Emperour of Ruswith many other wordes to turne: adding further that waded the safe passage of his not onely perswading him finde him most honourable sayd king might send by the sayd countrey, whose digni-mentian, within two dayes ish, where the most hope of into the sayd countrey of Gecommendations promised, since for our merchants to me with speede. The same ing certaine merchants Arving to the borders thereof, reupon demanded whether great suspicion, answered letters which hee had with shamachie: from whence I ereof comming to the Sea laden, and there attended a nd with your favours some his countrey, lawes and re-omes and prouinces, as Gilownes and Castles in the ience to the great Sophie, Yesse, Meskit, Heinn, Ore most part toward the Sea s, and sharpe. To the South e Caspian sea and the lands d upon the confines of Chals be of the Sophies, named gness is nothing valiant, alis pusillanimitie the Turke , wherein he was wont to sment at Casbin stovesley, withstand the Turke in the foyses and castles, hee hath to bee molten, so the intent with the same.

This

This prince is of the age of fiftie yeeres, and of a reasonable nature, having five children. His first sonne he keepeth captive in prison; for that hee feareth him for his valiantnesse and activitie: he professeth a kind of holypnesse, and saith that he is descended of the blood of Mahomet and Mur-tezallie: and although these Persians bee Spahometians, as the Turkes and Tartares bee, yet honour they this false fained Murtezallie, saying that he was the chiefe disciple that Spahomet had, cutting and chiding daily three other disciples that Spahomet had called Ouear, Vifran, and Abebecke, and that they did slay the sayd Murtezallie; for which cause and other differences of holy men and lawes, they haue had and haue with the Turkes and Tartares moztall warres.
To interat of their religion at large, being more or lesse, Spahometes lawe and the Alharon, I shall not need at this present. These persons are comely and of good complexion, moude and of good courage, esteeming themselves to bee best of all Nations, both for their religion and holines, which is most erroneous, and also for all other their fashions. They be martiall delighting in faire horses and good harness, loone angrie, craftie and hard people. Thus much I haue thought good to treat of this nation, and now I returne to discourse the proceeding of the rest of my voyage.

The difference of religion.

My Barke being ready at the Caspian Sea side as aforesayd, having a faire winde, and committing our selues unto God the 30. day of May, one thousand five hundred fiftie three, wee arri-ued at Astracan, having passed no lesse dangers vpon the Sea in our returne, then we sustained in our going forth, and remaining at the sayd Astracan, untill the tenth day of June, one hundred gunners being there admitted vnto me for my safegard vpon the river Volga, the fiftenth of Iulie I arrived at the Citie of Cazan, where the captaine entertained me well, and so dismissing mee, I was conducted from place to place vnto the citie of Mosko, where I arrived the 20. day of August 1563, in haste, thanks be to God, with all such goods, merchandises, and iewels, as I had procured as well for the Emperours stocke and accoutre, as also of yours, all which goods I was commaunded to bring vnto the Emperours treasure before it was opened, which I did, and deliuered those parcels of wares which were for his maiesties account, videlicet, pteious stones, and wrought silkes of sundry colours and soyes, much to his highnes contentation, and the rest due belonging to you, viz. Craskoe, and raw silkes, with other merchandises (as by account ap-peareth) were brought vnto your house, whereof part thereof remained, and the rest was laden in your ships lately returned.

The 30. of May 1563.

Shortly after my comming to the Mosko, I came before the Emperours maiestie, and presented vnto him the apparell giuen vnto me by the Sophie, whose highnesse conferred with mee touching the princes affaires which he had committed to my charge, and my proceedings therein it pleased him so to accept, that they were much to his contentation, saying vnto me, I haue received your good seruice, for the which I doe thanke you, and will recompence you for the same, wishing that I would trauell againe in such his other affaires, wherein he was minded to employ me: to whom I answered, that it was to my heartie reioycing that my seruice was so acceptable vnto his highnesse, acknowledging all that I had done, to bee but of dutie, humble beseeching his grace to continue his goodnesse vnto your worshipps, and euen at that instant I humbly requested his maiestie to boughlase to graunt vnto you a new priuiledge more ample then the first, which immediately was graunted, and so I departed. And afterwards hauing penned a briefe note how I meant to haue the same priuiledges made, I repaired hasty to the Secretarie for the perfecting of the same, & obtained it vnder his maiesties broad seale, which at my departure from thence, I deliuered vnto the custodie of Thomas Glouer your Agent there. The copie whereof, and also of the other priuiledges graunted and giuen by the king of Hircan, I haue already deli-uered vnto you. So iourning all that Winter at Mosko, and in the meane time hauing bargained with the Emperours maiestie, I sent away your seruant Edward Cleake thither ouerland with some, and also made preparation for sending againe into Persia in meere time of the yeere.
And committing the charge thereof vnto your seruants Thomas Astocke, George Wyenne, and Richard Cheinie, the 28. of June last, I departed in post from the sayd Mosko, and comming to Colmogro and so do home to the Sea side; I found your ships laden and ready to depart, where I embarked my selfe in your good ship called the Swallow, the 9. of Iuly, one thousand five hundred fiftie foure, and hauing passed the Seas with great and extreme dangers of loss of steepe, goods and life, the 28. day of September last (God be praised) were arrived here at London in safety.

New priuiledges obtained hereafter following.

28. Sept. 1564

This knowing that the contagious and balefull souldier, which aduentured both fame, member and life, to serue faithfully his soueraigne, esteemeth not the perils any dangers passed: (the victory once obtained) neither for his guerdon desireth any thing more, then that his seruice be well

well taken of him for whom he enterprised it: So I perswading your favourable beneuolence to me extended in accepting my travels in good part to your contentations, doe thinke my selfe thereby with great paine recompensed: desiring almightie God so to prosper your adventures, from time to time hereafter to be made for reaping the frutes of my travels (at your great charges, and to my no small dangers) that ye may plentifully gather in and enioy the same to the illustration of the Queenes most excellent maiestie, the honour and commoditie of this her highnesse realme, and to the ample benefit and abundant enriching of you and your succession, & posteritie for ever.

A copie of the priuiledges giuen by Obdolowcan king of Hircania to the companie of English merchants Adventurers for Russia, Persia, and Mare Caspium, with all the landes and countries adjoining to the same, obtained by M. Anthonie Ienkinson at his being there about the affaires of the sayd company, April 14. Anno 1563.

Whereas Obdolowcan by the mightie power of God maker of heauen and of earth, appointed and now raignting king of Shiruan and Hircan, of our merre motion and great goodnes, at the earnest sute and request of our fauored and welbeloued Anthonie Ienkinson Ambassadour, haue giuen and granted vnto the right worshipfull Sir William Garter, Sir William Chelster, Sir Thomas Lodge, Sir Richard Mallarie, and Sir Richard Chamberlaine, with all their companie of merchants Adventurers of the Citie of London in England, free libertie, safe conduct, and licence to come or send their factors in trade of merchandise into our countries, and to buy and sell with our merchants and others, either for ready money or barter, and to tarie and abide in our countrey, so long as they will, and to goe away when they list, without impediment, let, or hinderance, either of bodie or goods.

And further our commandement and pleasure is, that the said English merchants with their company, shal pay no manner of custome for wares, which they or their factors shal buy or sel within our dominions. And if at any time our custumers or other officers, or any of them, do disturbe, misde, force or constrain the said English merchants or any of them, or their factors, to pay any manner of custome or dutie for any wares they bring in or carie out of our dominions contrary to this our commandement, and the same be knowne vnto vs, then wee will that the said custumers and officers shal loose and be put out of their said offices, with our further displeasure, and the sayd English merchants to haue restored all such money and wares as our custumers haue taken of them for our said custome. And whensoever the said English merchants or their factors shal bring any manner of wares meet for our treasure, then our treasurer shal take the sayd wares into our treasure, and shal giue vnto the said English merchants, either ready money or rays stikes, to the value of their said wares. And wheresoeuer this our letter of priuiledges shall be seene and read within our dominion, wee straightly will and command that it take effect, and be obeyed in all points. Dated at our place of Iauat, the day and yeere aboue written, and sealed with our princely seale, and signed by our secretarie in the 12. yeere of our raigne.

The second voyage into Persia made by Thomas Alcocke which was slayne there, and by Richard Cheinie seruant to the worshipfull companie of Moscovic merchants in An. 1563, written by the said Richard Cheinie.

It may please your worshipps to vnderstand, that in the yeere 1563. I was appointed by Sir Anthonie Ienkinson, and Sir Thomas Glouer your Agent in Russia, to go for vs. In our worshipps affaires, one Thomas Alcocke hauing the charge of the voyage committed to him, and I one of your worshipps seruants being ioined with him in your business, hauing with vs, as they sayd, fiftene rubbles. And if it shall please you I cannot tel certainly what summe of money we had then of the Emperours: for I receiued none, nor disburst any of it in wares for the voyage. Also, God I take to record, I could not tell what stocke your worshipps had there, for the bookes were kept so yuuillie, that a man could neuer see them. The 10. of May, anno 1563, we departed from a towne called Yeraslaua vpon our voyage to wards Persia. The 24. of July we arrived at Astracan: and the second of August we departed from Astracan, and the 4. of the same moneth we came to the Caspian Sea, and the 11. day of the said moneth we arrived at our port in Media: and the 21. of the said August we arrived at Shammakie, where as the king Obdolowcan lay in the field, wile here well entertained of heathen people, for the third day after

It rubbles in a mauche Eng
gully.

24. of July

1102 our favourable beneuolence in things, doe thinke my selfe passe your aduencures, from his (at your great charges, and joy the same to the illustrating of this her bigynne realme, succession, & posteritie for euer.

Thomas Alcocke king of Hir.

aduenturers for Russia, countries adioynkinton at his
com-

heauen and of earth, appointed meere motion and great good beloued Anthonie Ienkinson of Wythfull Sir William Garret, of Richard Chamberlaine, London in England, seeke libe-merchandise into our countrey, money or barter, and to take when they list, without impede withly merchants with their factories shal buy or sel within any of the, do disturbance, misse, or factories, to pay any manner of contrary to this our com-the said customers and officers the said Englysh have taken of them for our factories shall bring any manner wares into our treasure, and to sitkes, to the value of their seene and read within our be-obeyed in all points. Dated with our princely seale, and in

Thomas Alcocke which

shipfull companie of Richard Cheinie.

re 1563. I was appointed by gent in Russia, to go for the charge of the voyage joined with him in your busi-you I cannot tel certainly d none, nor disburde any of I what stocke your worshipps see them. The 10. of May, oyage towards Persia. The parted from Astracan, and the he said moneth we arrived at nunkie, where as the king people, for the thirde day after our arrivall at Shammakie wee were called befoze the king: wee gaue him a present, and hee en-taines vs very well.

At our comming to the Court we were commaunded to come befoze the king, who sate in his tent upon the ground with his legs a crosse, and all his dukes round about his tent, the ground being covered with carpets: wee were commaunded to sit downe, the king appointing euery man his place to sit. And the king commaunded the Emperour of Russelands Sparchants to rise vp, and to giue vs the upper hande. The 20. of October Thomas Alcocke departed from Sham-makie towards Casbin, leaving me at Shammakie to recouer such debts as the dukes of Sham-makie ought for wares which they tooke of him at his going to Casbin. In the time I lay there, I could recouer but little. And at Thomas Alcockes comming from Casbin, who arrived at a towne called Leuauata, whereas the king Obdolocan lay, a day and a halfe's iourney from the towne whereas I lay, I hearing of his arriuing there, departed from Sammakie, finding him there in safetie with all such goods as hee had with him. During his abode there for seuen dayes hee made suite to the king for such money as the dukes ought him. But the king was displeas'd for that the Emperour of Russelands Sparchant had slaine a Boslerman at his going to Casbin.
Thomas Alcocke seeing the king would giue vs no fauour, and also hearing from Shammakie, that the Russies sent their goods to the sea side, for that they feared that the king of Persia should haue knowledge of the death of the Boslerman, willed mee to depart to Shammakie with all such goods as hee had brought with him from Casbin, I leaving him at the Court.

Casbin.

Ermacta.

A Boslerman
is a Keregabo.

The thirde day after mine arrivall at Shamnakie, I had newes that Thomas Alcocke was slaine comming on his way towards me. Then the king Obdolocan vnderstanding of his death, demanded whether he had cure a brother. Some said it was, some saide it was not his brother.
When this fell out, your worshipps had no other seruant there but mee among those heathen people, who hauing such a summe of goods lying vnder my handes, and seeing how the Russies sent their goods with as much hast as they might to the sea side, and hauing but foure men to sende our wares to the sea side, I used such diligence, that within two dayes after Thomas Alcocke was slaine, I sent in company with the Russies goods, all your worshipps goods with a Spariner, William Augult, and a Swechen, for that they might the safer arriue at the seaside, being safely layed in. All which goods afterwards arriued in Russeland in good condition. M. Glouer hauing the receipt of all things which I sent then out of those parties into Russeland, Concerning my selfe, I remained after I had sent the goods into Russeland sixe weekes in Shammakie, for the recouerie of such debts as were owing, and at last with much trouble recouered to the summe of fiftene hundred rubles or there about, which M. Glouer receiued of mee at my coming to Mofco, and all such goods as I thought with mee out of Kefelbath, as by a note of my hande that hee hath shall appeare. Also hee hauing the receipt of all such goods as I sent into Russeland by these two aboue named, hee then had that voyage in better of his owne better then an hundred rubles, one Richard Iohnson thwente rubles, one Thomas Petre fiftie rubles, one Euan Chermison a Tartar seuentie rubles. All these had their returne, M. Glouer allowed himselfe God knoweth howe, I then being in Persia in your worshipps affaires.

Thomas Al-cocke slaine in the way betweene Rus-sela and Shamnakie.

Kefelbath is Kefelbath.

And whereas he saith, the Emperour had but for his part a dubble, as farre as I can see, knowing what the wares cost in those parties, hee had treble. If they gaue him so much wares, all charges turned to your worshipps, as well of the Emperours as of their owne returnes. I haue somen the seede, and other men haue gathered the harvest: I haue trauailed both by land and by water, full many a time with a sorrowfull heart, as well for the safegarde of their goods as yours, how to frame all things to the best, and they haue reaped the fruites of my trauaile. But cur my power was to God, to deliuer mee out of those miseries which I suffered for your seruice among those heathen people. Therefore knowing my dutie which I haue done, as a true seruant ought to doe, I beseech your worshipps, (although I haue but small recompence for my seruice, yet let me haue no wrong, and God will prosper you the better.

Also, to inquire your worshipps of your Persian voyage what I haue: it is a voyage to be followed. The king of Gillan, where, as yet, you haue had no traffique, lieth al by marchandise: and it is nere Casbin, and not past six weekes trauaile from Ormus, whereas all the spices be brought and here. (I meane at Gillan) a trade may bee established: But your worshipps must sende such men as are notorious liars, not drunkards. For if such men goe, it will be to your dishonour and great hinderance, as appeared by experience the yeere 1565, when as Richard Iohnson went to Persia, whose iourney had bene better stayed then set forward. For whereas before we had the name among those heathen people to be such marchants as they thought none like in al respects, but notorious lying there hath made vs to be compted worse then the Russies.

William in Persia.

Again, if such men crauaile in your affaires in such a voyage, you shall neuer knowe what gaine is to be gotten. For how can such men employ themselves to seeke the trade, that are inclined to such vices? or how can God prosper them in your affaires. But when a trade is established by wise and discrete men, then will it be for your worshipps to crauaile there, and not before: for a voyage or market made euill at the first, is the occasion that your worshipps shall neuer vnderstand what gaines is to be gotten thereby hereafter.

The thirde voyage into Persia, begun in the yeere 1565. by Richard Iohnson, Alexander Kitchin, and Arthur Edwards.

A letter of Arthur Edwards to M. Thomas Nicols, secretarie to the worshipfull companie trading into Russia and other the North parts, concerning the preparation of their voyage into Persia.

Ierasslaue a towne vpon the Riuer of Volga.

Richard Iohnson chief of the third voyage into Persia.

30 barke of 30 tunnes made at Ierasslaue 1564. to passe the Caspian sea.

After Nicols, my bounden duetie remember, with desire of God for the preferuation of you and yours: you shall vnderstande that the second of March I was sent by M. Thomas Glouer (your Agent) vnto Ierasslaue, appointed to receiue such goods as should come frō Vologhda, as also such kinde of wares as should be bought and sent from Mosco by your Agent, & M. Edward Clarke, thought meete for your voyage of Persia. And further, I was to prouide for biscuit, beere, beefe, and other victuals, and things otherwayes needefull according to aduise. Thus I remained here vntill the comming of your Agent, which was the 12. of May, who taried here three dayes, to see vs set forthwards on our voyage, and then hee departed towards Colmogro, hauing appointed (as chiefe for your voyage of Persia) Richard Iohnson. For my part I am willing, as also haue bene and shall be content, to submit my selfe vnder him, whome the Agent shall appoint, although hee were such a one as you should thinke in some respects vnmeet. Three two packes of carsets are all of that kinde of cloth that wee shall haue with vs. The other 18. packes that should haue gone, were solde in Mosco. What other goods are shipped for our voyage, you shall vnderstand by your Agents letters. Whereas Edward Clarke (being an honest man) was appointed Agent for Persia, as one for those parts more fit then any I doe knowe here, God hath taken him vnto his mercie, who departed this present life the 16. of March last past. I wish of God for my part he had liued: for my desire was in his companie to haue crauailed into Persia. Your barke or craet made here for the riuer of Volga and the Caspian sea is very litle, of the burthen of 30. tunnes at the most. It is handsonly made after the English fashion: but I thinke it to litle for your goods and provision of victuals. If the worshipfull companie would sende hither a Shiptwright, being skilfull to make one of the burthen of 60. tunnes or more, weighing but 6. foote water at the most when it is laden, I thinke it should bee profitable. For if your owne goods would not lade the same, here be Marchants that would bee glad and faine to giue great freight to lade their goods with vs; whereby your charges would be much lessened: And so it may happen, the wages of your men hired here may be saved, and your seruants and goods in farre greater assurance: for their boates here are dangerous to saile with and to passe the Caspian sea. There be Carpenters here that will doe well nough hauing one to instruct them. Your wares bought here, and orders taken for those that goe for your voyage of Persia, are yet to knowen vnto mee; wherefore I can not (as I would at this present) write to you thereof. For (as you doe knowe) it was the Counters minde I should be acquainted with your affaires then these. How best I doubt not but I shall be informed of them that are appointed, and all things shall be bought when they shall see time and haue more leasure.

Thus (in hast as appeareth) I commit you and yours into the hands of Almighty God: who preserve you in perfect health with increase of worship.

From Ierasslaue the 15. of May 1565.

By yours to commaunde here or els where during life,

Arthur Edwards.

An other

... you shall neuer knowe what to seeke the trade that are in But when a trade is established there, and not before: for a voyages shall neuer undertake the yeere 1565.

in, and

Nicols, secretarie to other the North
voyage

with desire of God for the preservation of the second of March I was at sea, appointed to receive such kinde of wares as should M. Edward Clarke, thought it was to provide for biscuit, beer, and to advise. Thus I remaine of my part, who tarried here three dayes towards Colmogro, having in. For my part I am willing, in, whome the Agent shall appoint respects in me. Thirtie dayes with vs. The other 18, goods are shipped for our voyward Clarke (being an honest man) then any I doe knowe here, the 16. of March last past. I company to have traualled into the Caspian sea is very little, after the English fashion: but I worshipfull companie would of 60. tunnes of more, which would be profitable. For if your voyd be glad and faine to give it would be much lessened: And and your seruants and goods to saile with and to passe the Calcutta, having one to instruct them.

... hands of Almighty God; who ... here or els
... life,
Arthur Edwards,

Another

An other letter of the said M. Arthur Edwards, written the 26. of April 1566. in Shamackie in Media to the right worshipfull

... for Thomas Lodge knight and Alderman: And in his absence to M. Tho-
... man Nicols, Secretarie to the right worshipfull companie tra... ding into Russia, Persia, and othes the North and East
... parts, touching the successe of Richard Johnson
... in the thirde voyage into Persia.

Worshipfull Sir, my bounden duetie rememberd, with heartie prayer unto God for the preservation of you and yours in perfect health with increase of worship. It may please you that my last letter I sent you was from Afracan the 26. of July 1565. From whence Richard Johnson, my selfe; and Alexander Kitchin, departed as the 30. of the same. And by meanes of contrary winde, it was the 23. of August before wee came to our be desired porte named Nazaoe.
There after wee had gotten your goods on lande, with much labour and strength of men, as also wonderles deuised and made, wee haled your barke over a barre of beauly of pebble stones into a small Riuer, sending your whippes apparell with other things to an house hired in a village thereby. And as soon as wee might get camels, being the sixt of September wee departed thence, and came to this towne of Shamackie the 13. of the same: and the 17. day following wee presented unto Abdollocan the King of this Countrey one timber of sables, one tunne of best of flues russes parill gilt, three moyles teeth, 4. ashlines of Charlet, three pieces of carlets, with 40. rade fores.

We received our presents with giuing vs thanks for our good wills, demanding if M. Jenkinson were in good health, and whether he would returne into these parts againe. Wee willed vs also to himselfe to sit downe before him the distance of a quoyes call from his tent, where hee sat with diuers of his counsaile and nobilitie, sending vs from his table such meate as was before him: And after certaine talke had with vs, hee saide if hee might perceiue or knowe any manner of person to doe vs any wrong, hee would punish them in example of others, whereby wee should live in quietnesse, and haue no cause to complaine, giuing vs a litle house for the time, untill a better might be provided in such place as wee should thinke most meete, neuer willing vs to rise or depart, untill such time as wee of our selues thought it convenient. At the taking of our leaue, he willed vs to put our whole mindes and requestes in writing, that hee might further vnderstand our desires. But while we were about to doe so, God tooke this good king our friende out of this prentise life the 2. of October past. The want of him hath bene the cause that as yet wee cannot reueue certaine debts. Howbeit, we doubt not but wee shall recouer all such summes of moneie, as are owing vs for this voyage. As for Thomas Alcocks debts they are past hope of recouerie, which had not bene lost if the king had liued. Wee trust in the place of him, God will sende as friendly a king towards vs: who by report (and as wee be credibly informed,) shall be his Sonne named the Murlay: who since the death of his father, at our being with him, promised to be we more friendship then ever we found: God graunt the same.

Great troubles haue chaunced in these parts. Of those which were of the olde kings commission bare any rule about him in these quarters, some are in prison, some are pinched by the purse, and other sent for into the Shaugh. These troubles haue partly bene the let that wares were not sold, as they might to more profit. Your Agent Richard Johnson bought foure hoppers, minding to haue sent to Casbin, Alexander Kitchin, whome God tooke to his mercie the 23. of October last: and before him departed Richard Daus one of your Partners; whose soules I trust the Lord hath receiued to his mercie. Wee are now destitute of others to supply their roomes.
Foure Partners were set to saile your barke, whereof at this present wee haue but one, whose name is William Smith, an honest yong man, and one that doeth good seruaice here. For want and lacke of Partners that should knowe their labours, wee all were like to be cast away in a storme. For all the head side of our barke laye in the water, and wee had much a doe to recouer it: but God of his mercie deliuered vs. Partners here, may doe you good seruice all the winter otherwayes: and Merchants here will be the gladder to stoppe their goods in vs giuing good fraighte. One Merchant at this present is content to pay twentie robes for twen-tie camels lading fraighte to Afracan. Such barkes as must passe these seas, may not drudge aboute the foot of water, because that in many places are very shallowe waters. Wee minde hereafter to make the Russian boates more strong, and they shall serue our turnes very well.

M 2

And

They departed from Afracan the 23. of July 1565.

September.

Presents to the King of Abdollocan.

A house giuen our men in Shamackie by the King.

The death of Abdollocan
the 2. of October 1565.

Depart the new King of Persia.

The death of Alexander
Kitchin the 23. of October 1565.

The Caspian sea very shallow in divers places.

And whereas some iustices past took care, and could not have their desire in the granting of the Shaughes letters by privilege, knowe, I trust (with Gods helpe) they may be obtained; which being had, will bee beneficiall to the Company, and great quietnesse to those that shall remaine here, although heretofore things haue chaunged ill, as the like in other Countreies hath bene. But I doubt not, this privilege once gotten and obtained, wee shall liue in quietnesse and rest, and shall shortly growe into a great trade for silkes both rawe and wrought, with all kinde of spices and drugs, and other commodities here, as to master Antonie Jenkinson is well knowne; Who (I doubt not) hath long agoe thoughtly aduertised the Company thereof.

The unthring of Thomas Rocks.

The truth of the slaughter of Thomas Alocks your seruant is not certainly knowne. Some thinke it was by the meane of a noble man, with whom your saide seruant was earnest in demanding of your debts; upon whose wordes he was so offended, that he procured his death. But other doe thinke verily, that in riding from the Court without companie, fallie knowne laye in wait, thinking hee had much about him, and so slawe him. I doubt not though this misfortune hath chaunced, that things shall come well to passe, and that we shall be better beloued when wee shall become knowne.

And the noble man that favoured our nation.

Honest Merchants are glad of our being here, and seeke to growe in acquaintance with vs being glad to further vs in that they may, as haue spoken in our fauours to the chiefest of this Countrey: one being a noble man, with whom your Agent and I are entred into friendship, who is at this time in great fauour with the Shaugh. Hee hath here and in other places of these parts, let a good stay in things since the kings death: he is well knowne to M. Jenkinson, his name is Cozaimoone. Also another Duke named Ameddin-becke is our great friende; and his silder is the Shaughes wife. These two haue promised your Agent by their lawe, not onely to procure to get the Shaughes privilege, but also that I shall haue the debts payde mee of those that went from hence to Casbin, if we would send one with them. In consideration whereof, I was upon your warning (for want of a better) appointed by your Agent M. Richard Iohnson, all excuses laye apart, presently to put my selfe in readinesse, and to depart in company with these noblemen: with charge, when God should send me to Casbin, to vse my discretion with their advise, for the recovering of your debts and privilege. I shall haue with mee one interpreter and two bought seruants: one of which partly vnderstandeth this tongue, and may be put in trust whatsoever should become of me. I haue receiued 6 tumens in ready money: 200. Shaughes is a tumen, reckoning euery Shaugh for 6 pence Russe. I haue further receiued two timbers of sables, one to be solde, the other to bee giuen to Thomas the Shaugh; and haue order further to giue as I shall see good to those that shall further my suite, and as occasion serueth. And for as much as I am commaunded to goe, I shall willingly doe my best, putting my trust in God that hee will sende mee well to speede in this iourney.

A noble man that favoured our nation.

The value of a tumen.

For all kinde of wares bought or solde, you shall thoughtly be aduertised by your Agent Richard Iohnson, whose reckonings or accompts at no hande I might see or be priuite unto. Your earlets were good and well solden, they are and will be solde from 150. Shaughs to 160. the piece. Two hundredeth pieces were solde vnder, that needed not: one 100. pieces at 146. and 147. the piece: but more would haue bene giuen, if circumspection had bene vsed. They were solde to those noblemen aforesaid, when as yet it was not knowne that I should haue gone with them. They may stande vs much in steade, as they haue promised vs their good wils in that they may doe. Here is at this time bought for England, 11. packes of rawe silke, 27. and 26. batmans being in euery packe: The batman being 7 li. which may be 6. li. and a halfe of English waight: being bought here for 66. to 70. Shaughes the batman. It is fine and good: like course at this time was to be had. And where course silke might be had being at Grousin, we could not send thither: for that time was neglected at the first. When wee shall haue iudgers here to remaine in Sommer, we may bye it at the first hand of the Countrey people that bring it to sell hither, and to other places. I would to God the company coulde finde the meanes to haue a vent to make sales for the one halfe that wee may bye here. The Company may haue for 30. or 40. thousande pounds yearly. And as appeareth by your Agents wordes being at Varas, hee and others saue thereto great abundance, that by report of diuers, you may bestowe (if it were not for the Turkes) for a two hundred thousande pounds: besides silke of all colours dyed in graine, bounde by in pound waights, I thinke 15. of our ounces to their pound waight, and here solde for 23. Shaughes, at 6d. the Shaugh may be 11. s. 6. pence.

What a batman is.

What a great man is for silke.

What 7 dayes fasting from silke is.

From Afracan in 7. or 8. dayes, wee may saile with our barke to a place named Gilan: the which place in time to come, (I thinke) shall serue our purpose best to goe unto. Allam is there good care, and could not have their one, I trust (with Gods blesse) the companies, and great quire have chaunged all, as the like once gotten and obtained, we at trade for silkes both rube and ies here, as to maister Antonie thoroughly advertised the Com is not certainly knowne. Some saide servant was earne in de that he procured his deach. But companye, false knowars laye in dubt not though this misfortune all be better beloved when we we in acquaintance with us ours to the chiefest of this Com entered into friendship, who is at other places of these parts. At a Lenkinson, his name is Cozaent fricude; And his siller is the awe, not onely to procure to gre side mee of those that went from tion whereof, I was upon sory ward Iohnson, all excuse laye any with these noblemen: with with their abuse, for the recou-interpetour and two bought serve put in trust whatsoeuer shoul shaughes is a turren reckoning ers of tables, one to be solde, he get to give as I shall see good to for as much as I am command that hee will sende mee well to we advertised by your Agent Righte see of be pynnt unto. Your 150. shaughes to 160. the pierce, 20. pierces at 146, and 147. the bene vied. They were solde to shoud have gone with them.

their good wils in that they may be silke, 25, and 26. batmans be
, and a halfe of English waighe and good: little course at this time dusin, we could not send thither: dgers here to remaine in shom bying it to sel hither, and to other to haue a deuit to make sales for for 30. or 40. thousande pounds was, hee and others sawe there it were not for the Turkes) for in graine, bounde by in pound re solde for 23. shaughes, at 6d.

strike to a place named Gilan: the best to goe into. Allam is there good good cheape, being brought from thence hither to Shamakie, and solde here for 2. bills cheere bat-mans, which may be 5. pence in our money and so I have bought to be sent home 223. batmans for example. And at Gilan there is rube silke enough for the companies stocke. I beleue, if any great store of wares be sent from you, that must be the place: and fro thence a man may traualle in 4. dayes to Casbin, and there make quicke and better sales, at which place your commodities are to be solde. For there be the chiefe and best marchants, and diuers other cities round about, to wit, Teueris, Ardaoule, and Cayshan, being the heart of the Countrey, where there is moze ciuillitie and marchants are better vied. Concerning this point I haue inquired of diuers marchants both Russes and others that haue bene in those partes, and found them all agreeing in one tale, and pertaine the same to be true, and that all kinde of wares come from thence into these parts. And from Casbin to Ormus is about 30. dayes traualing with camels. I haue writen the prices of wares in my letter to the gouernour both for spices and some drugs, which I doe know.

From 4. dayes journey from Casbin.

From Casbin
to Ormus a man may tra-uall with camels.

All you shall vnderstand here is plenty of yew for bowstaues. I caused three horse loades to be bought vs for to knowe the truely: but they were cut out of season this month of Aprill the sappe being in them. Three monthes I neuer left speaking to the Countrey men to bring some,
Your Agent will send some home for example.

This day being the 26. of Aprill I departed towards Casbin: God giue mee a good houre and well to speede, with a merrie heart in returning againe, as my hope is I shall. I haue writen my minde to M. Glouer your Agent what Russian wares I thinke best to be bought for this Coun-treys: and to sende some one thither that hath the Russe tongue: for we haue neede. And the company shall doe well hereafter in taking of seruants to be sent hither, to see that they be such as haue discretion and be something broken in the world, and scene in the trade of Marchantise: and one, (if they can get some such) as can speake the Portugall tongue, may doe them as good service, as those that shall be here two yeeres before him: for then wee may bye a slaue that can speake this language and the Portugall tongue also, which shall then interprete vnto vs in all your secret doings, not making the Russes wile: for they are soie that we doe trade into these parts. For wee are better beloved then they are: because they are giuen to be drunkards they are much hated of these people. It is to be wished that none should serue your worships in these parts that be giuen to that kinde of vice: And that your chiefe Agent and Factor should be able to rule and gouerne himselfe, that no dishonestie should be imputed to him and vs. By his euill vsage hee payd here 24. nobles, being in this Countrey 4. turrens for a boy that hee was charged to haue conuayde away from a Teficke one of this countrey men, who willed him to sweare that he knew not where the boy was become, and he should not pay it. If he were honest he might doe your worships good seruice because of his Russian tongue.

The secret beings of the Spicuous
companye.

Your London rees are not to be sent hither: for they will not giue about 18. shaughes their ardour. Here be rees of moze orient colour being Venice die. The people are giuen much to weare cloth: the common people specially were carsets: and the Marchants of moze wealth weare broad cloth. You shall doe well to sende sixe or seue broad clothes, some blackes, pukes, or other sawde colours, that may be affawded at 20. shaughes the alshine and not aboute. It is here reported that King Philip hath giuen the Turkes a great ouerthrowe at Malta, and taken 70. or 80. of his chiefe Captaintes.

Orient rees of Venice die.

This writing I had more time to write, I pray you to beare with this my scribled letter, and after you haue red it that M. Nicols may haue a sight thereof.

By your seruant to command, Arthur Edwards.

Commodities to be caried out of England into Persia, with their prices there.

1.  Arsets are solde there for 180. shaughes. So that a carley is solde there in Persia for 4. li. 10. s. For every shaugh is 6. d. English. And every bill is 2. d. halfe pence English, and in Russe money 3. d.
2.  Caine is solde in Persia for 14. and 18. shaughes the batman. The batman containg as I haue mentioned before.
3.  Biall is at 10. and 12. shaughes the batman.
4.  Redde cloth fine at 25. and 30. shaughes the yard.
5.  Copper at 20. and 25. shaughes the batman.

as though is 6. d. English.

Commodities to be brought out of Persia for England.

1. Rue like at 60. hauges the batman.
2. Peper at 32. hauges the batman.
3. Singer at 18. and 20. hauges the batman.
4. Kinnegs at 30. hauges the batman.
5. Dymstone at 4. hauges the great batman. The great batman is 12. li. Englis.
6. Allam at 2. bitts and a halfe the batman, and lesse.
7. Rice at halfe a bitt the batman.
8. Galles at halfe a bitt the batman.
9. Cloues at 40. hauges the batman.
10. Pew for botwe staves, at

A letter of M. Arthur Edwards, written the 8. of August 1566. from the towne of Shamakie in Media, to the right worshipfull the Gouernours, Consuls, assistants, and generalitie of the companie of Russia, &c. Shewing his accessse vnto the Emperour of Persia, his conference with him, his obtaining of a priuiledge: with diuers other good obseruations.

R

ight worshipfull (sirs) my bounden duetie remembered, with most humble commendations and like request to God for the preservation of your good healthes with the rest of the companie, &c. It may please you to understand, that the last letter which I sent you from hence was of the 26. of Aprill of this present yere by Richard Iohnson at my departure towards Casbin: to which Citie I came the 25. of May following, not lacking any day, houre, nor moment, to procure and make friends for the speedie bringing me before the presence of the Shaugh, being the 29. day of the same moneth brought before him, with whose Paeticke I was in talke (as I thinke) two houres. He willed me to come neerer him, demanding what were my requests: and having heard them, he promised me his gracious letters. Afterwards he called me twice againe to come neerer him, and talked with me of our Queenes Paeticke and Countrey, and what commodities we had, and what other commodities we desired: And then of other Countreies adioyning to vs and their commodities, as also of K. Philip, what overthrow he gaue the Turkes at the siege of Malca, And how long we had traded into Russeland and Moscowa, and in what space wee might saile out of England into Russeland, & how many weekes traualle it is from Colmogro to Astraccan: And then came to discourse of Russeland, and what townes the Emperour had worne, declaring vnto me himselfe most of our commodities. In the end he willed that your worshipps should send him, of all sorts of clothes, but of one especially, which mayden's doe make (as he said) He named it Karengi, I thinke it is Westerne dolens dyed into scarlets. Time will not permit mee to write at large the conference which I had with his Paeticke. It was strange to his people (knowing our religion) to see me so long in talke with him, willing his Secretarie before mee to write what he was desirous of: to wit of London clothes, thert of foure of all sorts for example being wel hozne and best. Clolets in graine and fine rebs be most woyme: but other good colours will away, when they shall see them. I wore a garment of London russet, being much esteemed. You shall doe well to send such sorts as be liuely to the sight, and some blackes for womens garments, with some Orange colours and tawneys. Here is much broad cloth woyme. They talke much of London clothes: and they that knowe the wearing are desirous of them before the cloth of the womens making: for they finde it nothing durable. For when it commeth to weare on the threde, it renteth like paper. Here is much Venice cloth woyme, being crumpled a yard and a halfe broad, and so lde here from 24. to 30. hauges their arshine, being longer by two inches then the Russe arshine is. I wish also that you send some good chamlets & veluets dyed in graine, with purple colours & fine rebs: because these are most woyme. Also some blackes with other colours: some cloth of gold, silke & bocky, some veluets wrought with gold, with tattens and damaskes, most purple, and rebs of all sorts. You may not forget to send some Westerne carlets, to wit, dolens, which be chicked well, and close thute in the weauing, being dyed into fine rebs, and some scarlets: for I thinke

His arrival at Casbin the 25.
of May.

Conference
and demands of the Shaugh.

All sorts of cloths to be sent especially West-
erne dolens dyed into scarlet.

London clothes much talked of in Persia.

Such Venice cloth woyme in Persia.

of Persia

batman is 12. li. English.

8. of August 1566.

the worshipfull the
the companie of erour of Per-of a pri-

mbred, with most humble con-viation of your good heathes you to understand, that the last of Appill of this yere past Casbin: to which Title I came houre, nor moment, to present of the Shaugh, being the 29. day was in talke (as I thinke) two that were my requests: and he es he called me thise againe to o Countrey, and what commoother Countreys adjoining to raue the Turkes at the siege of
, and in what space wee might it is from Colmogro to Altra-Empireour had woman, decla-illed that your worshipps should es doe make (as he said): He Time will not permit mee to s strange to his people (know-Secretarie before mee to write all soyes for example being wel but other good colours will et, heing much esteemed. But lacks for womens garments, h woman. They talke much of them before the cloth of the wometh to weare on the theede, it plished, a part and a halfe bodie, by two intches then the Russe died in graine, with purple co-with other colours: some cloth ns and damaskes, most purple, rsets, to wit, dozens, which bee reds, and some skarlets: for I
thinke

thinke there is no such cloth for their cappes.

Your Worshipps shall understand, that after my first departure from the presence of the Prince, I neglected no time in daily attendance on them, who had my privilege in writing, that I might have it in readiness, at such time as I should againe be called before the presence of the Shaugh, which was the 29. of June last. I was in apparell that he gave unto me, with other garments to mine Interpreter, and one of your seruants. And then I receaued your letters, of privilege, according to my desire, sealed and armed with the Shaughes owne hand. Praised be God, who hath brought with me, and for me, in all my doings.

The 29. of June, is one of their chiefe festiual daies, so that all his Nobilitie was there present, with two Ambassadors in companie with his Patricie, who said unto me, that if my letters were not to my misde, in time to come they should be mended. Whereupon I made my reuerence, and gave his Highnes most humble & hartie thanks, saying, that with as much speede as might be, our Queenes Patricie should understand of his goodnes towards her Merchants, which I thought would write their letters of request unto his Highnes, in such forme & order, as by them should be thought meete and requisite for their good assurance, in the trade of marchandizes: who required with these wordes: when we shall see their reasonable requests, we will shewe them our farther good will, and so I departed.

Since the receauing of the Shaughes letters, I haue eaten in companie of good Dukes, and others, who before would not come neere me. And euery day some would come to my shoppe, and eate and drinke with me, out of mine owne dish. Likewise in rising from Casbin hither, on the way when I late downe to dinner, they would come and eate with me vnbidden, when I wished them further off: for I spared them that, which gladly I would haue eaten my selfe. I doubt not but we shall liue here from henceforth in quietnes: for now in all places where I come, I am friendly vsed with the best.

I was asked by the Shaugh, if you were able to bring him yeerely one hundred thousand peeces of herles, and clothes. And I answered him, saying, your Worshipps were able to furnish his countrey with two hundred thousand. Whereat his Highnes reioyced: for the Turkes Ambassadors the last yere, as diuersly haue tolde mee, did put the Shaugh in despair, saying, that the Turke would not permit any cloth to be brought into his Countrey.

There is a Title in Turkie, named Aleppo, wherein continually are many Venetians dwelling, besides other that come yeerely, & there buy woolls, gals, sallow, sadron, skimes, cotton woodd, and other wares, and great store of spices. Also the Armenians yeerely receaue at the Venetians hams, herles in barrell for rawe herles, giuing sometimes 60. peeces of herles for 70. batmans of like of this Countrey, and 40. peeces for Grouse like. And herles tolde commonly for ready monie in Aleppo, at 11. and 12. buckets the pece, (the bucket being here woorth 12. shillings) may cost the first penny 132. and 144. Shaughes a herle. By report it is one months trauell from this towne of Shamaky to Aleppo, and from thence to Tripolis. The daies journey, and from Tripolis to Venice, by water, a monethes of five weekes sailing. As I learne, from hence to Venice, may easily be trauelled in lesse then three monethes. Therefore I with your Worshipps to procure some trustie and assured friend there, to whome from hence letters may be sent. For I can haue them here to put in suites to deliuer my letters, and to bring answere. If I had any other here with mee, I would nothing haue doubted to haue brought you the Shaughes letters that way.

The Armenians and other, are desirous to barter with vs, giuing like for herles, and also will serue vs of all kinde of spices, we giuing them sufficient warning to fetch it in the Indias, and will deliuer it vs in Shamaky, at these prices.

Pepper this to tones batman for 18, Shaughes: euery Shaugh is sixe pence.

Spices large for 40, Shaughes, and 45. the batman.

Cloues for 40, Shaughes the batman.

Nutmegs for 16, and 18, Shaughes the batman.

Stomomon for 40, Shaughes the batman.

I doubt not but there will be profite and good done in spices, with byrgges, and other like, in time.

From Casbin to Ormus, is sixe weekes trauell, and from hence to Casbin is 16. daies with camels laden: but if one trauell with a good Oxle vnladen, it may be gone in tenen or eight daies. And I thinke to Ormus, and other places, may be trauelled in like order and proportion, with camels vnladen. But here in all places as men trauell, they must carry their owne provision on horses, which they are to buy: and thus they trauell but a footepath.

The

The ground admission to the Shaughes presence, the 29. of June, 1566, at which time he recea-ued the prin-
tidge.
The Shaughes
promise to me to create the prin-
tidge.

Aleppo a City of great trade.

Armenians
barter with the Venetians

The distance from Shamaky to Aleppo.

Armenians &
other, desirous to barter like and spices for herles.

The Shaugh
desirous to bargaine for our commodities.

The Shaugh himselfe is desirous to bargain with you, who will give monie, silke, and other wares as we will, and take our wares as we may afford them, willing me himselfe to bring such wares as we might gaine by him. The Armenians by report, and as I perceave, bring from Aleppo yearly four, five, and six thousand peeces of kertes and clothes, besides those which other men bringe. If your Majesties might procure and sende vent of sales for rawe silke, and silke woe in graine, besides other silkes wrought and made here, by which profit may be made, then you might sende a great substance of wares hither. But I feare you shall be hindered by the Venetians, if they may: for I knowe it will grieue them, that you doe trade into these partes: for in those time it shall cleave alter their trade, and hinder the sales of their clothes in Aleppo, and other places adjoining. You shall understand that 60. batmans of silke is a Pules lading: and as it is reported, one billage of the Armenians, yearly carrieth 400. and 500. Pules lading of silke to Aleppo, and bringeth thence 800. of a thousand Pules laden with kertes, and Venice clothes, And 18. peeces of kertes, are a Pules lading. But I wish you not to sende about 2000. peeces of kertes, although I have bene willed to write for more. If I might have had any understanding what your Majesties had written for in your letters sent this yere, I should in this my letter have bene better able to have answered you. They which be now in Astracan, might have written some thing unto me hither, if it had pleased them, or else have sent me such letters of mine, as I hope some of my friends have written to me: for here are arrived 8. weekes past, two boates with wares, and Russes, by whome they might have written, had it bene but 3. or 4. lines. They promised the Russes to write, but promise was not kept. I would be soye that any boate should depart out of these parts, and not write unto them, saying how all things stande. I heare they have bought a boate, which cost 40. robbles, and shipped certaine wares to come hither. God send them in safetie. I doe say their coming, or els I had thought to have come to Astracan in those boates which departed hence lately.

2000. peeces of kertes to be sent into Azer-ba.

We departed
from Casbin
the 15. of July.

The fifteenth of July last, I departed from Casbin, and came to this Towne the 29. of the same. And the fourth of August, I founde meanes to arrest the fastest knave in this Countrey, to wit, the Customers, for 22. tumens, and 100. shaughes, (200. shaughes is a tumen.) I have caused him to put in sureties for his sooth coming at all times: what end I shall have with him God knoweth: the debt will be recovered, but not yet: for he must pay the Shaugh 1000. robbles. These partes as yet are in no stay, for lacke of a Governour of head or rule, which I thinke shall be the Murley. Within 5. or 6. daies, we shal know, for it is time, because men are in feare to travell for being robbed. If there were a prince placed, I should soone get in your debts, for they dare not disobey the Shaughes letters, or priviledge: wherein he hath not onely written that our debts shal be paid, but also that we shall be taken hereto, so as we need not to doubt, God willing, in time to come, to be here as well bled as we are in Russeland. The bills of debts that Richard Johnson left with me, had neither the parties name, nor summe of money in two of them, and in other bills, but his owne name. If I had used discretion, in causing to be written in our priviledge, that such debts as are owing, should be paid any of vs in the absence of the other, some men would not have paid one penny, but onely to Richard Johnson, who hath written but his owne name onely in the bills. I receaved in Casbin of Forackan, in part of 29. tumens, 300. shaughes in money: the rest he will deliuer me here in silke, and this is all that I have receaved to this day. And as for Hawrambecks twelve tumens, I make accompt, that if I could ride to speake with him, I should be paid in money and wares. Touching Ackones money, by meanes of Duke Amedenbecke, who first owed the debt, because they meant not to pay a penny, he did rather seeke to hinder my suite, then to farther mee: but I founde out a present remedie: for God sent me friends that were always about the Shaugh, and daily put on his appaerell, who opened all my sute, and brought me to the presence of the Shaugh, before that Cosomomet sawe the Shaughes eyes. But Cosomomet in the ende was my friende: for he was sent for, and declared unto the Shaugh, what good Merchants we were, being true in all our doings, and howe we were in great favour with the Emperour of Russia, and what good commodities we might bring into his Countrey, with other talke. And daily he was sent for to the Shaugh, about the affaires in those partes: for no man was able to advise the Shaugh of the state and affaires of those Countreies, so much as he was. He owed your Majesties seven tumens, and 48. shaughes, which was not all this time to be gotten at his hands: for he was at great charges in riding to Casbin, and giving great gifts since his coming, which he twice declared unto mee. I feeling his grieffe, became compassion, to ease his paine, and forgave him his debt above saide, in recompence of tenne peeces of kertes, that were promised him by Richard Johnson, and mee, to give him at the coming of our goods, in consideration that he shoulde with speede doe what laye in him, to dispatche mee home.

Richard Johnson was great negligent.

Cosomomet was Arthur Edwards friend to the Shaugh.

will giue monie, silke, and other killing me him selfe to bring such as I perceiue, bring from Aloches, besides those which other for rawe silke, and silke woe pposite may be made, then you shall be hindered by the Veneinto these partes: for in those loches in Aleppo, and other pla-& Pules lading: and as it is reand 500. Pules lading of silke with kertes, and Venice clothes, not to sende about 2000. peeces might haue had any vnderstan-yere, I should in this my let-to in Afracan, might haue writ-sent me such letters of mine, as ued 8. weekes past, two boates it bene but 3. or 4. lines. They be soze that any boate should be things stande, I heare they haue to come hithe, God send them to Afracan in those boates re to this Towne the 29. of the the fastest knaue in this Coun-

 o. (haughes is a tunen.) I haue what end I shall haue with him pay the Shaugh 1000. roubles, to rule, which I thinke shall be cause men are in feare to trauell in your debtes, for they dare not onely writzen that our debtes shal to doubt, God willing, in time to debtes that Richard Iohnson left wo of them, and in other bills, but tten in our priuiledge, that such other, some men would not haue but his owne name onely in the
 o. haughes in money: the rest to this day. And as for Hawto speake with him, I should be of Duke Amenedebecke, who rather seeke to hinder my sute, and sent me friends that were al-ended all my sute, and brought me Shaughes eyes. But Colomo-into the Shaugh, what good ee were in great fauour with the into his Countrey, with other in those partes: for no man was ies, so much as he was. He owed e all this time to be gotten at his aining great quites since his com-
 , became Prisoner, to ease his of some peeces of kertes, that in at the comming of our goods, in him, to dispatche mee
 may:

for I perceiued he procured other that did helpe me in my sute, to delay me of all time he had his purpose. I neuer was in quiet, till I had the Princes priuiledge, & had got me out of Casbin: for victuals, and all other things are very deere there, because they are brought thither from far off.
 As for all other small debtes (which may be about 7. tunens) when our Marchantes are come hithe, ther, we shal seeke to get them in as we may. I wish your Worships to send some bollion to be coined here, it will please the princ there, & be profitable to you. Silke is better cheape by 2. and 3. haughes the batman, then it was the last yere. You shal vnderstand that I haue writzen 2. letters of all my proceedings; which I sent from Casbin long since, to wit, the 24. and 29. of June last, by one of your seruants to Gilan, there to take ship and to goe to Afracan, and to deliuer the same vnto your factors, which might haue bene to their quietnes and mine long ago. But I am right so-rie to heare since my comming thither, that he hath plaied the loitering marchant in Gilan, not coming in those boates that went first, but caried for the last boates. But I will reach him, to the example of other, how he shal make haste hereafter in such affaires. The kertes which you sent last, being bought of Spatter Quarles, were good and full lengths, and well sorted: The Princes Am-ballador of Gilan was in Casbin, at my being there. I hope in God, if I remaine here, and may go to Gilan to obtaine for your Worships the like priuiledge at the kings hand there also. For I haue something moued the matter, being put in such comfort, that I doubt not the getting thereof with small charges: which I had done at this time, if I had had other here with me to put in trust: for from Casbin to Gilan, is but 5. daies riding, which Countrey may be profitable to your Worships. There is in that Prouince, good hope of silke, better cheape, and better in goodnes, then this Countrey silke is. A litle great toze of Alam, being there sold this to wnes batman, for one bit and a halfe, I haue made reckoning, al charges bozne from hence to Colmogro, & from thence straight into England, at theee poundes the tunne, all charges accompted, will not stand you in aboute 18. and 20. shillings the hundreth. You may haue yereley by reposit, two or three hundreth tunnes la-ding. Other commodities there for England, I heare not of, as for gals here to be bought, there is no profit to be done by them. They be brought from Aleppo, & sold here not vnder 3. or 4. haughes their batman, being fixe poundes English weight. Graine that you dye scarlet withall, is worth the batman ready money, 200. haughes, reckoning the Shaugh for 6. pence Russe, it may be 6. roubles their batman. Your Worships may send some portion of money, if you may buy, as I thinke you may, for 12. and 13. shillings a pound the herrits, so you shall gaine both in the price, and waight.
 If one Englishman more had bene here with me, to whome I might haue deliuered our bills of debtes and other things, whatsoeuer should haue chanced of me, I would then haue become seruant to mine Interpreter, and so haue gone to Ormus, and Aleppo, which both toyne in the borders of this Countrey, being the chiefe Spatter Townes, wherunto from all places Marchants resort.
 And this would I haue spent 4. or 5. moneths in trauellling for farther knowledge of things, for to haue certified your Worships of. I hope in God to vse things in such order, that yereley you shall haue returne of your goods from hence, as you haue footch of Russe land, and in those shippes. For if we may, as I doubt not with diligence, provide to make sales in time, and with speede receaue silke at the Shaughes hand, and other mens, that it may be sent from hence to be in Afracan at the beginning of April, from whence it may be sent to Colmogro in three moneths and lesse, & there to be ready with the rest of your goods, by the ende of June, for your shippes to receaue, that will be time enough. This I doubt not to bring to passe within a yere or two, when we are thoroughly settled in these partes, and better known. Howeauer, you shall vnderstand, that at my last being in the presence of the Shaugh, it was saide to me, that Spatter Anthonie Ienkinson did proffer to take all the rawe silke in those parties, deliueting cloth, and other commodities for the same. I assure you, there is in those partes to be had three or foure thousand hoyses lading, euery hoise loade being 50. or 60. batmans, besides silke of Grosse. Great aboundance of silke at times is sent out of these partes, to wit, 4. or 5. hundreth hoise loades at a time, by the Turkes, who bring great toze of silke to be copied, to wit, Dollars at ten haughes the peere. The Hungarie Duckert is at 12. haughes.
 And hauing monie in readines at the time of the peere, they buy silke the better cheape, when the Countrey men bring it first to be sold. If your Worships may bargain with the Venecians, to take silke at your hands, or other wise deale with them, I do not mistrust but to haue at Shaughes hand, fixe batmans of silke for two peeces and a halfe of kertes. Your good aduise herein, and in other matters, I trust you will write with convenient speede. Spatter Anthonie Ienkinson hath de-serued great commendation at all your Worships hands: for the good report of his well and wise dealing in those partes, was oftentimes a comfort to me to heare thereof, and some good helpe to me in my proceedings. To this day I neuer heard from any of our Marchants, God grant main health to see your Worships: for I haue had a carefull trauell, with many a sorrowfull day, and vniquiet

Victruals and all things deere at Casbin.

The Ambassa- dor of the prince of Gilan Gilan but due daies riding from Casbin.

Cals.

Graine.

Ormus. Aleppo.

Spatter Anthonie Ienkinson offer to the Venecian.

Spatter Anthonie Ienkinson com- mended.

quieter sleepes. Neither had I the companie of one English person, to whom sometimes I might have eased my penitenc heart, as God well knoweth, who hath deliuered me from mine enemies. Thus almightie God grant you in health and wealth, long to liue.

Your humble seruant at commandement during life, Arthur Edwards.

Another letter of Arthur Edwards, written in Astracan, the 16. of Iune, 1567. at his returne in his first voyage out of Persia, to the right Worshipfull companie, trading into Russia, Persia, and other the North and Northeast partes.

The same
letters to the Discoverie
company.

It may please your Wysships, that herein I haue wrytten not onely certayne articles of your priuiledge, but also the Governours names, with the Consuls, Ambassadors, and generallicke: Also such commodities as the Prince or Emperour of the Countrey hath wrytten in one of his letters, directed to your Wysships, to be sent him, with other notes, which I thought good to be remembred, as may appeare hereafter following. Your priuiledge is wrytten, granted, and giuen in the names of the syre persons following, to wit, Sir William Garrard, Sir William Chester, gouernour, Sir Thomas Lodge, Master Anthony Jenkinson, Master Thomas Nichols, and Arthur Edwards.

1. First it is granted, that you shall pay no manner of customes, or colles, any kind of wares, now, nor in time comming, unto his heires after him. And that all English Marchants, such as you shall appoint, now, and hereafter, shall and may passe and repasse into all places of his dominions, and other Countreies adioyning, in the trade of marchandize, to buy and sell all manner of commodities, with all maner of persons.

2. Item that in all places where any of our Marchants shall haue their resort, or abiding, his chiefe Governours, Rulers, and Iustices shall take heede vnto vs, being our aide and defence against all euill persons, punishing those that shall doe vs any wrong.

3. Item that for all such debts as shall be owing by any manner of person, iustice shall be done on the partie, and we paid at the day.

4. Item that no manner of person, of whatsoeuer estate or degree they be of, shall be so hardie as to take any kind of wares, or any goods, without any leaue and good will.

5. Item if by chance medley any of our Marchants or seruants, as God forbid, should kill any of his subiects, that no part of your goods shall be touched or medled withall, neither any partie be the offendour, and true iustice to be ministered, and being any of vs, not to suffer without the Princes knowledge, and aduise.

6. Item that all such debts as are now owing, or hereafter shall be, are to be payde vnto any of vs, in the absence of the other, be the partie dead, or alive.

7. Item that no person returne any kinde of wares backe againe, being once bought or sold.

8. Item that when God shall send your goods to shoare, presently his people shall helpe vs a land with them.

These articles before wrytten, I trust in God, will content your mindes, vntill your farther letters be hitherto wrytten vnto the Prince: who I am assured will grant your farther reasonable requests, which his Maiestie hath promised. For I moued the question, declaring vnto him, that I thought your Wysships would write your letters of requests, to craue his farther good will, as should be thought meete for your better assurance in the trade of marchandize: you will hardly be leaue what long and gracious talke he had with me, which I assure you continued two hours, which was strange vnto the people, and other Marchant strangers. For betwixt euery question that his Maiestie moued, when I had answered him, he would talke with his Nobles, and other his seruants, hauing some knowledge of our Westerne partes and commodities, and then againe would demand other questions. He caused his Secretarie to write the articles before named, in all of his foure letters giuen me (whereof two as I required, are in the Turkish tongue to be sent you.) On the backe side of one, he hath wrytten what wares his Maiestie would haue you to sende him. He held me one houre within night, before I departed from him.

These be the names of the wares or commodities which on the backe

to whom sometimes I might liued me from mine enemies.

ndement during life,

en in Astracan, the oyage out of Persia, ussia, Persia, and o-

have written not onely certaine ours names, with the Countes odities as the Prince of Empeletters, directed to your Mathoughe good to be rememberd, uiledge is written, granted, and iam Garrard, sir William Che-pater Thomas Nichols, and es, or colles, any kind of waies, ll English Parchants, such as asse into all places of his domiite, to buy and sell all manner of have their resort, or abiding, his s, being our aide and defende ng.

anner of person, iustice shall be ree they be of, shall be so harie good will,

nts, as God forbid, should kill edied withall, neither any partie of vs, nor to suffer without the shall be, are to be y-ide into any again, being once bought or scemly his people shall helpe vs reundes, butill your farther let-grant your farther reasonable sion, declaring unto him, that I raue his farther good will, as arcanidize: you will hardly be re you continued two houres, ke with his Nobles, and other

o commodities, and then againe the article's before named, in al the Turkish tongue to be put in.

odities which on the

backe

backside of one of his letters, the Shaugh hath written to you to be sent him.

First some clothe of golde, with cloth of tpslue, and cloth of bocky, as Beluets wrought with golde.

Item good beluets, to wit, cremosins, purples, reds, greens, and blackes. These colours his partic requirer: for they are most woyme. And though there be some of these waers made in his Cite of Callhan, yet nothing like in goodnes, to those that you may procure for him. Small profit I thinke will be in these waers: yet for diuers considerations, as also to satisfie the Princes minde, I wish you to send some, and those that be especiall good.

Item good damasks and satins, of all forces, with an hundred peeces of good chamlets, which are worth here 80. Shaughes the pece, at five pence the Shaugh, and those likes to be of those colours aboute written, to wit, cremosins, purples, reds, greens, blackes, with some light waterbe colours.

Item three or foure complete barnells that will abide the shot of a handgumme, with tenne or twelue targets of Steele, being good.

Item ten or twelue good hirtes of male, being very good, or else none, that may abide the shot of an arrowe, and two buffe ierkins.

Item ten or twelue peeces of Wiltene kerries, being thickers well and close knit in the wea-uing, and dyed into scarlets, and fine reds. I thinke there will be no such cloth for Noblemens capes.
The Prince named them "karangies, saying, that maidens did make them, and is desirous of them.

By the way Marangies, I
thinke they meane kerries.

Item five peeces of fine Holland cloth for the Prince, with some other for Noblemen, of a lower price.

Item twentie handgumms being good, some of them with fire lockes, and also five good bags, with lockes to trauell withall.

Item 100. bylles for garments, (none made of swines haire,) for gaites, and other wise to be solde.

Item five stone bowes that shoote lead pellets.

Item a mill to grinde coyne in the field as they goe, finely deuised: for Cozomomet willed me to write for one to be sent, to giue the Prince.

Item the Prince requirerh of all forces and colours of London clothes, I wish you to sende no less then 40. or 50. for I knowe they will be solde to profite, especially such cloth as may be affayred for: 20. Shaughes the arshine, which is longer by two of mine ynches then Russia arshine is.
Let there be fine scarlets, violets in graine, fine reds, blackes, bytowne blewes, foure or five of eue-ry sort, for the Prince, and other Loydes: the rest of other colours lively to the sight, as London vulles, catonies, Lion colours, good lincly greens, with other, as you shall thinke good: for the Prince desirerh to see of all forces, which will be an occasion, that the Venetians and Turkes shall be in lesse estimation then they are: for they themselves doe feare, and secretly say the same. And truly the Princes subiects intend to enter into trade with vs for spices, and other commodities, that they were wont to sell unto the Venetians, and Turkes.

Thus I commite you all to God, who send you health, with increase of Wealth. Written in Astracan, the 16. of June, 1567.

By your seruante during life to command Arthur Edwards.

Distances of certaine places in Russia.

The way from S. Nicholas Bay to		berstes Mosko.
	berstes.
To Yerslaue		180
To Rostoue		60
To Pcraslaue		60
To Mosko		120 } 440
		By land East and West
To Colmogro	100
To Vsting	500
To Tokma	250
To Vologhda	250
All by the river of Dwina	} 1100

The way from Mosco to Smolensko.
To

To Moramis 300
 To Smolensko 200
 The way from Mosco to Nouogorode.

To Ottuer ist 180
 To Torzhoke 60
 To Wisnouolloko 60
 To Nouogorode 150

Southwest and Northeast } 450

The way from Nouogorode to Naruc.

To Teseua 50
 To the Friers 60
 To Yria Niagorod 40
 To Naruc 15

Southwest and Northeast } 165

From Nouogorod to Vobsky, is 180. verstes by East.

The way from Vobsky to Ric in Liefeland.

To Newe house 50
 To Gouen on the bayers } To Wenden } verstes
 To Trecado } All is 200.
 To Newflot }
 To Ric }

The way from Mosco to Astracan.

To Costrom To Nisnouogorod
 To Cazan

To Astracan in all is } verstes.
 2800

The way from Vologhda to Naruc.

To Belozercro 140
 To Batag 80
 To Witergen 40
 To Ladiskie 60
 To Onego lake 180
 To Oher 90
 To Naruc 180

Southwest Northeast } verstes 770

The way and distances from S. Nicholas, to the Caspian sea.

If you goe straight from S. Nicholas, to the Caspian sea, you must goe to Vologhda by water, as by the easiest passage, and that is accomplished passing day & night, in 14. daies, & 14. nights, in boates cut out of a tree: (the boates are called Struogs) 1100. verstes it is.

By horse and sleds in eight daies you may passe it in Winter. In Summer the way is dangerous, by meanes of marshes and bogs, and not safe by then to be pased. Then from Vologhda to Yerallaue, 180. verstes ouer land. This Yerallaue standeth vpon the riuer of Volga, 180. verstes I say distant from Vologhda.

To the Caspian sea are 2700. verstes from Yerallaue.

So from S. Nicholas to the Caspian sea, are } lii. 9. viii. C. lxxx. verstes.

The journey from S. Nicholas to Yerallaue is accomplished in foureteen daies by water, and two daies by land. } xvi. daies.

From thence to Astracan men trauell by water in 30. daies and 30. nights.

So betwene S. Nicholas and the Caspian sea, are } 46. daies journey.

To goe with a small boate within the land from S. Nicholas to Wardhouse.

To Newnox riuer.
 To Oufca Gouba
 To Lobhanga
 To Oust Nauclockie
 To Orlouanos
 To Solufca Monasterie.
 To Candeloxe
 To Oust Colla
 To Zhemaker
 To Poganna Voulackie To Chibe Naulocke
 To Kegor

To Wardhouse in all 800. verstes Northwest and Southeast.

The way from Colmogro to Mizemake Sloboda, where the Samoeds keepe their Marte.

To Vst Pinnago
 To Palango
 To Leunona
 To Vefcom
 To Soyaua
 To Coula
 To Nendega
 To Lampas
 To Sloboda } All is 230. verstes.

The way to Vromo from Mezemske Sloboda, where the Iosh hides are gouten.

To Lampas
 To Pogorel
 To Zapolle
 To Vromo } All is 115. verstes, Northwest and Southwest.

There pass of the river, in The sale li toward the C poote, viz. 40
 The Sam
 riuer the spar
 months, viz.
 The riuer
 The riuer
 The riuer Dvina from The Mene a Betwene
 length is fo
 The temp
 of the sale is
 Of this ben king of cab
 The Rusli
 And one cab can haue, wh Solnoua, a of the barke
 The Samo
 The wood of Role Island made: This The snow ground is ma Then after Island each fir

Certain
 Boghs

The first no of Bogar
 the

From Bogha
 from Casnar

By

From Astra
 from Tur common bur from Vrgen

boats within Nicholas
wife.

There passe downe Volga every Sommer, 500. boates great & small, from all the upper parts of the river, wherof some be of 500. tunne. They goe for minerall salt and for Scurgion.

The salt lieth in rocks (and is whitish red, and in fine sand) as it were 30. miles from Astracan toward the Caspian Sea. They dig it themselves and pay nothing for it, but to the prince a penny a pood, viz. 40. pound weight.

The Scurgion which they call Ocetera, is taken fiftie miles on this side Astracan. Along the river the space of 20. miles, they make their booties in plaine grounds, and fish for the space of threemonths, viz. from the end of May till the end of August, and having salt they use to salt them.

Fishing for Scurgion for 3. months.

The river there is 5. or 6. miles broad, but with some Islands.

The river below Yerasslaue where it is most narrow, is a mile broad from side to side.

The river runneth upon red clay, all woods of birch and oke on the river sides, save about the banks of the fishing places.

Dwina from St. Nicholas to Vsting, runneth all on chaffe and sand: the fish are sweet and fat. The Mene a fish with a great head a foote long, breedeth about Vologda, and is fat and delicate.

Betweene Vobska and Nouogrode, the space of 180. miles, groweth flax: the whole soile in length is so imployed, and as much in breadth: this is upon a flat soile.

The hempe groweth about Smolensko upon the Polish border, 300. miles in compass: much of the soile is so imployed.

Of this hempe, they bring in Winter to Vologda and Colmogro, and use it in making of cables about 100. men.

The Russians doe spinne and barrell it, and the English take it in threed and lay the cable. And one cable of thole is worth two of Danzicke, because the Danzickers put in old cable and rotten stuffe, which in fowle weather is found of no strength.

The English men in making of cables use 100. men in Russia. Solnoua tree, excellent for the cure of the soile.

Solnoua, a tree that cureth the twolfe with the shavings of the wood, groweth in these parts, and of the barkes they make ropes as big as a mans arme for their boates.

The Samoeds lacking linnen, make handkerchiefs and towels of the berry wood of this tree. The wood of this tree is as beaue as hollie, and the shavings tough.

Rose Island in St. Nicholas bay, is full of Roses damaske and red, of violets and wilde Rose-marte: This Island is nere 7. or 8. miles about, and good pasture, and hath the name of the roses.

The snow here about the middle of May is cleared, having bene two moneths in treading, then the ground is made drie within 14. dayes after, and then the grasse is knee high within a moneth. Then after September the frost cometh in, the snow is a yard deepe upon plaine ground. The Island hath fure and birch, and a faire fresh spring nere the house built there by the English.

gro to Mizeuske Samoeds keepe
it.

All is 230. berbes,

from Mezemske
the loth hides
ten.

All is 115. berbes, Horsehead and Southwest.

Caspian sea.

Vologhda by water, 4. daies, & 14. nightes, it is.
Nere the way is vantage Then from Vologhda riuer of Volga, 180.

tes.

tes.
ney.

Chr

Certaine notes gathered by Richard Iohnson (which was at Boghar with Maltre Anthony Ienkinson) of the reports of Russes and other strangers, of the wayes from Russia to Cathaya, and of diuers and straunge people.

The first note giuen by one named Sarnichoke a Tartarian subiect to the Prince of Bogarskie, which are also Tartars bordering vpon Kizilbashi or Persia, declaring the way from Astracan, being the furthest part of Russia, to Cathaya as followeth.

- From Astracan to Serachicke by land, traouelling at leisure as merchants use with horses, is 10. dayes iourney.
- From Serachicke to a towne named *Vrgenshe, 15. dayes.
- From Vrgenshe to Bogarskie, 15. dayes.
- From Bogarskie to Casnar, 30. dayes.
- From Casnar to Cathaya, 30. dayes iourney.

St. Petersburg.

By the same partie a note of another way more sure to trauell, as he reporteth.

- From Astracan to Turckemen by the Caspian sea, 10. dayes with barkes.
- From Turckemen by land specially with camels, bearing the weight of 15. poodes for their common burthens, is 10. dayes to Vrgenshe.
- From Vrgenshe to Bogarskie, 15. dayes.

St. P.

Note.

Note. At this citie of Boghar is the maner of meeting place betwene the Turkes and nations of those partes and the Cathaians.

Also the toll there is the 40. part to be paid for merchandizes or goods.

From thence to Cashar or Caskar is one moneths iourney, and from Cashar or Caskar (being the frontier of the great Cau. having many towne and fortes by the way) is also a moneths trauell for merchants by land to Cathay.

Further as he hath heard (not hauing bene in those partes himselfe) Ships may saile from the dominions of Cathaia into India. But of other waies, or how the Seas lie by any coast he knoweth not.

The instruction of another Tartarian Merchant dwelling in the citie of Boghar, as he hath learned by other his countrymen which haue bene there.

Of Serachocke. First from Astracan by sea to *Serachocke, is 15. dayes (affirming also that a man may trauele the other way before written by Turckment.)

From Serachocke to Vrgenshe is 15. dayes.

From Vrgenshe to Boghar also 15. dayes.

Note. These last 30. daies iourney is without habitation of houses, therefore travellers lodge in their owne tents, carrying with them to eat their severall provisions: and for drinke there be many wells of faire water at equal baiting places not farre distant daily to be had.

Of Taskent. From Boghar to *Taskent easie traueilling with goods, is 14. dayes by land.

From Taskent to Occient 7. dayes.

From Occient to Caskar 20. daies. This Caskar is the head towne or citie of another prince, lying betwene Boghar and Cathaia, called Reshican.

From Caskar to Sowchick, 30. daies iourney, whith Sowchick is the first border of Cathay.

From Sowchick to Camchick 5. dayes iourney, & from Camchick to Cathay is two moneths iourney, all the way being inhabited temperate and well replished with innumerable fruits, and the chiefe citie in that whole land is called *Cambuloo, which is yet 10. daies iourney from Cathay.

Of Cambalu.

Beyond this land of Cathay which they passe to be chiefe and vnspenakably rich, is the country named in the Tartarian tongue Cara-calmack inhabited with blacke people: but in Cathay the most part thereof stretching to the sunne rising, are people white and of faire complexion. Their religion also as the Tartares report, is christian, or after the maner of christians, and their language peculiar, differing from the Tartarian tongue.

There are no great and furious Beares in traueilling through the waies aforesaid, but indolent white and blacke. And because that woods are not of such quantitie there, as in these partes of Russia, but in maner rather skant then plentifull, as is reported, the Beares beed not that way, but some other beasts, (as namely one in Russe called Barle) are in those coasts. This Barle appereth by a skinne of one scene here to sell, to be neere so great as a big lion spotted very faire, and therefore we here take it to be a Leopard or Tiger.

Note, 20. dayes iourney from Cathay is a countrey named Angrim, where lieth the best that beareth the best muske, & the principall thereof is cut out of the knee of the moe. The people are tall, & for that the men are not bearded nor differ in complexion fro women. They haue certain tokens of iron, that is to say: the men weare the sunne round like a boile by their shoulders, and women on their private partes. Their feeding is rawe flesh in the same land, and in another called *Tiray, the Duke there is called Can, they worship the fire, and it is 34. daies iourney from great Cathay, and in the way lieth the beautifull people, eating with knives of gold, and are called Comorom, and the land of small people is neerer the Mosko then Cathay.

Of the people speaking
beroz.

Of the Mitar.

Of small people.

The instructions of one of Permia, who reporteth he had bene at Cathay the way before written, and also another way neere the sea coast, as followeth, which note was sent out of Russia from Giles Holmes.

Of Pechora but six dayes iour-ney by land of water fro Ob.

First from the prouince of Dwina is knowen the way to Pechora, and from Pechora traueilling with olens or barts, is six dayes iourney by land, and in the Sommer as much by water to the riuer of Ob.

The Ob is a riuer full of flats, the mouth of it is 70. Russe miles ouer. And from thence three dayes iourney on the right hand is a place called Chorno-lesle, to say in English, Blacke woods,

and

the Turkes and nations

Cashar or Caskar (being yp) is also a months tra hips may sail from the do is lie by any coast he know dwelling in the which haue bene there.

also that a man may traue therefoze traueillers lodge : and for winesse there be to be had.

by land.

of cite of another pines, the first border of Cathay.

to Cathay is two month with innumerable fruits, and betw 10. daies journey from richly rich, is the country people: but in Cathay the is faire complexion. Their militians, and their language waies aforesaid, but twines e, as in these partes of Rus res beed not that way, but waits. This Barle appereth noted very faire, and then m, where lieth the best of the mal. The people are women. They haue certaine sle by their shoulders, and land, and in another called s of gold, and are called Co-hay.

rteth he had bene
re the sea coast, as foes Holmes,

a, and from Pechora traue Sommer as much by water ouer. And from thence there in English, Blacke woods,

and

and from thence nere hand is a people called Pechey-cony, weating their haire by his descripti on after the Trish fashion.

From Pechey-cony to Ioult Calmachey 3. dayes journey, and from thence to Chorno Cal-lachay 3. dayes tending to the Southeast.

These two people are of the Tartarian faith, and tributaries to the great Can.

Here follow certaine countreys of the Samoeds which dwell yp on the river Ob, and vpon the sea coasts beyond the same, taken out of the Russe tongue word by word, and trauelled by a Russe borne in Colmogro, whose name was Pheother Towtigin, who, by report, was slaine in his second voyage in one of the fayd countreys.

Vpon the East part beyond the countrey of Vgori, the riuer Ob is the most Westermost part thereof. vpon the sea coast dwell Samoeds, and their countrey is called Molgomzey, whose meat is flesh of olens or bares, and fish, and doe eat one another sometimes among themselves. And if any merchantes come vnto them, then they kill one of their children for their lakes to feast them withall. And if a merchant chance to die with them, they burie him not, but eat him, and so doe they eat them of their owne countrey likewise. They be euill of sight, and haue small noses, but they be swift and shooe very well, and they trauaile on barts and on waggies, and their apparell is Sables and Partes skines. They haue no merchandise but sables only.

Travelling on barts or waggies.

2 Item, on the same coast or quarter beyond those people, and by the sea side also doeth dwell another kind of Samoeds in like maner, hauing another language. One month in the yeere they liue in the sea, and do not come or dwell on the drie land for that month.

3 Item beyond these people, on the sea coast, there is another kind of Samoeds, their meate is flesh and fish, and their merchandise are Sables, white and blacke Foxes (which the Russes call Picles) and barts skins and fatones skins.

The relation of Chaggi Memet a Persian Merchant, to Baptista

Ramusius and other notable citizens of Venice, touching the way from Tauris the chiefe citie of Persia, to Campion a citie of Cathay ouer land: in which voiage he himselfe had passed before with the Carauans.

From Tauris to Soltania.	6	} dayes journey.
From Soltania to Casbin.	4
From Casbin to Veremi.	6
From Veremi to Eri.	15
From Eri to Boghara.	20
From Boghara to Samarchand.	5
From Samarchand to Caskar.	25
From Caskar to Acfu.	20
From Acfu to Cuchi.	20
From Cuchi to Chialis.	10
From Chialis to Turfon.	10
From Turfon to Camul.	13
From Camul to Succuir.	15
From Succuir to Gaura.	5
From Gaura to Campion.	6

Which Campion is a citie of the Empire of Cathay in the prouince of Tangur, from whence the greatest quantitie of Rubarbe commeth.

The way discovered by water by vs Thomas Sowtham, and John Sparke, from the towne of Colmogro, vnto the citie of Nouogrode in Ruffia, conceining many particulars of the way, and distance of miles, as hereafter foloweth. Anno 1566.

We departed from Colmogro about 10. of the clocke afore noone in a Lobia of Barke, which we hired to lying vs along the coast to a place called Soroka, & in the said barke we hired 6. mariners, and a boy to conduct vs to the place before rehearsed.

The Lobia of barke was of the burden of 25. runnes of there about, wherewith wee bald toome the river of Dwina, the wind being then calme, vnto a monasterie called S. Michael where we were constrained to anker because of a contrary wind which there met vs.

At this towne of Soroka
of an English wilde.

From Colmogro to this monasterie are 50. berths of miles of Ruffia, at which place we tarie till the 21. day in the morning, and then hauing the wind somewhat faire, we set saile and departed thence.

21 We departed from the monasterie of S. Michael, hauing the wind some what faire, and arri-ued at Kofe Island, our and against the monasterie of S. Nicholas, the 22. day at 2. of the clocke in the morning, which is 35. miles distant from the monasterie of S. Michael. By reason of contrary wind and tide we were constrained to tarie there all that day.

23 We departed from the monasterie of S. Nicholas at 7. of the clocke in the evening, and came to an anker at the beacons, and continued there vntill halfe an hower past 10. of the clocke, and then set from thence, the wind being South: our course was West till 5. of the clocke in the morning, when as we came to an anker against Newnox towne, where we continued vntill the 25. day.

At this towne
of Newnox Michael Chanrier in his first voyage,
with his company a ship board were retained.

The said towne of Newnox is from the monasterie of S. Nicholas 35. miles.

We departed from Newnox haue at one of the clocke in the after noone, the wind at South and South east, and our course North west and by West.

The point of Tolficke which is the headland before the entrance of Newnox hauen, and the headland of Seufenskie, lie next South east and by South, North west and by North. We came to an anker there this day at 4. of the clock in the afternoone, being from Newnox hauen 15. miles, where we continued in harbour till the 27. day of the month by reason of contrary winds.

27 We departed from Seufenskie in the morning at 5. of the clocke, the wind next at East and by North, and our course North west and by West.

The said land of Seufenskie and the headland going into Owna riuer, lieth East & by South west, and by North, and betwene them is 25. miles.

This day at Sunne set we came to an Island called Sogisney passing betwixt it and the maine, with the wind at South and by East, our course was West and by South, being 85. miles from Owna riuer.

Being past the said Island 10. miles, the wind came contrary, whereupon we returned to the Island of Sogisney, where we remained vntill the 29. day.

29 The 29. day we departed from Sogisney aforesaid at 5. of the clocke in the afternoone, the wind at East north east, and our course was South west & by west, passing by an Island called Anger, being 30. miles from Sogisney, and keeping on our course, wee came by the headland of an Island called Abdon, being from the Island of Anger 15. miles, where we found many rocks: and if the great prouidence of God had not preserved vs, wee had there perished, being fallen a mongst them in the night time, and our pilot none of the perfectest, which was contrary to his pefession as we found it.

But whosoever will trauell that way, must eicher keepe hard aboard the shore, for that there is a chanell which goeth along the coast within the rocks, or els giue the headland a berth of 6. miles at the least, and so goe a seaboard all: for there are ledges of rocks that lie fure miles from the headland.

We gaue the headland a berth of 3. miles, notwithstanding there lay two rocks two miles to the boord of vs, so that we were inclosed with them, and late vpon the highest of them: but it pleased God to make it calme, and giue vs the day also, or els we had miscaried.

30 We departed from the headland of the Island of Abdon, at 4. of the clocke in the morning, directing our course West, and at 10. of the clocke before noone, wee arrived at a monasterie named Soloffekay, which is 15. miles from Abdon.

At this monasterie we continued vntill the 31. day of this month. Wee had here deliuered vs by the chiefe monkes of the monasterie, their lesler and house hold, and a seruauant of theirs to conduct vs safely through the dangerous riuer of Owiga.

The

as Sowtham, and ic of Nouogrode in nd distance of 66.

ne noone in a Lodia of Barke, to Soroka, & in the said barke before he parted, there about, wherewith were monasterie called St. Spichal ch there met vs.

ustia, at which place we taried satre, we set saile and departed towards some what satre, and the 22. day at 2. of the clocke Spichal. By reason of con-locke in the evening, and came past 10. of the clocke, and then 5. of the clocke in the morning, continued until the 25. day, as 35. miles.

fter noone, the wind at South ce of Newnox haven, and the west and by North. We came om Newnox haven 15. miles, of contrary winds,
the wind next at East and riuer, lech East & by South ing betwixt it and the maine, South, being 85. miles from hereupon we returned to the clocke in the afternoone, the ing by an Island called An-came by the headland of us where we found many rocks: were perilsous, being fallen a which was contrary to his pro-oyd the shoar, for that there is the headland a birch of 6. miles that lie fixe miles from the re lay two rocks two miles to biggest of them; but it pleased us.

of the clocke in the morning, e arrived at a monasterie na-Wee had here delivered vs d a seruant of theirs to com-

The

The people of all those places are wilde, and speake another kind of language, and are for the most part all tenants to the monasterie. The effect of the letter was, that they should be ready to help and assist vs in all dangerous places, and carie our boats and goods ouer land in places need-full. In this way they do, as hereafter shall appere.

Note that at our being at the monasterie, there was no Abbot for the place as then chosen; for 13. dayes before our arrival there, the Abbot was sent for by the Emperour, and made Epitropokimon of the reuaine, and he took vs. The number of monkes belonging to the monasterie are at the least 200.

1 We departed from the monasterie of Soloffekay, as is aforesayd, to a satre stone house of Sorka, which is 5. miles from the monasterie, lying from it South and by West.
2 We departed from the stone house at 3. of the clocke in the morning: our route was West by 40. South, and then passing betwixt diuers and sundry rocks, with many small Islands round about vs in the space of 20. miles, keeping most continually by the said course still, we then shaped our course west and west by North, but we alwaies kept the Southwell, and need not at all to turne South, until we came within two miles of the entrance of the riuer Owiga, where we were to beare in; West and by South.

3 From the riuer Owiga, to the Islands and rocks before mentioned, are 20. miles.
4 We arrived about 4. of the clocke in the after noone within the riuer of Owiga, at a place named Soroka, at which place we forsooke our barke of Lodia, and continued there in making pro-uision for small boates to carie vs by the riuer until the 3. day of the same.

5 We departed from Soroka at two of the clocke in the afternoon, with 3. boates and 12. men to row, and set the foresaid boates by the riuer of Owiga, which we hired.
6 We went this day 7. miles to a place called Ostroue, where we lay all night, but in the way 4. miles from Soroka at a place where the water falleth from the rocks, as if it came steepe doime from a mountaine, we were constrained to take out our goods and wares out of the said boates, and carie the to be caried a mile ouer land, & afterwards also had our boates in like sort caried of wad ouer land by force of men which there dwelled, being tenants to the monasterie aforesaid.

7 And when our boates were come to the place where our wares were laden, we launched our boates and laden our wares againe, and went to the place before named, where we continued and remained that night.

8 We departed from Ostroue in the morning before Sunne rising, rowing and sitting by the riuer 5. miles, where we came to a place, whereas we were againe constrained to take out our wares and to carie them and our boates three miles ouer land, so that with rowing, handling, and sitting we went this day 7. mile more to a place called Sloboday, where we lay all night.
9 We departed from Sloboday in the morning at Sunne rising, and at 6. of the clocke in the afternoone we came to a villiage called Paranda, which is from Sloboday, 30. miles; where we remained all that night.

10 We departed from Paranda at 6. of the clocke in the morning, and all that day what with rowing and handling our boates, we went but 11. miles, for we were unladed our wares, and by our boats ouerland, in one place a mile & an halfe, in an other place as it were the eight part of a mile, and so we came to a place called Voyets, where we taried all that night.

11 We departed from Voyets at 4. of the clocke in the morning, and so came to an Ozora lake called after the name of the riuer, and unto a place called Quequenich, we rowed all this day, and came thither by one of the clocke in the afternoone, which is 25. miles from Voyets, and there we remained all night to hire men and boates to carie vs forward on our journey.

12 We departed backe from vs the seruant which we had at the monasterie, being sent by the monkes to goe thus farre with vs. And after that he had hired the boates and taken the mens names that should conduct vs, and giuen them charge to deliuer vs with all things in satre, at a place being a litle towne called Pouensa, then hee departed from vs without taking any reward for his paines, for he was charged and commanded by the monkes.
13 We departed from Quequenich at Sunne rising, and all that day rowed vpon the lake amongst many Islands. The inhabitants doe there report that there are as many Islands in their lake, as there are daies in the yeere. In the euening we came to a villiage named Tellekina, which is 60. miles from Quequenich.

14 We departed from Tellekina in the morning at 5. of the clocke, and so entring into a riuer, we went that day 13. miles. In one place we caried our boates and goods ouer land 3. miles. At euning we came to a place called Oreiche na maelay, where we lay all night.
15 We departed thence at 5. of the clocke in the morning, & so rowing, came to a place where

August.

The riuer
Owiga.

The fall of a riuer.

The lake very full of Islands.

river ended, being 20. miles distant from the place where we lay all night, at which place we first looke our boates and unladed our wares, and sent a man to the towne of Pouensa, which was seven mile off for hopes to carie vs and our wares to the said place. The boates came, and we laded our goods, and at 6. of the clocke in the afternoone wee arrived at the towne of Pouensa, with all things in safete.

The famous lake of Onega.

This towne of Pouensa standeth within one mile of the famous lake of Onega, which is 329. miles long, and in some places 70. miles ouer. But where it is narrowest, it is 25. miles ouer, being fed with many goodly riuers which fall into it. Vard aboue the stope within 6. miles you shall haue 49. and 45. fathoms of depth.

Here it is to be noted that from this place of Pouensa vnto the billage of Soroka, vnto such dangerous riuers which we came through, at no time of the yeere can any man carrie or transport any goods that come from Nouogrode, or the Narue, and such other places: for in the Summer it is impossible to carie vnto any wares by reason of the great falls of water that doe descend from the rocks. In the winter by reason of the great force and fall of waters which make so terrible raides that in those places it neuer freezeeth, but all such wares as come from Nouogrode to Pouensa, are transported by land to a place called Some in the winter which Some standeth on the sea side, as doth Soroka. The ready way from Pouensa by land to this place of Some, with the distance of miles I will shew hereafter.

12 We departed from Pouensa at 9. of the clocke in the morning, with 2. small boates which we hired to carie vs to a place called Toluo vpon the lake of Onega, being 50. miles from Pouensa, where we arrived the 13. day in the morning, where we bought a boate that caried vs and all our wares from thence to the citie of Nouogrode.

14 We departed from Toluo at 3. of the clocke in the afternoone, and at the evening arrived at a certaine Island named Salafalma, vpon the said lake 7. miles from Toluo, and by reason of contrary windes we there taried vntill the 16. day of this moneth.

16 We departed from Salafalma, at 8. of the clocke in the morning, and came to an Island the 17. day in the morning, named Vorronia, where we continued by reason of contrary windes, vntill the 21. day of the said moneth, and it is 60. miles from Salafalma.

S. Clements his monastery

21 We departed from Vorronia Island two howers before day, and arrived at S. Clements monastery, at 2. of the clocke in the after noone, being from Vorronia 48. miles.

22 We departed from S. Clements monastery at the break of the day, hauing a faire wind all a long the lake: we sailed without striking off shoare vntill 2. howers within night, and then entred into a riuer called Swire, at a monastery called Vosnessino Christo, 5. miles from the entrance of the riuer, where we taried all night. It is from S. Clements monastery 160. miles: the streame of that riuer went with vs.

23 We departed from Vosnessino Christo before sunne rising, and baled down the riuer sometime sailing, and sometime rowing, so that this day wee went 90. miles and lay at night at a place called Vassian.

S. Bernards.

24 We departed from Vassian at the break of the day, & came to a place called Selucaxe, where we lay all night, and is 10. miles from Vassian.

The riuer of Volbukkie, the lake of Nabothair.

25 We departed from Selucaxe at 4. of the clocke in the morning, and entred vpon the Lake of Ladiskaie, the wind being calme all that day sailing 3. howers, and then it was with vs, so that we sailed and rowed that day 10. miles, along vpon the said lake, and entred into the riuer of Volbukkie, which riuer hath his beginning 20. miles aboue Nouogrode, and runneth through the midst of the citie, and so falleth into this lake, which is farre longer then the lake of Onega but it is not so broad. This lake falleth into the sea that cometh from the Sound: where any vessell or boat, by using a good pilot, may go through the Sound into England.

As soone as we were entred into the riuer, we came to a monastery called S. Nicholas Medued, where we lay all that night.

The monastery of Gosnopol.

26 We departed from S. Nicholas Medued, at 5. of the clocke in the morning, rowing and hauing our boates all day, and came at night to another monastery called Gosnopolie, which is 30. miles from S. Nicholas Medued, where we lay all that night.

27 We departed from Gosnopolie at 6. of the clocke in the morning, and at evening came to a place called Moillaue, where we lay all night, being 46. miles from the monastery of Gosnopolie.

28 We departed from Moillaue, and the said day at night came to a place called Gruffina, 35. miles from Moillaue where we lodged.

29 We departed from Gruffina in the morning, & the same day at evening came to a place called Petroe Suetos, where we lay all night, being 40. miles from Gruffina.

night, at which place the of Pouensa, which was the horse came, and the
to come of Pouensa, with lake of Ozera of Onega, where it is narrowest, it is to aboard the shore within 6 illage of Soroka betwixt that can or may any man carrie and such other places: for in of the great falls of water that the great force and fall of wae, but all such wares as come Some in the winter which Pouensa by land to this place with 2. small boates which be ing 50. miles from Pouensa, are that caried by and all are and at the evening arrived at Toluco, and by reason of con-ing, and came to an Island the reason of contrary windes, we and arrived at S. Clements 48. miles.

the day, having a faire wind all within night, and then entered 5. miles from the entrance of erie 160. miles: the stream and baled down the river some miles and lay at night at a place place called Selucaxe, where and entered upon the Lake of then it was much vs. so that we ed into the river of Volhus and runneth through the middle lake of Onega but it is not to where any vessel of boat, ha erie called S. Nicholas Mein the morning, rowing and called Gosnopolie, which is ing, and at evening came to a the monasterie of Gosnopolie. a place called Gruffina, 35.

the evening came to a place calliffina.

30 We departed from Petroe Suetoe in the morning, & at two of the clocke in the afternoon we arrived at the cite of Nouogrod, being twencie miles from Petroe Suetoe. Here we found <sup>The cite of</sup> ~~William~~ <sup>Nouogrod.</sup> Rouille Agre to the company, who was there stayed with all his company, and was not licensed to depart thence for the Mosco, by reason that the plague was in the cite of Nouogrod.
Unto him we delivered all the wares that we brought from Colmogro, for by the way we sold not a penny worth, the people of the countrey every where be so miserable.

The right way to bring and transport wares from Nouogrod to Rose Island into S. Nicholas bay, where our shippes peereley lade, with the distance of miles from place to place, is as fol-loweth:

- 20 Miles from Nouogrod to Petroe Suetoe.
- 40 Miles from thence to Gruffina.
- 35 Miles from thence to Mo illaue.
- 46 Miles from thence to the monasterie Gosnopolie.
- 15 Miles from thence to Lade ga towne.
- 15 Miles from thence to Selunax our the lake of Lade ga, albeit there be many villages all along the lake.
- 180 Miles from Lade ga towne up the river of Swire, unto the monasterie of Vosnessino Christo, albeit there are many villages upon the river: for within every five of five miles you shall have villages of small townes.
- 160 Miles from Vosnessino Christo to S. Clements monasterie, albeit there be many villages all along the lake of Onega.
- 48 Miles from thence to Voronia.
- 67 Miles from thence to Toluco towne: & there are divers villages all along the lake where the carpers may lie, and have meat for man and horse.
- 50 Miles from thence to Pouensa, where Onega lake endeth.

The way from Pouensa to Some towne is this:

- 30 Miles from Pouensa to Mastellina.
- 10 Miles from thence to Tellekina.
- 30 Miles from thence to Toluich.
- 35 Miles from thence to Carraich.
- 20 Miles from thence to Varnich.
- 10 Miles from thence to Ostrouo.
- 15 Miles from thence to Lapina.
- 20 Miles from thence to Some it selfe.

Note that from the cite of Nouogrod unto the towne of Some is 936 miles, & from the towne of Some unto the monasterie of S. Nicholas of Rose Island, over and against where our shippes do lie is full as many miles as is Soroka village from S. Nicholas, as the Russles do account it, as also we do judge it, namely 325 miles. So that from Nouogrod to S. Nicholas road, is by our account 1261 miles of verity.

Furthermore it is to be noted that all such wares as shall be bought at Nouogrod, and sent to Some towne, must be sent by sled way in the winter: for if any ware should be sent from Nouo-god by water in the spring of the peere, after the pee is gone, then must the sayd wares remaine at Pouensa towne all that summer, by reason that in the summer there is no way to go from Pouensa unto Some towne.

At Pouensa there are many warehouses to be hyed, so that if there were as much goods as ten ships could carie away, you might have warehouses to put it in: but if there should remaine much ware all the summer, to be caried in the winter to Some towne, then horses are not easily to be gotten at that place to carie it thither: so that your wares once bought at Nouogrod, you must have carpers there to carie it to the towne of Some by sledges, whereof you may there have 2000 if you will, by the report of the Russles.

For from Nouogrod peereley there go many sledges in the winter to fetch salt from Some, with carpers and empty sledges there to buy it, and to bring it to Nouogrod to sell it in the market of otherwile.

From Nouogrod unto Some towne you may have a pood of wares caried for eight pence of nine pence: but in any wise your wares must be sent from Nouogrod by the first of January, so that the wares may be at Some by Candlemas, or soon after: for if your wares should carie by
the

The cite of Nouogrod.

Cramell by sles.

2000 sleds belonging to one towne.

In good cannot for reasonable reasons.

the way until the 15 of February when the sunne is of some power, then is it dangerous: for the heat of the sunne in the day causeth the deepe lakes of Ladega, and specially of Onega to cleare, and if there should come then a sudden storme, as often times in that time of the yere doth, then doe these lakes open and breake, whereby many men are lost, and huch men and horse drowned, although these riuers doe remaine frozen a long time after.

In the towne of Some also there are many warehouses, whereby the can not be destitute by the repository of our wares, as also as many barks as you will to transport your wares from thence to S. Nicholas road, and that for three pence a good carpage: so that from the citie of Nouogrod unto S. Nicholas road you may haue wares carped for two altines. The good commodity is as altines the tuncne.

Monograph
written 180
miles of the Arctic.

It should alwaies, that you buy your wares there your selfe, and send it thence: for there is no hope that the natives will bring their wares from Nouogrod to Some, in hope to sell unto us, considering the great trade that they haue at the Narue, which is within 180 miles off them.

Written by Thomas Sowtham a seruant to the company.

An Act for the corporation of Merchants aduenturers for the discovering of new trades, made in the eight yere of Queene

Elizabeth. Anno 1566.

Veras diuers very good subiects of this realme of England in the latter end of the reigne of the late right high and mighty prince our soueraigne Lord king Edward the first, at the gracious in encouragement, & right good liking of the said king, & by his specialties liberal example, did at their adventure, and to their exceeding great charges, for the glory of God, the honor and increase of the revenues of the crowne, and the common wellicke of the whole realme of England, set forth three shippes for the discovery by sea, of isles, lands, territories, dominions, and seignories unknowne, and by the subiects of the said late king, not commonly by seas frequented: and after that almighty God had called to his mercy the said king, who dyed before the finishing, and sealing of his most ample and gracious letters of priuileges promised to the said subiects, as well in consideration of the said enterprise, as for diuers other respects, it pleased our late soueraigne Queene Mary, at the humble suites of the same subiects, to grant by her letters patentes vnder the great seale of England, bearing date at Westminster the 26 day of February, in the second yere of her raigne, for the considerations mentioned in the said letters patentes, to the said subiects being specially named in the said letters patentes, and to their successors, that they by the name of Merchants aduenturers of England, for the discovery of lands, territories, isles, dominions, and seignories unknowne, and not before they late adventure or enterprise, by seas or nauigations commonly frequented, should be from thenceforth one body, and perpetuall fellowshippe and communitie of themselves, both in deed and in name, and that the same fellowshippe and communitie from thenceforth should and might haue one or two gouernours, foure consuls, and foure and twentie assistants, of the said fellowshippe and communitie of Merchants aduenturers, and that they by the name of the Gouernour, Consuls, Assistants, Fellowshippe, and Communitie of Merchants aduenturers, for the discovery of lands, territories, isles, dominions, and seignories unknowne, by the seas and nauigations, and not before their sayd late adventure or enterprise, by seas frequented, should or might be able in the law to implead and to be impleaded, to answer and to be answered, to defend and to be defended, before whatsoeuer iudge or iustice temporall or spirituall, or other persons whatsoever, in whatsoeuer court or courts, and in all actions, reall, personall, and mixt, and in euery of them, and in all plaints of Nouel deseison, and also in all plaines, suites, quarrels, affayres, businesse, and demands whatsoever they be, touching and concerning the said fellowshippe and communitie, and the affayres and businesse of the same, onely in as ample maner and forme, as any other corporation of this realme might doe, giuing also, and granting unto them by the sayd letters patentes, diuers authorities, powers, iurisdictiones, preheminences, franchises, liberties, and priuileges, as by the same letters patentes more at large will appeare. And among other things mentioned in the said letters patentes, whereas one of the three shippes, by the said fellowshippe before that time set forth for the voyage of discovery aforesayd, named the Edward Bonauenture, had arrived within the Emperre and dominion of the high and mighty prince Lord John Vasiluich, Emperour of all Russia, Vologda, Marskye, great Duke of Musky, &c. who received the

captaine

ere, then is it dangerous: for the nd specially of Omega to cleare, time of the peere doth, then men and hoyle drowned, although of the can not be detaine for the spoyr your wares from thence to har from the cite of Nouogrod es. The good comutch wra 23 nd send it thence: for there is no o Some, in hope to sell vnto vs, with 180 miles off them,

Thomas Sowtham
to the company,

aduenturers for the ere of Queene

ne of England in the latter end of nce our soueraigne King King the good liking of the said king, adventure, and to their exceeding nd increase of the reuenues of the aine of England, for sooth three ions, and seigniories vnknowen, requented: and after that almighty nd sealing, and sealing of his most dictors, as well in consideration of soueraigne Queene Mary, at the nder the great scale of England, second peere of her raigne, for the subjects being specially named in name of Merchants aduenturers ions, and seigniories vnknowen, uigations commonly frequented, e and communitie of themselves, mittialtie from thenceforth should and twente assistants, of the said hat they by the name of the Count Merchants aduenturers, for the vnknowen, by the seas and nauy seas frequented, should o might to be answered, to defend and ual, or other persons whatsoever, ll, and mist, and in euery of them, tes, quarrels, assayes, tumults, said fellowship and communitie manner and forme, as any other vnto them by the sayd letters pa franchises, liberties, and priu And among other things mentio by the said fellowship before the Edward Bonauenture, had the prince Lord John Vasiluich, of Musky, &c. who receiued the
captaine

company, and merchanes of the sayd shippe very graciously, granting vnto them free tie to traffike with his subjects in all kinde of merchandise, with diuers other gracious priuileges and libertie: therefore the said late Queene by the same letters patentes, for her, her heyres & successours, did grante that all the maine landes, illes, portes, hauens, creekes and riuers of the said mightie Emperour of all Russia, and great citie of Mosco, &c. and all and singular other landes, dominions, territories, illes, portes, hauens, creekes, riuers, armes of the seas, of all and euery other Emperour, king, prince, ru ler, or gouernour whatsoever he or they be, before the said late aduencure or enterpryse not knowen, or by the aforesaid merchantes and subjects of the said king and queene, by the seas not commonly frequented, nor any part or parcell thereof, and lying Northwards, Northeastwards, or Northwest wards, as in the said letters patentes is mentioened, should not be visited, frequented nor haunterd by any the subjects of the said late Queene, other then of the said company and fellowship, and they successours, without expresse licence, agreement, and consente of the Gouernour, Consuls, and Mil litanes of the said fellowship, and communitie, or the more part of them, in maner and forme, as is expresse in the said letters patentes, vpon paine of forfeiture and losse of well of the ship and shippes, with the appurtenances, as also of the goods, merchandises, and thinges whatsoeuer they be of those the subjects of the said late Queene not being of the said fellowship and communitie, which shoul accept or presume to saile to any of those places, which then were, or after should happen to be found and traffiked vnto, the one halfe of the same forfeiture to be to the vse of the said late queene, her heyres and successours, and the other halfe to be to the vse of the said fellowship and communitie, as by the same letters patentes more plainly will appeare.

Since the making of which letters patentes, the said fellowship haue, to the present exceeding great costes, losses and expences, not onely by theyr trading into the said dominions of the said mightie prince of Russia, &c. found out conuenient way to saile into the said dominions: but also passing thro ugh the same, and ouer the Caspian sea, haue discovered very commodious trades into Armenia, Media, Hyrcania, Persia, and other dominions in Asia maior, hoping by Gods grace to discover also the comerty of Cathaia, and other regions very conuenient to be traded into by merchantes of this realme, for the great benefite and commodities of the same.

And so much as diuers subjects of this realme, vnderstanding the premises, and perceiving that now after the charge and traueil aforesaid, diuers wares and merchandises are brought by the said fellowship into this realme, out of the dominions already discovered, which be within this realme of good estimation, minding for their peculiar gaine, verely to decay the trade of the said fellowship, haue contrary to the tenor of the same letters patentes in great disorder traded into the dominions of the sayd mightie prince of Russia, &c. to the great detrimment of this common wealthe:
And for that the name by which the said fellowship is incorporated by the letters patentes afores said, is long, and consisteth of very many wordes: Therefore be it enacted by the queenes most excel lent Maiestie, the lords spirituall and temporall, and the commons in this present parlement assem bled, and by authority of the same, that the said fellowship, company, society and corporation made or creased by the said letters patentes, shall at all time & times from henceforth be incorporated, named and called onely by the name of the fellowship of English merchants, for discovery of new trades, and by the same name for ever, shall and may continue a perpetuall body incorporate in deed and name, and onely by the same name from henceforth, shall implead, and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, sue and be sued, in whatsoever courts and places, and shall and may by the same name be unable to purchase, haue, holde, possesse, receiue, and enjoy whatsoe uer manors, lands, tenements, rents, reuerfions, seruices, and hereditaments not exceeding a hon dred marks peece, not being holden of the Queenes maiestie, her heyres, or successours by knights seruit in Capite, and all goods, merchandises, charters, and other thinges whatsoever, and shall and may by the same name make and do all thinges as any other corporation may do, and also shall haue and enjoy all and singular the libertie, priuileges, iurisdictions, franchises, prebendances, powers, authorities, and thinges, and may doe and execute all other matters and thinges in the sayd letters patentes mentioened, or in any wise contained. And that no part nor parcell of the sayne landes, illes, portes, hauens, roades, creekes, riuers, armes of the seas of any Emperour, king, prince, ruler or gouernour whatsoever he or they be, before the said first enterpryse made by the me ritouches of the sayd corporation, not knowen by the merchantes and subjects of this realme, or by them not commonly by seas frequented, and lying from the cite of London Northwards, Northwest wards or Northeastwards, nor any part or parcell of the maine landes, dominions, illes, portes, roades, hauens, creekes, armes of the seas, that nota be subiect to the said high and mightie prince Lord John Vasiluich, his heyres or successours, or to the Emperour, chiefe gouernour or ruler of the said countrey of Russia for the time being, his heyres or successours, nor the countreies of Armenia maior

This is ment by Albertum
and the other.

English mer
chantes for dis covery of new trades.

maior or minor, Media, Hyrcania, Perha, or the Caspian sea, nor any part of them shall be laden or trafficked unto, visited, frequented, or haunted by any person, being or that shall be a subject or denizen of this realme, by themselves, theyr factors or factors, or any other to the use or commodity, by any wayes or meanes, directly or indirectly, other then by the order, agreement, consente, or ratification of the gouernour, consuls, and assistants of the said fellowship and commonaltie, or the mayor part of them, and their successors for the time being: upon paine that every person and persons offending in this behalf, shall forfeit and loose, Ipso facto, every such shyppe and shippes, with the appurtenances, and all such goodes, merchandizes, and thinges whatsoeuer, as by any such person or persons shall be by any wayes or meanes, directly or indirectly, provided, carped, conduced, brought, or exchanged, in, at, to, through or from any of the places prohibited, as is aforesaid, contrary to the true intent of this statute: the one moiety of all which forfeitures to be to our said soueraigne lady the Queenees Spaietie, her heyses and successors, and the other moiety thereof to the said fellowship of English merchants for discouery of new trades, and theyr successors, to be seized and taken whereloer they may be found, by any person or persons, to the use of our said soueraigne lady, her heyses and successors, and of the said fellowship of English merchants for discouery of new trades, and of theyr successors, or the same or the value thereof to be demanded or sued for by the Queenees highnesse, her heyses and successors, or by the said fellowship of English merchants for discouery of new trades, or their successors, or their attornies or attornies, or by any person or persons being of the same fellowship of English merchants for discouery of new trades, or theyr successors in any court of record, or in any other court or courts within this realme, or els were, by action of debt, action of detinue, bill, plaint, information, or otherwise: in which case no essoine, protection, wager of law, nor intimaunt shall be allowed, for, or on the behalfe of the partie or parties defendant.

Provided alwayes, that whereas diuers subjects of this realme being not of the fellowship aforesaid, haue heretofore made aduentures to and from some of the places prohibited by the said letters patentes, that the said subjects, theyr heyses, executors, administrators and assignes, or any of them shall not be impeached, impleaded, troubled, sued, nor molested for the same in their goods or persons in any manner of wise, either by our said soueraigne lady, her heyses or successors, or the said fellowship, or theyr successors.

Provided also, that it shall be lawfull for any subject of this realme, hauing presently any shyping, goods, wares, or ready money, remaining at or in any place, of or within the dominion of the said mighty prince of Russia, or in any other of the places prohibited to be visited or trafficked unto by this statute or the said letters patentes, to fetch, bring, and convey the same, or cause the same to be brought or conveyed from thence by sea or otherwise, before the feast of S. John Baptist, which shall be in the yeere of our Lord God 1568, any thing contained in this statute, or in the said letters patentes to the contrary notwithstanding.

Provided also, that it shall be lawfull for any of the subjects of this realme, to saile to the port, towne, city, or castle of Wardhouse, or to any of the coastes, townes, hauens, creekes, rivers, islands, and land of Norway for trade of fishing, or any other trade there used by the subjects of this realme, any thing in this statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

And for the better maintenance of the nauie and mariners of this realme, be it provided and enacted, that it shall not be lawfull to the said fellowship and company, nor to any of them to carrie and transport, or cause to be carped and transported any commodity of this realme to the said new trade, but onely in English shippes, and to be sailed for the most part with English mariners, nor also to bring into this realme nor into Flaunders from their said new trade, any merchandizes, or the commodities but in English shippes, and sailed for the most part by the English mariners, on paine to forfeit for every such offence two hundred poundes, wherof the one moiety shall be to the Queenees maiestie, her heyses and successors, the other moiety to the head officers of any port towne, hauing any haven, or harborough decayed, by what name soeuer they be incorporate, to the reparation of such harborough, that will sue for the same in any court of record, by action, bill, plaint or information, wherein no essoine, protection, or wager of law for the defendant shall be admitted or allowed.

Provided also, and be it enacted, that no manner of person or persons shall from henceforth carrie or transport, or cause to be carped or transported out of this realme of England, any manner of clothes or hartles into any of the partes where the sayde fellowship and society is privileged to trade by this act, before the same clothes and hartles shall be all dyessed, and for the most part dyed within this realme, upon payne of forfeiture for every such cloth and hartle, otherwise carped and transported, five poundes: the one halfe thereof to the Queenees Spaietie, her heyses and successors, any part of them shall be sayled ing of that shall be a subiect of de der to the use of commonwealthe ber, agreement, consent, of carrie type and communitie, of the more at every person and persons of his shippe and shippes, with the ap foer, as by any such person or uide, carped, conducted, brought bied, as is aforesaid, contrary in es to be to our said soueraigne la moity thereof to the said fellow successors, to be seized and taken use of our said soueraigne lady, merchandise for discovery of new to be demanded or sued for by the lowshippe of English merchants of attainies, or by any person of discovery of new trades, or they within this realme, or els were by peruile : in which sute no effe on the behalfe of the partie or par time being not of the fellowshipp of the places prohibited by the sayd ministratoys and assignes, or any advised for the same in their goods by, her heires or successors, or the realme, hauing presently any shi e, of or within the dominion of the ed to be visited or trafficked vnto by the same, or cause the same to be feate of S. John Baptist, which in this statute, or in the said letters of this realme, to saile to the port, colonies, hauens, creekes, riuers, e there used by the subiects of this this realme, be it provided and in pany, nor to any of them to carrie modity of this realme to the p are with English mariners, nor ad to trade, any merchandizes, or part by the English mariners, or nerof the one moity shall be to the e head officers of any port towne, they be incorporate, to the repair recor'd, by action, bill, plaint or in defendant shall be admitted of persons shall from henceforth car realme of England, and in times lowshippe and society is p all be all willed, and for the mo such riotous and karkie, otherwise Queenees Maiestie, her heires and successors, successors, the other halfe to the Maister and Wardens of the clothworkers in the city of London for the time being, by what name soeuer they be incorporate, that will sue for the same.

Provided also, that whensoever the sayd society or company shall willingly withdraw, and dis continue wholly by the space of three yeeres in time of peace, the discharging of their merchandizes at the road of S. Nicholas bay in Russia, and doe not discharge they sayd merchandizes at some o ther port or roade lying on that North coast of Russia, or other territory, nor be subiect to the sayd mighty prince of Russia, &c. hether to by the subiects of this realme nor commonly frequented, that then during the time of any such discontinuance and withdrawing, as is aforesaid, it shall be lawfull to all the subiects of this realme to trade to the Narue onely in English bottoms, any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Provided also, that every of the Queenees Maiesties subiectes inhabiting within the citie of Dorke, the towncs of Newcassel vpon Tyne, Hull, and of Boston, hauing continually traded the course of merchandize by the space of ten yeeres, and which before the 25 of December, that shall be in Ann. Dom: 1567, shall contribute, to yne, and put in stocke, to, with, and amongst the said compa ny, such summe and summes of money, as any of the said company, which hath chaungely continued and contributed to the said new trade, from the yeere 1552, hath done, & before the said 25 of De cember 1567 shall do for the furniture of one ordinary, full and intyre portion, or thare, and do in all things behane himselfe as others of the said society be bound to doe, and hereafter shall be bound to do by the priuileges, ordinaunces & statutes of the sayd company, shall from the same 25 day of De cember 1567, be, and be accounted free, and as one of the sayd society and company, and subiect to the priuileges, ordinaunces and statutes of the said company, reasonably made and to be made, any thing in this present Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

A very briefe remembrance of a voyage made by M. Anthony Ienkinson, from London to Moscouia, sent from the Queenees Maiestie to the Emperour, in the yeere 1566.

The fourth day of May in the yeere aforesaid, I embarked my selfe at Grauesend in the good ship called the Harry of London, and hauing had a prosperous voyage arrived at the bay of S. Nicholas in Russia the tenth day of July following, and immediately I sent in post to the Emperour to aduertise of my coming, and trauelling then thowto the country, I with my company came to the Mosco where the Emperour kept his court, the 23 of Au gust, and forthwith gaue the Secreatarie to vnderstand of my arriual, who aduertised the Empe rours Maiey of it, and the first day of September, being a solemne feast among the Russes, I came before the Emperours Maiey, sitting in his seat of honour, and hauing kissed his hand, & done the Queenees Maiesties commendations, & deliuered her Graces letters & present, he bad me to dinner, which I accepted, and had much honoz done vnto me both then & all the time of my abode in Russia.

The Priuileges granted by the Emperour of Russia to the English merchants of that company: obtained the 22 of Sep tember Ann. 1567, by M. Anthony Ienkinson.

In the onely strenghtener of all things, and God without beginning, which was before the world, the Father, the Sonne, and the Holy ghost, our onely God in Trinitie, and maker of all things, whom we worship in all things, and in all pla ces, the doer and fulfiller of all things, which is the perfect knowledge giuer of the true God, our Lord Iesus Christ, with the comforter the Holy Spirit, & thou which art the strenghtener of our faith, keepe vs together, and giue vs healty to preserve our kingdome, thou giuer of all good fruites, and helper of all Christian beleeuers.

We great loy by the grace of God, and great duke Iohn Vasiluwich, of all Russia, Volodimir, Mosco, Nouogrod, Cassan, Altracan, Plasco, Smollensko, Twire, Vgorie, Vatecaid, Bulgar, Sybir and others, Emperour, and great duke of Nouogrod of the lower land, of Chirnygo, Kaslan, Pollorskie, Rostoue, Yereslaue, Bellozer, Vdar, Obdar, Condine, and lord of many other lands, and of all the North parts, commander and lord of Liffe land, Whereas our sister Queene Elizabeth, by the grace of God, Queene of England, France and Ireland, hath writen to vs her letters, that we would grant her merchants, William Gerrard, William Chester, Rowland Heyward, Lawrence Hulle, Iohn Parth, Anthony Ienkinson, William

William Rowlie, and their company of England, to come in shippes into this kingdome, and those merchants, William Garrard and his company, haue required of vs that we would grant and licence them to come into our countrey of Dwina, with all kinde of wares at will, to our citie of Mosco, and to all our castles in our kingdome, we for our sisters sake Elizabeth, by the grace of God, Queene of England, France and Ireland, haue licensed her merchants, William Garrard and his company to passe in shippes to our kingdome of Colmogro, and to the land of Dwina, and in all other our inheritances in the North parts, with all kinde of wares to our citie of Mosco, and in all castles and townes in our kingdome. And sir William Garrard and his company desired of vs, that we would grant them licence to passe to our inheritance of Cassan and Astracan, and into our inheritance of Nouogrod the great, and to our inheritance of Liffe land to Narue and Dorpe, and to other our castles and townes of Liffe land, with all kinde of wares, and the trade to be without custome, which request we haue granted to sir William Garrard and his company, and haue given them licence to passe to our inheritance of Cassan and Astracan, and Nouogrod the great, and into our inheritance of Liffe land, Narue and Dorpe, and other places of our inheritance in Liffe land with all kinde of wares, to buy, barter and sell at will, without custome: and what wares soeuer they bring out of England, or out of any other countrey, needfull or necessary, that they shall bring all those wares needfull or necessary to our treasury, & those wares there to be opened, and then to take out of the same, such wares as shall be needfull for our treasury, and the rest being deliuered a gain, to sell and barter at their pleasure, and to sell none of the fine wares before they be seene by our chancelers, except toying clothes, and other wares not meete for our treasury: and when our chanceler will send our treasure out of our treasury with them, they shall take it with them, and so sell and barter it for wares merite for our treasury, and bring it to our treasury, and they to take no other mens wares to barter or sell with them, nor yet our people to buy or sell for them their wares: and if those English merchants do desire to passe out of our kingdome of Astracan to Boghar, Shamakie, Chaday, or into any other countreyes, or els to goe into their owne countrey, then they to take their treasure with them, and to barter and sell it for wares needfull for our treasury, and to bring it and deliuer it to our chanceler, and when they come backe againe to our inheritance of Cassan and Astracan, or to any other of our castles and townes, that then our capitaine of Cassan and Astracan, and all other our people of charge shall not holde them, but with speed let them passe without taking custome of them, or their wares, and without opening or looking upon them in any wise: and when they haue not our treasure with them, that then like wise no custome shall be taken of them nor their wares to be seene of any man.

And likewise we haue granted them to buy and sell in all our kingdomes and castles, with all kinde of wares: and we haue also licensed them, that when those English merchants do desire to buy and sell with our merchants wholly together, that they shall haue libertie to do so wholly together: and they that do desire to sell their owne wares by retails in their owne house, that then they sell it in their owne house by retails to our people, & other strangers, as they can agree and weighes and arthenids to be kept in their house with our seale, and they themselves to barter and sell their owne wares: and no Russe merchant in Mosco, or any other place in our kingdome, not to sell for them any wares, nor to buy or barter any wares for them, nor couler any strangers goods. And whereas those merchants of England, sir William Garrard and his company, do desire to sell their wares at Colmogro, Dwina, Vologda, Yerasslaue, Costrum, and in Nouogrod the lower, Cassan, Astracan, great Nouogrod, Plasko, Narue, Dorpe, and in other our townes and castles, they shall haue their will to sell it: and of their wares of England and Russe land no custome shall be taken, neither they nor their wares shall be stayed in any place: and when they depart out of Mosco, to aduertise our chancelor thereof, and not to giue any note or inventory of any kinde of their wares they carry away: and when the English merchants, sir William Garrard and his company, doe come vpon the sea, and by misfortune haue their shippes cast away vpon those coastes of the North parts, then we will their goodes to be sought out with trust, and to be deliuered to sir William Garrard and his company, wherby as then shall be found in our countrey: and if that sir William Garrardes company be not in the Mosco nor in our countrey, then we will and command that those goodes of theirs shall be layd by in a place of safegard until such time as the sayd sir William Garrard or his company come to den and the same: and then at their coming we will that it shall be deliuered. And whereas heretofore we haue given sir William Garrard and his company in this our kingdome of Mosco, the new castle by the church of S. Maxim, behinde the market, they shall there still holde their house as heretofore we haue given them paying no custome for the same: and we also doe licence them to keepe one Russe poxer or two, or els of their owne countrey, and those poxers shall dwell with them, and not sell for them shippes into this kingdome, and those of us that we would grant and li of wares at will, to our cite of Mos ake Elisabeth, by the grace of God, rurchances, William Garret and

, and to the land of Dwina, and in wares to our cite of Mosco, and in ruffes and his company desired of us, Cassan and Astracan, and into our Liffe land to Naruc and Dorpe, and wares, and the trade to be without d and his company, and haue giuen , and Nouogrod the great, and in aces of our inheritance in Liffe land at custome: and what wares sorture all of necessary, that they shall bring wares there to be opened, and then in sury, and the rest being deliuered a fine wares before they be seene by ere for our treasure: and when our , they shall take it with them, and it to our treasure, and they to take people to buy or sell for them, they our kingdome of Astracan to Bog gor into their owne countrey, they wares necessarie for our treasure, ues backe againe to our inheritance es, that then our captaine of Cas olde them, but with speed let them out openeing of looking upon them at them like wile no custome shall be kingdomes and castles, withall English merchants doe desire to haue libertie so to do wholly toge n their owne house, that then they ers, as they can agree and weigh themselues to barter and sell they ce in our kingdome, nor to sell for cotuler any strangers goods. And his company, do desire to sell their n, and in Nouogrod the lower, d in other our townes and castles, d and Russe land no custome shall and when they depart out of Mos mentory of any kinde of they William Garret and his compa es cast away upon those coastes of th trust, and to be deliuered to us nd in our countrey: and if that be countrey, then we will and con regard breill such time as the say : and then at our comming wee aue giuen fir William Garret Me by the church of S. Maxin, erret ofore wee haue giuen them em to keepe one Russe portor of well with them, and not sell for

them

them, nor barter, nor buy for them: And also I haue graunted them to buy a house at Vologda, and at Colmogro, in any other place, where they can choole for themselves any good harbour, and there they to set up those houses in those places at their owne charges: and in Vologda of the other houses to keepe two or three porters of their owne, or els two or three Russes, and the it wares to be layed by in those houses, and to sel their owne wares at will: and the porters without them to sell none of their wares, neither yet to buy any for them, And our officers of Colmogro, and Dwina, and of other our castles and townes shall not looke ouer their wares, nor take any custome thereof: neither shall those English Marchants fir William Garret, and his company be laded by any of them. And when the English Marchants shall sende from our kingdome their owne people into their owne Countrey by lande ouer other kingdomes whatsoeuer they be, they may without wares send their owne people at their pleasure. And when any matter of lawe doeth fall out in their trade of Marchandise, then they shall be iudged by our Chancellours, and lawe shall be done with equitie betwixt our people and them, And when they cannot be iudged by law, they then shall be tried by lots, and whose lot is first taken out, he shall haue the right: And if it happen any of those Marchants to haue any matter of lawe in any other part of our Dominions for cause of Marchants, then our Captaines, Iudges and chiefe officers, shall heare the matter, and administer Justice with equitie and trueeth, and where lawe can take no place to be tried by lots, and his lot that is first taken out to haue the right, and for their matters of lawe no custome to be payde.

Furthermoze, wee for our sisters sake Elizabeth haue graunted, that none beside fir William Garret and his Companie, out of what kingdome soeuer it be, England or other, shall not come in trade of Marchandise nor otherwise to Colmogro, nor to the Riuer Ob nor within Wardhouse, nor to Petzora, nor Cola, nor Mezen, nor to the Abbey Petchingam, nor to the 3 lande of Sallawye, nor to any mouth of the riuer of Dwina, nor to any part of the North Countrey of our cast: and if any Marchant, out of what Countrey soeuer it be, doe come with shippe or shippes, bulles, or any other kinde of vessell to any of our harbors, within all our North parts, wee will, that then the people, and goods, shippe or shippes, halbe confiscate, and forfeited to vs the Emperour and great Duke.

Giuen in our kingdome and house of Mosco, the yeere from the beginning of the world 7000, the xxviii of Brezene, in the moneth of September, and in the 34. yeere of our raigne, and in our conquest of Cassan 16, and in our conquest of Astracan 15.

Perused and allowed by vs:

- Anthonic Jenkinson.
- William Rowlyc.
- Thomas Hawtryc.
- Thomas Sowtham.
- Rafe Rutter, translatour hereof out of the Russe tongue.

The Ambassage of the right worshipfull M. Thomas

Randolfe Esquire, to the Emperour of Russia, in the yeere 1568. Briefly written by himselfe.

The 22. day of June, in the yeere of our Lord 1568, I went aboarde the Harry, lying in the roade at Harwich with my companie, being to the number of 40. persons of thers about: of which the one halfe were Gentlemen, desirous to see the world.

Within one dayes sayling, we were out of the sight of all lande, and following our course directly North, till wee came to the North Cape, wee sailed for the space of 12. dayes with a prosperous winde, without tempest or outrage of sea: Having compassed the North Cape, we directed our course flatter South-east, hauing vpon our right hande Norway, Wardhouse, Laplande, all out of sight till wee came to Cape Gallant: And so sayling betweene two Bayes, the two and thirtieth day after our departure from Harwich, wee cast ancre at S. Nicholas roade. In all the time of our voyage, more then the great number of Whales ingendering together, which wee might plainly beholde, and the

In this voyage were Thomas Banter, and Gourey Ducket, for their voyage into Persia.

Sperma Ceta, which we might see swimming vpon the sea, there was no great thing to be wondered at. Sometimes we had calmes, wherein our Spariners fished, and tooke good scope of diuers sorts. At S. Nicholas wee landed the 23. of July, where there standeth an abbey of Spunkes (to the number of 20.) built all of wood: the apparel of the Spunkes is superstitious, in blacke hoodes as ours haue bene. Their Church is faire, but full of painted images, tapers, and candles. Their owne houses are lowe, and small roomes. They lie apart, they eat together, and are much giuen to drunke meate, vnlearned, wiche they can, preach they doe neuer, ceremonious in their Church, and long in their prayers.

The abbey of
S. Nicholas
of 20. Spunkes.

At my first arrivall I was presented from their Prince with two great rye loaves, fish both salt and fresh of diuers sorts, both sea fish and fresh water, one sheepe alive, blacke with a white face, so be the more grateful vnto me, and so wiche many tolemne words inviting me to see their house, they tooke their leaue.

The English
house at S.
Nicholas.

To vne of habitation at S. Nicholas there is none more then about 4. houses neere the abbey, and another built by the English Companie for their owne vse.

This part of the Countrey is most part wood, sauing here and there pasture & arable ground, many riuers and diuers Islands uninhabited, as the most part of the Countrey is, for the coldest in winter.

The riuer of Dwina.

S. Nicholas standeth Northeast: the eleuation of the pole 64. degrees. The riuer that runneth thier into the sea is called Dwina, very large but shallow. This riuer taketh his beginning about 700. miles within the countrey, and vpon this riuer standeth Colmogro, & many prettie villages, well situated for pasture, arable land, wood, and water. The riuer pleasant betwene high hills of either side inwardly inhabited, and in a maner a wilbernes of high firre trees and other wood, Colmogro.

At Colmogro being 100. verses, which we accompt for 3. quarters of a mile euery verse, we taried 3. weekes, not being suffered to depart befoze the Emperour had woze of our coming: who sent to mee vs a Gentleman of his house to conuey vs, and to see vs furnished of victuals, and all things needefull vpon his owne charge.

The allowance of meate and drinke was for euery day 2. rubbles, besides the charge of boares by water, and 4. scope post horses by lande, with about 100. cartes, to carrie my wines, and other cartiage.

Colmogro is a great towne builded all of wood, not walled, but scattered house to house. The people are rude in maners, & in apparell homely, sauing vpon their festiual, and marriage dayes.

The people of this towne finding comoditie by the English mens traffique with them are much at their commandment, giuen much to drunkenness and all other kinde of abominable vices.

An English house with lande at Col-
mogro.

In this towne the Englishmen haue laudes of their owne giuen them by the Emperour, and faire houses with offices for their commoditie very many.

Of other townes until I come to Vologda, I write not, because they are much like to this, and the inhabitants not differing from them.

I was 5. whole weekes vpon the riuer of Dwina till I came to Vologda, being draynen with men against the streame, for other passage there is none.

Vologda standeth vpon the riuer of Vologda, which commeth into Dwina. The towne is great and long, built all of wood, as all their townes are.

In this towne the Emperour hath built a castle inuironed with a wall of stone, and bricke, the walles faire, and high rounde about. Here (as in all other their townes) are many Churches, some built of bricke, the rest of wood, many Spunkes and Runnes in it: A towne also of great traffique, and many rich Sparchants there dwelling.

From hence we passed by land towards Mosco in poste, being 500. verses great, which are equal with our miles. In their townes we baited of lay being post townes.

The description
of the land of Spunkes.

The Countrey is very faire, plaine & pleasant, well inhabited, coine, pasture, meadowes, prough, riuers, and woods, faire and goodly.

At Yeraslaue, wee passed the riuer of Volga, more then a mile ouer. This riuer taketh his beginning at Beada Ozera, & descendeth into Mare Caspium, portable the way of very great bellies with flat bottomes, which farre passe any that our Countrey beeth.

To passe by this riuer into Mare Caspium, the English Companie caused a barke to be built of 27. tunne, which there was neuer seene befoze: This barke built, and readie rigged to the sea with her whole furniture, cost not the companie about one hundred markes there.

His arrivall at Mosco.

To Mosco wee came about the ende of September, receiued by no man, not so much as our owne Countrey men suffered to mee vs, which bred suspicion in mee, of some other course intended, then we had hitherto found.

there was no great thing to be fish, and tooke good hope of diuers re standeth an abbey of monks (so res is superstitious, in blacke boons images, tapers, and candles. Their eate together, and are much giuen ruer, ceremonious in their Church, two great rye loaves, fish both lake ye aliter, blacke with a white face, so inuiting me to see their house, they en about 4. houses neere the abbey, and there pasture & arable ground, of the Countrey is, for the coldest

4. degrees. The riuer that runneth riuer taketh his beginning about olmogro, & many prettie villages, riuer pleasant betwene high hills of high firs trees, and ether wood, quarters of a mile every best, we our had woode of our comming:
and to see vs furnished of victuals, bles, besides the charge of horses rtes, to carrie my wines, and ether but scattered house frō house. The theat festiuall, and marriage dapes. mens crasque with them are much her kinde of abominable vices, giuen them by the Emperour, and ause they are much like to this, and to Vologda, being dyuven with metly into Dwina. The towne is with a wall of stone, and hick the their townes ) are many Churches, annes in it: A towne also of great ing 500. vertles great, which are post townes.

oyne, pasture, meadowes plough, le ouer. This riuer taketh his be table chow of very great belis th.

panie caused a barketo be built of and readie rigged to the sea with marks there.

ued by no man, nor so much as our in mice, of some other course in

the

we were brought to a house built of purpose by the Emperour for Embassadors, fatte, and large, after the fashion of that Countrey.

Two gentlemen were appointed to attend vpon me, the one to see vs furnished of vi that we lacked nothing of the Emperours allowance: the other to see that we should re out of the house, nor suffer any man to come vnto vs, in which they left nothing vndone that their charge. But specially he that looked to our persons, so straightly handled vs, that we had no small cause to doubt that some euill had bene intended vnto vs. No supplication, suite, or request, could take place for our libertie, nor yet to come to his presence.

During passed ouer 17. weekes in this sort, the Emperour sendeth word that we should be re ue against tuesday the 20. of February, at 8. a clocke in the morning.

The houre being come that I should go to the Court, the two Gentlemen, Pristaues (as they call them) came vnto me apparelled more princely, then before I had euer seene them. They presse vs to depart, and mounted vpon their owne owne horses, and the Embassadour vpon such a one as he had boyrowed, his men marching on foote, to their great griefe.

The Embassadour (being my selfe) was conueyed into an office where one of the Chancelloz woth ble to sit, being there accompanied with the 2. foresaid Gentlemen: I tarried 2. long houres before I was sent for to the Emperour. In the ende message being brought that the Emperour was set, I was conueyed by my gentlemen by a paire of staires through a large roome, where fate by my estimation 300. persons, all in riche attire, taken out of the Emperours wardrobe for that day, vpon three ranks of benches, set round about the place, rather to present a Gaieitie then that they were either of qualitie or honour.

At the first entrie into the Chamber, I with my cappe gaue them the reuerence, such as I knewe their stately sitting, graue countenance, and sumptuous apparel required, and seeing that it was not answered againe of any of them, I couered my head, and so passing to a chamber where the Emperour was, there receiued mee at the doore from my 2. Gentlemen of gouernours, two of the Emperours Counsellers, and the two me to the Emperour, and brought me to the middle of the chamber, where I was willed to stand still, and to say that which I had to say. I by my Inter preter opened my message as I receiued it from the Queene my Wittnell, from whom I came, at whom name the Emperour stood up, & demanded diuers questions of her health and state: where unto and were being made, he gaue me his hand in token of my welcome, & caused me to sit downe, and further asked me diuers questions.

This done, I deliuered her Gaieities present, which was a notable great Cuppe of silver cu riously wrought, with verses grauen in it, expressing the histories workmanly set out in the same.

All being said and done, (as appeared) to his contentment, he licensed mee and my whole com pany to depart, who were all in his presence, and were saluted by him with a nodde of his head, and said vnto me: I dine not this day openly for great affaires I haue, but I will send thee my dinner, and give leave to thee, and thine, to goe at libertie, and augment our allowance to thee, in token of our loue and fauour to our sister the Queene of England.

I with reuerence tooke my leave, being conueyed by 2. other of greater calling, then those that brought me to the Emperours sight: who deliuered me to the two first Gentlemen, who conducted me to the office where I first was, where came vnto mee one called the long Duke, with whom I conferred a while, and so returned to my lodging.

Within one houre after, in comes to my lodging a duke richly apparelled, accompanied with 50. persons, eche of them carrying a silver dish with meate, & couered with silver. The duke first deliuered 20. loaves of bread of the Emperours owne eating, hauing talked the same, & deliuereth euery dish into my hands, and tasted of euery kinde of vyne that he brought.

This being done, the duke and his companie sate downe with me, and spoke part of the Empe rours meate, and filled themselves well of all soyes, and went not away from me vnto bed.

Within few nightes after the Emperour had willed to speake secretly with mee, and sent for me in the night by the long duke: The place was farre off, and the night cold, and I hauing changed my apparell into such as the Russes doe weare, found great inconmoditie thereby.

Hauing talked with him about 3. houres, towards the morning I was dismissed, and so came home to my lodging, where I remained about 6. weekes after, before I heard againe from the Emperour, who went the next day to Sloouda, the house of his solace. After the ende of which 6. weekes, which was about the beginning of Aprill, the Emperour returned frō Sloouda to gelatid, and sent for me againe to make repaire vnto him. And being come, I dealt effectually w him in the behalf of our English Merch. us, & found him so graciously incliued towards them, I obtained at his hands my whole demands for large priuileges in general, together w al the rest my parti cular requests.

Speciall hou of Empero, bus Embassa
bours.

2. Pristaues.

This admittion to the Empe rours presence.

The Queenes
present.

The Empe
rours speech to the Embassa
dour.

A second con ference with the Emperour.

And then hee commended to my conduct into England, a noble man of his, called Andrew Sauiin: The Embassadour, for the better confirmation of his priuiledges graunted, and other negotiations with her Maestie. And thus being dispatched with full contentment, the saide Embassadour and hee selfe departed, and imbarked at S. Nicholas about the ende of July, and arrived safely at London in the moneth of September following.

A Copie of the priuiledges graunted by the right high and mightie Prince, the Emperour of Russia, &c: vnto the right wor- shipful fellowship of English Marchants, for the discouerie of new trades:

And hither sent by Thomas Randolfe Esquire, her Maiesties Embassadour to the saide Emperour, And by Andrew Sauiin his Embassadour in the yeere of our Lord

God 1569.

Our God euerlasting, and without, and before the beginning, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, the blessed Trinitie, our onely God, maker, and preseruer of all things, and replenisher of all things euery where, who by thy goodnesse dost cause all men to loue the giuer of wisdom our onely Mediatour, and leader of vs all vnto blessed knowledge by the onely Sonne his word our Lorde Iesus Christ holy and euerlasting Spirit; And now in these our dayes crauest vs to keepe Christianitie, and sufferest vs to enioy our kingdome to the happie commoditye of our land, and wealth of our people in despite of our enemies, and to our fame, with our friends.

The Iohn Vasiluich by the grace of God, great Lord Emperour and great duke of all Russia, Volodemaria, Molcouia, Nouogrod, Emperour of Cazan, Tuerkie, Vgtrakie, Perouskie, Votskie, Bulgaria, and many others; Lord and great duke of the low Countreies of Nouogrod, Chennigoskie, Râfanskie, Polotiskie, Rastow, Yeraslaue, Bellofoso, Owderskie, Conduskie, and all Siberland, Great commaunder of all the North parties, Lord of Leisland, and many other Northward, Southward and Westward.

Whereas our sister Elizabeth by the grace of God Queene of England, Fraunce, and Ireland, defender of the faith, hath written vnto vs her letters for her marchants, who hath made suite that we should graunt our goodyes to the Marchants which are of our Countreie, and give them free leaue to come to traffique in our kingdome to Colmogorode, and to the Countreies of Dwina; and to our great Citie of Molcouia, and to all the citiees in our Dominion, and through our Countrey to Bowhair, to Persia, Casbine, and Chardaye, and to all other Countreies;

The Iohn Vasiluich Emperour and great duke of all Russia; by our sister Elizabeths like, Queene of England haue giuen and graunted to the English Marchants, the Governours, Consuls, assistants and fellowship, Sir Wil. Garrard knight, Rowland Hayward Alderman, Ioh. Thammworth Esquire, Iohn Riuers Alderman, Henry Beacher Alderman, Consuls, Sir Wil. Chester knight, Edward Iackman Alderman, Lionel Duckett Alderman, Edward Gilbert, Laurence Hule, Francis Walsingham, Clement Throgmorton; Iohn Quarles, Nicholas Wheeler, Thomas Banister, Iohn Harrison, Francis Buricham, Anthony Ganage, Ioh. Somers, Richard Wilkinson, Ioh. Sparke, Richard Barne, Robert Woolman, Thomas Browne, Thomas Smith, Thomas Allen, Thomas More, William Bully, Richard Yong, Thomas Arkinson, assistants, Iohn Merth Esquire, Ieffrey Duckett, Francis Robinson, Matthew Field, and all the rest of their Countreie and fellowship, and to their successours and deputies, to come with ships, and other vessels into our Countrey, at Colmogorode, Dwina, and to all the North parts now being ouer, or that hereafter shall at any time be in our possession, by sea, river, or land, euen to our great Citie of Molcouia, in all the townees of our Countreie, to Cazan and Astracan, to Nouogorode the great, to Plasko and Leisland, Vriagorod, to Narue, and all other townees of Leisland; and to passe through our land to Bowhair, Persia, Casbin, Chardaye, and other Countreies; And whersoever they come there to be and abide freely, and to barter and vendre freely all wares of sale, without charge of all people, and Marchants strangers whatsoeuer.

And it so be they bring any fine wares out of England, or any other Countrey from Bowhair, Persia, Casbine, or from any other place, and shall their wares that come by the way of Narue, or any other part into our Dominion, to bring the same wares into our Countrey, or our Treasurers to buy the same wares, and to take into our Treasure of the same (such as shall be needfull man of his, called Andrew Savages granted, and other negociation, the said Embassa-ge ended of July, and arrived safe the right high and unto the right wor-

shipprie of new trades:

er Maicsties Em-

andrew Sauin

ord

the beginning, the Father, the our onely God, maker, and presuer every where, who by thy goodness and onely Mediatour, and onely Sonne his word our Lorde Iesus now in these our dayes teachest us to the happy commoditye of our life, with our friends, our and great duke of si Russia, Vladimir, Permiskie, Vo-lhogorode, Chen Ovderskie, Conduskie, and all the Land; and many other King-domes, and Countreies of England, France, Ireland, Spain, who hath made state the of the Countrey of Dwina, and all other, and through our Countrey Countreies.

1. And our sister Elizabeths sake, and Countreies, the Governours, Consuls, and other, Sir Wil. Chester-man, Edward Gilbert, Laurence Armes, Nicholas Wheeler, Thomas Browne, Thomas Smith, Thomas Arkinson, assistants, John Field, and all the rest of their Company, and other vessels, which pertaine unto being ours, of that Countrey, and wheresoever they shall sell all wares of sale, without any other Countrey from Bowditch, that come by the way of our Countrey, and our Treasurie, the same wares as shall be needfull for vs. And all such wares as we shall not need, our Chancellour to redeliver the same, And after the view of our Chancellours, to barter it freely to whom they will, not selling any of their wares needfull for vs, before our Chancellour have seene the same. And all other goods and heavy wares that shall be needfull to our use, not being brought to Mosco to declare and sell our Chancellour of the same wares: And to give a note thereof by name, and how much they leave there, not brought to Mosco: and then if we neede not the said wares, the English Marchants, their servants & Factors, to convey their wares the nearest way to Visiuge the great, and so to Colmogorod, or elsewhere at their pleasure, there to barter and sell the same. But those wares that shall be needfull for our Treasurie, they shall not hide from vs in any case.

And when our Chancellours shall send our adventure, with the said Marchants of their Factors they to take our adventures with them, and to sell, & to barter for such wares as shall be meete for our Treasurie, and to returne it into our Treasurie.

And when wee shall sende any adventure into England then our Chancellour to give them a verges warning, that their ships may be provided thereafter, that by taking in of our wares, they leave not their owne behinde them.

And to take our adventure yearly when they goe into Persia.

Neither shall any English marchants receive of colour any of our peoples goods, nor barter nor sell it in any wise like wise our people not to barter for the said English marchants or occupy for them.

2. And when they shall come into our Empire of Casan and Astracan, and other places of our Dominions, then our Captaines of Casan and Astracan, and our authorized people, quietly to let them passe, not taking any toll of custome of their wares, nor once to make search thereof.

And when we shall send no adventure with them, yet to suffer them freely to passe, not bleding their wares, nor taking any kinde of custome. And whatsoeuer English marchant will bargain with our Marchants of Factors wares for wares to barter the same at their pleasure.

And whatsoeuer their Marchant or Factor will sell their wares at their house at Mosco, which house I graunte them at S. Maxims at the Mosco, they to sell for wares to our people, either strangers as they may best deter it, keeping within their house, arshives, measures, & waightes under seales.

4. We have graunted them the said house at S. Maxims in the halfe street, and without standing rent, as heretofore we did graunt it the said English Marchants, sir Wil. Garrard, and the Company, maintaining in the said house one housekeeper a Russe, and two Russe servants, or some of their owne countrey men, and none other Russe besides they aforesaid. And the said housekeepers that shall live at their house with the English marchants, neither to bye nor sell any wares for them, but that the said marchants themselves or their factors, shall bye, sell, and barter their owne wares; and our Moscouie marchants not to take the said Englishmens wares to sell them in our townes; nor to bye any wares for them, neither the English marchant to colour any Russe wares at any towne.

5. And whatsoeuer English marchant will sell his wares at Colmogorod, Dwyna, Vologda, Yersalaue, Castran, Nouogrode, the lower Casan, Astracan, Nouogrode the great, Vapaska, the Narue, Vriagorod, or at any other townes, they to sell their wares there at their pleasure, And of al wares as well of other countreies as of Russia, no officer or other to take any custome, neither in any place to stay them in any wise, neither take any kinde of toll of them for their wares whatsoeuer.

6. And whatsoeuer marchant shall bargain or bye any wares of English marchants: The said Russe not to returne those wares vpon the marchants handes againe, but to give ready money for the said wares, or otherwise they to craue the Justice to give right, and to execute the lawe vpon the same with all expedition. And when the English marchants or factors shall crauaile from Moscouie after the dispatche of their wares and business, then to shewe themselves vnto our Chancellours, whatsoeuer wares of theirs shall goe from Mosco, they not to shewe the same wares to any our officers, nor pay no custome nor toll in any place.

7. If it so happen the English marchants have any wacke, and the shippes be brought to any port of our Dominions, we to command the said goods to be enquired and sought out, and to be given to the English marchants, being here abiding at that time in our Countrey, the factors, servants, or deputies, of the Countrey aforesaid, to whom we have graunted this our gracious letter.

And if there happen none of the English marchants, factors, servants, or deputies to be in our Countreies at such time, then we will all the said goods to be sought out and bestowed in some conuenient place, and when any of the Countrey aforesaid, by writing these our letters, shall come for their goods, we to command their goods to be redelivered vnto them.

8. Likewise wee have graunted leave to the English marchants, their Governours, Consuls, and assistants, namely, sir William Garrard knight, Rowland Hayward, and the Companie to builde houses at Vollogda, Colmogro, and the sea-side, at Luangorode, at Cherell, and in all other parts of our Dominions, as shall bee needefull for their trade. And they to keepe at the said houses, one housekeeper, a Russe, and two of thye men to keepe their wares at the said houses, make sale thereof to whome they will, they, their Factors or deputies: the said housekeeper not to buy or sell for them.

9 Also wee haue giuen and graunted to the English Marchants, their house which they haue by our goodnesse at S. Maximes in the Zenopskie, and other their houses in the towne of Zenopskie, made for the better assurance of their goods, and all such as they shall see by hereafter haile of the Oprissini, and will make them knowen to all them of Oprissini.

¶ 10. chosen
liber.

10 And whereas by our goodnesse we haue graunted them a Ropehouse at Vollogda, being farre from the English Marchants house, nowe we haue giuen them to builde a house for that use by the said English house, and haue giuen and graunted them (of our goodnesse) ground, one hundred and fouretwoe sabome long, and fiftie sabomes in breadth, according to their owne request.

11 Also, we haue of our goodnesse giuen and graunted to the English Marchants, leave to buy them a house at Witchida, and there to search out mines of yron. And where they shall happily finde it, there to set by houses for the making of the same yron: and to make the same, of our goodnesse haue graunted them woods, five or sixe miles compasse about the said houses, to the making of the saide yron, and not to exceede these bounds and limits: And where they shall cut the saide wood, not to set by any village of same there, lyinge the artificers for making of their yron, out of their owne Countrey, and to learne our people that arte, and so freely occupying the saide yron in these our Dominions, transporting also of the same home into England, allowing for every pound one dingo, or M. pennie.

12 And if any of the said yron shall be needfull for our workes, then we to take of the saide yron to our worke, upon agreement of price, paying monye out of our Treasurie for the same: And when the said English Marchants or Factors shall send their owne people out of our Realme into their Countrey, ouer land though any Countrey whatsoeuer, freely to send the same with our woads.

13 Also, we of our goodnesse haue graunted, that if any man mislike the saide English, the Factors or seruants, or the saide English Marchants, their Factors or seruants about any other at Molsouie, or any other our townes whatsoeuer within our Dominions in trade of Marchandise or otherwise, then they to haue by right iustice in all such matters of our counsaile the Oprissine without all let or delay: But if our Justice may not agree the parties, then lots to be made, and to whose lotte it shall fall, to him the right to bee giuen, and that onely our counsaile at Molsouie, and none of our Captaines, or authorized people, or officers in any other our townes, giue iudgment upon the said English Marchants for any thing.

14 Also, if any stranger shall haue matter of controuersie with any English Marchant, Factor or seruant, abiding within these our Realmes, or contrarywise any English Marchant, Factor or seruant, against any other stranger, in all those causes our Counsaile of the Oprissine, to giue them Justice, and to make an agreement & ende betweene the parties, without all delaye; And none to deale therein, saue our Counsaile of the Oprissine: 15 And if any man haue action against any English Marchant being absent, that then in his absence it shall be lawful for any other Englishman at his assignation to answer his cause.

16 If any Englishman happen to be wounded or beaten to death, or any Russe or stranger slaine or beaten, 17 Or any stolen goods to be found in the saide English houses, then our Counsellors to cause the guiltie persons to be sought out, and to doe right and Justice in the cause, and the partie that is guiltie, if he deserue punishment, to be corrected accordingly after his offence, That the said English Marchants, factors and seruants, sustaine thereby no hindrance or damage.

18 And whatsoeuer English Marchant, Factor, seruant, or deputy, shall be guiltie of any fault, deseruing our displeasure, then our Counsellors to cause the guiltie partie to goe vnder surties, and their goods to be sealed and kept, vntill our pleasure bee further knowen, and our Counsaile to examine their offence, and so to repose it vnto vs, that wee may command what shall be done therein, and none other to be credited or haue their goods sealed, which are not guiltie of those offences, nor to stay or apprehend them in any of our Dominions for the same.

19 If any English Marchant, Factor or seruant shall offend, it shall be lawful for their Agent to doe iustice upon the said partie, or to send him home into England at his pleasure.

20 If any English Marchant, Factor or seruant, haue lent or hereafter shall lende money to any of our people, or credite them with wares, and so depart into any forreigne Countrey, or die before the debt bee due to be paid, then our people and Marchants to paye the same debt, ward, and the Companie in angorode, at Cherell, and in all trade. And they to keepe at the their wares at the said houses, equities: the said housekeeper not nts, their house which they haue e houses in the towne of Zenop-they shall set by hereafter shall be sfini.

house at Vologda, being farre builde a house for that use by the goodnesse) ground, one hundred to their owne request.

English Merchants, leaue to buy and where they shall happily finde make the same, of our goodnesse said houses, to the making of the ere they shall cut the saide wood, s for making of their yon, out of ceely occupying the saide yon in England, allowing for every en we to take of the saide yon to treasure for the same; And when ple out of our Realme into their send the same with our wares, the saide English, the fact-of seruants abuse any other dominions in trade of Merchandise of our counsaile the Oprisnie ties, then loes to be made, and to ply our counsaile at Molcouie, y other our towne, give iudge

English Merchant, Factor of English Merchant, Factor of saile of the Oprisnie, to give ties, without all delaye; And and if any man haue action ce it shall be lawfull for any other h, or any Russe, or stranger staine houses, then our Counsellors iudice in the cause, and the party ply after his offence, That the hindrance or damage, partie shall be guiltie of any fault, ie partie to goe vnder suerties, ber knowen, and our Counsaile y command what shall be done which are not guiltie of that of the same.

the lawfull for their Agent to at his pleasure.

hereafter shall lende money to any foreygn Country, of merchants to paye the saide debt,

to

to

to

to whome soeuer shall be appointed to the said roome or charge, and the said English Merchant, factor, or seruant, to bring his bill of debt to our Counsell, to shewe them what is due, and what money is owing them for any wares; and thus to doe truly, not adding any whyle to the debt, and our Counsell to command the debt to be discharged vnto the English Merchant, factor, or seruant, without delaye.

21 And whatsoeuer English Merchant shall be arrested for debt, then our Counsell to command the partie vnder arrest to be deliuered to the Agent; and if he haue no suertie, to bind the Agent with him, for the better force of the bond.

And if any Englishman be endebed, we will the Creditor not to call him in prison, or to deli-uer him to the Sergeant, lest the officer lose him, but to take ware in payme of the debt.

22 Also of our goodnes, we haue granted the English Merchants to send our Commission to all our Townes, Captaines, and authorised men, to defende and gard the saide Merchants from all cheues, robbers, and euill disposed persons.

23 If in comming or going to and fro our dominions, the Merchants, the factors, or seruants be spoiled on the sea, our Counsell shall send our letters, and will them to be sought out, and where they shall finde the goods, cause it to be restoyed againe, and the offender to be punished, according to our commandement.

24 Also of our goodnes, we haue granted the saide Merchants to take by Hookers, Warkers, Wapers, and such like labourers, as shall be needefull for them, paying for their hire as the laborers and they shall agree.

25 We likewise of our goodnes, haue licensed the English Merchants in our Townes of Mos-ko, Nouogorode the great, and Pasko, that the Coiners of the said Townes shall melt Dollers, and coine money for them, without custome, allowing for coales, and other necessaries, with the workmanship.

26 Also of our goodnes, we haue granted to the said English Merchants, to take posse hoyle at needefull times, leauing with our officers a noce how many they take, and not els, in no case hindering or diminishing our treasure.

27 Also for our sister Queene Elizabeths sake, we of our goodnes haue granted to the merchants within written, this our letter, and to their successors, that no Englishman, nor any other stranger, come without the Queenes leaue to Colnogorode, the riuer of Vob, Vasiagy, Pechora, Cowlaye, Mefeyne, Pechme coue, Zeluetskyes Island, the riuer of Shame, nor to no other haueu of Dwina, nor to any part of the north side of Dwina, by hether ward of Wardhouse, to any haueu, with shippe, Bulle, or any other vessel, nor to occupie in any kind of waies, but onely the said English companie, and their successors, to whome we of our goodnes haue granted this priuiledge, 28 Also that no English Merchant, without the Queenes leaue, shall come with any wares, to the Narue, or Vriogorode.

29 And whatsoeuer English Merchant, stranger, or other, of whatsoeuer Countrey he be, shall come with any shippe, Bulle, or any other vessel, to any of the said haueus of the north side, to any part of Dwina, by North the Narue, or Vriogorode, without the Queenes leaue or knowledg, not being of the companie aboue written, wee to apprehende and take the same vessel from those strangers and Merchants, the one halfe to vs the Emperour, and great Duke, and the other halfe to the companie of English Merchants.

30 Also of our goodnes, we haue granted the said companie of English merchants, that no English merchants or strangers shall passe through our dominions, to Boghare, Peria, Casbin, Chardaye, or other Countreies, saue onely the companie of English merchants, and our owne messengers.

31 Also whatsoeuer Englishman, comming out of England, or any other Countrey, into our dominions, without the Queenes leaue, and knowledg, not being of the said companie, written within those our letters, mind, and purpose, to abide in our Realme, contrary to the Queenes will and pleasure, or any way abuse himselfe, the Agent shall freely send him home, to the Queene his Soueraigne: which if the Agent of himselfe be unable to do, let him pray for aide of the Captaines and officers of our Townes there being, and so send him to prison, and will the saide Captaines not to hinder the said Agent from sending home such euill persons into England.

32 And if any man within our Countrey, runne away to any other towne, or place, the English merchants, and factors, to haue free libertie to apprehende him, and take their goods from him againe.

33 And as for our priuiledge, given to Thomas Glouer, Ralfe Rutter, Christopher Bennet, John Chappell, and their adherents, we haue commanded the same priuiledges to be taken from them.

34 Also we of our goodnes haue granced the said company of English merchants, their successors seruants and deputies, that doe or shall remaine at Musko, or else where within our dominions freely to keepe their owne lawe: and in any wise none of ours to force them to our lawe of faith against their will.

Moreover, besides and with the companie of English merchants, we permit all strangers, to trade to our towne of Narue, Vtiogorode, and other our townes of Letland, as they haue done by force time, from the beginning of the world 7077. in the moneth of June 20. in iudicium, 12. The yeere of our Lordship & reigne 35, and of our Empire of Rusland 23, Calan 17, Astracan 15.

Other speciall graunts by his Maiesties priuate letters at the suite of Master Randolph Embassadour.

Releasement out of prison of Fitzherbert, that was accused for writing of letters against the Emperour.

Liberty giuen to Thomas Greene that was accused, & troubled vpon suspition of his dealing, with the Embassadour, and licence giuen to him to traffique as he was accustomed.

Andrew Acherton and his sureties released at the Narue and his seruauant at the Mosko, that were in trouble for sending the merchants letters into England.

A letter graunted to Thomas Southam to the Countaile for iustice against them that stole the pearles.

His Maiesties fauour promised to the Artificers, and liuings to be appointed them as they can best deserue.

A letter to the merchants that went into Persia, to passe freely without impeachment in his dominions, as also letters of fauour to the great Shawe of Persia.

A graunt vnto the companie that at what time soeuer, they send to the discouery of Cathaya, they shalbe licensed to repaire vnto this countrey and haue such conducts and guides, Parriners, vessels, Pen, and victuals as they shall stand in neede of.

It is also promised by Kneez Alfanas, and Peter Gregoriowich in the Emperours name, that if Benet Buder or any Englishman complaine, before, hinder in way of traffique, or otherwise goe about to discredit the worshipfull companie, and their doings, that therein they shall not bee harde, and the doers to bee punished, as in such cases they shalbee iudged to haue deserved.

Certaine persons graunted to be sent home into England that serued the company, and were practisers against them in that countrey.

A Commission giuen by vs Th. Randolph, Embassadour for the Queenes Maiestie in Russia, and Th. Bannister, &c. Vnto Ianes Bassendine,

James Woodcocke and Rich. Browne, the which Bassendine, Woodcocke, and Browne we appoint ioyntly together, and ayders, the one of them to the other, in a voyage of discouery to be made (by the grace of God) by them, for searching of the sea, and border of the coast, from the riuer Pechora, to the East wardes, as hereafter followeth Ann. 1588. The first of August.

Mynis, when your barke with all furniture is ready, you shall at the beginning of the yeere (as soone as you possible may) make your repaire to the Easterne part of the riuer Pechora, where is an Island called Dolgoieue, and from thence you shall passe to the Eastwardes alongest by the Sea coast of Hugorie: or the mayne lande of Pechora, and sayling alongst by the same coast, you shall passe within seuen leagues of the Island Vaigattes which is in the straight, almost halfe way from the coast of Hugorie, vnto the coast of Noua Zembla, which Island Vaigattes and Noua Zembla; you shall finde noted in your plat, therfore you shall not neede to discouer it: but proceede on alongest the coast of Hugorie, towards the riuer Obba.

There is a Bay betweene the saide Vaigattes, & the riuer Obba, that doth byte to the Southwardes, into the lande of Hugorie, in which Bay are two small riuers, the one called Cara Reca, the other Narmye, as in the paper of notes which are giuen to you here with, may appeare in the English merchanes, their lives where within our dominions to force them to our lawe of we permit all strangers, to Liffand, as they have done before June 20. in dictio. 12. The 3. Calan 17. Astracan 15.

ate letters at the dour.

writing of letters against the upon suspition of his dealing, was accustomed.

his seruiant at the Mosko, that lice against them that stole the be appointed them as they can without impeachment in his to the discovery of Cataya, they and guides, Parriners, bei in the Emperours name, the way of traffique, or otherwise s, that therein they shall not shall bee iudged to haue deuo serued the company, and here

Embassadour for the Vnto Iames Bassendine,

Woodcocke, and Browne we other, in a voyage of discoming of the sea, and borrdes, as hereafter fol-lft.

is ready, you shall at the begin-make your repaire to the Island called Dolgoiue, and alongest by the Sea coast of and sailing alongst by the same the Island Vaigates which is in the coast of Noua Zembla, which your plat, therefore you shall melugorie, towards the west da, that doth byte to the South waters, the one called Cara Re-you here with, may appeare in

the

the which Baye you shall not neede to spende any time for searching of it, but to direct your course to the river Ob, (if otherwise you be not constrained to keepe alongst the shoare,) and when you come to the River Ob, you shall not enter into it, but passe ouer, vnto the Easterne parts of the mouth of the said river.

And when you are at the Easterne part of the mouth of Obba Rea, you shall from thence passe to the Eastwards, alongst by the border of the said coast, describing the same in such perfect order, as you can best doe it. You shall not leaue the saide coaste or border of the land, but passe alongst by it, at least in sight of the same, vntill you haue sailed by it so farre to the Eastwards, and the time of the yeere so farre spent, that you doe thinke it time for you to returne with your barke to Alu-ter, which trauell may well be thyece or 400. leagues to the Eastwards of the Ob, if the sea doe reach so farre, as our hope is it doth: but and if you finde not the said coast and sea to trende so farre to the Eastwards, yet you shall not leaue the coast at any time, but proceede alongst by it, as it doth lie, leauing no part of it vnsearched, or seene, vnlesse it be some baye, or riuer, that you doe certainly know by the report of the people, that you shall finde in those borders, or else some certaine tokens, whereby you of your selues may iudge it to be so. For our hope is, that the said border of the land, and sea, both in thox space after you passe the Ob, incline East, and so to the Southwardes. And therefore we would haue no part of the land of your starreboord shoer, as you proceede in your discouerie, to be left vnbordered.

But and if the said border of land doe not incline so to the Eastwards, as we presuppose it, but that it doe prooue to incline, and trende to the Northwardes, and so to yone wch Noua Zembla, making the sea from Vaigats to the Eastwards but a baye: yet we will that you doe keepe alongst by the said coast, and so bring vs certaine report of that forme and manner of the same baye.

And if it doe so prooue to be a baye, and that you haue passed rounde about the same, and so by the trending of the land come backe vnto that part of Noua Zembla, that is against Vaigats, where as you may from that see the said Island Vaigats, if the time of the yeere will permit you, you shall from thence passe alongst by the said border of coast of Noua Zembla, to the Westwards, and so to search whether that part of Noua Zembla doe to yne with the land, that Sir Hugh Willoughbie discovered in anno 53. and is in 72. degrees, and from that part of Noua Zembla, 120. leagues to the Westwards, as your plat doth shewe it vnto you: and if you doe finde that land to yone with Noua Zembla, when you come to it, you shall proceede further along the same coast, if the time of the yeere will permit it, and thus you doe thinke there will be sufficient time for you to returne backe with your barke to winter, either at Pechora, or vnto Russia, at your discretion: for we referre the same to your good iudgements, trusting that you will lose no time, that may further further knowledge in this voyage.

And you, if it was the 20. of August, 56. ere the Serche spirit began to returne backe from her discouerie, to winter in Russia, and then she came from the Island Vaigats, being forthwith driven from thence, with an Easterly winde, and pee, and so she came into the river Dwina, and arriued at Colmogro, the 11. of September, 56. If the pee had not bene so much that yeere, as it was, in the Streights, on both sides of the Island Vaigats, they in the said pinnell, would that yeere haue discovered the partes that you are now to seeke: which thing (if it had pleased God) might haue bene done then: but God hath reserved it for some other. Which discouerie, if it may be made by you, it shall not onely proue profitable vnto you, but it will also purchase perpetuall fame and renowne, both to you, and our Countrey. And thus not doubting of your willing desire, and forwardnes to wards the same, we pray God to bless you, with a luckie beginning, fortunate success, and happily to ende the same. Amen.

Necessarie notes to be obserued, and followed in your discouerie, as hereafter followeth.

When your barke with all furniture, and necessaries, shall be fit ready by you to depart to the sea (if it be that you take your barke at S. Nicholas, or any part of Dwina Rea) you shall from thence, vnto the mouth of the river Pechora, (as your commission doth leade you) and as you passe by the coast all alongst, notwithstanding the plat that sheweth you the description of the said coast, from Dwina vnto Vaigats, yet you shall seeke by all the meanes that you can, to obtaine the same plat, vnto as many obseruations, as you possibly can doe: and these obseruations shall be as followeth.

1. First, that you doe obserue the latitude as often, and in as many places, as you may possibly by doe it, noting diligently the place where you doe so obserue the same.

2 Also that you doe diligently set with your compass, how  $\beta$  land doth lie from point to point, all along as you goe, and to vse your iudgements howe farre there may bee betwene eche of them.

3 Item, that you doe alwayes vse to drawe the proportion and byting of the land, as well the lying out of the portnes, and head landes, vnto the which you shall giue some apt names (at your discretion) as also the forme of the Bayes, and to make some marke in drawing the forme, and number of the same, where the high cliffes are, and where lowe lande is, whether sandie hills, or what soeuer: omitte not to note any thing, that may be sensible, and apparant to you, which may serue to any purpose.

4 In passing along by any coast, that you keepe your lead going often times, and sound at the least once every glasse, and oftener if you thinke good as occasion doeth serue, and note diligently the depth with the manner of the ground, and at euery time, howe farre the same sounding may be from the next voye to it: and howe the next voye or head land doth beare from you. And in the sea after you set off from your voye, you shall orderly at the end of euery foure glasse sound, and if you finde ground, note the depth and what ground, but if you can finde no ground, you shall also note in what depth you could finde no ground.

5 Also that you doe diligently obserue the flowing, & ebbing in euery place, and how the tides do set, which way the flood doth come, and how much water it doth high in euery place, and what voye the same tide hath to drawe a ship in an houre, as neere as you can iudge it.

6 Also that you doe seeke to obserue with the Instrument, which I deliuer you herewith, according as I taught you at Rose Island, the true platfoymes, and distaunces, in as many places as conveniently you may, so it serueth very aptly your purpose.

7 Also that you take with you paper and ynke, and keepe a continuall iournall, or remembrance day by day, of all such things as shall fall out worth the knowledge, not forgetting, or omitting to write it, and note it, that it may be shewed and read at your returne.

8 These oyers if you shall diligently obserue, it will bee easie for you to make a plaine, and perfect description of your discovery, and so shall your notes bee sufficient to enforme that which is looked for at your handes. But withall you may not forgette, to note as manie things as you can learne and vnderstande by the reporte of auncient people whatsoeuer they be, so that it appertaine any way to our desires. And thus the Lord God prosper your voyage. Amen.

Certaine letters in verse, written by Master George Turberuile out of Muscouia, which went as Secretarie thither with Master Tho. Randolph, her Maiesties Embassadour to the Emperour 1568, to certaine friends of his in London, describing the manners of the Countrey, and people.

To his especiall friend Master Edward Dancie.

MY Dancie deere, when I recount within my breast, My London friends, and wonder-makes, and thee above the rest, I feele a thousand fits of deepe and deadly woe,
 To thinke that I from land to sea, from blisse to bale wd goe, I left my native soyle, full like a rechelesse man, And wasquainted of the doot, among the Russies ran:
 A people palling rude, to biers vile inclinde, Folke fitt to be of Bacchus trayne, so quaffing in their kinde, Drinke in their whole selling, the pot is all their pride,
 The sobrest head doeth once a day stand neyfull of a guide.
 If he to banquet bid his friends, he will not thinke On them at dinner to bestowe a dozen kinde of drinke: Such licour as they haue, and as the countrey giues, But churly two, one callon Kuas, whereby the Mousike liues, Small ware and water like, but somewhat taste in taste,
 The rest is Meade of home made, whereby their lipps they batte, And if he goe into his neighbour as a guest, be same.

and doth lie from point to point, there may bee betwene eche of bytyng of the land, as well the ill giue some apt names (at your in bytyng the forme, and by de is, whether sandie hilles, or and apparant to you, which may ing often times, and sound, as the doeth serue, and noce diligently we larte the same sounding may woch beare from you. And in the f every foure glasses found, and if n finde no ground, you shall also in every place, and how the tides high in every place, and where I can iudge it.

which I deliuer you herewith, accomplices, in as many places as con-contin uall iournall, or remem-berholde, not forgetting, or omitting your returne.

the easie for you to make a platte, notes bee sufficient to answer I may not forgette, to note as reporde of anie people wharsoeuer the Lord God prosper your voy-

George Turberuile out by Master Tho. Randolph, certaine friends of his in London, and people.

by Dancie.

above the rest:

to goe.

by the kinde.

uide.

her.

e lines.

es they batt.

He cares for liue or deate, if so his vynter be of the best.
No wonder though they vse such vile and heauy trade, With with the hachet and the hand, their chiefe god be made.
Their Idoles haue their heartes, on God they neuer call, Unless it be (Nichola Bough) that hangs against the wall, The house that hath no god, or paynted saint within,
Is not to be reioyced too, that rooffe is full of sinne, Besides their priuate gods, in open places stand Their crosses vnto which they crooche, and blesse themselves with hand, Deuoutly do lome they durke, with sojehood to the ground, Was neuer more decreit in ragges, and greasse garments found, Almost the meanest man in all the countrie rides,
The woman eke against our vsle, her crooting boye bestride, In sundry colours they both men, and women goe, In buskins all, that money haue on buskins to bestowe, Eche woman hanging back a ring within her eare, Which all of auncient vsle, and some of very pybe doe weare, Their gate is very braue, their countenance wise and sadde,
And yet they follow fleshy lustes, their trade of liuing badde, It is no shame at all accounted to defile Anothers bedde, they make no care, their soules to coule, Is not the meanest man in all the land but hee,
To buy her paynted colours doth allow his wife a fee, Wherewith she deckes her selfe, and dyes her rauenie skine, She pranks and paines her smoakie face, both browe, lippe, cheeke, and chime, Yea those that honest are, if any such there bee Within the lande, doe vse the like: a man may plainly see Upon some womens cheekes the paynting how it lyes, In plaister laye for that too thicke, her face the harlot bies:
But such as skillfull are, and cunning Dames indeede, By daily practise doe it well, yea sure they doe excede, They lay their colours so, as he that is full wise, May easily be deceiued therein, if he doe trust his eyes, I not a little muse, what madnes makes them paine Their faces, woying how they keepe the stoore by meere constrain.
For selborne when, unless on Church or marriage day A man shall see the Dames aboade, that are of best aray, The Ruffie meanes to reape the profit of her pride,
And so he metes her to be sure, she lye by no mans side, Thus much friend Dancie, I did meane to write to thee, To let thee weete in Russia land, what men and women bee.
Hereafter I perhaps of other things will write To thee, and other of my friends, which I shall see with sight:
And other stuffe besides, which true reposit shall tell, I praye while I ende my louing lines, and bid thee now farewell,

To Spencer.

If I should now forget, or not remember thee, Thou Spencer mightest a soule rebuke, and shame impute to mee, For I to open the world did loue thee passing well, And thou wert he at parture, whom I loathde to bid farewell, And as I went thy friend, so I continue still,
No better prooffe thou canst then this desire of true good will,
I doe remember well when needes I should away,
And that the Post would be licence vs, no longer time to stay: Thou wrought me by the fill, and holding fast my hand, Durst craue of me to send thee netes, and how I liked the land,

It is a sandie soile, no very fruitfull waie, Hope waile and woodde growes there are, then clothes fit for graine, Yet graine there growing is, which they wintely take,
 And cut or eare the corne be ripe, they mowe it on a flake.
 And laying sheafe by sheafe, their barnes fit they buy,
 They make the greater haste, for feare the frost the corne destroy.
 For in the winter time, so glacie is the ground, As neither grasse, nor other graine, in pastures may be found.
 In coons the cattell then, the sheepe, the colt, the cowe, Fall by his bed, the spowlike then, a lodging doth allowe, Whom he with fodder feeds, and holds as deere as life:
 And thus they weare the winter both the spowlike, and his wife.
 Seuen months the winter dures, the glacie it is so great,
 As it is spayd to be turne, his ground to sowe his wheate.
 The bodie eke that die, vnburied lie they then, Laid up in coffins made of fice, as well the poorest men, As those of greater state: the cause is lightly found,
 For that in winter time, they can not come to breake the ground.
 And wood so plenteous is, quize throughout all the land As rich, and poore, at time of death assur'd of coffins stand, Perhaps thou muste murch, how this may stand with reason, That bodie dead can vncorrupt abide so long a season.
 Take this for certaine troche, as soone as heate is gone,
 The force of colde the bodie binds as hard as any stone, Without offence at all to any living thing:
 And so they lye in perfect state, till next returne of springe.
 Their beastes be like to ours, as farr as I can see For shape, and thewe, but somewhat lesse of bulke, and bone they be:
 Of watrish taste, the flesh not firme, like English beefe,
 And yet it serues them very well, and is a good releeve:
 Their sheepe are very small, sharpe singled, handfull long, Great store of fowle on sea and land, the moorish reedes amonge.
 The greatnes of the store, doth make the prices lesse, Besides in all the land they knowe, not how good meate to beeste.
 They vse neither broach nor spit, but when the fowle they beate, They put their virtuales in a pan, and so they bake their meate.
 No pepper to be had, no dices but of wood, No vse of trenchers, cups cut out of byrche are very good,
 They vse but wooden spoones, which hanging in a case, Each spowlike at his girdle ties, and thinks it no disgrace, With whicles two or three, the better man the more,
 The cheefest Russies in the land, with spoone and knives doe goe.
 Their bodie are not huge of building, but they say, They plant them in the loftiest ground, to shift the snowe away.
 Which in the winter time, eache where full thicke they lie, Which makes them haue the more desire, to fet their houses high, No stone worke is in vse, their roofes of eakens be,
 One linked in another fall, their walls are all of tree, Of masts both long, and large, with molle put in betweene,
 To keepe the force of weather out, if neuer earth haue seene A gross deuile so good, and on the rooffe they lay The burthen barkes, to rid the raine, and sudden stormes away.
 In every roome a stone, to serue the winter turne,
 Of wood they haue sufficient store, as much as they can burne, They haue no English glasse, of slices of a rocke Right fluda, they their windowes make, that English glasse doth make.
 They cut it very thine, and sowe it with a chepe In yecle order like to panes, to serue their present neede.

No other glasse good faith, doth giue a better light:
 And sure the rocke is nothing rich, the coit is very slight.
 The chiefest place is that, where hangs the god by it,
 The owner of the house himselfe doth neuer sit, Unless his better come, to whom he peelds the seat,
 The stranger bending to the god, the ground with hys must beat.
 And in that very place which they most sacred deeme,
 The stranger lyes: a token that his guest he doth esteeme.
 Where he is wont to haue a beares skinn for his bed,
 And must in stead of pillow, clap his saddle to his head.
 In Russia other stit there is not to be had,
 For where the bedding is not good, the boallsters are but bad, I nused very much, what made them so to lie,
 Which in thez countrey do wne is rise, and feathers out of criē: Unless it be because the countrey is so hard,
 They feare by nicenesse of a bed theyz bodies would be mar'd.
 I wisse thez oft witch his, same that I stood in feare Thou wouldst haue loathed to haue layd thy limmes vpon a beare, As I and Beassys wd, that was my mate in bed:
 And yet (we thanke the God of heauen) we both right well haue sped, Loe thus I make an end: none other newes to thee,
 But that the countrey is too colde, the people beastly bee.
 I wite not all I know, I touch but heere and there,
 For if I should, my pen would pinch, and eke offend I feare, Who so shall read this verse, coniecture of the rest,
 And thinke by reason of our trade, that I do thinke the best,
 But if no traffike were, then could I boldly pen
 The hardnesse of the soile, and eke the manners of the men, They say the Lions paw giues iudgement of the beast:
 And so may you deeme of the great, by reading of the least.

To Parker.

My Parker, paper, pen, and inke were made to write,
 And idle heads, that little do, haue leisure to indite: Wherefoze, respecting these, and thine assured loue, If I would write no newes to thee, thou mightst my pen repproue.
 And thence forwne thus hath thou'd my shippe on thoz,
 And made me seeke another realme vntoene of me before:
 The manners of the men I purpose to de clare, And other priuate pointes besides, which strange and greazou are.
 The Ruffie men are round of bodies, fullly fatte, The greater part with bellies bigge that ouerhang the wakte, Flat headen for the most, with faces nothing faire, But by tone, by reason of the shoue, and closenesse of the aire:
 It is theyz common vse to haue of els to sheare Theyz heads, for none in all the land long lolling locks doth weare, Unless perhaps he haue his soueraigne pynce displeas'd, For then he neuer cuts his hatre, but will he be appeas'd.
 A certaine signe to know who in displeasur be,
 For euery man that bitwos his head, will say, Loe this is he.
 And during all the time he lets his locks to grow, Dares no man for his life to him a face of friendship shoue.
 Theyz garments be not gay, nor handsome to the eye, A cap aloft theyz heads they haue, that standeth very hye, Which colpacke they do terme, They weare no ruffes at all:
 The best haue collers set with pearle, which they Rubasca call.
 Theyz shirts in Russia long, they woike them downe before,

And on the sleeves with coulered silks, two inches good and more.
 A lofe they spirits they weare, a garment iacket wile Right on oriadka, and about his burke waste he eyes His pouches, which in stead of better heeres bee:
 Of linnen cloth that garment is, no coypiere is to see.
 A paye of yamen stockes to keepe the colde a way, Within his boots the Ruffie weares, the heeles they underlay With clouting clamps of Steele sharpe pointed at the toes, And ouer all a suba furd, and thus the Ruffies goes.
 Well burned is the sube, accordyng to his state, Some silke, of siluer other some, but those of poozeff rate Do weare no subes at all, but gresser gounes to sight, That reacheth downe beneath the calfe, and that Armacha sight:
 These are the Ruffies robes, The richest vse to ride From place to place, his seruant runnes, and followes by his side.
 The callacke beares his felt, to force a way the raine:
 Their bydles are not very hiane, their saddles are but plaine.
 No bits but snaffles all, of birch their saddles bee, Much fashioned like the Scotch seats, broad flacks to keepe the knee From sweating of the horse, the pannels larger farre And broader be then ours, they vse short stirrups for the warre:
 For when the Ruffie is pursued by cruell foe, He rides away, and suddenly betakes him to his hoe,
 And bends me but about in saule as he sits,
 And therewithall amidst his race, his following foe he hits.
 They bowes are very short, like Turkie bowes outright, Of sinowes made with birchen barke, in running maner dight.
 Small arrowes, cruell heads, that fell and forke'd bee, Which being shot from our those bowes, a cruell way will see.
 They seldome vse to shoo their horse, unless they vse to ride.
 In post upon the frozen fluds, then cause they shall not slide, He sets a slender calke, and so he rides his way.
 The horses of the countrey go good foure score verils a day,
 And all without the spurre, once picke them and they skippe, But go not forward on their way, the Ruffie hath his whyppe To rappe him on the ribbes, for though all bootes bee, Yet shall you not a paye of spurres in all the countrey see.
 The common game is chesse, almost the simplest will Both giue a checke and eke a mate, by practise comes they skill.
 Againe the dice as fall, the poozeff rogges of al Will sit them downe in open field, and there to gaming fall.
 Their dice are very small, in fashion like to thole Which we do vse, he takes them up, and ouer thumbe he thowes Not shaking them a whit, they call suspicioulike, And yet I deeme them bold of art that dining most applie.
 At play when siluer lacke goes saddle, horse and all,
 And ech thing els worth siluer waltes, although the price be small, Because thou louest to play friend Parker other while,
 I with thee there the weary day, with dining to be guile, But thou weart better fare at home, I will it well,
 And wouldest be loath, among such lawes so long a time dwell.
 Then iudge of vs thy friends, what kinde of life we had,
 That nere the frozen pole to waste our weary dayes were glad,
 In such a sauage soile, where lawes do beare no way, But all is at the king his will, to saue or els to slay, And that sans cause God woe, if so his minde be such,
 But what meane I with kings to deale, we ought no saines to touch, Concrue the rest your selfe, and deeme what times they lead,

Where lust is law, and subjects liue continually in dread, And where the best estates haue none assurance good Of lands, of liues, nor nothing failes vnto the next of blood, But all of custome doeth vnto the prince redoune,
 And all the whole reuenuer comes vnto the king his crowne.
 Good saith I see thee muse at what I tell thee now, But true it is, no choice, but all at princes pleasure bow.
 So Tarquine ruled Rome as thou rememberest well, And what his fortune was at last, I know thy selfe canst tell.
 Where will in common weale doeth beare the onely sway,
 And lust is law, the prince and realme must needs in time decay, The strangeness of the place is such for sundry things I see,
 As if I would I can not write ech private point to thee.
 The colbe is rare, the people rude, the prince so full of pride, The realme is boyed with moonks and nunes, and priests on euery side:
 The maners are so Tuckie like, the men so full of guile, The women wanton, temples stufte with toles that be vile The seats that sacred ought to be, the customes are so quaint, As if I would describe the whole, I teare my penne would faint.
 In summe, I say I neuer saw a prince that so did eaigne, Nor people so beset with satins, yet all but vile and vaine, While Irish are as cruell as the Russies in thepp kinde, Hard choice which is the best of both ech bloody, rude and blinde, If thou be wise, as wise thou art, and wilt be rude by me, Live still at home, and rouet not those barbarous coasts to see,
 No good befall a man that seeks, and findes no better place, No cruell customes to be leard, where God bestowes no grace, And truelie ill they do deserue to be helou'd of God,
 That neither loue nor stand in a we of his alured rod:
 Which though be long, yet plagues at last the vile and headly foie Of sinfull twighes, that all in vice po place they chieftest spoie, When friend Parker, if thou list, so knowe the Russies well, Co Sigmundus booke repays, who all the truth can tell:
 For he long earle in message went vnto that savage king, Sent by the Pole, and true report in ech respect did bring.
 To him I recommend my selfe, to ease my penne of paine;
 And now at last do wish thee well, and bid fare well againe.

The fourth voyage into Persia, made my M. Arthur Edwards

Agent, Iohn Sparke, Laurence Chapman, Christopher Faucet, and

Richard Pingle, in the yeere 1568, declared in this letter written from Casbin in Persia, by the foresayd Laurence Chapman to a shipfull merchant of the companie of Russia in London.

Anno Domini 1569. Aprill 28.

Whyspfull sir, my dutie alwayes rememberd, and your prosperous health, and good successe in all your affaires wished, to the glory of God, and your owne hearts desire, &c. May it please you to vnderstand that your Agent M. Arthur Edwards & we departed from Yeraslaue in July 1568, & the 14 of August arrived at our poxe called Bilbill, with your shipp the Grace of God, & the goods in her in good safete, God be thanked for it, finding there neither y people to tra-hys to ayd vs for the bringing of her in, & unloading of the goods, nor yet so obedient to the Shaughs ptiualge, as the worshipfull company haue bene in toymen. Our goods brought vpon land, we were compelled to open and sell as they would set the price, or otherwise it would haue bene worse for vs. Being so satisfied to thepp contentment, we were speedily ayded with camels by the prince Erasbecke Sultan his appointment, to carry our goods to Shamakle, to which place we attay-ned the first of September, finding it so thowghly furnished with all maner of commodities by occasion of our late coming, and by such as came before vs, that no man would aske to buy any one piece

These arrived at Bilbill the 14 of August 1568.

Prince Erasbecke.

When

piece of karkis of vs, and lping then the space of one whole moneth before your Agent Aretur Edwardes would disperse vs abroad with the goods, such as came out of Russia afterwards, but thoughte they goods to that and other places, and spoiled those sales we might haue made, being sent abroad in time convenient, being no little hinderance to the worshipfull, as also great grieue unto vs to see. To conclude, though our daily calling upon him, he bent himselfe for Casbin, to king with him the greatest summe of the goodes, and two of the worshipfull seruants, to witte, John Spacke and my selfe, to helpe and procure the better sale for the same: and leaving at Shamakie Christopher Fauret and Richard Pingle with thye hundred and fiftie pieces of karkis in theyr hands, supposed to be solde there or in Arrash before he should be able to make his returne from Casbin, which so farre toye as I can vnderstand, lie for the greatest part vsolde. And being upon our way, at a certayne towne called Ardowill, we chanced to barter nine pieces of karkis with those merchants for fourescope and foure batemans of cynamom, selling the karkis at one hundred and fiftie shaghs the piece.

Christopher Fauret and Richard Pingle.

And being at that present not farre from Teueris, called the principall place in this countrey for ventering of cloth or karkis, by much increas I perswaded your Agent to send thither to your what might be done, and receiving from him foure and fiftie pieces of karkis, as also his commission for sale of the same, I proceeded on that voyage my selfe, and one Colmach in company with me, finding in that place great store of boade cloth and karkis, thoughte thither, some part by the Turkes, who be resident there, some by the Armenians, who fetch them at Aleppo, and some by the towellmen, who traueill unto Venice, and there buy them, so that no man offered me one penie more then a hundred and fortie shaghs for a karkie: and hauing speciall commission and charge from your Agent not to stay there aboute the space of seven dayes after my arrivall there, but to repaie to Casbin with all speed, and furthermore, hauing regard to keepe by the price of the worshipfull commodities, according to theyr desire, I found meanes to barter them away for spices, such as were there to be had, neither in goodnesse nor yet in price to my content: nevertheless, considering the colde sales which were there, as well for your karkis, as also the botwines, that Ormuz way was shut up by occasion that the Indians do warre against them, which is true in deed: and againe the desire that the worshipfull hath to haue such commodities bought, I thoughte it necessarie to buy them, the prices and weight wherof appeareth at large by my account sent to the worshipfull, and is, as I thinke, the whole summe of spices bought at this time.

War against the Portugals
gale at Or-muz.

The gouernour of Grozyne his warehouse.

It chanced me in that place to meet with the gouernours merchant of Grozyne, who was not a little desirous to bargaen with me for a hundred pieces of karkis for his maister called Lewontie, and offering me so good handes for the payment of the money or like to the merchants contentment by on the deliuerie of them, as in any place within all this countrey is to be had: and offering me besides his own letter in the behalfe of his maister, that no custome should be demanded for the same, and the obtaining also at his maisters hand as large a priuledge for the worshipfull to trauell into all parts of his dominion, as the Shaghs had giuen them, and bearing good repute made of him by the Armenians also, and that he was a Christian, I was much more the willing to bargaen with him, and solde him a hundred pieces for a hundred and threescore shaghs a piece, to be paid to the merchant in Grozyne either in money or like to his contentment, within thre dayes after the deliuerie of the karkis there, hauing a band of him made by the Spetroopolitanes owne hand, for the performance of the same, which is as sure as any heere is to be deuised: and upon the same I sent my Colmach from me backe to Shamakie, with such goodes as I bought at Teueris, and to the end he might cause the worshipfull seruants there to see this bargaen accomplished. At whose end uall there, as I do perceiue, the captaine would not accomplish his bargaen to take them, but saye he hath no need of them: such is the constancie of all men in this countrey, with whomsoever you shall bargaen. If the wares be bought, and they doe mislike it afterwards, they will bring it to gaine, and compell you to deliuer the money for it againe, regarding the Shaghs letters, which manifesteth the contrary, as a straw in the wind: by meanes wherof, the worshipfull may know to whether all be true that hath bene written of this countrey people or not.

The general inconstancy in the merchants and dealers of these parts.

I am informed by all the brokers in Teueris, that the way once open to Ormuz, from whence cometh no such store of spices as the worshipfull doth looke for, that heere will be put a way in Teueris, some for money, and other some for barter, to the number of thre hundred or foure hundred pieces of karkis, being in coulers and goodnesse to the example here sent you, the rest of the karkis to make them up a thousand, and boade clothes to the summe of a hundred, be as many as will be put away peerey in this countrey, so farre as yet I can perceiue.

The trade betweene the Venetians and the Armenians and howe easie
it is to be broken.

To breake the trade betwixt the Venetians and the whole company of the Armenians, it is not possible, vnlesse the worshipfull will finde some meanes to receiue them peerey to the number of

before your Agent Arthur Chouout of Russia afterwards, but les we might haue made, being two shipfull, as also great griebe bene himselfe for Casbin, to two shipfull seruantes, to witte, of the same: and leauing at Sha-byed and fittie pieces of hartes ould be able to make his returne greatest part vsolde. And he-to to barter nine pieces of hartes nom, selling the hartes at one chappell place in this country for gent to send thither to your what hartes, as also his commission for Colmach in company with me, pughe thither, some part by the th them at Aleppo, and some by so that no man offered me one gauting speciall commission and ten dayes after my arrivall there, regard to keepe by the price of meanes to barter them away for in price to my content: neuertheer hartes, as also the boerwes, re against them, which is true in commodities bought, I thought at large by my account sent to ght at this time.

one of Grozyne, who was not a his maister called Leonide, and the merchantes contentment up-is to be had: and offering me ould be demanded for the same, of the two shipfull to trauell to bearing good report made of him more the willing to barger with atugs a piece, so he paid to the with in three dayes after the deropolitanes of one hand, for the dised: and upon the same I sent I bought at Teueris, and to the n accomplished. At whose and barger to take them, but sayd country, with whomsoever you ertwardes, they will hysk it arding the Shabwogs letters, s whereof, the woysipfull may people of nor.

open to Ormuz, from thence that here will be put a way in of three hundred or foure hundred re sent you, the rest of the hartes pouyed, be as many as will be any of the Armenians, it is not them pearly to the number of 100 catters of mules lading, and deliuer them for the same one third part money, the rest cloth and hartes fitted in coulers meet for the country: the examples, as abouesaid, are sent into you.

As Amadia five dayes journey from Teueris, grow abundance of gales, which are brought by pearly by the Venetians, and be solde there for two bisbes the Teueris bateman, which as your Agent here sayth, maketh five pound English weight, but I doubt it will not so be procured, nevertheless it is supposed much good will be done by buying of them: which might at this present haue partie bene pproved, if so be that some could doe but halfe that which hath bene written.

Touching byugges, I finde many as well at Teueris, as also in Casbin, but the goodnest nothing like to such as be brought into England out of other places: and the price is so high, that small gaine will be had in buying of them: albeit, if I had bene furnished with money, as I might haue bene, if some would, I would haue bought some, to the end the goodnest of them might haue bene scene in England. At my coming to Casbin, I found no manner of sales of any commoditie made, but all lying there whole, and newes giuen out (as your Agent saith) that the Shabwog would buy all such commodities as he had, and giue him like the spices for the same: but by report the Shabwog neuer took cloth into his treasure all the dayes of his life, and will not now beginne: his whole trade is in raw silke, which he selleth alwayes for money to the Armenians and Turkes, and such other as use to buy it: thus hoping of that which is not like to be had, he hath giuen out the time, not sending to any other places: by meanes whereof the woysipfull goodes be vsolde to this day to the great hinderance, which I for my part am not a little sorry to see.

Babylon is from hence fiftene dayes journey, whereas by true report, be great store of dates, and solde for a biske the bateman, the commoditie fit for England: and the place so nere unto us, might easily haue bene knowne, if he, whose needs and sayings differ much, had bene willing to the same. Calhan also is but seven dayes journey from hence, and a place by report, where most store of spices be at all times to be had, ouer and aboue any place in this country: it could not be gained by him to be scene and pproved at this time: if this be losse to the woysipfull, referre it to the want of one which can do that which he speaketh in words.

To trauell in this country, is not onely miserable and vncomfortable, for lacke of townes and villages to harbour in when night commeth, and to refresh men with wholesome victualles in time of need, but also such scarcitie of water, that sometime in three dayes journey together is not to be found any waye fit for man or beast to drinke, besides the great danger we stand in for robing by these in fiuels, who do account it remission of sinnes, to wash theyr hands in the blood of one of vs. Better it is theer to continue a begger in England during life, then to remaine a rich merchant tenen yeeres in this country, as some shall well finde at theyr coming hither.

By commandment of the Agent also, I went to Gillan, as well to see what harbor was there for your shippe, as also to vnderstand what commoditie is there best solde, and for what quantitie.
I found the way from hence so dangerous and troublesome, that with my penne I am not able to not: it into you: no man trauelleth from hence thither, but such poore people as need constraineth to say Rice, for theyr reliefe to liue vpon, and they lay not aboue twentie batemans vpon a catter, and it peth no lower then the skirts of the saddle, and he escapeth very hardly that commeth there with the same.

The towne of Layghone, which was the chiefest place in all that land, haue I serue, and Lan-groe and Rosare also, which be now lately ouerrunne by the Shabwog and his power, and be so spoiled, and the people so robbed, that not one of them is able to buy one hartie. The rest commodities there to be bought, is rawe silke, and is solde in the Summer time for eight and thirtie batwogs the Layghone bateman, which is little aboue fortie pound weight, and for ready money:
also there is to be had what store of Allome you will, and solde there for one biske the Teueris bateman.

In these partes be many Turkie merchants resident, which giue an outward shew, as though they were glad of our coming hither, but secretly they be our mortall enemies, searching by all meanes to hinder our sales, because we should the sooner giue ouer our trade thither, while in possest of time I hope will grow to better perfection. They wish vs to go to Hallape with the rest of our commodities vsolde, where they say we shall haue good entertainment in spite of the great number of Venetians which be there resident, and the custome but two in the hundred, and our harties to be solde presently, had we neuer so many, for twelue duckets, which makes of this money one hundred five and fiftie shabwogs: but by such as know the place, market & custome, Babylon is dayes journey from Calbut.

His voyage to Gilan.

The matter of the Turkish merchants.

it is reported to vs credibly to the contrary, and that such hartles as ours be are not solde for above eight buckets there: the custome thirtie in the hundred, & moze, that no place in the world is so well furnished with good cloth, and hartles, & of so haue couler, as that place is, supposing it to be craftily purposed of them, to bring vs into trouble, which God defend vs from.

The prices of Spices.

The prices of Spices be these, at this present imbaned by reason the way is shut to Dmyer, which when God shall send open, I purpose (God willing) to see, and at my returns to aduertise the most happy what benefite is there to be had in all points, so neere as I can learne: Pepper 25 hatwights the Teueris bateman: Cloves 50 hatwights. Long pepper 25 hatwights. Saces large 50 hatwights. Ginger 24 hatwights, ready money all, or els looke not vpon them. And the best sort of rawe silde is solde for 60 hatwights the Teueris bateman. Thus for want of further matter to enlarge, I end in this time, beseeching God to preserve you in continual health.

By your obedient seruant Laurence Chapman.

Notes concerning this fourth voyage into Persia, begunne in the moneth of Iulie 1568, gathered by M. Richard Wlles from the mouth of M. Arthur Edwards which was Agent in the same.

When he came first to the Sophies presence, at his court in Casbin, by bringing his interpreter with him, and standing far off, the Sophie (sitting in a seat royall with a great number of his noble men about him) had him come neere, and that thit, when he came so neere him that he might haue touched him with his hand. Then the first demand that he asked him, was from what countrey he came: he answered, that he came from England. Then asked he of his noble men, who knew any such countrey? But when Edwards saw that none of them had any intelligence of that name, he named it Ingiltterra, as the Italians call England. Then one of the noble men said London, meaning thereby London, which name is better knownen in farre countries out of Christenhome, then is the name of England. When Edwards heard him name London, he said that that was the name of the chiefe citie of England, as was Teueris of the chiefe citie of Persia. He asked him many thinges moze, as of the realme of England, maruelling that it should be an Island, of so great riches and power, as Edwards declared vnto him, of the riches & abundance of our merchandize, as he further understood by our traffike in Moscouia, and other countries. He demanded also many thinges of the Queenes Maiestie, and of the customes and lawes of the realme: saying oftentimes in his owne language, Bara colla (that is to say) Well said. He asked also many thinges of King Philip, & of his wars against the Turke at Malta. Then he demanded of him what was the chiefe cause of his relox into his realme. And being certified that it was for the trade of merchandize, he asked what kinde of merchandize he could bring thither. Such (said he) as the Venetian merchants do, which dwelling in our country in the citie of London, send to Venice, & from thence into Turkie by Halepo and Tripoli in Syria, from whence, as by the second and third hands, with great charges of many customes and other thinges thereunto pertaining, they are at the length brought into your countrey and citie of Persia. What merchandize are those? sayd the Sophie. Edwards answered, that they were great abundance of fine hartles, of broad clothes, of all soyes and costlers, as scarlets, violets, and other of the finest cloth of all the world. Also that the Venetians brought out of England, not onely such clothes ready made, but furthermore great plenty of fine wooll to mingle with theyr woolls, of which they could not otherwise make fine cloth: affirming that there went out of England yearly that wayes, above two hundred thousand hartles, and as many broad clothes, beside fine wooll and other merchandize, beside also the great abundance of like clothes, the which were carryed into Spaine, Barbarie, & diuers other countries. The Sophie then asked him by what meanes such merchandize might be brought into Persia. Right well he (said he) by the way of Moscouia, with moze safetie and in much shorter time then the Venetians can bring them: first from England to Venice, and from thence into Persia, by the way of Turkie. And therefore if it shall please your Maiestie to grant vs free passage into all your dominions, with such priuileges as may appertaine to the safe gard of our liues, goods, and merchandize, we will furnish your countries with all such merchandize, and other commodities, in shorter time, and better cheape then you may haue the same at the Turks hands. This talke and much moze was betwene the Sophie and Edwards for the space of two houres, all which thinges liked him so well, that shortly after he granted to the saide Arthur Edwards other priuileges, for the trade of merchandize into Persia, Londra.

London.

The Venetian
aria traffike
in England.

ours be are not solde for above no place in the world is so well place is, supposing it to be traffrom.

the way is shut to Cyprus, which my returne to advertise the way an learne: Pepper 25 shillings gins. Spaces large 50 shillings.
And the best sort of raw silk is her matter to enlarge, I and my our obedient servant Lawrence Chapman.

Persia, begunne in Richard Willes
which was

ture in Casbin, bying his inchie (sitting in a seat royall with them come nere, and that they ched him with his hand. Then at countrey he came: he answered of his noble men, who knew any intelligence of the name, of the noble men said London, countries out of Christendome, ondro, he said that that was the tie of Persia. He asked him maould be an Island, of so great abundance of our merchandize, berries. He demanded also many the realme: saying oftentimes shed also many things of king-ded of him what was the chief of the trade of merchandize, he said he) as the Venetian mer-to Venice, & from thence into nd and third hands, with great they are at the length brought e 3 sayd the Sophie. Edwards othes, of all sorts and colours, that the Venetians brought great plenty of fine wooll to me cloth: affirming that there no harkles, and as many how abundance of like clothes, the The Sophie then asked him the well he (said he) by the way enetians can bying them: first Turkie. And therefore if it ions, with such priviledges as we will furnish your coun-re, and better cheape then you was betweene the Sophie and so well, that shortly after he e of merchandize into Persia, all

all written in A pure and gold letters, and delivered unto the lord keeper of the Shoppie his great seale. The lord keeper was named Coche Calisay, who sayd that when the Shaugh (that is the king of persia) did like to seale any letters, that last priviledge should be sealed and delivered to Lawrence Chapman. In this priviledge is our principall article for servants of merchants: That if the Agent to perceiue that upon their nauyable doings, they would become Busioy men, that then the Agent wheresoever he shall find any such servant or seruants, to take them and put them in prison, and no person to keepe them or maintaine them. This article was granted in respect of a rubbish among the Persians, being Spahumetans, whose maner is friendly to receive and wel enertaine both with gifts and living, all such Christians, as forsaking their religion, will become of the religion of the Persians. In somuch that before this priviledge was granted, there was great occasion of nauyghtie servants to deceiue and rob their masters, that under the colour of professing that religion, they might live among them in such safetie, that you might haue no lawe agaynst them, either to punish them or to recover your goods at their hands, or elsewhere. For before the Shophie (whom they say to be a marvelous wise and gracious prince) seemed to fauour out nation, and to graunt them such priviledges, the people abused them very much, and so hated them, that they would not touch them, but reuiled them, calling them Cafars and Gawars, which is, infidels or infidellers. But after they saw how greatly the prince fauoured them, they had them afterward in great reuerence, and would kill their hands, and vse them very friendly. For before they took it for no wrong to rob them, betray them, beare false witness against them, and such mer-chandizes as they had bought or sold, make them take it againe, and change it as often as themselves. And if any stranger by chance had killed one of them, they would haue the life of two for one, and for the debts of any stranger, would take the goods of any other of the same nation, with many other such like abuses, in maner vnknowen to the prince, before the complaints of our men made unto him for reformation of such abuses: which were the cause that no merchant strangers of contrary religion, durst come into his dominions with their commodities, which might be great to the profit of him and his subiects.

The Articles of the second priuiledge deliuered to Lawrence Chapman, which are to be annexed vnto the former priuiledge.

- 10 Item that the merchants haue free libertie, as in their first priuiledge, to goe vnto Gillan, and all other places of his dominions, now or hereafter when occasion shall be giuen.
- 11 Item, if by misfortune any of their ships should byake, or fall vpon any part of his dominions on the sea coast, his subiects to helpe with all speed to saue the goods and to be deliuered to any of the said merchants that liueth: or otherwise to bee kept in safetie vntill any of them come to demand them.
- 12 Item, if any of the said merchants depart this life in any citie or to wone, or on the high way, his gouernours there to see their goods safely kept, and to bee deliuered to any other of them that shall demaund them.
- 13 Item, the said merchants to take such camell men as they themselues will, being countrey people, and that no Killisell Bath doe let or hinder them. And the said owners of the camels to bee bound to and weere them such goods as they shall receive at their hands, and the camell men to stand to the losse of their camels or horses.
- 14 Item more, that the said carriers do demaund no more of them, then their agreement was to pay them.
- 15 Item more, if they be at a price with any carriers, & haue giuen earnest, the Camel men to see they keepe their promise.
- 16 Item, if any of the said merchants be in feare to trauell, to giue them one or more to goe with them, and see them in safetie with their goods to the place they will goe vnto.
- 17 Item, in all places, so far, in all cities, townes or villages on the high way, his subiects to giue them house roome, and victuals for their money.
- 18 Item, the said merchants may in any place where they shall thinke best, build or buy any house or houses to their owne vse. And no person to molest or trouble them, and to stand in any Carauan where they will, or shall thinke good.

The commodities which the merchants may haue by this trade into Persia, are thought to be great, and may in time perhaps be greater then the Portugals trade into the East Indies, for much as by the way of Persia into England, the reuerne may be made euery yeere once: where
as

as the Portugals make the retourne from Calcut but once in two yeeres, by a long and dangerous voyage all by sea: for whereas the cite and Island of Ormus, lying in the gulfes of Persia, is the most famous marke towne of all East India, whither all the merchandises of India are brought, the same may in shorter time and more safely, be brought by land and rivers through Persia, even unto the Caspian sea, and from thence by the countreys of Bullia or Spontroua by rivers, even unto the cite of Yeraslaue, and from thence by land a hundred and foure score miles to Vologa, and from thence againe all by water, even unto England.

The merchandises which be had out of Persia for the retourne of wares, are like of all sorts and colours, both rawe and wrought. Also all manner of spices and drugs, pearles and precious stones, like wise carpets of diuers sorts, with diuers other rich merchandises. It was told me of them that came last from Persia, that there is more like brought into some one cite of Persia, then is of cloth brought into the cite of London. Also that one village of Armenia named Gilgar, doth carie yearly five hundred, and sometime a thousand mules laden with like to Halepo in Soris of Turkie, being foure daies iourney frō Tripoli, where the Venetians haue their continual abiding, and send from thence like which they retourne for English habites and other clothes into all partes of Christendome.

The maner how the Christians become Bufor men, and forsake their religion.

I haue noted here before that if any Christian will become a Bufor man, that is, one that hath forsaken his faith, and be a Mahumetan of their religion, they giue him many gifts, and sometime also a living. The maner is, that when the deuill is entred into his heart to forsake his faith, he resorteth to the Soltan or gouernour of the towne, to whom hee maketh protestation of his vniuersal purpose. The gouernour appointeth him a boye, and one to ride before him on another boye, bearing a sword in his hand, and the Bufor man bearing an arrow in his hand, and riding in the cite, cursing his father and mother: and if ever after he retourne to his owne religion, hee is guilty of death, as is signified by the sword borne before him. A yong man, a seruant of one of our merchants, because he would not abide the correction of his master for his faultes, was minded to forsake his faith. But (as God would) he fell suddenly sicke and died, before he gaue himselfe to the deuill. If he had become a Bufor man, he had greatly troubled the merchants, for if he would then haue sayd that halfe their goods had bene his, they would haue giuen credit vnto him. For the auoiding of which inconuenience, it was granted in the priuileges that no Bufor man, &c. as there appeareth.

In Persia in diuers places, open and hinde beare the tents and household stuffe of the poore men of the countrey, which haue neither camels nor horses.

Of the tree which beareth Bombasine cotton, or Gossampine.

In Persia is great abundance of Bombasine cotton, & very fine, this groweth on a certaine little tree or byer, not past the height of a mans waiste or little more: the tree hath a slender stalk like vnto a byler, or to a carnation gilliflowre, with very many banches, bearing on euery banch a fruit or rather a rod, growing in round forme, containing in it the cotton: when this bud or rod commeth to the bignesse of a wallnut, it openeth and sheweth forth the cotton, which groweth still in bignesse vntill it be like a fleece of wooll as big as a mans fist, and be gettineth to be loose, and then they get it as it were the ripe fruit. The seeds of these trees are as big as peason, and are blacke, and some what flat, and not round: they sow them in plowed ground, where they grow in the fields in great abundance in many countreies in Persia, and diuers other regions.

The writing of the Persians.

Arthur Edwards shewed me a letter of the Sophie, writen in their letters backward, subscribed with the hands both of the Sophie and his Secretarie. The Sophies subscription, was only one word (his name I suppose was Shaugh) writen in golden letters vpon red paper. The whole letter was also writen on the same piece of red paper, being long and narrow, about the length of a foote, and not past three inches broad. The priuate signet of the Sophie, was a round printed marke about the bignes of a riall, onely printed vpon the same paper without any waie or other scale, the letters seeme so misshapen and disorderd, that a man would thinke it were some what scribbled in maner at adventures. Yet they say that almost euery letter, which his prickke or circumscriber, signifieth a whole word, in so much that in a piece of paper as big as a mans hand, their writing doth containe as much as doth ours almost in a sheete of paper.

peeres, by a long and dangerous voyage in the gulf of Persia, in the merchant-ships of India are by land and rivers through Persian Russia to Spokouia by rivers, is about fourscore miles to Vo-wares, are like of all boxes and pearls and precious stones, of silver. It was told me of them the one citie of Persia, then is of Persia named Gilgar, doch carie to Halepo, in Soris of Turkie, their continual abiding, and send other clothes into all partes of

of the Bufor men,

For man, that is, one that hath forgotten his many grifes, and sometime hath a heart to forsake his faith, he receiveth protection of his worldly friends, and is forced to forsake his faith, and to forsake his conscience, and to forsake his religion, he is guilty of the death of one of our merchants, whose vessel, was minded to forsake his faith, he gave himselfe to the devill. If he should forsake his faith, he should be damned. For the avoiding of this sin, he should be as there appeareth, the household stuffe of the poore man of

of the Gossampine.

This groweth on a certaine little tree hath a slender stalk like wood growing on every branch a fruit of red when this bud of god cometh to which groweth still in bignesse to be loose, and then they fall season, and are blacke, and sometimes they grow in the fields in great ns.

In their letters backward, which The Sophies subscription, was written in letters upon red paper. The long and narrow, about 3 length the Sophie, was a round printed paper without any ware of other and think it were somewhat scrupous with his picture of circumference, by a mans hand, their writing was

The

The first voyage into Persia made by M. Thomas Banister, and M. Jeffrey Ducket Agents for the Molcouie companie, begun from England in the yeere 1568. and continuing to the yeere 1574. following. Written by P. I. from the mouth of M. Lionell Plumtree.

Upon the 3. day of July 1568. they embarked themselves at Yerallaue, being accompanied with Lionell Plumtree, and some 12. Englishmen more, in a Barke called the Thomas Banister, of the burthen of 70. tunnes, taking also along with them of Russias to the number of 40. for their use and imployment. It fell out in the way, before they came to Astracan by 40. miles, that the Nagaian Tartars, being a kind of the worst and cruell people, made an assault upon them with 3. boates of theirs, each of them being armed, some with swords, some with speares, and some others with bowes and arrowes, and the whole number of them they discovered to bee about 300.
 men. They for their partes, although they could have wished a quiet voyage and iourney without violence, yet not willing to be spoiled with such Barbarians as they were, began to defend themselves against their assault, by meanes whereof a very terrible and fierce fight followed and continued hore & sharpe for two howers, wherein our men so well plaid their parts with their callivers, that they forced the Tartars to flee with the losse of 120. of them, as they were afterwards confirmed by a Russe prisoner, which escaped from the Nagaian, and came to them to Astracan, at which tyme they arrived the 20. of August.

In this tyme of Astracan they were somewhat hindered of their iourney, and wasted the space of 6. weekes by reason of a great armie of 70000. Turkes and Tartars which came thither upon the indignation of the great Turke, hoping either to have surprised it suddenly, or by continuance of siege to win the same. But in the end by reason that the Winter approached, as also, because they had received newes of a great expedition, which the Emperour of Russia was in providing for the defence of the sayde place, they were constrained to raise their siege, and to leaue the towne as they found it.

Upon their departure our men had opportunity to proceed on their voyage, and being the occasion, they left Astracan, and came to Bilbill towards the ende of October: from whence they went to Shauran, where (as they lodged in their tents) they were greatly molested with strange troops of Golcaues of soyes, which were so busie with them that they took the meate and victuals out of their lodgings, and deuoured to the bare bones in one night a mightie wild Boze that was sent unto them for a present from the gouernour of the countrey.

Having staid here some thre or foure dayes in providing of carriages and other necessaries for their iourney, they departed thence and came to Shamachie, which is foure dayes iourney from the sayde Shauran. In this towne of Skamachie their whole companie spent out the Winter, and from thence in Aprill following, they took their iourney towards Ardowill a place of great account and much esteeme, by reason of the sepulchres of the Emperours of Persia, which for the most part lie there buried, and so is growen to be a place of their superstitious deuotion. In this towne of Ardowill they solourned the space of 5. or 6. moneths, finding some traffique and sales, but to no purpose, the towne being more inhabited and frequented with gentlemen and noblemen then merchants.

The difference of religion bred great hostiles in this towne whyles they remained there: for the brother sought the destruction of the brother, and the next kinemen rose by one against another, insomuch that one of their companie Lionell Plumtree hath scene in one day sometimes 14. slain in a garboile. And he being further desirous to see their manner of fight, or rather somewhat more curious to behold, then mistrustfull of their blowes, was like to have buyne a share in their bloody tragodie, being twice wounded with their hot and arrowes, although not to the death.

At this tyme the Shaw Thomas sent a messenger for our men to come to his presence at Cas-bin, to whom Thomas Banister failed not to goe, although master Ducket lay very sicke at Ardowill, and in such case that they almost despaired of his recouerie. Wee being come to the Shaw, was receiued and entertained of him with great fauour and speciall countenance, and had the most part of all his requests granted him, this one he excepted, that whereas he entreated a privilege of suffrance to transport and carie through his dominions certaine hostles into India, the Shaw though seemed loth to yeeld therunto, and yet did not altogether denie it, but referred it to some further time. As for the point of traffique, hee could not make that motion of request that was not so soon granted as it was preferred: and the Shaw though himselfe boughte there of him many herles, and made him as good payment as any man could wishe, and oftentimes would send him money

money for the wares before the wares were delivered, that he might bee the suret of this honorable intended dealing.

One thing somewhat strange I thought good in this place to remember, that whereas hee purposed to send a great summe of money to Mecca in Arabia, for an offering to Sphomet their prophet, hee would not send any money or coine of his owne, but sent to the English merchants to exchange his coyne for theirs, according to the value of it, perceiving this reason for the same, that the money of the merchants was gotten by good meanes, and with good consciences, and was therefore woorthie to bee made an oblation to their holy prophet, but his owne money was rather gotten by fraud, oppression, and dishonest meanes, and therefore was not fit to serve for so honorable a use.

After sixe moneths spent in Casbin, the sayd Thomas Banister repared towards the great citie of Tauris, where being arrived, hee found master Duckett well recovered of his sickness, whom he had left ill at Ardowill.

At this Citie the foresayd master Duckett made sales of the English commodities, remaining there to that purpose the space of two yeeres and a halfe. And besides other kindes of merchandises of that countrey, he bought great store of galls which grow in great abundance at a place within one dayes iourney of the aforesaid Tauris.

After this Thomas Banister departed from Tauris, and went to Shamachie, to give order for the transporting of those commodities which were bought for England. And having dispatched them a way, hee went thence to Arrath, a towne foure dayes iourney with camels from Shamachie, for the buying of rawe silke. But there by reason of the unwholesomnesse of the ayre, and corruption of the waters in the hote time of the yeere, hee with Lawrence Chapman and some other English men unhappily died: which being known of master Duckett, hee immediately came from Tauris to Arrath, to take possession of the goods, for otherwise by the custome of the countrey, if there had bene no merchant or other friend of his to enter upon that which hee left, all had fallen into the Sbahaghs hands, which goods notwithstanding could not be recovered from the officers which had sealed and sealed up the same, untill master Duckett had bene in person with the Sbahagh, and had procured his order for the deliverie thereof.

The death of
sp. Banister.

Lionell Plumtree in the meane time that master Duckett was at Casbin in suite for goodes upon the perswasion of certayne Bogbarians, made proposition for a iourney to Cathaya, with carriages and commodities, and having all things ready, departed secretly with a Caravan: but being gone forwarde on his way sixe dayes iourney, some little boyemen by the procurement of Duntrey Greenfell (who afterwards being at Ormuz in the East Indies, was there cruelly burnt in the Inquisition by the Portugals) were sent after him in poste from Soltan Erastbecke, the Sbahaghs Lieutenant, to fetch him backe agayne, not suffering him to passe on so perillous and dangerous a iourney for feare of divers inconveniences that might follow.

After this master Duckett returned from Casbin to Shamachie agayne, and immediately made preparation for a iourney to Cashan, being about foure dayes iourney from Shamachie, and carried with him 4. mules laden with money.

In the way of his travell hee passed through Perspolis, sometime the royall state of the Emperours of Persia, but now altogether ruined and desaced, whereof remaine to be seene at this day two gates onely that are distant one from the other the space of 12. miles, and some few pinnacles in the mountaines and conveniences for fresh water.

The foresayd Cashan is a towne that consisteth all together of merchandise, and the best trade of all the lande is there, being greatly frequented by the merchants of India.

Here our men bought great store of all maner of wroughthe Silkes, and some Spices, and good store of Turkie stones.

The towne is much to bee commended for the civill and good government that is there used. An idle person is not suffered to live amongst them.

The childe that is but sixe yeeres olde, is set to some labour. No ill rule, disorder or riot by gaming or otherwise, is there permitted. Playing at Dice or Cardes is by the lawe punished with death.

At this Cashan they remained about the space of tenne weekes, and then came downe to gaine to Shamachie, and after some time spent in divers places of the countrey for buying of rawe silke thee bee the surety of this voyage to remember, that whereas hee in an offering to Spahomet their sent to the English merchants ving this reason for the same, and with good confidences, and hee, but his owne money was was not fit to serve for so ter repaired towards the great well recovered of his sickness, e English commodities, remain and besides other kindes of mer into in great abundance at a place to Shamachie, to give order for land. And having dispatched journey with camels from Sha in whole someness of the way, which Lawrence Chapman and of master Ducket, hee immedi for otherwise by the custome of is to enter upon that which hee standing could not bee second till master Ducket had bene in erie thereof.

et was at Casbin in sure for position for a journey to Ca wie, departed secretly with a Co some little horsemen by the way ermuz in the East Indies, was ere sent after him in poste from in Jache agayne, not suffering re of divers inconveniences that chie agayne, and immediately pes journey from Shamachie, metime the royall state of the whereof remaine to be sent at pace of 12. miles, and some few gether of merchandize, and mented by the merchants of Wikes, and some Spices, and d government that is there by . No ill rule, disorder or mis Cardes is by the late present ches, and then came downe of the comerce for buying of the like

like and other commodities, they came at last to Shauran againe, where their ship was in har bour, and then they shipped all their goods and embarked themselves also, setting saile the eight day of May, in the yeere 1573. intending to fetch Astracan. By reason of the barriere of the mountes and dangerous flats of the Caspian sea, they beat it up and downe some 20. dayes. And the 28. day riding at anker upon the flats, certaine Russe Callaks, which are outlawes of bani shen men, having intelligence of their being there, and of the great wealth that they had with them, came to them with their boates under the colour of friendship, and cured their ship, but immedi ately theyooke their hatchers and slew divers of the Russes that were of the ship upon the hatchers: Whereupon master Ducket, Lionell Plumtree, William Smith, the master, a man of singular valoure, and Amos Riall being under the Sparkerke, did so well behaue themselves, that they slaw the hatchers, and slew 14. of the Callaks gunners, and hurt and wounded about 30. more, being of them all in number 150. at the least, armed with calivers and other weapons fit for so wil lamous a purpose.

¶ Ducket notwithstanding and the rest aforesayd, received divers wounds from the enemy, and were so hurt, and withall so oppressed with the multitude and force of them, that they were at last constrained to make an agreement with the Callaks by rendering the ship into their hands, ha ving received first their othes sworn by their crucifixes, not to doe any further harme to their per sons.

Thus the shippe being taken, and all the English grievously hurt, the Callaks immediately discharged the ship of them, putting them all into the ship boate with two or three Persian targets full of horse flesh and swines fleshe, without further victuals or reliefe: they being in that case, made the best hast they could to get to Astracan: and being come to the towne, master Ducket made great sute to the captaine, to haue men and boates set out for the recovering and recovering of the ship if it were possible, who immediately sent one his sonne with forty boates and five hun dred men to pursue the Pirats, and by good hap came to the place where they rid at anker with the ship, but by reason of their foolishnesse in striking up their drummes before they were come nere them, the Callaks discovering the boates, cut their cables, and put out to sea, whereupon the boates not being able to follow them, returned againe to Astracan. After which, three score boates more were sent out to pursue them agayne the second time: and that second armie came to a place where they found many of those Callaks, and slew them and found out the places where they had hid certaine parcels of their goods in the earth in the chertles of the ship: all which they re covered againe for the English merchants, to the valew of 5000. li. of 30. or 40. thousand pound, but all the rest the Callaks in their ship had caried away.

¶ In the same place they found ether, divers of the Callaks which the English men had slaine, buried in the earth, and waie for forty or fiftye yardes of Sattin, and Cassiaes, and some in Turkie carpets cut and spoiled by those vilanous Pirats, of whom afterwards as many as could be taken by the Persians, who entirely loued the English merchants, were put to most cruel torments in all places according to their desertes.

But our men being thus spoiled of their goods, and wounded in their bodies, remained about two moneths at Astracan, for their better recouerie: and hauing gotten some reasonable strength, they then repaired boates, and went by the riuer Volga to Cazan, with such goods as they had recovered from the Callaks. From Cazan they went towards Yeraslaue, but in the way the ice intercepted them about the beginning of October, where suddenly in the night they were taken with a cruell and vehement frost, and therewithall the waters so congeled, that their boates were crushed and cut in sunder with the ice, whereby they sustained both a further danger of life and loss of goods: but as much as they could preserve with much adoe, they conveyed over land in sleds to Volodga, and from thence sent much of it to S. Nicholas, to bee laden in the shippes for England.

But master Ducket, Lionell Plumtree, and Amos Riall went with some parcels to the Mos ko, and there sold certaine quantities of it to the Emperour, who pitying the mightie losse that they had sustained by his owne rebellious people and subjects, bought himselfe as much as hee liked, and paid present money for the same. So that Winter being spent out in Mosko, and such wares provided by them as serued for England, they departed to S. Nicholas, and there embarked in the moneth of August: and hauing endured a very terrible passage in nine weekes and three dayes, with some hardnesse of victuals, contrary and furious winde, and other sea ac cidents, they arrived at London in the moneth of October one thousand five hundred twentie and four, and so made an ende of an unfortunate voyage, which if it had pleased God to prosper, that all things had come home as safely as they were carefully provided, and painfully laboured for.

it had procured the richest voyage and most profitable returne of commodities, that had ever bene undertaken by English merchants, who notwithstanding all misfortunes, lost nothing of their principall adventure, but onely the interest and gaine that might have risen by the use of their stocke in the meane time.

Further observations concerning the state of Persia, taken in the foresayd first voyage into those partes, and written by M. Jeffrey Duckes, one of the Agents employed in the same.

Shamachie is the fairest towne in all Media, and the chiefest commodity of that countrey is rawe silke, and the greatest plenty thereof is at a towne three dayes journey from Shamachie called Arash: and within three dayes journey of Arash, is a countrey named Groisine, whose inhabitants are Christians, and are thought to be they which are otherwise called Georgians: there is also much silke to be sold. The chiefest towne of that countrey is called Zegham, from whence is caried yearly into Persia, an incredible quantitie of Wasell nuts, all of one sort and goodnesse, and as good and thime shaled as are our Flibbers, Of these are caried yearly the quantitie of 4000. Camels laden.

Of the name of the Sophie of Persia, and why he is called the Shawgh, and of other customes.

The king of Persia (whom here we call the great Sophi) is not there so called, but so called the Shawgh. If were there dungcrous to call him by the name of Sophi, because that Sophi in the Persian tongue, is a begger, and it were as much as to call him, The great begger. He lieth at a towne called Casbin, which is situate in a goodly fertile valley of three or foure dayes journey in length. The towne is but cull builded, and for the most part all of birke, not hardened with fire, but onely dyed at the Sunne, as is the most part of the building of all Persia. The king hath not come out of the compasse of his owne house, in three and thirtie or foure and thirtie yeeres, whereof the cause is not knowne, but as they say, it is vpon a superstition of certaine prophesies to which they are greatly addicted: he is now about fourefcore yeeres of age, and very lustie. And to keepe him the more lustie, hee hath foure wiues atwayes, and about three hundred concubines, and once in the yeere he hath all the faire maidens and wiues that may be found a great way about, brought vnto him, whom he diligently peruseth, seeing them in all partes, taking such as he liketh, and putting away some of them which hee hath kept before, and with them that he putteth away, he gratifieth some such as hath done him the best service. And if he chance to take any mans wife, her husband is very glad thereof, and in recompence of her, oftentimes he giueth the husband one of his olde stoxe, whom he thankfully receiveth.

How strans gets acc vied.

If any stranger being a Christian shall come before him, he must put on a new paire of shoes made in that countrey, and from the place where he entereth, there is digged as it were, a carrie all the way, untill he come to the place where he shall talke with the king, who standeth at wayes & boue in a gallerie, when he talketh with any strangers: and when the stranger is departed, then is the carrie cast downe, and the ground made euen againe.

Of the religion of the Persians.

Their religion is all one with the Turkes, sauing that they differ who was the right successor of Mahomet. The Turkes say that it was one Homer and his sonne Viman. But the Persians say that it was one Mortus Ali, which they would procure in this manner. They say there was a counsell called to decide the matter who should be the successor: and after they had called vpon Mahomet to reueale vnto them his will and pleasure therein, there came among them a liele lizard, who declared that it was Mahomet's pleasure that Mortus Ali should be his successor. This Mortus Ali was a ballant man, and slew Homer the Turkes prophet. He had a sword that he fought withall, with the which he conquered all his enemies, and killed as many as he stroke. When Mortus Ali died, there came a holy prophet, who gaue them warning that shortly there would come a white Camell, vpon the which hee charged them to lay the body of sword of Mortus Ali, and to suffer the Camell to carie it whither he would. Cf

It goodly and well growndeth
religion.

immobilitie, that had ever bene vnder the sea side, and the camell going a good way into the sea, was with the swoy and booy of Morus Ali taken vp into heauen, for whose returne they haue long looked in Persia. And for this cause, the king alwayes keepeth a hoyle ready sailed for him, and also of late kept for him one of his owne daughters to be his wife, but she died in the yere of our Lorde 1573. And for furthermore, that if hee come not hoyle, they shalbe of our belife: much like the Jewes, looking for their Messias, as to come and reigne among them, like a woody king for euer, and de-liuer them from the captiuitie which they are now in among the Christians, Turkes, and Gentiles.

of Persia, taken in

by M. Jeffrey Duc-
 the same.

and the chiefest commodities of that thereof is as a towne three dayes within three dayes journey of Ahabitants are Christians, and are Georgians: there is also much countrey is called Zegham, from Hasell nuts, all of one sox and these are carried perrely the quan-why he is called es.

the Sophi) is not there so called, ingorous to call him by the name tongue, is a begger, and it were likely as a towne called Casbin, of three or foure dayes journey in for the most part all of byrke, not part of the building of all Persia, in three and thirtie or foure and it is vpon a superstition of re-about foure or fyve yeres of age, and ues alwayes, and about these yem-mens and wises that may be found tech, feeling them in all partes, to had kept before, and with them the best service. And if he chaunge a recompence of her, oftentimes receiueth.

must put on a new paire of shoes ere is digged as it were, a ransle the king, who standeth alwayes when the stranger is departed, then ans.

they differ who was the right the Homer and his sonne Viman, which they would proue in this de the matter who should bee the into them his will and pleasure it was Spaurmets pleasure that allant man, and first Homer the which he conquered all his enethere came a holy prophet, who well, vpon the which hee changed mel to carie it whither he would.
 Cy

The which being perfourmed, the said white camell caried the swoy and booy of Morus Ali into the sea side, and the camell going a good way into the sea, was with the swoy and booy of Morus Ali taken vp into heauen, for whose returne they haue long looked in Persia. And
 for this cause, the king alwayes keepeth a hoyle ready sailed for him, and also of late kept for him one of his owne daughters to be his wife, but she died in the yere of our Lorde 1573. And for furthermore, that if hee come not hoyle, they shalbe of our belife: much like the Jewes, looking for their Messias, as to come and reigne among them, like a woody king for euer, and de-liuer them from the captiuitie which they are now in among the Christians, Turkes, and Gentiles.

The Shaugh, or king of Persia, is nothing in strength and power comparable vnto the Turke: for although he hath a great Dominion, yet is it nothing to be compared with the Turke: neither hath hee any great Ordnance of gunnes, or harquebusses. Notwithstanding, his chiefest some Ismael, about twentie and six yeres past, fought a great battaile with the Turke, and slew of his armie about an hundred thousand men, who after his returne, was by his father cast into prison, and there continueth vntill this day: for his father the Shaugh, had him in suspicion that he would haue put him downe, and haue taken the regiment vnto himselfe.

Their opinion of Christ is, that hee was an holy man, and a great Propheet, but not like vnto Mahumer: saying, that Mahumer was the last propheet, by whome all things were finished, and was therefore the greatest. To proue that Christ was not Gods soune, they say that God had neuer wife, and therefore could haue no sonne or children. They goe on pilgrimage from the furthest part of Persia, vnto Mecha in Arabia, and by the way they visite also the Sepulchre of Christ at Ierusalem, which they now call Couche Kalye.

The most part of spices which cometh into Persia, is brought from the Islande of Ormus, situate in the gulfes of Persia, called Sinus Persicus, betwene the maine lande of Persia and Arabia, &c. The Portugals touche at Ormus both in their voyage to East India, and homewarde againe, and from thence bring all such spices as are occupied in Persia and the regions there about: for of pepper they bring very small quantitie, and that at a very deare price.

The Turkes oftentimes bring pepper from Mecha in Arabia, which they sell as good cheape as that which is brought from Ormus. Silkes are brought from no place, but are wrought all in their owne countrey. Ormus is within two miles of the maine lande of Persia, and the Portugalles fetche their fresh water there, for the which they pay tribute to the Shaugh or king of Persia.

Within Persia, they haue neither golde nor siluer mines, yet haue they copied money, both of golde and siluer, and also other small monies of copper. There is brought into Persia an incredible summe of Dutch dolers, which for the most part are there employed in rawe silke.

They haue fewe bookes, and lesse learning, and are for the most part very busy in all kinde of good sciences, sauing in some kind of silke workes, and in such things as pertaine to the furniture of houses, in the which they are passing good.

Their lawes are, as is their religion, wicked and detestable. And if any man offend the prince, he punisheth it extremely, not onely in the person that offendeth, but also in his children, and in as many as are of his kinne. Theft and murder are often punished, yet none otherwise then pleased him that is ruler in the place where the offence is committed, and as the partie offending is able to make friends, or with money to redeeme his offence.

There is oftentimes great mutinie among the people in great townes, which of Morus Ali somes was greatest: In somuch that sometimes in the towne two or three thousande people are together by the eares for the same, as I haue seene in the towne of Shamaky and Ardouill, and also in the great cite of Teueris, where I haue seene a man coming from fighting, in a bza-sic bringing in his hande foure or five mens heads, carrying them by the haire of the head: for although they haue their heads most commonly twisse a werke, yet leaue they a tuft of haire vpon the crowne, about two foote long. I haue enquired why they leaue that tuft of haire vpon their heads. They answer, that thereby they may easly be caried vp into heauen, when they are dead.

For their religion, they haue certaine priests, who are appalled like vnto other men. They keepe euery morning and afternoone, to goe vp to the tops of their Churches, and tell there a great tale of Mahumer & Morus Ali: and other preaching haue they none. Their Lent is after Christmas, not in abstinence from flesh onely, but from all meates and drinckes, vntill the day be off the flie: but then they eate sometimes the whole night. And although it be against their religion to vnto hee, yet at night they will take great exesse thereof, and be drunken.

Dq

Their

Their opinion of Christ.

Their money.

Their bookes
 and learning.

Such was the lawe of the Sacerdotians,
 for treason.

Distention for religion.

Their priests,
 and yeaching.
 Their Lent.

Their lent beginneth at the newe spoone, and they doe not enter into it untill they haue seene the same: Neither yet doeth their lent end, until they haue seene the next newe spoone, although the same (through close weather) should not be seene in long time.

Their castles and holy men.

They haue among them certaine holy men, whome they call Setes, counted holy for that they or any of their successors haue bene on pilgrimage at Mecha in Arabia, for whosoeuer goeth thither on pilgrimage to visite the sepulchre of Mahomet, both hee and all his posteritie, are euer after called Setes, and counted for holy men, and haue no lesse opinion of themselves. And if a man contrary one of these, hee will say that hee is a Schaine, and therefore oughte to be beleueed and that hee cannot lie, although he lye neuer so shamefully. Thus a man may be to holy, and no pride is greater then spirituall pride, of a manne pufft vp with his owne opinion of holinesse. These Setes doe vse to haue their beards all ouer, cutting on the sides a litle about the temples, the which they leaue vnshauen, and vse to braide the same as women doe their haire, and to weare it as long as it will growe.

Their prayer and worshiping of God and Mahomet.

Euery morning they vse to worship God, Mahomet, and Mortus Ali, and in praying turne themselves toward the South, because Mecha lieth that way from them. When they be in trauaile on the way, many of them will (as soone as the Sunne riseth) lighte from their boxes, turning themselves to the South, and will laye their goones before them, with their swoyes and bracelets, and so standing vpright, worship to the South: And many times in their prayers kneele downe and kisse their beades, or some what els that lieth before them.

Washing and outward cleanliness.

The men of women doe neuer go to make water, but they vse to take with them a pottle with a spoute, and after they haue made water, they shal some water upon their priuie partes, and thus doe the women as well as the men: and this is a matter of great religion among them, and in making of water, the men doe colye downe as well as the women.

Their swearing.

When they earnestly affirme a matter, they will sweare by God, Mahomet, or Mortus Ali, and sometimes by al at ones: as thus in their owne language, saying, Olla Mahomet Ali. But if hee sweare by the Shaughes head, in saying Shaugham basshe, you may then beleuee him if you wil.

The kings magnificence.

The Shaugh keepeth a great magnificence in his court: and although sometimes in a moeth or sixe weekes, none of his nobilitie or counsaile can see him, yet goe they dayly to the court, and tarry there a certaine time, until they haue knowen his pleasure whether he will commaund them any thing or not. He is watched euery night by a thousand of his men, which are called his Curthes, who are they that hee useth to sende into the Countreys about his greatestt affairs. When he sendeth any of them (if it be to the greatestt of any of his nobilitie) he will obeye them, although the messenger should beate any of them to death.

Wharants.

The Shaugh occupieth himselfe alwayes two dayes in the weeke in his Bathstoue, and when hee is disposed to goe thither, hee taketh with him sixe or sixe of his concubines, more or lesse, and one day they consume in washing, rubbing, and bathing him, and the other day in paring his nailes, and other matters. The greatestt part of his life, hee spendeth amongst his wiues and concubines. Hee hath nowie reigned about sixtie and foure yeeres, and is therefore counted a very holy man, as they euer esteeme their kings, if they haue reigned sixtie yeeres or more: for they measure the fauour of God by a mans prosperitie, or his displeasure by a mans misfortune or aduersitie. The great Turke hath this Shaugh in great reuerence, because hee hath reigned king so long time.

The succession of the kings house.

I haue saide before that hee hath foure wiues, and as many concubines as him listeth: and if he chaunce to haue any children by any of his concubines, and hee minde that any of those children shall inherite after him, then when one of his wiues dieth, the concubine whome hee so fauoureth, hee maketh one of his wiues, and the child whome hee so loueth best, hee ordaineth to be king after him.

Circumcision.

What I heard of the maner of their marriages, for offending of honest consciences and chaste eares, I may not commit to writing: their fasting I haue declared before. They vse circumcision vnto children of stuen yeeres of age, as doe the Turkes.

Their houses and maner of sitting.

Their houses (as I haue said) are for the most part made of bricke, not burned but only dyed in the Sunne: In their houses they haue but litle furniture of household stuffe, excepte it be their carpets, and some copper worke: for all their kettles and dishes wherein they eate, are of copper. They eate on the ground, sitting on carpets cross legged as doe tailors. There is no man so simple but hee sitteth on a carpet better of worke, and the whole house of roome wherein hee sitteth, is wholly couered with carpets. Their houses are all with flat toofes, couered with earth: and in the sommer time, they lie vpon them all night.

They haue many bond seruantes both men and women. Bond men and bond women, is one nto it untill they haue seene the next newe Spoone, although the eres, counted holy for that they in Arabia, for whosoever goeth and all his posteritie, are conpition of themselves. And if a therefore ought to be belerue a man may be to holy, and in his owne opinion of holinesse, as a little about the temples, in doe their haire, and to wear us Ali, and in praying tunc in them. When they be in cr ) light from their houses, and e them, with their swordes and times in their papers kuerie to take with them a potte full on their priue partes, and thus igion among them, and in ma-

Mahumet, of Mortus Ali, and Dilla Mahumet Ali. But if bre p then belerue him if you wil, although sometimes in a mo-pet goe the p daply to the court, re whether he will commaund of his men, which are called is about his greatestt affairs, obilitie) he will obey them, as re in his Backstoue, and when concubines, more or lesse, and the other day in pating his y amongst his wiues and con-and is therefore counted a very littie peeres or moze; for they lure by a mans misfortune of because hee hath reigned king tribunes as him listeth: and if minded that any of those chil-concupine whome hee so loaeth best, hee obtaineth to be honest consciences and cheate before. They vse circumcission not burned but only dyed in ld stuffe, except it be their ear-in they eat, are of copper.

There is no man so sumuome wherein hee stretch uouered with earth; and in the men and bondwomen, is one

of

of the best kinde of Marchandise that any man may bring. When they buy any mapdes of pong women, they vse to seele them in all partes, as with vs men doe horses: when one hath bought a young woman, if he like her, he will keepe her for his owne vse as long as him listeth, and then selleth her to an other, who doeth the like with her. So that one woman is sometimes solde in the space of foure or fise peeres, twelue, or twentie times. If a man keepe a bonde woman for his owne vse, and if hee finde her to be false to him, and giue her bodie to any other, hee may kill her if hee will.

When a marchant or traualler commeth to any towne where he entendeth to carpy any time, he hireth a woman, or sometimes 2. or 3. during his abode there. And when hee commeth to an other towne, he doeth the like in the same also: for there they vse to put out their women to hire, as we see here backney horses.

There is a very great river which runneth through the plains of Iauac, which falleth into the Caspian sea, by a towne called Backo, nere vnto which towne is a strange thing to behold. For there issueth out of the ground a maruelous quantitie of Oyle, which Oyle they fetch from the vernest bounds of all Persia: it serueth all the Countrey to burne in their houses.

This oyle is blacke, and is called Nefie: they vse to carpy it throughout all the Countrey vpon kine of asses, of which you shall oftentimes meete, with foure or fise hundred in a companie. There is also by the said towne of Backo, an other kinde of oyle which is white and very precious: and is supposed to be the same that here is called Petroleum. There is also not farre from Shamaky, a thing like vnto tarre, and issueth out of the ground, whereof wee haue made the prooffe, that in our ships it serueth well in the stead of tarre.

In Persia are kinde of two soyes, the one like vnto ours in these partes, the other are marueilous euill fauoured, with great bones, and very leane, and but little haire vpon them: their milke is not so sweete: they are like vnto them which are spoken of in the Scripture, which in the dream of Pharao signified the seuen deare peeres: for a leaner or moze euill fauoured beaust, can no man see.

In the Countrey of Shiruan (sometime called Media) if you chauce to lye in the fields nere vnto any village, as the twilighte becometh, you shall haue about you two or thye hundred soyes, which make a maruelous sounde of howling: and if you looke not well to your victuals, it shall scape them hardly but they will haue part with you.

The Caspian sea, doeth neither ebbe nor flowe, except sometimes by rage of winde it swelleth by very high: the water is very salt. Doubtless, the quantitie of water that falleth out of the great river of Volga, maketh the water fresh at the least twentie leagues into the sea. The Caspian sea is maruelous full of fish, but no kinde of monstrous fish, as farre as I could vnderstand, yett hath it fandis soyes of fishes which are not in these partes of the world.

The mutton there is good, and the sheepe great, hauing very great rumps with much fat vpon
them.
Rise and mutton is their chiefe victuall.

Bondmen and bond women.

Women
bought and sold, and let to hire.

Abundance of Oyle issuing out of the ground.

Oleum Petroleum.

Two soyes of haire.

Soyes in great plenty.

The Copie of a letter sent to the Emperour of Moscouie, by Christopher Hodsdon, and William Burrough, Anno 1570.

Da mightie Emperour, &c. Whereas sir William Garrard and his fellowship, the Companie of English Marchants this last winter sent hither to the Narue, 3. ships laden with marchandise, which was left here, & with it Christopher Hodsdon one of the saide fellowship and their chiefe doer in this place, who when hee came first hither, and untill such time as hee had dispatched those shippes from hence, was in hope of goods to lade twelue or thirtene sailes of good shippes, against this shipping, wherefore hee wrote vnto the saide sir William Garrard and his companie to sende hither this spring the saide number of thirtene shippes. And because that in their comming hither wee founde the Freedbooters on the sea, and supposing this peere that they would be very strong, hee therefore gaue the saide sir William and his Companie aduise, to furnish the saide number of shippes so strongly, as they shoulde bee able to withstande the force of the Freedbooters: Whereupon they haue according to his aduise sent this peere thirtene good shippes together well furnished with men and munition, and all other necessaries for the warre, of which 13. shippes William Burrough one of the saide fellowship is Captaine generall, vnto

Five Shippes
of Freebooters taken.

unto whome there was given in charge, that if hee mette with any the Danske Freebooters, whatsoeuer robbers and theues, that are enemies to your highnesse, hee should doe his best to apprehende and take them: It so happned that the tenth day of this moneth the saide William with his fleette, mette with five Shippes of the Freebooters nere unto an Islande called Tuttee, which is about 50. versts from Naruc, unto which Freebooters he with his fleette gaue chase, and tooke of them the Admirall, wherein were left but 3. men, the rest were fledde to shoure in their boates amongst the woods upon Tuttee, on which Shippe hee set fire and burnt her. Hee also tooke foure moze of those Shippes which are nowe here, and one Shippe escaped him: out of which foure Shippes some of the men fled in their boates and so escaped, others were slaine in fight, and some of them when they sawe they coulde not escape, cast themselves willingly into the Sea, and were drowned. So that in these 5. Shippes were left but 83. men.

The saide William Borough when hee came hither to Naruc, finding here Christopher Hodsdon aforesaid, both the saide Christopher and William, together in the name of sir William Garrard, and the rest of their whole Companie and fellowship, did present unto your highnesse of those Freebooters taken by our Shippes 82. men, which wee deliuered here unto Kneze Voivoda, the 13. of this moneth. One man of those Freebooters we haue kept by vs, whose name is Haunce Snarke a Capitaine. And the cause why we haue done it is this: Altho we should haue deliuered him with the rest of his felowes unto the Viouodas officers, there were of our Englishmen those then 50. which fell on their knees unto vs, requesting that hee might be referred in the Shippe, and carried backe into England: and the cause why they so earnestly intreated for him, is that some of those our Englishmen had bene taken with Freebooters, and by his meanes had their liues saued, with great fauour besides, which they found at his hands. Wherefore if it please your highnesse to permit it, we will carry him home with vs into England, where in we request your Maiesties fauour: notwithstanding what you command of him shall be obserued.

Wee haue also sent our seruant to your highnesse with such bestellings and writings, as wee found in those Shippes: whereby your Maiestie may see by whome, and in what order they were set out, and what they pretended, which writings wee haue commended unto Kneze Yourie your Maiesties Viouoda at Plasco, by our seruant. And haue requested his furtherance for the safe deliuerie of them to your Maiesties handes: which writings when you haue perused, wee desire that they may be returned unto vs by this our seruant, as speedily as may be: for these Shippes which we now haue here, will be soone dispatched from hence, for that wee haue not goods to lade above the halfe of them. And the cause is, we haue this winter (by your Maiesties order) bene kept from crasquing, to the companies great losse. But hoping your Maiestie will hereafter haue consideration thereof, and that we may haue free libertie to traffique in all parts of your Maiesties Countre, according to the priuilege giuen vnto vs, wee pray for your Maiesties health, with prosperous successe to the pleasure of God. From Naruc the 15. of July, Anno 1570.

Your Maiesties most humble and obedient,

{ Christopher Hodsdon,
William Borough,

A note of the proceeding of M. Anthonie Ienkinson, Ambassador from the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, to the Emperour of Russia, from the time of his arriuall there, being the 26. of July 1571. vntill his departure from thence the 23. of July, 1572.

He said 26. day I arriued with the two good Shippes called the Swallow and the Harry in latitude at the bay of S. Nicholas in Russia aforesaid, and landed at Rose Island, from whence immediatly I sent away my Interpreter Daniel Siluester in poste towards the Court, being then at the Mosco, whereby his Maiestie might as well be aduertised of my arriuall in his Dominions, as it do to knowe his highnesse pleasure for my further access. And remaining at the saide Island two or three dayes, to haue conference with your Agent about your affaires, I did well perceiue by the wordes of the saide Agent, and others your seruants, that I was entred the Danske Freerbooters, and hee should doe his best to approuneth the saide William to an Islande called Tuxee, with his fleete gaue chase, and there fledde to shoare in their and burnt her. Hee also took him : out of which foure he slaine in fight, and some dredged into the Sea, and were

And here Christopher in the name of Sir Wil-did present vnto your high-delivered here vnto Kneze was kept by vs, whose name was this : When we should haue there were of our English hee might be restored in the necessity intreated for him, in cess, and by his means had lands. Wherefore if it please land, wherein we request shall be obserued,

illings and writings, as we and in what order they were ed vnto Kneze Youriue your s furtherance for the safe do-wee perused, we desire that be : for these shippes which wee not goods to lade about s (which order) bene kept from will hereafter haue confide-ce of your Maiesties Com-mandmentes health, with yours anno 1570.

most humble
dient, Christopher Hodson, William Borough,

William Borough, Ambassador, to the Em-perour, being the presence

was called the Swallow and his aforesaid, and landed at my my Interpreter Daniel at the Mosco, whereby his will in his Dominions, as recede. And remaining gent about your affaires, I remains, that I was encreinto into great perill and danger of my life, for they reposed to mee that they heard saide at the Mos-co, that the Princes displeasure was such against mee, that if ever I came into his Countrey again I should loose my head, with other wordes of discouragement : Whereas, I was not a litle distressed, not knowing whether it were best for mee to proceede forwards, or to returne home againe with the shippes for the safegard of my life. But calling to minde mine innocencie and good meaning, and knowing my selfe not to haue offended his Maiestie any manner of wayes either in word or deed, or by making former promises not performed, heretofore by mine enemies falsely furnished, and being desirous to come to the triall thereof, whereby I might iustifie my owne dealings, and to repossesse my said enemies as well here as there, who haue not ceased of late by vnerue reports to impure the cause of the saide Emperours displeasure towards you to proceede of my dealings, and promises made to him at my last being with him (although by his letters to the Queenes Maiestie, and by his owne wordes to mee the contrary doeth appeare) I determined with my selfe rather to put my life into his handes, and by the prouidence of God to prosecute the charge committed vnto mee, then to returne home in shame, discouraged with the wordes of such, who had rather that I had carried as home, then to bee sent ouer with such credit, whereby I might sit out their euill doings, the onely cause of your losse.

Wherefore, leauing the saide shippes the nine and twentieth day of the moneth, I departed from the sea-side, and the first of August arrived at Colmogro, where I remayned attending the returne of my saide messenger with order from his Maiestie.

But all the Countrey being sore disordred by the hande of God with the plague, passage in euery place was shutte vp, that none might passe in paine of death : My messenger being eight hundred miles vpon his way, was stayed, and kept at a towne called Shasko, and might not bee suffered to goe any further, neither yet to returne backe againe, or sende vnto mee : by means whereof in the space of foure moneths, I could neither heare nor knowe what was become of him, in which time my saide messenger founde meanes to aduertise the Governour of the Citie of Vo-logda, as well of his stay, as of the cause of his comming thither, who sent him wordes that it was not possible to passe any neerer the Prince without further order from his Maiestie, who was gone to the warres against the Sweithens, and that hee would aduertise his highnesse so soone as he might conueniently : And so my saide messenger was forced to remaine there still without an-swere. During which time of his stay through the great dearth, as aforesaid, I founde meanes to sende another messenger, with a guide by an vnknewen way through wilderness, a thousande miles about, thinking that way hee should passe without let : but it proued contrary, for likewise hee being passed a great part of his journey, fell into the handes of a watche, and escaped betw hardly, that hee and his guide with their hoxses had not bene burnt, according to the iaine proui-des for such as would seeke to passe by indirect wayes, and many haue felt the smart thereof, which had not wherewith to buy out the paine : neither coulde that messenger returne backe vnto to mee.

And thus was I kept without answer or order from his Maiestie, and remained at the saide Colmogro, vntill the 18. of Januarie following, neither hauing a Gentleman to safe gard me, nor allowing appointed me, nor allowance of victuals according to the Countrey fashion for Ambassa-dours, which argued his grievous displeasure towards our nation. And the people of the Coun-trei perceiving the same, fled towards mee and my companie some discourtesies : but about the 28. day aforesaid the plague ceased, and the passages being opened, there came order from his Maiestie that I should haue polle hoxses, and be suffered to depart from Colmogro to goe to a Citie called Peraissaue neerer to the Court, his Maiestie being newly returned fro the said warres. And I arrived at the said Peraissaue the 3. of February, where I remained vnder the charge of a gentleman, hauing then a house appointed me, & allowance of victuals, but so straitly kept, that none of our nation or other might come or send vnto me, nor I to them. And the 14. of March following, I was sent for to the Court, and being within 3. miles of the same, a polle was sent to the Gentleman which had charge of mee to returne backe againe with mee to the said Peraissaue, and to remaine there vntill his Maiesties further pleasure. wherewith I was much dismayed, and marvelled what that sudden change meant, and the rather, because it was a troublesome time, and his Maiestie much disquieted through the ill success of his affaires, (as I did vnderstand.) And the twentieth of the same, I was sent for againe to the Court, and the 23. I came before his Maiestie, who caused mee to kille his hande, and gaue gracious audience vnto my Oracion, graciously receiving and accepting the Queenes Maiesties private letters, and hee present, in the presence of all his nobilitie. After I had finished my Oracion to long here to rehearse, and deli-uered her highnesse letters, and present (as aforesaid) the Emperour sitting in royal estate stood by
and

and said, How doth Queene Elizabeth my sister, is she in health? to whom I answered, God hath blessed her Maiestie with health, and peace, and doeth wish the like vnto thee Lord, her louing brother. Then his Maiestie sitting downe againe, commaunded all his nobilitie and others to depart, and auoyde the chamber, sauing the chiefe Secretarie, and one other of the Counsell, and willing me to approach neere vnto him with my Interpreter, said vnto me these wordes.

Anthonie, the last time thou wast with vs heere, wee did commit vnto thee our truste and secret: Hellage, to bee declared vnto the Queene's Maiestie herselfe thy Mistresse at thy coming home, and did expect thy coming vnto vs againe at the time we appointed, with a full answer of the same from her highnesse. And in the meane time there came vnto vs at severall times thre messengers, the one called Manly, the other George Middleton, and Edward Goodman, by the way of the Narue about the Marchants affaires: to whome we sent our messengers to knowe whether thou Anthonie, were returned home in safetie, and when thou shouldst returne vnto vs againe: but those messengers coulde tell vs nothing, and did misraill, and abuse with euill wordes, both our messenger and thee, wherewith wee were much offended. And understanding that the saide Goodman had letters about him, wee caused him to be searched, with whome were found many letters, wherein was written much against our Princely estate, and that in our Empire were many vnlawfull things done, whereto wee were much grieued, and would suffer none of those rude messengers to haue access vnto vs: and shortly after wee were informed that one Thomas Randolfe was come into our Dominions by the way of Dwina, Ambassadors from the Queene, and wee sent a Gentleman to meeete and conduct him to our Citie of Mosco, at which time wee looked that thou shouldst haue returned vnto vs againe. And the saide Thomas being arriv'd at our saide Citie, wee sent vnto him diuers times, that hee should come and conferre with our Counsell, whereby wee might vnderstande the cause of his coming, looking for answere of those our princely affaires committed vnto thee. But hee refused to come to our saide Counsell: wherefore, and for that our saide Citie was visited with plague, the saide Thomas was the longer kept from our presence. Which being ceased, shortly wee gaue him access and audience, but all his talke with vs, was about Marchants affaires, and nothing touching ours. Wee knowe that Marchants matters are to bee heard, for that they are the staye of our Princely treasures: But first Princely affaires are to bee established, and then Marchants. After this the saide Thomas Randolfe was with vs at our Citie of Vologda, and wee dealt with him about our Princely affaires, whereby amitie betwixt the Queene's Maiestie and vs, might be established for euer, and matters were agreed and concluded betwixt your Ambassadors and vs, and thereupon wee sent our Ambassadors into England with him to ende the same, but our Ambassadors returned vnto vs againe, without finishing our said affaires, contrary to our expectation, and the agreement betwixt vs, and your said Ambassadors.

Thus when his Maiestie had made a long discourse, I humbly beseeched his highnesse to heare me gratioously, and to giue me leaue to speake without offence, and to beleue those wordes to be true which I should speake. Which he graunted, and these were my wordes.

Most noble and famous Prince, the message which thy highnesse did sende by mee vnto the Queene her most excellent Maiestie touching thy Princely and secret affaires, immediatly and so soone as I came home, I did declare both secretly and truly vnto the Queene's Maiestie herselfe, word for word, as thou Loyde diddest commaunde mee. Which her highnesse did willingly heare and accept, and being mindefull thereof, and willing to answer the same, the next shipping after her Maiestie did sende vnto thee Loyde, her highnesse Ambassadors Thomas Randolfe, whose approued wisdom and fidelitie was vnto her Maiestie well knowne, and therefore thought mee to bee sent to so worthy a Prince, who had Commission not onely to create with thy Maiestie of Marchants affaires, but also of those thy Princely and secret affaires committed vnto mee. And the cause (most gracious Prince) that I was not here againe, was, for that I was employed in seruice vpon the Seas against the Queene's Maiesties enemies, and was not returned home at such time as Master Thomas Randolfe departed with the Shippes, to come into thy Maiesties Countrey, otherwise I had bene sent. And whereas thy Maiestie seereth, that Thomas Randolfe would not create with thy Counsell of the matters of his Legation, hee did (Loyde) therein according to his Commission: which was: First to deale with thy Maiestie thy selfe, which order is commonly used among all Princes, when they sende their Ambassadors about matters of great waight. And whereas the saide Thomas is charged that hee agreed and concluded vpon matters at the same time, and promised the same should bee performed by the Queene her Maiestie: Whereupon (Loyde) thou diddest send thy Ambassadors with him into Englaunde, for answere thereof: It may please thy Ma-

He to vnder
the highnes
and agree, con is should plea highnes An that either the one meaning
well vnderst
mendations,
siene standy
as the like w swere in all c it (seemeth) to highnes lett
that thy I mi house bene fac
him vnto the hed in thy P some Ambad
to vnderstand
merchants cre
to the Loyde
ly affaires, as partie of merch
ing to the the cede rather v
whether perso
their countrie highnesse dis
time of their c things haue b neere for thy Princes of the brought, and v fer to be cran
the sayd Sir by shipwack
ships did vnto they fought v
and as many doth not forgo excellent Mar Garret with h
with thy acri
dominions, as thy officers in banding. An where suggest time betwixt nation, as Ra some differenc riously, and things, and a be of no credit
highnesse req
betwixt vnto
ship with such now thy good

an answer, God with Loys, her loving bro-
 and others to depart, Counsell, and holding
 us.
 thee our trustie and fastresse at thy coming o, with a full and were us at severall times and Edward Good-sent our messengers to thou shouldst reme-
 ll, and abuse with euil
 . And understanding
 ed, with whom were
 , and that in our Em-
 and would suffer none re informed that one a, Ambassadour from r Citie of Mosco, at and the saide Thomas should come and cons comming, looking refused to come to our lague, the saide Tho-
 with wee gaue him ar-tres, and nothing to at they are the slave of then Parcbants,
 ia, and were dealt with Paictie and us, might our Ambassadour and
 nde the same, but our ontrary to our expectaeched his highnesse to believe those words to be.
 sende by mee unto the tres, immediately and Queenes Paictie her ghnesse did willingly re the same, the next ambassadour Thomas
 tie well known, and amission not onely to princely and secret ab-at I was not free athe Queenes Paicties andolfe departed with sent. And where Counsell of the ma-
 on: which was: first g all Princes, when whereas the saide Thome, and promised (Loyd) thou didst may please thy Paic-
 tie

to understand, that as the said Thomas Randolfe doth confesse, that in verbe he had talke with thy Highnes, and counsell divers times about princely affaires; even to the denieth that euer he do agree, conclude, or make any promise in any condition or order, as is alleged oherwise then it should please the Queene her Paictie to take of, at his returne home, which he did iustifie to thy Highnes Ambassadoz his face in England. Wherefore most mightie Prince, it doth wel appear, and the either thy Ambassadoz did vntrely enforce thy Paictie, or els thy princely minde, and the true meaning of the Queenes Highnes thy Ambassadoz, for want of a good Interpreter, was not well understood: and how thankefully the Queene her Paictie did receive thy Highnes commendations, and letters sent by thy Paicties Ambassadoz, and how graciously he gaue him audience sundry times, vntill him with such honour in al points for thy sake Loys, her loving brother, as the like was neuer shewed to any Ambassadoz in our Realme, and how honorably with full au-thore in all things, her Paictie dismissed him, when he had finished all thy princely affaires (as it seeme) to his owne contentation, it may well appear by a true certificate lately sent with her Highnes letter unto thee Loys, by her Messenger Robert Beaf, and her Paictie did suppose that that thy Ambassadoz would haue made report accordingly, and that by him thy Highnes would haue bene satisfied in all things: oherwise he would haue sent her Paicties Ambassadoz with him unto thee Loys againe. But now her Highnes perceiving that thy Paictie is not fully satisfied in thy princely affaires, neither by Thomas Randolfe, her Highnes Ambassadoz, nor by thine owne Ambassadoz Andrea Saayne, nor yet by her Paicties letter, sent by the said Andrea: and also understanding thy great griefe and displeasure towards sir William Garret, and his company, merchants traffiking in thy Paicties dominions, hath thought good to send me at this present unto thee Loys Emperour, and great Duke, as well with her Highnes full mind, touching thy princely affaires, as also to knowe the iust cause of thy Paicties said displeasure towards the said company of merchants: and hath commanded me to answeere to all things in their behalfe, and according to their true meanings. For her Highnes doth suppose thy Paicties indignation, to pro-ceede rather vpon the euill, and vntreue reports of thy late Ambassadoz in England, and of such wicked persons of our nation resident here in thy Highnes dominions, rebels to her Paictie, and their countrie, then of any iust defects of the saide merchants, who neuer willingly deserved thy Highnes displeasure, but rather fauour in all their doings and meanings. And since the first time of their traffiking in thy Paicties dominions, which is no more thane seuerall yeeres, the said merchants haue bene, and are at waies readie and willing truly to serue thy highnesse of all things meete for thy treasure, in time of peace and of warre in despite of all thy enemies: although the Princes of the East seas were agreed to stoppe the sounde, and the way to the Narue, and haue bought, and do bring from time to time such commodities to thee Loys, as her Paictie doth not suffer to be transported forth of her Realme to no other Prince of the world. And what great losse the saide Sir William Garret, with his company hath sustained of late yeeres in this trade, as well by shipwacke, as by false seruantes it is manifestly knowen: and what seruaice the saide companies they did unto thy Paictie against thy enemies, two yeeres past in going to the Narue, when they fought with the king of Poles shippes Freebooters, and burnt the same and slew the people, and as many as were taken alive deliuered unto thy Captaine at the Narue, I trust thy Highnes doth not forget. Wherefore most mightie Prince, the premises considered, the Queene her most excellent Paictie thy loving Sister, doeth request thy Highnes to restore the saide Sir William Garret with his company into thy princely fauour againe, with their priuiledges for free traffike with thy accustomed goodnes and iustice, to be ministered vnto them throughout all thy Paicties dominions, as aforesayd: and that the same may be signified by thy princely letters, directed to thy officers in all places, any thy highnesse commandement or restraint to the contrary notwithstanding.
 And further that it will please thy Paictie, not to giue credite to false reportes, and vntreue suggestions of such as are enemies, and such as neither would haue mutuall amity to continue betwixt your Paicties, nor yet entercoure betwixt your countries. And such rebels of our nation, as Ralfe Rutter, and others which lye lurking heere in thy Highnes dominions, seeking to sowe dissensions betwixt your Paicties by false surmises, spending away their masters goodes dishonestly, and will not come home to giue by their accounts, aduancing themselves to bee merchants, and able to serue thy Highnes of all things fitte for thy treasure. whereas in verbe they be of no credite, nor able of themselves to doe thy Paictie any seruice at all: the Queenes Highnesse request is, that it would please thy Paictie to commaunde that such persons may bee deliuered vnto me to be carried home, leaue by their remaining here, and hauing practises & friendship with such as be not thy highnesse friends, their euill doing might be a cause hereafter to withdraw thy goodnes from Sir William Garret and his companie, who haue true meaning in all their

their doings, and are ready to serue thy Highnes at all times, vnto many other wordes to the aduancement of your crookes, and the disgracing of your enemies, and so I ended for this time.

Then said his Highnes, we haue heard you, and will consider of all things further, when we haue read the Queene our sisters letters: to whom I answered, that I supposed his Highnes should by those letters vnderstand her Highnes full mind to his contentation, and what wanted in writing. I had credite to accomplish in word. Wherewith his Highnes seemed to be well pleased, and commanded me to sit downe. And after pausing a while, his Highnes said these wordes vnto me, It is now a time which we spend in fasting, and praying, being the weeke before Easter, and for that we will shortly depart from hence, towards our borders of Nouogrode, we can not giue you answer, nor your dispatch here, but you shall goe from hence, and tary vs vpon the way, where we will shortly come, and then you shall knowe our pleasure, and haue your dispatch. And so I was dismissed to my lodging, and the same day I had a dinner ready vnto me from his Highnes, with great store of wines, of diuers sortes, and the next day following, being the foure and thirtieth of Marche aforesaide, the chiefe Secretarie to his Highnes, came vnto mee a Gentleman, to signifie vnto mee, that the Emperours Highnes pleasure was, I should immediately depart towards a Citie, called Orwer, three hundred miles, from the aforesaid Sloboda, and there to tary his Highnes comming vnto a place called Scarys, thre score miles from the said Orwer.

Then I sent my Interpreter to the chiefe Secretarie, requesting him to further, and bring his fauour vnto our said merchans in their sutes, which they should haue occasion to moue in my absence: who sent me word againe, that they should be well assured of his friendship, & furtherance in all their sutes. And shortly after post hoyses were sent me, with a Gentleman to conduct me. And so departing from the said Sloboda, I arrived at the said Orwer, the 28. of Marche aforesaide, where I remained till the eight of May following. Then I was sent for, to come vnto his Highnes, to the said Scarys, where I arrived the tenth of the same, and the twelfth of the same, I was appoynted to come to the chiefe Secretarie, who at our meeting sayde vnto mee these wordes.

Our Lord Emperour, and great Duke, hath not onely perused the Queene her Highnes letters sent by you, and thereby doth perceaue her mind, as well touching their princely affaires, as also her earnest request in the merchans behalfe, but also hath well pondered your wordes. And therefore his Highnes pleasure is, that you let me vnderstand, what sutes you haue to moue in the merchans behalfe, or otherwise, for that to morrowe, you shall haue access againe vnto his Highnes, and shall haue full answer in all things, with your dispatch away.

Then after long conference had with him of diuers matters, I gaue him in writing certaine briefe articles of requests, which I had drawn out ready, as followeth.

1. First the Queenes Highnes request is, that it would please the Emperours Highnes to let me knowe the iust cause of his great displeasure fallen vpon Sir William Garret, & his companie, who neuer deserued the same, to their knowlege.
2. Also that it would please his Highnes, not to giue credite vnto false and untrue reports, by such as seeke to sowe dissention, and breake friendship, betwixt the Queenes Highnes, and his Highnes.
3. Also that it would please his Highnes to receaue the said Sir William Garret, with his companie, into his fauour againe, and to restore them to their former priuiledges, and libertie, for free traffike in, and through, and out of all his Highnes dominions, in as ample manner as aforesaid, according to his princely letters of priuiledge, and accustomed goodnes.
4. Also it would please his Highnes to grant, that the said companie of merchans may haue iustice of all his subjects, as well for money owing vnto them, as other their griefes and iniuries, throughout all his dominions suffered since the time of his displeasure, during which time, the merchans were forced by seuerer iustice to answer in all mens demands, but the same could not be heard.
5. Also that his Highnes would vnderstand, what much wronges are done to the said merchans, by diuers of his Nobilitie, whereof part are in durance, and some executed, and the said merchans knowe not how to be paid, and answered the same, except his Highnes picke their case, and command some order to be taken therein.
6. Also it would please his Highnes to command that the said merchans may be paid all such summe, or summes of money as are owing, and due vnto them by his Highnes, for wares, as well English, as Shamakye, taken into his Highnes treasure by his officers in sundry places, the long forbearing whereof hath bene, and is great hinderance to the said companie of merchans.

many other words to the
, and so I ended by that things further, when her I supposed his Spaitie tion, and what wautes seemed to be well plea Spaitie said these wopes ing the weeke before Ca s of Nouogrode, we can ence, and tarp vs upon the ature, and haue your dis d a dinner ready byt sent and the next day following, rearie to his Spaitie, frze Spaities pleasure was, I to miles, from the stop lab ryts, thyee scoye miles from m to further, and thyeing his occasion to moue in my ab friendship, & furtherance serman to couduer me. Am 28. of Marche aforesaid, fo, to come vnto his Spai the twelfth of the same, I king sayde vnto me these

Queene her Dignies lo their princely affaires, as undered your wopes. And Iunes you haue to moue in ue accesse againe vnto his a way.

me him in writing certaine p.

the Emperours Dignies William Garret, & his com o false and vntue reportes e Queenes Dignies, and William Garret, with his com ges, and liberties, for free imple manner as aforesayd, is.

nie of merchants may haue their grieues and iniuries, during which time, the mer che they could not be heard ing to the said merchants, ed, and the said merchants picie their case, and com merchants may be paid all his Spaitie, for wares, as officers in sundry places, and compaie of merchants, 7 Also

7 Also it would please his Spaitie to vnderstand, that at this present time there are in Persia of English merchants, Thomas Banister, and Geofrye Ducker, with their companie, and goods, ready to come into his Spaities Countrey of Astracan, and would haue come the last yere, but that the ship, with our merchants, and mariners, appointed to goe for them, were staid at Astracan by his Dignies Captaine there, to the great hinderance of the said merchants. Wherefore it may now please his Spaitie, to direct his princely letters vnto his Capitaines, and rulers, both at Astracan, and Cazan, not onely to suffer our people, as well merchants, as mariners, quietly, and freely to passe and repaile with their shippes, barkes, or other vessels downe the riuer Volga, and ouer the Mare Caspium, to fetch the said English merchants, with their companie, and goods, out of the said Persia, into his Spaities dominions, but also that it would please his Dignies strigely to command, that when the said Thomas Banneller, and Geofrye Ducker, with their charge, shall arrive at the saide Astracan, his Spaities Captaine there, and in all other places, bypon the riuer Volga, shall so aide and assist the said merchants, as they may be safely conducted out of the danger of the Turmines, and others their enemies.

8 Also it may please his Dignies to vnderstand, that lately our merchants comming from Shamakey, haue bene ill vsed by his Spaities Customers, both at Astracan, and Cazan, at both which places they were forced to pay custome for their wares, although they solde no part thereof, but brought the same into his Dignies treasure at Sloboda: and the said Customers did not onely exact, and take much more custome then was due by his Spaities lawes, but also for want of present monie,ooke wares much exceeding their exacted custome, and doe keepe the same as a pawning. It may therefore please his Dignies to direct his princely letters to the said Customers, to signify vnto them his great goodnes againe redoyed vnto the saide English merchants, as also to command and them to send the said merchants their said goods so detained, vnto the Musko, they paying such custome for the same, as shall be by his Spaitie appointed.

9 Also that it would please his Dignies to grant, that sir William Garret, with his companie, may establish their trade for merchandise at Colmogro in Dwina, and that such wares as shall be brought out of our Countrey for his treasure might be looked vpon, and receaued by his officers there: and that his Spaities people traffiking with our merchants, may bring downe their commodities to the said Colmogro, by meanes whereof the saide English merchants auoiding great troubles, and charges, in transporting their goods so farre, and into so many places of his dominions, may sell the same better cheape, to the benefite of his Spaities subiects.

10 Also if it seemed good to his Dignies, that the whole trade likewise from Persia, Boghar, and all other those Countreies beyond the Mare Caspium, might be established at Astracan, the ancient marke towne in times past, which would be both for the great honour, and profite of his Spaitie, and subiects, as I am well able to proue, if it shall please his Dignies to appoint any of his counsell to talke with me therein.

11 Also so farre as it pleased his Spaitie immediately after the burning of the Musko, to command that the said English merchants should giue in a noce into his treasure, for their losses sustained by the said fire, which was done by William Rowlye, then chiefe Agent for sir William Garret, and his company, and the particulars in the same noce contained with the said fire, wd amount to the summe of 10000. roubles, and aboute: It may please his Dignies of his accustomed goodnes, and great clemencie, to consider of the same, and to giue the saide companie so much as shall seeme good vnto his Spaitie, to wards their said losses.

12 Also that it will please his Dignies, to vnderstand that the Queenes most excellent Spaitie, at the earnest suites and request of Andrea Sauyne his Spaities Ambassadoy, did not onely pardon and forgiue Thomas Glouer, his great and grievous offences towards her Dignies committed, onely for his Spaities sake, but also commanded sir William Garret, with his companie, to deale fauorably with the said Glouer, in his accomps, so that he was undered greatly, and being their seruant, detained their goods in his hands a long time: whereupon the said sir William Garret, with his companie, counted with the saide Glouer, and ended all things, euen to his sad contentation, and was found to be debter to the said companie, 4000. roubles, and aboute, and bound him selfe both by his solemn othe, and his hand writing, to pay the same immediately after his returne into Russia, with the said Andrea Sauyne, vnto Nicholas Proctor, chiefe Agent there, for the said companie of merchants. But although it is now two yeeres past, since the saide agreement, and that the said Nicholas hath diuers, and sundry times requested the said monie of the said Thomas, yet will he not pay the same debt, but maketh delay from time to time, alleging that his Spaitie oweth him a great summe of money, without the payment whereof, he can not be able to pay the said merchants his due debt long forborne, to their great hinderance. In consideration of the premises, It may please his Highnes, to giue order that the said Glouer may be paid, and that he may discharge his debt to the saide company of merchants, and the rather for that he found such merite and fauour in England, ouerly for his Paicties sake.

13 Also forasmuch as Ralfe Kutter, a rebell to the Queenes Paictie, and an enemy to his Countrey, and to Sir William Garret, and his company, hath of long time remained here, luring of the spoiles and goods of the said merchants, which he wrongfully detaine in his hands, rascally spending the same, during the time that he was their seruant, and would not come home when he was sent for, and also for that the Queenes Paictie doth vnderstand, that the said Ralfe, with other his adherents, doe seeke by all false meanes, to sowe dissention, and byrake amitie betwix their Paicties, and to overthrowe the trade of the said merchants: her Highnes request is, that the said Ralfe, with his complices, may be deliuered vnto me, to be carried home, and none other of her Paicties subiects, not being of the societie of the said Sir William Garret, and his company, to be suffered to traffike within his Highnes dominions, but to be deliuered to their Agent to be sent home: for that the said merchants with great charges and losses, both by shipwacke, and riotous seruantes, did first finde out this trade, and haue continued the same, these 19. yeres, so thet the great hinderance.

14 Also whereas diuers Shakers, and artificers of our nation, are here in his Paicties seruice, and doe finde themselves grieued that they can not haue licence to depart home into their native Countrey, at their will and pleasure: the Queenes Paicties request is, according to her Highnes writing in that behalfe, that not onely it will please his Paictie to permit, and suffer such artificers, here resident in the seruice of his Highnes, to haue free libertie to depart, and goe home with mee, if they request the same, but also all other the like, which shall come hereafter to serue his Paictie, to haue free libertie to depart likewise, without any let or stay.

15 Also it may please his Paictie to vnderstand, that during the time of my long being at Colmogro, attending his Highnes pleasure, for my further access, I with my company, haue not onely bene ill used, and increased there, and likewise the merchants there, by one Bessone Myseruoye, his Paicties chiefe officer, who hath dishonored me, and smitten my people, and vnder the said merchants much money, and will not pay them: but also the saide Bessone hath spoken wordes of dishonor against the Queenes Paictie. Wherefore it may please his Highnes to send do home with me to Colmogro, a Gentleman, as well chesly to serch forth his cuill behauiour towards her Paictie, as towards me her Highnes Ambassador, and to punish him accordingly: and also that it would please his Paictie to sende do home his letter of iustice, by veruey whereof, the said Bessone may be forced to pay all such money as he owerth to the saide merchants, without delay.

16 Also that it would please his Highnes to vnderstand, that Sir William Garret, with his company, vnderstanding of the great dearth in his Paicties dominions, by licence of his Queenes Paictie, (not oherwise permitted) hath sent certaine ships laden with coine into his Highnes Countrey of Dwyna, rather for the reliefe of his Paicties subiects, then for any gaine: yet the good will of the said merchants lightly regarded, they were forbidden to sell the said coine, so their great discouragement hereafter to send any more. Wherefore it may please his Highnes, to reuer the good will of the said merchants, as well in sending the said coine, as in all other things, ready to serue his Paictie, and to direct his letters to his officers of Dwyna, to suffer the saide merchants, with their company, to sell the said coine by measure great, or small, at their pleasure, without paying custome.

These articles being deliuered to the chiefe Secretarie, as aforesaide, and our talke ended for that time, I departed to my lodging, accompanied with certaine Gentlemen. The next day, being the 13. of May aforesaid, I had warning early in the morning, to prepare my selfe to be at the Court, betwix the howses of 10. and 11. of the clocke, where I should haue access vnto the presence of the Prince, as well to recreate and viewe of all things, as to be dismissed to goe home. At which howses I was sent for to the Court, and brought into the Chamber of presence, where his Paictie did sit appareled most sumptuously, with a rich Crowne vpon his head, garnished with many precious stones, his rict face sitting by him, and many of his Nobilitie about him: and after my dutie done, his Highnes commanded me to approach very neere vnto him, and saide vnto me these wordes.

Anthony, the Queene our louing sister her letters wee haue caused to be translated, and doe well vnderstande the same, and of all things as well therein contained, as by wordes of mouth by you to vs declared, wee haue well considered, and doe perceiue that our secret message vnto you committed, was done truly according to our minde (although wee were the said Glouer may be paid, and the rather for that he is.

aduertise

hostile, and an enemy to his country, and remained here, being detained in his hands, now, and would not come home, nor understand, that the said Ralf, in intention, and byake amitie betwixt us: her Highnes request is, that he be carried home, and none of William Garret, and his company be deliuered to their Agre, nor losses, doeth by shipwracke, the same, these 19. yerres so was here in his Maiesties seruice, to depart home into their native request is, according to her Maiestie to permit, and suffer the libertie to depart, and goe, which shall come hereabout, without any let or stay.

the time of my long being at sea, with my company, have had many changes there, by one Bessons smitten my people, and owing to the said Bessone hath spoken it may please his Highnes to search forth his full behauiour, and to punish him according to the letter of iustice, by vertue of the said letter of iustice, and to the said merchants,

William Garret, with his company, by licence of the Queenes, which come into his Highnes, then for any gaine: yet the same to sell the said coyne, so that they please his Highnes, to receive, as in all other things, Dwyne, to suffer the same, as of small, at their pleasure, made, and our talke ended by the said Ralf. The next day, being the 10. of May, I prepared my selfe to be at the said house, as well as the said Ralf, to be dismissed to goe home. At the chamber of presence, where his Highnes was seated, garnished with his Maiesties about him: and there vnto him, and saide vnto me to be translated, and be translated, as by word of mouth, because that our secret conference (although we were adverted to the contrary) and now we are by you fully satisfied. And when we did send our Ambassadors into England, about those our great, and weightie affaires, to conclude the same with the Queen our sister, our Ambassadors could enoe nothing for want of such assurance as was required in princely affaires, according to the manner of all Countreies, but was dismissed vnto us againe, with letters of small effect, touching the same, and no Ambassadors sent with him from the Queen: which caused vs to thinke, that our princely affaires were set aside, and little regarded, wherevnto we were at that time much grieued: for the which cause, and for the which behauiour of your merchants, resident in our dominions (who haue diuers wayes transgressed and broken our lawes, liuing wilfully in all their doings) we did lay our heauie displeasure vpon them, and did take away from them their priuiledge, commanding that the same throughout all our dominions, should be void, and of none effect: and thereupon did write to the Queen our sister, touching our grieues.

And now to her Highnes hath sent vnto us againe, you her Ambassadors, with her louing letters, and full minde, which we doe thankfully receive, and are thereby fully satisfied. And for that our princely, and secret affaires were not finished to our contentation at our time appointed, according to our expectation, we doe now leaue of all those matters, and set them aside for the time, because our minde is now otherwise changed, but hereafter when occasion shall moue vs to the like, we will then talke of those matters againe. And for that it hath pleased the Queen, our louing sister, to sende vnto us at this present, and doeth desire to continue in friendshippe with vs for euer (which wee doe gratefully accept, and willingly agree to the same) we of our goodnes for her Highnes sake, will not onely from henceforth put away, and forget all our displeasure towards the same Sir William Garret, and his company (as though they had neuer offended vs) but also will restore them to their priuiledges, & liberties, in, and throughout all our dominions, and will signifye the same by our letters, in all towncs and cities, where the said merchants doe traffike, and we will shewe them fauour as afoze time, if they deserue not the contrary. And if the Queen our sister had not sent thee Anthony vnto us, at this present, thou knowest what we should haue done to the said merchants, or whether we would haue called backe our indignation.

Then I humbly beseeched his Maiestie, to let me know the particular offences committed by the said merchants, and the offenders names, to the intent I might make report thereof, vnto the Queenes Maiestie, my mistres, accordingly, that the said offenders might receive full punishments for their defaults: but he said, I should not know them, because he had cleerely remitted all offences: and further, that it was not princely to forgive, and after to accuse the parties, whereby her Maiesties displeasure might fall vpon them at home. Notwithstanding I did after vnderstand some part thereof, by other means.

Then his Maiestie proceeding in this, saide: As touching the articles of request, concerning the merchants affaires, which you did yesterday deliuer vnto our Secretarie, we haue not onely read the same our selfe, but also haue appointed our said Secretarie to declare vnto you our minde, and answer to the same. And for that we are now vpon our Iourney towards our borders, and will depart from hence shortly, we will dismiss you to the Queen our louing sister, your mistres, with our letters, and full minde by word of mouth, touching all your requests, & will send a Gentleman one of our household with you, to safeconduce you to your ships: and of our goodnes will giue you victuals, boates, men, and post horses, so many as you shall neede. And therewith his Maiestie standing by, and putting off his cappe, said vnto me these wordes. Doe our hartie commendations vnto our louing sister, Queenes Elizabeth, vnto whome we wish long life, with happy success: and therewith his Highnes extended his hand to me to kisse, and commanded his sonne, standing by him, to send the like commendations, which he did, whose hand likewise I kissed. And then his Maiestie caused me to sit downe, and commanded mine, and diuides of diuers letters to be brought, whereof he gaue me to vnto me to vnto me, with his owne hand, and so after I departed.

Then the next day, being the 14. of May afozesaid, I was sent for to come to the cheefe Secretarie, and one other of the Counsell with him, who at our meeting said vnto me these wordes: We are appointed by the Emperour his Maiestie, to giue you answer from his Highnes, touching your requests deliuered in writing, which his Maiestie himselfe hath perused, and answered as followeth.

The first request it is answered, that all his Maiesties grieues and displeasure (not put away from the merchants) did grow, because the Queenes Maiestie did not accomplish and enoe with his Ambassadors, his secret and weightie affaires, according to his expectation, and the promise made by Thomas Randolph, at his being here: and also of the ill behauiour of your merchants

- chans resident here in our Countrey, as his Maieitie did himselfe yesterday declare unto you.
- 2 To the second, his Maieitie willetch you to understand, that he hath nor, nor will not hereafter be moued to breake friendship with the Queenes Maieitie, without good, and iust cause.
- 3 To the third, you are answered by the Emperours Maieitie himselfe, that his great goodness and fauour againe vnto the merchants, shall be reioyced, and the same to be knowne by his gracious letters of pmissiōe, now againe granted.
- 4 To the fourth, his Maieitie hath commanded, that your merchants here resident shall abide, and put in writing vnto me his Maieities Secretarie, all their grieues, and complaints, as well for debts, as other iniuries offered them since the time of his Highnes displeasure, and they shall haue iustice truly ministred throughout all his Maieities dominions without delay.
- 5 To the fifth, his Maieitie doth not knowe of any debts due vnto the merchants, by any of his Noblemen, as is alleaged; and whether it be true or no, he knoweth not, the truth whereof must be tried out, and thereupon answer to be giuen; and hereafter his Maieitie would not haue the merchants to trust his people with too much.
- 6 To the sixth, it is answered, that his Maieitie hath commanded search to be made, what money is owing to the merchants, for wares receaued into his treasure, as in the article; (the rest of the bookes of accompt being burnt in the Musko) and such as is due, and founde merite to be payde, shall be payde forthwith to the merchants, their factors, or seruantes, which shall come for the same. And for payment of the rest, his Maieities further pleasure shall be signified hereafter.
- 7 To the seventh, his Maieities answer is, that letters shall be written forthwith to his Captaines of Afracan, and Cazan, and other his officers, vpon the riuer Volga, to welcome it appertaineth, not onely to suffer your people, both merchants, and mariners, to passe with their ships, or barques, from Afracan, ouer the Mare Caspium, to streche Thomas Bannister, and George Ducker, with their companie, and goods, out of Persia, but also when they shall arriue within his Maieities dominions, to ayde, and assist them, and see them safely conducted by the riuer Volga, from danger of enemies.
- 7 To the eighth, his Maieitie hath commanded letters to be written to the Customers, both of Afracan, and Cazan, to make restitution to the English merchants of their goods so detained by them for custome, and to take custome for the same, according to his Maieities letters of pmissiōe.
- 9 To the ninth and tenth articles, his Maieitie will consider of those matters, and hereafter will signifye his princely pleasure therein.
- 11 To the eleuenth, as touching an inuencoye giuen into the treasure, what goods the merchants had burnt in the Musko, in their houses there, his Maieities pleasure was, to vnderstande the same, to the intent he might knowe the losses of all Strangers at that present, but not to make restitution, for that it was Gods doing, and not the Emperours.
- 12 To the twelfth, concerning Thomas Glouer, his Maieitie was informed by his Ambassadors, of the Queenes great merrie and clemencie towards the said Thomas, for his sake, which his Highnes receaued in good part, but what agreement or dealings was betwixt the said Sir William Garret, and his companie, and the said Glouer, or what he doth owe vnto the saide merchants, his Maieitie doth not knowe. And as for the money which the saide Thomas sayeth is owing vnto him by the Emperour, his Maieities pleasure is, that so much as shall be found due, and growing vpon wares deliuered vnto the treasure, ouer the time of his Maieities displeasure, shall be paid forthwith to the saide Thomas, and the rest is referred vnto his Maieitie, and taken for a fine, as appertaining to Rutter, and Bennet, accompted traytors vnto his Highnes, during the time of his displeasure.
- 13 To the thirteenth article, concerning Rutter to be deliuered vnto you, so be carried home, as afore was, that as his Maieitie will not detain any English man in his Countrey, that is willing to goe home, according to the Queenes request: euen so will he not force any to depart, that is willing to tary with him. Yet his Highnes, so farre as the Queenes Maieities request is concerned at this present, to sende the saide Ralf Rutter home with you, and hath commanded that a letter shall be written vnto his cheefe officer at the Musko, to sende the said Rutter away with speed, that he maye see with you at Vologhda, by the line of Spaye, without faile: and touching the rest of your request in the said article, his Maieities pleasure shall be signified in the letters of pmissiōe, granted to the saide merchants.
- 14 To the foureteenth, touching artificers, his Maieitie will accomplish all the Queenes Highnes request in that behalfe, and now at this present doth licence such and so many to depart, to their native Countrey, as are willing to goe.

15 To the 15
and will sende decent words ag chans for his o imprisoned and procure high de
his officers beh nor the like v
others for their Siluester by his ship betwixt che 16 To the 1
the merchants; h
giue you a letter
chans to sell the Thus I recei
comfess, so the 1
his letter also sen letters of pmissi
I might caue the his maieitie to c Concerning the
them with you, s written of one re
maieities pleasu
to wards Howg
show you with sp here because we wherefore the del
let him repaire v his maieitie to be Due for as mu had earnestly w struants, one m not faile to come
should commen
the said secre
erie of money, a in any wise that my leue with s gentleman who also for me all the the said R shall presently de ced from the sayd my iourney, I a depes as well exp ming of Rutter,
sent vnto me wit
for the same. R knowe the suuere Due I could not write, because by sent a messenger couer then lay
sent vnto me acc
the said letters of will returne to me

declare unto you, nor will not be
and iust cause.

that his great
be known by his

re receive shall
and complaints,
pleasure, and they without delay.

merchants, by any of the truth whereof maistie would not be to be made, what the articles (the most founde merchautes

s, which shall come shall be signified here en forthwith to his olga, to whom it ap-

passe with their ships, minister, and George shall arrive within his up the river Volga.

the Customers, both of goods so detained by letters of privilege,
the matters, and herein what goods the mer-

was, to understande sent, but not to make med by his Ambassa-

of his sake, which his the said Sir Wil-
the saide merchants, saye is owing unto and due, and growing pleasure, shall be paid and taken for a fine, as during the time of his

to be carried home the Countrie, that is with-ce any to depart, the his request, as com-
commanded that a letter away with speed, and touching the rest of letters of privilege,

with all the Queens
and so many to depart.

15 To the 15 touching Besson Mesleruicy, the Emperours maistie is much offended with him, and will send downe a gentleman with you to inquire of his ill behavioy, as wel for speaking of un-derstande against the Quenes maistie as you have alleaged, as also against you, and the merchants for his outrages mentioned in the article, and the said Besson being founde guiltie, to bee imprisoned and punished by severer iustice accordingly, and after to put in sureties to answer the Emperours high displeasure, or els to be brought up like a prisoner by the said gentleman, to answer his offences before his maistie. And his highnes doth request that the Quenes highnesse would use the like upon Middleton and Manlie her messengers true higher two yeres past, and of all others for their ill behavioy towards his maistie, as may appere by the letters sent by Daniel Silvester by his highnesse, least by the bad demeanour of such two persons, the amitie and friendship betwixt their maisties might be diminished.

16 To the 16 and last article touching the coyne brought into the Emperours dominions by the merchants, his maistie doth greatly commend them for so well doing, and hath commanded to give you a letter forthwith in their behalfe, directed to his officers of Dwina, to suffer the said merchants to sell their coyne, by measure great or small at their pleasure without custome.

Thus I received a full answer from his maistie by his chiefe Secretarie and our other of his counsel to the 16 articles aforesaid rehearsed, by me expressed in writing touching your affaires, with his letter also sent by me to the Quenes maistie. Which being done, I requested that the new letters of privilege granted by his highnes unto you, might be forthwith dispatched to the intent I might carie the same with me. Also I requested that such money due to you, which it had pleased his maistie to command to be paid, might be delivered to me in your behalfe.

Touching the letters of privilege, the Secretarie answered me, it is not possible you can have them with you, for they must be first written and then sent unto the Emperour, and then they to be written of one tenour according to your request, which cannot be done with such speed, for that his maisties pleasure is, you shall depart this night before him, who remouerth himselfe to morrow towards Roudgrod: but without faile the said letters shall be dispatched upon the way, and sent unto you with speed to Colmogor. And as touching the money which you require, it cannot be paid here because we have not the bookes of accounts: for want whereof wee know not what to paie, wherefore the best is that you send one of the merchautes after the Emperour to Roudgrod, and let him repaire unto me there, and without faile I will pay all such money as shall be appointed by his maistie to be paid, after the bookes seene.

But so much as there was a me of your seruantes with mee at that present (although I had earnestly written unto your Agent Nicholas Proctor by Richard Single one of your owne servantes, one moneth before my comming to Starites, where I had my dispatch, that he should not faile to come himselfe, or send one of your seruants to me hither, to follow all such suites as I should commence in your behalfs, which he neglected to doe to your great hurtance) I requested the said Secretarie that I might leave Daniel my interpreter with him, as well for the receipt of money, as for the speedie dispatch of the letters of privilege, but it would not be granted in any wise that I should leave any of mine owne companie behind me, and thereupon I did take my leave with full dispatch, and departed to my lodging, and forthwith there came unto me a gentleman who had charge as well to conduct me, and provide boates, men, horse and victuals for me all the way to the Sea Doe, being a thousand and three hundred miles, as also to doe iustice of the said Besson, as aforesaid. And he sayd unto me, the Emperours pleasure is, that you shall presently depart from hence, and I am appointed to goe with you. And that night I departed from the said Starites, being the fourteenth of May aforesaid. And passing a great part of my journey, I arrived at the citie of Bologna the last of the said May, where I remained due space as well expecting a messenger to bring unto mee the new letters of privilege, as the com-ming of Ruzer, whom the Emperours maistie himselfe commanded before my face, should be sent unto me without faile, and I did see the letters written to the chiefe officers at the Poska for the same. Ruzer beinge the said Ruzer did not come, neither could I heare of him after, nor know the hidden cause of his stay contrary to the princes owne worde and meaning, as I suppose.
But I could not helpe the matter beinge farre from the prince, neither could I tell how to have reprie, because by absence I could not complaine. Notwithstanding, I used all my industrie, and sent a messenger John Roizen one of your seruantes from Bologna to Roudgrod, where the countrey lay expressly with letters, as well to advertise his maistie that the said Ruzer was not sent unto me according to his highnesse commandement and order, as also about the dispatch of the said letters of privilege and receipt of your money, with straight charge that he should in any wise returne unto me againe before the departing of the ships.

Rt.

And

And the first day of June I departed from the said Vologda by water towards Colmogro, where I arrived the 21. of June aforesaid, and remained there until the 23. of July, looking for the said John Hojton to have returned unto me in all that time, which had respice fully inough in that spare both to goe to the court to dispatch his businesse, and to have returned againe unto me, but he came not, so it was otherwise determined before his going, as I did after understand, & can make at large by word of mouth declare unto your worshipps, the occasion thereof.

Acuerbelesse, I am well assured before this time your Agent hath receiued into his hands the sayd letters of priuiledges, and shall haue dispatch with expedition in all things touching your affaires, according to his maiesties graunt by me obtained, and as hee hath written to the Queenes maiestie at this present, wishing that as now by my going the Emperour hath withdrawn his grieuous displeasure from you, and reioyced you againe into his fauour, so your Agent and others your seruants there resident may behaue, and endeuour themselves to keepe & augment the same, whose euill doings haue bene the one by occasion of his indignation now remitted.

The names of such countries as I Anthonie Jenkinson haue trauelled vnto from the second of October, 1546. at which time I made my first voiage out of England, vntill the yeere of our Lord, 1572. when I returned last out of Russia.

First, I passed into Flanders, and trauelled throug all the base countries, and from thence throug Germanie, passing ouer the Alpes I trauelled into Italy, and from thence made my iourney throug Piemont into France, througout all which realme I haue througely iourneied.

I haue also trauelled throug the kingdoms of Spaine and Portugal, I haue sailed throug the Levant seas eury way, and haue bene in all the cheefe Islands within the same sea, as Rhodes, Malta, Sicilia, Cypres, Candie, and diuers others. I haue bene in many partes of Grecia, Roza, Achais, and where the olde cite of Corinth stood.

I haue trauelled throug a great part of Turkie, Syria, and diuers other countreys in Asia minor.

I haue passed ouer the mountaines of Libanus to Damasco, and trauelled throug Samaria, Galile, Iudistine and Palestine, vnto Jerusalem, and so throug all the holy land.

I haue bene in diuers places of Africa, as Algiers, Cola, Boua, Tripolis, the Collet within the gulfe of Tunis.

I haue sailed farre Northward within the Mare glaciale, where wee haue had continuall day, and sight of the Sunne ten weekes together, and that nauigation was in Norway, Lapland, and Magotia, and other very strange places.

I haue trauelled throug all the ample dominions of the Emperour of Russia and Moscou, which extende from the North sea, and the confines of Norway, and Lapland, euen to the Mare Caspium.

I haue bene in diuers countries neere about the Caspian sea, Geutles, and Mahometans, as Casan, Cremia, Rezan, Cheremisi, Mordouiti, Vachin, Nagaia, with diuers others of strange customes and religions.

I haue sailed ouer the Caspian sea, and discovered all the regions thereabout adiacent, as Chircassi, Comul, Shafcall, Shiruan, with many others.

I haue trauelled 40. daies a iourney beyond the said sea, towards the Orientall India, and Cebais, throug diuers deserts and wilberneses, and passed throug 5. kingdome of the Tartars, and all the land of Turkeman and Zagatap, and so to the great cite of Boghar in Bactria, not with out great perils and dangers sundry times.

After all this, in An. 1562, I passed againe ouer the Caspian sea another way, and landed in Armenia, at a cite called Derbent, built by Alexander the great, and from thence trauelled throug Media, Parchia, Hircania, into Persia to the court of the great Sophie called Shaw Tamasso, vnto whom I deliuered letters from the Queenes maiestie, and remained in his court 8. moneths, and returning home ward, passed throug diuers other countreys. Finally I made two voyages more after that out of England into Russia, the one in the yeere 1566, and the other in the yeere 1571. And thus being wearie and growing old, I am content to take my rest in mine owne house, chiefly comforting my selfe, in that my seruice hath bene honourably accepted and rewarded of her maiestie and the rest by whom I haue bene employed.

er towards Colmogro, where 3. of Iulie, looking for the said and respice fully inough in the returned againe unto me, but he id after vnderland, & can make thereof.

th received into his hands the in all things touching your af-ee hath written to the Queene emperour hath withdrawn his our, to your Agent and others to keepe & augment the same, in now remitted.

Jenkinson haue tra-

h time I made my first Lord, 1572.

ough all the base countreies, and e Ayles I traueled into Italy, amont into France, throught s of Spaine and Portugall, I and haue bene in all the chiefe Candie, and diuers others.

where the olde cite of Coyne diuers other countreys in Afa nd trauelled throught Samaria, all the holy land.

, Tripolis, the Collet within re wee haue had continuall day, was in Norway, Lapland, Sa-erour of Russia and Moscoul, and Lapland, euen to the Mare seattles, and Mahometans, as with diuers others of strange cu-stres about adiacent, as Chirs the Orientall India, and Ca-

5. kingdomes of the Tartars, of Boghar in Bactria, nor with another way, and landed in Ar-from thence traueled throught hie called Shaw Tamasso, unto ed in his court 8. moneths, and ally I made two voyages more nd the other in the yere 1571.

rell in mine o tyme house, chieflcepted and rewarded of herma-

The

The request of an honest merchant to a friend of his, to be aduised and directed in the course of killing the Whale, as followeth. Anno 1575.

I pray you pleasure me in getting me perfect information of the matter hereunder specified.

What the provision and furniture for a ship of 200. tunnes, to catch the whale fish in Russia, passing from England.

How many men to furnish the ship.
How many fisher men skillfull to catch the Whale, & how many other officers, and Coopers.

How many boats, and what fashion, and how many men in each boate.
What wages of such skillfull men and other officers, as we shall need, out of Bil kay.
How many harping irons, speares, copes, axes, hatchets, knives, and other implements for the killing, and what soze and greatnesse of them.

How many hearthes, the greatnesse and maner of them, and of what metall, and whether they bee set on cruets or on furnaces for boiling of the crame oyle, and others.

What quantity of caske, and what soze of caske, and what number of boopes and twiggess, and how much thereof to be staued for the crant.

What quantity of victuals, & what kind of victuals for the men in all þ ship for 4. moneths time.
If of the common mariners and officers to gouerne the ship, we shall not need any out of Bil kay, but onely men skillfull in the catching of the Whale, and ordering of the oyle, and one Cooper skillfull to set vp the staued caske.

Also what other matters are requisite to bee knowen, and done for the said voyage to catch the Whale, not here noted nor remembred.

These requests were thus answered, which may serue as directions for all such as shall intend the same voyage, or the like for the Whale.

A proportion for the setting forth of a ship of 200. tunne, for the killing of the Whale.

Itere shall be 55. men who departing for Wardhouse in the moneth of April, must be furnished with 4. hundreth and a half of bread for every man, 250. hogsbeds to put the bread in.
150. hogsbeds of Cibar.

- 6. hundreth of oyle.
- 8. hundreth of bacon.
- 6. hogsbeds of biske.
- 10. quarters of salt.
- 150. pound of candle s.
- 8. quarters of beanes and peast.
- Shalt fish and herring, a quantite convenient.
- 4. tunnes of wines.
- Halfe a quarter of mustard seed, and a querne.
- A grindstone.
- 800. emptie shaken hogsbeds.
- 350. bundles of boopes, and 6. quintalines.
- 800. paire of beds for the hogsbeds.
- 10. Ckacha s called ropes for harping irons.
- 10. pieces of Arpoxeras.
- 3. pieces of Saibens for the Jauelings small.
- 2. sackes to curne the Whales.
- A halter of 27. fadome long to curne the Whales.
- 15. great Jauelings.
- 18. small Jauelings.
- 50. harping irons.
- 6. machicos to cut the Whale with ball.
- 2. dozen of machicos to mance the Whale.
- 2. great hookes to curne the Whale.

R. 2.

3. paire

- 3. paire of Canboates.
  - 6. bootes for Raues.
  - 3. dozen of knives for the harping irons.
  - 6. pulleys to turne the Whale with.
  - 10. great baskets.
  - 10. lampes of iron to carrie light.
  - 5. ketrels of 150 li. the piece, and 6. ladles.
  - 1000. of needles for the pinnaces.
  - 500. of needles of Carabie for the houses, and the wharfe,
  - 18. axes and hatchets to cleave wood.
  - 12. pieces of linen, and 6. dozen of hookes.
  - 2. beetles of Rosemarie.
  - 4. dozen of coores for the pinnaces.
  - 6. lanternes.
  - 500. of Tella.
- Item, gunpowder and matches for harquebushes as shall be needfull.
- Item, there must be caried from hence 5. pinnaces, five men to strike with harping irons, two cutters of Whale, 5. coopers, and a purser of stew.

A note of certaine other necessarie things belonging to the Whalefishing, received of master W. Burrough.

- A sufficient number of pulleys for tackle for the Whale.
- A dozen of great baskets.
- 4. furnaces to smelt the Whale in.
- 6. ladles of copper.
- 9 thousand of needles to mend the pinnaces.
- 500. great needles of spades to make their house.
- 3. paire of bootes great and strong, for them that shall cut the Whale.
- 2. calve skins to make apparell of barbecans.

The deposition of M. William Burrough to certaine Interrogatories ministred vnto him concerning the Narue, Kegor, &c. to what king or prince they doe appertaine and are subiect, made the 23. of Iune, 1576.

These articles seeme to haue bene ministred vpon the quarell betwene

Alderman Bond the elder, and the Moscouie companie, for his trade to the Narue without their consent.

The first Interrogatorie.

Tell, whether the villages of towne vulgarly called the Narue, Kegor, Pechingam and Cola, and the partes of the same to wane, as well as the time of the grant of the letters of priuilege by the Emperour to our merchants, as also in the yeres of our Lord, 1566, 1567, 1568, 1569, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, and 1575, respectiue were (as presently they be) of the iurisdiction, and subiect to the mightie prince the Emperour of Russia: and whether the sayd Emperour of Russia by all the time aforesaid, was chief lord and gouernour respectiue of the sayd places, and so vulgarly known, had and reputed: and whether the said towne and places, and either of them be situated towards the North and North-east of Northweest, and betwene the North and the East point: and be the same places whereunto by force of the sayd priuilege, it is forbidden to any other subiect to haue traffique, sailing to the societie aforesaid.

The second Interrogatorie.

To this Interrogatorie the deponent saith, that it is true that the villages, towne and places vulgarly called the Narue, Kegor, Pechingam and Cola, and the partes thereof, at the time of the grant of the said priuilege (as he aforesaid) were reputed respectiue to be vnder the iurisdiction, and subiect to the Emperour of Russia, and so from the time of the sayd grants, vnto the yeres, 1566, and that in the yeres of our Lord, 1566, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, and 1575, respectiue they were (as presently they be) of the iurisdiction, and subiect vnto the mightie prince the Emperour of Russia, and the same Emperour of Russia by all the time aforesaid, was chief gouernour respectiue of the said places, and so vulgarly known, had and reputed. And that all the said places are situated from London Northwards, betwene the East and the North, and within within the grant of the letters patents, and priviledges of the said companie of merchant for the traffique of new trades, and the same places inbretains by force of the said letters patents, it is for known to any other subject to have traffique saving to the societie aforesayd.

Notwithstanding the Deponent saith, that hee hath heard it credibly reported by divers, that the king of Denmarke of late yeres, or every yere once, hath had one of his subjects or more by himselfe, or with his guide a Lappian, that hath at the places, Cola, Kego, and divers other places in Lappia, taken of the Lappies certaine tribute or head pence, which the said Lappies have willingly given to him in favour of the said prince, and to live quietly by his subjects, the people of Finmarke which border upon their countrey, whereof Wardhouse is the strongest hold, & bordereth neere unto them. He hath also heard that in the time of peace betwene the said Emperour of Russia, and the kings of Sweden, there was yearly for the king of Sweden one or more that came into Lappia unto divers places, in manner as the king of Denmarke servaunt useth to doe, and did demand of them some tribute or dutie which they willingly paid: but since the late wars betwene the said Emperour and king of Sweden, he hath not heard of any thing that hath bin paid by them to the king of Sweden: such is the simplicity of this people the Lappies, that they would rather give tribute to all those that border upon their countrey, then by denying it have their ill wills.

But the truth is, as this Deponent saith, that the said mightie prince the Emperour of Russia, is the chiefe lord and governour of the said countrey of Lappia, his lawes and orders are observed by them, he takes toll and custome &c. of them. They are infidels, but if any of them become christians, it is after the Russi law. If there happen any controuersie betwene those people, such as cannot be ended amongst themselves, or by the Emperours deputies in that countrey, they repair to the spotte as their highest court, & there haue it ended. Betwene the place specified Kego, & the confines of Finmarke aforesaid in Lappia, is the monastrie Werchingam, which are monkes, and the chiefe lord, the chiefe of that abbey is atwaies appointed by the clergy in spollo.

Werchingam abbey.

Also in the yere of our Lord, 1557. the said Deponent was at the place Kego, in the month of June, the 29. day being S. Peters day, at which time was a great assembly of people, at a part there, the Russes, Kerles and Lappians, on the one side subjects to the said mightie prince & Emperour of Russia, and the Swedegians or Kozles and people of Finmarke, subjects to the king of Denmarke on the other part, they did barter and exchange fish for other commodities. The deputy for the Russie had the chiefe government of the said part, and took toll of those people that were subject to his master, and the captain of Wardhouse, had then the government of the people subject to his master the king of Denmarke. He saith also, that betwene the abbey Werchingam, and the abbey of S. Nicholas in Russia, upon the border of the said coast of Lappia, he hath bene upon the shoar at divers places, where fresh rivers fall into the Sea, where are commonly taken fresh Salmon, all which places he doth know for certaine, that they were farmed out to the subjects of the said Emperour, and he the said Emperour receiued yearly the rent for them. And further he saith, that it hath bene further credibly reported unto him, that there is not any such river or creeke of fresh water which falleth out of the said countrey of Lappia into the sea, betwene the said abbey Werchingam, and the baie of S. Nicholas, but they are all and eury of them farmed out, and the Emperour receiued the rent for them.

Item, whether as well before, as also within the memory of men, till the time of the grant of the said letters patents any of the English merchants (saving the merchants of the said societie) subjects of this realme of England, haue commonly exercised or frequented busines or trade in the said villages or townes called the Narue, Kego, Werchingam, & Cola, or in any of them, or in any port or territories of the said Emperour of Russia.

The said Interrogatois.

To this Interrogatois the Deponent answereth, that the subjects of this Realme before the grant of the said letters patents did not continually exercise, neither frequent or trade to any of the said places called the Narue, Kego, Werchingam or Cola, or to any of them.

The deponents answer.

Certaine reasons to disswade the vse of a trade to the Narue aforesayd, by way through Sweden.

The merchandise of the Narue are grosse wares, viz. flaxe, yempe, ware, salt to & hides. The traffique at that place standeth upon the agreement and liking of the Emperour of Russia, with the king of Sweden: for all these merchandises that are brought thither come from Westroth, Nouogrode, and other parts of the Emperours dominions.

For transporting those merchandises from Narue to Stockholm, or what other place shall be thought convenient in Sweden, it must be in vessels of those countries, which will be of small force to us.

share,

shall be needfull, five men to strike with harping order of two.

belonging to the rough. whale.

cut the whale.

certaine Interrogator, &c. to what king or, 23. of June, 1576.

the quarrell betwene anie, for his trade the Narue, Kego, Pechin as well as the time of the grant merchants, as also in the yeres 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, and the jurisdiction, and subject to whether the said Emperour of respectively of the said places, ones and places, and either of and betwene the King and the said priviledge, it is forbidden the villages, townes and places power thereof, as the time of the to be under the jurisdiction, the sayde grounds, into the yeres, 1572, 73, 74, and 1575. to subject unto the mightie prince the time aforesaid, was chief how and reported. And that all the Call and the King, and within Freebooters, or any other that shall make quarrell, or offer violence against them.

When the goods are brought into Sweden, they must be discharged, and new laden into smaller vessels, or carry the same by river or lake a part of the way, and againe to be unladen and transported by Land to Newles.

So as the ordinary charges for transporting of goods from Narue to Newles by way as aforesaid, besides the spoile by so often lading and unlading, carriage by land, and the dangers of the seas, pirates, &c. will be such as when it shall be so brought to Newles, it will be as deare to the merchants in that place as it shall be woxly to be sold in London, wherefore the trade that wayes can not be profitable to our nation.

NOTE.

Moreover, when the goods shall be in Newles, it may bee thought doubtful to bring it thence quietly without desiring of forcible resistance of the king of Denmarke, so far as much as he maketh quarrell, and alleageth damage unto him in his tolles of the Sound by our trade to S. Nicholas, how much more will he now doe by this way, and with how much greater advantage may he performe it? The danger that may grow in our trade to Russia by way of S. Nicholas, through the displeasure that the Emperour may conceive by our trade with the Sweden to Narue, is also to be considered.

A remembrance of aduise giuen to the merchants, touching a voyage for Cola about sayd. 1578.

Where as you require my counsell after what order the voyage for Cola is to be set forth, I answer that I know no better way then hath bene heretofore used, which is after this manner. First of all we haue hired the ship by the great, giuing so much for the wearing of the tackle and the hull of the ship, as the ship may be in biggness: as if she be about the burden of 100. tunnes, we pay 80. pound, and so after that rate: and therunto we doe hire all the ship our selues, and do ship all our men our selues, shipping no more men, nor giuing them more wages then we should doe if they went of a merchants voyage, for it hath bene a great helpe to our voyage hitherto, to haue our men to fish with one boate, & cooking vs no more charges then it should do, if our men should lie & doe nothing saving the charges of salt, & of fire, which is treble paid for againe. For this last yeere past our men killed with one boate betwixt 9. and 10. thousand fish, which yielded to vs in money with the oile that came of it, about 15. or 16. thoyse pounds, which is a great helpe to a voyage. And besides all this our ship did take in so much oile and other commodities as we bestowed 100. whole clothes in. But because, as I do suppose, it is not the vse of London to take ships to freight after that order before prescribed, neither I thinke that the mariners will take such paines as our men will: Therefore my counsell is, if you thinke good, to freight some ship of Hull or Newcastle, for I am surer that you may haue them better cheape to freight, then here at London. Besides all this, one may haue such men as will take paines for these merchantes. And furthermore when it shall please God that the ship shall returne to come to discharge at Hull, which will be the most for your profit for the sales of all such like commodities as comes from that place, as for fish, oile, & Salmon chiefly, he will seeke a better market for the sales then at Hull, he must seeke it out of England, for the like is not in England. This is the best way that I can devise, and most for your profit, and if you will, I will also set you downe all the commodities that are necessary for such a voyage, and which way also that the Hollanders may within two or three yeeres be forced to leaue of the trade of Cola which may easilie be done. For if my abilitie were to my will, I would vse the matter so that they should either leaue of the trade, or els carry light ships with them home againe.

Will the best market of England for sale of fish.

Aduertisements and reports of the 6. voyage into the partes of Persia and Media, for the company of English merchants for the discoverie of new trades, in the yeeres 1579. 1580. and 1581. gathered out of sundry letters written by Christopher Burrough servant to the said company, & sent to his unckle M. William Burrough.

These it is to be understood, that the ships for the voyage to S. Nicholas in Russia, in which the factors & merchandise for the Persian voyage were transported, departed from Gravesend the 19. of June, 1579. which arrived at S. Nicholas in Russia the 22. of July, where the factors and merchantes landed, and the merchandize were discharged and laden into dolbnykes, that is, barkes of the countrey, to be carried from thence by river unto Volgda. And the five and twentieth day of the sayde Iulie, the Dolbnykes departed from Kolt Island by Saint Nicholas by the River Dwina, Peremene, that is to say, poste by continuall sapling, rowing, setting with poles, or drawing of men, which came to Colmogro, the

gaind them.
erger, and new laden into small gaine to bee unladen and trans ue to Newles by way as alway land, and the dangers of the it will be as weare to the men before the trade that wayes can ight doubtful to bring it thence lacke, forasmuch as he maketh by our trade to S. Nicholas, greater advantage may be seen of S. Nicholas, though the Sweden to Naruc, is also in rchants, touching

age for Cola is to be set forth, ereof use, which is after e, giving so much for the weae in biggest: as if she be above and thereunto we doe victual noze mē, not giuing them more hath bene a great helpe to our no more charges then it should of fine s, which is creble paid for er 9, and 10 thousand sds, which scope pounds, which is a great oile and other commodities as le, it is not the use of London to inke that the mariners will take the good, to freight some ship of cheape to freight, then here at nes for their merchants. And ome to discharge at Hull, which odie as come from that place, the sales then at Hull, be much best way that I can devise, and he commodities that are neces-p within two or three yeeres be mp abilitie were to my will, I his carp lighte ships with them into the partes of Per-the discourie of new trades, dry letters written by Christo-ynkle M. William Burrough.

S. Nicholas in Russia, in which sponsored, departed fro Straul hols in Russia the 22. of July, andize were discharged and la-thence up by river into Vooshenikes departed from Koz the is to say, poste by contin, which came to Colmogro,
the

the 17 day, and departed thence the 29 day of Julie by the sayd riuer Dwina, and came to Vityoug (which is at the head of the riuer Dwina, and mouth of Sughano) the 9 of August, where they stayed but a small time, providing some victualles, and stitting certaine of theyr callacks of barke-men, and so departed thence the same day by the riuer Sughano, and came to Toima, (which is counted some what more then halfe the way from Vityoug) the 15 day, where they stitted some of theyr callacks, and departed thence the same day, and came to the ritie Vologda the 19 of August, where they landed theyr goods, and stayed at that place till the 30 of the same. Having provided at Vologda, Telegas, our wagons, whereupon they laded theyr goods, they departed thence with the same by land towards Yerallaue the sayd 30 of August, at eight of the clocke in the morning, and came to the East side of the riuer Volga ouer against Yerallaue, with 25 Telgas laden with the sayd goods the seuenth of September at five of the clocke afternoone. Then the three stroogs of barks provided to transport the said goods to Astracan (where they should meet the shippe that should carrie the same from thence into Persia) came ouer from Yerallaue unto the same side of the riuer Volga, and there took in the said goods. And having prepared the said barks ready with all necessarie furniture they departed with them from Yerallaue towin the riuer Volga, on the 14 day of September at nine of the clocke in the morning, and they arrived at Niznouogrod, the 17 day at thye of the clocke afternoone, where they shewed the Emperours letters to passe free without paying any custome, and carryed there about thyeer houres to provide necessaries, and then departing, arrived at Cazan (which is nere the same towne) on the 22 of September at five of the clocke afternoone, where (though contrary windes, and for providing new callacks in the places of some that there went from them) they remayned till the 26 day, at what time they departed thence about two of the clocke after noone, and arrived at Tetushagorod, which is on the Crim side of Volga, and in latitude 55 degrees 22 minutes the 28 day at ten in the forenoone, where they auke-ret, and remayned about thyeer houres, and departing thence came to Oueak, which is on the Crims side (on the Westerne side of Volga) the first of October about five of the clocke in the morning.
This place is accounted halfe the way betweene Cazan, and Astracan: and here there groweth great store of Licopas: the soile is very fruitfull: they found there apple trees, and cherrie trees.
The latitude of Oueake is 51 degrees 30 minutes. At this place had bene a very saype stone castle called by the name Oueake, & adioyning to the same was a towne called by Russes, Sodom: this towne & part of the castle (by report of the Russes) was swallowed into the earth by the iudice of God, for the wickednesse of the people that inhabited the same. There remayned at this day to be seene a part of the ruines of the castle, and certain tombs, wherein as it seemeth haue bene laid noble personages: for vpon a tombe stone might be perceiued the forme of a horse and a man sitting on it with a bowe in his hand, and arrowes girt to his side: there was a piece of a scutcheon also vpon one of the houses, which had characters grauen on it, where of some part had bene consumed with the weather, and the rest left vnperfect: but by the forme of them that remayned, we indged them to be characters of Armenia: and other characters were grauen also vpon another tombe stone. Now they departed from Oueake the said first of October, at five of the clocke after noone, and came to Perauoloke, the 10 day about eleuen or twelue of the clocke at night, making no abode at that place, but passed alongst by it. This word Perauoloke in the Russ tongue, doth signifie a narrow straighte of necke of land, betweene two waters, and it is so called by them, because from the riuer Volga, at that place to the riuer Don, or Tanais, is counted thirtie versts, or as much as a man may well trauell on foot in one day. And seven versts beneath, vpon an Island called Tlaminia, the Emperour of Russia hath sitte gummers all the summer time to keepe watch, called by the Tartar name Carawool. Betweene this place and Astracan are five other Carawools of verthes.

Yerallaue.

Great store of Licopas.

- 1 The first is named Kamenie Carawool, and is distant from Perauoloke 120 versts.
- 2 The second named Scupino Carawool, distant from the first 50 versts.
- 3 The third called Polooy Carawool, is 120 versts distant from the second.
- 4 The fourth named Keezeyur Carawool, is 50 versts distant from the third.
- 5 The fifth named Ichkeebre, is 30 versts distant from the fourth, and from Ichkeebre to Astra-can is 30 versts.

The 16 of October they arrived at Astracan with the three stroogs in safetie about nine of the clocke in the morning, where they found the shippe provided for the Persia voyage in good order and readinesse. The 17 day the foure principall factors of the company, Arthur Edwards, William Turnbull, Barthew Talboys, and Peter Garrard, were invited to dine with the chiefe diake of secretarie of Astracan (Vasilie Pheodooruch Shelepin) who declared that unto them the troubles that were in Media and Persia: and how the Turke with helpe of the Crims had conquered,
and

Peter Gar-ard.

and did possess the greater part of Media: also he laid before them that winter was at hand, and if they should put out with the shippe to the sea, they should be constrained to take what hazards might happen them by wintering in the parts of Media, or else where, soe backe againe to that place there was no hope for them to arrive: whereupon the said factors determined to stay there all winter to learne further of the state of those countreies.

Ice at Astracan can last foure moneths.

The 19 of November the winde being North-east, there was a great frost, and much ice in the river: the next day being the 30 of November the ice stood in the river, and so continued untill Easter day.

Anno 1580.

The 22 of December departed this life John Hoore the gunner of the shippe. Thursday the seventh of Januarie betwene eight & nine of the clocke at night there appeared a cross proceeding from the moone, with two gallees at the South and North end thereof.

The six of Januarie being Twelve day (which they call Chrestenia) the Russes of Astracan brake a hole in the ice upon the river Volga, and hallowed the waere with great solemnity according to the manner of theyr countrey, at which time all the souldiours of the towne shot off theyr small pieces upon the ice, and likewise to gratifie the captaine of the castle being a duke, whose name is Pheodore Michalouich Troicouria, who stood hard by the shippe, beholding them as they were on the river, was shot off all the ordnance of our shippe being fiftene pieces, viz. two faulcons, two faulconers, foure fowlers, foure fowlers chambers, and three other small pieces made for the strooges to shoot hailestones, and afterwarde the great ordnance of the castle was shot off.

On the 31 of Januarie there happened a great eclipse of the moone, which began about twelve of the clocke at night, and continued before she was cleare an houre and a halfe by estimation, which ended the first of February about halfe an houre past one in the morning: she was wholly darkened by the space of halfe an houre.

The 26 of February the towne of Nagay Tartars, called the Yourt, which is within three quarters of a mile of the castle of Astracan, by casualtie was set on fire about ten of the clocke at night, & continued burning till midnight, whereby one halfe of it was burnt, and much cattell destroyed. The Nagayes that inhabit that towne, are the Emperour of Russia his vassals: It is supposed there are of them inhabiting that place, of men, women, and children, the number of seven thousand. That night the Allarum was made in the castle and towne of Astracan. The captaine thereof had all his souldiours in very good order, and readinesse, being of them in number two thousand gunners, and castaks, that is to say, a thousand gunners, which are accounted more souldiours, and are not put to any other service then the vse of theyr pieces, watch, &c. as souldiours which at waies keepe the castle, and the castaks also using theyr pieces, do keepe the towne, and are commonly set to all kinde of labors.

Astracan situate upon all Islands.

The seventh of March 1580, the Nagayes and Crims came before Astracan to the number of one thousand foure hundred yoslemens, which incamped round about, but the neerer of them were two Russes vnto and a halfe off from the castle and towne: some of them lay on the Crims side of Volga, and some on the Nagay side, but none of them came upon the Island that Astracan standeth on. It was sayd that two of the prince of the Crims his souldiers were amongst them. They sent a messenger on the eight day to the captaine of Astracan, to signifie that they would come and visite him: who answered, he was ready to receiue them: and taking a great shotte of bullet in his hand, willed the messenger to tell them that they should not want of that gearre, so long as it would last. The ninth day newes was brought that the Crims determined to assault the towne or castle, and were making of sagoes of reede, to bring with them for that purpose. The tenth day two Russes that were captiues, and two of the Tartars bondmen came away from the Nagayes, and came into Astracan. The same day word was brought to the duke of two Nagayes, which were serued at Gostine house, supposed to be spies, but were gone againe from thence before they were suspected. This Gostine house is a place a litle without the towne where the Eskiks (or Persian merchants) do usually remaine with theyr merchandize. The 11 day the sayd Nagayes, and one more with them, came againe to that house early in the morning, where they were taken by the Russes, and brought to the captaine of the castle, and being examined, confessed that theyr coming was onely to seeke two of the bondmen that were come from them: whereupon theyr bondmen were deliuered to them: which caused the sayd captaine commonly to newch if they be not Russes, and they were set at liberty. The 13 day they brake up theyr camps, and marched to the North wards into the countrey of Nagay.

The variation
of the compass at Astracan was 13 deg.
40 minutes.

The 17 of April the variation of the compass observed in Astracan was 13 deg. 40 min. from North to West. This spring there came newes to Astracan that the queene of Persia (the King being blinde) in the morning they sailed thre & sicke leagues, then had they sicke shallow water: from thence they sailed vntill noone South and by West seuen leagues and a halfe, the latitude then obserued 43 degrees 17 minutes, the depth then eight and twentie fathoms, and shallow ground: from that vntill eight of the clocke at night, they sailed South by East five leagues and a halfe, then had they thre and foyre fathoms shallow ground. From thence till the 23 foure a clocke in the morning, they sailed Southsouthwest thre leagues and a halfe: then could they get no ground in two and sicke fathoms deepe. From thence vntill noone they sailed South nine leagues, then the latitude obserued was 42 degrees 24 minutes. From thence till the 24 day at noone they sailed South by West seuentene leagues and a halfe, then the latitude obserued was 41 degrees 32 minutes. From noone till seuen of the clocke at night, they sailed Southsouthwest foure leagues, then had they perfect sight of high land of hills, which were almost couered with snowe, and the mids of them were West from the shippe, being then about twelue leagues from the nearest land: they sounded but could finde no ground in two hundred fathoms. From thence they sailed Southwest vntill midnight: about thre leagues from thence till the 25 day foure of the clocke in the morning, they sailed West thre leagues, being then little winde, and nere the land, they took in theyr sailes, and lay hulling: at noone the latitude obserued, was 40 degrees 54 minutes: they sounded but could get no ground in two hundred fathoms. At foure of the clocke in the afternoon, the winde Northwest, they set theyr sailes, and from thence till the 26 day at noone they sailed East south east foure leagues. From thence they sailed till eight of the clocke at night Southwest thre leagues, the winde then at North. From thence they sailed west till the 27 day two of the clocke in the morning, Westsouthwest eight leagues, the winde blowing at North very much. From the said two till foure of the clocke they sailed South by West one league: then being day light, they saw the land playne, which was not past thre leagues from them, being very high ragged land. There were certaine rocks that lay farre off into the sea, about five leagues from the same land, (which are called Barnake Tash) they sailed betwene those rocks and the land, and about five of the clocke they passed by the poxe Bilbill, where they should haue put in but could not land bearing longt the shore about two of the clocke afternoone, they came to Bildigh in the countrey of Media of Sheruan, against which place they ankered in nine foot water. Presently after they were at anker, there came aboard of them a boat, where in were seuen of eight persons, two Turkes, the rest Persians, the Turkes vassals, which had them welcome, and seemed to be glad of theyr arrival, who to be the factors that the Turke had conquered all Media, of the countrey Sheruan, and how that the Turkes Basha remained in Derbent with a garrison of Turkes, and that Shamackie was wholly spoiled, and had few or no inhabitants left in it. The factors then being desirous to come to the speech of the Basha, sent one of the Tulliks (or merchants that went ouer with them from Astracan, passengers) and one of the companies seruants Robert Golding, with those souldiours, to the capitaine of Backow, which place standeth hard by the sea, to certifie him of their arrival, and what commodities they had brought, and to desire friendship to haue quiet and safe traffike for the same. Backow is from Bildih, the place where they roade, about a dayes iourney, one foote easly to be trauelled, which may be sixe leagues the next way ouer land: it is a walled towne, and strongly fortified. When the sayd messenger came to the capitaine of Backowe, the said capitaine gaue him very friendly entertainment, and after he vnderstood what they were there were come in the shippe, and what they had brought, he seemed to reioyce much therent: who gaue the sayd Golding licence to depart backe the next day, bring the eight and twentieth day: and promised that he would himselfe come to the shippe the next day following: with which answer the sayd Golding returned and came to the shippe the sayd eight and twentieth day about nine of the clocke at night. The nine and twentieth day in the morning the factours caused a tent to be set by at shore nere the shippe, against the coming of the sayd capitaine: who came thither about thre of the clocke after noone, and brought about thirtie souldiours, that attended on him, in shirts of male, and some of them had garmets of illur, others of steel, and very saye. The factours met him at the tent, and after very friendly salutations passed betwene them, they gaue him by a present a garment of cloch of velvet, and another of scarlet, who accepted the same gratefully: after they had talked together by theyr interpreters, as well of the state of the voyage and cause of theyr coming thither, as also learned of the sayd capitaine the state of that countrey, the factours made request vnto him, that he would helpe them to the speech of the Basha, who answered that theyr demaund was reasonable, and that hee would willingly shew them therein what pleasure he could, and sayd because the way to Derbent, where the Basha remained, was dangerous, he would send thither, and certifie him of theyr arrival, and what commodities they had brought, and such commodities as they would desire to exchange or barter the same

42 degrees
25 minutes.41 degrees 32 minutes.

26 day.

27 day post.

the factious water: from thence half, the latitude then observed and shallow ground: from the leagues and a half, then had the 23 foure a clocke in the morning could they get no ground in South nine leagues, then the the 24 day at noone they sailed observed was 41 degrees 30 South four well foure leagues, off covered with snow, and the leagues from the next land:
 from thence they sailed South day foure of the clocke in the morning neere the land, they took in 40 degrees 54 minutes: the of the clocke in the afternoon, a 6 day at noone they sailed East clocke at night Southwell thre the 27 day two of the clocke in the North way much. From the the being day light, they being very high ragged land, the leagues from the same land, and the land, and about five of the but could not: and became to Bildigh in the country of water. Presently after they were of eight persons, two Turks, the seemed to be glad of their arrivia, of the countrey Sheruan, and of Turks, and that Shamackie the factours then being desirous thence that went over with them Robert Golding, with those four he sea, to certifie him of their arrived: to haue quiet and safe they road, about a dayes journey, the way ouer land: it is a walled to the captaine of Backowe, the understood what they were that reioyce much therat: who gaue light and twentieth day: and proceeding: with which answer the the twentieth day about nine of the factours caused a tow to be set up: who came thither about six, that attended on him, in shirt, and very saye. The factours betwene them, they gaue him he accepted the same gratefull:
 the state of the voyage and cause the state of that countrey, the speech of the Bashā, who answered willingly to them therein in, where the Bashā remained arrivall, and what commodities he to exchange of barter the same for

by he would procure the said Bashā to provide for them: and therefore willed the factours to consult together, and certifie him what they most desired, and what quantitie they would haue provided: so whilst the factours were consulting together thereupon, the captaine talked with a Turke merchant that came over in the ship with them from Altracan, which Turke among other matters in talke, certified the captaine, that the night before the factours and their company were determined to haue returned backe againe to Altracan, and that they were about to way their anchors, which in deed was true, but the maister of the barke, Thomas Hudson of Limehouse, persuaded them that the wind was not good for them to depart, &c. When the factours came againe to talke with the captaine, they desired to go to the Bashā, and that he would safely conduct them thither: he granted their requests willingly, desiring them to goe with him to a village hard by, and there to abide with him that night, and the next day they should go to Backow, and from thence proceed on their journey to Derbent. They were unwilling to go that night with him, because the promise for the way was not in readinesse, but requested that they might stay till the morning. Thereupon the captaine said it was reported unto him, that they meant the night before to haue gone away: and if it should so happen, he were in great danger of loosing his head: for which cause he required to haue some one for a pledge: wherefore M. Garrard one of the factours offered himselfe to go, who because he could not speake the Russe tongue, took with him Christopher Burrough, and a Russe interpreter: that night they rood from the sea side, to a village about ten miles off, where at supper time the captaine had much talke with M. Garrard of our countrey, demanding where about it did lie, what countries were neere vnto it, and with whom he had traffike, for by the Russe name of our countrey he could not conjecture who we should be: but when by the signifion he perceived we were Englishmen, he demanded if our prince were a mapten Queene: which when he was certified of, then (quoth he) your land is called Englererra, is it not? and were was made it was so: whereof he was very glad when he knew the certaintie. He made very much of them, placing M. Garrard next to himselfe, and Christopher Burrough, with the Russe interpre-tour for the Turke tongue hard by. There was a Sittan merchant with him at that present, of whom he seemed to make great account: him he placed next to himselfe on the other side, and his gentlemen sat round about him talking together. They sitting is upon the benches, of crosse legged.

Thom. Hudson of Lime-
 house maister of the English
 barke.

M. Christoph.
 Burrough.

Supper being brought in, he requested them to eat. After they potage (which was made of rice) was done, and likewise they boyled meat, there came in platters of rice sodden thicke, and very mingled withall: after all which, came a Sheepe roasted whole, which was brought in a trap, and set before the captaine: he called one of his seruitours, who cut it in pieces, and laying thereof upon diuers platters, set the same before the captaine: then the captaine gaue to M. Garrard and his company anoother platter, and to his gentlemen anoother, and to them which could not well reach he call meat from the platters which were before him. Diuers questions he had with M. Garrard and Christopher Burrough at supper time, about their diet, inquiring whether they eat fish: they voluntarily, or by order. They drinke in those partes is nothing but water. After supper (walking in the garden) the captaine demanded of M. Garrard, whether the vice was in England to lie in the house or in the garden, and which he had best liking of: he answered, where it pleased the him, but they vice was to lye in houses: thereupon the captaine caused beds to be sent into the house for them, and caused his kinsman to attend on them in the night, if they chanced to want any thing: he himselfe with his gentlemen and souldiours lying in the garden.

In the morning very early he sent horse for the rest of the company which should go to Derbent, sending by them that went thence sheepe for the shippe. In that village there was a Stroue, into which the captaine went in the morning, requesting M. Garrard to go also to the same to wash himselfe, which he did. Shortly after they comming out of the Stroue, whilst they were at breakfast, M. Turbull, M. Tapboyes, and Thomas Hudson the M. of the shippe, came thither, and when they had all broken the yf falls, they went to Backow: but Christopher Burrough returned to the ship, for that he had hurt his leg, and could not well endure that trauell. And from Backow they proceeded towards Derbent, as it was by the captaine promised, being accompanied on their way for their safe conduct, with a gentleman, and certaine souldiours, which had the captaine of Backow his letters to the Bashā of Derbent, very friendly written in their behalfe. In the journey to Derbent they forsooke the ordinary wayes, being very dangerous, and traueled thro-row woodes till they came almost to the towne of Derbent: and then the gentleman rood before with the captaine's letters to the Bashā, to certifie him of the English merchants comming, who receiving the letters, and understanding the matter, was very glad of the newes, and sent forth to receive them, certaine souldiours gunners, who met them about two miles out of the towne, salucing them with great reverence, and afterwards rood before them: then againe met them other souldiours, somewhat nearer the castle, which likewise having done the sayd salutations rood before them, and then came forth noble men, capitaines, and gentlemen, to receive them into the castle and to wine. As they entered the castle there was a shot of twentie peeces of great ordnance, and the Basia sent Sp. Turnbull a very saye boyle with furniture to mount on, esteemed to be worth an hundred markes, and so they were conveyed to his presence: who after he had talked with them, sent for a coate of cloeth of golde, and caused it to be put on Sp. Turnbulls backe, and then willed them all to depart, and take the sayd east, for that they were wearie of the sayd journey, and on the morrow he would talke further with them. The next day when the factours came againe to the presence of the Basia, according to his appointment, they requested him that he would graunt them his privilege, whereby they might traffike safely in any part and place of his countrey, offering him, that if it pleased his Highnes to have any of the commodities that they had bought, and to write his minde therof to the capitaine of Backow, it should be deliuered him accordingly. The Basiaes an-swere was, that he would willingly giue them his privilege: yet for that he regarded the sayd factours, having come so farre, and knowing the state of his countrey to be troublesome, he would haue them to bring the sayd commodities thither, & there to make sale of it, promising he would provide such commodities as they needed, and that he would be a defence vnto them, so that they should not be in-iured by any: wherupon the factours sent Thomas Hudson backe for the ship to bring her to Derbent, and the Basia sent a gentleman with him to the capitaine of Backow, to certifie him what was determined, which message being done, the capitaine of Backow, and the Basiaes messenger, accompanied with a dozen souldiours, went from Backow with Thomas Hudson, and came to the ship at Bildih the 11 day of June. After the capitaine and his men had bene aboard and scene the ship, they all departed presently, but the gentleman, messenger from the Basia, with three other Turks, remained aboard, and continued in the shippe till she came to Derbent: the latitude of Bildih by the observations is 40 degrees 25 minutes: the variation of the compasse 10 degrees 40 minutes from North to West. After the returne of Thomas Hudson backe to Bildih, they were constri-ned to remayne there with the shippe through contrary windes vntill the 16 day of June foure of the clocke in the morning, at which time they weped anchor, set saile and departed thence towards Derbent, and arrived at anchor againe Derbent East and by South from the sayd castle in foure fathome and a halfe water, the 22 day of June at ten of the clocke in the morning: then they took up the ordnance, which before they had stowed in holde for easing the shippe in her rowling. In the afternoon the Basia came downe to the water side against the shippe, and hauing the said ordnance placed, and charged, it was all shotte off to gratifie him: and presently after his departure backe, he permitted the factours to come aboard the shippe. The 29 day the sayd goods were unladen and carryed to the Basiaes garden, where he made choyce of such things as he liked, taking for eu-ery five and twentie karkies, or tobaccoer, one, or after the rate of foure for the hundred.

 The factours after his choyce made, determined to send a part of the rest of the goods to Backow, for the speedier making sale thereof, for which cause they obtained the Basiaes letter to the capitaine of Backow, written very fauourably in the sayd beoofe: and thereupon was laden and sent in a small boat of that countrey in merchandize, to the value (very neere) of one thousand pound sterling: videlicet, one hundred peeces of karkies, seuen hundred clothes, two barrells of corbenels, two barrells of tyme, foure barrells of shaffe. There went with the same of the companys seruantes William Winkle, Robert Golwing, and Richard Relfe, with two Russies, wherof one was an interpreter, besides foure barkmen. They departed from Derbent with the sayd barke the 19 of Iulij, and arrived at Bildih the 25 day: their passage and carriage of their goods to Backow was chargeable, although they saies when they came thither were small: they had great friends shew them of the capitaine of Backow, as well for the Basiaes letter, as also for the factours saies, who had dealt friendly with him, as before is declared. Robert Golwing desirous to know what might be done at Shamakie, which is a vairs iourney from Backow, went thither from whence returning, he was set on by cheques, and was shot into the knee with an arrow, who had be-rie hardly escaped with his life and gootes, but that by good hap he killed one of the cheques bolles with his caluice, and shot a Turke through both cheeks with a bag. On the first day of August the fac-tours being aduertised at Derbent that their ship was rotten and weak, that it was doubtfull she would not carry them backe to Astracan, did thereupon agree and bargain at that place with an Armenian, whose name was Jacob, for a barke called a Bulle, being of burden about 25 tunnes, which came thence from Astracan, and was at that instant riding at an Island called Zere about three or foure leagues beyond of the Castwardes of Bildih, which barke for the sayd factours, they went to haue with them in their returne to Astracan, and thereupon wrote vnto Wincoll and

The latitude
 of Bildih 40
 deg. 25 min.
 The variation
 of the compas 10 deg. 40 min.

See Journals.

in a then againe met them other the they saluacions road before to receiue them into the castle of great opinionance, and the one on, effemed to be woyed an after he had talked with them, tribulles barkes, and then tolde of theyr iourney, and on the map as came againe to the presence he would graunt them his spee his countrey, offering him, that he had bought, and to write his accordingly. The Bashas au that he regarded theyr safete, pubertisme, he would haue them he would prouide such com so that they should not be in the way to bring her to Derbent, to certifie him what was de the Bashas messenger, accom Hudson, and came to the ship deene aboard and scue the ship the Bashas, with three other Turke, the latitude of Bildih by de compasse 20 degrees 40 minuts e to Bildih, they were contrap till the 16 day of June foure of and departed thence towards ch from the sayd castle in foure in the morning: then they tooke the shippe in her rowling. In shippe, and hauing the sayd op presently after his departure day they were vnderdane things as he liked, taking for the rate of foure for the hundre, the rest of the goods to Backow, of the Bashas letter to the cap thereupon was laden and sent of one thousand pound ster two barrels of cochenele, two of the companys seruantes Russies, whereof one was an gent with the sayd barkes the 19 age of their goods to Backow small: they had great friends letter, as also for the factours were holding defous to under in Backow, went thither from nce with an arrow, who had be killed one of the Russes hostes in the first day of August the fa ke, that it was doubtfull the regen at that place with an ar of burden about 25 tunnes, at an Island called Zere, about barkes for theyr moze safety, upon wrote vnto Wincolle and
 the

the rest at Backow, that they should receiue the same Bulle, and lade in her their goods at Bildigh to be returned to Derbent, and to discharge their first boate, which was obserued by them accordingly. When all their goods were laden aboard the saide Bulle at Bildigh, and being ready to haue departed thence for Derbent, there arose a great storme with the winde out of the sea, by force whereof the cables and hallders were broken, and their vessel put a shoare, and broken to pieces against the rockes: many of them that were in her saued their liues, and part of the goods. But there was a Carobia of cheste, wherein were beffers, and golde, which they had receiued for the commodities of the companie, which they solde at Backow, which at the taking out of the Bulle, fell by the barkes side into the water amongst the rockes, and so was lost. The packages of cloth which they could not well take out of the Bulle were also lost, other things that were more payable they saued.

The 18. of August, the Factozs receiued from the Bashas 500. Batmans of rawe silke, part of the bargain made with him, who had them come the next day for the rest of the bargain.

The 1. day the Factozs went to the Bashas according to his appointment, but that day they could not speake with him, but it was deliuered them as from him, that they should looke and consider whether any thing were due vnto him or noe, which grieved the Factozs, and thereupon M. Tuncbulan answered, that their heads and all that they had were at the Bashas pleasure: But then it was answered there was no such matter in it: but that they should call by their reckonings, to see how it stood betwene them. The 20. day they cast by their reckonings, The 21. they went to haue spoken with the Bashas, but were denied audience.

The 22. day they heard newes by a Bulle that came from Astracan, that Arthur Edwards Arthur Edwards was the first at Astracan. (whome the Factozs left at Astracan with the manie of the goods) was dead, who departed this life the of

The 23. day the Factozs receiued more from the Bashas 500. Batmans of silke. The 4. of September newes was brought to Derbent, that Golding comming from Shamakie, was set on by the Russes (Turkes) and had hurt one of them.

The 5. Tobias Ashins the gunners boy died of the flure, who was buried the 6. day 3. miles to the Southward of the Castle of Derbent, where the Armenian Christians do usually burie their dead. About the 20. of September newes came to Derbent, that the Bulle which they had bought of Jacob the Armenian as before, was call away at Bildih, but they receiued no certain newes in writing from any of our people.

The 26. of September was laden aboard the shippe 40. bales of silke. From the 26. till the 2. of October, they tooke into the shippe, byead, water, and other necessary provision for their sea stome: the 2. day of October, the Factozs were commanded by the Subdaine to auoyd their house, and get them with their provision out of the towne: Whereupon they were constrained to remove and carry their things to the sea side against the ship, and remained there all the night. The cause of this sudden auoyding them out of the towne (as afterwards they perceiued) was for that the Bashas had receiued newes of a shippie with treasure that the Turke had sent, which was then nere at hand comming towards him.

The 3. day of October all things were brought from the shore aboard the ship and that day the Factozs went to the Bashas to take their leaue of him, vnto whom they recommended those the Companys seruantes, or which they had sent to Backow, making accompt to leaue them behinde in the Countrey: who caused their names to be written, and promised they should want nothing, nor be iniured of any. After this leaue taken, the Factozs went aboard purposing presently to haue set sail and departed towards Astracan, the winde seruing well for that purpose at South South-east: And as they were ready to set sail, there came against the shippe a man, who would: whereupon the boate was sent a shoare to him, who was an Armenian sent from William Wincolle, with his writing tables, whereon the saide Wincolle had written briefly, the misshap of the loss of the Bulle, and that they were comming from Bildih towards Derbent, they, and such things as they saued with a small boate, forced to put a shoare in a place by the sea side called the Armenian village: Whereupon the Factozs caused the shippe to stay hoping that with the Southly winde that then blew, they would come from the place they were at to the shippe, but if they could not come with that winde, they meant to saile with the shippe, with the next winde that would serue them, against the place where they were, & take them in if they could: which stay and loss of those Southly winde, was a cause of great troubles, that they afterwards sustained through pecc, &c. entering the Volga as shalbe declared.

The 4. day the winde South South-east, the shippe rode still: This day Christopher Purrow was sent to hope to Derbent to prouide some necessaries for the voyage, & with him. Tiske of two, which shoulde goe in the shippe passengers to Astracan. And being on shoare he sawe there the coming in of the Turkes treasure, being accompanied with 200. souldiers, and 100. pioneers, besides Captaines and Gentlemen: the Basha with his Captaines and souldiers very gallantly apparellled and furnished, went out from Derbent about thre or foure miles to meete the saide treasure, and receiued the same with great ioye and triumphe. Treasurr was the chief thing they needed, for not long before, the souldiers were ready to breake into the Court against the Basha for their pay: there was a great mutenie amongst them, because hee had long differed, and not payed them their due. The treasure came in 7. wagons, and with it were brought 10. pieces of brafse.

The Turke
his treasure sent to Der-bent.

In the parts of Media where they were, there was no commoditie to bee bought of any value, but rawe silke, neither was that to bee had but at the Bashes handes: who thought after their coming thither eyed the Countrey for that commoditie. His dealing with our Parthians as it was not with equitie in all poyntes according to his bargaine, so it was not extreme ill. Of the commodities they carried hee tooke the chiefest part, for which hee gaue but a small price in respect of the value it was there worth, and because he had provided such quantitie of commoditie for them, which otherwise they coulde not haue had, the Countrey being so troublesome, and trauaile by land so dangerous, he vsed them at his pleasure.

The newes that was reported vnto them at Astracan touching the warres betwene the Turkes and Persians differed little from the truth: For the Turkes armie with ayde of the Ciims, (being in number by the information of 2. Spaniards that serued in those warres, about 20000.) inuaded & conquered the Countrey of Media in Anno 1577. When the great Turke vnderstood of the conquest, he appointed Osman Basha (the said Basha, and now Captaine of Derbent) gouernour of the whole Countrey, who settled himselfe in Shamakie the chiefest Citie of Media, and principall place of traffique, vnto whome was sent from the great Turke, in signification of the gratefull acceptation of his seruice and the great conquest, a sword of great value.

Osman Basha.

After the saide Basha had brought the Countrey in order to his liking, and placed garnisons where hee thought conuenient, the armie was dissolved and sent backe: When the Persians vnderstood that the Turkes armie was dissolved and returned, they gathered a power together, and with the Queene of their Countrey as chiefe, they entered the Countrey of Media, and ouerran the same with fire and sword, destroying whatsoeuer they founde, as well people, cattell, as whatsoeuer els, that might be commodious to the Turkes. And after they had so ouerrunne the Countrey, they came to Shamakie, where the saide Basha Lieutenant generall of the great Turke was settled, and besleged it: whereupon the Basha seeing hee coulde not long indure to withstand them, fledde thence to Derbent where he now remaineth.

Derbent built by Alexander
the great.

Derbent is a strong Castle which was built by Alexander the great, the situation whereof is such, that the Persians being without Ordnance, are not able to winne it, but by famine. When the Turkes were fled from Shamakie, the Persians entered the same and spoiled it, leauing therein neither liuing creature nor any commoditie, and so returned backe into Persia, and settled themselves about Teueris, where there grewe some question among them for the kingdome. Afterwards the Persians hauing intelligence of an armie from the Turke coming into Media, gathered themselves together in a great armie and encountering the saide Turkes, set vpon them on the sudden, and vanquished them, putting them all to the sword. This curethoure of the Turkes grieued the Basha of Derbent, and made him to haue the more care for his owne safetie. Moreover, it was was brought vnto him that the Kisel Bashes, (that is to say the nobles & Gentlemen of Persia) were minded to set vpon him, and that neere vnto Backow there lay an armie ready to beslege it. Whereupon the Basha oftentimes would ride about the Castle of Derbent viewing the same, and the spyings that did come to it, and where he saw any cause of reformation it was amended.

The latitude
of Derbent 41.
deg. 32. min.

The Latitude of Derbent (by diuers obseruations exactly there made) is 41. deg. 32. The variation of the COMPASSE at that place about 11. degrees from North to West. From Derbent to Bildih by land, 46. leagues. From Derbent to Shamakie by land 45. leagues. From Shamakie to Backow about 10. leagues, which may be 30. miles. From Backow to Bildih 5. or six leagues by land, but by water about 12. leagues. From the Castle Derbent Eastwards there reache 2. stone walles to the bojder of the Caspian sea, which is distant one English mile. These walles are 9. foote thicke, and 28. or 30. foote high, and the space betwene them is 160. geometrical paces, that is 800. foote. There are yet to be perceived of the ruine of those walles, which do now extend into the sea about halfe a mile: Also from the Castle Westward into the land, they did perceiue the ruines of a stone wall to extend, which wall as it is reported, did passe from thence nd being on boare he saue there with 200. souldiers, and 100.

Captaines and souldiers bey out three of fouer miles to nor the. Treasur was the chief to speake into the Court againt her, because her had long suffered s, and with it were brought 10.

modity to bee bought of any bandes: who shortly after their healing with our Partrians as so it was not extreme ill. Of which he gaue but a small piece of such quantitie of commodity being so troublesome, and traving the warres betwene the Turkes armie with ayde of the setued in those warres, about 1577. When the great Turke Alfa, and now Capitaine of Derin Shamakie the chiefe Citie of from the great Turke, in signifiqued, a Noode of great value. his liking, and placed garribacke: When the Persians gathered a power together, and entrep of Media, and ouerran-as well people, carell as what they had so ouerrunne the Coun-generall of the great Turke was e not long indure to withstand the great, the situation whereof is winne it but by famine. When me and spoyled it, leauing there ke into Persia, and fetled them them for the kingdome. After-warke comming into Media, ga-saide Turkes, see vpon them an This overthrowe of the Turkes for his owne safete.

that is to say the nobles of Or-onto Backow there lay an armie side about the Castle of Derbent saw any cause of reformation it made) is 41. deg. 52. The way th to Alra. From Derbent nd 45. leagues. From Shamaom Backow to Beldi 50. the stle Derbent Callwards there stant one English mile. The betwene them is 160. geome-the ruine of those walles, which e Westward into the land, they s reported, did passe from thence to Pontus Euxinus, and was built by Alexander the great when the Castle Derbent was made.

The 5. of October about noone the winde North Northwest they wayed ancre, and set saile from Derbent, being longest the road to the Southward to seeke their men, but as they had sailed about foure leagues the winde scanted Easterly, so that they were forced to ancre in thre safhome water.

The 6. day they wayed ancre, and bare further off into the sea, where they ancred in 7. fathome water, the shippe being very like and so rotten abate the maine mast, that a man with his nailes might strape through her side.

The 7. day about 7. of the clocke in the morning, they set saile, the winde Southwest. They considered the time of the yeere was farre spent, the ship weake, like and rotten, and therefore determining not to tarie any longer for Wincoll and his fellows but to leaue them bebinde, bene themselves directly towarde Astracan: and sayling North Northwest untill midnighe about 16. leagues, the winde then came to the North Northwest, and blew much a very storme, which caused them to take in all their sailes, sauing the fore crosse, with which they were forced to ancre before the sea, South by west, and South Southwest. And on the 8. day about 2. of the clocke in the morning their great boate sunke at the ships sterne, which they were forced to cut from the shippe to their great griefe and discomfort: for in her they hoped to saue their liues if the shippe shoulde have miscaried. About 10. of the clocke before noone they had sight of the lande about 5. leagues to the South of Derbent, and bare longst the coast to the Southward into Nezaouo, where they came at ancre in 3. fathoms and blacke oze, good ancre holde, whereof they were glad as also that the winde was shifted to the Northwest, and but a meane gale. Wincoll and the rest of his fellows being in the Armenian billage, which is about 18. versts to the Westward of Neza-uoo, the place where against they rode at ancre, saw the ship as she passed by that place, and sent a man in the night following alongst the coast after her, who came against the ship where she rode, and with a firebrand in the top of a tree, made signes, which was perceived by them in the shippe, whereupon they hopped out their skiffe, and sent her a shoare to learne what was ment by the signes which returned a letter from Wincoll, wherein he wrote that they were with such goods as the had at the Armenian billage, and prayed that there they might be with the same goods be taken into the shippe. The 9. day it was litle winde, they wayed and bare a litle further off into the sea toward the said billage, and ancred. The 10. day they sent their skiffe to the Armenian billage to fetch those men and the goods they had, with order that if the winde serued, that they could not returne to fetch the shippe, they of the shippe promised to come for them, against the said billage, this day it was calme.

The 11. day the winde Northwest they rode still. The 12. day the winde Southeast they wayed ancre, and bare against and nere to the Armenian billage where they ancred, and then the skiffe came aboard and tolde them that our people at shoare, were like to be spoyled of the Tar-cars, where it not that the gunners defended them: then was the skiffe sent backe againe to charge them at any hand they should haue aboard the shippe whatsoeuer it cost them. Whereupon, all the companie came aboard the same day sauing Richard Relfe, and two Russes, but as soone as the skiffe was returned aboard the shippe, the winde blew at Southeast, and the Sea was growen: so as they were forced to take in their skiffe into the ship and rode still till the 13. day, and then being faire weather, early in the morning the skiffe was hopped out of the shippe, and sent to shoare to fetch the said Relfe and the two Russes, which were ready at the shoare side, and with them two Spaniards that were taken captiues at the Goletra in Barbarie, which fetued the Turke as souldiers. Those Spaniards (of Christian charitie) they brought also aboard the shippe to redeme them from their captiuitie, which were brought ouer into England, and set free and at liberte here in London, in September 1582. The winde this day at North Northwest, faire weather. The 14. day they sent the skiffe to shoare, and filled fresh water. The 15. day they rode still being litle winde and fogge. The 16. day the winde East Southeast, they wayed ancre and set saile bearing Northward towards Astracan, and the same night they ancred in 10. fathoms water, about 5. miles from the shoare of the Shalkales rounteys, which place is 8. leagues North Northwest from Derbent. The 17. day the winde at North West Stormie, they rode still all the day & night. The 18. the winde all South east about one of the clocke afternoone, they wayed ancre & sailed thence til 4. of the clocke North Northeast 6. leagues, then might they see the land Northwest about 10. leagues from the wind South east if it were they sailed at midnighe North Northwest 12. leagues, if it were til 19. day 7. a clocke in the morning they sailed North North east 8. leagues, the wind then East Southeast, a faire gale, they soulders and had 17. fathoms, and sand, being (as the Spaniards) about the head of Shely, from thence til 22. of the clocke at noone they sailed

Two Spaniards redeemed by our Englishmen.

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

LE 28
LE 25
LE 22
LE 20
LE 18

6

LE 28
LE 25
LE 22
LE 20
LE 18

sailed North 5. leagues, the winde then at East a faire gale, they sounded and had 5. fadoms. From thence till 8. of the clocke at night, they sailed North 7. leagues: the winde then at North-east with small raine, they tooke in their sailes and ancred in 3. fadoms water: and lost oze, where they rode still all night, and the 20. day and night the winde North-east, as before with small raine.

The 21. day the winde North-west, they like wise rode still. The 22. day about 3. of the clocke in the afternoone, they wayed ancre the winde West North-west, and sailed from thence till 5. of the clocke at night North 4. leagues, then they ancred in 2. fadoms and a halfe lost oze, the winde at West a small breath.

The 23. day about 7. of the clocke in the morning, they wayed ancre and set saile being little winde Easterly, and sailed till 2. of the clocke after noone North-west in with the shoare about 5. leagues, and then ancred in 6. foor water, hauing perfect sight of the lowe lande (sande hilles) being about three miles from the nearest land. This place of the land that they were against, they perceiued to be the Westward of the foure Islands (called in the Russe tongue Chetera Boogori) and they founde it after wards by due prooffe, to be about 50. versts, or thirtie English miles to the South-west, or South-west by South, from the said Chetera Boogori.

The 24. day the winde at East, and by South, a sea winde called Gillauar, caused them to ride still. The 25. day they thought good to sende in their skiffe Robert Golding, and certaine Russes, to towe him longest Northwards by the shoare, to seeke the foure Islands, and so to passe into the Vchooge, and there to land the saide Rob. Golding to proceede to Astracan, to deliuer Amos Riall a letter, wherein he was required to prouide Pauozes to meete the Shippe at the saide Islands, and the skiffe with the Russes were appointed to returne from the Vchooge with victuals to the Shippe, which skiffe departed from the Shippe about nine of the clocke in the forenoone. The 26. 27. 28. and 29. dayes, the windes Easterly, and North-east they roode still with their Shippe. The 30. day the winde Southeast, they wayed and set saile to the North-eastward: but the Shippe fell so on the side to the shoreward, that they were forced stronoones to take in their sailes and ancre againe from whence they neuer remooued her. That day they shared their bread: but in their want God sent them two courtes of partridges, that came from the shoare, and lighted in and about their Shippes, wherby they were comforted, and one that lay sicke, of whose life was small hope, recovered his health.

So strange accident of provision for their health.

November.

The 4. of November the skiffe returned to the Shippe with some victuals, and certified that the 4. Islands were about 60. versts from them to the North-eastward. When Robert Golding came to Astracan, and deliuered there the Factors letters to Amos Riial, the duke, Captain of that place, was done to timberland of the Shippes arrival, and of the state they were in, and their request for Pauozes, who was very glad to heare of their safe returne, and appointed to be sent with all these 2. Pauozes, and a Strooge, with gunners to garde and to defende them. With the which Strooge and Pauozes, Amos Riial went downe to the Chetera Boogori, or 4. Islands aforesaid, where he stayed with those barks, according to the Factors appointment. The 5. day they purposed to send from the Shippe their skiffe with the carpenter, and 4. Russes, to towe him to the 4. Bowgeries, to request Amos Riial to come from thence with the Pauozes to the Ship with all possible speed. The skiffe with those men departed from the Ship in the morning, and within one houre they met with a small boat with Russes, rowing towards the Ship which came from the Ouchooge with a wilde swine and other victuals to sell: with the same boate the skiffe returned backe to the Ship as cert the Russes had received and were satisfied for the victuals they brought: the same day they returned with their boate backe toward the Ouchooge, and with them in the same boate was sent the carpenter of the Ship to the Chetera Boogori, which were in their way, to declare unto Amos Riial the message before appointed him. From the 5. until the 9. day the Ship rode still with contrary winds Easterly. The same 9. day came to the Ship certaine Russes in a small boate, which brought with them some victuals sent by Amos Riial, and declared, that hee with the Pauozes and Strooge, had remained at the Chetera Boogori 5. dayes expecting the comming thither of the Ship. The 10. day being doubtfull of the Pauozes comming, they sent Thomas Hudson master of the Ship in the skiffe (and with her went the aforesaid skiffe boate) towards the Chetera Boogori to the Pauozes, to bring word whether they would come to the Ship or not, the winde then at North-east with fogge. The 11. day the winde North-eastly with fogge, the Ship rode still. The 12. day Amos Riial, Christopher Fawcett, and a new gunner came to the Ship, and with them the Sp. Thomas Hudson returned (but the Strooge with the gunners remained at the Chetera Boogori) and from thence (when it began to freeze,) returned to Astracan. Amos Riial declared that he sent the carpenter backe from the Chetera Boogori in a small boate on the 10. day, and married that he was not come to the Ship, and out in her but the chooge and much speede taken in, they rode.

The 13. day to prouide the foure Islands, passed past to all handled there with the Russes, which the next, and the next day for the safely winter, if they did it: being about 10. as they could find them: fourte houre the dangers to and sea did by ble to behold, so it would be them from ma

Which they they took out on the ice, and they agreed to take up their they made themselves to keepe them: which they carried the clocke in could singe, and Chetera Babbas (there remained)

The goods was about 20. And the next day (in fourte) about thirtie in the next morning were with the Hudson: they were entered way that had cooke, and for the Crasnoyarsk.

There they happened to find (in a small boate) they came to the ice, and that of

In the mo and had 5. faboms. winde then at North

er and lost oze, where as before with small about 3. of the clocke from thence till five of the lost oze, the winde nd for saile being little y the shoare about five hande (sande hills) bethey were againe, they the tongue Chetera

As, of thirtie English
pgori,

illauar, caused them
ert Golding, and cerure Islands, and to ede to Astracan, to meete the Shippe at the an the Vchooge with the clocke in the fore-if they roode still with the North-east ward:
cloones to take in their they shared their beak:
the shoare, and lighted cke, of whose life was

and certified that the then Robert Golding duke, Capaine of the
in, and their request for
be sent with all speed
th the which Surooge ys aforesaid, where he day they purposed to him to the 4. Bowgo-

with all possible speed, in one houre they met the Ouchooge with a en backe to the ship at the same day they re-same boate was sent to declare unto Amos they roode still with
in, and their request for
with the Pauosies and
oming thither of the omas Hudson maketh
the Chetera Boogori

winde then at North
de still. The 13. day with them the sp. Tho-hetera Boogori) and taken that the first and married that he was

was not come to the shippe (but in the fogge the day before as afterwards they learned) missed the shippe, and overtook her, and afterwards returning backe, hee found the ship at ancre, and nothing in her but the Russes that were left to keepe her, and then hee departed thence, and went to the V-chooge and there stayed. Presently upon the comming of the Pauosies to the shippe, they used as much speed as might be, to get the goods out of the shippe into them, and after the goods were laden in, theyooke in also of the shippes Ordnance, furniture and provision, as much as they coude.

The 13. day in the morning Amos Riall was sent away in a small boate towards Astracan, to to provide victuals and carriages to relieve and helpe them, who coude passe no further then the four Islands, but was there overtaken with yce, and forced to leaue his boate, and from thence passed posts to Astracan, finding at the Vchooge the Carpenter returned from his ill journey, being ill handled with the extremite of the colde. The same day they departed also in those lighters with the goods towards the Chetera Bougori, leauiing the shippe at ancre, and in her two Russes, which with thre moze that went in the Pauosies, to provide victuals for themselves and the rest, and there with promised to returne backe to the shippe with all speede, had offered to bu-derrake for twentie rubbles in money to carry the shippe into some harborow, where shee might safely winter, of els to keepe her wher shee rode all winter, which was promised to be giuen them if they did it: and the same day when with those lighters they had gotten sight of the 4. Islands being about eight versts South-west from them, the winde then at North-east, did freeze the sea so, as they could not rowe, guide, stirre or remouue the saide lighters, but as the winde and yce did force them; And so they continued vniuing with the yce, Southeast into the sea by the space of fourtie houres, and then being the sixtene day the yce floode. Whiles they moue with the yce the dangers which they incurred were great: for oftentimes when the yce with the force of winde and sea did byeake, pierces of it were colled and broken one vpon another with great force, terrible to behold, and the same happened at sometimes so neere unto the lighters, that they expected it would haue overwhelped them to their utter destruction: but God who hath preferred them from many perils before, did also saue and deliuer them then.

See the 13. of November ill
the mouth of the river of Boiga.

The 16 day.

Within thre or foure dayes after the first standing of the yce when it was firme and strong, theyooke out all their goods, being fourtie and eight bales or packages of rawe silke, &c. layde it on the yce, and covered the same with such provisions as they had. Then for want of victuals, &c. they agreed to leaue all the good there vpon the yce, and to goe to the shoare: and thereupon broke by their chests and Corobias, wherewith, and with such other things as they coude gette, they made sleds for euery of them to vtiue vpon the yce, whereon they layde their clothes to keepe them warme, and such victuals as they had, and such other things as they might con-ueniently carry, and so they departed from the saide goods and Pauosies very early about one of the clocke in the morning, and traauelling on the yce, directed their way North, as neere as they could inoge, and the same day about two of the clocke in the after noone, they had sight of the Che-tera Babbas (fourte hillocks of Islands so called:) unto the same they directed themselves, and there remained that night.

Chetera Bab-
bas.

The goods and Pauosies which they left on the yce, they iudged to be from those Chetera Ba-bas about 20. versts.

And the next morning departed thence Eastwardes, and came to the Chetera Bougo-nies (of foure Islands before spoken of) before noone, (the distance betwene those places is about sixtene versts) where they remained all that night, departing thence towards Astracan: the next morning very early they lost their way through the persuasion of the Russes which were with them, taking to much towards the left hande, (contrary to the opinion of Master Hudson:) Whereby wandering vpon the yce foure or five dayes, not knowing whether they were entered into the Crimme Tartars lande or not; at length it fortunated they mette with a bay that had bene traualled, which croste backwardes towards the Sea, that way they went, and following the same, within two dayes traualle it brought them to a place called the Crasnoyare, (that is to say in the English tongue) reddecliffe, which diuers of the companie knewe.

There they remained that night hauing nothing to eat but one loafe of bread which they happened to finde with the two Russes that were left in the shippe to keepe her all the winter (as is aforesaid) whome they chaimed to meete going towards Astracan, about five miles before they came to the saide Crasnoyare, who certified them that the shippe was cut in pierces with the yce, and that they had hard scapung with their liues.

In the morning they departed early from Crasnoyare towards the Ouchooge, and about

about 9. of the clocke before noone, being within 10. versts of the Vchooge, they mett Amos Riall, with the Carpenter, which he founde at Ouchooge, and a gunner newly come out of Eng-lande, and also sixtie and five hostes with so many Cassacks to guide them, and 50. gunners for garde, which brought provision of victuals, &c. And were sent by the Duke to fetch the goods to Astracan. The meeting of that company was much joy unto them.

The Factors sent backe with Amos Riall and the saide companie to fetch the goods, Thomas Hudson, the master, Tobias Paris his mate, and so they the saide Factors, and their companie marched on to the Vchooge, where they refreshed themselves that day, and the night following. And from thence proceeded on towards Astracan, where they arrived the last day of November. These that went for the goods after their departure from the Factors trauniled the same day untill they came within 10. versts of the Chetera Babas, where they rested that night. The next morning by the break of the day they departed thence, and before noone were at the Chetera Babas, where they stayed all night; But presently departed thence Thomas Hudson, with the Carpenter and gunner to seeke where the goods lay: who founde the same, and the next day they returned backe to their companie, at the Chetera Babas, and declared unto them in what sort they had found the said goods,

The 3. day early in the morning they departed all from the 4. Babas towards the saide goods, and the same day did lade all the goods they could finde upon the said sleds, and with al convenient speede returned backe towards Astracan. And when they came to the Chetera Bougori, where they rested the night, in the morning very early before the break of day, they were assaulted by a great companie of the Nagays Tartars horsemen, which came shouting and halloving with a great noise, but our people were so inuironed with the sleds, that they durst not enter upon them, but ranne by, and shotte their arrowes amongst them, and hurt but one man in the head, who was a Russe, and so departed presently. Yet when it was day, they thewed themselves a good distance off from our men, being a very great troupe of them, but did not assault them any more. The same day our men with those carriages, departed from thence towards Astracan, where they arrived in safetie the 4. of December, about 3. of the clocke in the after noone: where our people greatly reioyced of their great good happe to haue escaped so many hard euents, trouble and miseries, as they did in that voyage, and had great cause therefore to praise the Almighty, who had so mercifully preferred and deliuered them. They remained the winter at Astracan, where they found great fauour and friendship of the Duke, Captaine and other chiefe officers of that place: But that winter there happened no great matter worth the noting.

In the spring of the yeere 1581. about the mids of March the yce was broken vp, and cleare gone before Astracan, and the ninth of April hauing all the goods that were returned from the parts of Media laden into a Strooge, the Factors, William Turnebull, Marthe we Taileboyes, Giles Crowe, Christopher Burrough, Michael Lane, Laurence Prouse gunner, Randolfe Foxe, Th. Hudson, Tobias Paris, Morgan Hubblethorne the diet, Ric. the furgeat, Rob. Golding, John Smith, Edward Reding carpenter, and William Perrin gunner, hauing also 40. Russes, whereof 36. were Cassacks to rowe, the rest Marchants passengers, departed from Astracan with the said Strooge and goods by the Volga towards Yerslaue. They left behinde them at Astracan, with the English goods & Marchandise there remayning, Amos Riall, W. Wincol, and Richard Relfe, and appointed them to sell & barter the same, or so much thereof as they could to the Tifisks, if there came any thither that spring, and to others as they might, & the rest with such as they should take in exchange to returne vp to Yerslaue that summer, when the Emperours carriage should passe vp to the Volga. The 21. day they came with their Strooge to the Perauloke, but made no stay at that place: for they had bene much troubled with yce in their coming from Astracan. The 2. of May about noone they came to Oucke, and from thence proceeding by the riuer, on the 17. day William Turnebull departed from the Strooge in a small boate, and went before towards Teculsha to provide victuals, and sende downe to the Strooge from which place they were then about 230. versts. The 23. day they mette a boate with victuals, which William Turnebull sent from Teculsha, and the same day they arrived with their Strooge at Teculsha, where they stayed all night, and the next morning betimes departed thence, by 7. Turnebull was gone in the small boate before to Kazan, to provide necessaries from thence, and to make way for their dispatch. The 26. day they arrived with their Strooge at Kazan, where they remayned till the fourth of June: the Factors sent Giles Crowe from Kazan to the Mosco, with their letters the 30. of May. The fourth day of June they departed from Kazan with their Strooge, and arrived at Yerslaue the 22. day about 5. of the clocke in the morning.

The 23. day they provided Telegos, to carry the goods to Vologda: The 24. day hauing December.

Their returne
to Astracan.

May.

the goods lade
there but yet

The 29. d

29. William

Colmogro:

the same from

16. of July, a

almost laden

The 25. d

The 26. da

went William of the Persia

an Bigat, and

The 17. of

Nichols, and sin, whereof

ther, and were rembered from

brought newe

The 25. of

choyced before

Obseru
uers p

Michael Arch

The English h

in Colmogro.

Recola.

Yeegrin.

Towlma

Vologhda.

Vologhda.

Yerslaue.

Swyskagoro

Oulona Mon

Tetuskagoro

Oucke,

Astracan.

Astracan.

...they mette Amos
...come out of Eng-
...and 50. gunners for
...to fetch the goods to

...the goods, Tho-
...and their companie
...the night following
...day of November.
...the same day we
...at night. The next
...as the Chetera Ba-
...as Hudson, with the
...and the next day they
...em in what sort they

...ards the saide goods,
...with al convenient
...era Bougori, where
...ey were assaulted by
...nd halloving with a
...oe enter vpon them,
...in the head, who was
...dues a good distance
...ny moze. The same
...here they arrived in
...ut people greatly re-
...able and miseries, as
...who had so mercifull
...ere they found great
...lace: But that with

...oken by, and cleare
...e returned from the
...the we Taileboyes,
...ner, Randolph Foxe,
...Rob. Golding, John
...40. Russes, where of
...Astracan with the said
...m at Astracan, with
...and Richard Relke,
...to the Tifisks, if there
...as they should take
...arriage should passe
...ke, but made no stay
...n Astracan. The 3.
...rrier, on the 17. day
...to towards Tetusha
...ere then about 230.
...ebull sent from Te-
...ney stayed all night,
...u the small boat be-
...offspatch. The 26.
...fourth of June the ...230. of May. The
...ed at Yerslaue the

The 24. day having
the

the goods laden vpon Telegos, they departed with the same towards Vologhda, and remained there five weekes from Yerslaue.

The 29. day, they came to Vologhda, with all their goods in safetie, and good order. The same day William Turnebull, and Peter Garrard, departed from Vologhda, post by water towards Colmogro: the third of July, hauing their goods laden in a small Doshenike, they departed with the same from Vologhda, towards Rosse Island, by S. Nicholas, where they arrived in safetie the 16. of July, and founde there the Agents of Russia, and in the Rowe the ships sent out of England, almost laden ready to depart.

The 25. day departed for England (one of the rowe of S. Nicholas) the shippe Elizabeth. The 26. day departed thence the Thomas Allen, and Marie Susan, and in the Thomas Allen went William Turnbull, Matthew Tailboys, Thomas Hudson, and others. The goods returned of the Persia voyage, were laden into the shippe, William, and Iohn, whereof was Master William Bigat, and in her with the same goods, came Peter Garrard, and Tobias Parris.

The 11. of August, the same shippe being laden, and dispatched, departed from the rowe of S. Nicholas, and with her in companie another of the companie's freighted ships, called the Tomasin, whereof was Master Christopher Hal. In their returne home wards, they had some soule weather, and were separated at the sea, the William, and Iohn, put into Newcastle, the 24. of September: from whence the said Peter Garrard, and Tobias Parris, came to London by lande, and brought newes of the arrival of the shippe.

The 25. of September, both the said shippe arrived at the port of London in safetie, and anchored before Limehoufe, and Wapping, where they were discharged. 1581.

Observations of the latitudes and Meridian altitudes of diuers places in Russia, from the North to the South. Anno 1581.

Michael Archangel.	{ Meridian altitude obserued at Michael the Archangel, 42. degrees, 30. minutes.
	{ The true latitude, 64. degrees, 54. minutes.
The English house in Colmogro.	{ The English house in Colmogro, in latitude, 64. d. 25. m.
	{ The meridian altitude there obserued the 29. of July, 42. d. 15. m.
Recola.	{ Meridian altitude the 30. of July, 41. d. 46. m.	{ 64. d. 20. m.
	{ Declination Northwesterly, 16. d. 6. m.
Yecgris.	{ Meridian, 4. of August, 41. d. 50. m.	{ 62. d. 59. m.
	{ Declination Northwesterly, 14. d. 49. m.
Towlma.	{ Meridian altitude, the 15. of August, 40. d. 45. m.	{ 60. d. 17. m.
	{ Declination Northwesterly, 11. d. 2. m.
Vologhda.	{ Meridian altitude, the 20. of August, 40. d.	{ 59. d. 17. m.
	{ Declination Northwesterly, 9. d. 17. m.
Vologhda.	{ Meridian altitude, 21. of August, 39. d. 36. m.	{ 59. d. 20. m.
	{ Declination, 8. d. 56. m.
Yerslaue.	{ Latitude by gess, 57. d. 50. m.
Swyaskagorod.	{ Meridian altitude, 21. September, 31. d.	{ 56. d. 4. m.
	{ Declination, 2. d. 56. m.
Ouslona Monasterie.	{ Meridian altitude, 23. September, 30. d. 26. m.	{ 55. d. 51. m.
	{ Declination, 3. d. 43. m.
Tetuskagorod.	{ Meridian altitude, 28. September, 28. d. 28. m.	{ 55. d. 22. m.
	{ Declination, 5. d. 35. m.
Ouceke.	{ Meridian altitude, 5. October, 30. d. 12. m.	{ 51. d. 30. m.
	{ Declination, 8. d. 18. m.
Astracan.	{ Astracan Meridian altitude, 22. October, 29. d. 36. m.	{ 46. d. 10. m.
	{ Declination, 14. d. 16. m.
Astracan.	{ Meridian altitude, 1. of November, 26. d. 35. m.	{ 46. d. 9. m.
	{ Declination, 17. d. 16. m.

Certaine

Certaine directions giuen by Master Richard Hakluyt of the middle Temple, to Master Morgan Hubblethorne, Dyer sent in to Persia, 1579.

I That England hath the best wooll, and cloth of the world, and for that the clothes of the Realme haue no good vent, if good dying be not added: therefore it is much to be wished, that the dying of fojren Countreies were seene, so the ende that the art of dying may be brought into the Realme in greatest excellencie: for thereof will followe honour to the Realme, and great and ample vent of our clothes: and of the vent of clothes, will followe the setting of our poore on worke, in all degrees of labour in clothing and dying: for which cause most principally, you are sent ouer, at the charge of the Citie: and therefore for the satisfiing of the Lordes, and of the expectation of the Merchants, and of your companie, it behooues you to haue care to returne home with more knowledge, then you carried out.

2 The great dearth of clothes is a great let in the ample vent of clothes, and the price of a cloth, for a fifth, sixth, and seuench part tisech by the colour and dying: and therefore to deuise to dye as good colours with the one halfe of the present price, were to the great commoditie of the Realme, by sauing of great treasure in time to come. And therefore you must haue great care to haue knowledge of the materials of all the Countreies, that you shall passe through, that may be used in dying, be they hearbes, weedes, barkes, gummes, earths, or what els soeuer.

3 In Persia you shall finde carpets of course thymmed wooll, the best of the worlde, and excellently coloured: those Citie and Townes, you must repaire to, and you must best meanes to learne all the order of the dying of those thymmes, which are so died, as neither rain, nor yet vinegar, can staine: and if you may attaine to that cunning, you shall not neede to feare dying of cloth. For if the colour holde in paine, and thymme, it will holde much better in cloth.

4 For that in Persia, they haue great colouring of silkes, it behooues you to learne that also, for that clothe dying, and silke dying, haue a certaine affinitie, and your Merchants minde to dying much rare silke into the Realme, and therefore it is more requisite you learne the same.

5 In Persia, there are that fine linnen clothe: it is not amisse you learne it, if you can: it hath bene an olde trade in England, whereof some excellent clothes yet remaine: but the art is now lost, and not to be found in the Realme.

6 They haue a cunning in Persia, to make in Bulkins of Spanish leather, flowers of many kindes in most liuely colours, and these the Courtiers doe weare there, to learne which arte were no harme.

7 If any Dier of China, or of the East partes of the world, be to be found in Persia, acquaint your selfe with him, and learne what you may of him.

8 You shall finde Anyle there, if you can procure the herbe, that it is made of either by seede, or by plant, to carry into England, you may doe well to endeavour to enrich your Countrey with the same: but withall learne you the making of the Anyle, and if you can get the hearbe, you may sende the same dye into England, for possibly it groweth here already.

9 Returne home with you all the materials and substances, that they dye with all in Russia, and also in Persia, that your companie may see all.

10 In some litle pot in your lodging, I wisly you to make daily trials in your arte, as you shall from time to time learne ought among them.

11 Set downe in writing, whatsoeuer you shall learne from day to day, least you should forget, or least God should call you to his mercie, and by each returne, I wisly you sende in writing whatsoeuer you haue learned, or at the least keepe the same safe in your coffe, that come death, or life, your Countrey may enioy the thing that you goe for, and not lose the charge, and trauell bestowed in this case.

12 Learne you there to fixe, and make sure the colour to be giuen by logge wood: so shall we not neede to buy sode so deere, to the enriching of our enemies.

13 Enquire of the price of Leekar, and of all other things belonging to dying.

14 In any wise set downe in writing a true note, from whence euery of them doe come, and where, and in what Countrey each of them doth growe, I meane where the naturall place of each of them is, as how neere to such a Citie, or to such a Sea, or to such a poxable Riuer, in Russia, Persia, or els where.

merchants, for the first partie
thete ruler of abouts on the Captaine, Sp
10. tunnes, or gainst Limech
bired the said
And likewise
men and a boy
passage by sea
ries of domini Cambalu, and

The which Vaigats Call
an borough,
and them an not be in all p Asia, doth not betweene the two barkes, to deere friendes
of the same bo
loue and care, doe: so as it r
pointed for yo your selues to be.

Doe you o
better.

We would what meanes meeting, we t
whome we t
better, or epe
haue some in semblis and on, we would each barke on the maine to in your good
more late sig

kluyt of the sent in

nd for that the clothes therefore it is much the quide that the arte ie: for thereof will fol of the vent of clothes, aching and dying: for and therefore for the
of your companie, it ou carried out.

es, and the price of therefore to deuise to at commoditie of the ult haue great care to hough, that may be ocuer.

of the worlde, and you must vse meanes
neither raine, wine, ill noe. needs to feare olde much better in

es you to learne that nd your Merchants
re requisite you learne

rne it, if you can: it nature: but the arte is er, flowers of many arne which arte were

d in Persia, acquaint

de of either by leade, our Countrey with get the heards, you

pe with all in Russia,

our arte, as you shall least you should for you sende in writing

that come death, or arge, and trauell be re wood: so shall we mping.

hem doe come, and naturall place of each le Riuer, in Russia,

15 If before your returne you could procure a singular good workman, in the arte of Turkish carpet making, you should bring the arte into this Realme, and also thereby increase worke to your companie.

Commisision giuen by Sir Rowland Hayward, Knight, and George Barne, Aldermen and Governours of the company of English Merchants, for discouerie of newe trades, ynto Arthur Pet, and Charles lackman, for a voyage by them to be made, for discouerie of Cathay, 1580. in forme following.

In the name of God Almighty, and euerlasting, Amen. This writing for commission Tripartite, made the twentieth day of May, Anno Domini, 1580. and in the two and twentieth yeere of the raigne of our Soueraigne Ladie Elizabeth, by the grace of God, Queene of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. Betweene Sir Rowland Hayward, Knight, & George Barne, Aldermen of the Citie of London, and Governours of the companie of English merchants, for discouerie of newe trades, for the behoofe, and in the name of the said companie, on the first partie, and Arthur Pet of Ratclife, in the Countie of Spideler, Captaine, Master, and chiefe ruler of the good barke, called the George of London, of the burthen of 40. tunnes, of thereabouts, on the second partie, and Charles lackman of Popler, in the saide Countie of Spideler, Captaine, Master, and Ruler of the good barke, called the William of London, of the burthen of 20. tunnes, of thereabouts, (which barkes are nowe riding at anker in the riuer of Thames against Limehouse) on the third partie: witnesseth, that the said Governours, and companie, haue hired the said Arthur Pet, to serue in the said barke, called the George, with nine men and a boye: And likewise the said Charles lackman, to serue in the said barke, called the William, with five men and a boye, for a voyage by them to be made by Gods grace, for search and discoueries of a passage by sea from hence by Borowghs streights, and the Island Vaigats, Eastwards, to the countries of dominion of the mighty Prince, the Emperour of Cathay, and in the same vnto the cities Cambalu, and Quinsay, or to either of them.

The which passage (vpon authoritie of writers, and great reason) is conceaied to be from the Vaigats Eastwards, according to the description in plas of spirall lines, made by master William Borowgh, whereof either of the said Arthur Pet, and Charles lackman, haue one deliuered vnto them and also one other falling carde, and a blanke plat for either of them. But if it should not be in all points, according to that description, yet we hope, that the continent of firme land of Asia, doth not stretch it selfe so farre Northwards, but that there may be found a sea passable by it, betweene the latitude of 70. and 80. degrees. And therefore we haue appointed you with these two barkes, so make triall of the same: wishing you both to toyne in friendship together, as most deere friends, and brothers, to all purposes and effects, to the furtherance and orderly performing of the same voyage. And likewise order your companies, that they of the one barke may haue such love and care, to helpe and succour them of the other, as most deere friends and brothers woulde doe: so as it may appeare, that though they be two barkes, and two companies, (which is so appointed for your greater comfort and assurance) yet that you are wholly of one minde, and benefit your selues to the betterment of your potatoes, to performe the thing that you are both employed
to.

Doe you obserue good order in your daily seruice, and pray vnto God, so shall you prosper the better.

We woulde haue you to meete often together, to talke, conferre, consult, and agree howe, and by what meanes you may best performe this purposed voyage, according to our intents. And at such meeting, we thinke it requisite, that you call vnto you your mates, and also Nicholas Chanceler, (whome we doe appoint as merchant, to keepe account of the merchandize you shall buy, or sell, batter, or exchange) with euery, that whatsoever God should dispose of either of you, yet they may haue some instructions, and knowe to be dealt in your place, or places. And of all your as-semblies and consultations together, and the substance of matter you shall at euery time agree vpon, we woulde haue you to note them in the paper booke that we giue you for that purpose, vnto each barke one. We doe appoint Arthur Pet in the George, as Rowdall, to weare the flagge in the maine top, and Charles lackman in the William, as West a vntill, if of good orders to be taken for your good and orderly keeping of companie together, with vs with may be such, as you should never lose sight the one of the other, except by both your consent, so discouer about an Island, or in some

some tiner, when and where you may certainly appoint to meete together againe, we referre the same to your good discretions.

And nowe for your good direction in this voyage, we would have you with the next good wind and weather, that God shall send thereunto meete and convenient, after the 22. day of this present month of May, saile from this riuer of Thames, to the coast of Finmarck, to the North Cape, thence, to the Wardhouse, and from thence direct your course to haue sight of Willoughbies land, and from it passe along it to the Noua Zemla, keeping the same lands alwaies in your sight on your starboordside (if conveniently you may) to the ende you may discouer, whether the same Willoughbies land be continent and firme land, with Noua Zemla, or not: notwithstanding we would not haue you to entangle your selues in any Baye, or otherwise, so as it might hinder your speedie proceeding to the Island Vaigats.

And when you come to Vaigats, we would haue you to get sight of the maine land of Samocda, which is ouer against the South part of the same Island, and from thence with Gods permission, to passe Eastwards along it the same coast, keeping it alwaies in your sight (if conveniently you may) vntill you come to the mouth of the riuer Ob, and when you come vnto it, passe ouer the saide riuers mouth into the bozder of land, on the East side of the same (without any staye to be made for searching inwardly in the same riuer) and being in sight of the same Easterly land, doe you in Gods name proceede along it by it, from thence Eastwards, keeping the same alwaies on your starboordside in sight, if you may, and followe the tracte of it, whether it incline Southerly or Northerly (as at times it may doe both) vntill you come to the Countrey of Cathay, or the dominion of that mightie Emperour.

And if God prosper your voyage, with such good successe, that you may attaine to the same, doe you seeke by all means you can, to arrive to the Cities Cambala, and Quinsay, or to the one of them, But if it happen that you can not conveniently come to either of those places, or shall be driue to remaine & winter in some other port or place of his dominion, doe you seeke by all means possible to winne fauour and liking of the people, by gifts and friendly demeanes towards them, and not to offer violence, or doe wrong to any people of nation whatsoever, but therein to bee innocent as dooues, yet wilde as serpents, to avoide mischief, and defend you from hurt. And when you shall haue gotten friendship through your discrette ordering of your selues, towards the people, doe you learne of them what you can of their Prince, and he the we them one of the Queenes Spaightes letters, which the Sencerth writt you (by either of you one, made of one substance and effect, for eck of you particularly) written in Latine, whereunto her Spaighte hath subscribed, and caused her signet seale to be set, the effect of the same letters you haue also written in English, for your otome vnderstanding thereof.

The same her Spaightes letters, you shall procure to deliuer vnto the same mightie Prince, or Gouernour, with some present to be giuen such as you shall thinke meete, and convenient, vnto your selues in all pointes according to the effect of the same letters, and procure againe from the same Prince, his letters accordingly.

And if God so prosper your voyage, that you may this summer passe the Streights, and come passe about the Northernmost land of Asia, vnto the Countrey of Cathay, or dominion of that mightie Prince, and wintering in it, may obtaine from him his letters of privilege against the next yeeres spring, you may then after your first setting foorth, search and discouer some what further then you had discouered before your wintering, so farre as you shall thinke convenient, with regard had, and alwaies prouided, that you may returne home hither, to giue vs aduise of your proceedings the same summer, or before the tharpenes or extremitie of winter ouertake you.

And if it happen you cannot this summer attaine to the bozder of Cathay, and yet finde the land beyond the Ob, to stretch it selfe Easterly, with the sea adjoining, vnto it nauigable, doe you then proceede on your discouerie (as before said) along it the same continent, so farre as you can this summer, hauing care in the trauel to find out some convenient harbor, port, and place, where you may winter, and when you thinke it convenient, put your selfe to wintering, where if you happen to finde people, you shall deale with them, as we haue before aduised you to doe with the people of Cathay, &c. And if you can learne that they haue a Prince, or chiefe Gouernour, doe you procure to deliuer vnto the same Prince or Gouernour, one of the Queenes Spaightes letters, as before said, and seeke to obtaine againe his letters accordingly, if you sh happen to winter and obtaine letters of privilege, finding the countrey and people, with the commodities to be such, that by bringe thither with the people, & for the commodities, it may be beneficiall vnto vs (as we hope you may) the same will be some good liking vnto vs: notwithstanding we would haue you the next summer (by the gracie of God) at your first setting out of your wintering harbor, proceede along it that tracte of chiefly desire to you may vnto you may thereof we doubt not, of her Spaightes peere of our L. adventures in may doe, Amc

But if it hap 20. degrees, or in no hope may the tracte of the the way a conc Asia, his sum with then that as you can, an gomzes, &c. de of chiefe Gouern thereof an (wer chandise and co them to haue, &

If you so ha to farre as con wide of by a de may come to ch a, and thereby

But if you f with your back from that part c of that coast E endly you may, to discouer and Zembla, or not. us Zembla vnto you may most c the tract of it, ( regard that in cou

And for your you to the intr the first part of to the second pa ple thereof is a kaled and sub so

And to the o ne grace therer every part and am by these y grace thererunt

And in wint heth aboute wint cell, and safe r gain, we referre the the next good wind

a. day of this present to the North Cape of Willoughbies
alwaies in your sight whether the same not withstanding wee
it might hinder your aine land of Samoee with Gods permis sion (if conveniently unto it, passe over the without any staye to be the Easterly land, doe the same alwaies on incline Southerly of Cathay, of the domi

attaine to the same, Quinsay, or to the
those places, or shall you seeke by all means eanes towards them,
at therein to bee inno hurr. And when you
to towards the people, the Queenes Ma
substance and effect, subscribed, and caused in English, for your mightie Prince, or and convenient, using cure againe from the streights, and com munion of that might age against the w is somewhat further convenient, with is advice of your pr certake you.

c. and yet finde the navigable, doe you so farre as you can and place, where you where if you happen doe with the people of it doe you procure to atters as before said,
and obtaine letters
h. that by using trade we hope you may you the next summer
h. proceede alongst
that

that tracte of land to Cathay if you see likelihood to passe it (for that is the Countrey that wee chiefly desire to discover) and seeing you are fully victualled for two yeeres and bywards, which you may very well make to serve you for two yeeres and a halfe, though you finde no other helpe, you may therefore be the bolder to adventure in proceeding upon your discoverie: which if you do, we doubt not, but you shall achieve the Countrey of Cathay, and deliver to the Prince there, one of her Majesties letters, bying from thence the same Princes letters answerable: & so in the yeere of our Lord, 1582. returne home with good newes, and glad tidings, not onely unto vs the adventurers in this voyage, but also to our whole Countrey, and nation, which God grant you may doe, Amen.

But if it happen that the land of Asia from beyond the river Ob, extend it selfe Northwards to 80. degrees, or neerer the pole, whereby you finde it to leade you into that extremitie, that small, and hope may be looked for, to faile that waies to Cathay, doe you not withstanding followe the tracte of the same land, as farre as you can discover this summer, having care to finde out by the way a convenient place for you to winter in, the which (if you may discover the same lande of Asia this summer to extend it selfe to 80. degrees of latitude, and bywards, or to 85. degrees) we wish then that the same your wintering place may be in the river of Ob, or as neere the same river as you can, and finding in such wintering place people, be they Samoeds, Yovgorians, or Mologozes, &c. do you gently entreat with them as aforesaid, & if you can learne by them have a prince of chief Government amongst them, doe you deliver him one of her Majesties letters, and procure thereof an answer accordingly: doe you procure to barter and exchange with the people, of the merchandise and commodities that you shall carie with you, for such commodities as you shall finde them to have, &c.

If you so happen to winter, we would have you the next summer, to discover into the river Ob, so farre as conveniently you may: And if you shall finde the same river (which is reported to be wide or broad) to be also navigable and pleasant for you, to travell farre into, happely you may come to the Cite Siberia, or to some other towne or place, habited upon or neere the border of it, and thereby have liking to winter out the second winter: use you therein your discretions.

But if you finde the said river Ob, to be sholde, or not such as you may conveniently travell in with your barkes, doe you then the next summer returne backe through Boroughs streights: And from that part of Nova Zembla, adjoining to the same streights, doe you come alongst the tracke of that coast Westwards, keeping it on the Starboord side, and the same alwaies in sight, if conveniently you may, untill you come to Willoughbies land, if outwards bound, you shall not happen to discover and crye whether the said Willoughbies lande to yne continent with the same Nova Zembla, or not. But if you shall then yprove them to be one firme and continent, you may from Nova Zembla direct your course unto the said Willoughbies land, as you shall thinke good, and as you may most conveniently: and from Willoughbies land, you shall proceede Westwards alongst the tract of it, (though it incline Northerly) even so farre as you may or can travell, having regard that in convenient time you may returne home hither to London for wintering.

And for your orderly passing in this voyage, and making observations in the same, we referre you to the instructions given by Master William Borough, whereof one copie is annexed unto the first part of this indenture, under our seale, for you Arthur Pet, another copie of it is annexed to the second part of this indenture, under our seale also, for you Charles Lackman, and a third copie thereof is annexed unto the third part of this indenture, remaining with vs the said companie, sealed and subscribed by the said Arthur Pet, and Charles Lackman.

And to the observing of all things contained in this commission, (so neere as God will permit us grace thereunto) If the said Arthur Pet, doe covenant by these presents, to performe them, and every part and parcell thereof. And If the said Charles Lackman, doe for my part likewise covenant by these presents to performe the same, and every part thereof, so neere as God will giue me grace thereunto.

And in witness thereof, these indentures were sealed and delivered accordingly, the day and yeere last above written. Thus the Lord God Almighty send you a prosperous voyage, with happie success, and safe returne, Amen.

Instructions

Instructions
of the English nation for the discovery of the North East passage to Cathay and the East Indies by the North Pole
in the yeere of our Lord 1582.

Instructions and notes very necessaric and needfull to be obserued, in the purposed voyage for discoverie of Cathay Eastwards, by Arthur Pet, and Charles Lackman.

When you come to Orfordnesse, (if the winde doe serue you to goe a seaboord the lands) doe you set off from thence, and note the time diligently of your being against the said Nesse, turning then your glasse, whereby you intend to keepe your continuall watch, and appointe such course as you shall thinke good, according as the wind serueth you: and from that time forwarde continually (if your ship be safe, vnder saile, a hull or trie) do you at the ende of euery 4. glasse at the least (except calme) sounde with your dip in lead, and note diligently what depth you finde, and also the ground. But if it happen by sturmes of the shippes way, or other wise, that you can not get ground, yet note what depth you do proue, and could finde no ground (this note is to be obserued all your voyage, as well outwards as homewards.) But when you come vpon any coast, or doe finde any holde banke in the sea, you are then to vie your leade oftener, as you shall thinke it requisite, noting diligently the order of your depth, and the deeping and sholding. And so likewise doe you note the depths into harboronghs, riuers, &c.

How to note bottoms in his Toimall of the voyage, his wand reckoning, and other obseruations.

And in keeping your dead reckoning, it is very necessaric that you doe note at the ende of euery 4. glasse, what way the shippe hath made (by your best proofes to be used) and howe her way hath bene throughe the water, considering withall for the sagge of the sea, so leeward, accordingly as you shall finde it growen: and also to note the depth, and what thinges woorth the noting, happened in that time, with also the winde vpon what point you finde it then, and of what force, or strength it is, and what failes you beare.

But if you should omit to note those things at the ende of euery 4. glasse, I would not haue you to let it slippe any longer time, then to note it diligently at the ende of euery watch, or 8. glasse at the farthest.

Doe you diligently obserue the latitude as often, and in as many places as you may possible, and also the variation of the compass (especially when you may be at shoare vpon any land) noting the same obseruations truely, and the place and places where, and the time and times when you doe the same.

When you come to haue sight of any coast or land whatsoever, doe you presently set the same with your sailing compass, how it beares off you, noting your iudgement howe farre you thinke it from you, drawing also the forme of it in your booke, howe it appeares vnto you, noting diligently betwix the highest, or useablest part thereof beareth off you, and the extreames also in sight of the same land at both endes, distinguishing them by letters, A. B. C. &c. Afterwards when you haue sailed 1. 2. 3. or 4. glasse (at the most) noting diligently what way you barke hath made, and vpon what point of the compass doe you againe set that first land seene, or the partes thereof, that you first obserued, if you can well perceauce or discern them, and like wise such other notable pointes or signes, vpon the land that you may then see, and could not perceauce at the first time, distinguishing it also by letters from the other, and drawing in your booke the shape of the same land, as it appeareth vnto you, and so the third time, &c.

For noting the shape and birth of the land at first discoverie, &c.

And also in passing alongst by any and euery coast, doe you drawe the manner of biting in of euery Bay, and entrance of euery harborongh or riuers mouth, with the lying out of euery point, or headland, (vnto the which you may giue apt names at your pleasure) and make some mark in drawing the forme and boorder of the same, where the high cliffs are, and where lowe land is, whether sande, hills, or woods, or whatsoever, not omitting to note any thing that may be sensible and apparant to you, which may serue to any good purpose. If you carefully with great heed and diligence, note the obseruations in your booke, as aforesaid, and afterwards make demonstration thereof in your plat, you shall thereby perceauce howe farre the land you first sawe, or the partes thereof obserued, was then from you, and consequently of all the rest: and also howe farre the one part was from the other, and vpon what course or point of the compass the one lieth from the other.

And when you come vpon any coast where you find floods and ebbs, doe you diligently note the time of the highest and lowest water in euery place, and the flake or still water of full sea, & lowe water, and also which way the flood doth runne, howe the tides doe set, howe much water it bringeth, and what force the tide hath to drawe a shippe in one howse, or in the whole rive, as nere as you can iudge it, and what difference in time you finde betwix the running of the floode, and the ebbe. And if you finde vpon any coast the currant to runne alwaies one way, doe you also note the same

For obseruing
of tides and currants.

duety how it
them, as o
for the latitude stances, obser
then conuenie
by perfectly of your discou
you may not fo
the soile, or fre
tire and dispos
best of the people as you
winne thepp
though you
meanes possib
that you keepe Thus I be sincerely, and be cees with you

Certain

70 degrees, in of 1800 Engl 10 English m
the and chire
and prosper
When you two, three, fo
right hand ru the mouth of e named citie
300 or 400 m had riuers mo
all Asia, passin in view on po bring the chie
known.

And in or captied the wh
table fresh riu
land, &c. and Cathay or Cl portunity to types of Cath Instructio

ll to be ob-
astwards,

to goe a seaboard the nely of your being any (intend to keepe I thinke good, accorcontinually (if your uery 4. glasses at the pech you finde, and al-that you can not ge-oe is to be obserued on any coast, of the I shall thinke it requi-And to likewise be e at the ende of eve-

y) and howe her way eewards, according wooth the noting,
n, and of what force, s, I would not haue ery watch, of 8. glaf

as you may possi-
upon any land) no-
time and times when one senty set the same dwe farre you thinke to you, noting differeances also in sight of terwards when you

ou barke hath made,
by the partes thereof, se such other notable e at the first time, di-the shape of the same

ner of biting in of eg out of euery point,
make some make in where lowe landes is,
that may be sensible
y with great heede
wards make demon-
you first sawe, or erest: and also how e compass the one

u diligently note the er of full sea, & some much water it beeth, as neere as you can oode, and the ebbe,
u also note the same
duely,

uely how it seerch in euery place, and obserue what force it hath to driue a Shippe in one houre, &c.
Item, as often, and when as you may conueniently come vpon any land, to make obseruation fo; the latitude and variation, &c. do you also (if you may) with your instrument, fo; trying of distances, obserue the platforme of the place, and of as many things (worth the noting) as you may then conueniently see from time to time. These orders if you diligently obserue, you may thereby perfectly set downe in the plats, that I haue giuen you your whole trauell and description of your discouery, which is a thing that will be chiefly expected at your hands. But withall you may not forget to note as much as you can learne, vnderstande of yourreine, of the manner of the soyle, of fruitfulness of euery place and countrey you shall come in, and of the manner, shape, ac-cure and disposition of the people, and of the commodities they haue, and what they most couet and desire of the commodities you carrie with you. It behoueth you to giue trifling things vnto such people as you shall happen to see, and to offer them all curtelie and friendshiply you may or can, to winne theyr loue and fauour towards you, not doing or offering them any wrong or hurt. And though you should be offered wrong at theyr hands, yet not to reuenge the same lightly, but by all meanes possible seeke to winne them, yet alwayes dealing wisely and with such circumspection that you keepe your selues out of theyr dangers.

To take the platforme of places without compass of view upon
land.

Thus I beseech God almighty to bless you, and prosper your voyage with good and happie success, and send you safely to returne home againe, to the great ioy and reioycing of the aduenturers with you, and of all your friends, and our whole countrey. Amen.

By M. W. Burrough.

Certaine briefe aduises, giuen by Master Dee, to Arthur Pet, and Charles Jackman, to be obserued in their Northeasterne discouerie, Anno 1580.

If we reckon from Wardhouse to Colgoique Island 400 miles for almost 20 degrees difference onely of longitude very neere East & West, and about the latitude of 70 degrees and two third parts; From Colgoique to Vaigats 200 miles for 10 degrees difference, only in longitude, at 70 degrees of latitude also: Frō Vaigats to the Promontorie Tabin 60 degrees difference of longitude (the whole course, of thortest distance being East and West) in the latitude likewise of 70 degrees, maketh 1200 miles: then is summa totalis frō Wardhouse to Tabin 600 leagues, or 1800 English miles. Therefore allowing in a discouery voyage for one day with another but 50 English miles, it is euident that from Wardhouse to Tabin the course may be finished easily in sixe and thirey dayes: but by Gods helpe it may be finished in much shorter time, both by helpe of wind prosperous, and light continuall fo; the time requisite therunto.

When you are past Tabin, or come to the longitude of 142 degrees, as your chart sheweth, or two, three, foure, or five degrees further Easterly, it is probable you shall finde the land on your right hand runne much Southerly and Eastward, in which course you are like either to fall into the mouth of the famous riuer Oechardes, or some other, which yet I coniecture to passe by the renowned cite of Cambalu, and the mouth to be in latitude about 50 or 52 degrees, and within 300 or 400 miles of Cambalu it selfe, being in the latitude about 45 degrees Southerly of the said riuers mouth, or els that you shall trend about the very Southerne and most Easterly part of all Asia, passing by the province Ania, and then in the latitude of 46 degrees, keeping still the land in view on your right hand (as neere as you may with safety) you may enter into Quinsay haue being the chiefe city in the Kingdom of China, as I terme it fo; distinction sake, from the other better knowne.

Mr. Dee gave them a chart of his owne
making, which heere be refered them vnto.

And in or about either or both of these two last named places, you may to great good purpose be decamped the whole winter, after your arrivall in those quarters, as sometime by sea, sometime in notable fresh rivers, sometime in discreet view and noting downe the situation of the cities with land, &c. and euer allaying to come by some shars or mappe of the countrey, made and printed in Cathay or China, and by some of theyr bookes like wise fo; language, &c. You may also haue opportunity to saile ouer to Iapan Island, where you shall finde Christian men, Jesuits of many collores of Christy dome some, and perhaps some Englishmen, at whose hands you may haue great instruction and aduise fo; your affaires in hand.

Notes

Notes in writing, besides more priuie by mouth, that were giuen by M. Richard Hakluyt, of Edon in the countie of Hereford, Esquire, Anno 1580: To M. Arthur Pet, and to M. Charles Iackman, sent by the merchants of the Moscouie companie for the discoverie of the North-east straight, not altogether vnfit for some other enterprises of discoverie, heerafter to be taken in hand.

What respect of Islands is to be had, and why.

Ver as the Portingalles haue in theyr course to theyr Indies in the Southeast, certaine ports and fortifications to thrust into by the way, to diuers great purposes: so you are to see what Islands, and what ports you had need to haue by the way in your course to the North-east. For which cause I wish you to enter into consideration of the matter, & to note all the Islands, and to set them downe in plat, to two ends: that is to say, That we may deuise to take the benefit by them, And also foresee how by them the Sauages or ciuill Princes may in any soe annoy vs in our purposed trade that way.

And for that the people to the which we purpose in this voyage to go, be no Christians, it were good that the masse of our commodities were alwayes in our owne disposition, and not at the will of others. Therefore it were good that we did seeke out some small Island in the Seribian sea, where we might plant, soyle, and staple safely, from whence (as time should serue) we might send those heathen nations with our commodities without cloying them, or without venturing our whole masse in the bowels of theyr countrey.

And to which Island (if used were, & if we should thinke so good) we might allure the North-east nauie, the nauie of Cambalu to resoye with theyr commodities to vs there planted, & stapling there.

And if such an Island might be found so standing as might shorten our course, and so standing, as that the nauie of Cambalu, or other those parties might conveniently saile vnto without theyr like in respect of distance, then would it fall out well. For so, besides lesse danger, and more safety, our ships might there vnlade and lade againe, and returne the selfe same summer to the ports of England or of Rowway.

And if such an Island may be for the stapling of our commodities to the which they of Cambalu would not saile, yet we might, hauing shippes there, imploy them in passing betwene Cambalu and that stapling place.

Respect of hauens and harborowes.

And if no such Islands may be found in the Seribian sea toward the firme of Asia, then are you to search out the ports that be about Noua Zembla, all along the tract of that land, to the end you may winter there the first yeere, if you be let by contrarie winde, and to the end that if we may in short time come vnto Cambalu, and vnlade and set saile againe for returne without venturing, there at Cambalu, that you may on your way come as farre in returne as a port about Noua Zembla: that the summer following, you may the sooner be in England for the more speedy vent of your East commodities, and for the speedier discharge of your mariners: if you can not go forward and backe in one selfe same summer.

And touching the tract of the land of Noua Zembla, toward the East out of the circle Arctike in the more temperate zone, you are to haue regard for if you finde the soile planted with people: it is like that in time an ample vent of our warme wollen clothes may be found. And if there be no people at all there to be found, then you shall speciallie note what plenty of whales, and of other fish is to be found there, to the end we may turne our new found land fishing or Island fishing to our whaling that way, for the ayd and comfort of our new trades to the North-east to the coasts of Asia.

Respect of fish and certaine other things.

And if the apple may be found vpon that tract temperate, and the soile peeling wood, water, land and grasse, and the seas fish, then we may plant on that maine the officials of our people, as the Portingalles do in Byasill, & so they may in our fishing in our passage, and diuers waies vend commodities to England by harbouring and victualling vs.

And

And it may be name, as plenty

The Ma

To note the quallie, or heads they haue

And whether and come to ma

To note the
If a

A great reg
be noted as a th possesse the same haue the crabs
were sold, or fo
king of Denm palle that way
were, the leng purposes: and the Princes pr
such thing sou

Which

If you finde
When are you
If they be y
be made to intr
If you enter
what kinde of c
booy, clapbooy
be brought peri

You must h
because an

To

Bring hom Although
All the fru
them,
And bring shall finde the
All the see
another part o
that the same n
If you are i
haue the perfe
To bring cl
deuiled in Cu

Which

If you finde
When are you
If they be y
be made to intr
If you enter
what kinde of c
booy, clapbooy
be brought peri

You must h
because an

To

Bring hom Although
All the fru
them,
And bring
shall finde the
All the see
another part o
that the same n
If you are i
haue the perfe
To bring cl
deuiled in Cu

You must h
because an

To

Bring hom Although
All the fru
them,
And bring
shall finde the
All the see
another part o
that the same n
If you are i
haue the perfe
To bring cl
deuiled in Cu

You must h
because an

To

Bring hom Although
All the fru
them,
And bring
shall finde the
All the see
another part o
that the same n
If you are i
haue the perfe
To bring cl
deuiled in Cu

You must h
because an

To

Bring hom Although
All the fru
them,
And bring
shall finde the
All the see
another part o
that the same n
If you are i
haue the perfe
To bring cl
deuiled in Cu

You must h
because an

And it may be, that the Inland they may redily wash, peck, care, dempe, and all things for the name, as plentifully as Cilicia doth.

The Islands to be noted with their commodities and wants.

To note the Islands, whether they be hie land or low land, mountaine, or flat, grauelly, clay, or silty, or of what soyle, woody or not woody, with springs and rivers of noy, and what wilde beasts they haue in the same.

And whether there seeme to be in the same apt matter to build withall, as stone free or rough, and stone to make lime withall, and wood or coale to burne the same withall.

To note the goodnesse of the badnesse of the hauens and harbours in the Islands.

If a straight be found what is to be done, and what great importance it may be of.

And if there be a straight in the passage into the Southern seas, the same is specially and with great regard to be noted, especially if the same straight be narrow and to be kept. I say it is to be noted as a thing that much importeth for what prince for us shall be Lord of the same, & shall possesse the same, as the king of Denmarke doth possesse the straight of Denmarke, he onely shall haue the trade out of these regions into the Southern parts of the world for himselfe, and for his posterity, or for his subjects onely, or to enjoy wonderfull benefit of the toll of the same, like as the king of Denmarke doth enjoy of his straights, by suffering the merchantes of other princes to passe that way. If any such straight be found, the eleuation, the high or lowe land, the hauens wide, the length of the straights, and all other such circumstances are to be set downe for many purposes: and all the mariners in the voyage are to be sworne to keepe close all such things, that other princes perceiue by not of the same, after our returne vpon the disclosing of the mariners, if any such thing should hap.

Which way the Saunge may be made able to purchase our cloth and other their wants.

If you finde any Island or maine land populous, and that the same people hath neede of cloth, when are you to deuise what commodities they haue to purchase the same withall.

If they be poore, then are you to consider of the soyle, and how by any possibilitie the same may be made to enrich them, that hereafter they may haue something to purchase the cloth withall.

If you enter into any maine by portable riuer, and shall finde any great woods, you are to note what kinde of timber they be of: that we may know whether they are for pitch, tarre, masts, deale-wood, clapwood, or for building of ships or houses, for so if the people haue no vse of them they may be bought perhaps to vse.

Not to venture the losse of any one man.

You must haue great care to preserve your people, since your number is so small, and not to venture any one man in any wise.

To bring home besides merchandize certaine trifles.

Bring home with you (if you may) from Cambalu, or other ciuil place, one or other yong man, although you leaue one for him.

All the fruites of the countreies, if they will not of themselves dure, drye them, and so preserve them.

And bring with you the curuels of peares and apples, and the stones of such stone fruits as you shall finde there.

Also the seedes of all strange herbs and shrowes, for such seedes of fruites and herbs comming from another part of the world, and so farre off, will delight the fauour of many, for the strangenesse & for that the same may grow and continue the delight long time.

If you arrive at Cambalu or Quinsay, to bring thence the mappe of that countrey, for so shall you haue the perfect description which is to great purpose.

To bring thence some old printed booke, to see whether they haue had print there, before it was deuised in Europe, as some write.

To note their force by sea and by land

If you arrive in Cambait or Quinsay, to take a speciall view of their stauie, and to note the force, greatnesse, maner of building of them, the sitings, the castles, the anchors, the furniture of them, with ordnance, armor, and munition.

Also, to note the force of the walls and bulwarks of the cities, their ordnance, and whether they haue any caluaries, and what powder and shot.

To note what armor they haue.

What swords.

What pikes, halberds, and bills.

What boxes of force, and what light boxes they haue.

And to throughout, to note the force of the countrey both by sea and by land.

Things to be marked to make coniectures by.

To take speciall note of the buildings, and of the ornaments of the houses within.
Take a speciall note of the apparell and furniture, and of the substance that the same is made of, of which a merchant may make a gess, as well of their commoditie, as also of the nature, To note the shops and warehouses, and what commodities they abound, the price also.

To see the humbles, and to view all such things as are brought into the markets, so that you shall soone see the commodities, and the maner of the people of the inland, and so give a gess of many things.

To note the fields of graine, and their trees of fruit, and how they abound or not abound in one and other, and what plenty or scarcitie of fish they haue.

Things to be carried with you, whereof more or lesse is to be carried for a shew of our commodities to be made.

Articles of all orient coulers, specially of stamell, byndecloes of orient coulers also.
Frisagoes, moles, Byldow frizes, Spanish blankets, bayes of all coulers, specially with stamell, woosteds, carels, sayes, woadmols, flannels, caly, &c.

Felts of diuers coulers.

Taffeta hats.

Deepe cappes for mariners coulered in stamell, whereof if ample vent may be found, it would turne to an infinite commoditie of the common poore people by knitting.

Quilted cappes of Levant taffeta of diuers coulers for the night.

Knit stocks of silke of orient coulers.

Knit stocks of Jersey perne of orient coulers, whereof if ample vent might followe the poore multitude should be set in worke.

Stocks of kersie of diuers coulers for men and for women.

Garters of silke of seuerall kindes, and of coulers diuers.

Circles of Busse, and all other leather, with gilt and bugitt buckles, specially waste gittles, waste girdles of veluet.

Gloves of all sorts, knit, any of leather.

Gloves perfumed.

Points of all sorts of silke, threed, and leather, of all maner of coulers.

Shooes of Spanish leather, of diuers coulers, of diuers lengths, cut and burut.

Shooes of other leather.

Veluet shooes and pantophles.

These shooes and pantophles to be sent this time, rather for a shew then for any other cause.

Hurles knit, and of leather.

Knit cappes knit, and other.

A garnish of powder for a shew of a vens of that English commoditie, bottles, flagons, spoons, &c. of that metall.

Glasses of English making.

Venice glasses.

Looking glasses for women, great and saye.

Small Dial Spectacles Others of Doye glasses Combes of Combes of Combes of Linnen of Handkerchiefs
Glazen eyes Kniues in Revels grea Butrons grea
of double silke, an Boxes with that the people be government set
All the seuerall gouernours at Imagine.
Locks and key of sil vent may be gard. For in to our people best
the Hospitals of

Fo

If the stee aboard, if you Harmelade.
Suckst.
Figgas barre Resens of the Centers of dilolue.
Punes dam Dyed peares Walnuts.
Almonds.
Smalnuts.
Olives to ma
The apple
Hulloke.
Satie.
Vials of goo they comming a Sugar, to be The stee of the same doe ma
fretheth the spirit

Cynomon wa
Imperiall wa

With these a
with the
made by way

Small

Lond

Small viols a few for prooffe, although here they will not hold the order they do heere.

Spectacles of the common sort.

Others of Crisall trimmed with silver, and otherwise.

Polye glasses.

Combes of Ivory.

Combes of Bone.

Combes of Horne.

Linnen of diuers sorts.

Handkerchiffes with silke of severall coulers wrought.

Glazen eyes to ride with against dust.

Knives in sheathes, both single and double, of good edge.

Needles great and small of every kinde.

Buttons greater and smaller, with moulds of leather and not of wood, and such as be durable of double silke, and that of flambie coulers.

Boxes with weights of golde, and of every kinde of the coine of golde, good and badde, to shew that the people heere use weighte & measure, which is a certeine shew of wise dome, and of a certaine government sated heere.

All the severall silver coines of our English monyes, to be carried with you to be shewed to the governours at Cambalu, which is a thing that shall in silence speake to wise men moze, than you imagine.

Locks and keyes, hinges, bolts, halpes, &c. great and small of excellent workmanship, where-as it may be, heereafter, we shall let our subiectes in worke, which you must have in great regard. For in finding ample vent of any thing that is wrought in this realme, is moze worth to our people besides the gaine of the merchant, ther: Chyrlsburch, Wydewell, the Sauoy, and all the Hospitals of England.

For banketing on shipboord persons of credit.

First the sweetest perfumes to set vnder hatches to make the place sweet against they comming aboard, if you arrive at Cambalu, Quinsy, or in any such great cite and not among Sauvages, Sparmelade.

Sucket.

Figges barreled.

Reifens of the sunne.

Comfets of diuers kindes, made of purpose by him that is most excellent, that shall not be blue.

Punces damaske.

Dyed peares.

Walnuts.

Almonds.

Smallnuts.

Oliues to make them taste they wine.

The apple John that dureth two yeeres to make shew of our fruits.

Dulloche.

Sacke.

Viols of good sweet waters, and casting bottles of glasses to be sprinkled the galls withall after they comming aboard.

Suger, to use with they wine, if they will.

The sweet oyle of Sante, and excellent French blueger, and a fine kinde of Balsam siped in the same doe make a banketing vish, and a little Suger cast in it cooleth and comforteth, and refresheth the spirits of man.

Cymomon water } is to be had with you to make a shew of by taste, and also to comfort your Imperiall water } sicke in the voyage.

With these and such like, you may banket where you arrive the greater and best persons.

Or with the gift of these Sparmelades in small hores, or small viols of sweet waters you may make by way of gift, or you may make a merchandize of them.

The mappe of England and of London.

Take with you the mappe of England set out in saye coulers, one of the biggest foze I meane, to make shew of your countrey from whence you come.

And also the large mappe of London, to make shew of your citie. And let the river be braine full of shippes of all sorts, to make the more shew of your great trade and traffike in trade of merchandise.

Ortelius booke of mappes.

If you take Ortelius booke of mappes with you, to marke all these regions, it were not amisse, and if need were, to present the same to the great Cam, for it would be to a purpose of marvellous account.

The booke of the attire of all nations.

Such a booke carried with you and bestowed in gift, would be much esteemed, as I perswade my selfe.

Bookes.

If any man will lend you the new Herball, and such bookes as make shew of herbes, plantes, trees, fishes, fowles and beastes of these regions, it may much delight the great Cam, and the nobilitie, and altho they merchants to have the view of them: for all things in these parties so much differing from the things of those regions, since they may not be here to see them, by meane of the distance, yet to see those things in a shadow, by this meane will delight them.

The booke of Rates.

Take with you the booke of Rates, to the end you may strike all those commodities there specified, that you shall chance to finde in Cambalu, in Quinsy, or in any part of the East, where you shall chance to be.

Parchment.

Rowles of Parchment, for that we may vent much without hurt to the Realme, and it lyes in small roome.

Glew.

To carrie Glew, for that we have plentie, and want vent.

Red Oker for Painters.

To seeke vent because we have great mines of it, and have no vent.

Sope of both kindes.

To trie what vent it may have, for that we make of both kindes, and may perhaps make more.

Saffron.

To trie what vent you may have of Saffron, because this Realme yeelds the best of the world, and for the tillage and ocher labours, may set the poore greatlie in worke to their relief.

Aquauitza.

By new devices wonderfull quantities may be made here, and therefore to seeke the vent.

Blacke Conie skinnes.

To trie the vent at Cambalu, for that it lyes to wards the South, and for that we abound with the commoditie, and may spare it.

Threed of all colours.

To vent thereof may set our people in worke.

Copper Spurres, and Hawkes bels.

To see the vent, for it may set our people in worke.

A note and a Caueat for the Merchant.

That before you offer your commodities to sale, you indeuour to learne what commodities the countrey there hath. For if you bring thither be luer, cassia, spice, or any such commoditye that you your selfe desire to lade your selfe home with, you must not sell yours deare, least hereafter you purchase theirs not so cheape as you would.

Seedes for sale.

Care with you for that purpose, all sortes of garden seedes, as well of sweete strawing herbes and of flowers, as also of pot herbes, and all sortes for rootes, &c.

Lead of the first melting.

Lead of the second melting of the slags.

To make triall of the vent of Lead of all kindes.

English iron, and wicr of iron and copper.

To trie the sale of the same.

Brimstone.

To trie the vent of the same, because we abound with it made in the Realme.

Anthimonic a minerall.

To see whether they haue any amplerse there for it, for that we may lade whole nauies of it, and haue no use of it, vntlesse it be for some small portion in founding of bels, or a litle that the Alchemists use: of this you may haue two sortes at the Apothecaries.

Tinder boxes with Steele, Flint and matches, and Tinder, the matches to be made of Iunepet, to auoid the offence of Brimstone.

To trie and make the better sale of Brimstone by the wing the bit. Candles of Glare to light.

A painted Bellowes.

For that perhaps they haue not the use of them.

A pot of cast iron.

To trie the sale, for that it is a naturall commoditye of this Realme.

All maner of edge tooles.

To be sold there of to the lest ciuill people by the way where you shall comy.

What I would haue you there to remember.

To note specially what excellent dyng they vse in these regions; and therefore to note their garments and ornaments of houles: and to see their die houles and the materials and simples that they vse about the same, and to tryng musters and shewes of the colours and of the materials, for that it may serue this clothing bealme to great purpose.

To take with you for your owne vse.

All maner of engines to take fish and foule.

To take with you those things that be in perfection of goodnesse.

For as the goodnesse now at the first may make your commodities in crebide in time to come: So false and sophisticate commodities shall braue you and all your commodities into contempt and ill opinion.

The discouerie made by M. Arthur Pet, and M. Charles lackman, of the Northeast parts, beyond the Island of Vaigars, with two Barkes: the one called the George, the other the William, in the yeere 1580.

Written by Hugh Smith

day.

pon Sunday the 30. of May, we departed from Hartwich in the afternoon, the wind being at South, and to the Eastward. The ebbe being spent we could not double the poole, and therefore were constrained to put in againe vntill the next day in the morning, being the last of May: which day wee waited our anchors about 3. a clocke in the morning, the wind being West Southwest. The same day we passed by Rhydelle at an East Sunne, and Seantford at a West Sunne, and Dartmouth at a West north west sunne, and so to Winterton where we did anchor all night: it was then calme, and the flood was come.

June.

The next day being the first of June, we set saile at 3. a clocke in the morning, and set our course North, the wind at the South west, and at South west by west.

The 2. day of June by my dead reckoning I was 40. leagues from Winterton due North.

The 3. day the wind was at the East South west, and at 12. a clocke by my reckoning I was 70. leagues North from Winterton. The same day I did observe the sunne, where I found the pole to be eleuated above the Horizon 38. deg. 5. minutes. This day in the afternoon at 6. of the clocke the wind came to the South and by West with a very good gale.

The 4. day about 6. of the clocke in the morning, the wind came to the Southeast with raine and foule weather; and after to the East South east, the same night it brake vpon very faire weather.

The 5. day in the morning at 4. or 5. of the clocke, the wind came into the West north west, and to the North west: the same day I did find the pole to be eleuated 38. deg. 23. minutes. This day about 3. in the afternoon, the wind with a light and gentle gale came to the South, and so did continue till the next day in the morning.

The 6. day about 5. in the morning, the wind came to the Southeast, and to the East South east, with a very cruell storme all the same day. And about 3. in the afternoon, we lost the company of the William, in the night the weather came very faire.

The 7. day was faire, the wind being at South by East. This day I did find the pole to be eleuated 60. deg. 58. minutes: this day also it was very calme.

The 8. day at 10. of the clocke, the wind came to the South west for the space of 2. howers, & then grew calme for 3. howers. Then the winde came to the North, and to North north east, and so did continue vntill the next day.

The 9. day the wind being at the North North east, we made East and by North.

The 10. day about one of the clocke in the afternoon, we put into Norway to a place where one of the headlands of the sound is called Bord: the other headland is called Harle. There is also an Island called Kene. Here I did find the pole to be eleuated 62. deg. it doeth flowe there South, and it heeth 7. or 8. fathoms not above 1000. fathoms to the North.

The 11. day in the morning the wind came to the South & to the Southeast: the same day at 6. in the afternoon we set saile, & were along the coast, it was very foule weather with raine & fog.

Kene an Island of Norway.

24177

The

The 12. day

wee, and so

The 13. day

was at West

The 14. day

The 15. day

in the after no

The 16. day

The 17. day

We ranne alo

This day it

in the space of

The 18. day

and then we

36. minutes.

The 19. day

had along the

The 20. day

along the coast

The 21. day

West South west

The 22. day

day at 6. in the

bearr nelle, and

Southeast, and

The 23. day

cause of our con text, and to sent came into War

The 24. the cause he was

did hale a floe

The 25. day

The 26. day

being matter, to

The 27. day

The 28. day

one hower, and

The 29. abo

same day.

The first of the clocke we

The second

to the Northeast

to the East

to the North west, where the thought he

meane time we would meet by being at South

The 3. day

The same night

leagues from t

The 4. day

38. minutes.

along South

The 12. day about 8. in the morning the wind came to the South west, and to the West south west, and so did continue the same night.

The 13. day I did find the pole to be elevated, 64. degrees, 3. minutes. The same day the wind was at West south west.

The 14. day the wind came to the South west about 12. of the clocke with raine and fogge.

The 15. day the wind South west, and this day I found the pole eleviars, 66. deg. 50. minutes, in the after noone we had very much raine, and soyle weather.

The 16. day we did fall to the South.

The 17. day the wind came to the South, and to the South South east with raine and fogge. We ranne along the coast North north east, and by North.

This day in the afternoone the wind came North with very much wind, and we did lie a heau for the space of 8. howers.

The 18. day about 5. in the morning the wind came to the West and by North, and to the West and then we set saile, and set our course North east. This day we did find the pole elevated, 69. deg. 36. minutes.

The 19. day the wind at West, and West and by North, faire weather with some showers, wee had along the coast North east, and North east and by East, and East north east.

The 20. day we had very faire weather, the wind at South, and South by East, so that we had along the coast East & by North, the weather was very close, so that we could not observe y sunne.

The 21. day was very calme till about 11. of the clocke, at which time the wind came West and West south west, with some raine, the same night was faire.

The 22. day the wind being at West, we did hal the coast East north east, and East. The same day at 6. in the morning, we did double the north Cape. About 3. in the afternoone we past Skires beare nesse, and had along the coast East, and East south east, and all the same night wee halld Southeast, and Southeast by East.

The north Cape double.

The 23. day about 3. in the morning we came to Wardhouse, the wind at the North west. The ende of our comming in, was to seeke the William, whose companie we lost the 6. day of this moneth, and to send letters into England. About one of the clocke in the afternoone the William also came into Wardhouse to us in good safetie, and all her company in good health.

wardhouse.

The 24. the wind came to the East north east. This day the William was hald a ground, because she was some what leake, and to mend her steeage. This night about 12. of the clocke, shee did hale a floce againe.

The 25. day the wind was at East north east.

The 26. day the Tobie of Dartuch departed from Wardhouse for London, Thomas Greene being master, to whom we delivred our letters.

The 27. day the wind was at South south east, and the 28. also.

The 29. day about 6. in the afternoone, the wind came to the West north west for the space of one hower, and presently to the East againe, and so was variable all the same night.

The 30. about five in the morning, the wind came to East south east, and continued so all the same day.

The first of July about 5. in the afternoone, the wind was at North north west: and about 7. of the clocke we set saile from Wardhouse East and by South.

The second day about 5. in the morning, the wind was East, and East south east, and we did lie in the shottwards. And about 10. in the morning, the wind came to South south east, and we laid to the Eastward: sometime we lay East by South, sometime East south east, and sometimes East by North. About 5. in the afternoone we bare with the William, who was willing to goe with Keger, because we thought her to be out of trie, and sailed very ill, where we might mend her steeage: whereupon master Pet not willing to goe into harboough, said to master lackman, that if he thought himselfe not able to keepe the sea, he should doe as he thought best, and that he in the mean time would bear. with Willoughbies land, for that it was a parcell of our direction, and would meet him at Veroue Ostroue, or Vaigats, and so we set our course East north east, the wind being at Southeast.

Willoughbies land.

The 3. day the wind at Southeast we found the pole to be elevated 70. degrees, 46. minutes. The same night at 12. of the clocke we founden, but had no ground, in 120. sadomes, being fittie leagues from the one due by our reckoning East north east from Keger.

56. leagues from Keger.

The 4. day all the morning was calme. This day we found the pole to be elevated, 71. degrees 38. minutes. This day at 9. in the afternoone the wind at North east with a gentle gale, wee had along Southeast by East.

The

to note their gar-dimples that they materials, for that it

tion

in time to come:
ies into contempt

es Lackman,

s: the one.

the afternoone, the pent we could not ine untill the next ed our ankers a 4. The same day West Sume, and er all night it was

, and set our course

ton due North, reckoning I was where I found the
ernoone at 6. of the theast with raine

y faire weather.

West north west, and minutes. This day
day, and so did con-

the East south east, The companie of

to the pole to be ele-

2. howers, & then theast, and so did

th,
a place where one
te. There is also owr there South,

: the same day at e with rain & fog.
The

The 5. day the wind at North west, we had East and East by South: this day we saw land, but we could not make it, the wind being Northerly, so that we could not come neerer to it.

The 6. day about 2. in the afternoon, the wind at North north west, we had East southeast with a faire and gentle gale: this day we met with ice. About 6. in the afternoon it became calmer: we with saile and oares laid it to the North east part, hoping that we might clear us of it: for that way we did see the head part of it, as we thought. Which done, about 12. of the clocke at night we did thinke it to be ice of the baie of S. Nicholas, but it was not as we found after wards.

In sight of perfect land.

The 7. day we met with more ice, at the East part of the other it's 2. we had a long a weather the ice to finde some ende thereof by East north east. This day there appeared more land North from us being perfect land: the ice was betwene us and it, so that we could not come neerer to it.

The same morning at five of the clocke, we put into the ice to find some way through it, we continued in it all the same day and all the night, following the wind by the North North west. We were constrained to goe many pointes of our compasse, but we went most an Easterlie course.

The eight day the wind at North north west, we continued our course; and at five in the morning we sounded, and had 90. fadoms red oafe. This day at 4. in the afternoon we sounded againe, & had 84. fadomes oafe, as before. At five in the afternoon we cleared our selves of the ice, and had along Southeast by South: we sounded againe at 10. a clocke at night, and had 43. fadomes sandie oafe.

The 9. day at two in the morning, we sounded againe, and had 45. fadomes, then there appeared a shalow of land to us East North east, and so we ranne with it the space of two howers, and then perceiuing that it was but fogge, we had along Southeast.

This day at 2. in the afternoon we sounded and had 50. fadomes blacke oafe. Our latitude was 70. degrees 3. minutes. At ten a clocke at night we sounded againe, and had fiftie fadomes blacke oafe.

The tenth day the wind being at North north west, we halled East and by North, which course we set, because at ten of the clocke afore noone we did see land, and then we sounded having 35. fadomes blacke oafe. All this day there was a great fogge, so that we durst not beare with the land to make it; and so we kept an outwardly course. This day at 6. in the afternoon we espied land, where with we halled, and then it grew calmer: we sounded and had 120. fadomes blacke oafe: and then we sent our boat a land to sound and prooue the land. The same night we came with our ship within an Island, where we rode all the same night: The same night we went into a baie to ride neere the land for wood and water.

An Island.

The 11. day the wind came to the East southeast: this day about a league from us to the East wards, we saw a very faire sound or riuer that pass very faire into the countrey with 2. or 3. branches with an Island in the midst.

The maine land.

The 12. of July the wind was East South east. This day about 12. a clocke in the morning, there came a great white beare downe to the water side, andooke the water of his owne accord, we chased him with our boate, but for all that we could doe, he got to land and escaped from us; where we named the baie Bearebaie. This day at 7. in the afternoon we set saile, for we had good hope that the wind would come Westery, and with saile and oares we gate the sea. All the night it was calme with fogge.

Beare baie.

The 13. day in the morning the wind was very variable with fogge, and as it cleared by we met with great store of ice, which at the first shewed like land. This ice did us much trouble, and the more because of the fogge which continued in this ice vncill the 14. day, 12. of the clocke.

The 14. day in the morning we were imbaried with ice, that we were constrained to come out as we went in, which was by great good fortune, or rather by the goodnesse of God, oherwise it had bene impossible, and at 12. of the clocke we were cleare of it, the wind being at South and South by West. The same day we found the pole to be eleuated, 70. degrees, 26. minutes: we lay along the coast North west, thincking it to be an Island, but finding no end in rowling so long, we supposed it to be the maine of Noua Zembla. About 2. in the afternoon we laid it to the Southward to double the ice, which we could not doe vpon that boord, so that wee call about againe and lay West along vnder the ice. About 7. in the afternoon we got about the greatest part thereof. About 11. a clocke at night we brought the ice Southeast of us, and thus we were rid of this trouble at this time.

The supposed name of Noua Zembla.

The 15. day about 3. in the morning, the wind was at South south west: we cast about and lay to the Eastwards, the wind did West, so that we lay South south west with a stawne speer,

and

and so theran all grey land. This day.

The 16. day
downe red land, at day at 10. of the
which way to get Northward. At bout 6. in the aft-had 30. fadoms by this night at 12.

The 17. day a South and South
the afternoon, at East north east, Pechora.

The 18. day a Islands. There were to the head
minutes. This day
east, we had East
then being calme.

The 19. day a
same day at 8. 7.
North and South
some, sometime:
boat away to sound
for the boate to way but to goe
saile.

The 20. day a

The 21. day a
we had 8. and 9.

The 22. day a
found it to lie North with great fogge
of wood and water
by, and a man buy
the date of our Le-ture if the Williament. At eight in nd one of the baie
land.

The 23. day a great number of great overfalls, a we were. At eight fogge, and very Islands to harbor it there so to do very calme vpon
and then we took to steere a stow-nd crew. This day land and it, being land, that we con-
dence had about hour, and within and to the ran all the same day. About 8, in the after noone we sounde, and had 23. fadoms small grey sand. This night at twelue of the clocke we sounde againe, and had 29. fadoms sand, as above.

The 16. day into 3, in the morning we hald along East Southeast, where we found 18. fadoms red sand, then we hald along Northeast. In these soundings wee had many ouersals. This day at 10. of the clocke wee met with moye ice, which was very great, so that wee could not tell which way to get cleare of it. Then the wind came to the South Southeast, so that we lay to the Northwards. We thought that way to cleare our selues of it, but that way we had more ice. About 6. in the afternoone, the wind came to the East. Then wee lay to the Southwards that wee had 30. fadoms blarke oafe. This day we found the pole to be eleuater, 69. deg. 40. minutes, and this night at 12. of the clocke, we had 41. fadoms red sand.

Many ouersals.

The 17. day at 3, in the morning, we had 12. fadoms. At 9. we had 8. and 7. all this day we ran South and South by West, at the depth aforesaid, red sand, being but shallow water. At eight in the afternoone, the wind with a shower and thunder came to the South west, and then wee ranne East north east. At 12. at night it came to the South and by East, and all this was in the baie of Pechora.

The baie of Pechora.

The 18. day at 7, in the morning we bare with the head land of the baie, where we found two Islands. There are also ouersals of water of tides. We went betweene the maine and the Island, next to the head, where we had about 2. fadoms and a halfe. We found the pole eleuater, 69. deg. 13. minutes. This day we had sight of Vaigats: the land of the maine of Pechora did trend South east, we had East Southeast, and had 10. fadoms oafe all the same day vntill 4. in the afternoone, then being calme, we ankered in 10. fadoms all the same night.

The 19. day at two in the morning, we set saile, and ranne South and South southwest all the same day at 8. 7. and 6. fadoms, this was off the South part of Vaigats: this part of the land lieth North and South. This day at 4. in the afternoone we found shallow water, sometime foure fadoms, sometime 3. and 2. and a halfe, and one fadome and a halfe, there wee ankered and sent our boat away to sound, and all to leeward we had 4. fote and 3. fote, and 2. fote, there was noe water for the boate betweene Vaigats and the other side: finding no moye water, there was no other way but to goe backe, as we came in, hauing the winde North west, so at twelue at night we set saile.

The 20. day we plied to the Northwards, and got deepe water againe 6. and 7. fadoms.

The 21. day the wind by the North west, we hald along the coast North and North north west, we had 8. and 9. and 10. fadoms.

The 22. day the winde came to the Southwest, wee bare along the coast of Vaigats, as wee found it to lie North and by West, and North north west, and North. The wind blew very much with great fogge, we lacking water and wood bare within an Island where we found great store of wood and water, there were 3. or 4. goodly soundes. Under two points there was a crosse set by, and a man buried at the foote of it. Upon the said crosse master Pet did graue his name with the date of our Loyde, and likewise vpon a stone at the foote of the crosse, and so did I also, so the end that if the William did chauce to come thither, they might haue knowledg that wee had bene there. At eight in the afternoone the winde came to the North north west, wee set saile and turned out of the baie. The same night the winde came to the West, so that we lay North along the land.

An Island bearing store of wood & water.

The 23. day at five in the morning, the wind came to the Southwest, a sea booyd wee sawe a great number of Islands, to the number of sixe: a sea booyd of these Islands, there are many great ouersals, as great streames of tides: wee had Northeast and East northeast as the lande trends. At eight aforesaid the winde came to the Southeast with very much wind, raine and fogge, and very great store of ice a sea booyd: so we lay to the Southwest to attaine to one of the Islands to harbour vs if the weather did so extremely continue, and to take in our boate, thinking it were so to doe, and not to be her in such weather. About twelue of the clocke it became very calme vpon the sudden, and came by to the West North west, and North west by West, so then we cooke in our boate, and this done, there came downe so much wind, as we were not able to steere away it, with coyle and boines of each, we hald South with the land, for so the land did trend. This day all the afternoone we sailed vnder a great land of ice, we sailed betweene the land and it, being not able to crosse it. About twelue at night wee found the ice to stretch into the land, so that we could noe get cleare to the Eastward, so wee laid it to the shore, and there we found it cleare hard aboord the shore, and we found also a very faire Island which makes a very good harbour, and within are 12. fadoms.

6. faire Islands.

This

An Island to the East of Vaigats, 4. or 5. leagues.

This Island is to the Eastward of Vaigats, 4. or 5. leagues. This land of the maine doeth trend South-east, and South-east by East. It is a very faire coast, and even and plaine, and not full of mountains nor rockes: you haue but shallow water of 6. or 7. fadomes, about a league from the shore, all this morning we halled East South-east. This day we found the pole to be elevated 69 degrees, 14. minutes. About 12. a clocke wee were constrained to put into the ice to take some way to get to the Northwards of it, hoping to haue some cleare passage that way, but there was nothing but whole ice. About nine in the afternoon we had sight of the William, and when we sawe her, there was a great land of ice betweene her and vs, so that we could not come one to the other, but as we came neere to her, we sounded our trumpet and shot off two muskets, and she put out her flag upon her foretopmasse in token that she did see vs: all this time wee did shorten our sailes, and went with our fore saile and mainetop saile, seeking the best way through the broken ice, the making away the best that she could to follow vs, we put out our flagge to answer her againe with the like: thus wee continued all the afternoon till about 12. a clocke at night, and then wee moved our ship to a piece of ice to tary for the William.

The William and Orange were againe.

The 25. day about five in the morning, the William came to vs, being both glad of our meeting. The William had her sterne post broken, that the rudder did hang cleane besides the sterne, so that she could in no wise poore her helme, with all hands she did lighten her sterne, and trimme her head, and whē we had brought her forward all that we could, we brought a cable under her sterne, and with our capstaine did winde by her sterne, and so we made it as well as the place would give vs leaue, and in the ende we brought her to keere againe. We acknowledge this our meeting to be a great benefite of God for our mutuall comfort, and so gaue his maiestie thanks for it. All the night after weooke our rest being made fast vpon a piece of ice: the wind was at West North-west, but wee were so inclosed with ice that wee could not tell which way to passe. William had we haue had at will, but ice and fogge too much against our wills, if it had pleased the Lorde Gods chertise.

The 26. day the wind was at West North-west: we set saile to the Northwards, to seeke if we could finde any way cleare to passe to the Eastward, but the further wee went that way, the more and thicker was the ice, so that wee could goe no further. So about foure in the afternoon we were constrained to more vpon another piece of ice. I thinke we sailed in all a league this day, here we had 15. fadomes oafe, and this oafe is all the chanell ouer. All the same day after foure of the clocke, and all the night we taried there, being without all good hope, but rather in despaire. This day master Juggman did see land East North-east from vs, as hee did thinke, whether it were land or no, I cannot tell well, but it was very like land, but the fogges had many times hid it.

The 27. day the wind was at North-west.

The 27. day the wind was at North-west. This day at nine in the morning wee set saile to seeke the shore. Further into the ice we could not goe, and at seuen in the afternoon wee moved to a piece of ice, and the William with vs, here we had 14. fadomes oafe. At 3. in the afternoon we warpe from one ice to another. At 9. in the afternoon we moved againe to a piece of ice until the next day. All this night it did blow with much wind, being at West North-west, and at North-west and by West.

The current runneth with the wind.

The 28. day the wind came to the South-west, and South South-west: this day was a very faire day. At one in the afternoon master Pet, and master Lackman did confere together what they did agree to seeke to the land againe, and so to Vaigats, and there to confere further. At 3. in the afternoon we did warpe from one piece of ice to another, to get from thence if it were possible: here we were pieces of ice so great, that we could not see beyond them out of the toppes. Thus we warped until 9. in the afternoon, and then wee moved both our ships to a great and high piece of ice, until the next morning.

The nine and thientie day the wind came to the South-west, here set saile at five in the morning to seeke the shore, if it were possible, wee made many turns among the ice to find some way to the land, but the wind doeth the contrary way. This day by mistake we a piece of ice broke of our greene ship at two close noons, yet for all this wee turned to doe our best. The William being inclosed with ice, and perceiving that she did little good, ranke to all her sailes, and made her selfe fast to a piece of ice, and about foure in the afternoon she set saile to follow vs. William was so fast that she had taken some hurt, but she was well. At seuen aforesaid noone we took up all our sailes to tary for the William, and made our ship fast to a piece of ice: the William before she came to us tooke in all her sailes, and moved to another piece of ice, and thus we continued until the next morning.

The 30. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 31. day the wind was in the morning, we perceived that we were at the point of the ice, all this was done. Thus we were in the afternoon, we were at the point of the ice, we were at the point of the ice, we were at the point of the ice.

The first day we were at the point of the ice, about twelve leagues.

The 2. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The three day we were at the point of the ice, we were at the point of the ice, we were at the point of the ice.

The 4. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 5. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 6. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 7. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 8. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 9. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 10. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 11. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 12. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 13. day the wind was well with us, we sought our way to the Northward, and at 11. o'clock we came to a piece of ice, which cometh that we could doe.

The 30. day the wind was at South-east, and by South, and at 9. in the morning we set sail, and lower would have done if William had bene by vs, but we did carrie for her to know whether all was well with her: But as soone as we made sail, she did the like. All this day wee did our best to make our way as the pee would give: vs some, sometime we lay South, sometime West, and sometime East, and thus we continued unill eight at night, and then being calme, wee made our shippes fall to a piece of pee, and went to supper. In the meane time the wind with a faire gentle gale, came by the East, and East and by South, but there came downe a showre of raine with it, which continued the space of one houre: Which being done, it became calme againe, so that we could doe no good all that night, but to oke our rest unill the next day.

The 31. the wind being at South-west, wee set sail to turne to windward at thre a clocke in the morning. In this turning wee did little good, for the current would not give vs leaue, for as the wind is, so is the current. Wee did our best unill teane of the clocke, and then perceiving that wee did no good, and being inclosed with pee, wee made our shippes fall to a piece of pee. All this day the William lay still, and did as much good as we, that did labour all the fore-none. Thus wee took our rest all the same day.

In the afternoon wee set sail the wind being at South and by East, wee lay to the West ward, as South-west, and South-west, and by South, and sometime to the Westward as wee might. Thus we continued unill nine at night, and then we could goe no further, for pee; with the William were constrained to make our shippes fall to a piece of pee all the same night.
 This day wee founde the pole elevated 29. degrees 20. minutes, and here wee had 17. fathoms oze.

The first day of August was very calme in the morning, the wind being at West North-west. August.
 About twelue the wind came to the West, and continued so all the same night with great fogge.

The 2. day the wind was at South-west all day, with raine and fogge. All this day we were inclosed with pee, so that we were forced to lie still. Here wee had 21. fathoms oze. At five in the afternoon the wind was at West with very much soule weather, and so continued all the same night.

The third day the wind was at West, and West by North, and West North-west, this day we lay still inclosed with pee, the weather being darke with fogge: thus abiding the Lords leisure, we continued wth patience, And sounding we found 21. fathoms.

The 4. day wee lay still inclosed with pee, the wind being at West North-west: this pee did very day increase vpon vs, yet putting our trust in God, wee hoped to be deliuered out of it in good time.

The fifth day all the morning, it rained with very much wind, being at South South-east about 3. in the afternoon wee set sail, and presently it became calme for the space of one houre, then the wind came to the North North-east, and here we had 33. fathoms: thus we made way among the pee South-west, and South-south-west, West, as we might finde our way for the space of 3. houre when we met with a whole land of pee, so that we could goe no further: here we moaned our ship to carrie for a further opening. Here wee found 45. fathoms oze, and all the night was very darke with fogge.

The 6. day having no opening of the pee, wee lay still the wind being at West and West by South: here we had 62. fathoms oze: all the same night the wind was at the West North-west.
 The 7. day the wind was at West, and West and by North all day. And all this day we lay still being inclosed with pee, that we could not stirre, labouring onely to defend the pee as it came vpon vs: here we had 68. fathoms oze.

The 8. day was very faire & calme but foggie. This day towards night there was little wind by the South South-west: then the pee began a little to open, and here we had 70. fathoms oze, all the night was foggie.

The 9. day the wind was at North-west, and by West, all the afternoon we lay still because of the pee, which did still inclose vs. This day wee founde the pole eleward 70. degrees 4. minutes, we had 63. fathoms oze: this night was a very faire night, but it frested: in the morning we had much a doe to goe through the same: and wee were in doubt that if it should haue frested so much the night following, we should hardly haue passed out of it. This night there was one starre that appeared to vs.

70. degr. 4. min.

The appear-ring of the starres, signe
 of winter.

The 10. day the wind was at East North-east with a very small gale. After with sail and some waye was, though the pee 4 about five in the morning we set sail: sometime we lay South-west, and sometime South, and sometime West, as wee might best finde the way.
 About

About 3. in the afternoon the gale began to fresh; about 6. in the afternoon the winde was at North-east with fogge. Here we had 88. fathoms: we have faile all the same night, and it snowed very much.

The 11. day we were much troubled with yce, and by great force wee made our way through it, which wee thought a thing impossible, but extreme doerth cause men to doe much, and in the weaknesse of man Gods strength most appeareth. This day we had 95. fathoms. At three in the afternoon the winde came to the South-west, wee were forced to make our shippe fall to a piece of yce; for wee were inclosed with it, and carried the Logges leasure. This night we had 97. fathoms.

The 12. day the winde was at the South-east not very much but in a manner calme: at 11. of the clocke the winde came to the West South-west: all the day was very darke with snowe and fogge. At 6. in the afternoon we set sail the winde being at the North-northeast: all this night we bare away South-west, and South-south-west, as well and as neere as the yce would give us leaue: all this night we found the yce somewhat favourable to us, more then it was before, where upon we stood in good hope to get out of it.

The 13. day at 7. in the morning the winde was at the North-east, and North-east and by East: all this day we were much troubled with the yce, for with a blowe against a piece of yce, we brake the booke of our ancre, and many other great blowes we had against the yce, that it was manifest that the shippe was able to abide them: the side of our boate was broken with our shippe which did recule backe, the boate being betwixt a great piece of yce, and the shippe, and it perished the head of our rudder. This day was a very harde day with vs: at night we founde much broken yce, and all this night it blew very much winde, so that wee laye in drift with the yce, and our drift was South, for the winde was at North at this night, and we had great hope of snowe.

The 14. day in the morning wee made our shippe fall to a piece of yce, and let her vyne with it. In the meane time wee mended our boate and our keeage: all this day the winde continued North-easterly, and here wee had thescope and two fathoms. Thus we lay a drift all the same night.

The 15. day we set sail at 6. in the morning, the winde being at North-east. At 9. aforesnoone we entred into a cleare sea without yce, whereof wee were most glad, and not without great cause, and gaue God the praise. We had 19. fathoms water, and ranne in South-west all the morning until we came to 24. fathoms, and thence we halled West, till we came to 10. fathoms, and then we went North-west, for so the winde doerth trende: At 12. of the clocke we had sight of the lande, which wee might haue had sooner, but it was darke and foggie all the same day: when we had sight of the lande, wee were not passing three leagues from it. This day we had the pole eleuated 69. degrees 49. minutes. All day we ranne along the coast in 10. and 9. fathoms, peered lande. It is a very goodly coast and a bolde, and faire foundings off it, without lands or rocks.

The 16. day the winde was at East: this day wee were troubled againe with yce, but we made great shift with it: for we gotte betwixt the shoare and it. This day at the hie of the clocke wee were thwart of the South-east part of Vaigats, all along which part there was a great hope of yce, so that wee stood in doubt of passage, yet by much aboue wee got betwixt the shoare and it: about 6. in the afternoon was founde a great white beare upon a piece of yce: all this day in the afternoon it was darke with fogge. And all night we halled North and North by West, and sometime North and by East, for so doerth the land trend.

The 17. day in the morning we halled West, for so doerth the lande lye. The winde was at South-east, and it was very darke with fogge, and in raining along the shoare we set a ground, but God bee praised without hurt, for wee came presently off againe: The William came to an ancre to stay for vs, and sent some of their men to helpe vs, but before they came wee were departed, and as wee came to the William hee did loose our boates, and made saile, we went within some of the Islands, and halled West South-west.

A boate two of the clocke in the afternoon, we set our course South-west and by South: so we ranne South-west until twelue at night, that the winde came to the North North-east, and then we halled West.

The 18. day at 6. in the morning we had 16. fathoms redde sand: at 9. in the morning 17. fathoms, at 10. 14. fathoms, and we halled West North-west. At 12. a clocke the winde came to the East, and East by South, we halled West and by North all the same day: and night. At 6. in the afternoon we had 17. fathoms red sand.

69. deg. 49. min.

They are thwart as points West East.

Sands.

The Islands.

The 19. day at 12. of the 3. in the afternoon

The 20. day 30. fathoms blacke snow great at land ground, and so the night it was cald lye all Colgoyer it is meth North

The 21. day our shippe as manner by the helpe of it caused it to be late to set the thoms all within here more to the upon the laye it and 12. and 14. fathoms were a ground which we yce

The 22. day morning we saw the last the sight of thoms blacke of had thence and the same night follow

The 23. day being at East the shippe was by North and cald words, so that we East and we lay up till we came to 19. fathoms, the same night.

The 24. day at fathoms, then we the winde at North

The 25. at 4. a fathoms very much

The 26. day at West, and North

The 28. day at the South-west

The 29. day at 5. in the and the same night

The 30. day at boate on head we South-east, and a

The 31. day at we halled West

The 1. day of the same West South

The second day

one the winde was at the night, and it blowe made our way through the doe much, and in the fathoms. At this time the our shippe fell to a This night wee had inner calme: at 11. of the winde with in the cheast: all this night the pre would give us it was before, when

Northeast and by East piece of pee, we had that it was maner
when with our shippe
the shippe, and it pe at night wee founde wee laye in with with we had great store

and let her vyne with the winde com
by a drift all the same at 9. ayenone not without great Southwest all the

came to 10. fathoms, the wee had sight of all the same way for This day wee had cast in 10. and 9. fa windings off it, without the with pee, but wee five line of the clocke here was a great store the shoare and in e: all this day in the North by West, and

The winde was at wee fell a ground, William came to an
came wee were with side faile, wee went by South: so we North, and then we

the morning 13. the winde came to the night. At 6. in the

the

The 19. day the winde was at East Northeast: at 6. in the morning wee had 19. fathoms red land: at 12. of the clocke the winde blew North and North by East, we had 17. fathoms water: at 3. in the afternoon 15.

The 20. day the winde was at Northeast, and North Northeast: at 7. in the morning wee had 30. fathoms blacke eye: at the line of the clocke wee were upon the suddaine in shoale water, a mong great sands, and could finde no way out. By sounding and seeking about, wee came a ground, and so did the William, but we had no hurt, for the winde was off the shoare, and the same night it was calme: all night wee did our best, but we could not have her a fote. These shoales do lye off Colgoyue: it is very flat a great way off, and it doeth not high about 2. or 3. fote water, it bloweth Northeast, and South west.

Shoales off Colgoyue.

The 21. day the winde was at South west, and being very faire weather wee did lighten our shipps as much as was possible for us to doe, by reason of the place. The same high wa ter by the helpe of God wee got both a fote, and the winde being at the South west did helpe us, so it caused it to flowe the more water.

This day wee found the pole to be elevated 68. degrees 40. min. In the afternoon wee boath the safe to seeke way to gett out of these sands, our boate a head sounding, having 6. 7. and 8. fa thoms all within the sand which was without us. Wee bare to the Southward, and the William bore more to the Eastward, and night being at hande the winde came to the Southeast, where upon wee laye it to the Southward, lying North west, and South & by West, and ranne to 19. and 13. and 14. fathoms, & presently we had but 6. fathoms, which was off the sands head, which wee were a ground upon the day before. Then wee cast about to the Eastward for brece water, which wee presently had, as 10. 15. and 20. and so to 27. fathoms.

The 22. day at 8. in the morning, wee cast about to the Southward, and this day in the mor ning we saw the William under our lee as farre as wee could see her, and with a great fogge we lost the sight of her, and since wee have not seene her. Thus wee ranne till we came to thirtie fa thoms blacke eye, which wee had at the line of the clocke, and at thre in the afternoon wee had twentie and thre fathoms, and then wee ranne West North west, and West by North all the same night following.

They lost the William here, where the sea
is hid.

The 23. day we had at 6. in the morning 27. fathoms, at 8. a clocke 28. fathoms: at 9. the winde being at East South east, wee halled West North west: this day wee had sight of the lande of Hugon. At the line of the clocke we had 32. fathoms sande. This day wee ranne West and by North, and came to five fathoms off the bay of Morzouets. Then wee laye it to the North west, so that wee lay North Northeast off. The winde after came to the North, and North by East, and wee lay East, and East by North, then wee laye it to the Westward againe: and thus we lay all we came to 40. fathoms, and then we went North west till we came to 14. fathoms, and so to 16. fathoms. Then wee cast about to the Eastward and lay East, and East by North all the same night.

The land of Hugon.

The bay of Morzouets.

The 24. day at 8. in the morning we had 32. fathoms. Wee ranne North west till we came to 11. fathoms, then wee lay to the Northward till 12. at night, and then wee came to 40. fathoms, then the winde at North east wee lay to the Westward, and halled North west along.

The 25. at 4. in the morning wee had 37. fathoms, wee ranne North west, the winde at North Northeast very much.

The 26. day we ran with the same winde, and found the pole to be elevated 70. deg. 40. min.

The 27. at 7. in the morning wee saw land, which wee made to be Keger, then wee halled North west and North by West to double the North Cape.

The 28. day at 3. in the morning wee ran North west, and so all day. At night the winde came to the South west, and wee ran North west all that night.

The 29. day wee put into a sound called Fane, and the towne is called Hungon: wee came to an ancher at 5. in the afternoon, at 25. fathoms very faire sand. This sound is very large and good, and the same night wee got water aboard.

The towne of Hungon.

The 30. day in the morning the winde at Northeast, and but little wee see faile, and with our boate on head wee got the sea about 12. of the clocke: the winde with a faire gale came to the East South east, and all this day and night wee ran West North west.

The 31. day at 12. of the clocke wee doubled the North Cape, the winde being at East South west, wee halled West all the same way, and at night wee ran West South west.

They double the North Cape in their returne.

The 1. day of September the winde was at Northeast with very much fogge: all this day wee ranne West South west, at 2. in the afternoon the winde came North West.

The second day at 3. in the morning wee doubled Fowlnefle, the winde was this day variable at all parts of the Compass. In the afternoon we made but little way: at 6. a clocke the winde came to the South-west, and we went South-west. At 9. in the night there came downe some winde by the West South-west, that we were faine to lay it a hull, we hald it to Northward by the space of 2. hours, and then we layd her heauy with Southward, and at the break of day we saw land, which is very high, and is called by the men of the Countrey Fowlnesse. It is within full of small Islands, and without full of rocks very farre out, and within the rocks you haue faire sand at 20. fathoms.

The 3. day in the morning we bare with the southe aforesaid: Within it is but shoale water, 4. 5. and 7. fathoms, sandie grounds, the land is very high, and the Church that is seene is called He-like Kirke. It doeth high here not about 8. or 9. foute.

The 4. day was reasonable weather, the winde at South south-west.

The 5. 6. and 7. dayes very foule weather, with great and vehement blasts of rafine, and hepply was the shippe that was then in harbour.

The 8. day the winde was at West by North, and reasonable weather.

The 9. day at 12. of the clocke we set saile, and at 3. in the afternoon we cleared our selves of the land, and then we hald West South-west, with a good stiff gale all day and night. We found the pole eleuated 69. degrees 20. minutes.

The 11. day the winde was at North-east all the forenoone, the afternoon was calme, and all the night, and we found the pole eleuated 68. deg. 16. min.

The 12. day at 3. in the afternoon, we put into a sounde by Lowfoote, where it doeth flow South-west, and by South, and doeth high 7. or 8. foute water.

The 13. day much winde at West: wee had a ledge of rocks in the winde of vs, but the roae was reasonable good for all Southerly and Westery winde. Wee had the maine land in the winde of vs: this day was stormie with rafine.

The 14. day the winde was South, and South-west reasonable weather.

The 15. day was winde and rafine at West South-west.

The 16. day very foule weather, with rafine and fogge.

The 17. day at 3. of the clocke we were cleare of the lande, and wee halled South-west all the same night.

The 18. day we kept the same course, and found the pole eleuated, 66. deg. 30. min.

The 19. day the pole was eleuated to vs 64. deg. 30. min. Wee hald this day South by East, and so like wile all night.

The 20. day at 4. in the morning the winde was at East, at 6. after we had sight of land: this day the pole was eleuated to vs 63. deg. 30. min. the night was calme, and the winde variable upon all points of the Compass.

The 21. day the winde was at the South-east all the forenoone: all the after noone at the South south-west, and all the same night variable with rafine.

The 22. day the winde was at the South, all the after noone was calme, and so was all the night.

The 23. day at 4. of the clocke in p. afternoon we put into Norway, into a sounde called Rome-fall, where it floweth South South-east, and doeth high 8. foute water: this place is full of lowe Islands, and many good soundes without the high mountaine land. Here is great store of wood growing, as firs, birche, oke, and haseil: all this night the winde was at the South, very much winde, with rafine and fogge.

The 24. day was like unto it.

The 25. 26. and 27. we had very much winde with great and stormie blasts.

The 28. day in the morning the winde being at East North-east we set saile at 8. of the clocke, and halled out of the bay West South-west, and South-west, hauing a goodly gale until due of the clocke, and then the winde came to the South-east, and to the South with rafine, and fogge, and very much winde: at 6. of the clocke wee came into a very good roe, where wee did ride all the same night in good safetie.

The 29. day wee put into a good sounde, the winde by the South-west: at three in the afternoon there came downe very much winde by the South, and all night, with vehement blasts, and rafine.

The 30. day all day the winde was at West South-west. And in this sounde the pole is eleuated 63. deg. 10. min.

The first day of October the winde was at South with very much winde, & vehement blasts.

The 7. day wee set saile: for from the first of this moneth until this 7. day, wee had very foule weather Fowlnesse.

Lowfoote.

The sounde of Romefall.

October.

weather, but spee
very soone, and in after the break
but God be thanke

The 7. day at when as the win found againe: a
though our best
and haile our sh (by the helpe of being for a win
the 24. day, whic set saile. This South south-east
found, where we leagues to the fo
South-west.

The 12. day of the sounde where the sounde, we fo
our ship between saile, & went to and South South-
The next day

as farre out as moored our ship
malls, and we di
pole is eleuated

Thus we lay
the morning, and

The 3. day at course. The 4. d we were able to

The 5. day w
of our leake.

The 6. day ch
The 8. day v

The 9. day w
The 10. day

The 11. day
burge: the san
to the South an were constraine leake, which we South-east until

The 22. day
ber, but the win led a sea bouy them. The n

The 24. day

The 25. day
berie hope. Th

The 26. da

Ende, 380.

weather, but specially the fourth day when the winde was so great, that our cables brake with the very storme, and I do not thinke that it is possible that any more winde then that was should blowe: for after the breaking of our cable, we did vntue a league before our ancre's would take any hold: but God be thanked the storme began to slacke, otherwise we had bene in ill case.

The 7. day at night we came to an ancre vntill the next day, which was the 8. day of the moneth, when as the winde grew great againe, with raine, whereupon wee set saile and returned into the sound againe: and at our first comming to an ancre, presently there blew so much winde, that although our best ancre was out, yet the extremitie of the storme drove vs vpon a ledge of rocks, and so byruile our ship in such sort, that we were constrained to lighten her to saue her, & by this meanes (by the helpe of God) we got off our ship and stopped our leakes, and moored her in good safetie abiding for a winde. We rid from this day by reason of contrary winds, with fogge and raine vntill the 24. day, which day in the morning the winde came to the North-east, and at 8. of the clocke wee set saile. This sound is called Moore sound, where it higheth about 5. foute water, and floweth South-south-east. The next day being the 25. day wee put into a sounde which is called Vlear sound, where was a shippe of the king of Denmarke put into another sound there by, being two leagues to the southwards of vs, that came out of Island: the winde was contrary for vs at South-south-west.

The 12. day of November we set saile the winde being at the East South-east, and past through the sound where the kings ship did lie: which sound is called Slouresound. But as wee did open the sound, we found the winde at the South-west, so that we could doe no good, so that we moored our ship betweene 2. Islands vntill the 18. day, and then the weather being faire and calme, wee set saile, & went to sea hoping to finde a faire wind, but in the sea we found the wind at the south-west, and South-south-west, so that we were constrained to returne into the same sound.

The next day being the 19. the kings ship came out also, because the law vs put to sea, and came as farre out as we, and moored where we did moore afoze: And at our returne backe againe, wee moored our ship in an other sound called Scorpe sound, because the kings ship was without victuals, and we did not greatly desire her companie, although they desired ours. In this sound the pole is elevated 62. degr. 47. min.

Thus we lay still for a winde vntill the 1. of December, which day we set saile at 6. a clocke in the morning, and at 4. in the afternoone we layde it to the inwards.

The 3. day at three in the morning, there arose so much winde, that we could beare but our fore-camp. The 4. day was calme weather, so was the 5. but wee were leake, and it was as much as we were able to doe, to free our ship, the leake was so great, and yet we pumped euery halfe glasse.

The 5. day we brought a Bonnet vnder her forefoote basted with Decam, which did stop much of our leake.

The 6. day the winde was at South-east, the 7. day at South-south-east.

The 8. day was calme with litle winde North-erly.

The 9. day we had sighte of the coast of Scotland which was Bowfamnesse.

The 10. day we were open off the Frich,

The 11. day at 4. in the morning we were thwart of Barwike: at 6. wee were thwart of Barn-burgh: the same day at 10. at night we were shot as farre as Hollyfoote. Then the winde came to the South and South-east, so that we laye still vntill the next day in the morning, and then we were constrained to put vnto Timmouth. The same day at night we halled a ground to stoppe a leake, which we found to be in the skarre afoze. The winde continued by the South-east & South-south-east vntill the 20. day, and then we set saile about 12. at night, bearing along the coast.

The 22. day by reason of a South-east winde, we thought we should haue bene put into Hum-ber, but the wind came to the West, so that we halled South-east: and at 3. in the afternoone we halled a sea bouyn the sands, and had shoale water off Lymery and Owry, and were in 4. fathoms off them. The next day we had as we might to leake O:fordnesse.

The 24. day we came thwart of the Nase, about 8. in the morning.

The 25. day being the Natuikie of Christ, we came to an ancre betweene Din hauen, and Cal-berie hope. The same day we turned as high as Postber.

The 26. day we turned as high as Radiffe, and praised God for our safe returne. And thus I ende, 1580.

The 2. journal of M. Arthur Pet and M. Charles Lackman in their discoverie Northeastward in the yeere 1580. Written ten by Nicholas Chancellor, which was in the aforesaid discoverie: with two barkes, the one called the William, the other the George.

The journal
beginneth from Ward-
house.

Do you know of the high Island.

Friday the 1. of July about 5. in the afternoon, the winde came to the North Northwest. About 7. a clocke in the afternoon we set saile from Wardhouse; our course was East and by South. And as we were wayting our ancrees preparing to depart, Nicholas Chancellor was sent by M. Pet aboard the William to M. Charles Lackman, to deliuer him a note in writing as followeth.

M. Lackman, M. Pet determineth to direct his course East and by South, if the winde will serue thereto: and if wee should chauce to loose companie, you shall heare of us at Vorousko Ostrou not farre off Vaygats: it is an high piked Island. If there be any Ruffes there you shall receiue a letter of them: if there bee none, then you shall finde a letter by you the highest part of the Southeast side thereof vnder a warle of heape of stones. The Lope velle is in these our affaires. At the roade of Wardhouse the last of June 1580. The Island of Vorousko standeth North Northeast of the Southwest part of Vaigats, and is foure or fise leagues distant from Vaigats.

The 2. day about 5. in the morning the winde came to the East, and East southeast, & we bare to the Shorewards, and about ten a clocke the winde came to Southsoutheast, & we bare to the Eastwards, sometime we lay East and by South, sometime East and East & by North. About 5. in the afternoon we bare with the William, she was willing to go with Keger. The cause was (as we did thinke) that she was out of her trimme, and sailed very ill, & therefore would mend her strage. Whereupon M. Pet, not willing himselfe to go into Keger, said to M. Lackman that he would goe East & by north to discover Willoughbies land, for that it was a parcel of our direction, & so would meete with him at Vorousko of Vaigats. And so we departed & set our course East Northeast, the winde being at Southeast. The 3. day we had the wind at Southeast. This day we found the pole eleuated 70. degrees, 46. min. The winde changed to South & by East. At 12. a clocke at night we founded and had no ground at 120. fathoms, we being 50. leagues frō Keger by our reckoning.

So called bes cause in his journal which was found in his ship after his death, was found mention that he had serue such a coast.

The 4. day all the morning was very calme. This day we found the pole to be eleuated 71. degrees, 31. min. At nine in the evening the winde came to the Northeast with a gentle gale: we haled along Southeast and by East.

The North
land discoverie
red.

The 5. day the wind Northnortheast, we haled East and East and by South. This day we did see land, but we could not make it perfit, the winde being so Northerly that we could not come neere to it. The 6. day about 2. in the afternoon the winde North Northwest, we haled East southeast with a faire gentle gale. This day we met with yce. About 6. in the afternoon it became calme, and we with saile and oares layed it to the Northeast, hoping that way to cleare our selues of the yce, and about 12. at night we gate cleare of it. We supposed it had bene yce of S. Nicholas bay, but it was not as we afterward found it.

Part of the North land againe discouered.

The 7. day we met with moze yce being the Easter part of the inner yce: we haled along the weather part thereof to finde ende of it East northeast. This day we saw land North from vs, being very desirous to haue had moze knowledge thereof, but extremitie of yce kept vs backe there frō contrary to our desire. We were enforced by the said yce, which we found to lye a long the said land to go through it with much trauaile, wherein we continued all the day and night following.

The 8. day the wind being at Northwest, we were troubled all the day with the aforesaid yce. At 5. in the morning we founded, & had 90. fathoms red eye: at 4. in the afternoon we founded againe and had as before. At 6. in the afternoon we gate cleare off the yce, with going South southeast, and Southeast, whereof we were very glad. Wee had sailed in the said yce 40. or 50. leagues as we esteeme it: for we had a fine winde, and bare all our sailes. Wee haled along Southeast and founded at 10. at night, and had 45. fathoms landie eye.

The 9. at 2. in the morning we founded and had 45. fathoms. There appeared to us a shadowe of land East Northeast, and so we ranne with it for the space of 2. houres, and then perceiuing that it was but a fogge we haled along Southeast. At 2. in the afternoon we founded and had 50. fathoms blacke eye. The same day our latitude was 70. degrees 3. min. At nine a clocke at night we founded againe, and had 50. fathoms blacke eye.

The 10. the wind at Northnorthwest, we haled East & by North. We did set this course for that ten of the clocke

but afterward
fathoms blacke
land, to make it
the afternoon,
was very calme
to sound and
the same night.

The 11. day

The 12. day
Bore, so the win-but for all that furnished with and with sailes fathoms is Noua

The 13. in the
with great store
much the more for

The 14. day

strained to goe otherwise it had ye, and could not with it pleased by 12. of the clocke
we founde the po

By the trying of led it to the Sougaine, and laye greatest part of
we cleere of the

The 15. day, a
to the Eastwards
with a flattond 23. fathoms sma-lpe.

Saturday the 18. fathoms red
sals, & at 10. of the way to cleare our Northwards: w in the afternoon
fathoms blacke o
night, we founde

Sunday the 8. and 7. fathom
sals, we had red with a shower an was in the Baye

Sunday the 1
chore, where the Southeast. The
rolles: it lieth of Southeast, and is from vs. The East and West,
hale water betw
calme: whereup
with Vaigats, for

Lackman in Writ. lis-

we came to the North from Wardhouse Pet about the Wil-
ing as followeth,
and by South, if ou shall heare of us there be any Ruses
de a letter vpon the
The Lord blesse vs Island of Vorousko
due leagues distant

the East, & we bare to ere bare to the East-eth. About 5, in the cause was (as we incid her strage,
that he would goe irection, & so would East North-east, the we found the poie clocke at night we yp our reckoning,
be eleuated 71. dea gentle gale: wee

This day we did see into nor come nere aled East southeast
ie it became calme,
re our selues of the
of S. Nicholas bay, ee haled along the North from vs, be-epte vs backe thre

pe a long the said
night following,
the aforesaid yce,
we solued againe South southeast,
of 50. leagues as ng South-east and

ed to vs a shadowe en perceiving that ed and had 50. fa-
e a clocke at night

This course for that
at

ten of the clocke at afternoone, we had sight of land, which we thought to haue bene Morzouets: but afterward we found it to be Colgoeyue by the soundings: and then we sounded, and had 53. fathoms blacke oaze. Presently there fell a great fogge, wherefore we durst not beare with the land, to make it: and so we kepe an outwardly course, which braue vs to Noua Zembla. At five in the afternoon, we had sight of the land againe, and bare with it: after ward the wind dulled, and was very calme: we sounded and had 120. fathoms blacke oaze: we sent also our boate on land, to sound and proue the land, and we came with our shyppe within an Island, where wee roade all the same night.

The 11. day in the morning, we went into a Baye to ride, to prouide vs wood and water. The 12. day, the wind at Southeast, about 11. of the clocke, there came downe a great white Bear, to the water side, andooke the water of his owne accord. We chased him with our boate, but for all that we could doe, he gate to land, and scraped from vs. At 7. in the afternoon, we being furnished with wood and water, did set sail, for that we hoped the wind would come Westerly, and with failes and oares we gate to the sea: at the night it was calme with fogge. This land is insaid is Noua Zembla.

The 13. in the morning, the wind was very variable with fogge, and as it cleered by, we met with great store of yce, which shewed to vs at the first like land. It did put vs to great trouble, and much the more for the fogge: we continued in it all the day, and all the night following.

The 14. day in the morning, we were inclosed with the aforesaid yce, so that wee were constrained to goe out the same way that we came in: which fortun'd to vs by the prouidence of God, otherwise it had bene impossible. For when we were almost inclosed with mighty great landes of yce, and could not perrecaue any way out, being partly in despair of getting out, but there to perit: it pleased God to turne the wind, which made way through the yce, and caried vs cleere of it: by 12. of the clocke at noone, the wind came to the South, and South and by West. This day we founde the pole eleuated 70. degrees, 26. minutes. We laide it along the coaste North-west. By the lying of it wee found it to be Noua Zembla. About 2. of the clocke in the afternoon, wee laid it to the Southward, to double the yce, but we could not vpon that boyd: so we cast about againe, and laye West along vnder the yce. About seuen in the afternoon, wee gate about the greatest part of the said yce, and at 11. at night, we brought the yce South-east of vs, and so weere we cleere of the trouble of it.

The 15. day, about thre in the morning, the wind South South-west, we cast about, and lay to the Eastwards: as we lay to Southeast, the wind did wester, so that we lay South Southeast, with a ston'd heare, and so we ranne all the day. About eight in the evening, we sounde, and had 23. fathoms small sand. At one at night we sounde againe, and had 29. fathoms sande, as before.

Saturday the 16. at thre in the morning, we haled along East Southeast, where we founde 18. fathoms red sand: then we haled along North-east. In these soundings wee had many ouer falls, & at 10. of the clocke before noone, yce which was very great, so that we could not tel which way to cleere our selues thereof. The wind came to the South Southeast, so that we laye to the Northwards: we thought that way to cleere our selues of it, but we met with more yce. About 6. in the afternoon, the wind came East, then we lay to the Southwards: we sounde and had 30. fathoms blacke oaze. This day we found the pole eleuated 69. degrees, 40. minutes. At 12. at night, we sounde, and had 42. fathoms red sand.

Sunday the 17. at thre in the morning, we had 12. fathoms, and at 9. in the morning, we had 8. and 7. fathoms. All this day we ranne South and South, and by West. At this depth aforesaid, we had red sand. All this way we had but sholled water. At 8. in the afternoon, the winde with a howler and thunder, came to the South-west, and then we ranne East Southeast. All this was in the Baye of Pechora.

Sunday the 18. at 7. in the morning, we had sight of the head land of the North-east side of Pechora, where we found 2. Islands, the West side of them lieth North North-west, and South Southeast. There is a long point of lande on the Easter side, whereupon standeth an heape of rocks: it lieth off the West side South-west, and North-east, and of the Easter side it fallerth South Southeast, and is a great Baye, wherein we sawe no land, sauing Vaigats, which lay North-east from vs. The North-east point of the said headland, and the Souther point of the Island, lie due East and West, and is not past a mile distant from the other. And there are two fathoms and an halfe water betweene them. And when we had gotten past the said Islands, within Vaigats it was calme: whereupon we ankered in 8. or 9. fathoms water. The Masters mind was much to goe with Vaigats, for that we sawe no land to the Southwards, and had bene much troubled with yce, and Colgoeyue Island.

Noua Zembla.

Our men are rruet at Noua Zembla.

A great white Bear.

Wood and water taken vpon Noua Zembla.

Ice.

The Bay of Pechora.

Vaigats Island.

And.

They arrive at Vaigats.

on Noua Zembla side.

The 19. day at two in the morning, we set saile, and came South, and South south-west all the same day, in 8. 7. 6. fathoms. This was the South part of Vaigats. This part of the land is eith South and North. At 4. in the afternoon, we found shoale water, sometime 4. fathoms, sometime 3. and 2. and one and a halfe, and then ankered, and sent our boate away to sound, and all to lee wards, we had but 4. and 3. foute: there was not water enough for our boate, betwene Vaigats, and the other side: and finding no more water, there was no other way for vs, but to goe backe againe as we came in. And hauing the wind at north-west, at 12. of the clocke at night, we set saile, and turned out. The South side of Vaigats hath two Islands, which are very shoale. The South side of Vaigats is a very faire and a Greene land.

The South side of Vaigats a faire land.

The 20. day, we plyed to the Northwards, and got deeper water, at 6. and 7. fathoms.

The 21. day, the wind north-west, we turned about the coast north, and north north-west, and had 8. 9. and 10. fathoms.

Friday the 22. at a South sunne, we ankered in a Baye of the West side of Vaigats, betwene two Islands, and there furnished our selues with wood and water, supposing it had bene Vorskoo Ostroue, and here sent for our consoyer, according to appoitment, where wee found a goodly harbour, with Russes crosses at eche side, and many Islands scant to be numbred, with faire bates, to the northwards: and at a north-west sunne we waied, and turned out, and by a north north-east sunne we doubled the Westmost land, and found the land to trend much to the Eastward, where we found many faire Islands, and many ouer falls in the offing (or putting off.) Note, that wee went within none of the Islands.

Note.

Saturday the 23. we had the wind at south-west, with thicke weather, which after wee cleered by to the south-east very much wind and thicke: wherupon we cast about to the Westwards, meaning to seale the land, but we could not, for that it was much wind, and a growen Sea. So we were put off againe, till we were among the yce, which forced vs to cast about againe, and afterward we had the wind larged to the West South-west, and we had faire weather, and small water: then we scoured our boate, which we to wed 5. baies before. Then it increased presently a great and extreme gale of wind to the north-west: so we tooke in our maine saile, and went with our foresaile, and about a north north-west sunne, I suppose we were thwart the south-east end of Vaigats, hauing a great land of yce to the sea boord of vs, which also afterward did growe on head of vs, and so troubled vs, that it caused vs to piye to the shoare, where we thought we sawe an Island, which chanced to be a faire Island, lying halfe a mile from the shoare, and a mile in length, and halfe a mile ouer. To the north-west of it lieth a point a mile off, and betwene them a Baye, and to the south-east, thre leagues or netherly as it were a faire Cape like to beache the maine, isauen and trendeth Southeast and North-west. There goeth a good riuie betwene the Island and the maine.

A faire Cape. A good riuie.

Sunday the 24. we had the elevation of the pole at 69. degrees, 4. minutes. At a West and by South sunne, we passed by a great arme, or a baye, which had two head lands: and being ouer against it, foure leagues from the shoare, wee sounded, and had 10. fathoms, and oxie sande: at a north-west and by north sunne, we had sight of the William. All this day we bare along the shoare, being continually among the yce: and at a north and by West sunne, we bare north and by East, to the sea wards, seeking to be cleere of the yce. After that, we had sight of the William, we bare off to the sea wards, meaning to cleere our selues of the yce: and for that the yce grew thicker, wee tooke in our sailes, at a north-east sunne.

A great Baye with two head lands.

Monday the 25. we ankered with our grapnell vpon a peece of yce, to tary for the William, to speake with her, fearing that we should be inclosed, and not able to come together, to speake one with another. We are as yett extreme, from the south-east part of the aforesaid Cape, which we esteeme like beache, to the south-east part of the riuier of Baye, which wee passed the 24. daye, 25. leagues, and from the maine 6. or 7. leagues, where we continued all the day and night, to mend the Williams false sterne posse, which was broken with the yce, the foure and twentieth day.

Tuesday the 26. we continued at the aforesaid yce, till a South-west and by South sunne, and went north and by East, to seeke to cleere vs of the yce, being enuironed there with the wind being West north-west, and sailed 4. miles, and then had no way: so we came to anker at a peece of yce, at a West and by South sunne.

Wednesday the 27. we put off from the yce, where wee roade at a South-east and by East sunne, and sailed thre or foure bowes to the Southwards towards the lande, and then roade at an Island againe, till we had dined, and after wee sailed along the yce, to the landward, till a North-west Sunne, same, and then they had there all the

They returned together hardy to the returne of this our ship, their deterrment was the generall Nicholas Chanc summerable quantity of the last gathered vpon the other we finde that will be it to water furthermost land, the last voyage, get the maine Deuily considered, get some cleere, to

Thursday the name full deterrment one peece of yce to yce to yce, till nine Friday the 29. shore, if we might in the afternoon, we had little good, so we continued till 7. in the afternoon, am: the perremit better from vs.

Saturday the saile, and would so they were, because they we continued went South, some ing caline, we mended South, whereto the current: neuer got nothing, and a ham woode still, a by South, and for to farther to the of the pole was 6

The first day

Friday the 2. the we had the coasts not and continued at

The third day we had the coasts not and continued at outh southweſt all 4. ſachons, ſome

to ſound, and all to ate, betwene Vai-
s for vs, but to goe locke at night, wee re very ſhore. The

7. ſachons, y northweſt, and had V Vaigars, betwene
it had bene Vorou-
wee found a goodly
with faire baies,
by a north northweſt
the Caſtward, where Note, that wee

which after ward cleve to the Weſt ward, groven Sea, So
dout againe, and af-thered, and ſmall too-creaſed preſently a title, and went with the ſoutheaſt ende of
did grove on bea
the ſoutheaſt ende of
nd a mile in length,
ocene them a Baye,
the maine, is to eene the Iſland and

s. At a Weſt end by
: and being over and oazie ſande: at a re along the ſhoare, y north and by Caſt, William, we bare off
grewe thicke, wee

for the William, to ether, to ſpeake one Cape, which we ed the 24. daie, 25.
and night, to mend
pure and cwentid

South ſume, and with, the wind being er at a peece of yce,

and by Caſt ſound, then roade at an I-ed, till a Northweſt ſume, ſume, and then the fogge came upon vs, whereby we could goe no further that night: ſo we ankered there all that night. It did ſnowe all that night, and blew much wind at Weſt Northweſt.

*Fogge-
ſnowe.*

This evening, Maſter Iackman, and George Sparrowe, came aboard the George, to conferre together with vs, where they determined concerning our matters in hande, for the proceeding of the George the ſhipe returne of this our voyage: where Maſter Pet, and Maſter Iackman both, were very willing in their determination, to doe for the beſt advantage, and profit of the company. This to conclude was the generall voice of Maſter Pet, Maſter Iackman, Hugh Smith, George Sparrowe, and me-Nicholas Chanceler. Firſt we laid beſoye our eyes, the cauſe of our let preſent, which was the innumerable quantitie of yce, with the hugeues thereof: and not onely that, but alſo the unlike diſ-poſing of the ſaid yce, the ſummer being ſo farre ſpent, & further the ſnowe falling with the froſt gathered upon the ſame, is an augmenter unto the yce, and no diminither unto the ſame. And further we finde that no current runneth here, to be a diſperſer of the ſaid yce, and no ſea goeth here to with draw it to water. We have had in the meane time very faire windes, ſufficient to have paſſed the harthermoſt land, extending North, according to the eſtimate of thoſe that gave vs inſtructions of this ſaid voyage. This alſo we finde by prooff of traull, that the farther we runne of to the ſea, to get the maine Ocean, the theicker we finde the yce, and ſmall hope of a cleere ſea. All theſe things well conſidered, our determination is, to ſeeke by all meanes to get to the ſhoare, hoping there to get ſome cleere, to get to Vaigars, and there to conferre further, as time and place ſhall give occa-ſion.

They reſolve to returne.

Thursday the 28. at noone, all we aforeſaid, meeting together aboard the George, agreed and made ſull determination of the premises aforeſaid: and at 3. in the afternoone, we warped from one peece of yce to another, to get from them, if it were poſſible: wee continued in warping from yce to yce, till nine at night, then we moied both our barkes to a great peece of yce, all that night.

Friday the 29. the wind at Southweſt, at ſixe in the morning, wee ſet ſaile to ſlpe into the ſhoare, if we might poſſible attaine thereto: we made many a turne, but to ſmall purpoſe. At two in the afternoone, by miſfortune, hitting a great peece of yce, we brake off our grepe before: yet nevertheleſſe we did our endeavour in turning. The William encomped with yce, and peſtered, doing little good, tooke in al her ſailes, and made ſaile to a peece of yce: but with the percreaming that we continued till turning by and done, about 4. in the afternoone did ſet ſaile to followe vs. At 7. in the afternoone, we tooke in our ſailes, and made ſaile to a peece of yce, to tarry for the William: the percreaming that he ſtooke ſaile, did the like, and made ſaile to a peece of yce, a league and better from vs.

Saturday the 30. the wind being at Southeaſt, and by South, at a Southeaſt ſtume, we ſet ſaile, and would ſooner have done, but that we tarried for the William, to have knowen in what ſtate they were, becauſe they came not to vs over night: but they moied not, till they ſawe vs begin that we continued all the day, ſeeking our beſt way, as the yce would permit vs: ſometime we went South, ſometime Caſt, ſometime Weſt, continuing thus till eight at night, the wind warping ſaile, we moied to a peece of yce, and there ſtaied till the next day.

Current.

The 31. at thye in the morning, we ſet ſaile, the wind being Southweſt, to turne to withde-wards, wherein we did little good: for the current was againſt vs: for as the wind is, ſo ſetteth the current: nevertheleſſe we did our beſt, unill 10. of the clocke, and then percreaming that wee got nothing, and alſo being incloſed with yce, we made ſaile to a peece of yce. All this day the Wil-ham ſtoode ſtill, and did as much good as we that about on all the forenoone. The wind comming to the South and by Caſt, in the afternoone we ſet ſaile, and lay Southweſt, and Southweſt and by South, and ſometime to the Weſt ward, as we might, till nine at night, and then could paſſe no farther for the yce: ſo we and the William made ſaile to a peece of yce. This day the elevation of the pole was 69. degrees, 20. minutes. We had 87. ſachons water, and oazie.

August.

The firſt day, the wind being ſouthweſt, about 12. the wind came to the Weſt, with a great fogge.

The 2. the wind at Southweſt, with raine and fogge all day, wee were incloſed to with yce, that we could not ſtirre. In the afternoone the wind came to the Weſt, with much ſoule weather, and continued all night.

The third day, the wind at Weſt, and Weſt and by North, and Weſt Northweſt, all the day with fogge: we continued all day and all night incloſed in the yce, thus adding the Lord ſupper, beſeeching him to ſtrengthen vs with patience and faith in him. Here we had 21. ſachons.
The

The 4. day, we continued inclosed with yce, which increased more and more upon vs.

The 5. day, all the morning raine, with much wind, at South and South south east, and South east. The said wind a little separating the yce, made vs some way: at a South west stume we set sail, and suddenly it became calme for the space of an houre: then the winde came to the North north east: we made way through the yce, as we could finde passage betwene them for the space of three houre: then we met with an whole land of yce, that wee could passe no further for it: so we made our ships fast to it, and roade by it all the night, which was very darke with fogge.

The 6. we lay still all the day and night, inclosed with yce.

The 7. we continued still so inclosed with yce, that wee could not stirre, but defend the yce from the ships side, as it came grating upon vs.

The 8. day, very faire and calme, but a fogge towards night: the winde came to the South southeast a pretty gale, which did a little cause the yce to open: all the night was fogge. Here we had 70. fathoms water.

The 9. the wind North west and by West, and all the afternoone West south west: wee laye still, for that we were still inclosed with yce: the elevation of the pole was 70. degrees, 4. minutes. Wee founde and had 68. fathoms oaze. It did freeze so hard in the night, that in the morning wee had much adoe to passe through it. If we had continued there, and it had frozen the next night, wee should hardly have gotten out of it.

The 10. day, about 5. in the morning, wee set sail, the winde at East north east, a very small gale, with our boate a head to wing vs, and breaking the yce with their oares, which had frozen the night before. Sometime we lay South west, sometime West, as we might best finde way. About 6. in the afternoone, the wind came to North east with fogge, yet we bare sail all the night. Here we founde, and had 88. fathoms. There fell much snow in the night.

The 11. day, we were much troubled with yce, so that wee were constrained to beare sorely through it, in such sort, that it may be thought impossible, for such small barkes to passe it, but by temeritie cansteth men to doe much. About noone we founde, and had 95. fathoms. At three in the afternoone, the wind came to the South west, and we being inclosed with much yce, were constrained to take in all our sailes, and to ride by a peece of yce. The 12. in the morning, the wind southeast, in manner calme. At 2. in the afternoone, the wind at South south west: all the day darke with fogge and snow. At 6. in the afternoone, the winde being north east, we set sail, and went all night South west, and South south west, as neere as the yce would giue vs leaue: wee found the yce more favourable to vs then we did before, hoping to get cleere of it.

The 13. the wind at north east, & north east and by east. At 7. in the morning wee had an anker stroke, being upon the bowe of our ship, with a blow which we had against a peece of yce. All this day we were very much troubled with yce, & had so many great blowes against them, that it was marvell that the ship was able to abide them: also the ship giuing backe, bare the boate to a peece of yce, & brake her side, the boate being chwart her sterne, & with the same blowe perished the head of our rudder. This was a very hard day with vs. At night we came among much broken yce, and the wind did blowe very much at north, which caused the yce to diste: wee draue with it, for our drift was South. All the night it did snowe very much. The 14. day, in the morning, we made our ship fast to a peece of yce, & did diste with it, the wind being north by. In the meane time we mended our boate, and the head of our rudder, so we continued all the day and night in drift.

The 15. day, the wind at north east, we set sail at 6. in the morning, bearing through the yce, at 9. at night, we entred into a cleere sea, at which sight our hearts did greatly reioyce, as the boat which was escaped out of the cage, wherein she was kept long as prisoner. At this time we founde, & had 19. fathoms. We ran in South west at 11. in the morning, at 1. in the afternoon, wee had 10. fathoms: then we came to 10. fathoms: then we were north west, for so the land tenderly. At noone we had sight of the land, being within three leagues of it: we might have seen it sooner, if the fogge had not bene. This day we had the pole eleuate 69. degrees, 19. minutes: we kept along the coast in 10. & 9. fathoms. The shore along is even & faire sounding, & it without sholdes of sands 70. fathoms.

The 16. day, the wind East, we were troubled againe with yce, but we made great drift with it: for we gate betwene the boate and it. At noone we were chwart the south part of Vaigat, where wee founde gre at those of yce all along it, which made vs doubt of passage through it: yet with much trouble wee gate betwene the boate and it. All the afternoone was a fogge. At 6. of the clocke, we found a great white Beare upon a peece of yce. At the night wee had North, and north and by East, and sometimes East, for so doeth the land creepe. The 17. day, the winde South east in the morning, wee sailed along West, for so the land doeth runne, it being darke with fogge, and we running too neere the shore, our shippe was on ground: but, God be praised, Frost.

Snowe.

Snowe.

A North North west.

No cleere sea.

A white beare.

we gate no way
and seeing her desired for the William,
there some of
" came not to noone, we set the wind came

The 18. day,
the wind came the William
the 19. day,
the wind came fathoms.

The 20. day,
we were upon
cunning by & do
the William
ankers, ropes, a we had, and laid
we get her on the

The 21. day,
the wind came eleuate 68. de
cleere our selues best water: in hous, and the V
call we lay found came to the fact we had about
fathoms.

The 22. in the the sight of the V
light of her, and we had West m

The 23. day,
at Vgor, and at running this cou
north east off: the
with the Westward by north all the

The 24. day,
the northwards,
east and we lay in

The 25. day,
west at 4. in the

The 26. day,
pole eleuate 70.

The 27. day,
being East, we Cape.

The 28. at the
the night follow
The 29. at 5. in downe by it is cal
fresh water, which
The 30. day in

... upon vs.
... south, and south
... north (name we let
... came to the ship
... them for the space
... no further: so
... the wind fogge.

... defend the yre from
... came to the South
... was fogge. Here we

... South-west: wee laye
... 0. degrees, 4. minutes
... in the morning wee
... the next night, wee

... North-east, a very small
... which had frozen the ... west side way. About ... all the night. Here

... ned to beare so greatly
... as to passe it, but ex
... thoms. At three in the ... ch yre, weere contrair
... yning, the wind south
... : all the day wee
... head, we let saile, and
... to give vs leaue: wee
... of it.

... ng weake an mber
... yere of yre. All this
... inst them, that it was
... the boate to a yere
... ow perished the head
... much broken yre, and
... yraue with it, for our
... e morning, we made
... in the meane time we
... night in yre.

... ing through the yre, &
... yre to yre, as the bird
... his time wee founde,
... points: wee haled
... endeth. At noone wee
... sooner, if the fogge
... pt along the coast in
... of sands of rocks.

... made great shift, with
... uth part of Vaigars,
... sage though it: yre
... was a fogge. At 6. of
... we haled North, and
... e 27. day, the yre
... npe, it being dark
... but, God be praesed,
... we

we gate no hurt: for it being flood, we came off againe presently. The William being on head of us, and seeing vs strike our sailes, did anchor by Vorousko Ostroue to stay for vs, and sent some of her men to helpe vs, but we were under saile before they came nere vs: and when we came to the William, weooke in our boate, and so we the William: then we made saile, and went betwene some of the Islands: we haled West south-west, so we pass'd Vaigars, and the spasters came not together to conferre, as they had appointed the 28. day of July. About two in the afternoon, we set our course south-west, and by south, and south-west, and ran so, till 12. at night, then the wind came to north north-east, and we haled West.

The 18. day, at five in the morning, wee founde, and had 16. fathoms red sande. At nine wee founde, and had 14. and 10. fathoms: we haled West north-west. At 12. the wind came to the Eastward East and by South: we haled West and by North all the day and night following. At five in the evening, wee founde, and had 17. fathoms sand.

The 19. day, the wind at East north-east, at five in the morning, wee founde, and had 19. fathoms red sand, the wind north and by East. At three in the afternoon wee founde, and had 15. fathoms.

The 20. day, at 7. in the morning, wee founde, and had three fathoms blacke oaze. About noone we were upon the sudden in shoale water among sandes, which the skwart of Colgoyue: and running by & do bene, seeking to gett cleere of them, continually sounding, we came on ground, and the William also which was a league from vs. In the night, it being calme, wee laid all our cables, anchors, ropes, and such like, upon the sand in the water, and made a raft, with such provision as we had, and laid thereon such things as lay uppermost in our shippe that it would beare, but could not gett her on shore that night.

The 21. day, at an high water, we gate off, and the William also, the wind being at south-west, raised the water to be the higher, which was a great helpe to vs. This day wee found the pole to be elevated 68. degrees 40. minutes. In the afternoon the William and wee did set saile, seeking to cleere our selues of the said holmes, both our boates being on head of vs, sounding to seeke for the deeper water: wee gat then 6. 7. and 8. fathoms, the winds being without but wee bare to the southward, and the William bare more to the Eastward. The night being at hand, and the wind south-east, we lay south-west, and south and by West, and came to 10. and 12. fathoms, and suddenly wee came to five fathoms, which was the head of the land, whereupon we were before on ground: then wee set cast about to the eastward, for deeper water, and gate in short time 16. and 20. and 23. fathoms.

The 22. in the morning, we cast about, and went south-west and by south. This morning wee had sight of the William, under our lee, as farre as we could see her, and in a great fogge wee lost sight of her, and since we haue not seen her. Thus we continue still there in the afternoon, then we haled West north-west, and West and by north, all the night following.

The 23. day, at five in the morning, wee had 27. fathoms: afterwards wee had sight of the coast of Vgon, and at 7. in the afternoon, the wind came to the East, and wee laye West and by north: running this course, wee came to three fathoms, about the Bay of Morzouetz, then wee lay north north-east off: then the wind came north, and wee lay East, and East and by north, and sometimes to the Westward againe, untill wee came to 40. fathoms. Afterwards wee lay East and East and by north, all the same night.

The 24. day, we continued our course north-west, till wee came to 11. fathoms, then wee laye to the northward, untill midnight, and then wee came to 40. fathoms, then the wind came to the north-east, and wee lay north-west along.

The 25. day, the wind being north north-east a very blisse gale, wee continued our course north-west, till 4. in the morning wee founde, and had 36. fathoms.

The 26. day, the wind at north-east, we continued our course north-west. This day wee founde the pole elevated 70. degrees 40. minutes.

The 27. day, at 7. in the morning, wee had sight of land, which wee made to be Keger, the same being East, we haled north and by West, and North north-west, and North, to double the North Cape.

The 28. at three in the morning, wee set our course north-west, and ranne so all the day, and all the night following. The same night the wind came to the South-west.

The 29. at 5. in the afternoon, the wind being at West, wee did put into a certaine sound, the wind by it is called Vngon, and anchored in 25. fathoms water. The same night wee gate in shallow water, which wee had nere of.

The 30. day in the morning, the wind came to the North-east little wind: wee set saile, and went our

"This was Arthur's Island."

51. deg. 40. mi.

Were they lost sight of the William,
to beere the yre as cast away.

Vngon.
The bay of Morzouetz.

70. deg. 40. mi.

is called Vngon.

our boate on head, we gate to the sea. In the afternoon the wind came to the East, and we came West north west.

The North Cape doubled.

The 31. day, the wind at East south east, at noon, we doubled the North Cape, and had a long West all the day following, and at night we went West south west.

September.

The first day, the wind at North east, with thicke fogge, we continued our course West south west.

The second day, at three in the morning, we doubled Fowlnes. All this day the wind being variable, we did little good. In the evening the wind came to South west, and we bare West north west, and north west. And betwene nine and ten of the clocke in the night, the winde came to the West, a very stiff gale, thac we were faine to lay it on hull to the north wards, for the space of two houres. After we laid her head to the southwards, and at break of day, we had sight of South Fowlnes.

The third day, in the morning, we bare with the foresaid land, and harbored our selues among the lowe Islands in 4. or 5. fathoms water.

The fourth day, the wind at South south west, reasonable weather.

The 5. 6. and 7. daies very soule weather, with vehement blastes, and such raine, that we thought our selues blest to be in harbour.

The eight day reasonable weather, the wind being West and by North.

The ninth day, the wind at East, at twelve of the clocke, we set saile, and by three in the afternoon we cleared our selues of the land, and went West South west, and so continued all the night.

The tenth day, the wind at East north east, a faire gale, we continued our course aforesaid. This day we found the pole elevated 69. degrees, 20. minuts.

The 11. day, the wind north east in the afternoon, and all the night calme. This day we found the pole elevated 68. degrees, 16. minuts.

The 12. day, the wind South south west, and in the afternoon South, and to the Eastwards. At three in the afternoon, we did put into an harbour to the southwards of Lawestaste, where we rode, having a ledge of rockes to windward of us, and continued there till the 17. day, having the weather for the most part very tempestuous, with great thunders, the winde continuing all the time betwene the South and the West.

The 17. day at noon, the winde came to the North east, and at two in the afternoon, we set saile, and bare along south west, all the same night.

The 18. day, we went south south west, the wind being north north east. This day the pole was elevated 66. degrees, 30. minuts.

The 19. day, the wind at East north east. This day the pole was elevated 64. degrees, 50. minuts. At 6. in the afternoon, the wind came to the East south east, we went South and by East all the same night.

The 20. day, in the morning, the wind came to the East. We founde the pole elevated 63. degrees, 30. minuts, all the night was calme.

The 21. day, all the forenoon, the wind at south east, and in the afternoon it came to the south south west, and all the night variable with wind.

The 22. in the morning, the wind South, all the afternoon and night following, calme.

Kamsdall.

The 23. day, the wind South, at four in the afternoon, we put into a sound called Kamsdall, where we found many lowe Islands, and good sounds, without the high land. That was the first place that we sawe any wood growe on upon this coast. We continued in the said harbour, till the 28. day, the weather being very stormie and raine.

Where wood was first on the coast.

The 28. in the morning, we set saile, the wind being East north east, and bared along south west. In the afternoon the wind came to the South, then we cast about, and by five of the clocke got to harbour, and rode under an Island all night.

The 29. day, we shifted from the aforesaid Island, into a better place, betwene two Islands, where we rode more quietly.

Thus by reason of contrary windes, we were forced to stay longer upon the coast of Norway, then we wished, so that it was the 25. day of December, before we could get home into the mouth of the Thames.

dimidium itine contiuu ingere
hinc medium
existimo, in inti liber merces ex
gliam deportar
nabar ab Impe vero cum illius montorium qu cominodissimu portunitate, mi
degari possiet.
Plinio tantum,
beco. Polum eti bus didici: circ
oenem existimo
cidentem tentat
propius acceder
quo ex omni pa
netis virtute im
prou quis vel or tis, & Mundi du hanc Magnetis In hac re si non uenire & castiga negotio, a gelu p contingat, hoc e fluminibus que renissimz Regi
gratam, imo gra chardi fluminun ria Germanica e liarijs Germani Valde optare
portu, quem ves
mare in hoc dist pro ratione est & iterum sex in parum viles hin adfinum Merosi
ex quadam Tab Galli description
oblata: Non dub
ea quam proxim
medium sui exte deprauatae latitu Bulcoducensis it
erip: ab alio mu
ab amico repetij
de plano Carpin

A letter of Gerardus Mercator, written to M. Richard Hakluyt of Oxford, touching the intended discoverie of the Northeatt passage. Anno 1580.

Licet a tua (vir humanissime) 19. Junij demum mihi reddita fuerunt: vehementer dolui visis illis tantam, non modo temporis, sed multo magis tempestuæ instructionis iacturam factam esse. Optassem, Arthurum Per de quibusdam non leuibus ante suum discesum præmonitum fuisse. Expeditissima sane per Orientem in Cathaium est nauigatio: & sæpe miratus sum, eam feliciter inchoaram, desertam fuisse, velis in Occidentem translatis, postquam plus quam dimidium itineris vestri iam notum haberent. Nam post Insulam Vaigats, & Noua Zembla continuò ingens sequitur sinus, quem ab ortu Tabin immane promontorium complectitur. In hunc medietate maxima illabuntur flumina, quæ vniuersam Regionem Sericam perluentia, utque existimo, in intima continentis vsq; magnis nauigijs peruia, facillimam rationem exhibent qualibet merces ex Cataio, Mangi, Mien, cæterisque circumfusis regnis contrahendi, atque in Angliam deportandi. Cæterum cum non temere eam nauigationem intermissam crederem, opinabar ab Imperatore Rusorum & Moscouiæ obstaculum aliquod interiectum fuisse: quod si verò cum illius gratia vterior illac nauigatio detur, suaderet profecto non primum Tabin promontorium querere, atque explorare, sed sinum hunc atque flumina, in ijsq; portum aliquem commodissimum, stationemq; Anglicis Mercatoribus deligere, ex quo deinceps maiore opportunitate, minoribusq; periculis Tabin promontorium, & totius Cathai circumnauigatio indagari posset. Esse autem ingens in Septentrionem excurrens promontorium Tabin, non ex Plinio tantum, verum & alijs scriptoribus, & tabulis aliquot (sicet rudius depictis) certum habeo. Polum etiam Magnetis haud longè ultra Tabin situm esse, certis Magnetis obseruationibus didici: circa quem & Tabin plurimos esse scopulos, difficilimamq; periculofam nauigationem existimo: difficiliorum tamen ad Cathaium accessum fore opinor, ea qua nunc via in Occidentem tentatur. Propinquior enim fiet hæc nauigatio polo Magnetis, quam si altera, ad quem propius accedere non puto tutum esse. Quia verò Magnes alium quam Mundi polum habet, quo ex omni parte respicit: quòd propius ad eum acceditur, eò directorium illud Nauticū magnetis virtute imbutum, magis à Septentrione deuiat, nunc in Occidentem, nunc in Orientem, prout quis vel orientior, vel occidentalior est illo Meridiano, qui per vtrumq; polum Magnetis, & Mundi ducitur. Mirabilis est hæc varietas, & quæ nauigantē plurimum fallere potest, nisi hæc Magnetis in constantiam nōrit, & ad poli eleuationem per instrumenta subinde respiciat. In hac re si non sit instructus D. Arthurus, aut ea sit dexteritate, ut deprehensio errore eum inuenire & castigare possit, timeo ne deuias faciat ambages, tempus illum fallat, & semper acto negotio, à gelu præoccupetur: Aiunt enim sinum illum fortius quotannis congelari. Quod si contingat, hoc quod consultus mihi visum fuit, proximum illi erit refugium, ut in eo sinu, ijsq; fluminibus quæ dixi, portum quærat, & per Legatum aliquem, cum magno Cham, nomine serenissimæ Reginz noticiam, amicitiamque contrahat, quam opinor Maximo orbis Imperatori gratam, imo gratissimam fore propter remotissima cōmercia. Opinor ab ostijs Bautis & Oechardi fluminum maximorum, vsq; ad Cambalu Regiam summā Chami, non ultra 300. miliaria Germanica esse, & iter sumendum per Ezinam urbem regni Tangut, quæ 100. tantum miliarijs Germanicis ab ostijs distare videtur, & paret Magno Cham.

Valde optarem cognoscere, quam altè communiter exurgat æstus maris in eo Moscouiæ portu, quem vestri pro statione habent, & in alijs versus orientem locis vsq; ad Tabin. Item, an mare in hoc districtu semper in vnam partem, videlicet Orientem, aut Occidentem fluat, an verò pro ratione æstus fluat, & refuat, in medio inquam canali, hoc est, an ibi sex horis in occasum, & iterum sex in ortum fluat, an verò semper in eandem partem: aliæ enim speculationes non parum viles hinc dependent. Idem optarem à D. Frobiscero in occidentem obseruari. Quod ad sinum Merosro, & Canadam, ac Nouam Franciam attinet, ea in meis tabulis desumpta sunt ex quadam Tabula marina, quæ à quodam sacerdote ex earum ditiorum Naucleri peritissimi Galli descriptione excerpta fuit, & illusterrimo Principi Georgio ab Austria episcopo Leodiensi oblata: Non dubito, quin quantum ad littorium situm attinet, & poli eleuationem, ad veritatem ea quam proximè accedant. Habebat enim ea tabula præter scalam graduum latitudinis per medium sui extensam, aliam præterea particularem Nouæ Franciæ littoribus adiunctam, qua deparatæ latitudines, occasione erroris Magnetis ibi commissæ, castigatæ erunt. Iacobi Cnoyen, Bulcoducensis itinerariū per omnem Asiam, Affricā, & Septentrionem, olim mihi Amicus Antuerpij ab alio mutuo acceptum cōmunicauit, eo vsus sum, & reddidi: post multos annos eūdem ab amico repetij, & reminisci ille non potuit à quo accepisset. Guilielmi Tripolitani & Ioanis de plano Carpini scripta non vidi, tantum excerpta ex illis quædam in alijs scriptis libris inueni.

Postulata Mercatoris, de quibus certior fieri cupit.

Abelfedz Epitome gaudeo verti, vtinam citò habeamus.

Hæc (mi Domine) tuis respondenda putavi: si quid est aliud quod à me desideres, libentissimè tibi comunicabo: hoc vicissim amanter à tua humanitate petens, ut quæ ex virtuosè navigationis cursu observata nancisci poteris, mihi communces, penes me pro tuo arbitrio manebunt omnia, & quæcumq; inde collegero, fideliter ad te perferbam, si fortè ad pulcherrimum, vtilissimumq; orbi Christiano hoc navigationis institutum aliquid opis & consilij adferre possint. Bene vale, vir doctissime. Duisburgi in Cluivia, 28. Julij, 1580.

Redeunte Arthuro, quæso discas ab illo quæ optavi, & num alicubi in suo itinere, dulce mare, aut parum salsum inuenerit: suspicor enim mare inter Noua Zembla, & Tabin dulce esse.

T. H. paratissimus quantus quantulum, Gerardus Mercator.

¶ The same in English.

Sir, I receiued your letters the 19. of June: it grieued me much that vpon the sight of them the Scime being spent, I could not giue any conuenient instructions: I wish Arthure had bene informed before his departure of some speciall pointes. The voyage to Cathaio by the East, is doubtlesse very easie and short, and I haue oftentimes marvelled, that being so happily begun, it hath bene left off, and the course changed into the West, after that more then halfe of your voyage was discovered. For beyond the Island of Vaigats, and Noua Zembla, there falloweth presently a great baie, which on the left side is inclosed with the mightie promontorie Tabin. Into the middes hereof there fall great riuers, which passing through the whole countrey of Serica, and being as I thinke navigable with great vessels into the heart of the continent, may be an easie meanes whereby to traffique for all maner of merchandize, and transpoyt them out of Cathaio Mangi, Mien, and other kingdomes thereabouts into England: But considering with my selfe that that navigation was not intermitted, but vpon great occasion, I thought that the Emperour of Russia and Polcouie had hindered the proceeding thereof. If so be that with his grace and fauour a further navigation may be made, I would counsell them certainly not first to seeke out the promontorie Tabin, but to search this baie and riuers aforesayd, and in them to picke and choise out some conuenient port and harborough for the English merchamts, from whence afterward with more opportunitie and lesse perill the promontorie Tabin, and all the coast of Cathaio may be discovered. And that there is such a huge promontorie called Tabin, I am certainly persuaded not onely out of Plinie, but also other writers, and some Maps (though somewhat rudely drawn): and that the pole of the Loadstone is not farre beyond Tabin, I haue learned by the certayn obseruations of the Loadstone: about which pole and Tabin, I thinke there are very many rocks, and very hard and dangerous sailing: and yet a more hard and difficult passage I thinke it to bee this way which is now attempted by the West, for it is neerer to the pole of the Loadstone, to the which I thinke it not safe to approach. And because the Loadstone hath another pole then that of the world, to the which from all partes it hath a respect, the neerer you come vnto it, the more the neede of the compasse doeth varie from the North, sometimes to the West, and sometimes to the East, according as a man is to the Eastward or to the Westward of that Germanian, that passeth by both the poles of the Magnes and the World.

This is a strange alteration and very apt to deceiue the Sailer, vntlesse hee knowe the inconuancie and variation of the compasse, and take the eleuation of the pole sometimes with his instruments. If master Arthure be not well provided in this behalfe, or of such dexteritie, that perceiuing the error he be not able to correct the same, I feare least in wandering vp and downe he loseth his time, and be overtaken with the ice in the midst of the enterpryse. For that gulfe, as they say, is frozen euery yeere very hard, which if it be so, the best counsell I could giue for their best safetie, were to seeke some harborough in that baie, and those riuers whereof I haue spoken, and by some Ambassador to make friendship and acquaintance with the great Cham, in name of the Queenes maiestie, which I beleue will be grateful to the mightiest Emperour in the world, yea most excellent for the length of the traffique, and great distance of the places. I thinke from the mouths of the mightie riuers Baucifus & Oecharus to Cambaluz the chiefe seat of the prince, the Cham, there are not past 300. Germane miles, and to passe by Zuzina a citie of the kingdom of Tangur, which seemeth to be but 100. German miles fro the mouthes of y<sup>e</sup> said riuers, & is subiect to great Cham.

I would gladly knowe how high the sea doeth flowe commonly in the portes of Hosiouia where your men do harborough, and in other Easterly places vnto Tabin. And also whether the sea in this straight do flowe alwaies one way to the East or to the West, or whether it doe ebbe and flowe according

The best course to be taken in this coniecture.

Orders for ving to the man points into the

one of his partic galle of Merofro
a certaine sea car
shall in those p
the treating of t creeth: for the another particula
committed by re age of Iacobus C in time past by a my peeres I requ
The writings of found certaine p is translated, I w Thus much sh
would require of your certelle, th
would impart the sue, and what so they may yeeld a theaded our chyl Chiua, 28. of Jul It Arthure his where in his boat Zembla and Tab

Instructions

couerie of new Freeman, I
barke t gra

B

on, as also for you among you an A hould in the sum 2 Because the offend the enemie maine top.

3 The Thom
the ancientest ma
to be Uicereintrai

4 And for cha age, we doe appo suit and agree by desideres, libentis-quæ ex virtutibus ne pro tuo arbitrio i forte ad pulcherpiss & consilijs ad-

itineræ, dulce ma-
abin dulce esse,
antus quan-
ardus Mercator.

the sight of them the Arthur had bene aid by the East, is to happily begun, & the of your voyage
followeth presently ie Tabin. Into the rey of Serica, and
t, may bee an easie
m out of Cathaio
ing with my selfe
that the Emperour
his grace and fa-
first to seeke out the
to picke and choole in whence afterward of Cathaio may n certainly perswa-
b some what rudely
have learned by the like there are very difficile passage I
er to the pole of the
the distance hath another neerer you come nes to the West, and ward of that Peri-

ee kno to the inconnes with his instruteritie, that perils p and do wne be lost gulfes, as they say, is for their best safetie, spoken, and by some one of the Quenes
ords, yea most excel-
in the mouths of the ace, the Cham, where of Tangut, which
ert to great Cham.
e of Adoula where berber the sea in this the and shoue according

ving to the manner of the tides in the middle of the channell, that is to say, whether it flow there first westward into the West, and as may be seen againe to the East, for hereupon depend ocher speculations of importance: I would wish you to observe the same Westward. Concerning the gulfe of Merosiro and Canada, and new France which are in my mapes, they were taken out of a certaine sea card drawn by a certaine yveit out of the description of a Frenchman, a Pilot very skillfull in those partes, and presented to the worthy prince George of Austria, bishop of Liege: for the drawing of the coast, and the elevation of the pole, I doubt not but they are very neere the trouth: for the Chartre had, beside a scale of degrees of latitude passing through the middle of it, another particularly annexed to the coast of New France, where with the error of the latitudes committed by reason of the variation of the compasse might be corrected. The historie of the voyage of Iacobus Cnoyen Buscoducensis throughout all Asia, Africa, and the North, was lent me in time past by a friend of mine at Antwoerpe. After I had used it, I restored it againe: after many yeeres I required it againe of my friend, but hee had forgotten of whom hee had borrowed it.
The writings of Guiliemus Tripolitanus, and Ioannes de Plano Carpini, I neuer sawe: howe-ever I found certaine pieces of them in ocher written hand bookes. I am glad the Epitomie of Abelada is translated, I would we might have it shortly.

Thus much Sir I thought good to answer your letters: if there be any thing els that you would require of me, I will most willingly communicate it with you, craving this like wise of your curtesie, that whatsoeuer observations of both these voiajes shall come to your hands, you would impart them to me, they shall all remaine with mee according to your discretion and pleasure, and whatsoeuer I gather of them, I will faithfully signifie unto you by letters, if happily they may yeeld any helpe or light unto this most excellent enterpryse of navigation, and most profitable to our christian common wealth. Fare you well most learned friend. At Duisburge in China, 28. of Iulie, the yeere, 1580.

At Arthur his returne I pray you learne of him the things I have requested, and whether any where in his voyage, he found the sea fresh, or not very salt: for I suppose the Sea betwene Noua Zembla and Tabin to be fresh,

Yours to my power to be commanded, Gerardus Mercator.

The first of Iune, 1582. London.

Instructions made by the companie of English merchants for dis-

couerie of new trades, vnto Richard Gibs, William Biggat, Iohn Backhouse, William Freeman, Iohn Hall, and James Woodcocke, &c. masters of the 9. ships, and one barke that wee haue freighted for a voiage with them to be made (by the grace of God) from hence to S. Nicholas in Russia, and backe againe: which ships being now in the riuer of Thames, are presently ready to depart vpon the sayd voyage, with the next apt winde that may blow thereunto, and with this Fleete afterwards was layned M. Christopher Carille with the Tyger.

As much as the number of ships which we purpose to send in this Fleete together for S. Nicholas in Russia, is greater then at any time heretofore wee haue sent thither, as also for that some speeches are giuen out that you shall bee met withall by such as with force and violence will assault you as enemies, to the ende that good order may be established among you for keeping together in companie, and vniuing your forces, as well for the better direction to be had in your navigation, as also for your more safetie and strength against the enemye, we haue thought good to appoint among you an Admirall and viceadmirall, and that all of you and euery one particularly shall bee bound in the summe of one hundred pounds to keepe company together.

1 Because the Salomon is the biggest ship, best appointed, and of greatest force to defend or offend the enemye, we doe therefore appoint that ship Admirall, which shall weare the flag in the maine top.

2 The Thomas Allen being a good ship and well appointed, and for that the master of her is the ancientest master of the Fleete that hath taken charge that way, we doe appoint the same ship to be Viceadmirall, and to weare the flag in the fore top.

3 And for that the master of the Providence is of great experience, and knowledg in that voyage, we doe appoint that he with the master of the Admirall and Viceadmirall shall conferre, consult and agree vpon the courses and directions that shall be used in this voyage, and it shall be law-full

full vnto the matter of the Admirall, with the consent of Mr. Gibbs, and Mr. Biggart, or one of them to make his courses and directions from time to time during the whole voyage, and all the fleete are to follow and obserue the same without straying or breaking of company at any time vpon the penallie before specified.

5 The appointing of the Ships for Admirall and Viceadmirall, and those men to consult and agree vpon the courses and directions of the voyage, as aforesaid, hath bene done by the consents and with the liking of you all, and therefore he doubte not but that you will all carefully and willingly obserue the premissses.

6 Item, we haue thought good to put you in mind, that at such times as you may conveniently from time to time, you doe assemble and meete together, to consider, consult, and determine vpon such articles as you shall thinke necessarie to be propounded touching your best safetie and defence against all forces that may bee offered you in this voyage, as well outwarde bound, and while you shall remaine in the roade and baie of S. Nicholas, as also homewardes bound, and that which you shall agree vpon, or that which most of you shall consent vnto, cause it to be set downe in writing for record, which may serue for an acte amongst your selues to binde you all to obserue the same.

7 We haue appointed James Woodcocke in the small barke to attend vpon you, and to receive his directions from you. You are to remember well what conference and talke hath bene had with you here before your going touching the sayd barke, to what purposes she may best serue, and the maner how to employ her, and thereupon to giue your order and direction vnto him, as the time and place shall require.

8 Item, if you shall vnderstand as you are outwarde bound, that the enemy is gone before you to S. Nicholas, remember what abuse hath bene giuen you for your stay at Berozoua Vlia, till you haue by spies viewed and vnderstood the forces, and the maner of their abode at that place.

9 And if in the Sea either outwarde or homewardes, or in the time of your abode at anker at Saint Nicholas, you shall bee assaulted by force of any, as enemy whatsoeuer, you are to defend your selues with such forces as you may or can: trust not too farre, neither giue place to inueniencence.

10 You will not forget what conference wee had touching your passing outwarde bound by Wardhouse, to view & vnderstand what you can at that place, & to shew your selues, to see if there be any there that haue a mind to speake with you, for that we thinke it better then and thereabout, then afterwarde or els where.

11 While you shall remaine in the roade at S. Nicholas, bee circumspect and careful to haue your ships in readinesse, and in good order alwayes, and vpon all suddens. The greatest danger vnto you in that place, will be while you shall lift your ships: therefore you are to consider of it, but the fittest time for you to doe the same, will bee when the winde is Southerlie off the shore, or calme, and at such time you may the better doe it without daunger. You must take such order amongst you, that your companies may bee alwayes willing and readie to helpe one the other, and appoint among your selues such ships to lift first, and such after, in such force and fourme as you shall thinke best and most conuenient. And while they shall bee in discharging, lading, and lading, let the rest of your companies which haue not then to doe in lading or discharging, helpe those shippes that shall haue labour to doe, as well for carrying the Barkes from ships to the shore, or from shore to the shippe with your boates, as also for any other helpe that they shall haue neede of.

12 Remember what hath bene said vnto you touching the mooring of your ships, &c. for bling an vantage against the enemy, if you shall be assaulted in that place.

13 See that you serue God, abolish swearing and gaming, bee carefull of fire and candles, &c.

14 You are to consult and agree among your selues vpon signes, tokens, and good orders for the better keeping of companie together, and also the maner how and by what means, rescue, aide, or helpe may be giuen by one to the other in fight, if you happen to come to it.

Thus we pray God to send you a prosperous voyage and safe returne.

short of Dwin alwayes to be thought do w change of that Others put t

How seeing cholas may be taken and com commodities t moditie.

But it may bee able to ser mained a mou
as you woul

of answere
to goe as afo
that should dep
time to be con
south of Aug
time: by this o

1 You may be dispersed in

2 The grea

3 Our late such letters as

4 Their re may bring such and which ma

How seeing and any charge

A copie
rizi Ann

Nouogrodiz
Belozeri, Lif
partium Sep Feder Ander

The opinion of master William Burrough sent to a friend, requiring his iudgement for the fittest time of the departure of our ships towards S. Nicholas in Russia.

Whereas you request mee to perswade the companie not to send their shippes from hence before the line of May, I doe not thinke the same so good a course for them to obserue: for you know that the sooner wee send them hence, the sooner we may looke for their returne. If we send them in the beginning of May, then may they be at S. Nicholas by the line of the same moneth: and by that time the greatest part of your lading of necessitie must be come down, especially the flax: but if it should fall out so lateward a breaking up of the river of Dwina, that by the end of May the goods cannot be brought to S. Nicholas, yet this is alwayes to be accounted for certaine, that before our shippes can come thither, the goods may be brought down to that place: and if through ice the shippes be kept backe any time, the losse and charge of that time toucheth not the companie at all, but the owners of the ships, and yet will the owners put that in aduenture, rather then tarry longer time before their going hence.

Now seeing by sending our ships hence in the beginning of May, their arrivall at S. Nicholas may be at the ende of the same moneth, and remaining thirtie dayes there, they may be laden and come thence by the last of June, and returne home hither by the 10. of August with commodities to serue the market then, it cannot be denied but we should reape thereby great commodity.

But it may be objected, that if all our ships be sent then to returne as aforesaid, you shall not be able to send vs in so much cordage, Waxe and Oyle, as oherwise you should doe if they remained a moneth longer, neither could you by that time perfect your accounts to be sent in them as you would doe.

For answer thereto this is my meaning, though I wish the greatest part of our shipping to goe as aforesaid, yet would I haue one good ship or two at the most well furnished in all points that should depart alwayes from hence, betweene the beginning and the 10. day of June: and the same to be conditioned withall to remaine at S. Nicholas from the first arrivall there until the middle of August, or to be dispatched thence sooner, at the will and liking of our factors for the same: by this order these commodities following may ensue.

- 1 You may haue our commodities there timely to send by the river before it waxe shallow, to be dispersed in the countrey at your pleasure.
  - 2 The greatest part of our goods may be returned hither timely to serue the first markets.
  - 3 Our late ships remaining so long here, may serue to good purpose, for returning answers of such letters as may be sent our land, and received here before their departure.
  - 4 Their remaining so late with you shall satisfie your desire for perfecting your accounts, and may bring such cordage, Waxe, Oyle, and other commodities, as you can provide before that time: and this may serue vs in stead of bring home our goods that may be sent vs from Persia.
- Now seeing it may be so many wayes commodious to the company to obserue this order, without any charge unto them, I wish that you put to your helping hand to further the same.

A copie of the Commission giuen to Sir Ierome Bowes, authorizing him her Maiesties Ambassadour with the great Duke of Russia, Anno 1583.

ELIZABETHA Dei gratia, Angliae, Franciae, & Hyberniae Regina, fidei defensoratrix, &c. Vniuersis & singulis presentes literas visuris, & inspecturis, salutem. Cum Serenissimus Princeps, Ioannes Basilius, Rex, & magnus Dux Russiae, Volodomerz, Moscouiae, & Nouogrodiz, Rex Cassani, & Afracani, Dominus Plescoz, & magnus Dux Smplenscoz, Tueri, Vgori, Permiz, Valez, Bolharz, & aliarum ditionum: Dominus & magnus Dux Nouogrodiz in inferiori regione Chernigz, Razanz, Polotscoz, Ratfaulz, Yeraslaue, Belozeri, Liflandiz, Oudori, & Condensz, & gubernator in tota prouincia Seberiz, & partium Septentrionalium, & aliarum, frater, & Amicus charissimus, Nobilem virum, Feder Anderwich Spifemski, nuper ad nos ablegauerit, ad certa quaedam negotia nobis Phoedore Andrich Spifemski Ambassadour to the Queen.

cum agenda, quæ honorem vtrunque nostrum quam proximè attingunt, quæ que rectè definiti concludique nequeunt, nisi Ambassiatores aliquem & oratorem ad præfatum serenissimum principem amandauerimus: Hinc est, quod nos de fidelitate, industria, prouida circumspectione, & satis magno rerù vñu, prædilecti nobis famuli nostri, Hieronimi Bowes Militis, ex nobilibus domesticis nostris vnius, plurimum confidentes, præfatum Hieronimum Bowes Militem, nostrum verum, & indubitatum Ambassiatores, Oratores, & Commissarium specialem facimus, & constituimus per præfentes. Dantes, & concedentes eidem Hieronimo Bowes Militi oratori nostro tenore præsentium, autoritatem, & mandatù, tam generale, quam speciale, ita quod specialitas non derogat generalitati, nec è contrà generalitas specialitati, nomine nostro, & pro nobis, cum præfato serenissimo principe, eiusque consiliarijs, & deputatis quibuscunq; de præfatis negotijs & eorum singulis tractandi, conferendi, concludèdi appunctuandiq; prout præfato Oratori nostro æquum, & ex honore nostro videbitur: Nec non de, & super huiusmodi tractatis, conclusis, appunctuatisq; cæterisq; omnibus & singulis, præmissa quouimodo concernentibus, literas, & instrumenta valida & efficacia, nomine nostro, & pro nobis tradendi, literasq; & instrumenta consimilis vigoris & effectus, ex altera parte petendi, & confici, & sigillari debite procurandi, & recipiendi, & generaliter omnia, & singula, præmissa qualitercunq; concernentia, faciendi, exercendi, & expediendi, in, & eodem modo, sicut nos ipsi faceremus, & facere possemus, si essemus præfentes, etiamsi talia sint, quæ de se mandatum exigant magis speciale: promittentes bona fide, & in verbo Regio, omnia & singula, quæ per præfatum Ambassiatores, & oratorem nostrum appunctuata, promissa, conuenta, concordata, & conclusa fuerint in hac parte, nos rata & grata, & firma habituras & obseruaturas, & super inde literas nostras patentes confirmatorias, & approbatorias in forma valida, & autentica, prout opus fuerit, daturas. In cuius rei testimonium, his præsentibus manu nostra signatis, magnum sigillum nostrum regni nostri Angliæ apponi fecimus. Datæ e Regia nostra Grenwici, quinto die mensis Iunij, Anno Dom. 1583. Regni verò nostri viceffimo quinto.

The same in English.

ELIZABETH by the grace of God, Queen of England, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. to all and singular, to whom these presents shall come to be serene and red. greeting. Whereas the most excellent prince John Basiluwich king, and great duke of all Russia, Volodome, Moscoulie, and Nouogrode, king of Casan and Astracan, lord of Plesco, and great duke of Smolensco, of Tuer, Vgor, and Permia, Valca, Bolhar and others, lord great duke of Nouogrode in the lotts countrey of Cheriega, Rasar, Polotsco, Rostaue, Yeralauc, Belozet, Lifland, Oudor, Ohdor and Condene, and gouernour of all the land of Seberia, and of the North parts and others, our most deare brother and friend did of late send vnto vs one Feder Anderwich Spenskiy, a noble man of his to deale with vs in certaine speciall businells, respecting very neerely the honour of either of vs, and being such as without the speedyng of some Ambassadour of ours to the foresaid most excellent prince, cannot be sufficiently determined and concluded: For this cause wee hauing great confidence in the fidelitie, industrie, prouident circumspection and conuenient experience of our welbeloued seruante Jerome Bowes knight, a gentleman of qualitie of our household, do by these presents make and constitute the foresaid Jerome Bowes knight, our true and indoubted Ambassadour, Orator and speciall commissiower, giuing and granting to the same Jerome Bowes knight, our Orator, by the vertue of these presents authoritie and commandement, as well generall as speciall, so that the speciall shall not prejudice the generall, nor by the other doe the generall the speciall, to treat, conferre, conclude, and appoint in our name, and for vs with the foresaid most excellent prince and his counsellors and deputies whatsoeuer, concerning the foresaid businells, and each of them, according as it shall seeme good, and for our honour to our foresaid Orator, as also of and by/on such things increased, concluded and appointed; as in all and singular other things, any manner of way concerning the premises, to desister in our name and for vs, sufficient and effectuall letters and instruments, and to require letters and instruments of the like validitie and effect of the other part, and to procure them lawfully to be made and sealed, and then to receiue them, and generally to doe, execute, and dispatch all and singular other things concerning the premises, in, and after the same manner; as we our selves would and might do if we were present, although they bee such things as may seeme of themselves to require a more speciall commandement: providing in good faith & in the word of a prince, that we will hold & obserue all, and singular the things which by our Ambassadour aforesaid shall be appointed, promised, agreed, accorded and concluded in will give our

In witness where
of the presents, an Given at our
and of our reign

A letter

Serenissimo
Duci totius
D

dence, & Gub fratri & amico si

Serenissime p gatus, intellexim structum, ad S.

quod est honest
And cum id hab culos Hieronim

quem in præsen quod ad Seren mimus. In qu

tisquam dubitan habet à nobis in cum nobis mult

simus, rogamus
phinarum virt

nequam ablo iffemus. In qu

in præfatum la seruet, & incoll

1583, regni v
1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

1583, regni v

and concluded in this behalfe, as lawfull, gracefull, and firme, and thereupon as need shall require, will give our letters patents, confirmatorie and approbatorie, in forme effectuall and auctenticall. In witness whereof, we have caused our great seale of our kingdome of England to be put to these presents, and signed them with our owne hand.

Given at our pallace of Greenewich the fourth day of June, in the yeere of our Lord, 1583, and of our reigne the five and twentieth.

A letter sent from her highnesse to the sayd great Duke of Russia, by Sir Hierome Bowes aforesayd, her Maiesties Ambassadour.

Serenissimo Principi ac Domino, Ioanni Basilio, Dei gratia Regi & magno Duci totius Russia, Volodamera, &c. Regi Cassani, &c. Domino Plefcoa, &c. Domino & magno Duci Nouogrodia, &c. & Gubernatori in tota Prouincia Seberia, &c. Fratri, & amico nostro charissimo.

LIZABETHA, Dei gratia Angliz, Franciz, & Hiberniz Regina, fidei defensor, &c. Serenissimo Principi ac Domino, Ioanni Basilio, eadem Dei gratia Regi & magno Duci totius Russia, Volodamera, Moscouiz & Nouogrodiz, Regi Cassani & Astracani, Domino Plefcoa, & magno Duci Smolenscoz, Tueri, Vgori, Permiz, Valca, Bolharz, & aliarum ditionum, Domino & magno Duci Nouogrodiz in inferiori regione Chernigaz, Razanz, Polotscoz, Rattouz, Irollauz, Belozeri, Liflandiz, Oudori, & Condencaz, & Gubernatori in tota prouincia Seberiz, & partium Septentrionalium, & aliarum, fratri & amico suo charissimo, Salutem.

Serenissime princeps, frater & amice charissime, ex ijs quz nobiscum egit, S. V. illustris legatus, intelleximus, quam grate vobis faceremus satis, si legatum aliquem cum mandatis instructum, ad S. V. ablegaremus. In quo cered quidem instituto aded nobis ex animo placuit, quod est honeste postulatunt, vt non nisi prestata re, possemus nobis quoquo modo satisfacere. Atq; cum id haberemus apud nos decretum, nobis non incommodè incurrit in mentem & oculos Hieronimus Bowes miles, ex nobilibus nostris Domesticis, plurimum nobis dilectus, quem in præsentiarium ad S. V. ablegamus, cuius prudentiaz & fidei, totum hoc quicquid est, quod ad Serenitatù multo nostrarù dignitatem ornandam pertinere posse arbitramur, commissimus. In quo munere perfungendo, quin omnem curam & diligentiam sit collarurus, ne utriquam dubitamus: à S. autè V. rogamus, velit ei eam fidem habere in ijs persequeudis quz habet nobis in mandatis, quam nobis habendam putaret, si essent presentes. Pratered, cum nobis multum charus sit Robertus Iacobus medicus, quem superiori anno, ad S. V. missimus, rogamus vt eum eo loco S. V. habeat, quo virum probatissimum, & singulari quadam plurimarum virtutum laude ornatum habendum esse, boni principes censent. Quem à nobis ne utriquam ablegauissemus, nisi amicitiaz nostraz, & studio gratificandi S. V. plurimum tribuissemus. In qua diuini voluntate manemus erga S. V. non nisi optime de bonis vestris meritis in præfatum Iacobum nobis pollicemur. Et Deum Opt. Max. precamur, vt S. V. saluam conseruet, & incollumem. Date à Regia nostra Grenouici: 19 die mensis Iunij, Anno Domini 1583, regni verò nostri viceffimo quinto.

1582.

S. vestra bona soror.

The same in English.

Elizabeth by the grace of God, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. to the most excellent Prince and Lord, John Basilwich, by the same grace of God, King and great Duke of all Russia, Volodamera, Moscouie, and Nouogrod; King of Cassan and Astracan, Lord of Plefcoa, and great Duke of Smolenscoz, of Tuer, Vgor, and Permiz, Valca, Bolhar, and of the Town and great Duke of Nouogrod in the lower countrey of Cherniga, Razan, Polotsk, Rottauz, Irollauz, Belozer, Lifland, Oudor, Oudor, and Condenca, and Gouernour of all the lande of Seberia, and of the Royall partes and others, her beereff Lother and friend, Salutations.

Spott

Most excellent Prince, most deare brother and friend, by those things which the worthy ambassadoz of your excellencie declared vnto vs, we haue vnderstood how kindly it would be taken, if we should send to your excellency an ambassadoz from vs, with commandement and instructions. In which matter your honourable request hath so much pleased vs, that we could not any manner of way sacrifice our selues, except we performed the same. And hauing purposed with our selfe so to doe, we thought of, and rememberd Jerome Botwes knight, a gentleman of qualitie of our household, a man very much beloued of vs, whome at this present we send vnto your Maiestie, and to whose wisdom and faithfullnesse we haue committed all, whatsoeuer we take to appertaine to the aduancement of both our honours indifferently. In the discharge of which seruice, we doubt not but that all care and diligence shall be used on his part, so that we increat your Maiestie to giue him credence in the persecuting of those things which he hath from vs in commandement, no lesse then to our selfe if we were present. And whereas Robert Jacob, doctor of physicke, is a man very deare vnto vs, whome the last yeere we sent vnto your excellency, we desire that he may haue the fauor and estimation with you, which good princes thinke a most honest and vertuous man worthy of: for had we not carryed great respect to our mutuall friendship, and in due way to gratifie your Maiestie, we should in no case haue parted with him. And seeing we continue still the same good will towards your excellency, we do euen promise to our selfe your honorable kindness towards him: and we pray the almighty God to preserve your Maiestie in good safetie and health. Given at our palace of Greenwich, the 19 day of Iune, in the yeere of our Lord 1583, and of our reigne, the five and thirtieth.

Doctor Jacob

Your Maiesties good sister.

The maner of the preferring of suites in Russia, by the example of our English merchants bill, exhibited to the Emperour.

The Emperours house of recreation.

ohn Basilwich, Lord, King, and great Duke of all Russia, the English merchants, William, sonne of Thomas, with his company sue vnto.

Lord, in the 7082 yeere of the world's creation, the Spaietie treasurer, named Gregorie Meekelich Borozden, took of vs for thy hse 12 poods of loose sugar, waighted at 8 robes the pooh, which sugar was sent to the Sloboda. After, the said Gregorie treasurer, took of vs for thy Spaietie 200 reams of paper, waighted at 20 almines the reame, for all which the money hath not bene payd which amounteth to 216 robes.

And in the 84 yeere the diake Stephan Lighachdo, took of vs for thy Spaietie copper plates, for the summe of 1032 robes and one fourth part vnpayd for.

Also in the said 84 yeere the Spaietie diakes called Iuan Blafghoy, and Iuan Sobakin, took of vs for thy hse, sundry commodities, and haue not payd 630 robes, the rest of the money but for the sayd goods.

In the 85 yeere the Spaietie treasurer Peter Gholouen took of vs for thy Spaietie, cloth of sundry sorts, and hath not payd of the money due therefore 538 robes.

In the 88 yeere, the diakes Andrea Shalkan, and Istomay Yeuskoy, took of vs lead for thy Spaietie, to the value of 267 robes and a halfe not payd.

And in the same yeere the Spaietie diake Boores Gregoriowich, had for thy hse 15 broad clothes of diuers sorts, waighted at 110 robes, wherof 90 robes are vnpayd.

Also in the said 88 yeere, the diake Andrea Shalkan, took from vs 1000 robes for thee (Lord) in ready money, yet we know not whether by thy Spaietie appointment.

And also in the 89 yeere (Lord) the diake Andrea Shalkan, took from vs for thy Spaietie 500 robes, we know not whether by thy Spaietie order or no, because that thy authorized people doe yearly take away from vs, neither do they giue vs righte in any cause.

All the money (Lord) which is not payd vs out of thy Spaietie treasurer for our commodities, with the money taken from vs by Andrea Shalkan, is 4273 robes 25 almines.

Right noble king and Lord, shew thy mercy, and cause the money to be payd vs which is owing for our goods, as also that which hath bene taken from vs: extend thy fauor, King and Lord.

Sir for

A briefe
Maej

and in spac

our Lord

house

call the best

all

the best

to

to his

maie

tye both

the

Spaietie

Eight

met

the

the quantity

at

the

pinch

of

After

he has instructions

a

same

home

to

ing

attende

g gentlemen

at

the

of

the

of

the

of

the

of

the

of

the

of

the

ch the wayth ambaf would be taken, if we and instructions. In do not any manner of
with our selfe to qualite of our goods our Spacie, and to
to appertaine to the service, we doubt not our Spacie to give commandement, no lesse physike, is a man very that he may haue that vertuous man woo-
indewo; to graue
continue still the same noyable kindenes to and safete and health, Lord 1583, and of

after.
a, by the ed

issa, the English mer e unto.
Spacie's treasurer, na be 12 poods of flaxe
the Sloboda. Spox, 200 reames of paper,
to which amounteth to Spacie's copper plates,

Iuan Sobakin, toke
of the money due for thy Spacie's, cloth of

boke of vs lead for thy p'st 15 bynd clothes

robes for thee (Lord) for thy Spacie's 500 authorized people be

for our commodie of s alings,

ed by wharshobang
King and Lord.

The

A briefe discourse of the voyage of Sir Jerome Bowes knight, her Majesties ambassador to the Emperour of Muscouia in the yeere 1582.

and printed this second time, according to the true copie I receiued of a gentleman that went in the same voyage, for the correction of the errors in the former impression.

The Emperour of Russia that then liued by name Iuan Vassilli wch, having deliberately considered how necessary it were for the strengthening of his estate, that a suite of merchants and merchants should be againe sent betwene his said territories of Christian, with such further immunities and privileges for the trade and benefit of both their dominions, as his subjects of the same, as upon mutual trade of persons interposed an both sides, might be attended with a few good and his realm, in the yeere of our Lord 1582, he his ambassador for this purpose, in another office of gentleman of his house he called Pheodor Andreuich Phisemskie, accompanied with one of his secretaries, for his better assistance in this expedition, and besides, in any other occasions, wher his part were to be performed by words of mouth, sent the same in a letter in the Emperours signature, directed to her Spacie: he had in special charge to collect her opinion, as he went with him to his matter an ambassador, from her, to treat and contract of such affaires of importance as concerned both the realmes, which was the principall end of his simple journey hither: All here upon her Spacie very graciously inclining to the Emperours motion and accept humble suite of the English merchants, in which these countries, being earlie with the same princely respects, so facil-ly he consented in this behalfe, made choice of Sir Jerome Bowes a gentleman of her court, ordinarily attending upon her Spacie's person, whom in his opinion, he especially preferred her graciously for his skill and industry in the trade of his negotiating, according to the After he had received his commission, with several letters to the Emperour, with all other injunctions appertaining to his charge, and that the said Ruse ambassador was directed to resume home to his Ruse, being accompanied with others and returned, the English ambassador, being intended upon such his business at the least, very honourably furnished, wherof many were gentlemen, and the Sp. Dutchers, Cole a learned preacher, to the his leave of her Spacie at the court of Christchurch the point of June, and to visit the other ambassador, with the princell commission, embarked themselves at Newcastle the xxij. of the same; and after a stormy voyage at the sea, they arrived both in safety, in the town of D. Nicholas the xxiij. of July next following.

The Ruse ambassador lodged himselfe at the abbey of St. Nicholas: and the English ambaf-ador was lodged and well entertained by the English merchants, as they loue at St. Nicholas, standing in the Strand called Ruse Mans, (where the Ruse ambassador lodged himselfe) The Ruse ambassador having spent his time one whole day, took his leave of the English ambassador, and departed to the Ruse The English ambassador stode at St. Nicholas four or five days; when having made provision of horses, &c. he went to ward upon his journey towards Musco, in a carriage called Colmagro, wherof there were twelve horses drawn from St. Nicholas.

It must here be remembered that before the English ambassadors going into Russia, there were many dangers, but especially certaine Dutch merchants, who had undertaken themselves to create trouble in those countries. For which anking a privilege of the sole trade thither, was long before granted to the English merchants, these Dutchmen had already to hand the matter, as they had by their great means obtained the consent of the Emperour to be supplied thence; namely, Mikita Romanowich, Bodan Belskoy, and Andrew Shalkan the chamberlay: the latter two gifts that they bestowed upon them all, they took for much money of theirs as interest at 100. upon the hundred, as they payed in foote one of them five thousand rials, yea for the use of his money, and the English merchants at that time had not one friend in Ruse.

The ambassador, having now spent five weeks at St. Nicholas, and Colmagro, there came to him then a gentleman sent from the Emperour to instruct him, and at last in charge to conduct him by the rivers towards Musco, and to be liued his provision of all kinde of victuals necessary.

This gentleman being a follower of Shalkan the chamberlay, was by him (as it seemed) sollicit that that friend of his purpose, as afterwards appeared by the route he took, to offer discourtesies, and occasions of dislike to the ambassador: for you must understand, that the chamberlay and the other two great counsellors (spoken of as friends to the Dutchmen) had a purpose to oppose themselves directly against her Spacie's ambassage, especially in that point, for the barring of all strangers from trading into the Emperours country.

This gentleman conducted the English ambassage a thousand miles up the rivers of Dwina and Soughana, to a cite called Vologda, where he received him another gentleman sent from the Emperour, a man of better countenance then the other, who presented the ambassage from the Emperour with two fair geldings well furnished after the Russian manner.

At a cite called Verallau upon the river Volga there met the ambassage a duke well accompanied, sent from the Emperour, who presented him from the Emperour a coach and ten geldings for the more easie conveying of him to Musco, from whence this cite was distant five hundred miles.

Two miles on this side Musco there met the ambassage four gentlemen of good account, accompanied with two hundred boyles; who after a little salutation, not familiar, without embracing, told him that they had to say to him from the Emperour, and would have had him light on foot to have heard the not so pleasant speeches which he should have had; which the ambassage (soone refused to doe, and so they stood long upon matters touching which light he cannot; which circumstances agreed upon, there was yet great niceness) whose foot should not be first on ground.

Their message being delivered, and after having embraced each other, they conducted the said ambassage to his lodging at Musco, a house full of pursuants for him, whom selves being placed in the next house to it, and appeared to furnish him of all provisions, and to be used by him upon all other occasions.

The ambassage having borne some doubts to Musco, and having in all this time been very honourably used from the Emperour (for such was his will) though some of his chiefest counsellors (as is said) had another purpose, and did often times cunningly put it in his head: He was sent for to Court, and was accompanied thither with about forty gentlemen, honourably mounted, & sumptuously arrayed, in his passage from his lodging to the court, were set in a ward full of five thousand foot, that were of the Emperours guards.

After this manner, there met him four noble men appointed in cloth of golde, and rich furbes, they say, and who were of high birth and name, who conducted him to the court of the Emperour; till he was met by four others of greater degree then they, who guided him yet further to the court, in which passage there stood along the walls, and late by the sides and corners in rows, seven or eight hundred persons, said to be noblemen and gentlemen, all apparelled in garments of rich purple and cloth of golde.

These four noblemen accompanied him to the Emperours chamber door, where met him the Emperours grand officer in their best gowns; and with him all the great officers of the Emperours chamber, who all conducted him to the place where the Emperour sat in his state, having three cushions standing by him, viz. of Muscovia, Casan, and Astracan, & also by him four young noble men of about twenty yeeres of age; all richly dressed, costly apparelled in habits, holding upon their shoulders each of them a brode are, much like to a Galliardes are of Ireland, then and here they shake the are as though it were not fast halfe a yard long; and there face about the chamber upon benches and other low seats, about a hundred noblemen richly apparelled in cloth of golde.

The ambassage being thus brought to the Emperour in his chamber, after some compliments and inquisition of her good health, he called him to great banquet in a place provided for that purpose, nigh ten past twelve from him, from whence he would have had him to have sent him her speciall letters and presents, which the ambassage thinking not reasonable, strep forward to ward on the Emperours which passage the chamberlaine do direct him, and would have taken his letters; to whom the ambassage said, that her Majesty had directed no letters to him, and so went on, and delivered them himselfe to the Emperours own hands.

And after having thus delivered her speciall letters, and what he had to say at that time, he was conducted to the Countess chamber, where being had conference with the council of matters of his ambassage, he was soon after sent for againe to the Emperour, where he dined in his presence at a double; were two to him, and all his company at another board by, where also dined at other tables in the same place all the chief noblemen that were about the court, to the number of an hundred. And in the time of this dinner, the Emperour by many favours to the ambassage, & about the midst of dinner (standing by) drank a great carouse to the health of the Emperour in a good glass, and sent him a great bowl full of Muscovia wine and sugar to please him.

The ambassage after this, was often called to court, where he had conference both with the Emperour and his counsellors, of the matters in question, touching her ambassage, which dinner times raised many papers, and in the end after sundry meetings, the Emperour finding himselfe necessitated to his liking, for that the ambassage had not power by his commission to settle in matter, saying that he thought fit as a man whose will was seldomly wronged to be satisfied, to look his passion, and of England as he

The ambassa
seuer it might
the honour and humor; and with like courage and great a pnce as able to defend h
either he had, o French king, an in the end of Germany & so his father by
The ambassa
not the use an he might doe his business (not) w Emperour in gr large required, fo
All this not w Emperours choll meditations in th gave his ambassa
The ambassa
being thus (as I
to know) that he
to tell him, that he had, he shou
in question: and that the Emperour
by the Emperour was able, to send his departure, w he had the Em
which done him
And so the day in credit with him graced, and has been wronged.
The long after parture, a ne shouly after sent his will to great words is not by a
The
scroule
of the new diet was this;
The Seu Dne Dne Seu Seu
Seu

his passion, and with a shame, such an open countenance to be him, that he did not reckon the Queene of England to be his helgh: for there are (quoth he) that are her betters.

The ambassadoe greatly mistliking these speeches, a being very unwillling (how dangerous soever it might prove to his owne person) to give way to the Emperour, in derogate ought from the honour and greatness of her Majesty; and finding also that to submit himselfe to the angry humour and disposition of the Emperour, was not the meanes to bring quiet at his hands, with like courage and countenance to answer his, tolde him that the Queene his mistresse, was as great a pynce as any was in Challenborne, equall to him that thought himselfe the greatest, well able to defend her selfe against his malice who hee would, and wanted not meanes to offend any that either he had, or should have cause to be enemy unto, (quoth he) How sayest thou to the french king, and the king of Spaine? Harry (quoth the ambassadoe) I holde the Queene my mistresse, and the great lady of christian world. Then what sayest thou (quoth he) to the Emperour of Germany? Harry tolde the greatness of the Queene his mistresse (quoth the ambassadoe) as the King her father had (that long since) the Emperour in his pay, in his warres against France. Harry tolde that a mistresse mistlike the Emperour yet so much more, as that he would be the ambassadoe, that were he not an ambassadoe, he would chuse to be him out of the doores. Whereunto he answered that he might doe his will, for he was now fast within his countrey; but he had a mistresse who (he tolde not) would be revenged of any injury that should be done unto him. Whereupon the Emperour in great rancour had him gett home. And he with no more reverence then surely required, saluted the Emperour, and went his way.

All this notwithstanding, the ambassadoe was not much sooner out of the chamber, and the Emperour's choller soon was cooled, but he delivered to his countrell that stood about him many commendations in the favour of the ambassadoe, for that he would not indure one ill word to be spoken against his mistresse, and that hee himselfe would be ready to have such a revenged.

The ambassadoe had not bene much more then one houre in his lodging; but the Emperour being angry (as it seemeth) by the extraordinary behavioe of the ambassadoe, (for he wanted not wit to know) that he had found what was the Emperour's case, sent his principall Secretary unto him, to tell him, that not withstanding what had past, yet for the great love that he bare to the Queene his mistresse, he should be ready to be called againe to Court; and have a resolution of all the matters in question; and this Secretary was now further contented to depart, and tolde to the ambassadoe that the Emperour would not refuse to send a great noble man with him, in ambassage to the Queene his mistresse, whom sure he yet at any time sent out of his countrey; and that he determined to send to the Queene a present worth three thousand pounds, and to give him himselfe at his departure, with a gift that should be worth a thousand pounds; and tolde him also that the King the Emperour would send a great noble man with him, to conferre with him of certaine matters done him by Shalloe the chanceller, and his ministres.

And so the day following he sent Bodan Belskoy the chiefe countreller he had, as a man most in credit with him; this man examined all matters wherewith the ambassadoe had found himselfe grieved, and supplied him with what he wanted, and righted him in all things wherewith he had bene wronged.

The long after the returns of this noble man, the Emperour caused to be set downe in his countrey a new and much larger allowance of diet for the ambassadoe then he had had before, and shortly after sent the same to the ambassadoe by his principall Secretary Sauio Frolo. This was the first that the ambassadoe when others sought to have it lessened; but the Emperour would not be any way moved.

The scroule of the new diet was this:

- One bushell of fine meale for three days.
- One bushell of wheat or wheat for a day and a halfe.
- Two fine geese for one day.
- Two new hanes for the day.
- Seven sheepe for a day.
- One ope for three dayes.
- One hie of pike for a day.
- Seventie egges for a day.
- Seven pound of butter.
- Seventy peny white loaves of the day.
- Two new peny loaves of bread.
- One becher of gallon of vinegar.
- Two heathers of salt caribys.
- One pecke of onions.
- Ten pound of salt.
- One aleine, or five peny worth of waxe candell.
- Two almes of tallowe candle.
- One fourth part of a becher of cherie mead.
- As much of Mallynoud mead.
- Half a pecker of burnt beere.

One beater of goldenne called Obami.
 One beater of pepper.
 One beater of nutmeg.
 One beater of cloves.
 One beater of mace.
 One beater of mace.
 One beater of mace.
 One beater of mace.

One beater of nutmeg.
 One beater of nutmeg.
 One beater of nutmeg.
 One beater of nutmeg.

How to be begun in such a manner his majesty is authorized to send her Majesty's ambassador as he sees fit to the Emperor, increasing him that his majesty, and her Majesty's English physician, may see to the point of the religion in the Emperor's which the ambassador is to be done accordingly, and send them to the Emperor's court to work in the same, as he shall see them (with much good allowance) to be published here before in any of his council, and many others of his nobility, and to require the Emperor's ambassador to send him such a one as he requires, himselfe would then go into England, and carry his creature with him, and marry one of them there.

Here you must understand that the year before this embassage, he had sent to her Majesty by his ambassador to have had the lady Mary Hastings in marriage, which he did by means of her inability of body, by occasion of much sickness, and therefore was not great liking either of her selfe or friends, and both, took no place.

The ambassador was now to have gotten into the Emperor's favor, and his affection to give to England, as these great controllers that were the ambassadors great enemies before, were now desirous of some publique conference at his hands for other advantage to the Emperor, so that they now say more to respect themselves than the Emperor, and he for as long before this, the Emperor for abusing the ambassador had (as he is his former name) beaten Shalhan the chancellor very grievously, and had sent him word, that he would not have any of his race since.

How to please the ambassador was then thought, and the Emperor's favor was to be implied himselfe in all he might, not only for the space by dispatch of the negotiation he had in hand, but he was also by all the good reasons he might, further to bestow his country and revenues, and so not long after, because at the Emperor's hands, not only all these things he had in commendation in treat for by his instructions, but also some other of good and great importance, for the benefit of the merchants.

Private futes obtained of the Emperor by the ambassador.

Case for Richard Francis an Englishman and his company to the Emperor, his wife and children to the home (now England), and to bring with them all such goods as he had gotten there.

He obtained like leave for Richard Blount an Englishman one of the Emperor's surgeons.

He also got leave for Jane Ricards the widow of Doctor Bompsich a Dutch man, and physician to the Emperor, who for treason practised with the king of Pole against the said Emperor, was rolled to death at the step of Mexico, in the year 1537.

These following he obtained for the behoofe of the merchants,

He got leave for the merchants, to receive recompense for certain goods taken from them by factors by robbery upon the Volga.

He obtained like leave, the repayments of five hundred marks, which was paid for ten years before his going into Russia (such the Emperor's receipt) for a rent of a house that they had at Vollogda.

He also got granted for them, the repayments of fifteen hundred marks, which had been repaid of them the three last years before his coming thither.

Sir Fero
 The year
 much a be all the ch
 better, w destruction
 the shone
 the an
 that of De here, or the
 all the p Daily men points per all the b matter, not containing there was the same
 with the
 of himselfe,
 shall the
 of himselfe
 here, so the would thin
 as a great was assigne that great was in the Emper
 government,
 called agai
 need himse
 have his dis
 in a man and a booc Emperor to have his lat
 made by the
 of they, we liced him, as he had not Emperor, w lude to carry the Emperor Emperor in when a way purpose) that there was a do, brother to the ambass
 self, but his often into a present of
 there was kin
 and brother
 saw; not frie
 him word the biggates too

He got also for them, other for the repayment of an olde and desperate debt of three thousand marks, a debt so desperate, as haue peeres left out of their accounts, and by the opinion of them all, notwithstanding he be worth nothing, for too much offending the Emperour, by impeaching his other business, which was thought as least aspertwise sufficient, and was therefore left out of his instruction, and hee spent it, as hee pleased, in his owne seruice, and in the service of his friends.

He obtained that all strangers shoulde not be admitted any more into Russia, and that the passage shoulde be to all the Emperours shoppen goods and commodities, from the Ward house to the state of the Emperour, as hee pleased, and to the English nation.

Lady of a great value he had so no the most precious, without motion either of himselfe here, or they against there, or any other for them, hee obtained of the Emperour, the abatement of all such customs which they had long before paid, and agreed still to continue, which customs, the Dutch men and other great being remoued, as now it was agreed, amounted to two thousand pounds yearly.

All these were granted some alittle while before his coming from Musco, the olde pynleige which he had taken, signed and sealed, and was to be deliuered to the ambassador at his next coming to court, before he had, the Emperour fell sick of a fever, and so died.

After his death, the case was wonderfully altered with the ambassador; for whereas both in his owne country, and in all mens opinion els, he was in great respect to haue gotten a great share with the Emperour, when hee was to be sent to her Majesty, and the particular liking he had of himselfe, he was sell into the hands of his great enemies, Mikha Romanauich and Andre Shalkan the chanceller, who after the death of the Emperour, took the speciall government by appointment, and so presently caused the ambassador to be shut up a close prisoner in his owne house, for the space of nine weeks, and was so straitly guarded, and hard used by those that were about him, as hee daily suspected some further mischief to haue followed: for in this time there grew a great typhus in Musco of high feuer, which cost many perils, to which, considering that his enemies were, somewhat amazed the ambassador, but yet afterwards the matter fell out against the great counsellor Rodan Belkoy, whom it was before to be a speciall man in the olde Emperours favour, who was so notwithstanding so outrageously assaulted, as that he was forced to flee the Emperours chamber for his lastette, and was afterwards sent away to Casan, a place he had in government, three hundred miles from Musco, where hee hath remained ever since, and neuer as yet called againe to court, at which time the ambassador expected some such like measure, and prepared himselfe as well as hee could, for his defence: yet happily after this, was sent for to court, to haue his dispatch, and to take his leave of the Emperour, which being conducted (not after the honourable manner) and brought to the counsell chamber, came to him onely Shalkan the chanceller and a brother of his, who told him more adoe, tolde him for the summe of his dispatch, that this Emperour would not treat of further amitie with the Queene his mistress, then such as was betwixt his late father and hee, before his departing thither: and would not heare any reply to be made by the ambassador, but presently caused both himselfe and all his company to be disarmed of their weapons, and go to wards the Emperour. In which passing there were such outrages offer-red him, as had he not used more patience, then his disposition afforded him, on the occasion required he had not in likelihood escaped with life, but yet at length was brought to the presence of the Emperour, who said nothing to him, but what the chanceller had already done, but offered him a letter to carry to her Majesty, which the ambassador (for that he knew it contained nothing that shoulde concerne his ambassage) refused till he saw his daughter grow too great: neither would the Emperour suffer the ambassador to reply ought, nor well hee could, by the way hee had notice of purpose taken a way his unequity, being yet unwilling (as it seemed, and suspecting the ambassadors purpose) that the Emperour and others shoulde know how dishonourably hee had bene handled: for there was at that time, in that presence a noble young gentleman, and Dennis Phedaruich Gordino, brother to the Emperour that now is, who yet after the death of the Emperour did also pay the ambassador most honourably, and would very willingly haue done him much more kindness, but his authority was not yet, till the coronation of the Emperour: but notwithstanding that after this hee was long before his departure, and accompanied by many honorable gentlemen with a presence of two faire pieces of cloth of golde, and a cypher of very good sables: and desired that as there was kinneship and brotherhood betwixt the Emperour and her Majesty, so there might be love and brotherhood betwixt him and the ambassador. And being from this man, there was not so many said, nor friendship left for the ambassador in Muscouia, for the chanceller Shalkan had no more faith, nor that the English Emperour was dead: he had now nothing offered him but dangers and disgraces too many, and a hasty dispatch from the Musco, that hee might not tarry the coronation of the new Emperour: offences many in his preparation for his long journey, overly one meane gentleman appointed to accompany him to the sea side, expecting daily in his passage some sudden treuagen to be done vpon him: for so he understood it was thynked before his coming from the Mosco, and therefore with great caution provided by all the meanes he might, by himselfe and seruants for his defence (for now was his danger knowne such, as the King of Muscovie had alowgether leaue him, although he commanded them in her Spawles name to accompany him) that if any such thing should happen to be offered him, as many of them as he could that should offer to execute it, should die with him for company, which being perceived (was thought) did make his passage the safer: So afterwards being vpon a voyage many adventures by the way, at length he recovered S. Nicholas, where remembering his vow, as well as both of the olde Emperour; and his ill vylage since then at the Mosco, his being there to take a hard longer for the summer of his vylage, contenting nothing of that he came for, and the poore and vylage of the present time (in the name of the Emperour) in respect of that that was meant him by the olde Emperour, knowing all these to be done in vylage of her Spawles: and himselfe, determined not to be the charge of some part of them in such sort as he could, and so providing as he might to prevent his danger, in getting to his shippe, furnishing and placing his men so as were any assault that should be offered him, after he had hidden face well in the vncourteous gentlemen that brought him thither, by the order of some of the boldest and discreetest men he had, he sent to be deliuered him, or left at his lodging, his matters weak letter, and himselfe present, and so afterwards happily (though hardly) recovered his shippe in safetie, although presently afterwards there was great buelie to lie after him, so for to vertine the same againe, but failed of theyr purpose. So came the ambassadour from S. Nicholas the twelth day of August, and arriued at Grauesend the twelth of September following, and attended her Spawles at the court at Orelands, where, after having left her Spawles hands, and deliuered some part of the successe of his ambassage, he presented her an Elk of Loffie, the Best beere of the country, and also a hare of Raine beere, Bucke & Doe, both bearing very huge homes: then in her Spawles presence drew a shew of a man vpon it, after the manner of the Samnians, a people that inhabit in the Northward from Russia, and were that yere come ouer the sea in the winter season vpon the ice, in their sleds, vpon men with these come into Russia, where the ambassadour brought of them summe, whereof he brought nine into Kent.

A letter of M. Henrie Lane to the worshipfull M. William Sanderfon, containing a briefe discourse of that which passed in the Northeast discoverye for the space of three and thirtie yeeres.

After Sanderfon, as you lately requested mee, so haue I sought, and though I cannot finde things that heretofore I kept in writing, and lent out to others, yet perusing at London copies of mine olde letters to content one that meant to pleasure many, I haue briefly and as truly as I may, drawn out a following: The which being may be pleased at your leisure, or as pleaseth him, shall take the paines.

If it be honourable attempte to discover by sea Northward and North-west named for Cathay, being chiefly procured by knowledge from King Edward the sixt, and other his nobilitie, by and at the cost and sute of S. Sebastian Cabota, then come for his discoveries with Sir Andrew Iudde, Sir George Barnes, Sir William Garret, S. Anthonic Hulle, and a compaigne of merchants, was in the last yere of his Spawles reigne 1553. The general charge thereof was committed to one Sir Hugh Willoughbie knight, a goodly Gentleman accompanied with sufficient number of Pilots, Spawles, Merchants and Mariners, hauing three shippes well furnished to wit, The Bona Sperança, The Edward Bonadventure, and The Confidentia. The Edward Bonadventure, Richard Chancellor being Pilot, and Steuens Burrough Spawler, hauing discovered Ward house vpon the coast of Finmarke, by storme of fogge departed from the rest, to vnder the bay of S. Nicholas now the chiefe port for Russia, there wintered in safetie, and had apd of people at a vylage called Newnox.

The other two shippes attempting further Northwards (as appeared by pamphlets founde after written by Sir Hugh Willoughbie) was in September encountered with such extreme colde, that they were backe to seeke a wintering place: and missing the saide baye fell vpon a best coast in Lappia, entering into a River immediately frozen by, since discovered, named Arzina, Anno 1553. ap. William Burrough was then pilot and with his brother in this first voyage.

Reca, distant they never... Anno 1554 as heretofore... Anno 1557... Anno 1558... Anno 1559... Anno 1560... Anno 1561... Anno 1562... Anno 1563... Anno 1564... Anno 1565... Anno 1566... Anno 1567... Anno 1568... Anno 1569... Anno 1570... Anno 1571... Anno 1572... Anno 1573... Anno 1574... Anno 1575... Anno 1576... Anno 1577... Anno 1578... Anno 1579... Anno 1580... Anno 1581... Anno 1582... Anno 1583... Anno 1584... Anno 1585... Anno 1586... Anno 1587... Anno 1588... Anno 1589... Anno 1590... Anno 1591... Anno 1592... Anno 1593... Anno 1594... Anno 1595... Anno 1596... Anno 1597... Anno 1598... Anno 1599... Anno 1600... Anno 1601... Anno 1602... Anno 1603... Anno 1604... Anno 1605... Anno 1606... Anno 1607... Anno 1608... Anno 1609... Anno 1610... Anno 1611... Anno 1612... Anno 1613... Anno 1614... Anno 1615... Anno 1616... Anno 1617... Anno 1618... Anno 1619... Anno 1620... Anno 1621... Anno 1622... Anno 1623... Anno 1624... Anno 1625... Anno 1626... Anno 1627... Anno 1628... Anno 1629... Anno 1630... Anno 1631... Anno 1632... Anno 1633... Anno 1634... Anno 1635... Anno 1636... Anno 1637... Anno 1638... Anno 1639... Anno 1640... Anno 1641... Anno 1642... Anno 1643... Anno 1644... Anno 1645... Anno 1646... Anno 1647... Anno 1648... Anno 1649... Anno 1650... Anno 1651... Anno 1652... Anno 1653... Anno 1654... Anno 1655... Anno 1656... Anno 1657... Anno 1658... Anno 1659... Anno 1660... Anno 1661... Anno 1662... Anno 1663... Anno 1664... Anno 1665... Anno 1666... Anno 1667... Anno 1668... Anno 1669... Anno 1670... Anno 1671... Anno 1672... Anno 1673... Anno 1674... Anno 1675... Anno 1676... Anno 1677... Anno 1678... Anno 1679... Anno 1680... Anno 1681... Anno 1682... Anno 1683... Anno 1684... Anno 1685... Anno 1686... Anno 1687... Anno 1688... Anno 1689... Anno 1690... Anno 1691... Anno 1692... Anno 1693... Anno 1694... Anno 1695... Anno 1696... Anno 1697... Anno 1698... Anno 1699... Anno 1700... Anno 1701... Anno 1702... Anno 1703... Anno 1704... Anno 1705... Anno 1706... Anno 1707... Anno 1708... Anno 1709... Anno 1710... Anno 1711... Anno 1712... Anno 1713... Anno 1714... Anno 1715... Anno 1716... Anno 1717... Anno 1718... Anno 1719... Anno 1720... Anno 1721... Anno 1722... Anno 1723... Anno 1724... Anno 1725... Anno 1726... Anno 1727... Anno 1728... Anno 1729... Anno 1730... Anno 1731... Anno 1732... Anno 1733... Anno 1734... Anno 1735... Anno 1736... Anno 1737... Anno 1738... Anno 1739... Anno 1740... Anno 1741... Anno 1742... Anno 1743... Anno 1744... Anno 1745... Anno 1746... Anno 1747... Anno 1748... Anno 1749... Anno 1750... Anno 1751... Anno 1752... Anno 1753... Anno 1754... Anno 1755... Anno 1756... Anno 1757... Anno 1758... Anno 1759... Anno 1760... Anno 1761... Anno 1762... Anno 1763... Anno 1764... Anno 1765... Anno 1766... Anno 1767... Anno 1768... Anno 1769... Anno 1770... Anno 1771... Anno 1772... Anno 1773... Anno 1774... Anno 1775... Anno 1776... Anno 1777... Anno 1778... Anno 1779... Anno 1780... Anno 1781... Anno 1782... Anno 1783... Anno 1784... Anno 1785... Anno 1786... Anno 1787... Anno 1788... Anno 1789... Anno 1790... Anno 1791... Anno 1792... Anno 1793... Anno 1794... Anno 1795... Anno 1796... Anno 1797... Anno 1798... Anno 1799... Anno 1800... Anno 1801... Anno 1802... Anno 1803... Anno 1804... Anno 1805... Anno 1806... Anno 1807... Anno 1808... Anno 1809... Anno 1810... Anno 1811... Anno 1812... Anno 1813... Anno 1814... Anno 1815... Anno 1816... Anno 1817... Anno 1818... Anno 1819... Anno 1820... Anno 1821... Anno 1822... Anno 1823... Anno 1824... Anno 1825... Anno 1826... Anno 1827... Anno 1828... Anno 1829... Anno 1830... Anno 1831... Anno 1832... Anno 1833... Anno 1834... Anno 1835... Anno 1836... Anno 1837... Anno 1838... Anno 1839... Anno 1840... Anno 1841... Anno 1842... Anno 1843... Anno 1844... Anno 1845... Anno 1846... Anno 1847... Anno 1848... Anno 1849... Anno 1850... Anno 1851... Anno 1852... Anno 1853... Anno 1854... Anno 1855... Anno 1856... Anno 1857... Anno 1858... Anno 1859... Anno 1860... Anno 1861... Anno 1862... Anno 1863... Anno 1864... Anno 1865... Anno 1866... Anno 1867... Anno 1868... Anno 1869... Anno 1870... Anno 1871... Anno 1872... Anno 1873... Anno 1874... Anno 1875... Anno 1876... Anno 1877... Anno 1878... Anno 1879... Anno 1880... Anno 1881... Anno 1882... Anno 1883... Anno 1884... Anno 1885... Anno 1886... Anno 1887... Anno 1888... Anno 1889... Anno 1890... Anno 1891... Anno 1892... Anno 1893... Anno 1894... Anno 1895... Anno 1896... Anno 1897... Anno 1898... Anno 1899... Anno 1900... Anno 1901... Anno 1902... Anno 1903... Anno 1904... Anno 1905... Anno 1906... Anno 1907... Anno 1908... Anno 1909... Anno 1910... Anno 1911... Anno 1912... Anno 1913... Anno 1914... Anno 1915... Anno 1916... Anno 1917... Anno 1918... Anno 1919... Anno 1920... Anno 1921... Anno 1922... Anno 1923... Anno 1924... Anno 1925... Anno 1926... Anno 1927... Anno 1928... Anno 1929... Anno 1930... Anno 1931... Anno 1932... Anno 1933... Anno 1934... Anno 1935... Anno 1936... Anno 1937... Anno 1938... Anno 1939... Anno 1940... Anno 1941... Anno 1942... Anno 1943... Anno 1944... Anno 1945... Anno 1946... Anno 1947... Anno 1948... Anno 1949... Anno 1950... Anno 1951... Anno 1952... Anno 1953... Anno 1954... Anno 1955... Anno 1956... Anno 1957... Anno 1958... Anno 1959... Anno 1960... Anno 1961... Anno 1962... Anno 1963... Anno 1964... Anno 1965... Anno 1966... Anno 1967... Anno 1968... Anno 1969... Anno 1970... Anno 1971... Anno 1972... Anno 1973... Anno 1974... Anno 1975... Anno 1976... Anno 1977... Anno 1978... Anno 1979... Anno 1980... Anno 1981... Anno 1982... Anno 1983... Anno 1984... Anno 1985... Anno 1986... Anno 1987... Anno 1988... Anno 1989... Anno 1990... Anno 1991... Anno 1992... Anno 1993... Anno 1994... Anno 1995... Anno 1996... Anno 1997... Anno 1998... Anno 1999... Anno 2000... Anno 2001... Anno 2002... Anno 2003... Anno 2004... Anno 2005... Anno 2006... Anno 2007... Anno 2008... Anno 2009... Anno 2010... Anno 2011... Anno 2012... Anno 2013... Anno 2014... Anno 2015... Anno 2016... Anno 2017... Anno 2018... Anno 2019... Anno 2020... Anno 2021... Anno 2022... Anno 2023... Anno 2024... Anno 2025... Anno 2026... Anno 2027... Anno 2028... Anno 2029... Anno 2030... Anno 2031... Anno 2032... Anno 2033... Anno 2034... Anno 2035... Anno 2036... Anno 2037... Anno 2038... Anno 2039... Anno 2040... Anno 2041... Anno 2042... Anno 2043... Anno 2044... Anno 2045... Anno 2046... Anno 2047... Anno 2048... Anno 2049... Anno 2050... Anno 2051... Anno 2052... Anno 2053... Anno 2054... Anno 2055... Anno 2056... Anno 2057... Anno 2058... Anno 2059... Anno 2060... Anno 2061... Anno 2062... Anno 2063... Anno 2064... Anno 2065... Anno 2066... Anno 2067... Anno 2068... Anno 2069... Anno 2070... Anno 2071... Anno 2072... Anno 2073... Anno 2074... Anno 2075... Anno 2076... Anno 2077... Anno 2078... Anno 2079... Anno 2080... Anno 2081... Anno 2082... Anno 2083... Anno 2084... Anno 2085... Anno 2086... Anno 2087... Anno 2088... Anno 2089... Anno 2090... Anno 2091... Anno 2092... Anno 2093... Anno 2094... Anno 2095... Anno 2096... Anno 2097... Anno 2098... Anno 2099... Anno 2100...

outly one meant passage some coming from
by himselfe and over haren did also company him) that to that should offer right) did make his way, at length he Emperour; and he summe of his person's name Emperour, know
now to be dischar
to prevent his dan
assault that should brought him to delivered him as he happily (though great trouble
The name of the the twelfth
there; after having stage, he presented are, Suche & Do man upon it after Asia, and were cha men with these bea brought nine William
ich

named for Cathay, nobilitie, by and Mr Andrew Iudee,
of merchans, was
was committed to sufficent number afforded to wit, The d Bonadventure, discovered Ward
and the bay of
of people at a pamphlets found such experience
fell upon a delict
o, named Arzina, Reca,

Reca, distant East from a Russian Monastery of Donkeys called Pechingham, from whence they never returned, but all in the number of 20. persons perished, which was for want of expense, and want of victuals, and houses. These were found with the Shippes the next Summer Anno 1554. by Ruffe's Ambassadors, and in Anno 1555. the place sent unto by English Merchants as beere's appearance.

Anno 1554. the said Shippe Edward Bonadventure (although robbed home wards by Fleants) returned with her company to London, shipping and setting forth their entertainments and merriments of the country a coven to the cite of Mosco, from whence they brought a pinnace with them, with the bodies of great many souls, the other two shippes looked for & unknown to them were never seen.

An. 1555. The said company of Merchants for divers reasons upon a new supply, sent thither a gentle with them, to wit, the Edward Bonadventure, and others bearing the name of the King and Queene, Phillip and Marie, whose Spaietres by they letters to the said Polcovick, recommended them to the Emperour, who by letters of certaintie to wit, Richard Chancelour, George Killingworth, Henry Lane, and Arthur Edwards, after their arrivall at the Bay, and passing by Dvina to Voloda, went first by to Mosco, where upon knowledge of the said letters, they with their company had speciall entertainment, with houses and diet appointed, and shortly permitted to the Emperour's presence, they were with gentleness brought through the cite of Mosco, to the castle and palace, replenished with numbers of people, and some gunners. They entered sundrie rooms furnished in the way with sundrie greene personages, all in long garments of fustie colours, and called halberds, and bowes, as our vestments and coyes have been in England, furnished with capes, and chaires. These were found to be no countryes, but ancient Polcovicks, inhabitants, and other their merchants of credit, as the manner is, furnished thus from the wardrobe and Treasury, waiting and wearing this apparell for the time, and so to repose it.

Then coming into the presence, being a large roome flooyed with carpets, were men of more cheer, and richer shew, in number about an hundred set square, who after the said English men came in, doing reverence, they all stood by the place only sitting, and yet rising at any occasion, when our King and Queene's names were read or spoken. Then after speeches by interpretation of our men killing his hand, and bidden to dinner, were stayed in another room, and at dinner brought to them, where might be scene masse silver and gile plate, some like & as big as halber-dins, and halboobles, and entering the dining place, being the greater room, the prince was set here becom, his robe and rich cappe standing upon a pinnace by. Not farre distant, sat his Metropolitane, with divers other of his kindred, and chiefe Tartarian Captaines: none set over against him, or any, at other tables, their backs to wards him: which tables all furnished with gold and silver, there was for the Englishmen, named by the Ruffes, Ghoffi Carabelski, to wit, strangers or merchants by ship, a table in the middell of the room, where they were set direct against the prince: and then began the service, brought in by a number of his poong Lords and Gentlemen, in such rich attire, as is above specified, and still from the princes table (notwithstanding they saw furniture) they had his whole messes set over all in masse fine golde, delivered every time from him by name to them, by their severall Christian names, as they face, viz. Richard, George, Henry, Arthur. Likewise bread and sundry drincks of purified mead, made of fine white and clarified honie. At their sitting, the prince called them to his table, to receive: each one a cuppe from his hand to drinke, and took into his hand Master George Killingworths beard, which received over the table, and pleasantly delivered it the Metropolitane, who seeming to blesse it, said in Ruffe, this is Gods gift. As in deed at that time it was not only thicke, broad, & yellow colour'd, but in length sixe foot & two inches of all size. Then taking leave, being night, they were accompanied & followed with a number, carrying pots of drinke, and dishes of meat, desired to our lodging.

This were the two shippes, with the dead bodies of Sir Hugh Willoughbie, and his people, were sent unto by Master Killingworth, (which remained there in Mosco, Agent almost two yeres) and much of the goods and victuals were recovered and found.

Anno 1556. The company sent two shippes for Russia, with extraordinary masters and sailers to bring home the two shippes, which were frozen in Lappia, in the river of Arzina aforesaid. The two shippes sent this yere from England sailing from Lapland to the Bay of S. Nicholas, toke in loading with passengers, to wit, a Ruffe ambassador, named Ioseph Nepey, and some of his men shipped with Richard Chancelour in the Edward. But so it fell out that the two which came from Lappia, with all they new Masters and Mariners, never were heard of, but in foule weather, and wrought seas, after they two yeres wintering in Lapland, became, as is supposed, in search and sink, where in were drowned also divers Ruffes merchants, and servants of the ambassador.

Note.

Anno 1554.

Anno 1555.

The King and Queene's letters.

of Billings-worths beard
of a miraculous length.

Anno 1556.

A third ship the Edward afterwards, sailing on the North part of Scotland, upon a rocke was altogether lost, and Master Chancelier, with divers other, drowned. The said Russe Ambassador, hardly escaping, with other his men, mariners, and some goods saved, were sent for into Scotland, from the King, Queene, and Merchants (the messenger being M. Doctor Lawrence Hulse, and others.) And then, as in the chronicles appeareth, honourably entertained and treated at London.

This yeere also the companies furnished and sent out a pinelack, named the Serchchrist, to discover the harbours in the North coast from Norway to Wardhouse, and so to the Bay of St. Nicholas. There was in her Master and Pilot, Stephen Burrough, with his brother William, and eight other. Their discourse was beyond the Bay, as toward the Samocod, people dwelling neere the river of Ob, and found a sound of sea which an Island called Vignat, first by them put into the Card of Wapper. In that place they dyed some out of their ships pinelack, with hauled in August, by which circumstance, and lacke of store, they came backe to Russia, and wintered at Colmogro.

Anno 1557.

Boghar voyaged.

1560.

The first trade to the Narue. 1560.

Anno 1557. The companies with some good ships sent backe the said Russe Ambassador, and in companie with him, sent as an Agent, for further discourse, M. Doctor Anthony Jenkinson, who after ward anno 1558, with great favour of the Emperour of Moscovie, and his letters patentes directed to the King, and meaning to strike the Cathay by land, was by many troubles and companies of various Tartarians, encountered, and in danger: but keeping companie with merchants of Bacteria, Boghar, & Vrgeme, travelling with camels, he with his company, went to Boghar, and no further, whose entertainment of the King is to be had of Master Jenkinson, who returned anno 1559, to Moscovie. And in anno 1560. he, with Henry Lane, came home into England, which yeere was the first safe returne, without losse of ship, packe, or head straight, and burnings. And at this time was the first traffike to the Narue in Livonia, which continues with Lithuania, & all the dominions of Russia, with the market, faire, commodities, great towne & rivers, were sent unto by divers servants: the reports were taken by Henry Lane, Agent, and delivered to the companies, 1561. The trade to Ric, and Revel, of olde time hath bene long since frequented by our English nation, but this trade to the Narue was hitherto concealed from us by the Danes and Lubekers.

Anno 1561. the said Master Anthony Jenkinson went Agent into Russia, who the next yeere after, passing all the river of Volga to Astracan, and over the Caspian sea, returned in Persia, and opened the trade thither.

Also betwixt the yeeres of 1568. and 1573. sundry voyages after Master Jenkinson, were made by Thomas Alcocke, Arthur Edwards, Master Thomas Bannister, and Master Geoffrey Duckett, whose returne (if spoile neere Volga had not prevented by routing the enemies) had almost beene saved and recovered the companies (called the olde companies) great losse, charges, and damages: but the saying is true, By vnicie small things grow great, and by contention great things become small. This may be understood best by the companies. The forwardnes of some few, and enill doing of some unskillfull factors, was cause of much of the enill success.

Arthur Edwards was sent againe 1579, and died in the voyage at Astracan. About which matters, are to be remembered the voyages of Master Thomas Randolph Esquire, Ambassador, anno 1567. And late of Sir Jerome Bowes, anno 1583. both trading and treating for further discoveries, freedoms, & privileges, to be had with Imedie not. But in conclusion, for their pastes and adventures this way (as divers doe now waape other waapes) as woorthie Gentlemen sent from princes, to doe their Countrey good, I put them in your memorie, with my hearty farewell. From M. Margarets neere Dartforth in Kene.

Yours Henrie Lane.

The late ambassage of Master Giles Fletcher, Doctor of the Ciuill Law sent from her Maiestie to the Emperour of Russia, Anno 1588.

In the yeere 1588, was sent Ambassador from her Highnesse, into the Countrey of Russia, Giles Fletcher Doctor of the Ciuill Law, as well to create with the new Emperour Phedor Iuanowich, about league and amitie, in like manner as was before with his father Iuan Vasilowich, as also for the reestablishing and reducing into order the decayed trade of our English men there. And who notably standing at his first arrivall at the Mosco, founde some parties of hard intercoment, by means of certaine rumors, concerning the late nauall victorie, which was there reported Alcocke slain in Persia. Bannister died in Persia. Edwards died at Astracan.

ported to haue
cause of our conditions, and increased of, and

1 A continu
Phedor Iuanow
2 A confirm English merch necessary addi after, viz. That ticular men, b corporation, v 3 That vpr milled, as befo 4 That iust upon such as paiment, taxat 5 That the time they ha
the said Empe
fate to be tak 6 That the
are made by u 7 That the
siant in that co
as the agent sh places of the l 8 That the northern selue good. But in strany name
held as priuat 9 That if a crise, as selio tormented, til done, the wh 10 That t
of the Emper 11 That r countries, by 12 Where debt, made b stocke was in and houiser
three marks
The said
Of the Russe
1 Of ch
2 Of ch
3 Of ch
4 Of ch
5 Of ch
6 Of ch
7 Of ch
8 Of ch
9 Of ch
10 Of ch
11 Of ch
12 Of ch
13 Of ch
14 Of ch
15 Of ch
16 Of ch
17 Of ch
18 Of ch
19 Of ch
20 Of ch

ported to have fallen on the Spanish side, as also for some dislike conceived against the privileged state of our English merchants. Yet in the end obtained of the Emperour many good & equal conditions, and was courteously and honorably dismissed by him. The principall points which by treaty were granted unto him by the said Emperour, were these.

1. A continuation of league and amitie betwene her Highnesse, and the said Emperour Phœdor Iuanowich, in like manner as was before with his father Iuan Yafowlow.

2. A confirmation and reestablishment of the former privileges of the company of our English merchants, which were infringed and annulled in the principall points, with diuers necessary additions to the same, for the better ordering of their trade in those countries hereafter, viz. That the state of the priuilege granted before in the names of some priuate and particular men, be altered in that point, and the same granted by the name and stile of their incorporation, viz. To the fellowship of English merchants, for the discouerie of new trades.

3. That vpon euery furnise and light quarrell, the said priuilege be not reuoked, and annulled, as before time it hath bene.

4. That iustice shall be admittred to the said companie and their agent, without delay, vpon such as shall offer them any despite or iniurie, or shall exact or impose vpon them any payment, taxation, or imposition whatsoeuer, contrary to the freedom of the said grant.

5. That the goods and commodities of the said companie, be not forcibly taken, as before time they haue bene by the Emperours officers, or people of authoritie, either for the vse of the said Emperour or of his officers. But in case they haue need of the said commodities, the same to be taken at reasonable prices, and for ready money.

6. That the said companie be not charged heereafter with the answering of such debts as are made by any English man, nor being of the societie.

7. That the Emperours authorized people, shall not heereafter repute any English man resident in that country, to be any factor, seruant, or dealer in the said companie's affaires, but such as the agent shall inregister by name, within the offices where custome is entred in all such places of the land, where the said companie haue residencies to traffike.

8. That the names of such as shall so be inregistred, be no longer continued in record, nor themselves reputed as factors or dealers, for the said companie, then the agent shall thinke good. But in case the said agent in his discretion shall thinke meet to strike out of the register any name of such as haue bene employed in the companie's seruite, the said person to be held as priuate, and whose act in bargaining or otherwise, shall not charge the said companie.

9. That if any English man within the countrey of Russia, be suspected for any notorious crime, as felony, treason, &c. the same be not straight waies set vpon the Pudkey, nor otherwise tormented, till such time as he shall be conuicted by plaine and euident proofes: which being done, the whole proceeding to be sent ouer to the Queene of England.

10. That the said priuilege, with the additions, shall be published in all townes and parts of the Emperours dominions, where the said companie haue traffike.

11. That the said companie shall be permitted to vse a sole trade through the Emperours countries, by the riuier Volga, into Media, Persia, Bogharia, and the other the East countries.

12. Whereas there was claimed of the said companie, the summe of 23553. markes of debt, made by certaine of their factors for the said companie, for payment whereof, their whole stocke was in danger of arrest, by publike authoritie: Further also 2140. rubbles for custome and house-rent, he obtained a rebatement of seuentene thousand, eleuen hundred, fiftie and three markes of the said debt.

The said Ambassado, Master Giles Fletcher, as I understand hath written a booke, intituled, Of the Russe Common wealth, containing:

First, A Cosmographical description of the countrey, which hath these chapters.

1. Of the length and breadth of the countrey of Russia, with the names of the shires.
2. Of the soile and climat.
3. Of the native commodities of the countrey.

Secondly, a description of their pollicie, contained in these Chapters, viz.

1. Of the constitution or state of the Russe Common wealth.
2. Of their Parliaments, and manner of holding them.
3. Of the Russe Nobilitie, and means, whereby it is kept in an vnder proportion, agreeable to that state.
4. Of the manner of gouerning their prouinces or shires.

- 6 Of the Emperours private counsell, and their revenues, with the practice for the increase of them.
  - 7 Of the Russe commodities, and their condition.
  - 8 Of their publike iustice, and maner of proceeding therein.
  - 9 Of the Emperours forces for his warres, with the chiefe officers, & their salary or pay.
  - 10 Of their maner of mustering, arming, and provision for victuall.
  - 11 Of their ordering, marching, charging, and their martiall discipline.
  - 12 Of their colonies, and policie in maintaining their purchases by conquest.
  - 13 Of their borderers, with whom they have most to do in warre and peace.
  - 14 Of their church offices, and degrees.
  - 15 Of their liturgie, or forme of church seruice.
  - 16 Of their maner of administering the Sacraments.
  - 17 Of the doctrine of the Russe church.
  - 18 Of the maner of solemnizing their marriages.
  - 19 Of the other ceremonies of the Russe church.
- Thirdly the Oeconomie or private behavior of the Russe, containing these chapters.*
- 20 Of the Emperours household officers, and order of his house.
  - 21 Of the private behavior and maner of the Russe people.

The booke it selfe beinge not good, for diuers considerations, to make publike at this time.

A testimony of the Northeastern discouerie, made by the English, and of the profit that may arise by pursuing the same: taken out of the second volume of navigations, and voyages, fol. 17. of the notable Cosmographer M. Iohn Baptista Ramusius, Secretarie to the state of Venice: Written in Italian, in the yeere, 1557.

Dalle parti poi di sotto la nostra Tramontana, che chiascono scrittori & Cosmographi di questi & de passati tempi fin hora vi ha messo & mette mare congelato, & che la terra corra continuamente fino a 90. gradi verso il Polo: sopra questo mapamondo all'incontro si vede che la terra vi solamente un poco sopra la Noruega & Suetia, & volando corre poi Greco & Levante nel paese della Mosconia & Rossia, & va diritto al Caspio. Et che cio sia la verita, le navigationi che hanno fatte gli Inglesi con le loro navi, volendo andare a scoprire il Caspio al tempo del Re Odoardo Sesto d'Inghilterra, questi anni passati, ne possono far vera testimonianza: perche nel mezzo del loro viaggio, capitate per fortuna a liti di Mosconia, dove trovarono alhora regnare Giouanni Vasiluich Imperatore, della Rossia & gran Duca di Mosconia, il quale con molto piacere & meraviglia vedendogli, fece grandissime carezze, hanno trovato quel mare essere navigabile, & non agghiacciato. La qual navigatione (ancor che con l'esito fin hora non sia bene intesa) se col spesse frequentarla & col lungo uso & cognitione di que mari si continuerà, e per fare grandissima navigatione & riuolgimento nelle cose di questa nostra parte del mondo.

of The same in English.

Moreouer (having before spoken of diuers particularities, in an excellent mappe of Paulus Venetus) on that part lieth to our North pole, where euery writer & Cosmographer of these, and of former times hitherto, haue, and doe place the frozen sea, and that the land stretcheth continually to 90. degrees towards the pole: contrariwise, in this mappe is to be seene, that the land extendeth only a little aboue Norway and Suechland, and then turning it selfe, extendeth at certwars towards the Southeast, and by East, vnto the country of Moscouie and Russia, and stretcheth directly vnto Cathay. And that this is true, the navigatione which the English men haue of late made, intending to discouer Cathay, in the time of Edward the first king of England, are very sufficient witnesses. For in the mids of their voyage, lighting by chance vpon the coast of Moscouie (where they found then reigning Iohn Vasiluich Emperour of Russia, and great duke of Moscouie, who after he had to his great delight, and admiration, seene the English men, enterteyned them with exceeding great courtesies) found this sea to be navigable, and not frozen. This navigation to Cathay, although it be not as yet thoroughly knowen, yet if with often frequenting the same, and by long use and knowledge of those seas, it be continued, it is like to make a wonderfull change and riuolution in the state of this our part of the world.

Forren testi
The testim
of Eit

The most fam great occasio
discouery hath the
che last elcuation,
of the city of Mosc concerning of the fl I though it may bu
hath bene publi

Another te
the same

navigationem B uehunt argenti v res merces, ad vi
gula, pericelide aeris pretiofas a

DU least all, Duards, the nered the Roeth
the traffike of th
the Ocean sea,
the the coast o
coast of Gronel
conflict with th
small mercerie gainers, purfes
all kinde of pe

The testimonie of Gerardus Mercator, in his last large mappe of Europe, touching the notable discoveries of the English, made of Moscouie by the Northeast.

Magnam occasionem certamque rationem emendandæ Europæ nobis attulit celeberrima Anglorum per Cronium mare navigatio: quæ littora Septentrionalia Finlappiæ Moscouiæque iuxta cæli situm, mundi que plagas digesta habet. Exacta etiam vrbis Moscuæ latitudo ab Anglis obseruata, interiorum Regionum emendatiùs describendarum infallibilem legem præscripsit: Quibus oblati ad miniculis pulcherrimis, iniquum putauit tabulam hanc castigatiorem non reddere.

¶ The same in English.

The most famous navigation of the English men by the Northeast sea, hath offered unto me a great occasion, and certaine direction for the reformation of the mappe of Europe: which discoverie hath the Northeast parts of Finmarke, Lapland, and Moscouie, laid out according to the iust situation, and the quarters of the world. And further, the true obseruation of the latitude of the city of Mosco, made by the foresaid Englishmen, hath yeelded me an infallible rule, for the correcting of the situation of the inland countreies: which notable helps being ministered vnto me, I thought it my duty to exhibit to the world this mappe, more exact and perfect, then hitherto it hath bene published.

Another testimonie of Ioannes Metellus Sequanus, concerning the same navigation, and discoverie, in his preface prefixed before

Olorius de rebus gestis Emanuelis Regis Portugalliæ, written about the yeere, 1574.

Ne omnis, vnus Hispanis, Oceani maris gloria totaque concederetur, Britannii Septentriones noua in Moscouiam navigatione, ab hinc annis viginti plus minus illustrarunt. Nam bellis Sueticiis à Moscouitarum, Naruæque Liouoniæ exclusi commercio, iter ad illos Oceano, hinc Noruegiæ, Finmarchiæ, Lappiæ, Scricfinniæ, Biarmixque: illinc Groenlandiæ littora præteruerti, vltra Septuagesimum latitudinis Aquilonaris gradum sibi patefaciunt. Quam navigationem Belgæ postea, non sine tamen cum ipsidem Britannis velitatione, sunt secuti. Eò vehunt argenti veteris fragmenta, lineæque vestes propè detritas, omnisque generis minutiores merces, ad vsum, cultumque corporis hominum vtriusque sexus, veluti lineæ & byssea cingula, periscelides, crumenas, cultros, & id genus sexcenta. A Moschis autem pelles omnis generis pretiosas adferunt, & Salmones salitos, fumoque duratos.

¶ The same in English.

But least all, and the whole glorie of discovering the Ocean sea, should be ascribed to the Spaniards, the English men about twenty yeeres past, by a new navigation into Moscouie, discovered the Northeast parts. For they by reason of the warres of Swechland, being hindered from the traffike of the Moscouites, and of the Narue in Liland, opened a passage for themselves by the Ocean sea, beyond the Northeast latitude of 70, degrees: hauing in the way course on the one side the coasts of Norway, Finmarke, Lapland, Scrickine, and Biarmia: On the other side the coast of Groneland. Which voyage the Hollanders afterward entred into, but not without some conflict with the English. They carry thither olde place, and course linnen cloth, and all kinde of small mercerie wares, seruing for the apparelling of men and women, as linnen, and silke girdles, garters, puttes, kinnies, and many such like things. And they bring away from the Moscouites, all kinde of pretious fures, and Salmones salted, and dried in the smoke.

The end of the second part.

The testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

A new occasion of certifying the testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

The same in English.

The testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

Another testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

The testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

The same in English.

The testimony of Charles Martel in his last will and testament touching the notable conquest of the West Indies.

The end of the second part.

THE TH principal made so

The voye

land to farre 1200
This land mu
selves to be the fir land to the which upon it is manife bus of Americas
we there be man
rather to augmen
home, and declar
upon the contrar another, he prep
to live in quietne foye it is to be p
by Francis Lo Wierchy it ma
aros. But beca
to and used the
This I ad
let most of his friends, to imbat
ted by Gutyn
The causes wh
The comm
der from a str

THE THIRD AND LAST PART OF THE principall Navigations and Discoueries of the English nation made to the West, Northwest, and Southwest parts of the world, with the Letters, Priuileges, Discourses, Obseruations, and other necessarie thinges concerning the same.

The voyage of Madoc the sonne of Owen Guyneth Prince of Northwales, to the West Indies, in the yeere 1170: taken out of the historie of Wales, lately published by M. David Powel Doctor of Divinitie.

For the death of Owen Gwyneth, his sonnes fell at debate who should inherit after him: for the eldest sonne boine in matrimony, Edward of Iorwerth Drwydion, was counted on to governe, because of the maine vpon his face: and Powel that tooke vpon him all the rule was a base sounr, begotten vpon an Irish woman.
 Therefore Dauit gathered all the power he could, and came against Powel, and fighting with him slew him, & afterwards intored quietly the whole land of North-wales, until his brother Iorwerth's sonne came to age.
 Madoc another of Owen Gwyneth his sonnes left the land in contention betwixt his brethren, & prepared certaine ships, with men and munition, and sought adventures by seas sailing West, and leauing the coast of Ire-Madoc the sonne of Owen Gwyneth.

land so farre North, that he came to a land vnknooen, where he saw many strange things.

This land must needs be some part of that countrey of which the Spanyards affirme themselves to be the first finders since Hannoes time. For by reason, and order of Cosmographie, this land to the which Madoc came, must needs be some part of Noua Hispania, or Florida. Where-vpon it is manifest that this countrey was long before by Britaines discovered, as by Columbus of Americus Vesputius led any Spanyards thither. Of the voyage and returne of this Ma-doc there be many fables fained, as the common people do vse in distance of place & length of time rather to augment then to diminish, but sure it is that there he was. And after he had returned home, and declared the pleasant and fruitfull countreyes that he had seene without inhabitants, and vpon the contrary part, for what barren wilde ground his brethren and neyghes did meet her one another, he prepared a number of shippes, & got with him such men and women as were desirous to line in quietnesse, and taking leave of his friends,ooke his iourney thitherward againe. Therefore it is to be presupposed, that he & his people inhabited part of those countreyes: for it appeareth by Francis Lopez de Gomara, that in Acuzamil and other places the people honored the crosse.
 Whereby it may be gathered that Christians had bene there before the coming of the Spanyards. But because this people were not many, they followed the maners of the land they came into, and vsed the language they found there.

Wm. Lloyd.

Gomara lib. 2.
 cap. 16.

This Madoc arriving in that Western countrey, vnto the which he came in the yeere 1170, left most of his people there, and returning backe for more of his owne nation, acquaintance and friends, to inhabit that sayde and large countrey, went thither againe with ten sailes, as I finde noted by Owen Owen. I am of opinion that the land wherunto he came, was some part of Mexico.
 The causes which make me to thinke so be these,

Ed. Petrus
 abbat.

1 The common report of the inhabitants of that countrey, which affirme that they rulers descended from a strange nation that came thither from a farre countrey. Which thing is confessed by Mutezuma king of that country, in an oration made for quieting of his people, at his submission to the king of Castile, Hernando Cortes being then present, which is laid downe in the Spanish chronicles of the conquest of the West Indies.

Don. Ingram,
Sir. Humber Giberts his courtier.

The British voyages, and names of places used in that countrey, even to this day, doe argue the same, as when they talke together, they use this word Gwrand which is, Dearthen of India, Also they have a certaine bird with a white head, which they call Pengwyn, that is, White head, but the Island of Corcofo, the river of Guyndor, and the white rocks of Pengwyn, which be all British or Welsh words, do manifestly shew that it was that countrey which Madoc and his people inhabited.

Carmina Meredith filij Rhesi mentionem facientia de Madoco filio Oweni Gwynedd, & de sua navigatione in terras incognitas.

Vixit hic Meredith circiter Annum Domini 1477.

These verses
I received of my learned friend Mr.
William
Gamben.

MAdoc wyf, mwyedic wedd, Lawn genau, Owen Gwynedd: Ni fynnum dir, fy enaid oedd Na da mawr, ond y moroedd.

¶ The same in English.

MAdoc I am the same of Owen Gwynedd Welsh stature large, and comely grace adorne:
No lands at home nor store of wealth me please, My minde was wbole to search the Ocean seas.

The offer of the discoverie of the West Indies by Christopher Columbus to King Henrie the seventh in the yeere 1488 the 13 of February: with the Kings acceptation of the offer, and the cause whereupon he was deprived of the same, recorded in the thirteenth chapter of the historie of Don Fernand Columbus of the life and deeds of his Father Christopher Columbus.

Cristophoro Colon temendo, se parimento i Re di Castiglia non assentissero alla sua impresa, non gli bisognasse parlarla di nuovo à qualche altro principe, & così in ciò passasse lungo tempo: mandò in Inghilterra un suo fratello, che hauena appreso di se, chiamato Bartholomeo Colon: il qual quantunque non hauesse lettere Latine, era però hno mo: pratico, & giudizioso nelle cose del mare, & sapea molto bene far carte da nauigare, & sphere, & altri instrumenti di quella professione, come dal suo fratello era instruito. Partito adunque Bartholomeo Colon per Inghilterra, volle la sua sorte, che desse in man di corsali, quali lo spogliarono insieme con gli altri della sua nave. Per la qual cosa, & per la sua povertà & infermità, che in così diuerse terre lo assalirono crudelmente, prolungo per gran tempo la sua ambasciata, fin che, acquistata un poco di facilità con le carte, ch'ei fabricaua, cominciò a far pratiche cò il Re Enrico settimo, padre di Enrico octauo, che al presente regna: a cui appresentò un mappamondo, nel quale erano scritti questi versi, che fra le sue scritture lo trouaui, & da me saranno qui posti pin tosto per l'antichità, che per la loro eleganza.

Terrarum quicunque cupis feliciter oras Noscere, cuncta decens doctè pictura docebit, Quam Strabo affirmat, Ptolomæus, Plinius, atque Isidorus: non vna tamen sententia cuique.
Pingitur hic etiam nuper sulcata carinis Hispanis Zona illa, prius incognita genti Torrida, quæ tandem nunc est notissima multis.

Es pin di sotto dierna.

Pro

Iantua
Colum Londra
Oceano
Febru

Es, perciocche
vidde alcune forte Columbus de terra dura, & cio che l'
mare. Ma, percioc dura, & tornato e ra di raccontar ch
raglio, &c.

Christopher Columbus had same againe to caine brother of bet he had not the causes, and could fession, as he was departed for Eng
of them which was uery and skillful red his ambassag him with making the of Henry the world, wherein them downe, rath

Thou who
This com
Which S
Per for all
Per re all
By Doct
Wherof

De, who Euen he
The pee
And eight
In Lond

And beaufe bra, I say, than bus, before he rubra. But to my father Ch
and sent to call lumbus was g herafter in o which Bartho

his submission in the Spanish at day, doe argue Dearken of Liden,
is, White head,
wyn, which be all
doe and his people

le Madoco gnitas.

Christopher
the 13 of wher-
th

o alla sua impresa, cio passasse lungo chiamato Barthenomo pratico, & altri instrumen-holmeo Colon per e con gli altri del-terre lo assalirono
o ai faculta con le rico ottano, che al-rsi, che fra la sua
le ganna.

Pro autore siue pictore.

Iantua cui patriz est nomen, cui Bartholomæus Columbus de terra rubra, opus edidit istud, Londonijs anno Domini 1480 atque insuper anno, Octauo decimaque die cum tertia mensis Februarij. Laudes Christo cantentur abundè.

Es, percioche amertirà alcuno, che dice Columbus de terra rubra, dico, che medesimamente lo viddo alcune sottoscrittioni dell' Ammiraglio, primo che acquistasse lo stato, on'egli si fosse scrivenua, Columbus de terra rubra. Ma, tornando al Re d' Inghilterra, dico, che, da lui il mappa moudo veduta, & cio che l' Ammiraglio gli offerima, con allegro volto accetto la sua offerta, & mandolo a chiamaro. Ma, percioche Dio l'hauena per Castiglia serbata, già l' Ammiraglio in quel tempo era andato, & tornato con la vittoria della sua impresa, secondo che per ordine si racconterà. Lasciàto hora di raccontar ciò, che Bartolomeo Colon ha uena negociato in Inghilterra, & tornato all' Ammi-raglio, &c.

The same in English.

Christopher Columbus fearing least if the king of Castile in like maner (as the king of Por-tingall had done) should not condescend vnto his enterpryse, he should be inforced to offer the same againe to some other pynre, and so much time should be spent therin, sent into England a certaine brother of his which he had with him, whose name was Bartholomew Columbus, who, albeit he had not the Latine tongue, yet neuertheless was a man of experience and skillfull in sea causes, and could very well make sea cards & globes, and other instruments belonging to that profession, as he was instructed by his brother. Wherefore after that Bartholomew Columbus was departed for England, his lucke was to fall into the hands of pirates, which spoiled him with the rest of them which were in the ship which he went in. Upon which occasion, and by reason of his po-uerty and sicknesse which cruelly assaulted him in a country so far distant from his friends, he deferred his ambassage for a long while, untill such time as he had gotten somewhat handsome about him with making of sea cards. At length he began to deale with king Henry the sixtenth the father of Henry the eighth, which reigned at this present: vnto whom he presented a mappe of the world, wherein these verses were written, which I found among his papers: and I will heere set them downe, rather for theyr antiquity then for theyr goodnesse.

Thou which desirest easily the coasts of lands to know,
This comely mappe right learnedly the same to thee will shew:
Which Strabo, Plinie, Ptolomew and Isidore maintaine: Yet for all that they do not all in one accord remaine.
Here also is set downe the late discovered burning Zone By Portugallies, vnto the world which whilom was unknowne, Which of the knowledge now at length though all the world is downe.
And a little vnder he added.

For the author or the drawer.

Ye, whose deare native soyle height shal be Genua, Euen he whose name is Bartholomew Colon de Terra rubra, The peere of grace a thousand and foure hundred and fourescore And eight, and on the thirteenth day of February moxe, In London published this word, To Christ all land therefore.

And beause some peradventure may obserue, that he calleth himselfe Columbus de Terra rubra, I say, that in like maner I haue seene some subscriptions of my father Christopher Columbus, before he had the degree of Admirall, wherein he signed his name thus, Columbus de Terra rubra. But to returne to the king of England, I say, that after he had seene the map, & that which my father Christopher Columbus offered vnto him, he accepted the offer with ioyfull countenance, and sent to call him into England. But because God had reserved the said offer for Castile, Colombus was gone in the meane space, and also returned with the performance of his enterpryse, as hereafter in order shall be rehear'd. Now will I leave off from making any farther mention of that which Bartholomew Colon had negociated in England, and I will returne vnto the Admirall, &c.

King Henry
his acceptation of Colombus offer.

Another testimony taken out of the 60 chapter of the foresayd histry of Ferdinando Columbus, concerning the offer that

Bartholomew Columbus made to king Henric the seuenth on the behalfe of his brother Christopher.

Ornato adunque l' Ammiraglio dallo scoprimento di Cuba & di Giamaica, trovò nella Spagnuola Bartolomeo Colon suo fratello, quello, che era già andato a trattare accordo col Re d' Inghilterra sopra lo scoprimento delle Indie, come di sopra habiamo detto. Questo poi, ritornando sene verso Castiglia con capitoli conceduti, hauera inteso a Parigi dal re Carlo di Francia, l' Ammiraglio suo fratello hauer già scoperte l' Indie: perche gli somenne per poter far il Viaggio di cento scudi. Et, Auenga che per coral vnua egl' si fosse molto affrettato, per arrimar l' Ammiraglio in Spagna, quando non dimeno giunse a Sinigaglia, egli era già tornato alle Indie co' 17 nauigli. Perche, per eseguir quanto ci gli hauea lasciato, di subito al principio dell' anno del 1494. sen' andò al Re Catholico, menando seco Don diego Colon, mio fratello, & me ancora, accioche seruisimo di paggi al serenissimo prencipe Don Giouanni, il qual vna in gloria, sicome hauea comandato la Catholica Reina donna Isabella, che allora era in Valadolid. Tosto adunque che noi giungemmo, i Re chiamarono don Bartholomeo & Mandaronlo alla Spagnuola con tre nauì, &c.

¶ The same in English.

Christopher Columbus the Admirall being returned from the discovery of Cuba and Iamaya, found in Hispaniola his brother Bartholomew Columbus, who before had bene sent to treat of an agreement with the king of England for the discovery of the Indies, as we haue said before. This Bartholomew therefore returning vnto Castile, with the capitulations granted by the king of England to his brother, vnder stood at Paris by Charles the king of France, that the Admirall his brother, had already performed that discovery: and gaue him 100 crownes towards his voyage. And albeit he made great haste vpon this good newes to meet with the Admirall in Spain, yet at his comming to Sinigaglia his brother was already returned to the Indies, with 17 saile of shippes. Wherefore to fulfill that which he had left him in charge, in the beginning of the yeere 1494 he repayed to the Catholike princes, taking with him Diego Colon my brother and me also, which were to be preferred as pages to the most excellent prince Don Iohn, who now is with God, according to the commandement of the Catholike Quene lady Isabell, which was then in Valadolid. As soone therefore as we came to the Court, the princes called for Don Bartholomew, and sent him to Hispaniola with three shippes, &c.

The letters patents of king Henry the seuenth granted vnto Iohn Cabot and his three sonnes, Lewis, Sebastian, and Sancius, for the discouerie of new and vknowne lands.

Henricus Dei gratia rex Angliæ & Franciæ, & Dominus Hiberniæ, omnibus ad quos præsentis literæ nostræ peruenerint, salutem.
 Notum sit & manifestum, quòd dedimus & concessimus, ac per præsentem damus & concedimus pro nobis & hæredibus nostris, dilectis nobis Iohanni Caboto ciui Venetiarum, Lodouico, Sebastiano, & Sancio, filijs dicti Iohannis, & eorum ac cuiuslibet eorum hæredibus & deputatis, plenam ac liberam autoritatem, facultatem & potestatem nauigandi ad omnes partes, regiones, & sinus maris orientalis, occidentalis, & septentrionalis, sub banneris, vexillis, & insignijs nostris, cum quinque nauibus siue nauigijs, cuiuscunq; portituræ & qualitatis existant, & cum rot & tantis nautis & hominibus, quot & quantos in dictis nauibus secum ducere voluerint, suis & eorum proprijs sumptibus & expensis, ad inueniendum, discooperiendum, & inuestigandum quascunq; insulas, patrias, regiones siue prouincias gentiliū & infidelium quoruncunq; in quacunq; parte mundi positas, quæ Christianis omnibus ante hæc tempora fuerint incognitæ. Concessimus etiam eisdem & eorum cuiuslibet, eorumq; & cuiuslibet eorum hæredibus & deputatis, ac licentiam dedimus ad affigendum prædictas banneras nostras & insignia in quacunq; villa, oppido, castro, insula seu terra firma à se nouiter inuentis. Et quòd prænominatus Iohannes, & filij eiusdem, seu hæredes & eorum deputati, quascunq; huiusmodi villas, castra, oppida, pida, & insulas possidere valea dominium, citu terræ firmæ sic emolumentis, præfatus Iohannes omni viagio suo applicare teneat eoldem factis, re: Dantes no stumorum omni sic nouiter inu hæredibus & d a se inueniat, q frequentari se putatorum, su loca sic inuent gulis nostris su deputatis, bon sione quietatu prouidentaru cuius rei testin asterium qui

Henry by these pat

Be it knowne and our besyes sames of the authority, Ieau the North, and be, and as many proper costs and vices of the which before to curry of the reue to sit vnto found. occupy and po of the same vil

Yet so that den of all the voyage, as oft and holden on to pay vnto being vnto the of all and sin found.

And moxco firme landes, to finde, may foresayd Iohn shippes, as of a dwelling, an sea, appointe

the foresayd r that h di Giamaica, irom

va andato a trattare me di sopra habiamo
i concedati, hanna
atello hauer gia sco-so fandi. Et, Anpagna, quando non er esseguit quanto ci olici, menando seco ssimo principe Don adonna Isabella, che don Bartholomeo &

Cuba and Iamayoze had bene sent to ics, as we haue said lactons granted by ag of France, that
m 100 crotones to merc with the Ad-
rned to the Indies, parage, in the begin-Diego Colon my prince Don Iohn, erue lady Tabell,
e pynces callcott

anted vnto ancius,

berniz, omnibus

us, ac per presendilectis nobis Io-Sancio, filijs dicti tis, plenam ac liregiones, & sinus guis nostris, cum
cum tot & tantis
int, suis & eorum igandum qualcu-
munque, in qua-
uerint incognita, hæredibus & de-
signia in quacunrenominatus Io-li villas, castra, op-
pida,

pida, & insulas à se inuentas, quæ subiugari, occupari, possideri possint, subiugare, occupare, possidere valeant tanquam vasalli nostri, & gubernatores, locatentes, & deputati eorundem, dominium, titulum & iurisdictionem earundem villarum, castrorum, opidorum, insularum, ac terræ firmæ sic inuentorum nobis acquirentido. Ita tamen, vt ex omnibus fructibus, proficijs, emolumentis, commodis, lucris, & obuentionibus ex huiusmodi nauigatione prouenientibus, præfatus Iohannes, & filij ac hæredes, & eorum deputati, teneantur & sint obligati nobis pro omni viagi suo, toties quoties ad portum nostrum Bristollicæ applicuerint (ad quem omnino applicare teneantur & sint ascripti) deductis omnibus sumptibus & impensis necessarijs per eosdem factis, quintam partem capitalis lucri facti, siue in mercibus, siue in pecunijs perfolue- re: Dantes nos & concedentes eisdem suisq; hæredibus & deputatis, vt ab omni solutione cus- tumarum omnium & singulorum bonorum & mercium, quas secum reportarint ab illis locis sic nouiter inuentis, liberi sint & immunes. Et insuper dedimus & concessimus eisdem ac suis hæredibus & deputatis, quod terræ omnes firmæ, insulæ, villæ, oppida, castra, & loca quæcunq; à se inuenta, quotquot ab eis inueniri contigerit, non possint ab alijs quibusuis nostris subditis frequentari seu visitari, absque licentia prædictorum Ioannis & eius filiorum suorum quorundem de- putatorum, sub pœna amissionis tam nauium quàm bonorum omnium quorumcunq; ad ea loca sic inuenta nauigare præsummentium. Volentes & strictissime mandantes omnibus & sin- gulis nostris subditis, tam in terra quàm in mari constitutis, vt præfato Ioanni, & eius filijs ac deputatis, bonam assistentiam faciunt, & tam in armandis nauibus seu nauigijs, quàm in prouide- tiene quietatis & victualium pro sua pecunia emendorum, atque aliarum omnium rerum sibi prouidentiarum pro dicta nauigatione sumenda suos omnes fauores & auxilia impertiant. In cuius rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso apud Westm- nasterium quinto die Martij anno regni nostri vndecimo.

Ann. 1495.

¶ The same in English.

Henry by the grace of God, King of England & France, and lord of Ireland, to all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting.

Be it knowne that we haue giuen and granted, and by these presents doe giue and grant for vs and our heyyes, to our welbeloued John Cabot citizen of Venice, to Lewis, Sebastian & Sanctius sonnes of the said John, and to the heyyes of them, and euerij of them, and theyr deputies, full & free authority, leaue, and power to saile to all parts, countreies, and seas of the East, of the West, and of the North, vnder our banners and ensignes, with siue ships of what burthen or quantity soeuer they be, and as many mariners or men as they will haue with them in the sayd ships, vpon theyr owne proper costs and charges, to secke out, discouer, and finde whatsoeuer Isles, countreies, regions or prouinces of the heathen and infidels whatsoeuer they be, and in what part of the world soeur they be, which befoze this time haue bene vnknowne to all Chyistians: we haue granted to them, and also to euerij of them, the heyyes of them, and euerij of them, and theyr deputies, and haue giuen them licence to set by our banners and ensignes in euerij village, towne, castle, yle, or manie land of them wholy found. And that the aforesaid John and his sonnes or theyr heyyes and assigns may subdue, occupy and possesse all such townes, cities, castles and Isles of them found, which they can subdue, occupy and possesse, as our ballas, and licutenants, getting vnto vs by the rule, title, and iurisdiction of the same villages, townes, castles, and firme land so found.

Yet so that the aforesaid John, and his sonnes and heyyes, and theyr deputies, be holden & bounden of all the frutes, profites, gaines, and commodities growing of such nauigation, for euerij theyr voyage, as often as they shall arriue at our port of Bristoll (at the which port they shall be bound and holden only to arriue) all manner of necessary costs and charges by them made, being deducted, to pay vnto vs in waies or money the fift part of the capitall gaine so gotten. The giuing & granting vnto them and to theyr heyyes and deputies, that they shall be free from all paying of customes of all and singular such wurchandize as they shall bring with them from those places so newlic found.

And mozeouer, wee haue giuen and granted to them, theyr heyyes and deputies, that all the firme landes, Isles, villages, townes, castles and places whatsoeuer they be that they shall chance to finde, may not of any other of our subiectes be frequented or visited without the licence of the foresayd John and his sonnes, and theyr deputies, vnder payne of forfeiture as well of theyr ships, as of all and singular goods of all them that shall presume to sayle to those places so found. Willing, and most straightly commanding all and singular our subiectes as well on land as on sea, appointed officers, to giue good assistance to the aforesaid John, and his sonnes and deputies, and that as well in arming and furnishing the ships or vessels, as in provision of quietness, and in buying of victualles for the money, and all other things by them to be provided necessarie for the said navigation, they do give them all theyr helpe and fauour. In witness whereof we have caused to be made these our letters patentes. Witness our selfe at Westminster, the sixt day of March, in the eleventh yere of our reigne.

Billa signata Anno 13 Henrici 7.

A recorde of the rolls touching the voyage of John Cabot & Sebastian his sonne.

REx tertio die Februarij, anno 13, licentiam dedit Ioani Caboto, quod ipse capere possit sex naues Anglicanas, in aliquo portu, siue portibus regni Angliæ, ita quod sint de portagio 200 denariorum, vel subtus, cum apparatu requisito, & quod recipere possint in dictas naues omnes tales magistris, marinarios, & subditos regis, qui cum eo exire voluerint, &c.

¶ The same in English.

The king vpon the third day of February, in the 13 yere of his reigne, gaue licence to John Cabot to take sixe English ships in any haven or hauens of the realme of England, being of the burden of 200 tunnes, or vnder, with all necessary furniture, and to take also into the sayde ships, all such maisters, martiners, and subiects of the king as willingly will go with him, &c.

An extract taken out of the mappe of Sebastian Cabot, cut by Clement Adams, concerning his discouerie of the West Indies, which is to be seene in her Maiesties priuie gallerie at Westminster, and in many other ancient merchants houses.

Anno Domini 1494, Ioannes Cabotus venetus, & Sebastianus illius filius eam terram fecerunt peruiam, quam nullus prius adire ausus fuisset, die 24 Iunii, circiter horam quintam bene manè. Hanc autem appellauit Terram Primum visam, credo quod ex mari in eam partem primum oculos iniecerat. Nam quæ ex aduerso sita est insula, eam appellauit insulam D. Ioannis, hac opinor ratione, quod aperta fuit eo die qui est sacer D. Ioanni Baptistæ: Huius incolæ pelles animalium, exuiuasque ferarum pro indumentis habent, easque tanti faciunt, quanti nos vestes preciosissimas. Cum bellum gerunt, vtuntur arcu sagittis, hastis, spiculis, clauis ligneis & fundis. Tellus sterilis est, neque villos fructus affert, ex quo fit, vt leonibus albo colore, & ceruis inuisitatæ apud nos magnitudinis referta sit: piscibus abundat, iisque sanè magnis, quales sunt lupi, & quos salmones vulgus appellat, soleæ autem reperiuntur tam longæ, vt vltra mensuram excedant. Imprimis autem magna est copia eorum piscium, quos vulgari sermone vocant Bacallaos. Gignuntur in ea insula accipitres ita nigri, vt coruorum similitudinem mirum in modum expriment, perdiceæ autem & aquilæ sunt nigri coloris.

¶ The same in English.

In the yere of our Lord 1494, John Cabot a Venetian, & his sonne Sebastian (with an English fleet set out frō Bristol) discouered that land which no man before that time had attempted, on the 24 of June, about five of the clocke early in the morning. This land he called Prima villa, that is to say, first seene, because as I suppose it was that part whereof they had the first sight from sea. That Island which lyeth out before the land, he called the Island of S. John, vpon this occasion, as I thinke, because it was discouered vpon the day of John the Baptist. The inhabitants of this Island vse to weare beasts skines, and haue them in as great estimation, as we haue our finest garments. In theyr wars they vse bowes, arrows, pikes, darts, wooden clubs, & slings. The soile is barren in some places, & yeeldeth little fruit, but it is full of tobac pipes, & stags farre greater then ours. It yeeldeth plenty of fish, and those very great, as seales, and those which commonly we call salmones: there are soles also aboue a yard in length: but especially there is great abundance of that kinde of fish which the Saluages call Bacallaos. In the same Island also there breed hawks, but they are so blacke, that they are very like to rauen, as also theyr partridges, & eagles, which are in like sort blacke.

is therefore called him not, he pro-
some knowledge
a valiant man,
being an expert
hand, and that b incertained him
world, with cer
that he spake fur When my fa
trade of mercha having neuer b father died in th discouered the co
then reigned, in then humane, c
known before,
tence some nota
way of the North
king to be aboue
with all things a in the begin ning
that any other la taine dayes: I fo Beneuolence, I
land still contin East, departing land to ward the part of this firm
chence and retu
tion for warres
age. Whereupo stouerished to ha
which they caule
and large riuers filled and follo
saice, and inhabi
Into this riuier ther bolages, w caule there are u inuenie: I do

A discourse of Sebastian Cabot touching his discouerie of part of the West India out of England in the time of king Henry the seuenth, viced to Galeacius Bunnigarnus the Popes Legate in Spaine, and reported by the sayd Legate in this fort.

Do you not vnderstand said hee (speaking to certaine Gentlemen of Venice) how to passe to India toward the North west winde, as did of late a citizen of Venice, so valiant a man, and so well practised in all things pertaining to Navigations, and the science of Cosmographie, that at this present hee hath not his like in Spaine, in somuch that for his vertues he is preferred aboue all other Pilotes that saile to the West Indies, who may not passe thither without his licence, and is therefore called Piloto Maggiore (that is) the grand Pilote. And when we said that wee knew him not, he proceeded, saying, that being certaine yeeres in the cite of Siusil, and desirous to haue some knowledge of the Navigations of the Spaniards, it was told him that there was in the cite a valiant man, a Venetian boyne, named Sebastian Cabot, who had the charge of those things, being an expert man in that science, and one that could make Cardes for the Sea with his owne hand, and that by this report, seeking his acquaintance, he found him a very gentle person, who entertained him friendly, and shewed him many things, and among other a large mappe of the world, with certaine particular navigations, as well of the Portugals, as of the Spaniards, and that he spake further vnto him in this effect.

This discourse is taken out of the second booke of Voyages of Baptista Amaluis.

When my father departed from Venice many yeeres since to dwell in England, to follow the trade of merchandises, he tooke me with him to the cite of London, while I was very yong, yet having neuertheless some knowledge of letters of humanitie, and of the Sphere. And when my father died in that time when newes were brought that Don Christofer Colonus Genueis, had discovered the coasts of India, whereof was great talke in all the court of king Henry the 7. who then reigned, in somuch that all men with great admiration affirmed it to be a thing moze diuine then humane, to saile by the West into the East where spices growe, by a way that was neuer knowne before, by this same and report there increased in my heart a great flame of desire to attempt some notable thing. And vnderstanding by reason of the Sphere, that if I should saile by way of the North west winde, I should by a shorter tract come into India, I thereupon caused the king to be advertised of my desire, who immediatly commaunded two Caruels to be furnished with all things appertaining to the voyage, which was, as farre as I remember, in the yeere 1496 in the beginning of Sommer. I began therefore to saile toward the North west, not thinking to find any other land then that of Cathay, and from thence to turne toward India, but after certaine dayes I found that the land ranne towards the North, which was to me a great displeasure, neuertheless, sailing along by the coast to see if I could find any gulfes that turned, I found the land still continent to the 56. deg. vnder our pole. And seeing that there the coast turned toward the East, despairing to find the passage, I turned backe againe, and sailed downe by the coast of that land toward the Equinoctiall (euer with intent to find the said passage to India) and came to that part of this firme land which is now called Florida, where my victuals failing, I departed from thence and returned into England, where I found great tumults among the people, and preparation for warres in Scotland: by reason whereof there was no moze consideration had to this voyage. Whereupon, I went into Spaine to the catholike king, and Queene Elizabeth, which being advertised what I had done, entertained me, and at their charges furnished certaine ships, whereunto they caused me to saile to discouer the coasts of Brasillie, where I found an exceeding great and large riuer named at this present, Rio de la plata, that is the riuer of siluer, into the which I sailed and followed it into the firme land, moze then fye score leagues, finding it euery where very faire, and inhabited with infinite people, which with admiration came running daily to our ships. Into this riuer runn so many other riuers, that it is in manner incredible. After this I made many other voyages, which I now permit, and having old, I giue my selfe to rest from such trauels, because there are now many yong and lustie Pilotes and mariners of good experience, by whose succour I do reioyce in the fruit of my labours, and rest with the charge of this office, as you see.

The second voyage of Cabot to the land of Brasillie, and Rio de plata.

The

tion of quietnesse, you uided necessitate uerof ue hanc ter, the sixt day of quod ipse capere Angliz, ita quod o, & quod recipe- abditos regis, qui ue licence to John England, being also into the sayde o with him, &c.

ot, cut by Indias, in-us illius filius eam fter, die 24 Iunij, Terram Primam receerat. Nam que hac opinor ratione habet animalium, es preciosissimas, dis. Tellus sterilis usitatæ apud nos, & quos salmo- xcedant. Impi- callaos. Gignun- dum exprimat, an (with an Eng- had attempted, alled Prima villa, had the first sight. John, upon this tiff. The inhabi- ation, as we haue at clubs, & slings, ons, & stags farre those which com- ly there is great I, and also there epp partridges, &

The foresayd Baptista Ramusius in his Preface to the third volume of the Navigations, writeth thus of Sebastian Cabot.

the latter part of this volume are put certaine relations of John de Verazana, a Florentine, and of a great capitaine a Frenchman, and of the two voyagers of Iacques Cartier a Byton, who sailed vnto the land set in 50. degrees of latitude to the North, which is called New France, which lands hitherto are not thought by known, whether they doe lye wth the firme land of Florida and Noua Hispania, or whether they be separated and deuised all by the Seas as Islands: and whether that by that way one may goe by sea vnto the countrey of Cathaia. As many yeeres past it was written vnto me by Sebastian Caboto our countrey man a Venetian, a man of great experience, and very rare in the arte of Nauigation, and the knowledg of Cosmographie, who sailed along and beyond this land of New France, at the charges of king Henry the 7. king of England: and he aduertised me, that hauing sailed a long time West and by North, beyond those Islands vnto the latitude of 67. degrees and an halfe, vnder the North pole, and at the 11. day of June finding still the open sea without any manner of impediment, he thought verily by that way to haue passed on still the way to Cathaia, which is in the East, and would haue done it, if the multitude of the Shipmaster and mariners had not hindered him and made him to returne home wards from that place. But it seemeth that God doeth yet still reserve this great enterprise for some great prince to discover this voiage of Cathaia by this way, which for the bringing of the Spices from India into Europe, were the most easie and shortest of all other wayes hitherto found out, And surely this enterprise would be the most glorious, and of most importance of all other that can be imagined, to make his name great, and fame immortall, to all ages to come, farre more then can be done by any of all these great troubles and warres which daily are vsed in Europe among the miserable christian people.

Another testimonie of the voiage of Sebastian Cabot to the West and North west, taken out of the 6. chapter of the third Decade of Peter Martyr of Angleria.

Crutatus est oras glaciales, Sebastianus quidam Caborus genere Venetus, sed à parentibus in Britanniam insulam tendentibus (vri moris est Venetorum, qui commercij causa terrarum omnium sunt hospites) transportatus penè infans. Duo is sibi nauigia, propria pecunia in Britannia ipsa instruxit, & primò tendens cum hominibus tercentum ad Septentrionem donec etiam Iulio mense vastas repererit glaciales moles pelago natantes, & lucem ferè perpetuam, tellure tamen libera gelu liquefacto: quare coactus fuit, vti ait, vela vertere & occidentem sequi: tetenditq; tantum ad meridiem littore sese incuruante, vt Herculei freti latitudinis fere gradus æquarit: ad occidentemq; profectus tantum est vt Cubam Insulam, à læua, longitudine graduum penè parem, habuerit. Is ea littora percurres, quæ Baccalaos appellauit, eisdem se reperisse aquarû, sed lenes delapsus ad Occidentem ait, quos Castellani, meridionales suas regiones ad nauigantes, inueniunt. Ergò non modò verisimilius, sed necessario concludendum est, vastos inter vtramq; ignotam hæcenus tellurem iacere hiatus, qui viam præbeant aquis ab oriente cadentibus in Occidentem. Quas arbitror impulsu cælorum circulariter agi in gyrum circa terræ globum, non autem Demogorgone anhelante vomit, absorberit; vt nonnulli senserunt, quod in fluxu, & refluxu forsitan assentire darent. Baccalaos, Cabotus ipse terras illas appellauit, eò quod in earû pelago tantam repererit magnorum quorundam piscium, rynnos æmulantium, sic vocatorum ab indigenis, multitudinem, vt etiam illi interdum nauigia detardarent. Earum Regionum homines pellibus tantum cooperitos reperiebat rationis haudquaquam expertes. Vriorum inesse regionibus copiam ingeniter refert, qui & ipsi piscibus vescantur. Inter densa namq; piscium illorum agmina sese immergunt vrsi, & singulos singuli complexos, vnguibûsque inter squammas immixtis in terram raptant, & comedunt. Propterea minimè noxios hominibus vilos esse a. Orichalcû in plerisque locis se vidisse apud incolas prædicat. Familiarem habeo domi Cabotum ipsum, & contubernalem interdum. Vocatus namque ex Britannia à Rege nostro Catholico, post Henrici Maioris Britannia Regis mortem, concurialis noster est, expectatq; indies, vt nauigia sibi parentur, quibus arcanum hoc naturæ latens, iam tandem detegatur.

The

The first
ing yet bus
on to restore the world on charges, and in the month of small bay
lighte
at the Sunne.
follow the South, by re Latitude, w degree. He his left hand
in land, which West, but the found in the allo of necess
certaine gre
the West, wh
ning and imp ching of Dem
to eude and Seas there ab (which the in people of th
lately there
sewes into in their sc satisfied w gions, he
the familiar being called death of ki
and a distan
for him to

The first
the four die

was so cold, in a manner
feeling the sailed along England,

the third

The same in English.

John de Verarza. The two voyages of degrees of latitude into are not thought Florida and Nova Se a ss Islands i. As many yeres ian, a man of great iomographie, who entyr the 7. king of North, beyond those and at the 11. day of verily by that way ue done it, if the m- eturne homewards pise for some grea g of the Spiceries hitherto found one, of all other that can farre more then can Europe among the

These North seas have bene searched by one Sebastian Cabot, a Venetian boyne, whom being yet but in manner an infant, his parents caried with them into England, having occasson to voyage thither for trade of merchandise, as is the manner of the Venetians to leaue no part of the world vnsearched to obtaine riches. He therefore furnished two ships in England at his owne charges, and first with 300. men, directed his course so farre towards the North pole, that euen in the moneth of Iulie he found monstrous heapes of ice swimming on the sea, and in manner continuall day light, yet saw he the land in that tract free from ice, which had bene molten by the heat of the Sunne. Thus seeing such heapes of ice before him, he was enforced to turne his sailes and follow the West, so coasting still by the Spoye, that hee was thereby brought so farre into the South, by reason of the land bending so much Southward, that it was there almost equall in latitude, with the sea Fretum Herculeum, hauing the North pole eleuate in manner in the same degree. He sailed likewise in this tract so farre towards the West, he had the Island of Cuba on his left hand, in manner in the same degree of longitude. As he traueiled by the coasts of this great land, (which he named Baccalaos) he saith that hee found the like course of the waters toward the West, but the same to runne more softly and gently then the swift waters which the Spaniards found in their Nauigations Southward. Wherefore it is not onely more like to be true, but ought also of necessitie to be concluded that betwene both the lands hitherto unknowen, there should be certaine great open places wherby the waters should thus continually passe from the East unto the West: which waters I suppose to be giuen about the globe of the earth by the vncessant moouing and impulsion of the heauens, and not to bee swallowed by and cast by againe by the breathing of Demogorgon, as some haue imagined, because they see the seas by increase and decrease to ebbe and flowe. Sebastian Cabot himselfe named those lands Baccalaos, because that in the Seas thererabout hee found so great multitudes of certaine bigge fishes much like unto Tunies, (which the inhabitants call Baccalaos) that they sometimes stayed his ships. He found also the people of those regions couered with beastes skinnes, yet not without the vse of reason. Hee also saith there is great plentie of Beares in those regions which vse to eat fishes: for plunging themselves into the water, where they perceiue a multitude of these fishes to lie, they fasten their claws in their scales, and so draw them to land and eatethem, so (as he saith) the Beares being thus satisfied with fish, are not noisome to men. Hee declareth further, that in many places of these regions, he sawe great plentie of Laton among the inhabitants. Cabot is my very friend, whom I haue familiarlie, and delight to haue him sometimes keepe me companie in mine owne house. For being called out of England by the commaundement of the Catholike king of Castile, after the death of king Henry the seventh of that name, king of England, he was made one of our counsellors and Assistants, as touching the affaires of the new Indies, looking for ships daily to bee furnished for him to discover this hid secret of Nature.

bot to the cascade of Venetus, sed a pa- etorum, qui com- e infans. Duo isibi dens cum homini- rit glaciales moles eto: quare coctus in littore sese incur- profectus tantum est ca littora percurret, d Occidentem ait, non modò verifi- Stenus tellurem ia- Quas arbitror im- mogorgone anhe- n assentire daretur. am reperitric mag- nis, multitudinem, libus tantum coo- bus copiam ingen- a gmina sese in- immissis in terram Orichalcū in pleris- tum ipsum, & con- blico, post Henrici , vt nauigia sibi pe-

The testimonie of Frauncis Lopez de Gomara a Spaniard, in the fourth chapter of the second booke of his generall historie of the West Indies concerning the first discouerie of a great part of the West Indies, to wit, from 58. to 38. degrees of latitude, by Sebastian Cabota out of England.

Which brought most certaine newes of the countrey and people of Baccalaos, saith Gomara, was Sebastian Cabote a Venetian, which rigged by two ships at the cost of king Henry the 7. of England, hauing great desire to traffique for the spices as the Portugals did. Hee caried with him 300. men, and tooke the way towards Island from beyond the Cape of Labrador, untill hee found himselfe in 58. degrees and better. Hee made relation that in the moneth of Iulie it was so cold, and the ice so great, that he durst not passe any further: that the dayes were very long, in a manner without any night, and for that short night that they had, it was very cleare. Cabot feeling the cold, turned towards the West, refreshing himselfe at Baccalaos: and afterwards hee sailed along the coast unto 38. degrees, and from thence hee shaped his course to returne into England,

A note of Sebastian Cabots first discouerie of part of the Indies taken out of the latter part of Robert Fabians Chronicle not hitherto printed, which is in the custodie of M. Iohn Stowe a diligent preferuer of Antiquities.

In the 13. yeere of king Henry the 7. (by meanes of one Iohn Cabot a Clerke) an which made him selfe very expert and cunning in knowledge of the circuit of the world and Islands of the same, as by a Sea carde and other demonstrations reasonable he betwix) the king caused to man and victuals a ship at Bristol, to search for an Island, which he said he knew well was rich, and plentiful with great commodities: Which ship thus manner and victualled at the kings cost, diuers merchantes of London ventured in her small booke, being in her as chiefe patron the sayd Venetian. And in the companie of the sayd ship, sailed also out of Bristol three or foure small ships fraught with sleight and grosse merchandises, as course cloth, caps, laces, points, and other trinkets, And so departed from Bristol in the beginning of May, of whom in this Spains time returned no tidings.

Of three sauages which Cabot brought home and presented vnto the king in the fourteenth yeere of his raigne, mentioned by the foresayd Robert Fabian.

This yeere also were brought vnto the king three men taken in the New found Land that before I speake of, in William Purchas time being Spain: These were clothed in beasts skins, and did eate rawe flesh, and spake such speech, that no man could vnderstand them, and in their demeanour like to brute beasts, whom the king kept a time after, Of the which vpon two yeeres after, I sawe two apparelled after the manner of Englishmen in Westminster palace, which that time I could not discern from Englishmen, till I was learned what they were, but as for speech, I heard none of them vnder one word.

The voiage of Sir Thomas Pert and Sebastian Cabot, about the eight yeere of king Henry the eight, which was the yeere, 1516. to Brasil, S. Domingo, and S. Iohn de porto ricco.

Not learned and painefull writer Richard Eden in a certaine epistle of his to the late duke of Northumberland, before a worke which hee translated out of Spaine in the yeere 1553. called A treatise of the new India, maketh mention of a voyage of discouerie vnderaken out of England by Sir Thomas Pert and Sebastian Cabot, about the eight yeere of king Henry the 8. of famous memoire, imputing the outcrippes thereof vnto the cowardise and want of stomacke of the sayd Sir Thomas Pert, in manner following. If manly courage, saith he, (like vnto that which hath bene seene and prooued in your grace as well in forraigne realmes, as also in this our country) had not bene wanting in other in these our dayes, at such time as our soueraigne lord of noble memorie king Henry the 8. about the same yeere of his raigne, furnished and sent out certaine ships vnder the gouernance of Sebastian Cabot yet liuing, and one Sir Thomas Pert, whose faint heart was the cause that the voyage tooke none effect, if I say such manly courage, whereof we haue spoken, had not at that time bene wanting, it might happily haue come to passe, that that rich treasure called Perulaz, (which is now in Spaine in the cite of Siuil, and so named, for that in it is kept the infinite riches brought thither from the Newfound land of Peru) might long since haue bene in the Tower of London, to the kings great honour and wealth of this realme. Perunte that of so is to be referred vnto the worshipfull M. Robert Thorne wrote to the sayd king Henry the 8. in the yeere 1527. by doctor Leigh his ambassador sent into Spaine to the Emperour Charles the first, whose wordes be these. Now rest to bee discouered the North partes, the which it seemeth vnto me, is onely your highnes charge and dutie, because the situation of this your realme is thereunto nearest and aptest of all other: and also, for that alreadie you haue taken it in hand. And in mine opinion it will not seeme well to leaue so great and profitable an enterprize, seeing it may so easilie and with so litle cost, labour & danger, be folowed and obtained. Though hitherto your grace haue made thereof a prooffe, & found not the commoditie thereby as you trusted, at this time it shall be none impediment: for there may be now prouided remedies for things

This Sir Thomas Pert was discouered in an house called Blackwell.

More.

things then lacked
ees desire tooke
said new courtes fed and taken m Gods grace no c Robert Thorne
the North) to be childe he maketh
though by the king Saluo de Quiedo
the 13. chapter of ing very well wit
gen. The author
mous man Bapti comes con una gra isla Spagnuola, e su batello pieno de neguare. Ma in g gloria da questo c rairano suori, ch che se'en fosse na e della citta e' de di San Giovanni, dimandarono vet
do che essi non ven camie. Hora quin lauerati e' altro o
con se no seppa piu yeere 1517. an into the parte of Island of Hispani and sent his ship that he came with Francis de Tapia
reedy with the h
those that were in den of the castle c could not haue co
of the ship seeing into the port of S and things needf Domingo, sayin
and merchandise
pnd them with e ward Europe, wh Thus farre pro
this great Englis
to discoure, and in the Island of S houses for honest and Spanisli w these nations for led by or looked all to other men in Cabot a Clerk age of the circum-

of demonstrations
ship at Bristol, to remembered with
at the kings cost,
the patron the saye
of foure final voyes,
s, and other trilles, loys time returned

presented d by

He to found Island
these were cloaked in man could under-g hepe a time after,
of Englishmen in till I was leaues

oot, about 6. to Bra-

le of his to the late of Spunster in the A voyage of discoubastian Cabot, a ouerthow the maner following,
ued in your grace
g in other in these y the 8. about the ernance of Seba-
cause that the voi-en, had not at that surie called Peru-
is kept the infan-ce haue bene in Peruunto that at king Henry the 8.
erour Charles the
which it seemeth
his your realme is e taken in hand,
an enterprise, see-obtained. Though ie thereby as you
ided remedies for things

things then lacked, and the inconueniences and lets remooued, that the were cause your graces desire tooke no full effect: which is, the courtes to be chaunged, and to follow the aforesaid new courtes. And concerning the mariners, ships, and prouision, an order may be deu-sed and taken meete and conuenient, much better then hitherto: by reason whereof, and by Gods grace no doubt your purpose shall take effect. And whereas in the aforesaid wordes Sr Robert Chome saith, that he would haue the old courtes to be chaunged, and the new courtes (as the North) to be followed: It may plainly bee gathered that the former voyage wherofe wise or thrift he maketh mention, wherein it is like that Sr Thomas Pert and Sebastian Cabot were fet forth by the king, was made toward Brasil and the South parts. Forouer it seemeth that Gon-saluo de Ouiedo, a Spanish famous writer, alludeth vnto the said voyage in the beginning of the 13. chapter of the 19. booke of his generall and naturall historie of the West Indies, agreeing very well with the time about which Richard Eden writeth that the foresaid voyage was begun. The authors wordes are these As I find the m translated into Italian by that excellent and famous man Baptista Ramusius. Nel 1517. Vn Corsaro Inglese, sotto colore di venire a discoprire se ne veniva con vna gran nave alla volta del Brasil nella costiera di terra ferma, & indi aueraverso a questa isola Spagnuola, & giunse presso la bocca del porto di questa città di S. Domingo, & mandò in terra il suo batello pieno di gente, & chiese licentia di potere qui entrare, dicendo che venia con mercantie a negociare. Ma in quello instante il castellano Francesco di Tapia fece tirare alla nave vn tiro d'arteglieria da questo castello: perche ella se veniuua diritta al porto. Quando gli Inglese videro questo, si ritirarono fuori, & quelli del batello tosto si raccolsero in nave. Et nel vero il Castellano fece errore: perche se ien fosse nave entrata nel porto, non sarebbono le genti potuto smontare à terra senza volontà & della città & del castello. La nave adunque veggendo come vi era ricenna, tirò la volta dell' isola di San Giouanni, & entrata nel porto di San Germano parlarono gli Inglese con quelli della terra, & dimandarono vestonaglie & fornimenti per la nave, & si lamentarono di quelli di questa città, dicen-do che essi non venivano per fare di piacere, ma per contrattare, & negoziare con suoi danari & mer-cantie. Hora quini hebbero alcune vestonaglie, & in compensa essi diedero & pagarono in certi stagni lunari & altre cose. Et poi si partirono alla volta d'Europa, dove si crede, che non giungessero, perche non se ne seppe piu noua mai. This extract importeth thus much in English, to wit: That in the year 1517. an English Rouer vnder the colour of traouelling to discouer, came with a great ship vnto the parts of Brasil on the coast of the Firme land, and from thence he crossed ouer vnto this Island of Hispaniola, and arriued neere vnto the mouth of the haueu of this citie of S. Domingo, and sent his shipboate full of men on shore, and demanded leaue to enter into this haueu, saying, that he came with merchaundise to traffique. But at that very instant the gouernour of the castie Francis de Tapia caused a tite of ordinance to be shot from the castie at the ship, for wee here in directly with the haueu. When the Englishmen sawe this, they withdrew themselves out, and those that were in the shipboate, got themselves with speede on shipboate. And in truerth the Gouernor of the castie committed an oversight: for if the ship had entred into the haueu, the men thereof could not haue come on land without leaue both of the citie and of the castie. Therefore the people of the ship seeing how they were there receiued, sayled toward the Island of S. Iohn, and entering into the port of S. Germaine, the Englishmen paried with those of the towne, requiring victuals and things needfull to furnish their ship, and complained of the inhabitants of the citie of S. Iohn Domingo, saying that they came not to doe any harme, but to trade and traffique for their money and merchaundise. In this place they had certaine victuals, and for recompense they gaue and paid them with certain vellell of wroughte tinne and other things. And afterward they departed toward Europe, where it is thought they arriued not: for we neuer heard any moze newes of them.
Thus farre proceedeth Gonsaluo de Ouiedo, who though it please him to call the capitaine of this great English ship a Rouer. yet it appeareth by the Englishmens owne wordes that they came to discouer, and by their traffique for pewer vellell and other wares at the towne of S. Germaine in the Island of S. Iohn de porto ricco, it cannot bee denied but that they were furnished with wares for honest traffique and exchange. But whosoever is conuerfant in reading the Portugall and Spanish writers of the East and West Indies, shall commonly finde that they account all other nations for pirates, rouers and theues, which vnto any heathen coast that they haue ones sa-led by or looked on. Howbeit their passionate and ambitious reckoning oughe not to be prejudiciall all to other mens chargeable and painful enterprises and honourable trauels in discouerie.

The voyage of the two ships, whereof the one was called the Dominus vobiscum, set out the 20. day of May, in the 29. yeere of king Henry the eight, and in the yeere of our Lord God, 1527. for the discoverye of the North partes.

Mich. Wakins.

Master Robert Thorne of Bristoll, a notable member and ornament of his countrey, as well for his learning, as great charitie to the poore. In a letter of his to king Henry the 8. and in a large discourse to doctor Leigh, his Ambassadoy to Charles the emperor, (which booke are to be seene almost in the beginning of the second part of this my worke) shewed the foresaid king with very waighte and substantiall reasons, to set forth a discouerie euen to the North pole. And that it may bee knowne that this his motion tooke present effect, I thought it good herewithall to put downe the testimonies of two of our Chyoniciers, M. Hall, and M. Grafton, who boch wrote in this voye. This same moneth (say they) king Henry the 8. sent two faire ships well manned and victualled, hauing in them diuers cunning men to seeke strange regions, and so they set forth out of the Thames, the 20. day of May in the 29. yeere of his raigne, which was the yeere of our Lord, 1527.

And whereas master Hall, and master Grafton say, that in those ships there were diuers cunning men, I haue made great inquisrie of such as by their peeres and delighe in navigation, might giue me any lighte to knowe who those cunning men should be which were the directers in the foresaid voyage. And it hath bene told mee by Sir Martin Frobisher, and master Richard Allin, a knight of the Sepulchre, that a Canon of S. Paul in London, which was a great Mathematician, and a man indowd with wealth, did much auuaunce the action, and went therein himselfe in person, but what his name was, I can not learne of any. And further they told mee that one of the ships was called the Dominus vobiscum, which is a name likely to bee giuen by a religious man of those daies: and that sailing very farre North westward, one of the ships was cast away as it entred into a dangerous gulph, about the great opening, betwene the North partes of New found land, and the countrey lately called by her maieste Meta Incognita. Whereupon the other ship shaping her course towards Cape Briton, and the coast of Norumbega, and oftentimes putting their men on land to search the state of those vnknown regions, returned home about the beginning of October, of the yeere foresaid. And thus much (by reason of the great negligence of the writers of those times, who should haue vsed moze care in preserving the memories of the worthy acts of our nation,) is all that hitherto I can learne, or find out of this voyage.

The voyage of master Hore and diuers other Gentlemen, to Newfoundland, and Cape Breton, in the yeere 1536. and in the 28. yeere of king Henry the eight.

He master Hore of London, a man of goodly stature and of great courage, and giuen to the studie of Cosmographic, in the 28. yeere of king Henry the 8. and in the yeere of our Lord 1536. encouraged diuers gentlemen and others, being assisted by the kings fauour and good countenance, so accompany him in a voyage of discouerie vpon the North west partes of America: wherein his persuasions tooke such effect, that within short space many gentlemen of the iunes of court, and of Chauncerie, and diuers other of good worship desirous to see the strange things of the world, very willingly entered into the action with him, some of whose names were as followeth. M. Wickes a gentleman of the West countrey of five hundred markes by the yeere liuing. M. Tucke a gentleman of Kent. M. Tuckfield. M. Thomas Butts the sonne of sir William Butts knight of Norfolk, which is yet aliue, and from whose mouth I wrote most of this relation. M. Walter Harde, master Biron, master Carter, master Waight, master Kaskall Sericant, Kaskals brother, master Ridley, and diuers other, which all were in the admirall called the Trinitie, a ship of seuen score tonnes, wherein M. Hore himselfe was imbarked. In the other shippe whose name was the Pinion, went a very learned and vertuous gentleman, one master Arnould Wade, father to the worshipfull master William Wade now clerke of the priuie counsell. M. Walter Dabney merchant of London. M. Toy afterward gentleman of the kings chappell, with diuers other of good account. The whole number that went in the two tall shipps aduentsyd, to wit, the Trinitie and the Pinion, were about six score persons, whereof 30. were gentlemen, which all were mustered in warlike manner at Grauesend, and after the receiuing of the sacrament, they imbarked themselves in the end of Aprill, 1536.

From

From the time of two moneths, on Cape Breton, the Penguin, which hauing white and great eggs, the foule et they walked and they of beares
booke.

M. Oliver Dav
M. Richard
admirall in Newf
some any of the hatches, spied a be gall upon the st
as were under ha Countrey, that the weste of the S. au
on a shipboote co
them, returned to men pursued the fire, and the stee There in the sa
with certaine by ing: And these call any thing els
of wax and pine
And further, the
and that the
that brought home
that increased am
of to be herbes
lett of herbes
here and there, the cutting out piece
dely deuoured the
By this meane
And it fortuned th in the felde the sa followes to strue
that had the byopl le's meane that I
the Captaine fou were neither de be shoo up and mightie, and h
them that called of former time addressed, that howe releued for
and soule to the
to repentance, and withable present
and that the same
and such was the
and it apling the
the their. four cus

called the ing Henry isco-

f his countrey, as king Henry the 8.
e emperor, (which my worke) explored
countre even to the fect, I thought it Hall, and so. Cra-
e. 8. sent two faire
e strange regions,
f his raigne, which

e were divers cum-navigation, might recters in the adve-Richard Allen, a great Mathematick
therein himselfe in ld see that one of men by a religious was cast away at ch partes of New thereupon the other and oftentimes pub-
home above the beer at negligence of remories of the voy-ge.

lemen, to
the 28.

reat courage, and Henry the 8, and in
and others, being as my him in a voyage
in his persuasions
the innes of court,
range things of the
were as followeth yeere living. One ne of Sir William the most of this re-Rasall American
called the Tritie, other Shippe which
ter Arnigill Ollate, fell, so after Oliver appell, which did
to be, the men, which all were ment, they embarked

From the time of their setting out from Grauesende, they were very long at sea, so wittie, about two moneths, and neuer touched any lande until they came to part of the West Indies about Cape Breton, passing their course thence Northward, until they came to the Island of Penguin, which is very full of rocks and stones, whereon they were and founde it full of great fowles white and gray, as bigge as geese, and they saw infinite numbers of their egges. They saw a great number of the fowles into their boates upon their sailes, and tooke by many of their egges, the fowle they feed and their skinned were like bonny combs full of holes being dead off: they washed and eatte them, and found them to be very good and nourishing meate. They saw also some of beares both blacke and white, of whome they killed some, and tooke them for no badde fowle.

Oliver Dawbeny, which (as it is before mentioned) was in this voyage, and in the Minion, with M. Richard Hakluyt of the middle Temple these things following: to wit, That after their arrival in Newfoundland, and having bene there certaine dayes as aforesaid, and not having yett seen any of the naturall people of the Countrey, the same Dawbeny walking one day on the beaches, spied a boate with Saunges of those partes, rowing downe the bay towards them, to gett upon the shore and our people, and taking viewe of their rowing a loofe, hee called to such as were under hatches, and willed them to come by if they would see the naturall people of the Countrey, that they had so long and so much desired to see: Whereupon they came by and tooke viewe of the Saunges rowing toward them and their shippe, and upon the viewe they manned out a shipboote to meett them and to take them. But the shippe our shipboote making towards them, returned with maine force & fled into an Island that laye by in the bay or riuer there, and our men pursued them into the Island, and the Saunges fledde and escaped: but our men founde a fire, and the store of a beere on a wooden spit left at the same by the Saunges that were fledde.

There in the same place they founde a boote of leather garished on the water side of the calfe with certaine byasse trailles, as it were of rawe silke, and also founde a certaine great warme mitton: And these carried with them, they returned to their shippe, not finding the Saunges, nor seeing any thing else besides the people, and the things growing in the same, which chiefly were some of haw and pine trees.

And further, the said M. Dawbeny told him, that lying there they grew into great want of victuals, and that there they found small reliefe, more then that they had from the nest of an Osprey, that brought hourly to her young great plenty of divers sortes of fishes. But such was the famine that increased amongst them from day to day, that they were forced to seeke to relieue themselves of the herbes and rooces that they sought on the maine: but the famine increasing, and the relief of herbes being to little purpose to satisfie their insatiable hunger, in the fieldes and desertes here and there, the fellowe killed his mate while hee stooped to take by a rooce for his reliefe, and cutting out pieces of his body whome hee had murdered, hee devoured the same on the coles and greedily devoured them.

By this means the company decreased, and the officers knewe not what was become of them; And it fortuned that one of the company driven with hunger to seeke aboade for reliefe, found out in the fieldes the saucour of byoyled flesh, and fell out with one for that hee would suffer him and his fellowes to sterue, enjoying plentie as he thought: And this matter growing to cruel speeches, he that had the byoyled meate, burst out into these wordes, If thou wouldst seeke to knowe, the byoyled meate that I had, was a piece of such a mans buttocke. The report of this brought to the ship, the Captaine found what became of those that were missing, & was perswaded that some of them were neither devoured with wilde beastes, nor yet destroyed with the Saunges: And hereupon he stood up and made a notable Oration, containing, How much these dealings offended the Almighty, and touched the Scriptures from first to last, what God had in case of distress done for them that called upon him, & told them that the power of the Almighty was then no lesse, then in former time it had bene. And added, that if it had not pleased God to have helper them in that distress, that yet it had bene better to have perished in body, and to have lived ever lastingly, then to have remained for a poore time their mortall bodies, and to be condemned everlastingly both body and soule to the unquenchable fire of hel. And thus having ended to that effect, he began to exhort to repentance, and besought all the company to pray that it might please God to looke upon their miserable present state, and for his owne merite to relieue the same. And such was the mercie of God, that the same night there arrived a French Shippe in the bay, well furnished with vittails, and such was the policie of the English, that they became members of the same, and changing ships and the place, they set saile to come into England.

In their journey they were to seeke Northward, that they sawe mightie Islands of ice in the Cape Breton.

The Island of Penguin, flourisheth about the latitude of 50. degrees.

Oliver Dawbeny report to M. Richard Hakluyt of the Temple.

They beheld the Saunges of Newfoundland land.

Extreme fast.

Our men eat one another for famine.

The Captaine was taken.

The English capture a French ship, wherein they returned home.

From

B b

Wanted and other foules.

Foules they pursu in de Roghes.

the sommer season, on which were haukes and other foules to rest themselves being wearie of flying ouer farre from the maine. They sawe also certaine great white foules with redde billies and redde leggs, some what bigger then Perons, which they supposed to be Nozkes. They arrived at S. Iues in Cornewall about the ende of October. From thence they departed into a certaine Castle belonging to Sir Iohn Luttrell, where M. Thomas Bues, and M. Ralfall, and other Gentleman of the voyage were very friendly entertained: after that they came to the Earle of Barche at Barche, and thence to Bristol, and so to London. M. Bues was so changed in the voyage with hunger and miserie, that Sir William his father and my Lady his mother, knewe him not to be their soune, untill they found a certaine secret marke which was a wart upon one of his knees, as he tolde me Richard Hakluyt of Oxforde himselfe, to whome I rode 100. miles onely to learne the whole crueltie of this voyage from his owne mouth, as being the onely man nowe alive, that was in this discoverie.

The French
royally recom-
penced by King Henry the 8.

Certaine moneths after, those Frenchmen came into England, and made complaint to King Henry the 8: the King causing the matter to be examined, and finding the great distresse of his subiects, and the causes of the beating so with the French, was so moued with pittie, that hee punished not his subiects, but of his owne purse made full and royall recompense unto the French.

In this distresse of famine, the English did somewhat relieve their vitall spirits, by drinking at the springe the fresh water out of certaine wooden cups, out of which they had drunke their Aqua composita before.

The large pension graunted by K. Edward the 6. to Sebastian Cabota, constituting him grand Pilot of England.

Edwardus sextus Dei gratia Anglię, Francię, & Hibernię rex, omnibus Christi fidelibus, ad quos presentes he litterę nostrę peruenerint salutem. Sciatis quod nos in consideratione boni & acceptabilis seruitiij, nobis per dilectum seruientem nostrum, Sebastianũ Cabotam, impensi atque impendendi, de gratia nostra speciali, ac ex certa scientia, & mero motu nostro, nec non de aduifamento, & consensu præclarissimi auunculi nostri Edwardi Ducis Somerseti personę nostrę Gubernatoris, ac Regiorum, dominiorum, subditorumque nostrorum protectoris, & æterorum consiliorum nostrorum, de dinus & concessimus, ac per presentes damus, & concedimus eidem Sebastianõ Cabotæ, quandam annuatim siue annualem reditum, ceterum sexaginta & sex librarũ, tresdecim solidorum, & quatuor denariorum sterlingorum habendam, gaudendam, & annuatim percipiendam prædictam annuitatem, siue annalem reditum eidem Sebastianõ Cabotæ, durante vita sua naturali, de thesauro nostro ad receptum scacarii nostri Westmonasterij per manus thesaurariorum, & Camerarium nostrorum, ibidem pro tempore existentium, ad festa annuntiationis beate Marię Virginis, natiuitatis sancti Iohannis Baptistę, Sancti Michaelis Archangeli, & Natalis Domini per æquales portiones soluendam. Et ulterius de vberiori gratia nostra, ac de aduifamento, & consensu prædictis damus, & per presentes concedimus præfato Sebastianõ Cabotæ, tot & tantas Denariorum summas, ad quot & quantas dicta annuitas siue annalis redditus centi sexaginta sex librarum, tresdecim solidorum, & quatuor denariorum, a festo sancti Michaelis Archangeli vltimo præterito huc vsque se extendit, & attingit, habendas & recipiendas præfato Sebastianõ Cabotæ & assignatis suis de thesauro nostro prædicto per manus prædictorum Thesaurariorum, & Camerarium nostrorum de dono nostro absque computo, seu aliquo alio nobis hæreditibus, vel successibus nostris proinde reddendo, soluendo, vel faciendo, eo quod expressa mentio, &c. In cuius rei testimonium, &c. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, 6. die Ianuarii, Anno 2. Regis Edwardi sexti.

¶ The same in English.

Edward the sixt by the grace of God, King of England, France and Ire land, desirous of the safety, to all Christian people to whom these presents shall come, sendeth greeting. Knowe ye that wee, in consideration of the good and acceptable service done, and to be done, unto us by our beloued seruant Sebastian Cabote, of our speciall grace, certayne knowledge, meeete motion, and by the aduise and consent of our person, our Counsaile, haue Sebastian Cabota, pension, thirtene shillinges annuall, of yeer of our Treasurie accords and paymaster

the blessed Cirgill treasurie of our L. 10. sh.

And further, of our
and by these presents
summes of money
pound, thirtene shillinges the Archangel last past
bota, and his assigne and officers of our C pension, payed, of m made to the contrary.

In witness where-
of we haue subscribed at Westminster the
L. 1548.

A voyalian

whereby hee manyes very rare, estimate of Sestos upon the Olympanes ceeth, and Brasil. used there sugget into great fan-savage kings of the pound thirtie into C pledge for his safeti
king being arriued, at Whitehall: at the not without cause: for in small bones were they was reputed for set a precious stone very strange to the Dauing remaine the, M. Haukins ac-his Countrey: but saunge king died at keram his pledge,
of our men with the
any man of the con-

and by the advise and counsell of our most honourable uncle Edward duke of Somerset gouernour of our person, and Protector of our kingdomes, dominions, and subiects, and of the rest of our Counsaile, haue given and graunted, and by these presentes doe giue and graunt to the saide Sebastian Cabota, a certaine annuittie, or yeerely reuenue of one hundred, threescore and five poundes, thirtene shillings foure pence sterling, to haue, enioye, and yeerely receiue the foresaide annuittie, or yeerely reuenue, to the foresaide Sebastian Cabota during his naturall life, out of our Treasurie at the receite of our Exchequer at Westminster, at the handes of our Treasurers and paymasters, there remapping for the time being, at the sealles of the Annuntiation of the blessed Virgine Mary, the Natiuittie of S. Iohn Baptist, S. Michael the Archangel, and the Natiuittie of our Lord, to be payde by equall portions.

And further, of our moze speciall grace, and by the advise and consent of foresaide we doe giue, and by these presentes doe graunt vnto the foresaide Sebastian Cabota, so many, and so great summes of money as the saide annuittie or yeerely reuenue of an hundred, threescore and five poundes, thirtene shillings 4. pence, doeth amount and rise vnto from the lease of S. Michael the Archangel last past vnto this present time, to be had and receiued by the foresaide Sebastian Cabota, and his assignes out of our foresaid Treasurie, at the handes of our foresaide Treasurers, and officers of our Exchequer of our free gift without accompe, or any thing else therfore to be payed, payed, or made, so vs, our heires or successours, soasmuch as herein expresse mention is made to the contrary.

In witness whereof we haue caused these our Letters to be made patents: Witness the king at Westminster the first day of Januarie, in the second yeece of his raigne. The yeece of our Loyde: 548.

A voyage to Brasill, made by the worshipfull M. William Hawkins of Plimmouth, father to sir Iohn Hawkins knight now liuing, in the yeece 1530.

Our M. William Hawkins of Plimmouth, a man for his wisdome, valoure, experience, and skill in sea causes much esteemed, and beloued of king Henry the eight, and being one of the principall Sea Captaines in the West partes of England in his time, not contented with the shoye voyages commonly then made onely to the known coastes of Europe, armed out a tall and goodly ship of his owne of the burthen of 250. tunnes, called the Pole of Plimmouth, wherewith hee made three long and famous voyages vnto the coast of Brasill, a thing in those times very rare, especially to our Nation. In the course of which voyages he touched at the Riuer of Senos vpon the coast of Guinea, where hee trafiqued with the Negroes, and tooke of them Elephants teeth, and other commodities which that place yeeldeth: and so arriuing on the coast of Brasill, shew there such discretion, and behaued himselfe so wisely with those sauage people, that he grew into great familiaritie and friendship with them. In somuch that in his 2. voyage, one of the sauage kings of the Countrey of Brasill, was contented to take shippe with him, and to bee transported hither into England: wherunto M. Hawkins agreed, leauing behinde in the Countrey as a pledge for his safetie and returne againe, one Martin Cockeram of Plimmouth. This Brasilian king being arriued, was brought by to London, and presented to king Henry the 8. lying as then at Whitehall: at the sight of whom, the king and all the Nobilitie did not a little marueile, and not without cause: for in his cheekes were holes made according to their sauage maner, and therein small bones were planted, standing an inch out from the said holes, which in his owne Countrey was reputed for a great hauerie. He had also another hole in his necke lippe, wherein was set a precious stone about the bignesse of a pease: All his apparell, behauiour and gesture, were very strange to the beholders.

Quaunting remained here the space almost of a whole yere, and the king with his sight fully satisfied, M. Hawkins according to his promise and appointment, purposed to courey him againe into his Countrey: but it fell out in the way that by change of ayre, and alteration of diet, the saide sauage king died at Sea, which was feared woulde turne to the losse of the life of Martin Cockeram his pledge. Nevertheless, the Sauiages being fully perswaded of his honest dealing of our men with their Prince, refused againe the saide pledge, without any harme to him, or any man of the companie: which pledge of theirs they brought home againe into England, with their shippes, rigged, and furnished with the commodities of the Countrey. Which Marine Cocke ram, by the witness of sir John Haukins, being an officer in the towne of Plummouth, was living within these fewe yeeres.

I haue bene informed by M. Anthony Garrard an ancient & worshipfull merchant of London, that this voyage to Brasill was frequented by Robert Reniger, Thomas Borey, and diuers other wealtie Marchantes of Southhampton, about 50. yeeres past, to wit, in the yeere 1540.

An acte against the exaction of money or any other thing by any officer for licence to trafique into Iseland, and New found land, made in An. 2. Edwardi sexti,

Forthasmuch as within these fewe yeeres now last past, there hath bene leuied, pertained & taken by certaine of the officers of the Admiraltie, of such Marchantes, and fishermen as haue vsed and practised the adventures and iourneys into Is- land, New found land, Ireland, and other places commodious for fishing, and the getting of fish, in and vpon the seas or other wise, by way of Marchants in those parties diuers great exactions, as summes of money, doles or shares of fish, & such other like things, so the great discouragement & hinderance of the same marchants and fishermen, and to no litle damage of the whole common wealth, and thereof also great complaints haue bene made, & informations also preely to the kings Haulties most honourable counsell: for reformation whercof, & to the intent also that the said marchants and fishermen may haue occasion rather to practise and vse the same trade of marchandizing, and fishing freely without any such charges or exactions, as is before limited, wher: by it is to be thought that moze plenty of fish shal come into this realme, & thereby to haue the same at moze reasonable prices: Be it therfore enacted by the king our soueraigne Lord, and the lords & commons in this present parliament assembled, and by authoritie of the same, that neither the Admiral, nor any officer, or minister, officers or ministers of the Admiraltie for the time being, shall in any wise hereafter exact, receiue, or take by himselfe his seruant, deputie, seruants, or deputies of any such marchant or fisherman, any summe or summes of money, doles or shares of fish, or any other reward, benefite or aduantage whatsoeuer it be for any licence to passe this Realme to the saide voyages or any of them, nor vpon any respect concerning the saide voyages, nor any of them, vpon paine to forfeite for the first offence treble the summe, or treble the value of the rewarde, benefite or aduantage, that any such officer or minister shall hereafter haue or take of any such marchant or fisherman. For the which forfeiture the partie griued, and euery other person or persons whatsoeuer he or they be, shall and may sue for the same by information, bill, plaint, or action of debt in any of the kings courts of record: The king to haue the one moitie, and the partie complayning the other moitie: in which suite no assigne, protection, or wager of lawe shalbe allowed. And for the second offence the partie so offending, not onely to loose and forfeite his or their office or offices in the Admiraltie, but also to make fine and ransome at the kings will, and pleasure.

By this act it appeareth, that the trade out of England to New found land was common and frequented about the beginning of the raigne of Edward the 6. namely in the yeere 1548, and it is much to be maruelled, that by the negligence of our men, the countrey in all this time hath bene no better searched.

The first voyage of the right worshipfull and valiant knight, sir John Haukins, now treasurer of her Maiesties nauie

Royall, made to the West Indies 1562.

Master John Haukins hauing made diuers voyages to the ples of the Cana-ries, and there by his good and vpright dealing being growne in loue and fa-uour with the people, informed himselfe amongst them by diligent inquirition, of the State of the West India, wherof he had receiued some knowlege by the instructions of his father, but increased the same by the advertisement and reports of that people. And being amongst other particulars assured, that Negroes were very good marchandise in Hispaniola, and that store of Negroes might easly be had vpon the coast of Guinea, resolved with himselfe to make trial thereof,
and

and communicate Ducker, Sir Thom
and others. All tees and aduentu pounded: The on ment as General Haupton: And c
women: in which well, and other i With this coun
ber 1562, and in from thence he
the Countrey is by the sword, and merchandises, w
the Island of His raunce of his Eng farther then that he went to Port also hee sailed o his coaching, wh
for which he rece
do not onely lat
but he stragbred Spaine. And the
of the Caycos, West India. A uenturers he ca

A VO

I procured a th runne, and had the Spanish ma
was in the com
himselfe appoi Spaine, althoug
the all beyare being vnder th
nia, wher: am otherwise call leagues distan Pueblo de los bing men to i
It is a Citie y
I hauing con Spanish fleet, and there recei
ducars, & mo
the commodities

and communicated that devise with his worshipfull friends of London: namely with Sir Lionell Ducker, Sir Thomas Lodge, M. Gunston his father in lawe, Sir William Winter, M. Bromfield, and others. All which persons liked so well of his intention, that they became liberrall contributors and adventurers in the action. For which purpose there were 3. good shippes immediately provided: The one called the Salomon of the burthen of 120. tunne, wherein M. Haukins himselfe went as Generall: The 2. the Swallow of 100. tunnes, wherein went for Captaine M. Thomas Haupo: And the 3. the Jonas a barke of 40. tunnes, wherein the Master supplied the Captaines name: in which small flette, M. Haukinsooke with him not above 100. men, for feare of sickness, and other inconveniences, wherunto men in long voyages are commonly subject.

With this company hee put off and departed from the coast of England in the month of October 1562. and in his course touched first at Teneriffe, where he received friendly intertainment. From thence hee passed to Sierra Leona, upon the coast of Guinea, which place by the people of the Countrey is called Tagarin, where he stayed some good time, and got into his possession partly by the sword, and partly by other meanes, to the number of 300. Negroes at the least, besides other marchandises, which that Countrey yeeldeth. With this praye he sailed over the Ocean sea unto the Island of Hispaniola, and arrived first at the port of Isabella: and there hee had reasonable reverence of his English commodities, as also of some part of his Negroes, trusting the Spaniards no further, then that by his owne strength he was able still to master them. From the port of Isabella he went to Porte de Plata, where he made like sales, standing alwayes up to his gorne: from thence also hee sailed to Monte Christi another port on the North side of Hispaniola, and the last place of his touching, where he had peaceable traffique, & made vent of the whole number of his Negroes: for which he received in those 3. places by way of exchange, such quantitie of marchandise, that he did not onely lade his owne 3. shippes, with hides, ginger, sugars, and some quantitie of pearles, but hee freighted also two other bukes with hides, and other like commodities, which he sent into Spaine. And thus leaving the Island, hee returned and disimboke, passing over by the Islands of the Caycos, without further entering into the bay of Mexico, in this his first voyage to the West India. And so with prosperous successe and much gaine to himselfe, and the aforesaide adventurers he came home, and arrived in the month of September 1563.

A voyage made by M. Roger Bodenham, to S. Iohn de Vllua in the bay of Mexico, in the yeere 1564.

Roger Bodenham, having a long time lived in the Citie of Siuill in Spaine, being there married, and by occasion thereof using trade and traffique to the parts of Barbarie, grew at length to great losse and hindrance by that new trade begunne by mee in the Citie of Fez: Whereupon being returned into Spaine I began to call my wits about me, and to consider with my selfe by what meanes I might recouer & renew my State: and in conclusion by the ayde of my friends, I procured a shippe called the Barke Foxe, pertaining to London, of the burthen of 8. or 9. score tunnes, and with the same I made a voyage to the West India, having obtained good favour with the Spanish marchants, by reason of my long abode, and marriage in the Countrey. My voyage was in the companie of the Generall Don Pedro Melendes, for Noua Hispania. Who being himselfe appointed Generall for Terra firma and Peru, made his sonne our Generall for Newe Spaine, although Pedro Melendes himselfe was the principall man and director in both flectes. We all departed from Cales together the last day of May in the yeere 1564. And I with my ship being under the conduct of the sonne of Don Pedro aforesaide, arrived with him in Noua Hispania, where immediately I tooke order for the discharge of my marchandise at the port of Vera Cruz, otherwise called Villa Rica, to be transported thence to the Citie of Mexico, which is 70. and abde leagues distant from the said port of Villa Rica. In the way are many good townes, as namely, Pueblo de los Angelos, & another called Tlaxcalan. The citie of Mexico hath 3. great caufets to bring men to it, compassed with a lake, so that it needeth no walles, being so defended by the water. It is a Citie plentiful of all necessary things, having many faire houses, Churches & monasteries. I having continued in the Countrey the space of 9. months, returned againe for Spaine with the Spanish flect, & delivered the marchandise & silver which I had in my ship, into the Contraction house, and there received my freight, which amounted outwards and homewards to the value of 13000. lincas, & more. I observed many things in my time of my abode in Noua Hispania as well touching the commodities of the countrey, as the manners of the people both Spaniards & Indians, but because the Spanish histories are full of those obseruations, I omit them, and refer the readers to the same: onely this I say, that the commodity of Couchenillo, groweth in greatest abundance about the towne of Pueblo de los Angelos, and is not there worth about 40. pence the pound.

The voyage made by the worshipful M. Iohn Haukins Esquire, now knight, Captaine of the Iesus of Lubek, one of her Maiesties shippes, and Generall of the Salomon, and other two barkes going in his companie to the coast of Guinea, and the Indies of Noua Spania, being in Affrica, and America : begunne in Au. Dom. 1564.

October 18.

The opinion,
the Iohn Baptist, and the Merline bound to Guinea.

After Iohn Haukins with the Iesus of Lubek, a shippe of 700. and the Salomon a ship of 7. scope, the Tiger a barke of 50. and the Swallowe of 30. tonnes, being all well furnished with men to the number of one hundred, threescore and tenne, as also with ordnance, and vittuall requisite for such a voyage, departed out of Plimmouth the 18. day of October, in the yere of our Lord 1564. with a prosperous winde: at which departing, in cutting the foystail, a maruelous misfortune happened to one of the officers in the shippe, who by the puelle of the heare was slaine out of hande, being a sorrowfull beginning to them all. And after christ leaving our terme leagues to the sea, he met the same day with the Minion a ship of the Queenes Maiesties, wherof was Captaine Dauid Carlet, and also her consoyt, the Iohn Baptist of London, being bounde to Guinea also, who halsted one the other after the custome of the Sea, with certaine pieces of ordnance for ioy of their meeting: which done, the Minion departed from him to seeke her other consoyt, the Merline of London, which was a starme out of sight, leauing in M. Haukins companie the Iohn Baptist her other consoyt.

Thus sayling forwarde on their way with a prosperous winde untill the 21. of the same moneth, at that time a great storme arose, the winde being at North-east about 9. a clocke in the night, and continued so 23. houres together, in which storme M. Haukins lost the companie of the Iohn Baptist aforesaid, and of his pinnelle called the Swallow, his other 3. shippes being soe beaten with the storme, the 23. day the Swallow to his no small reioycing, came to him againe in the night, 10. leagues to the Northward of Cape Finister, he hauing put roomer not being able to double the Cape. In that there rose a contrary winde at South-west. The 25. the wind continuing contrary, he put into a place in Galicia, called Ferroll, where hee remained five dayes, and appointed all the Masters of his shippes an order for the keeping of good companie in this manner: The small shippes to be at waies a head and a weacher of the Iesus, and to speake twice a day with the Iesus at least: if in the day the Ensigne bee ouer the poope of the Iesus, or in the night two lightes, then shall all the shippes speake with her: If there be three lightes aboord the Iesus, then doeth she call about: If the weather be extreme, that the small shippes cannot keepe companie with the Iesus, then all to keepe companie with the Salomon, and sooythwith to repaire to the Island of Teneriffe, to the Northward of the roade of Sirroes; If any happen to any misfortune, then to shewe two lightes, and to shooote off a piece of Ordinance. If any loose companie, and come in sighte againe, to make three paues, and strike the Spyon three times: Where God dayly, loue one another, preserue your vittuals, be ware of fire, and keepe good companie.

The 26. day the Minion came in also where hee was, for the reioycing wherof hee gaue them certaine pieces of Ordinance, after the courtesie of the Sea for their welcome, but the Minions men had no murther, because of their consoyt the Merline, whome at their departure from M. Haukins byon the coast of England they went to seeke: and hauing mette with her, kept companie two dayes together, and at last by misfortune of fire (though the negligence of one of their gunners) the powder in the gunners roome was set on fire, which with the first blast strooke out her poope, and therewithall lost thye men, besides many soe burned (which escaped by the Triganidine being at her sterne) and immediatly, to the great losse of the owners, and most horrible sight to the beholders, she souke before their eyes.

The 30. day of the moneth M. Haukins with his consoyts and companie of the Minion, hauing now bene both the Triganidine as her sterne, wayed ancre, and set sail on their voyage, hauing a prosperous winde therrunto.

The fourth of Nouember they had sight of the Islande of Madera, and the six day of Teneriffe, Council, which came to the Coast

a head of 8. hee
the manner they used, upon which Teneriffe, and be-yet to fetch it by he could not discer-marke of Teneriffe Teneriffe, with the poop of Adecia, be-being in the weatsmall, some what wing to haue sent welled a leagu
upon the two po
others, to the num
re to his eye crea
onger, not know
call to them, for th
be an especiall fri welld. And in the
both their hands,
and then asking se
swoy, whome he common with hin things, and of the whed for him. In
of the Iesus, which kiffe and his men,
of came to him, o
some what of the asking thereof, the
for they make two compared to barme
many other seruic pellers, carell, nor of the people for id as he is caught gender back ward ned, with a little whole, sauing the
the head, with a b head with her to carry 500. w bians, a certai
will see that he abundance, that hauwen to be a
to marvell, seeing will were going perce. Of the tre all, but not so ab of a prate tree. O sterne, and when now known, by ther: and therof

...abundance about the
...and.

Esquire, Maiesities

...and the Salo-
...of 300000
...such a voyage,
...of our Lord 1564.
...of the heat was
...the fasting our terme
...Patentes, whereof
...being bounde to
...create pieces of op
...the her other com
...Hawkins companie

...of the same mo-
...a clocke in the
...the companie of the
...ness being soe bea-
...e to him againe in
...not being able to
...wind continuing
...the dapes, and ap-
...ie in this maner
...e twice a day with
...p in the night two
...word the Iesus, then
...keeps companie
...to repaire to the
...to any misfortune,
...ompanie, and come
...God dayly, loose

...of her gave them
...but the Minions
...are from M. Hau-
...re, kept companie
...f one of their gun-
...nd strooke out ber
...ed by the Digniti-
...most horrible sight

...the Minion, he
...to voyage, having

...the first day of Teneriffe,

...Cannibals, which they thought to have bene the Canaries, in that they supposed themselves to have
...to the Eastward of Teneriffe, and were not: but the Wynton being a thre or foure leagues
...a head of his, as on her course to Teneriffe, having better sight thereof, then the other had, and by
...that means they parted companie. For Master Hawkins and his companie, went moze to the ...West, upon which course having sailed a while, he espied another Island, which he thought to be Teneriffe, and being not able, by the meanes of the fogge upon the hills, to discern the same, nor
...yet to fetch it by night, went sooner, untill the morning, being the 7. of November, which as yet
...he could not discern, but sailed along the coast, the space of two bowyes, to perceive some certaine
...marke of Teneriffe, and found no likelihood thereof at all, accompeing that to be, as it was in ...the Isle of Palmes: and so sailing forwards, espied another Island, called Gomera, and also Teneriffe, with the which he made, and sailing all night, came in the morning the next day to the ...port of Adezia, where he found his pinnelle which had departed from him the sixt of the month,
...being in the weather of him, and espying the pike of Teneriffe all a high, bare thither. At his ar...rival, some what before he came to anchor, he hoyle out his ships pinnelle robbing a shoare, inten...ding to have sent one with a letter to Peter de ponte, one of the Gouernours of the Island, who
...dwelled a league from the shoare: but as he pretended to have landed, suddnly there appeared
...upon the two points of the roade, men leuelling of ballis and harguebusses to them, with diuers
...others to the number of 80. with halberes, yokes, swords, and targets, which happened so contra-
...rie to his expectation, that it did greatly amase him, and the moze, because he was now in their ...danger, not knowing well how to auoide it, without some mischance. Wherefoze he determined ...to call to them, for the better appealing of the matter, declaring his name, and professing himselfe
...to be an especiall friend to Peter de ponte, and that he had sundry things for him, which he greatly
...wished. And in the meane time, while he was thus talking with them, whereby he made them to ...hold their hands, he willed the marriners to rowe away, so that at last he gat out of their danger:
...and then asking for Peter De Ponte, one of his names being Signior Nicholas Ponte, came ...forth, whome he perceauing, desired to put his men aside, and he himselfe would leape a shoare, and
...common with him, which they did: so that after communication had betwene them of sundry
...things, and of the feare they both had, Master Hawkins desired to haue certaine necessaries pro...vided for him. In the meane space, while these things were providing, he trimmed the maine mast
...of the Iesus, which in the Roome aforesaid was Spung: here he sojourned 7. daies, refreshing him-
...selfe and his men. In the which time Peter de ponte dwelling at S. Cruz, a Citie 20. leagues
...off, came to him, & gave him as gentle entertainment, as if he had bene his own brother. To speak
...some what of these Islands, being called in olde time Insulz fortunatz, by the meanes of the so-
...rthing thereof, the fruitfulness of them doeth surely excede farre all other that I haue heard of:
...for they make wine better then any in Spaine, they haue grapes of such bigness, that they may be ...compared to damascus, and in taste inferior to none: for sugar, lukes, raisons of the Sunne, and
...many other fruits, abundance: for rosin & rawe silke, there is great soze, they want neither coyne,
...pullets, cattell, nor yet wilde fowle: they haue many Camels also, which being yong, are eaten
...of the people for victuals, and being olde, they are used for carriage of necessaries: whose propertie
...is as he is taught to kneele at the taking of his loade, and unlading againe: his nature is to in-
...gender backward, contrarie to other beastes: of vnderstanding very good, but of shape very deformed,
...with a little bellie, long misshapen legges, and feete very broad of flesh, without a hoofe, all
...whole, sauing the great toe, a backe bearing up like a molehill, a large and thinne necke, with a lit...tle head, with a bunch of hard flesh, which nature hath giuen him in his breast, to lean vpon. His ...head smeth hardy, and is contoured with strawe, and stubble, but of force strong, being well able ...to carry 500. weight. In one of these Islands, called de Fierro, there is by the reportes of the inha...bitants, a certaine tree that raineth continually, by the dropping whereof, the inhabitants and cat-
...till are satisfied with water, for other water haue they none in all the Island. And it raineth in such ...abundance, that it were incredible vnto man to beleue such a vertue to be in a tree, but it is ...known to be a true matter, and a thing obtained by God, at whose power thereth, we ought not ...to marvel, seeing he doth by his providence, as we read in the Scriptures, when the children of Is-
...raell were going into the land of promise, see be them with Manna from heauen, for the space of 40.
...yeeres. Of the trees aforesaid, we sawe in Guinie many, being of great height, dropping continu...ally, but not so abundantly as the other, because the leaues are narrower, and are like the leaues
...of a pear tree. About these Islands, are certaine sitting Islands, which haue bene oftentimes
...sene, and when men approached nere them, they vanishes as the like bene of these Islands
...now known, by the report of the Inhabitants, which were not for made of long time one after the o...ther: and therefore it shoulde seeme he is not yet boyne, to whome God hath appointed the find...ing

The Isle of Valinro, Gomera and Teneriffe.

De Sierra.

Tree dropping water in Guinie.

The pike of Tencriffe.

ding of them. In this Island of the Tencriffe, there is a hill called the Pike, because it is piked, which is in height by their reports, 20. leagues, having both winter and summer, abundance of snowe in the toppe of it: this pike may be scene in a cleere day 50. leagues off, but it is the best as though it were a blacke cloud, a great height in the element. I haue heard of none to be compared with this in height, but in the Iudias I haue scene many, and in my iudgement not inferior to the pike, and so the Spaniards write.

Cape de Bar-
bas.

The 15. of Nouember at night, we departed from Tencriffe, and the 20. of the same, we had sight of 10. Caruels, that were fishing at sea, with whom we would haue spoken, but they tra-ving vs, led into a place of Barbarie, called Cape de las Barbas.

The 20. the shippes pinnesse, with two men in her, sailing by the shippe, was ouertaken by the ouersight of them that were in her, the wind being so great, that before they were espied, and the ship had cast about for them, she was distu-rued halfe a league to leeward of the pinnesse, and had lost sight of her, so that there was small hope of recouerie, had not Gods helpe, and the Captaines diligence bene, who hauing well marked, which way the pinnesse was by the Summe, appointed 24. of the lustiest rowers in the great boate, to rowe to windwards, and so recouered, contrary to all mens expectations, both the pinnesse and the men sitting vpon the keele of her.

Cape Blanco.

The 25. he came to Cape Blanco, which is vpon the coast of Affrica, and a place where the Portingals doe ride that fish there, in the month of Nouember especially, and is a very good place of fishing, for Pargoes, Mullet, and Dogge fish. In this place the Portingals haue no holde for their defense, but haue rescue of the Barbarians, whom they entertaine as their souldiers, for the time of their being there, and for their fishing vpon that coast of Affrica, doe pay a certaine tribute to the King of the Moores. The people of that part of Affrica, are tawnie, hauing long haire, without any apparell, sauing before their priuie members. Their weapons in warres, are bowes, and arrowes.

Cape Verde
in 14. degrees.

The 26. we departed from S. Auis Bape, within Cape Blanco, where we refreshed our selues with fish, and other necessaries: and the 29. we came to Cape Verde, which lieth in 14. degrees, and a halfe. These people are all blacke, and are called Negroes, without any apparell, sauing before their priuities: of stature goodly men, and well liking, by reason of their foode, which passeth all other Guynians for hie, goats, pullin, rise, fruits, and fish. Here we tooke fishes with haire like Conies, and teeth nothing varying, of a iollie thickness, but not past a foote long, and is not to be eaten without flaying or cutting of his head. To speake somewhat of the sundry sortes of their Guynians. The people of Cape Verde, are called Leophares, and counted the goodliest men of all other, sauing y<sup>e</sup> Manicco goes, which do inhabit on this side y<sup>e</sup> Cape de Buena Speranza. These Leophares haue warres against the Ieloffes, which are borders by them: their weapons are bowes, and arrowes, targettes, and shoye daggers, darts also, but varying from other Negroes: in whereas the other be a long dart, to fight with in their hands, they carry five or six small ones a peece, which they cast with. These men also are moxe ciuill then any other, because of their deile craftlike with the Frenchmen, and are of nature very gentle, and louing: for while we were there, we tooke in a Frenchman, who was one of the 19. that going to Brasile, in a Barke of Diepe, of 60. tunnes, and being a sea boord of Cape De Verde, 200. leagues, the planks of their barke with a sea brake out vpon them so suddenly, that much a doe they had to saue themselves in their boates: but by Gods prouidence, the wind being westerly, which is rarely scene there, they got to the shoare, to the Isles Braues, and in great penurie got to Cape Verde, where they remained five weekes, and had meate and drinke of the same people. The said Frenchman hauing so taken his fellows, which were: here leagues off from the shoare, and wandring with the Negroes too and fro, fornuied to come to the water side, and communing with certaine of his countrey men, which were in our ship, by their perswasions came away with vs: but his entertainment amongst them was such, that he desired it not: but through the importunace request of his Countrey men, consented at the last. Here we staid but one night, and part of the day: for the 7. of December, we came away, in that pretending to haue taken Negroes there perforce, the Spaniards men gaue them there to vnderstand of our coming, and our pretence, wherefore they did auoide the success we had laid for them.

The 8. of December, we ankered by a small Island, called Alcatrazas, whererin at our going a shoare, we found nothing but sea bitos, as we call them Ganets, but by the Portingals called Alcatrazas, who for that cause gaue the said Island the same name. Wherinn halfe of our boates were laden with pong and olde towle, who not being vled to the sight of men, flew so about vs, that we stroke them downe with poles. In this place, the two ships riding, the two barkes, with their boates, went into an Island of the Sapies, called La Formio, to see if they could take any of them, and

and there landed them in such order as they came to a
with their bowes
backes to them as cheerful: but I thin-ke was not I thin-
ke a harquebus
could not see the cause we could n-
of a pistol, which we with our gre-

The 10. of
I came two daies me: for whereas day, the Salomon going every day before were These Samboses
haue so planted goats, of small Palmito trees, si-
ly, whereby they pass, which they
in that they ney-
take many in the boles: the white de, in their teeth
their flesh, both lea tekin. These Sthe spoile of their not care mans fle-
not vled, but by some great store.
who prouoked by singed thereunto
those that they
another occasion,
was of their riches appointed for that haue the same re-this Island of Sa-
of one peece of long, and one in out the arriuall
they are about ding by night, with heads and leng-
four to twere, an
ton. Their tow-
their towne, and they are built in a case, with wake
some large, & etc
and over the roof
partly conuerted
all their prouision
they lie in is vru-

...eraule it is p...
...er, abundance of
...ff, but it is the best
...f none to be compa
...erment not inferior

...of the same, wee had
...oken, but they ita

...was ouert h...
...y were espied, and
...pinnelle, and had
...and the Captaines
...Sonne, appointed
...ouered, contrary to
...er.

...o a place where the
...and is a very good
...ngals haue no hope
...their souldiers, for
...oe pay a certaine m...
...hauing long haire,
...warres, are better,

...refresht our selues
...dith in 14. degrees,
...apparell, sauing be
...foode, which passeth
...ie fishes with bread
...e long, and is not to
...wazy foxes of the
...the goodliest men of
...na Speranza. Their
...their weapons are
...other Negroes: for
...of fire small ones a
...e cause of their dulle
...while we were there,
...Barke of Depe, of
...inkes of their barke
...themselves in their
...ene there, they got to
...e they remained fire
...hauing so; taken his
...the Negroes too and
...countreymen, which
...inent amongst them
...Countreymen, com...
...of December, were
...spynious men gave
...did auoide the flames

...herein at our going a
...ortingals called Al-
...e of our boates were
...about vs, that wee
...backes, with their
...to take any of them,
...and

and there landed to the number of 80, in armour, and espying certaine, made to them, but they flew in such order into the woods, that it dooted them not to followe: so going on their way forward all they came to a riuer which they could not passe ouer, they espyed on the other side two men, who with their bowes and arrowes shot terribly at them. Whereupon we discharged certaine harquebusses to them againe, but the ignorant people waied it not, because they knewe not the danger thereof; but vsing a maruelous crying in their sight, with leaping, and turning their tails, that it was most strange to see, and gaue vs great pleasure to behold them. At the last, one being hurt with a harquebuss upon the thigh, looked upon his wound, and wist not howe it came, because he could not see the pellet. Here Master Hawkins perceaunting no good to be done amongst them, because we could not finde their toynes, and also not knowing how to goe into Rio grande, for want of a pilot, which was the very occasion of our comming thither: and finding so many Idols, feared with our great ships to goe in, and therefore departed our pretended way to the Idols.

The 10. of December, hauing a northeast wind, with raine, and storme, which weather continued two daies together, was the occasion, that the Salomon, and Tyger losse our company: for whereas the Iesus, and pinnelle ankered at one of the Islands, called Sambula, the 12. day, the Salomon and Tyger came not thither, till the 14. In this Island, we staid certaine daies, going euery day a shoare, to take the Inhabitantes, with burning, and spoiling their townes, who before were Sapies, and were conquered by the Samboses, Inhabitantes beyond Sierra Leona.

These Samboses had in habited there 3. yeeres before our comming thither, and in so short space had so planted the ground, that they had great plentie of mill, rice, roots, pompions, pullin, goates of small spee dyed, euery house full of the Countrey fruite planted by Gods prouidence, as Palmito trees, fruites like dates, and sundry other in no place in all that Countrey so abundantly, whereby they liued more deliciously then other. These inhabitants haue diuers of the Sapies, which they tooke in the warres, as their slaues, whome onely they keepe to till the ground, in that they neither haue the knowlege thereof, nor yet will worke themselves, of whome we tooke many in that place, but of the Samboses none at all, for they fled into the maine. All the Samboses haue white teeth as wee haue, far vnlike to the Sapies, which doe inhabit about Rio grande, for their teeth are all filed, which they doe for a haunterie, to set out themselves, and doe iagge their fish, both legges, armes, and bodies, as workemanlike, as a Jerkinmaker with his pineth a tuckin. These Sapies be more skilful then the Samboses: for whereas the Samboses liue most by the spoile of their enemies, both in taking their victuals, and eating them also, the Sapies doe not eat mans flesh, vntill in the warres they be driuen by necessitie therunto, which they haue not vntill, but by the example of the Samboses, but liue onely with fruites, and cattell, whereof they haue great store. This plentie is the occasion that the Sapies desire not warre, except they be therunto prouoked by the insulations of the Samboses, whereas the Samboses for want of foode, are insouered thereunto, and therefore are not woont onely to take them that they kill, but also keepe those that they take, vntill such time as they want meate, and then they kill them. There is also another occasion, that prouoketh the Samboses to warre against the Sapies, which is for courtousnes of their riches. For whereas the Sapies haue an order to burie their dead in certaine places appointed for that purpose, with their golde about them, the Samboses diggeth vp the ground, to haue the same creature: for the Samboses haue not the like store of golde, that the Sapies haue. In this Island of Sambula, we found about 50. boates, called Almabyes, or Canoas, which are made of one peece of wood, digged out like a trough, but yet of a good proportion, being about 8. pades long, and one in breadth, hauing a beake head, and a sterne very proportionably made, and on the out side artificially carued, and painted red, and blew: they are able to carry 20. or 30. men, but they are about the coast able to carry three score, and byward. In these Canoas they rowe standing vpright, with an omer somewhat longer then a man, the ende whereof is made about the breadth and length of a mans hand, of the largest size. They rowe very swift, and in forme of them liue to wares, and one to sterne make as much way, as a paire of oares in the Thames of London. Their townes are presently diuided with a maine streete at the entering in, that goeth through their towne, and another ouerthwart streete, which maketh their townes crosse waies: their houses are built in a ranke very orderly in the face of the streete, and they are not made round, like a house here, with stakes set full of Palmito leaues, in steede of a wall: they are not much more then a fathom large, & two of height, and thatched with Palmito leaues very close, other some with reede, and ouer the roofe thereof, for the better garnishing of the same, there is a round bundle of reede presently conuerted like a louver: in the inner part, they make a loft of stiches, whereupon they lay all their provision of victuals: a place they reserve at their entrance for the kitchen, and the place they lie in is diuided with certaine mats artificially made with the rinde of Palmito trees: their

The Island called Sambula.

The Samboses

The Sapies.

The Canoas of Africa.

The forme of their townes.

ben.

bedeekes are of small staves, laide along, and raised a foote from the ground, vpon which to laide a matre, and another vpon them when they list: for other covering they haue none. In the middle of the Towne, there is a house larger and higher then the other, but in forme alike, adioyning vnto the which, there is a place made of foure good stacions of woode, and a round rooffe ouer it, the grounde also raised round with claye, a foote high, vpon the which flooze were strabed many fine matres: this is the consultation house, the like whereof is in all Townes, as the Poringals affirme: in which place, when they sitte in Counsell, the King or Captaine sitte in the middle, and the Elders vpon the flooze by him: (for they giue reuerence to their Elders,) and the common foze sitte round about them. There they sitte to examine matters of thist, which if a man be taken with, to steale but a Poringall clothe from another, he is solde to the Poringals for a slaue. They consulte also, and take order what tyme they shall goe to warres: and as it is certainly reported by the Poringals, they take order in gathering of fruites in the season of the peere, and also for receauing of Palmite wine, which is gathered by a hole cutte in the toppe of a tree, and a goyde set for the receauing thereof, which falleth in by dropes, and yeeldeth freche wine againe within a moneth, and this diuided, part and portion like to euery man, by the iudgement of the Captaine and Elders, euery man holdeth himselfe contented: and this surely I iudge to be a very good order: for otherwise, wherreas scarcelye of Palmite is, euery man would haue the same, which might breed great strife: but for such things, as euery man both plant for himselfe, the sower thereof respecteth it to his owne vse, so that nothing is common, but that which is vsed by mans handes. In their houses there is moze common passage of Lizards, like C. ungs, and other greater, of blacke and blew colour, of neere a foote long, besides their tails, then there is with vs of Wile in great houses. The Sapies and Samboses also, vse in their warres bowes and arrowes, made of reedes, with heads of pyon poisoned with the iuice of a C. umber, whereof I haue had many in my handes. In their battels they haue target men, with boarde wicker targets, and darts with heaves at both endes, of pyon, the one in forme of a two edged swoorde, a foote and a halfe long, and at the other ende, the pyon long of the same length, made to counterpeale it, that in casting, it might kee leuell, rather then for any other purpose, as I can iudge. And when they espye the enemy, the Captaine to theere his men, crieth, Hungry, and they answer Heygre, and with that euery man placeth himselfe in order, for about euery target man three bowemen will couer themselves, and shooe as they see advantage: and when they giue the onset, they make such terrible cryes, that they may be heard two miles off. For their beliefe, I can heare of none that they haue, but in such as they themselves imagine to see in their dreames, and so worshippe the pictures, whereof we sawe some like vnto Diuels. In this Island aforesaide, wee sojourned vnto the one and twentieth of December, where hauing taken certaine Negroes, and of their fruites, rise, and myll, as we could well carry away, whereof there was such store, that we might haue laden one of our Barkes therewith, we departed, and at our departure, diuers of our men being desirous to goe a shoare, to fetch Pompons, which hauing p.oued, they found to be very good, certaine of the Tygers men went also, amongst the which there was a Carpenter, a pong man, who with his fellowes hauing set many, and carried them downe to their boates, as they were ready to depart, desired his fellowes to carry, while he might goe by to fetch a few which he had layed by for himselfe, who being moze licentious then circumspect, went by without weapon, and as hee went by alone, possibly being marked of the Negroes that were vpon the trees, espying him what he did, perreceiving him to be alone, and without weapon, dogged him, and finding him occupied in binding his Pompons together, came behynd him, ouerthrowing him, and straight cutte his throate, as he afterwards was founde by his fellowes, who came to the place for him, and there founde him dead.

The extreme negligence of one of the company.

The first Cal. b. 17.

The towne of Bamba.

The two and twentieth the Captaine went into the Riuer, called Callowfa, with the two Barkes, and the Iohns pinnetle, and Salomons boate, leauing at anker in the Rivers mouth the two shippes, the Riuer being twentie leagues in, where the Poringals road: he came the first and twentieth, and dispatched his business, and so returned with two Carauels, laden with Negroes.

The 27. the Captaine being aduertised by the Poringals, of a Towne of the Negroes, called Bamba, being in the way as they returned, where was an ouerly great quantitie of golde, but so that there were not about forty men, and a hundred women, and children in the Towne, so that if hee would giue the aduencure vpon the same, hee might gette a hundred slouts: with the which springing hee bearing glauce, because the Poringals should not thinke him to bee of so bafe a courage, but that hee wold to giue them that, and greater attempts: and being

being thereunto
 here, where he say before the men in armour, guides certaine
 after boate, and of this in a comp
 in the meane t
 whereas if stue worthwhile to 40
 by a route of the
 some of them, bu Negroes who stie
 that some with g
 the water, and ye
 when men went ting at them in t coming, they r they returned ag
 somewhat discon
 ry cheerfull out of the rest, a ligh Poringals being to further displea
 gues, and lost se
 and he had 27. o same instant, a m up shacks of T saure by the Salo
 of the lesus men, ch, and straped w
 The 28. they
 to Taggarin.

The first of J
 we called the C
 came to Taggar
 two shippes thit
 thinking to haue
 some at their bo
 to the castles, and want we had of make, where the peere there the ons stie, and the ether. The time here stene, to the
 nes of our men,
 day.

The 28. of J
 now, before whic
 and as they came gree in a table
 a shoare, hauing
 in another, but a great company
 their shippes, no
 were, which cl had with the 12

being thereunto also the more p[ro]uoked with the prosperous successe he had in other Islands advent, where he had put them all to flight, and taken in one boate 20. together, determined to stay before the Towne three or foure houres, to see what he could doe: and therefore prepared his men in armour, and weapon together, to the number of forty men well appointed, hauing to their guides certaine Poringals, in a boate, who brought some of them to their death: the landing boate after boate, and diuers of our men scattering themselves, contrarie to the Captaines will, by one of them in a companie, for the hope they had to finde golde in their houses, ransacking the same, in the meane time the Negroes came vpon them, and hurte many, being thus scattered, whereas if they had bene together, they had bene able, as their companies did, to giue the o-verthwote to 40. of them, and being diuised to take their boates, were followed so hardly by a rout of Negroes, who by that took courage to pursue them to their boates, that not onely some of them, but others standing a shoare, not looking for any such matter, by meanes that the Negroes did lie at the first, and our companie remained in the towne, were suddenly so set vpon, that some with great hurt recouered their boates: other some not able to recouer the same,ooke the water, and perished by meanes of the oaze. While this was a doing, the Captaine, who with a wester men went though the Towne, returned, finding 200. Negroes at the waters side, shooting at them in the boates, and cutting them in peeces, which were drowned in the water, at whole coming they ranne all away: so he entred his boates, and before he could put off from the shoare, they returned againe, and shot very fiercely, and hurt diuers of them. Thus wee returned backe, somewhat discomfited, although the Captaine in a singular wise manner, with countenance very cheerefull outwardly, as though he did little weigh the death of his men, nor yet the great hurt of the rest, although his heart inwardly was hoken in peeces for it, done in this ende, that the Poringals being with him, should not presume to resist against him, nor take occasion to put him to further displeasure or hinderance, for the death of our men hauing gotten by our going ten Negroes, and lost seuen of our best men, whereof Walter Field, Captaine of the Salomon, was one, and he had 27. of our men hurt. In the same hoare, while this was a doing, there happened at the same instant, a meruelous miracle to them in the shippes, who roade ten leagues to seaward, by many banks of Tuberon, who came about the shippes, among which one was taken by the Iesus, and sent by the Salomon, and one very soe hurt, escaped: and so it fell out of our men, whereof one of the Iesus men, and foure of the Salomons were killed, and the 5. hauing 20. wounds, was restrued, and frayed with much adoe.

Portingals
not to be cruel.

Want of circ-umspection in our men.

The 28. they came to their shippes, the Iesus, and the Salomon, and the 30. departed from thence to Taggarin.

Taggarin.

The first of Januarie, the two barkes, and both the boates forsooke the shippes, and went into a river, called the Casseroes, and the 6. hauing dispatched their business, the two barkes returned, and came to Taggarin, where the two shippes were at anchor. Not two daies after the coming of the two shippes thither, they put their water caskes a shoare, and filled it with water, to season the same, thinking to haue filled it with fresh water afterward: and while their men were some a shoare, and some at their boates, the Negroes set vpon them in the boates, and hurt diuers of them, and came to the caskes, and cut off the hoops of twelue butts, which lost vs 4. or 5. dayes time, besides great want we had of the same: sojourning at Taggarin, the Swallowe went by the river about her make, where they sawe great townes of the Negroes, and Canoas, that had three score men in a peere: there they vnderstoode of the Poringals, of a great battell, betwene them of the Sierra Leona side, and them of Taggarin: they of Sierra Leona, had prepared 300. Canoas, to invade the other. The time was appointed not past 6. daies after our departure from thence, which we would haue bene, to the intent we might haue taken some of them, had it not bene for the death, and sick-nes of our men, which came by the contagionnes of the place, which made vs to make haste away.

January.
The river of Casseroes.

Very great Canoas.

The contagion of the Canoe trip of Sierra Leona.

The 18. of Januarie at night, we departed from Taggarin, being bound to the West Indies, before which departure, certaine of the Salomons men went a shoare, to fill water in the night, and as they came a shoare with their boate, being ready to leape a land, one of them espied a Ne-groe in a white coat, standing vpon a rocke, being ready to haue receaued them, when they came a shoare, hauing in sight of his fellows all nine, some in one place leaping out, & some in another, but they by themselves straight againe: whereupon our men doubting they had dealt a great company, and thought to haue taken them at moze advantage, as God would, departed to their shippes, not thinking there had bene such a mischief pretended toward them, as then was in deed. Which the next day we vnderstoode of a Poringall, that came to us, who had traffi-ked with the Negroes, by whom he vnderstoode, that the King of Sierra Leona had made a flie shot

pon which is laide
 ne. In the middle
 e, aboyning vnto
 rooke ouer it, the dra wted many fue
 the Poringals af-
 ch in the middes, (w.) and the come, which if a man the Poringals by a
 and as it is certainason of the peere,
 in the copping of a
 and yeridely strebe man, by the iunge-and this surely I
 euery man would man doth plant by non, but that with Lizards, like the slides their tails,
 use in their waies iutice of a Cumtarget men, with in foyme of a too
 of the same length,
 other purpos, as eu, crieth, Hungry,
 r, for about eury nantage: and when two miles off. For lines imagine to see into Duels. In ver, where hauing carry away, (wherewith,) we departed Thompions, which not also, amongst ing for many, and fellows to carry,
 being moze licious ally being man-cauting him to be his Thompions to as he afterwards
 e founde him nawfa, with the two Rivers mouth the
 he came the first and loaden with the
 the Negroes, called ie of golde, but al-in the Towne, so
 a hundred shoues:
 not thinke him to ter attempts: and being power be could, to take some of vs partly for the desire he had to see what kind of people we were, that had spoiled his people at the Idols, wherof he had newes before our coming, and as I haue also, upon other occasions prouoked by the Tangomangoes, but sure we were that the arme was come downe, by means that in the evening we sawe such a monstrous fire, made by the warning place, that before was not seene, which fire is the onely marke for the Tangomangoes, to know where their armie is alwaies. If these men had come downe in the evening, they had done us great displeasure, for that we were a hoare, sitting water: but God, who worketh all things for the best, would not haue it so, and by him we escaped without danger, his name be praised for it.

Tangomangoes.

February.

The 29. of the same moneth, we departed with all our ships from the Sierra Leona, towards the West Indias, where for the space of 28. daies, we were becalmed, having no wind and then contrary winds, and some Ternados amongst the same calme, which happened to vs very ill, being but reasonably watered, for so great a companie of Negroes, and our selues, which perched vs all, and that without was worth, put vs in such feare, that many neuer thought to haue reached to the Indias, without great death of Negroes, and of themselves: but Almighty God, who neuer suffereth his elect to perish, sent vs the streene of February, the vnderstande Bisele, which is the North west winde, which neuer left vs, till we came to an Island of the Cannibals, called Sancta Dominica, where we arrived the ninth of March, vpon a Saturday: and because it was the most desolate place in all the Islands, we could see no Cannibals, but some of their houses, where they dwelled, and as it should seeme, forsooke the place, for want of fresh water, for wee could finde none there but raine water, and such as fell from the hills, and remanued as a puddle in the dale, wherof we filled for our Negroes. The Cannibals of that Island, and also others adiacent, are the most desperate warriors that are in the Indias, by the Spaniards report, who are neuer able to conquer them, and they are molested by them not a little, when they are driuen to water there in any of those Islands: of very late, not two moneths past, in the same Island, a Carauell being driuen to water, was in the night sette vpon by the Inhabitants, who cutte their cable in the halter, whereby they were driuen a hoare, and so taken by them, and taken, came to one of those Islands, called Guanado, and being driuen to water, could not be the same, for the Cannibals, who fought with him very desperately two daies. For our part also, if we had not lighted vpon the deserted place in all the Island, we could not haue missed, but should haue bene greatly troubled by them, by all the Spaniards report, who make them Devils in respect of men.

Dominica Island. March.

Cannibals eating things cruel, and to be avoided.

The tenth day, at night, we departed from thence, and the streene had sight of nine Islands, called the Alcaldes: and the thirteenth, of an Island, called Margarita, where we were entertained by the Teltigo, and had both beeces and sheepe giuen vs, for the refreshing of our men: but the Governour of the Island, would neither come to speake with our Captaine, neither yet giue him any licence to traffike: and to displeas vs the more, whereas wee had hired a Pilot, to haue gone with vs, they would neither suffer him to goe with vs, but also sent word by a Carauell out of hand, to Santo Domingo, to the Viceroy, who doth represent the Kings person, of our arrival in those parts, which had like to haue turned vs to great displeasure, by the means that the same Viceroy did send word to Capo de la Vela, and to other places along the coast, commanding them by the vertue of his authoritie, and the obedience that they owe to their Prince, no man should traffike with vs, but should resist vs with all the force they could. In this Island, notwithstanding that we were not within foure leagues of the Towne, yet were they so afraid, that not onely the Governour himselfe, but also all the Inhabitants forsooke their Towne, assembling all the Indians to them, and fled into the mountaines, as we were partly certified, and also sawe the experience our selues, by some of the Indians coming to see vs, who by three Spaniards a boord, passing hard by vs, went vnto the Indians, hauing euerie one of them their bowes, and arrows, procuring them away, who before were conversant with vs. Here perceiving no traffike to be had with them, nor yet water for the refreshing of our men, wee were driuen to depart the twentieth day, and the thio and twentieth, we came to a place in the mappe, called Kenimnawo, whither the Captaine going in his pinnet, spake with certaine Spaniards, of whom he demanded traffike, but they made him and were they were but soldiers, not to come thither, and were not able to buy one Negroe: whereupon he asked for a watering place, and they pointed him a place two leagues off, called Sancta Fee, where we found marvellous goodly watering, and commodious for the taking in thereof: for that the fresh water came into the Sea, and so our shippes had aboue 20. fadomes water, where about this place, inhabited certaine Indians, who the next day of delighting in the things of God.

The Religion of the Spaniards in this Island.

March 21. we came to the place called Sancta Fee, where we found marvellous goodly watering, and commodious for the taking in thereof: for that the fresh water came into the Sea, and so our shippes had aboue 20. fadomes water, where about this place, inhabited certaine Indians, who the next day of wee came thither, had of course called in length, hauing by leaders, priuies potatoes be the roots. Their pinnet, but it is so much more delicious than having euerie one wearing the same, which men not to be as it groweth, on the which they the other parties concerned, having this both before and small barrels of grapes, and in the other. These men in waters, which other some with whereof we sawe others that the Sea of two inches high which they may find is of such a sort as the Spaniards as they make it, poison, with the make a medley.

The Indian whom we had hang calson while the Spaniards, who making any further here are made of bone with them women. The pilot had it bene vponly peaceable.

From hence land and the Island sawe five hundred time the Capitan hope, and some him golde, me the manners of christened: but the bene for want of bene for want of bene it, hee was here no such kind and are called a Darbozoa, by the small fens by the our Capitan made to him of the Spaniards of people we were, and as I judge that the armie was made by the warring hangoes, to knowe they had done us such all things by name bee paples ra Leona, to make noise and then to be very all felues, which brought to hime that I mighte see the ordinarie Wyeth of the Cannibals, and because some of their bow of fresh water, by and remaynes as a that Island, and al by the Spaniards a little, when they this past, in the same of the Inhabitantes, who in by them, and attempts, in Sparte, could not doe the For our part also, if e misse, but should like them Devils in

of nine Islands, we were entrep- of our men: but ne, neither yet give ed a Pilot, to come by a Caruall out of our arrivall means that the same no man should traf- Island, notwithstanding that not onely assembling all the also sawe the Spaniards a horseback, and arrivall, no traffike to be prepared the twentieth minnow, whither he demanded traf- and were not able to ed him a place the and commodities by appes had done so the, who the next day of

we came thither, came downe to us, presenting mill & cakes of bread, which they had made of a kind of corne called Spasse, in bignes of a peale, the eare wherof is much like to a graffe, but a span in length, having thereon a number of graines, Also they brought downe to us which we boughte by beanes, pewter whistles, glasses, knives, and ocher trifles, Pennes, Potatoes and pines. These pines are the most delicate rootes that may bee eaten, and doe farre exceede their paltreys of corne. Their pines be of the bignesse of two fistes, the outside wherof, is of the making of a pine apple, but it is soft like the rinde of a Couromber, and the inside eareth like an apple, but it is more delicious then any sweete apple sugred. Their Indians be of colour tawnic like an Olive, having every one of them both men and women, hair all blacke, and no ocher colour, the women wearing the same hanging downe to their shoulders, and the men rounded, and without beards, neither men nor women suffering any haire to growe in any part of their body, but daily pull it off as it groweth. They goe all naked, the men covering no part of their body but their part, by on the which they weare a gourd or piece of cane, made fast with a coper about his loines, leading the ocher partes of their member unconcovered, wherof they take no shame. The women also uncover, having with a cloth which they weare a handbread, wherewith they cover their privities both before and behind. These people be very small feeders, for travelling they carrie but two small boxes of gourdes, wherethin they put in one the iuice of Soyrell wherof they haue great store, and in the ocher sloype of their Spasse, which being moist, they eat, taking sometime of the ocher. These men carrie every man his bowe and arrowes, wherof some arrowes are poisoned by warres, which they keepe in a Cane together, which Cane is of the bignesse of a mans arme, ocher some with broad heades of iron wherewith they strike fishe in the water: the experience wherof we sawe not once nor twice, but daily for the time we taried there, for they are so good archers that the Spaniards for feare thereof arme themselves and their horses with quilted canvas of two inches thicke, and leave no place of their bodie open to their enemies, saving their eyes which they may not hide, and yet oftentimes are they bit in that so small a scantling: their poison is of such a force, that a man being stricken therewith, dieth within foure and twentie howers, as the Spaniards doe affirme, and in my judgement it is like there can bee no stronger poison as they make it, using therewith apples which are very faire and red of colour, but are a strong poison, with the which together with venomous Bats, Vipers, Adders and ocher serpents, they make a medley, and therewith anoint the same.

The use of Soyrell.

The making of their poison.

The Indian women belighe not when they are yong in bearing of children, because it maketh them have hanging breasts which they account to bee great deforming in them, and upon that occasion while they bee yong, they destroy their breasts, saying, that it is fittest for olde women. Whosoever, when they are delivred of child, they goe straight to washe themselves, without making any further ceremonie for it, not lying in bed as our women doe. The beds which they use are made of Gossypine cotton, and wroughed artificially of divers colours, which they carrie about with them when they travell, and making the same fast to two trees, lie therein they and their women. The people bee surely gentle and tractable, and such as desire to live peaceable, or els had it bene impossible for the Spaniards to have conquered them as they did, and the more to live now peaceable, they being so many in number, and the Spaniards so few.

The manner of the yong women.

From hence we departed the eight and twentieth, and the next day we passed betwene the maine land and the Island called Fortuga, a very lowe Island, in the peere of our Lord God one thousand five hundred sixtie five aforesaid, and sailed along the coast untill the first of Apriil, at which time the Captaine sayled along in the Jesus pinnace to discerne the coast, & saw many Caribes a Shore, and some also in their Canowas, which made tokens unto him of friendship, and shewed him golde, meaning thereby that they would traffique for wares. Whereupon he stayed to see the manners of them, and so for two or three cristes gave such things as they had about them and departed: but the Caribes were very importunate to haue them come a Shore, which if it had not bene for want of wares to traffique with them, he would not have denied them, because the Indians we sawe before were very gentle people, and such as doe no man hurt. But as God would have it, hee wanted that thing, which if hee had had, would have bene his confusion: for these here no such kinde of people as wee tooke them to bee, but more diuells a thousand partes, and are eaters and deuourers of any man they catch, as it was after wares delated unto us at Darbozoats, by a Caruall comming out of Spaine with certaine souldiours, and a captaine general sent by the king for those Eastward parts of the Indians, who sailing along in his pinnace about Captaine did to descie the coast, was by the Caribes called a Shore with sundry tokens made to him of friendship, and golde shewen as though they desired traffique, with the which the Spaniards being moued, suspecting no treccie at all, went a Shore amongst them,

The Isle of Fortuga.

C. C.

who

The crueltie of the Caribes.

who was no sooner a shoye, but with 4. or 5. more was taken, the rest of his company being murthered by them, saved themselves by flight, but they that were taken, paid their ranfome with their lives, and were presently eaten. And this is their practise to kill with their golde the ignorant to their shaires: they are bloudsuckers both of Spaniards, Indians, and all that lig be in their laps, not sparing their owne countrymen if they can conveniently come by them. Their pollicie in fight with the Spaniards is maruelous: for they choose for their refuge the mountains and woods where the Spaniards with their horse cannot follow them, and if they fortune to bee met in the plaine where one boyfman may ouerrunne 100. of them, they haue a deuise of late practised by them to pitch stakes of wood in the ground, and also small iron pikes to mischiefe their horse, wherein they shew themselves pollicke warriours. They haue more abun dance of gold then all the Spaniards haue, and liue upon the mountains where the Spines are in surh number, that the Spaniards haue much adoe to get any of them from them, and yet sometimes by assembling a great number of them, which happeneth once in two yeeres, they get a piece from them, which afterwards they keepe sure inough.

Burboyoata.

Thus hauing escaped the danger of them, wee kept our course along the coast, and came the third of Apriill to a Towne called Burboyoata, where his ships came to an anchor, and hee himselfe went a shoye to speake with the Spaniards, to whom he declared himselfe to be an Englishman, and came thither to trade with them by the way of merchandize, and therefore required licence for the same. Unto whom they made answer, that they were forbidden by the king to traffique with any fozen nation, vpon penaltie to forfeit their goods, therefore they desired him not to molest them any further, but to depart as he came, for other comfoze he might not looke for at their hands, because they were subjects & might not goe beyond the law. But hee replied that his necessitie was such, he might not doe so; for being in one of the Queenes Armados of England, and hauing many soulbours in them, he had neede both of some refreshing for them, and of victuals, and of money also, without the which hee could not depart, and with much other talke perswaded them not to feare any dishonest part of his behalfe towards them, for neither would hee commit any such thing to the dishonour of his prince, nor yet for his honest reputation and estimation, wilst hee were too rigorously dealt withall, which hee hoped not to finde at their hands, in that it should as well rebound to their profit, as his owne, and also hee thought they might doe it without damage, because their princes were in amitie one with another, and for our partes wee had free traffique in Spaine and Flaunders, which are in his dominions, and therefore hee knew no reason why hee should not haue the like in all his dominions. To the which the Spaniards made answer, that it laie not in them to giue any licence, for that they had a gouernour to whom the gouernment of those partes was committed, but if they would stay tenne dayes, they would send in their gouernour who was three score leagues off, and would returne answere within the space appointed of his mind.

In the meane time they were contented he should bring his ships into harbour, and there they would deliuer him any victuals he would require. Whereupon the fourth day wee went in, where being one day and receiuing all things according to promise, the captaine abused himselfe, that to remaine there tenne dayes idle, spending victuals and mens wages, and perhaps in the eue receiue no good answer from the gouernour, it were meere follie, and therefore determined to make request to haue licence for the sale of certaine leane and sicke Negroes which he had in his styppe like to die vpon his hands if he kept them ten dayes, hauing little or no refreshing for them, where as other men hauing them, they would be recouered well inough. And this request hee was forced to make, because he had not otherwise wherewith to pay for victuals & for necessaries which he should take: which request being put in writing and presented, the officers and towne dwellers assembled together, and finding his request so reasonable, graunted him licence for thirtie Negroes, which afterwards they caused the officers to view, to the intent they should grant to nothing but that were very reasonable, for feare of answering thereunto afterwards. This being past, our captaine according to their licence, thought to haue made sale, but the day past and none came to buy, who before made them that they had great neede of them, and therefore wist not what to surmise of them, whether they went about to prolong the time of the Gouernour his answere because they would keepe themselves blamelesse, or for any other pollicie hee knew not, and for that purpose sent them word, maruelling what the matter was that none came to buye them. They answered, becaust they had graunted licence onely to the poore to buye those Negroes of small price, and their money was not so readable as other mens of more wealth. Shoye then that as soone as euer they sawe the shippes, they conueyed away their money by their wits that went into the mountains for feare, and were not yet returned, and yet asked two dayes to seeke

the

the wits and see tion, but could not make perceiving the
that if hee had licence places, and send for himselfe to be very necessary to come
and of hed him whome
to haue his licence.
for, which hee percei ferred him his wits as in his shipping, a Negroes for a grea
not to sell better the should not loose his taine being put in groes, which they
and paid for them
groes, being the giue the discharge
might be demaund wilst the Gouernour made petition, des England, being b sight, hee had nec neede of money for therfore although the licence for the
to traffique with that the thing perce seruice, and that it gations wist diu counsell for that m which was the ab
be graunted vnto.

Whereupon the
by a great deale
will be a great lo which was too v shortness of Apri les and pikes, wi
uermour, hee str marche no further
do our captaine
the same abated,
was thorough b
them. And this t should bee to his ness finding so li
wills, or els they beginning our tra Thus hauing
traded to goe ou
mon shoye haui
they were come captaine knew to without any ac al

The nine and

pany being in
in some such the ignorant
to be in their
the pollicie in times and bo
to be met in of late practi
by their host re of gold the number, that by assembling
them, which a

and, and came and her com
an Englishm quired licence to traffique
not to molest their hands, b was necessar
and, and havi victuals, and of victuals the communic any tion, whilste
that it should it without dan
wee had free
knew no reaso
lards made an
to whom the go they would send in the space ap

, and there the
we went in, wh
to himselfe, th chaps in the e ze determined which he had in re thing for them,
this request he
of necessaries cers and towne
in licence for th
they should gra vices. This do the day past and therefore w Gouernour his ie he hurt no
me came to bu e those Negroes Hoye then that their wares that no wayes to seeke
their

ship wines and fetch their money. Notwithstanding, the next day diuers of them came to the port, but could not agree of price, because they thought the price to high. Whereupon the Captaine perceiuing they went about to bring downe the price, and meant to buie, and would not consent if hee had licence, that hee might sell at any reasonable rate, as they were wont in other places, and bid for the Principals of the Towne, and made a she woe would depart, declaring himselfe to be very sorry that hee had so much troubled them, and also that hee had sent for the gouernour to come downe, seeing now his price was to depart, whereat they marvelled much, and asked him what cause moued him thereunto, seeing by their working he was in possibilitie to haue his licence. To the which he replied that it was not onely a licence that he sought, but profit, which hee perceiued was not there to be had, and therefore would seeke further, and withall shewed him his writings what hee paid for his Negroes, declaring also the great charge hee was in his shipping, and mens wages, and therefore to counteruaile his charges, hee must sell his Negroes for a greater price then they offered. So they doubting his departure, put him in countenance to sell better there then in any other place. And if hee sold out that hee had no licence, that hee should not loose his labour in tarrying, for they would buie without licence. Whereupon the captaine being put in comfort, promised them to stay, so that hee might make sale of his leane Negroes, which they graunted vnto. And the next day did sell some of them, who hauing bought and paid for them, thinking to haue had a discharge of the Customes for the custome of the Negroes, being the kings waite, they gaue it away to the poore for Gods sake, and did refuse to giue the discharge in writing, and the poore not trusting their wordes, for feare, least hereafter it might be demaunded of them, did refraine from buying any more, so that nothing els was done vntill the Gouernours coming downe, which was the fourteenth day, and then the Captaine made petition, declaring that hee was come thither in a shippe of the Queenes maiesties of England, being bound to Guinie, and thither driuen by winde and weather, so that being come thither, hee had neede of sundry necessaries for the reparation of the sayde shaule, and also great neede of money for the payment of his shouldours, vnto whom hee had promised payement, and therefore although hee would, yet would not they depart without it, and for that purpose requested licence for the sale of certaine of his Negroes, declaring that although they were forbidden to traffique with strangers, yet for that there was a great amitie betwene their princes, and that the thing pertained to our Queenes highnesse, hee thought he might doe their prince great service, and that it would be well taken at his hands, to doe it in this cause. The which allegations with diuers others put in request, were presented vnto the Gouernour, who sitting in counsell for that matter, graunted vnto his request for licence. But yet there fell out another thing which was the abating of the kings custome, being vpon euery slaue 30. buckets, which would not be graunted vnto.

Whereupon the captaine perceiuing that they would neither come neere his price hee looked for by a great deale, nor yet would abate the kings custome of that they offered, so that either hee must be a great looser by his wares, or els compell the officers to abate the same kings custome which was too vntreasonable, for to a higher price hee could not bring the buiers: Therefore the sternment of Apull hee prepared one hundred men well armed with bowes, arrows, harquebushes and pikes, with the which he marched to the towne wardes, and being perceiued by the Gouernour, hee straight with all expedition sent messengers to know his request, desiring him to marche no further forward vntill hee had answer againe, which incontinent hee should haue. So our captaine declaring how vntreasonable a thing the kings custome was, requesting to haue the same abated, and to pay seuen and a halfe per centum, which is the ordinarie custome for wares through his dominions there, and vnto this if they would not graunt, he would displease them. And this word being carried to the Gouernour, answer was returned that all things should be to his content, and thereupon hee determined to depart, but the shouldours and mariners finding so little credite in their promises, demaunded gages for the performance of the promises, or els they would not depart. And thus they being constrained to send gages, we departed, beginning our traffique, and ending the same without disturbance.

Thus hauing made traffique in the harborough vntill the 28. our Captaine with his ships intended to goe out of the roade, and purposed to make shew of his departure, because now the common sort hauing imploried their money, the rich men were come to towne, who made no shew that they were come to buie, so that they went about to bring downe the price, and by this pollicie the captaine knew they would be made the more eger, for feare least we departed, and they should goe without any at all.

The wine and ciuencie we being at anchor without the roade, a French shippe called the Greene

The reports of the mutiny
of the Spaniards in Guinea.

May.

Waxen kept ready sailed.

Exceeding
plentie of cat-
till in Curacao.

Dragon of the whauen, whereof was captaine one Don Temps came in, who saluted us after the manner of the Sea, with certaine pieces of ordinance, and we returned him with the like againe: with whom having communication, he declared that he had bene at the Spine in Guinea, and was beaten off by the Portugals Gallies, and enforced to come thither to make sale of such wares as he had: and further that the like was happened unto the Spaniards, besides the captaine, Donie Carlet and a merchant, with a dozen mariners betrayed by the Negroes at their first arrival thither, and remaining prisoners with the Portugals, besides other misadventures of the rest of their men, happened thorough the great lacke of fresh water, with great doubts of bringing home the ships, which was most sorrowfull for vs to understand.

Thus having ended our traffique here the 4. of May, wee departed, leaving the French men behind us, the night before the which, the Cariben whereof I have made mention before, being to the number of 200. came in their Canoes to Burbopoua, intending by night to have burned the towne, and taken the Spaniards, who being more vigilant because of our being there, then their custome was, perceiving them coming, raised the towne, who in a moment being a litle backe, by means their custome is for all doubts to keepe their hostes ready sailed, in the night bet upon them, and took one, the rest making shift for themselves, escaped a way. But this one, because hee was their guide, and was the occasion that divers times they had made invasion upon them, had for his reward a stake thrust thorough his fundament, and so out at his necke.

The six of May aforesayd, wee came to an Island called Curacao, where wee had thought to have anchored, but could not finde ground, and hauing let fall an anker twich two cables, were faine to weie it againe, and the 7. sayling along the coast to seeke an harborow, and could finde none, came to an anker where wee rode open in the sea. In this place we had traffique for Hides, and found great refreshing both of beefe, mutton and lambs, whereof there was such plentie, that sawing the skinner, we had the flesh giuen vs for nothing, the plentie whereof was so abundaunt, that the worst in the ship thought to see not onely of mutton, but also of sodden lambe, which they did daine to eat vntill.

The increase of cattell in this Island is marvellous, which from a dozen of each sorte brought thither by the gouernour, in 25. yeeres had 100. thousand at the least, and of other cattell was able to kill without spoile of the increase, 15. hundred yeerely, which he killith for the skinner, and of the flesh sauerly onely the tongues, the rest he leauech to the soule to deuour. And this I am able to affirme, not onely vpon the Gouernours owne repute, who was the first that brought the increase thither, and so remaineth vnto this day, but also by that I sawe my selfe in one field, where an hundred open lay one by another all whole, sauing the skinne and tongue taken a way, and it is not so maruelous a thing why they doe thus call a way the flesh in all the Islands of the West Indies, seeing the land is great, and more then they are able to inhabit, the people fewe, hauing delicate fruites and meates inough besides to feede vpon, which they rather desire, and the increase which passeth means reason to beleue, when they come to a great number: for in St. Dominga an Island called by the finders thereof, Hispaniola, is so gre at quantitie of cattell, and such increase thereof, that notwithstanding the daily killing of them for their hides, it is not able to allwaie the number of them, but they are deuoured by wild dogs, whose number is such by suffering them first to range the woods and mountains, that they eat and destroy 60000. a yeere, and yet small lacke found of them. And no marvell, for the said Island is almost as big as all England, and being the first place that was found of all the Indies, and of long time inhabited before the rest, and therfore it ought of reason to be most populous, and to this howe the Viceroy and counsell roiall, abideth there as in the chiefest place of all the Indies to prescribe orders to the rest for the kings behalf, yet haue they but one citie and 13. villages in all the same Island, whereby the spoile of them is respect of the increase is nothing.

The 15. of the foresaid month we departed from Curacao, being not a litle to the reioycing of our captaine and vs, that we had there ended our traffique, for notwithstanding our sweete meate, we had sower sauce, for by reason of our riding so open at sea, what with blades whereby our ankens being a ground, chace at once came home, and also with contrary winde blowing, whereby for feare of the shoare we were faine to hale off to haue anker hold, sometimes a whole day and a night turning by and downe, and this happened not once, but halfe a dozen times in the space of our being there.

The 16. wee passed by an Island called Aruba, and the 17. at night, ankerd 6. howers at the West end of Cabo de La vela, and in the morning being the 18. weie againe, keeping our course, in the which time the captaine sailing by the shoare in the pinnace, came to the Rancharia, a place where the Spaniards use to sh for pearles, and there spoke with a Spaniard, who told him how

farre

farre off he was from againe, and the 19.
next three, declared
by the gouernour the advice that they colligence of our be-could, inasmuch the should loose all the name. Our captaine and sent about otherary bindes to com-Spaine, to the countes. But seeing the should not be said by he would rather pretuller them to be so vpon this it was piece as was the one and none other will so weak ocherwise
to them a letter, the
of his commodities like as any other man meaning bying them
be that of a whole
borne a shoare, hain-
be in their noses,
with their dumme
the number of an hope, whereby they
uing them so bying in no small feare
they fell flat to the perish themselves colligence. The boy and to come with the kings in the other they gaue ground
to be dofolp: and to haue encounter Captaine, who de-quies, in consider-but the Captaine paled him to stay
come and speake
his armour with near him for feare committing to gr
the company, the wile when they
ing that no in the assurance then to we made our trabyreth off from
was made free with 4. sec. a los his nature is to the, which is his

lured vs after the the like against Duties, and was
of such forces as line, Donie Capfirst arrivall this
of the last of
of hanging some

the French man in before, being to
to have burned
ring there, then
ing being a losse
in, in the night But this one, be-the situation upon
necke.

he had thought to find some, where ould finde none,
for Pides, and plentie, that was so abundant,
the, which they

each foze brought er cattell was a e skinner, and this I am able broughte the in-one field, where away, and it is of the West In-le fewe, having and the increase D. Domingo and such increase
to all wage the serving them first yet small lacke
and being the
and therefoze
I rotall, abideth
kings behalle, toile of them in the rejoycing of

is sweete meate,
whereby our an-
to wings, where whole day and
in the space of

5. bowlers at the ping our court,
charia, a place
to told him how farre

low off he was from Rio de la Hacha, which because he would not overthoote, whereto that night again, and the 19. came thither, where having talke with the kings treasurer of the Indies, rest and there, declared his quiet traffique in Burboyan, and shewed a certificate of the same, made by the gouernour thereof, and therefore he desired to haue the like there also: but the treasurer made answer that they were forbidden by the Viceroy and counsell of S. Domingo, who having insistence of our being on the coast, did send express commission to resist vs, with all the force they could, inasmuch that they would not traffique with vs in no case, alleging that if they did, they should loose all that they did traffique for, besides their homes at the magistrates commandement. Our capitaine replied, that hee was in an Armado of the Quenes maiesties of England, and sent about other her affaires, but dyuen besides his pretended boiage, was enforced by contrary windes to come into those partes, where he hoped to find such friendship as hee should doe in Spain, to the contrary wherof he knew no reason, in that there was amitie betwix their princes. But seeing they would contrary to all reason goe about to withstand his traffique, he would it should not be said by him, that having the foze he hath, to be dyuen from his traffique purpote, but he would rather put it in aduenture to trie whether he or they should haue the better, and therefore willed them to determine either to giue him licence to trade, or els to stand to their owne harmes: So upon this it was determined hee should haue licence to trade, but they would giue him such a price as was the one halfe lesse then he had sold for before, and thus they sent word they would do, and none otherwile, if it liked him not, he might do what he would, for they were not determined to deale otherwile with him. Whereupon, the capitaine waiying their unconstruable request, wrot to them a letter, that they dekt too rigorously with him, to goe about to cut his choise in the price of his commodities, which were so reasonable rated, as they could not by a great deale haue the like at any other mans hands. But seeing they had sent him this in his supper, hee would in the morning bring them as good a breakfast. And therefore in the morning being the 21. of May, he shot of a whole Caluering to summon the towne, and preparing one hundred men in armour, went a boze, having in his great boate two Faulcons of hault, and in the other boates double ba-ds in their noses, which being perceived by the Townesmen, they incontinent in battell arise with their drumme and ensigne displayed, marched from the Towne to the sands, of footmen to the number of an hundred and fiftie, making great hyaggas with their cries, and swearing vs a hoze, whereby they made a formidable to haue foughte with vs in deede. But our Capitaine perceiuing them so hyagge, commanded the two Faulcons to be discharged at them, which put them in no small feare to see, as they afterward declared, such great pieces in a boate. At euery boote they fell flat to the ground, and as we approached neere vnto them, they hoke their arate, and dis-garded themselves so much for feare of the ordinaunce, that at last they went all away with their ensigne. The footmen also being about thirtie, made as hyane a shew as might be, courting vs and to done with their hoyses, they haue white leather Targets in the one hand, and their Iauelings in the other, as though they would haue receiued vs at our landing. But when we landed, they gaue ground, and considered what they should doe, for liell they thought we would haue landed so boldly: and therefore as the Capitaine was putting his men in aray, and marched forward to haue encountered with them, they sent a messenger on horsebacke with a flagge of cruce to the Capitaine, who declared that the treasurer marvelled what hee ment to doe to come a boze in that order, in consideration that they had graunted to euery reasonable request that hee did demand: but the Capitaine not well concerned with this messenger, marched forwardes. The messenger paled him to stay his men, and said, if hee would come apart from his men, the treasurer would come and speake with him, wherunto hee did agree to common together. The capitaine onely with his armour without weapon, and the treasurer on horseback with his iaueling, was afraid to come neere him for feare of his armour, which hee said was worse then his weapon, and so keeping aloofe communicating together, granted in fine to all his requests. Which being declared by the capitaine to the company, they desired to haue pledges for the performance of all things, doubting that otherwile when they had made themselves strong, they would haue bene at defiance with vs: and seeing that now they might haue what they would request, they iudged it to be moze wisdom to be in assurance then to be forced to make any moze labours about it. So upon this, gages were sent, and we made our traffique quietly with them. In y meane time while we staid here, the water a good pace off from the shore, where by the sight of the fresh water running into the sea, the salt water was made fresh. In this river we saw many crocodils of slidy bignesses, but some as big as a boze, which 4. feet, a long broad mouth, & a long talle, whose skin is so hard, that a sword will not pierce it.
This nature is to liue out of the water as a frog doth, but he is a great deuourer, & spareth neither fish, which is his comon food, nor beests, nor men, if he take the, as the prooue thereof was knowen

pp. 534
his letter to the treasurer of Rio de la Hacha.

by a Negroe, who as he was filling water in the tiner was by one of them carried cleane away, and neuer seene after. His nature is ever when he would have his paine, to crye, and sobbe like a christian bodie, to pioushe them to come to him, and then hee snatches at them, and thereupon came this pouverbe that is applied unto women when they weepe, Lachryma Crocodili, the meaning whereof is, that as the Crocodile when he crieth, goeth then about most to deerie, so doth a woman most commonly when she weepeth. Of these the matter of the Itelias watched one and by the barthes shee strooke him with a pike of a bill in the side, and after 3. or 4. times turning in sight, hee ranke dothome, & was not afterward seene. In the time of our being in the rivers of Guatida, we saw many of a monstrous bignes, amongst the which the capatine being in one of the barthes comming dothome the same, shot a saulcon at one, which very narrowly he missed, and with a steere plunged into the water, making a streame like the way of a boate.

How while we were here, whether it were of a feare that the Spaniards doubted wee would have done them some harme before wee departed, or for any reason that they pretended towardes vs, I am not able to say, but then came thither a capatine from some of the other townes, with a doozen souldiers, who upon a time that our capatine and the treasurer cleared all things betwixt them, and were in a communication of a debt of the governours of Burboaca, which was to be paid by the said treasurer, who would not answer the same by any means. Certaine words of displeasure passed betwixt the capatine and him, and parting the one from the other, the treasurer possibly doubing that our capatine would perhaps have sought the same, did immediately command his men in armour both horsemen and footemen: but because the capatine was in the River on the backe side of the towne with his other boates, and all his men unarmed and with our weapons, it was to be judged hee might have mischieued many of his men, but the capatine having understanding thereof, not trusting to their gentleness, if they might have the advantage, departed aboard his ships, and at night returned againe, & demanded amongst other talke, what they meant by assembling their men in that order, and they answered, that their capatine being come to towne did murder his men according to his accustomed manner. But it is to bee judged to bee a cloake, in that comming for purpose hee might have done it sooner, but the truth is, they were not of force to kill them, whereby to enterprize any matter against vs, by meanes of pikes and harquebushes, whereof they have many, and were now furnished by our capatine, and also 3. saulcons, which having got in other places, they had secretly conveyed thither, which made them the bolder, and also for that they sawe now a convenient place to do such a feat, and time also serving thereunto, by the means that our men were not only unarmed and unprovided, as at no time before the like, but also were occupied in getting of wood, & least thinking of any harme: these were occasions to pioushe them thereunto. And I suppose they were about to bring it to effect, in that * I with another gentleman being in the towne, thinking of no harme towardes vs, and seeing men assembling in armour to the treasurers house, whereof I marvelled, and crusing to minde the former talke betwixt the capatine and him, and the unradaisell of our men, of whom advantage might have bene taken, departed out of the towne immediately to give knowledge thereof, but before wee came to our men by a slight shot, two horsemen riding a gallop were come neere vs, being sent, as wee did gesse, so that vs least we should carrie netes to our capatine, but seeing vs so neere our men staid their horses, comming together, and suffering vs to passe, belike because wee were so neere, that if they had gone about the same, they had bene espied by some of our men which then immediately would have departed, whereby they should have bene frustrate of their ppretence: and so the two horsemen ride about the bushes to espye what wee did, and seeing vs gone, to the intent they might shew their comming dothome in post, whereof suspition might be had, saim to a simple cruce in asking whether hee could sell any wine, but that seemed so simple to the capatine, that standing in doubt of their curtesie, hee returned in the morning with his 3. boates, appointed with bales in their noses, and his men with weapons accordingly, where as before hee came in none: & thus dissembling all subtities conceived of both partes, the capatine went a hoze, leaving pledges in the boates for himselfe, & cleared all things betwixt the treasurer and him, causing for the governours debt, which the one by no means would answer, nor the other, because it was no his due debt, he would not molest him for it, but was content to remit it vntill another time, & therefore departed, causing the two barthes which rode neere the hoze to tiee and goe under saile, which was done to the intent that capatine demanding a testimoniall of his good behauiour there, could not have the same vntill hee were vnder the saile ready to depart, and therefore at night went for the same againe, and received it at the treasurers hand, of whom very curteously heeooke his leave, and departed spooring of the bales of his boate for his farewell, and the towne men also thus off

The manner of this voyage.

house

of them carried cleane away, ie, to drie, and fobbe like a bech at them, and thereupon Lachrymæ Crocodili, the in about moſt to dectine, ſo of the Jeths watched me after 3. or 4. times turning being in the rivers of Cuba being in one of the barkes to be miſſed, and with a ſcare our ſouldiers would that they pretended to worke of the other towes, with a er cleared all things becauſe harbovota, which was to be meanes. Certaine voyagers from the other, the treaſure ſame, did immediately conſuthe captaine was in the his men unarmed and with advantage of him, that combut the captaine having the advantage, departed other talke, what they meant captaine being come to toſome me ſudged to bee a clothe, in which is, they were not of force of pikes and harquebuzes, ſo alſo 3. ſaulcons, which he de them the bolden, and alſo ſeruing thereunto, by the time before the like, but alſo were occaſions to provoke in that * If with another and ſeeing men aſſembling in to minde the former talke beorn advantage might have dge thereof, but before we come neere vs, being ſent, as ſeeing vs to neere our men be cauſe we were to neere, our men which then imma-

of their pretence: and ſo the yſ gone, to the intent they he had, ſained a ſimple cru-the captaine, that ſtanding os, appointed with baſes in occur'd name: and thus divoy, leaving pledges in the in, ſaſuing for the governours iſe it was no bis due debt, time. & therefore departed, under ſaile, which was done behaviour there, could not reſoſe as mighte were for the readily heooke his leave, he to ſome ſenent alſo ſhot of ſoure

four ſaulcons and chirtie harquebuzes, and this was the firſt time that we knew of the concey-ance of they ſaulcons.

The 3. of May we departed, keeping our courſe to Hiſpaniola, and the fourth of June we had ſight of an Iſland, which we made to be Iamaica, marvelling that by the beſt courſe of the ſea we ſhould be ſpurne ſo farre to ſeeward: ſo ſetting our courſe to the Weſt end of Hiſpaniola we fell with the middle of Iamaica, not withſtanding that to all mens ſight it ſeemed a broad land, but they were all deceived by the clouds that lay upon the land two dayes together, in ſuch ſort that we thought it to be the head land of the ſaid Iſland. And a Spaniard being in the ſhip, who was a merchant, and inhabitant in Iamaica, having occaſion to go to Guinie, and bring by reaſon taken of the Negroes, & afterwards bought by the Tangomangoes, was by our captaine brought from thence, and had his paſſage to go into his country, who perceiving the land, made as though he knew every place thereof, and pointed to certaine places, which he named to be ſuch a place, and ſuch a mans ground, and that betwix ſuch a point was the harbovota, but in the end he pointed ſo from one point to another, that we were a leeboord of all places, & found our ſelves at the Weſt end of Iamaica before we were aware of it, and being oner to leeward, there was no getting by again, ſo that by truſting of the Spaniards knowledge, our captaine ſought not to ſpeake with any of the inhabitants, which if he had not made himſelfe ſure of, he would have done, as his cuſtom was in other places: but this man was a plague not onely to our captaine, who made him looſe, by overſhooting the place, two thouſand pounds by hides, which he might have gotten, but alſo to himſelfe, who being there perceres out of his country, and in great miſery in Guinie, loth among the Negroes and Tangomangoes, and in hope to come to his wife and friends, as he made ſure account, in that as his going in to the pinnell, when he went a ſhoare he put on his new clothes, and ſo lay ſlung away his olde, could not afterwards finde any habitation, neither there nor in all Cuba, which we ſapled all along, but it fell out ever, by one occaſion or other, that we were put betwix the ſame, ſo that he was ſayne to be brought into England, and it happened to him as it did to a Duke of Samaria, when the Iſraelites were beleeged, and were in great miſery with hunger, and being told by the Prophet Eliazus, that a buſhell of ſo were ſhould be ſolde for a ſicke, would not beleue him, but thought it impoſſible: and ſo for that cauſe Eliazus prophesied he ſhould ſee the ſame done, but he ſhould not eate thereof: ſo this man being abſent three yeeres, and not ever thinking to have ſeene his owne country, did ſee the ſame, went upon it, and yet was it not his intent to come to it, or to any habitation, whereby to remayne with his friends according to his deſire.

Thus having ſailed along the coaſt two dayes, we departed the ſeventh of June, being made to beleue by the Spaniard, that it was not Iamaica, but rather Hiſpaniola, of which opinion the captaine alſo was, becauſe that which he made Iamaica ſeemed to be but a piece of the land, and ſhortlyooke it rather to be Hiſpaniola, by the lying of the coaſt, and alſo for that being ignorant of the force of the current, he could not beleue he was ſo farre by in to leeward, and therefore ſet-ting his courſe to Iamaica, and after certaine dayes, not finding the ſame, percered then certainly that the Iſland which he was at before, was Iamaica, and that the clouds did deceive him, whereof he marvelled not a little: and this miſtaking of the place came to as ill a paſſe as the overſhooting of Iamaica: for by this did he alſo overpaſſe a place in Cuba, called Santa Cruz, where, as he was informed, was great ſtope of hides to be had: and thus being diſappointed of two of his ports, where he thought to have raiſed great profit by his traffike, and alſo to have found great reſreſh-ing of victualles and water for his men, was now diſappointed greatly, and ſuch want he had of freſh water, that he was forced to ſeek the ſhoare to obtaine the ſame, which he had ſight of after certaine dayes overpaſſed with ſtormes and contrary windeſ, but yet not of the maine of Cuba, but of certaine Iſlands, in number two hundred, whereof the moſt part was deſolate of inhabitants: by the which Iſlands the captaine paſſing in his pinnell, could finde no freſh water until he came to an Iſland bigger then all the reſt, called the Iſle of Pimas, where we anchored with our ſhippes the ſeventh of June, and found water, which although it were neither ſo ſweetſome as running water, by the meanes it is ſtanding, and but the want of raine, and alſo being neere the ſea was ſharkly, yet did we not reſuſe it, but were moze glad thereof, as the time then required, then we ſhould have beene an other like with ſwe conduct water. Thus being reaſonably watered we were deſirous to depart, becauſe the place was not very convenient for ſuch ſhippes of charge as they were, becauſe there were many ſhoales leeward, and alſo lay open to the ſea for any winde that ſhould blow, and therefore the captaine made the moze haſte away, which was not unneceſſary for ſo little ſomer were there ankens weped, and ſoſeſay ſet, but there aroſe ſuch a ſtorme, that they had not much to ſpare for doubling out of the ſhoales: ſo one of the barkes not being fully ready as the reſt was

June.

The beſt ſight force of the current.

Two hundred Iſlands for the moſt part not inhabited.

was lame for haste to cutte the cable in the hawse, and looke both anker and cable to save her selfe.

The cape of
S. Anthony
in Cuba.

Florida.

July.
The first of August.
Great hope of birds.

A hill called
the Table.

The port of Havana.

Thus the seventeenth of June we departed and the twentieth fell with the West end of Cuba, called Cape S. Anthony, where for the space of three dayes, we doubled along till we came beyond the shoales, which are 20 leagues beyond S. Anthony. And the ordinary brile taking us, which is the North-east winde, put us the 24 from the shoare, and therefore we went to the Southward to fresh winde, and also to the coast of Florida to have the brise of the current, which was iudged to bene set to the Eastward: so the 29 wee found our selues in 27 degrees, and in the soundings of Florida, where we kept our selues the space of foure dayes, sailing along the coast as nere as we could, in tenne or twelve fathome water, having all the while no sight of land.

The first of July we had sight of certaine Ilandes of land, called the Tortugas (which is some land) where the capitaine went in with his pinnesse, and found such a number of birds, that in halfe an houre he laded her with them, and if they had bene tenne boats more, they might have done the like. These Ilandes beere the name of Tortels because of the number of them, which there be byed, whose nature is to live both in the water and upon land also, but theye do onely upon the shoare, in making a great pit wherein they lay egges to the number of thre or foure hundred, and covering them with sand, are bred by the heat of the sunne, and by this meane commeth the great increase. Of these we tooke very great ones, which have both backe and belly all of bone of the thickness of an inch, the fish whereof we spouore, eating much like beale, and finding a number of egges in them, called also of them, but they did eat very sweetly. Here we anchored five houres, and then springing a fayre gale of winde, we weyed anker, and made saile to ward Cuba, whither we came the first day, and weathered as farre as the Table, being a hill so called, because of the forme thereof: here we lay off and on all night, to keepe that wee had gotten to windward, intending to have watered in the morning, if we could have done it, or els if the winde had come larger, to have plyed to windward to the Hauana, which is a harborow whereunto all the fleet of the Spanyards come, and doe there carry to have one the company of another. This hill we thinking to have bene the Table, made account (as it was in deed) the Hauana, to be but eight leagues to windward, but by the persuasion of a French man, who made the capitaine believe he knew the Table very well, and had bene at the Hauana, said that it was not the Table, and that the Table was much higher, and neerer to the sea shoare, and that there was no plaine ground to the Eastward, nor hills to the Westward, but all was contrary, and that behinde the hills to the Westward was the Hauana: to which persuasion credite being given by some, and they not of the worth, the capitaine was persuaded to go to leeward, and so sailed along the seventh and eight dayes, finding no habitation, nor no other Table, and then perceiving his folly to give care to such matters, was not a little sorry, both because he did consider what time he should spend ere he could get so farre to windward againe, which would have bene with the weathering which we had 10 or 12 dayes tocke, and what it would have bene longer he knew not, and that (which was worst) he had not about a dayes water, and therefore knew not what still to make: but in fine, because the want was such, that his men could not live with it, he determined to seeke water, and to go further to leeward, to a place (as it is se in the card) called Rio de los porcos, which he was in doubt of both whether it were inhabited, and whether there were water or not, and whether for the shoales he might have such access with his shippes that he might conveniently take in the same: and while we were in these troubles, and kept our way to the place of aforesaid, almighty God our guide (who would not suffer us to runne into any further danger, which we had bene like to have incurred, if we had ranged the coast of Florida along as we did before, which is so dangerous (by reports) that no shippe escape which commeth thither, as the Spanyards have very well spouored the same) sent us the eight day at night a fayre Westery winde, whereupon the capitaine and company consulted, determining not to refuse Gods gift, but every man was contented to pinch his owne belly whatsoeuer had happened, and taking the sayd winde, the ninth day of July got to the Table, and sailing the same night, unawares overshot the Hauana, at the which place we thought to have watered, but the next day, not knowing that we had overshoot the same, sailed along the coast, seeking it, and the eleventh day in the morning, by certaine knowne markes, we understood that we had overshoot it twenty leagues: in which coast ranging, we found no convenient watering place, whereby there was no remedy but to dissemble, and to water upon the coast of Florida: for, to go further to the Eastward, we could not for the shoales, which are very dangerous, and because the current shoereth to the North-east, we doubted by the force thereof to be set upon them, and therefore durst not approach them so making but reasonable waye the day aforesaid, & all night the 12 day in the morning, we fell with the Ilands upon the cape of Florida, which we could scant double by the meanes meanes that fearing West, which to us escape, and then backe against a meane to use, which for if they could winning which er,

winde springing at they saw them had taken, but no account but to which they had the sight of the saw them againe,
to, the shippes
sing all failed, it came sent the
the current was to the inere the
The Jesus also might passed and them, but the all in wine, by carry no longer, the Jesus, who
as God would had sight of them, having sight of no greatly rejoyce themselves betw ly God thought being soe opposit shippes then that gone to the shoare
them, either to bene very hard ing one hundred whole bandes was in Florida and gentle inter pounded for
to wage, seeing boldest then any who intended
and of they
to persuade the ones, and his
In these Ilands heads and bodies shells. Due to The fourteenth
utty of the m, w
and so then
to an anker, and arranging all
overshote no
along the shoare,
understand

meanes that bearing the shales to the Callowes, and bowbing the current running out of the West, which is not of that force we made account of, for we felt little or none till we fell with the Cape, and then felt such a current, that bearing all Calles against the same, yet were driven backe againe a great pace: the experience wherof we had by the Jesus pinnelle, and the Gallonons boate, which were sent the same day in the afternoon, while the Shippes were at anchor, so that they could have any way upon the Islands at daybreak, who spent a great part of the day in coming thither, being further off then they becom it to be, and in the meane time a fowle gale of wind springing at sea, the Shippes departed, making a signe to them: to come away, who although they saw them depart, because they were so neere the shoare would not loose all the labour they had taken, but determined to keepe the way, and see if there were any water to be had, making no account but to finde the Shippes well enough: but they spent so much time in filling the water which they had founde, that the night was come before they could make an end, and having lost the sight of the Shippes, towed what they could, but were wholly ignorant which way they should seek them againe, as in deede there was a more doubt then they knew of. For when they departed, the Shippes were in no current, and sayling but a mile further, founde one so strong, that bearing all Calles, it could not prevaille against the same, but were driven backe: wherupon the captaine sent the Gallonon, with the other two barkes, to beare neere the shoare all night, because the current was lesse there a great deale, and to beare light with shooting off a peece now and then, to the intent the boates might better knowe how to come to them.

The Day of the currents of Florida.

The Jesus also bare a light in her coppe gallant, and shot off a peece also now and then, but the night passed and the morning was come, being the thirteenth day, and no newes could be heard of them, but the Shippes and barkes forsooke not, but to looke still for them, yet they thought it was all in vaine, by the meanes they heard not of them all the night past, and therefore determined to tarry no longer, seeking for them till noone, and if they heard no newes, then they would depart to the Jesus, who perforce (by the vehemency of the current) was carryed almost out of sight, but as God would have it, no time being come, and they having tacked about in the pinnelles cap, had sight of them, and tooke them by: they in the boates, being to the number of one and twentie, having sight of the Shippes, and seeing them tacking about, whereas before at the first sight of them we greatly rejoyce, were now in a greater perplexitie then ever they were: for by this they thought themselves verely saylaken, whereas before they were in some hope to have found them. Truly God wrought marvellously for them, for they themselves having no victualles but water, and being sore oppressed with hunger, were not of opinion to bestowe any further time in seeking the Shippes then that present noone time: so that if they had not at that instant espyed them, they had gone to the shoare to have made provision for victualles, and with such things as they could have gotten, either to have gone for that part of Florida, where the French men are (which would have bene very hard for them to have done, because they wanted victualles to bring them thither, being one hundred and twentie leagues off) or els to have remayned amongst the Floridians, at whose hauses they were put in company by a French man, who was with them, that had remayned in Florida at the first finding thereof, a whole yeere together, to receive victualles sufficient, and gentle entertainement, if neede were, for a yeere or two, untill which time God might have provided for them. But how contrary this would have fallen out to the expectation, it is hard to judge, seeing those people of the cape of Florida, are of more savage and fierce nature, and more belient then any of the rest, which the Spaniards well knowe, who being five hundred men, who intended there to land, returned few or none of them, but were enforced to forsake the same, and of their cruelty mention is made in the booke of the Decades, of a Spaniard, who taking upon him to persuade the people to subiection, was by them taken with his skime cruelly pulled over his eyes, and his flesh eaten.

In these Islands they being a shoare, founde a dead man byed in a manner whole, with other heads and bodies of men, so that those signs of men are eaters of the flesh of men, as well as the Canibals. But to returne to our purpose.

The fourteenth day the shippe and barkes came to the Jesus, bringing them newes of the recovery of the men, which was not a little to the rejoycing of the captaine, and the whole company: and so then altogether they kept on their way along the coast of Florida, and the sixteenth day came to an anchor, and so from six and twenty degrees to thirtie degrees a halfe, where the French men were ranging all the coast along, seeking for fresh water, watching every night, because we would have found no place of fresh water, and in the day time the captaine in the Shippes pinnelle sayled along the shoare, went into every creeke, speaking with divers of the Floridians, because he would understand where the French men inhabited, and not finding them in eight and twentie degrees of Hawkins ranged all the coast of Florida.

ble to save the end of Cuba,
e came beyond
by a, which is well to fresh
to have the gs of Florida, as we could in which is some e, that in halfe
e have bene the which there be pon the shoare,
yed, and conce
nch the great
all of bone of inding a numbe
e answered five to ward Cuba, led, because of
o twinedward, inde had come
to all the fleet of the hill we thin e eight leagues erue hee had to that the T-
to the Callow
of the worst,
o such waters,
he could get to e had 10 of 12
was worst be e, because the
to go further was in doubt of
for the shales me: and while our guide (who me incurred, if y report) that owed the same) company con-
his owne bel-
to the Table,
thought to bene
the coast, seeking that we had watering place, Florida: for, to
and because the e, and therefore the 12 day we e double by the meanes

The river of Spain.

Florida found to be cut in Florida.
Florida.
The countries of Florida.

The houses of Florida.

The manner of kindling of fire in Florida.

as it was declared unto him, marvelled thereat, and never left sailing along the coast till he found them, who inhabited in a river, by them called the river of May, and it indeed in thier degrees and better. In ranging this coast along, the captain found it to be all an Island, and therefore it is all lowe land, and very scant of fresh water, but the countrey was marvellously sweet, with both marsh and meadow ground, and goodly woods among. There they found they could growe as abundantly as grass, and where they houses were, great store of maize and mill, and grapes of great bignesse, but of taste much like our English grapes. Also there great plenty, which came upon the sands besyde them. They houses are not many together, for in one house a hundred of them do lodge: they being made much like a great barn, and in strength not inferior to ours, for it hath stanchions and rafters of whole trees, and covered with Palmito leaves, having no place divided, but one small roome for their King and Queene. In the middell of this house is a hearth where they make great fires all night, and upon certaine pieces of wood betwen in for the boiling of their beakes, and another place made high for their heads, they lye upon the same, which they put one by another all along the walles on both sides. In their houses they remaine onely in the night, and in the day they desire the fields, where they drye their meat, and make provision for victualles, which they provide onely for a meale from hand to mouth. There is one thing to be marvelled at, for the making of their fire, and not onely they but also the Negroes doe the same, which is made onely by two stiches, rubbing them one against another: and this they may doe in any place they come, where they finde stiches sufficient for the purpose. In their apparell the men onely vse verre skinned, wherewith some onely cover their privy members, other some vse the same as garments to cover them besyde and behynde, which skinned are painted, some yellow & red, some blacke and russet, and every man according to his owne fancy. They do not omit to paint their bodies also with curious knots, or antique worke, as every man in his owne fancy deviseth, which painting to have it to continue the better, they vse with a thorne to prick their flesh, and dent in the same, wherby the painting may have better holde. In their warres they vse a sligher couler of painting their faces, wherby to make themselves seeme the more fierce: which after their warres ended they wash away againe. In their warres they vse bowes and arrowes, wherof their bowes are made of a kinde of Pew, but blacker then ours, but many passing the strength of the Negroes of Indians, for it is not greatly inferior to ours, their arrowes also of a great length, but yet of reeds like other Indians, but varying in two pointes both for length, and also for nocks and feathers, which the other lacke, wherby they shoot very steady: the heads of the same are byrres teeth, bones of fishes, flux stones, piked pointes of knives, which having gotten of the French men, broke the same, and put the pointes of them in their arrowes heads: some of them have their heads of siluer, other some that have want of these, put in a kinde of hard wood, notches, which percerth as farre as any of the rest. In their fight, being in the woods, they vse a marvellous pollicie for their owne safegard, which is by clasping a tree in their armes, and yet shooting notwithstanding: this pollicie they vse with the French men in their fight, wherby it appeareth that they are people of some pollicie: and although they are called by the Spaniards Gente triste, that is to say, Bad people, meaning thereby, that they are not men of capacity: yet have the French men found them to wispe in their answers, that by the capitaines owne report, a counsellour with vs could not give a more profound reason.

The French
sight.

Monsieur Laudonier.

The women also in their apparell vse painted skinned, but most of them gounes of mofse, somewhat longer then our mofse, which they sewe together artificially, & make the same purple wife, wearing their haire downe to their shoulders, like the Indians. In this river of May also said, the captain entering with his pinelle, found a French ship of fourescore tunne, and two pinelles of fiftene tunne a peice, by her, and speaking with the keepers thereof, they tolde him of a fort two leagues by, which they had built, in which they captain Monsieur Laudonier was, with certaine souldiers therein. To whom our captain sending to understand of a waerting place, where he might conveniently take it in, and to have licence for the same, he straight because there was no convenient place but by the river two leagues, where the water was fresh, did send him a pilot for the more expedition thereof, to bring in one of his barkes, which going in with other boats provided for the same purpose, ankred before the fort, into the which our captain went, where he was by the general, with other capitaines and souldiers, very gently entertained, and detoured unto him the time of their being there, which was 14 months, with the extreme they were thus for want of victuals, having thought very little with them, in which place they being 200 men at their first coming, had in thoyr space eaten all the maize they could buy of the inhabitants about them & therefore were by them certeyne of thier to serve a King of the Floridians against other his enemies for mill, and other victualles, which having gotten, coulde not serve them, being so many so long a time, but

along the coast till he found and in which in thirte beggers e all an Island, and therefore marvellously sweet, with both found so excell to growe as in a mill, and grapes of ere great plenty, which came for in one house a hundred of length not inferior to ours, for imito leaves, having no place idest of this house is a hearty wood betwen in for the bowing ves upon the same, which they they remaine onely in the meat, and make provision for uch. There is one thing to be so the Negroes doe the same, ber: and this they may doe in se. In they appaill the men nders, other some vse the same nted, some yellow & red, some y do not omit to paine their bo-owne fancy devised, which like their flesh, and dent in the es they vse a lighter couler of : which after their warres en-owes, wher of their bowes are the strength of the Negroes of great length, but yet of reeds o for nocke and fetters, which are as bipes teel, bones of French men, broke the same, aue their heads of siluer, other which percut as farre as any of illitie for their owne safeguard, standing: this pollicy they vse re people of some pollicy: and
 ap. Bad people meaning ther-und them so wispy in their anould not giue: noye poisond all of them gowmes of wine, ally, & make the same surple-In this riuer of May aforesaid, scoe wine, and two pinnelles herof, they tolde him of a forunscieur Laudonier was, with and of a waering place, where he straight because there was was fresh, did send him a pilot going in with other boats a captain went, where he was rained, and declared vnto him ey were vnto for want y being 200 men at their first inhabitants about them & ther-of other his enemies for mill, bring so many so long a time,

 but

but want came vpon them in such sort, that they were faine to gather acquies, which being stamped small, and often washed to take away the bitterness of them, did vse the same both bread, eating withall sunny times rootes, whereof they found many good and wholesome, and such as true rather for medicines then for meates alone. But this harmlesse not concerning some of them, who would not take the paynes so much as to fish in the riuer before they dooyes, but would haue all things put in their mouths, did rebell agaynst the captaine, taking away first his armour, & afterward imprisoning him: and so to the number of fourescore of them, departed with a barke and a pinnelle, spoiling theyr store of victuall, and taking away a great part therof with them, and so went to the Islands of Hispaniola & Iamaica a routing, where they spoiled, and pilld the Spaniardes, and hauing taken two caruels laden with wine and Calaua, which is a beade made of wox, and much other victualles and treasure, had not the grace to depart threewith, but were of such hauncie stomachs, that they thought their force to be such that no man durst meddle with them, so kepe harborough in Iamaica, going daily a shoare at their pleasure. But God which would not suffer such euill doers unpunished, did indurate their hearts in such sort, that they longered time so long, that a shippe and galeaffe being made out of S. Domingoes, came thither into the harborough, andooke twentie of them, wherof the most part were hanged, and the rest carried into Spayne, and some (to the number of five and twentie) escaped in the pinnelle, and came to Florida, where at their landing they were put in prison, and incontinent foure of the chiefest being condemned at the request of the souldiours, did passe the harquebussiers, and then were hanged vpon a gibbet. The lacke of these scoye men was a great discouragement & weakening to the rest, for they were of the best souldiours that they had: and whereas they had now made the inhabitants weary of them by their euilly craning of mapais hauing no waies left to content them withall, and therefore inforced to robbe them, and to take away their victuall perforce, was the occasion that the Floridians (not well contented therewith) did take certaine of theyr company in the woods, and slew them, whereby there grew great warres betwixt them and the French men, and therefore they being but a few in number durst not venture aboad, but at such time as they were inforced therunto for want of food to do the same: and going thwentic harquebussiers in a company, were set vpon by eighthe kings, hauing tenen or eithe hundred men, which with one of theyr bowes slew one of their men, and hurt a dozen, and dyone them all downe to theyr boats, whose pollicy in fight was to be marvelled at: for hauing shot at diuers of theyr bodies which were armed, and perceiuing that their arrowes did not preuaile against the same, they shot at their faces & legs, which were the places that the French men were hurt in. Thus the French men returned, being in ill case by the hurt of their men, hauing not aboute forty souldiours left unhurt, wherby they might ill make any more assaults vpon the Floridians, and keepe theiir way thithall: which they must haue bene dyuen vnto, had not God sent vs thither for their succour, for they had not about ten dayes victuall left before theyr ruine. In which perplexity our captaine seeing them, spared them out of his ship twenty barrels of meale, and foure pipes of beanes, with diuers other victuals and necessaries which he might conueniently spare and to helpe them the better home wards whither they were bound before our coming, at their request we spared them one of our barks of fifty runnes. Notwithstanding the great want that the French men had, the ground doth yeeld victuals sufficient, if they would haue taken paines to get the same, but they being souldiours, desired to liue by the sweat of other mens browes: for while they had peace with the Floridians, they had fish sufficient, by waies which they made to catch the same: but when they grew to warres, the Floridiansooke away the same againe, and then would not the French men take the paines to make any more. The ground yeeldeth naturally grapes in great store, for in the time that the French men were there, they made twenty hogheads of wine. Also it yeeldeth roots passing good, beere marvellous store, with diuers other beales, and fowle, seruiceable to the vse of man. These be things where with a man might liue, hauing some of mapais wherwith to make bread: for mapais maketh good sauoy bread, and cakes as fine as flower. Also it ma-keth good meale beaten and sodden with water and eateth like pappe wher with we feed children.
 It maketh also good beurrage sodden in water, and nourishable: which the French men did vse to drinke of in the morning, and it assuaged their thirst, so that they had no need to drinke all the day after. And this mapais was the greatest lacke they had, because they had no laborers to sow the same, and therefore to them that should inhabit the land it were requisite to haue laborers to till and sow the ground. For they hauing victuals of theyr owne, wherby they neither rob nor spoile the inhabitants, may liue not onely quietly with them, who naturally are more desirous of peace then of warres, but also shall haue abundance of victuals proffered them for nothing: for it is with them as it is with one of vs, when we see another man euer taking away from vs, although we haue enough besides, yet then we thinke all to little for our selues: for surely we haue heard the French bread made of acornes.

The occasion of the fatting out with the Floridians.

The French greatly refused to buy of M. Hawkins.

Thwentic hogheads of wine made in Florida, like to the wine of Spaine.

laborers necessary to inhabit new countries.

men report, and I know it by the Indians that a very little cometh thereof: for the Indians with the head of maize roasted, will travel a whole day, and when they are at the Spaniards lining, they give them nothing but sodden herbs and maize, & in this order I saw the scope of them here, who were laden with wares, and came little leagues off. The Floridians when they travel have a kinde of herbe byes, which with a cane, and an earthen cup in the end, with fire, and the dried herbes put together, do sucke thow to the same the smoke thereof, which smoke satisfieth their hunger, and there with they live foure or five dayes without meat or drinke, and this all the French men use for this purpose: yet do they holde opinion withall, that it causeth water and steame to void from their stomacks. The commodities of this land are more then are yet knowne to any man: for besides the land it selfe, whereof there is more then any King Christian is able to inhabit, it flourisheth with meadow, pasture ground, with woods of Cedar and Cypress, and other soyes, as better can be in the world: they have for apothecary herbes, trees, roots and gumme great store, as Scroax liquida, Turpentine, Gumme, Myrre and Frankincense, whereof I know not the names. Coulers both red, blache, yellow, and russet, very perfect, where with they paint their bodies, and beere skinner which they wear about them, that with water it neither fadeth away, nor abtrench couler. Golde and Silver they want not: for at the French mens first coming thither, they had the same offered them for little or nothing, for they received for a hachet two pound weight of golde, because they knew not the estimation thereof: but the souldiours being greedy of the same, did take it from them, giving them nothing for it: the which they perceiving, that both the French men did greatly esteeme it, and also did rigorously deale with them, by taking the same away from them, at last would not be knowen they had any more, neither durst they wear the same for feare of being taken away: so that saving at their first coming, they could get none of them: and both they came by this golde and silver, the French men know not as yet, but by gift, who having travelled to the South west of the cape, having found the same dangerous, by means of lundry banks, as we also have found the same, and there finding matts which were wpacks of Spaniards coming from Mexico, judged that they had gotten treasure by them. For it is most true that divers wpacks have bene made of Spaniards, having much treasure. For the French men having travelled to the capeward a hundred and fiftie miles, did finde two Spaniards with the Floridians, which they brought afterward to theyr ship, whereof one being in a Caravel, coming from the Indies was calld away fourteene yeeres ago, and the other twelue yeeres, whose fellows some escaped, other some were slaine by the inhabitants. It cometh they had estimation of theyr golde and silver, for it is wroughte fine and grauen, which they wear about their necks, other some made round like a pancake, with a hole in the middle to be adorned by their byasses withall, because they thinke it a deformitie to have great byasses. As for mines either of golde or silver, the French men can heare of none they have vpon the Island, but of copper, whereof as yet also they have not made the proofe, because they were but few men: but it is not unlikely, but that in the maine where are high hills, may be golde and silver as well as in Mexico, because it is all one maine. The French men obtained pearles of them of great bignesse, but they were blacke, by means of roasting of them, for they do not fish for them as the Spaniards do, but for their meat: for the Spaniards use to keepe dayly a fishing some two or three hundred Indians, some of them that be of choyle a thousand: and their order is to goe in Canoas, or rather great pinnacles, with thirtie men in a piers, whereof the one halfe, or most part be divers, the rest doe open the same for the pearles: for it is not suffered that they should use dragging, for that would bring them out of estimation, and marre the beads of them. The oysters which have the smallest sort of pearles are found in leuen or righte sathome water, but the greatest in eleven or twelue fathom.

The Floridians have pieces of Anticoines boines, which they wear about their necks, whereof the French men obtained many pieces. Of those Anticoines they have many, for that they doe asseme it to be a beast with one boine, which coming to the river to drinke, putteth the same into the water before they drinke. Of these Anticoines there is of our company, that having gotten the same of the French men, brought home thereof to be we. It is therefore to be presupposed that there are more commodities, as well as that, which for want of time, and people sufficient to inhabit the same, can not yet come to light: but I trust God will reveale the same before it be long, to the great profit of them that shall take it in hand. Of beastes in this countrey besides Deer, Foxes, Hares, Volcaes, Cunnies, Dunces, Leopards, I am not able certainly to say: but it is thought that there are Lions and Tygers as well as Anticoines, Lions especially, if it be true that is said of the enmity betwene them & the Anticoines. For there is no beast but hath his enemy, as the Cunny the Volcae, a Sheepe the Wolfe, the Elephant the Rhinoceros, and so of other beastes the like: insomuch, that whereas the one is the other is not be missing. And seeing I have made Cabare, & the great vertue thereof.

The variety of commodities in Florida.

Coulers.

Golde and silver.

Two Spaniards lived long among the Floridians.

Pieces of golde grauen among the Floridians.

Florida esteemed an island.

This copper was found perfect golde, called by the Spaniards, Syroa phyn.

Pearles.

Anticoines boines, which the Floridians wear about their necks.

Beastes.

etch them: for the Indians with are at the Spaniards finding, I saw the scope of them seadians when they travel have a with fire, and the viced heros the sacrifice the ir dungre, and this all the French men who water and beame to void from ere how true to any man: for he is able to inhale, it is shortly and other foys, as better can me some great store, as Storax li-others, wherof I know not the where with they paine their boit neither saveth away, nor do-mens first coming thither, rived for a hatchet two pound the souldiours being greivof they perceiving, that both they with them, by taking the same either durd they wear the same they could get none of them to not as yet, but by grief, it is dangerous, by means of lun-which were wacks of Spire by them. For it is most true measure. For the French men kinde two Spaniards with the being in a Carauell, coming twelve peres, whose fellows they had estimation of they about their necks, other some y their bestes withall, because of golde or silver, the French peres as yet also they have wee, but that in the maine where aule it is all one maine. The were blacke, by means of wa-for their meat: for the Sp-dians, some of them that be of great pinnelles, with thirke rest doe open the same for the would bring them out of this the smallest foys of pearles are twelve fathom.
 ere about their necks, wherof y have many, for that they doe to yinke, putteth the same into company, that hauing gotten is therefore to be presupposed time, and people sufficient to eale the same before it be long, this countrey bestes Deer, ble certaintly to say: but it is vious especially, if it bee true is no beast but hath his ene-the Rhinoceros, and so of other missing. And seeing I have made

made mention of the beasts of this Countrey, it shal not be from my purpos to speake also of the numerous beastes, as Crocodiles, wherof there is great abundance, Advers of great bignesse, wherof our men killed some of a pard and a halfe long. Also I heard a miracle of one of these advers, upon the which a Falcon seazing, the same adder did clasp her taile about her, which the French Capaine seeing, came to the rescue of the Falcon, and tooke her slaying the adder, and this Falcon being wiled he did reclaime her, and kept her for the space of 2. moneths, at which time for very want of meat he was faine to call her off: On this adder the Frenchmen did feede to no litle admiration of vs, and affirmed the same to be a delicate meate. And the Capaine of the Frenchmen sawe also a Serpent with 3. heads and 4. seete, of the bignesse of a great Spaniell which for want of a barquebulle he durd not attempte to slay. Of fish also they haue in the river, pike, roche, salmon, troute, and diuers other small fishes, and of great fish, some of the length of a man and longer, being of bignesse accordingly, hauing a snoute much like a swope of a parde long. There be also of sea fishes which wee sawe coming along the coast flying, which are of the bignesse of a smelt, the bigger sort wherof haue foure winges, but the other haue but two:
 Of these we sawe coming out of Guinea, a hundred in a companie, which being chased by the Galleys, otherwise called the Bonitoes, doe to auoyde them the better take their flight out of the water, but yet are they not able to flee farre, because of the drying of their winges, which serue them not to flye but when they are moyste, and therefore when they can flye no further, fall into the water, and hauing wetted their winges take a newe flight againe. These Bonitoes be of bignesse like a carpe, and in colour like a makarell, but it is the swiftest fish in swimminge that is,
 and followeth her preye very secretly, not onely in the water, but also out of the water: for as the flying fish taketh her flight, so doeth this Bonito leape after them, and taketh them sometimes aboue the water. They were some of those Bonitoes, which being galled by a sturges did follow our ship coming out of Guinea 500. leagues. There is a sea foule also that chaseth this flying fish as well as the Bonito: for as the flying fish taketh her flight, so doeth this foule pursue to take her, which to be-holde is a greater pleasure then hauing, for both the flights are as pleasaunt, and also more often then 100. times: for the foule can flie no way but one or other lightly in her pawes, the number of them are so abundant. There is an innumerable poung frie of these flying fishes, which commonly herpe about the shippe, and are not so bigge as butterflies, and yet by flyinge doe auoyde the vni-diuinitie of the Bonito. Of the bigger sort of these fishes we tooke many, which both night and day flew into the sailes of our shippe, and there was not one of them which was not worth a Boni-to: for being put upon aooke dyabling in the water, the Bonito would leape thereat, and so was taken. Also, we tooke many with a white clothe made fast to a hook, which beinge tied so short in the water, that it might leape out, and in, the greedy Bonito thinkinge it to be a flying fish leape thereat, and so is deceiued: Wee tooke also Dolphins which are of very goodly colour and proportion to beholde, and no less delicate in eate. Foules also there be many, both vpon lande and vpon sea: But concerning them on the lande I am not able to name them, because my abode was there so short. But for the foule of the fresh riuers, these two I neede to see the chiefe, whereof the Flemengo is one, hauing all redde feathers, and long redde legges like a Herne, a necke according to the bill redde, wherof the vpper nebbe hangeth an inch or ouer the nebbe: And an Egryppe which is all white as the swanne, with legges like to an bearneshe we, and of bignesse accordingly, but it hath in her taile feathers of so fine a plume, that it passeth the Estridge his feather. Of sea foule aboue all other not common in Englaube, I noted the Pellicane, which is faigned to be the louingest birde that is: which rather then her yong would want, will spare her heart blood out of her bestie, but for all this louingesse shee is very desformed to beholde, for shee is of colour rustie, notwithstanding in Guinea I haue seene of them as white as a swanne, hauing legges like the same, and a body like a Herne, with a long necke, and a thicke long beake, from the nerther iawe wherof downe to the beak passeth a skinnie of such a bignesse, as is able to receiue a fish as bigge as ones thigh, and this her bigge throate and long bill, doeth make her seeme so ugly.

Here I haue declared the estate of Florida, and the commodities therein to this day knowne, which although it may seeme vnto some, by the meanes that the plenty of Golde and Silver is not so abundant, as in other places, that the cost bestowed vpon the same, will not bee able to quite the charges: Yet am I of the opinion, that by that which I haue seene in other Islands of the Indians, where such increase of cattell hath bene that of twelve head of beastes in 25. peres, and in the space of them raise 1000. pound profit yearly, that the increase of cattell onely would raise profit sufficient for the same: For wee may consider, if so small a portion did raise so much gaines in such short time, what would a greater doe in many peres?

Falcons in Florida.

Serpents.

Dolphins.

Flemengo.

The Egrype.

The Pellicane

Wanted to seepe a list of the commodities in Florida and Virginia.

And surely I may this affirme, that the ground of the Indians for the byerde of caecell, is not in any point to be compared to this of Florida, which all the yere long is so greene, as any time in the Sommer with vs: which surely is not to be marvelled at, seeing the Countrey standeth in so waerie a climate: for once a day without faile they haue a showe of raine, which by meane of the Countrey it self, which is drye, and more seruene boe then ours, doeth make all things to flourish therein: and because there is not the thing wee all seeke for, being rather deirous of present gaine, I do therefore affirme the attempt thereof to be more requisite for a prince, who is of power able to goe thowto with the same, rather then for any subiect.

From thence we departed the 28. of July, vpon our voyage home wards, hauing there all things as might be most conuenient for our purpose: andooke leaue of the Frenchmen that there still remained, who with diligence determined to make great speeue after, as they coude. Thus by meane of contrary windes oftentimes, we prolonged our voyage in such manner that victuals scant with vs, so that we were diuers (or rather the most part) in despair of euer comming home, had not God of his goodnesse better provided for vs, then our desiring. In which case of great miserie, we were prouoked to call vpon him by seruene prayer, which moued him to heare vs, so that wee had a prosperous winde, which did set vs so farre thowt, as to be vpon the banke of Newfoundland, on S. Bartlemewes eue, & founded thereupon landing ground, at 130. fathoms, being that day somewhat becalmed, andooke a great number of fresh cobbe fish, which greatly relieved vs: and very glad thereof, the next day departing, by longring little gales for the space of four or fve dapes, at the which we sawe a couple of French ships, and had so much fish as would serue vs plentifully for all the rest of the way, the Captaine paying for the same both golde and siluer, to the iust value thereof, vnto the chiefe owners of the saide ships, which they not looking for any thing at all, were glad in themselves to meete with such good incertreimene at sea, as they had at our handes. After which departure from them, with a good large winde the 20. of September we came to Padstow in Cornewall God be thanked, in safete, with the losse of 20. persons in all the voyage, and profitable to the venturers of the saide voyage, as also to the whole Realme, in bying home both golde, siluer, pearles and other itwels great ampe. His name therefore be praised for euermore. Amen.

Their arrival in Padstow in the month of September, 1595.

The names of certaine Gentlemen that were in this voyage.

M. Iohn Hawkins,
M. Iohn Chester, } Sir William Chesters sonne.
M. Anthony Parkhurst.
M. Fitzwilliam.
M. Thomas Woorley,
M. Edward Lacie, } with diuers others.

The Register and true accompts of all herein expressed, hath bene approved by mee Iohn Sparke the yonger, who went vpon the same voyage, and wrote the same.

The arriual and courtesie of M. Hawkins to the distressed

Frenchmen in Florida, is elsewhere also recorded, both in French, and English, in the historie of Laudonier, written by himselfe, and printed in Paris, Anno 1586.

And translated into English by mee Richard Hakluyt, Anno 1587.

and published as followeth.

Aske of vs were much toymented in minde with diuers cogitations, the thirde of August I desired foure sailles in the Sea, as I walked vpon a little hill, wherof I was exceeding well apayde: I sent immediately one of them which were with me, to aduertise those of the fox thereof, which were so glad of those newes, that one would haue thought them to be out of their wits, to see them laugh and leape for ioy. After these ships had cast ancre, we desired that they sent off their shippe boates to land: wherupon I saw led one of mine to be armed with diligence to sende to meete them, and to knowe who they were.

Their arriual
and the courtesie of M. Hawkins.

In the meane wh attending the re
who brought me
whole name was behalf of M. Iohn fresh water, where dapes on the coast
made of wheate, & vpp of wine: new Acinas had guided he came thither w request, he signifi
ships to enter into ably apparell'd, p
me. On my part I be killed, which v Michael. Now 3. an dians came in fiv
so signified vnto
thence for ward:
men spye ouer all behalf of the king
to make waerie ag
them, & gratified
bygrace or a sion w comppany boate: w
son he made so lar ly: and although I in England, yet I spitrelle: where se soldiers, which sa before, was not suff The byuice and m ships, he told certa with him, he decla
past safely in thos no doubt be in gre
men in his ship were no sooner r ly consented toge
with him, and forsa attended themsel intercion, wher
I gathered togeth
mance with them.
same the occasio
d, being forsaken After sumptie deb
wey in the price gave him the best wherupon not the Queene of Eng
as before she had went to our Spaine wealth. And that lize, which at her ration of the weal
thus concludes, an

In the meane while fearing least they were Spaniards, I set my souldiers in order and readinesse, attending the returne of Captaine Vasseur, and my Lieutenant, which were gone to meete them, who brought me word that they were Englishmen. And in truerth they had in their companie one whose name was Martine Acinas of Diepe, which at that time was in their seruice: which on the behalfe of M. Iohn Hawkins their Generall came to request me that I would suffer them to take fresh water, whereof they stood in great neede, signifying vnto mee that they had bene about 15. dayes on the coast to get some. He brought vnto me from the Generall 2. flagons of wine, & bread made of wheate, which greatly refreshed mee, so much as for 7. moneths space, I neuer tasted a drop of wine: neuertheless it was all deuised among the greatest part of my souldiers: this Martin Acinas had guided the Englishmen to our coast, wherewith he was acquainted. For in the yeere 1562. he came thither with me, & therfoze the Generall sent him to me. Therfoze after I had granted his request, he signified the same vnto the generall, which the next day following caused one of his small ships to enter into the riuer, & came to see me in a great shipboat, accompanied wth gentlemen honorably apparelled, yet vnarmed: he sent for great store of bread & wine to distribute thereof to euery one. On my part I made him the best chere I could possibly, & caused certaine heepe & poultry to be killed, which vnto this present I had caused carefully to be preserued, hoping to soze the coldeye which. Now in 3. dayes passed while the English general remained wth me, during whichtime the Indians came in to see me, & asked me whether he were my brother: I told them he was so, & signified vnto them, that he was come to see me, & a pde me with so great store of victuals, that thence forth I should haue no need to eate any thing of them. The while herof incontinently was spied ouer all the countrey in such sort, as Ambassadors came vnto me to all parts, which on the behalfe of the king & their masters, desired to make alliance wth me, & euen they which before sought to make waite against me, came to offer their seruice & friendship vnto me: wherupon I retriued them, & gratified them with certaine presents. The general inmeadiely vnderstood the desire and vrgent occasion which I had to returne into France; wherupon he offered to transport me, & all my company home: wherunto notwithstanding I would not agree, being in doubt vpon what occasion he made so large an offer. For I knew not how the safe stood betwixt the French & the English: and although he promised me on his faith to put me on land in France, before he would touch in England, yet I stood in doubt least he would attempte somewhat in Florida in the name of his Mistresse: wherefoze I flatly refused his offer. Wherupon there rose a great mutinie among my souldiers, which said that I sought to destroy them all, and that the Pyganine wherof I spake before, was not sufficient to transport them, considering the season of the yeere, wherein wee were. The while and mutinie increased moze and moze: so after that the generall was returned to his ships, he told certaine gentlemen and souldiers which went to see him, partly to make good chere wth him, he declared and said vnto them, that he greatly doubted, that hardily we should be able to passe safely in those vessels which wee had, and that in case we should enterpryse the same, we should not be in great leopordie: notwithstanding, if I were so contented, he would transport part of my men in his ships, and that he would leaue me in a small ship to transport the rest. The souldiers were no sooner come home, but they signified the offer vnto their companions, which incontinently consented together, that in case I would not accept the same, they would imbarke themselves wth him, and forsake me, so that he would receiue them according to his promise. They therfoze assembled themselves together, and came to seeke me in my chamber, and signified vnto me their intencion, Wherunto I promised to answere them in one houre after. In which meane space I gathered together the principall members of my companie, which, after that I had broken the matter wth them, answered mee all with one voyce, that I ought not to refuse his offer, nor consume the occasion which presented it selfe. And that they could not thinke rull of it in France, it being forsaken as we were. Wee apde our selues wth such meanes, as God hath sent to vs. After summe debates of this matter, in conclusion I gaue my aduise that wee ought to be let from the price of the shippe which hee was to leaue vs, and that for my part I was content to giue him the best of my stuffe, and the silver which I had gathered in the Countrey.

Wherupon notwithstanding it was determined, that I should keepe the silver, for feare least the Queene of Englande seeing the same, should be the rather bee incouraged to set footing there, as before she had desired: That it was farre better to carry it into France, to giue incouragement to our Princes not to leaue off such an enterpryse of so great importance for our Common wealth. And that seeing wee were resolved to depart, it was farre better to giue him our Artillery, which otherwise wee should be constrained to leaue behinde vs, or to hide in the ground, by reason of the weaknesse of our men, being not able to imbarke the same. This point being thus concluded, and resolved on, I went (my selfe) vnto the English Generall, accompanied with cell, is not in me, as any time in entirely standeth in rich by means of all things to show

stirous of present
who is of point
g there at things
men that there will outdoe. Thus by ere that victuals
of cuer coming
In which case of
ued him to heare
upon the banks of ne 130. factious,
which greatly res for the space of rich sly as would he both golde and they not loosing
in earnest at sea, as withe the 20. of
th the lode of 20.
all to the whole
shippe. His name
ressed, hath bene
went vpon the stressed
rench, 7. cogitations, the I walked vpon a imediately one of reof, which were to be out of their had cast ancre, therupon I saw
who they were.
In

which in Foyde.

with my lieutenant, and Captaine Valleur, Captaine Verdier, and Trenchant the pilot, and my striants, all men of experience in such affaires, & knowing sufficiently how to vantage such a bargain. We therfore took a view of the ship, which the Generall would sell, whom we dyed to such reason, that he was content to stand vnder mine owne mens iudgement, who esteemed it to bee worth 700. crownes, whereof we agreed very friendly. Wherefore I deliuered him in earnest of the summe, 2. balliards, 2. millions, one thousand and ypon, & one thousand of powder: this bargain thus made, he considered the necessity wherein we were, hauing for al our sustenance but mil & water: whereupon being moued with pittie, he offered to relieue me with 20. barrels of meale, 6. pipes of beanes, one hoghead of sale, and 100. of more to make candles. Moreover, for so much as he saw my souldiers goe barefoot, he offered me besides 50. paire of shoes, which I accepted, and agreed of a ypiece with him, and gaue him a bill of my hand for the same, for which vntill this present I am indebted to him. He did more then this, for particularly he bestowed vpon my selfe a great barre of oyle, a barre of vinegar, a barre of olives, and a great quantitie of rise, and a barre of white bisket: besides he gaue diuers presents to the principall officers of my company, according to their qualities. So that I may say, that we receiued as many courtesies of the General, as it was possible to receive of any man liuing. Wherein doubtlesse, he hath wonne the reputation of a good & charitable man, deserving to be esteemed as much of vs al, as if he had saued all our liues. Incontinent after his departure, I spared no paines to hasten my men, to make biscuits of the meale which he had left me, and to hoope my caskes to take in water needfull for the voyage.

Thus farre Laudoniere, concerning M. Haukins and his courtesie.

A relation of the commodities of Noua Hispania, and the manners of the inhabitants, written by Henry Hawkes merchant, which liued 5. yeeres in the said Countrey, and drewe the same at the request of M. Richard Hakluyt Esquire of Eiton in the Countie of Hereford, 1572.

S. John de Villua.

Aint John de Villua, is an Island not high above the water, whereas now the Spaniards, vpon M. Iohn Hawkins being there, are in making a strong fort. In this place all the shippes that come out of Spaine with goods for these parts do unlade. For they haue none other port so good as this is. The coming into this place hath 3. chanelis, and the best of all is the Northmost, which goeth by the maine land: and on every side of the chanelis, there are many small rockes as bigge as a small barrell: they will make men stand in doubt of them, but there is no feare of them. There is another Island thereby called the Island of sacrifices, whereas the Spaniards did in times past unlade their goods. And for that they say there are vpon it spirits of deuils, it is not frequented as it hath bene. In these places the North winde hath so great dominion, that oftentimes it destroyeth many shippes and barches. This place is giuen to great sickness. These Islands stand in 18. degrees and a halfe, and about the same is great plenty of fish.

Spirits.

Vera Cruz.

Five leagues from S. Iohn de Villua is a faire riuer: it lieth North west from the port, and goeth to a little towne of the Spaniards called Vera Cruz, and with small bellis or barches, which they call Fragates, they carry all their marchandise which cometh out of Spaine, to the said towne: and in like manner bring all the golde, silver, Cochoanelis, hides, and all other things that the shippes carry into Spaine vnto them. And the goods being in Vera Cruz, they carry it to Mexico, and to Pueblo del los Angeles, Sacatecas, and Saint Martin, and diuers other places so farre within the Countrey, that some of them are 700. miles off, and some more, all vpon horses, mules, and in waynes vnto one with oxen, and in carres vnto one with mules. In this towne of Vera Cruz within these 20. yerres, when women were brought to bedde, the children neuer boyme incontinently died: which is not so now in these dayes, God be thanked.

Muskito.

This towne is inclined to many kinde of diseases by reason of the great heate, and a certaine gnaw of sic which they call a Muskito, & bitheth both men and women in their sleepe, and as some as they are bitten, incontinently the flesh swelleth as though they had bene bitten with some venomous worme. And this Muskito is great doerth most followe such as are newly come into the Countrey: Many there are that die of this annoyance.

This towne is situated vpon the riuers side, and compassed with woodes of diuers manners and costes, and many fruits, as Oranges and Lemmons, Guiaues, and diuers others, and birds in them, them, papinapes being on the east of small mountains

This towne of 40 miles being past their towne with them if they should be burnt all.

Before you come 16000. house hold the occasion that they see all the Countrey.

Mexico is a great city on the shore of the bay under the Spaniards of fathers and mothers, some of the beautiful which is not so far from the bay, and the houses, which they are great for their

This City is the best and best, because in this City are as well Spaniards as of things that these fathers is vpon the Thursday, vnto the Vicere, other places of the not appeare from summer: And if it fall into this lake goeth out.

The Indians in this City hath beene: for the Indians and Debar recreation. The best of their bo

There are need them a monstrous canell. He is too any man of bea

There is a dead, whereas they have newly

There is a well and by the name of the island and Groenland. They say, accompt to be m

Towards the them, papinapes both small and great, and some of them as bigge as a raven, and their tailes as long as the eade of a f. e. There are also many other kinde of beeres of purple couller, and small drinking marvellous proper.

Papinapes.
Spencers.

This towne of Ache Countrey continueth 45. miles towarde the Citie of Mexico: and the 45. miles being passed, then there is a temperate Countrey and full of alliage: but they water all their corne with rivers which they runne in upon it. And they gather their wheate twice a yeere. And if they should not water the ground where as their corne is sowne, the Countrey is so hotte it would burne all.

Whate this is in a poore.

Before you come to Mexico, there is a great towne called Tlaxcalla, which hath in it about 16000. householde. All the inhabitants thereof are free by the kings of Spaine: for these were the occasion that Mexico was wonne in so short time, and with so little losse of men. Wherefore they are all Gentlemen and pay no tribute to the king. In this towne is all the Cochohilio growing.

Tlaxcalla a free Citie.

Mexico is a great Citie: it hath more then fiftie thousande householde, whereof there are not past five or sixe thousande houses of Spaniards, all the other are the people of the Countrey, which live under the Spaniards lawes. There are in this Citie stately buildings and many Monasteries of friers and nonnes which the Spaniards have made. And the building of the Indians is somewhat beautiful outwarly, and within full of small chambers, which very small houses, which is not so comely as the building of the Spaniards. This Citie standeth in the midst of a great lake, and the water goeth through all of the most part of the streets, and there come small boats, which they call Canoes, and in them they bring all things necessary, as wood and coales, and grass for their houses, stones and lime to bulde, and coyns.

America.

This Citie is subiect to many earthquakes, which oftentimes call downe houses, and kill people. This Citie is very well provided of water to drinke, and with all manner of victuals, as fruits, fish and fish, bread, hennes and capons, Guinie cocks and hennes, and all other soule. There are in this Citie every weeke thre faires or marketes, which are frequented with many people as well Spaniards as the people of the Countrey. There are in these faires or marketes all manner of things that may bee invented to sell, and in especial things of the Countrey. The one of these faires is upon the Monday, which is called S. Hypolitos faire, and S. James his faire is upon the Thursday, and upon Saturday is S. Iohns faire. In this Citie is allwayes the kings Governour or Viceroy, and there are kept the Termes and Parliaments. And although there bee severall places of Justice, yet this is above all: so that all men may appeale unto this place, and may not appeale from this Citie, but onely into Spaine before the King: and it must be for a certaine summe; And if it be under that summe, then there is no appellation from them. Many rivers fall into this lake which the Citie standeth in: but there was never any place founde whither it goeth out.

It may be by some opinion.

The Indians knowe a way to towne the Citie, and within these 3. yeeres they would have passed the same: but they which should have bene the doers of it were hanged, and ever since the Citie hath bene well watched both day and night, for feare least at sometime they might be deceived: for the Indians love not the Spaniards. Round about the towne there are very many gardens and Orchards of the fruits of the Countrey marvellous faire, where the people have great recreation. The men of this Citie are marvellous vicious, and in like maner the women are dishonest of their bodies, more then they are in other Cities or townes in this Countrey.

Crocodiles.

There are neere about this Citie of Mexico many rivers and standing waters, which have in them a monstrous kinde of fish which is marvellous rauening, and a great devourer of men and cattell. He is wont to sleepe upon the drye land many times: and if there come in the meane time any man or beast and wake or disquiet him, he speedeth well if he get from him. Hee is like unto a serpent fasting: hee doerh not sleepe, neither hath he wings.

Navigatioe to China from this port be the same way.

There is without of Mexico a port towne which is on the South sea, called Puerto de Navidad, where as there are shippes which they have ordinarily for the Navigatioe of China, which they have newly found. This port is threescore leagues from Mexico.

The South sea strange.

There is another port towne which is called Culluacan on the South sea which lyeth West and by North out of Mexico, and is 150. leagues from the same. And there the Spaniards made two shippes to goe seeke the streight of gulfie, which as they say is betwene the Newfounde land and Greenland, and they call it the Englishmens Straite, which as yet was never fully found. They say that the Straight lieth not farre from the maine land of China, which the Spaniards attempt to be marvellous rich.

Towarde the North from Mexico, there are great flocks of silver mynes. There is greater quan-

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

0 16 18 20 22 25 28

10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28

quantity of silver founde in these mines toward the North, then there is in any other partes; and as the most minen of experience said alwayes, they finde the richer mines the more Northerly. These mines are commonly vpon great hills and stoue ground, maruailous hard to be laboured and wrought.

Out of some of the mines, the Indians finde a certaine kinde of earth of diuers colours, whereby they paint themselves in times of their vaunces, and other pastimes which they doe.

In this Countrey of Noua Hispania, there are also mines of gold; although the golde be commonly found in riuers, or very neere vnto riuers. And now in these dayes there is not so much golde found as there hath bene heretofore.

There are many great riuers and great stoupe of fishe in them, not like vnto our kindes of fish. And there are maruailous great woods, and as faire trees as may be scene of diuers sortes, and especially firre trees that may make any shippe that goeth vpon the sea, oaks and pines, and another tree which they call a Miskitoit beareth a fruite like vnto a peasecod maruailous sweet, which the wilde people gather and keepe it all the yeere, and eat it in steede of bread.

The Spaniards haue notice of seuen Cities which olde men of the Indians shewe them should lie towards the North-west from Mexico. They haue used and vse dayly much diligence in the seeking them, but they cannot finde any one of them. They say that the witchcraft of the Indians is such, that when they come by these tolines they cast a miste vpon them, so that they can not see them.

They haue vnderstanding of another Citty which they call Copalla, and in like manner, of my being in the Countrey, they haue used much labour and diligence in the seeking of it: they haue found the lake on which it should stande, and a Canoa; the head wherof was wrought with copper curiously, and coulde not finde nor see any man nor the towne, which to their vnderstanding should stand on the same water of very neere the same.

There is a great number of beastes of kine in the Countrey of Cibola, which were neuer brought thither by the Spaniards, but breed naturally in the Countrey. They are like vnto our oxen, saying that they haue long haire like a Lion, and hoar horns, and they haue vpon their shoulders a bunke like a Camell, which is hieer then the rest of their body. They are maruailously wilde and swift in running. They call them the beastes of kine of Cibola.

This Cibola is a Citty which the Spaniards founde nowe of late, without any people in the same, goodly buildings, faire chimneys, windows made of stone and timber excellently wrought, faire welles with wheelles to drawe their water, and a place where they had buried their dead people, with many faire stones vpon the graues. And the Capitaine woulde not suffer his soldiers to breake vp any part of these graues, saying, hee would come another time to doe it.

They asked certaine people which they mette, whether the people of this Citty were gone; and they made answer, they were gone vnto a riuer which was thereby very great, and there had builded a Citty which was more for their commodity.

This Capitaine lacking thing's necessari: for himselfe and his men, was faine to returne backe againe without finding any treasure according to his expectation: neither founde they but fewe people, although they founde beaten wayes, which had bene much haunted and frequented. The Capitaine at his comming backe againe, had a great checke of the gouernour, because he had not gone forwards and scene the ende of that riuer.

They haue in the Countrey farte from the seales, standing waters which are salt: And in the moneths of Apill and May, the water of them congealeth into salt, which salt is all taken for the kings vse and profit.

Their dogges are all crooked backe as many as are of the Countrey kinde, and cannot runne fast: their faces are like the face of a pigge or an hogge, with sharpe noses.

In a certaine youtince which is called Guatimala, and Sacanofco, there is growing great stoupe of Cacao; which is a berrie like vnto an Almond: It is the best Sparchandise that is in all the Indies. The Indians make binke of it, and in like manner meate to eat. It goeth curantly for money in any market of faire, and may buy any flesh, fish, bread or cheere or other things.

There are many kinde of frutes of the Countrey which are very good, as Plantans, Sapoces, Guiaues, Pinas, Aluacaras, Tunas, Maimos, Lymons, Orenge, Walnus, very small and hard, and little meate in them, grapes which the Spaniards brought into the Countrey, and also wilde grapes, which are of the Countrey, and are very small, quinses, peches, figges, and but fewe apples, and very small, and no peares; but there are melons and Calabasses.

There is much bottle body of bees, and also of a kinde of tree which they call Maguez. This body

Painting
partly
of Golde mines.

7. Cities by witchcraft not found of the seekers.

The beastes of Noua Hispania.

Cibola abandoned.

Water con-
gealed to salt.

Dogs of India described.

Cacao a fruit succulent as nutmeg.

Fruites.

of Maguez is not the other is: and bags, and are good They haue in haue scene one a spring which ha within one halfe scene halfe a S
of it.

There are man
Quaples,
They haue gro
people doe open ch
of fishe, and keepe Countrey, so fill Cenck, nor Pike.

There are in th
commonly burne, ces, which are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

There are in th
gers, which Tyge
In this Countrey
and when they me
the Kings offi
ly took the said m
certaine dates the
mighte of his were
was among them,
happened to finde
outcome and man
men that found th
hame the quicke s
declared vnto the
as mynes, and succ
done in this Coun
There is great
them into Peru, w
The people of c
giuen much to dy
of Maguez, and ro
mine Pulco. They
their munkennes,
their pleasures an
vpon paines of mo
if this commodity
West India one
They are of m
They vse diuers t
tions: many time
wilde for that offer
The people arc
they learned since
call in making of
wines as he is. T
as should giue the

There are in t
Which is amon
It and it is good. A
for purgations, an

any other parts; more soberly, and to be labourer s couters, where they use the golde be com-
re is not, so much
ar Kindes of fish,
oiners loyes, and
and principles, and aruelous sweet,
ead.
ewie them should
b diligence in the but craft of the n, so that they can like maner, as my s of it: they have ought with copie understanding which were neuer are like unto our they have upon
They are mar-
ny people in the lently wrought,
buried their dead
not suffer his sole
to doe it.
tite were gone
great, and there
faine to returne
ether founde they ated and frequen-uennour, because s sake: And in the s all taken for the nd cannot runne
s growing great hantle that is in e rate. It goeth of cheere or other
ntrians, Sapores,
y small and barb,
p, and also wilde
s, and but few guez. This hony
of

Maguez is not so sweete as the other hony is, but it is better to be eaten onely with bread, then the other is: and the tree serueth for many things, as the leaues make theye to sowe any kinde of bags, and are good to couer oʒ hatch houses, and for diuers other things.

They haue in diuers places of the Countrey many hot springs of water. As about all other, I haue scene one in the prouince of Mechuacan. In a plaine field without any mountaine, there is a spring which hath much water, and it is so hot, that if a whole quarter of beefe bee cast into it, within our halfe houre, it will be as well sodden, as it will be ouer a fire in halfe a daye. I haue scene halfe a Sheepe cast in; and immediatly it hath bene sodden, and I haue eaten parte of it.

Hot Springs.

There are many Hares and some Conies. There are no Partridges, but abundance of Quayles.

Hares and Conies.

They haue great store of fish in the South Sea, and many Dyffers, and very great. The people doe open the Dyffers, and take out the meate of them, and dry it, as they doe any other kind of fish, and keepe them all the yere: and when the times serue, they sende them aboad into the Countrey, so sell as all other fish. They haue no Salmon, no Trout, no Pele, no Carpe, Tench, no Pike, in all the Countrey.

Sea fish.

There are in the Countrey mightie high mountaines, and hills, and snowe upon them. They commonly burne, and twise every day they cast out much smoke, and ashes, at certaine open places, which are in the toppes of them.

Mountaines.

There is among the wild people much Manna. I haue gathered of the same, and haue eaten it, and it is good. For the Apothecaries send their seruants at certain times, to gather of the same, for purgations, and other uses.

Manna.

There are in the mountaines many wild hogs, which all men may kill, and Lyons and Tygers, which Tygers doe much harme to men that trauell in the wilderness.

In this Countrey, not long since, there were two poore men that found a meruelous rich myne, and when these men went to make a register of the same, according to the Lawe and custome, before the Kings officers, they thought this myne not meete for such men as they were, and violentlyooke the said myne for the King, and gaue no part thereof into the two poore men. And within certaine daies the Kings officers returned thither to labour in the myne, and they found two great mightie hills were come together, so they founde no place to worke in. And in the time, while I was among them, which was sixe yeres, there was a poore shepheard, who keeping of his sheepe, happened to finde a Well of quicke siluer, and he went in like manner to manifest the same, as the custome and manner is. The Kings officers dealt in like order, as they did with the two poore men that found the rich myne, taking it quite from the shepheard: but when they went to fetch home the quicke siluer, oʒ part thereof, they could neuer finde it againe. So these things haue bene declared vnto the King, who hath giuen commandement, that nothing being found in the fieldes, as mynes, and such like, shall be taken away from any man. And many other things haue bene done in this Countrey, which men might count for great meruels.

Miner digged, not found e. time.

There is great abundance of Sugar here, and they make diuers conserues, and very good, & send them into Peru, whereas they sell them meruelous well, because they make none in those parts.

Sugar and conserues.

The people of the Countrey, are of a good stature, tawnye coloured, broad faced, flat noses, and giuen much to drinke both wine of Spaine, & also a certain kind of wine, which they make w hony of Maguez, and rootes, and other things which they vse to put into the same. They call the same wine Pulco. They are soone drunke, and giuen to much headlines, and void of all goodnes. In their drunkennes, they vse and commit sodomie, and with their mothers and daughters they haue their pleasures and pastimes. Whereupon they are defended from the drinkeing of wines, upon paines of money, as well he that selleth the wines, as the Indian that drinketh the same. And if this commandment were not, all the wine in Spaine, and in France, were not sufficient for the West India onely.

Description of the Indians prison and markets.

They are of much simplicity, and great cowards, void of all valour, and are great Warthes. They vse diuers times to talke with the Deuill, to whome they doe certaine sacrifices and oblations: many times they haue bene taken with the same; and I haue scene them most cruelly punished for that offence.

The people are giuen to learne all manner of occupacions and sciences, which for the most part they leaured since the continuing of the Spaniards: I say all manner of artes. They are very artfull in making of Images, with teachers, oʒ the proportion oʒ figure of any man, in all kinde of manner as he is. The fineries and excellencie of this is wonderfull, that a barbarous people as they are, should giue themselves to so fine an arte as this is. They are Goldsmiths, Blacksmiths, and Copper-

Smiths.

Copper Smiths, Carpenters, Spalons, Shoemakers, Tailors, Saddlers, Embroderers, and of all other kind of sciences: and they will and doe worke so good cheape, that poore yong men that go out of Spaine, to get their living, are not set on worke. Which is the occasion there are many idle people in the Countrey. For the Indian will liue all the weeke with lesse then one groate, which the Spaniard cannot doe, nor any man else.

The Indians ignorance from whence they came.

They say, that they came of the lineage of an olde man, which came thither in a boate of wood, which they call a Canoa. But they cannot tell whether it were before the flood, or after, neither can they giue any reason of the flood, nor from whence they came. And when the Spaniards came first among them, they did certaine sacrifice to an Image made in stone, of their owne inuention. The stone was set vpon a great hill, which they made of bricke of earth, they call it their Cowa. And certaine daies in the yeere, they did sacrifice certaine olde men, and yong children, and onely deceyed in the Sunne and the Spooone, saying, that from them they had all things that were needfull for them. They haue in these parts great store of cotton wool, with which they make a manner of linnen cloth, which the Indians weate, both men and women, and it is frerely for shirts & smocks and all other kind of garments, which they weare vpon their bodies: and the Spaniards use it to all such purposes, especially such as cannot buy other. And if it were not for this kind of cloth, all manner of cloth that goeth out of Spaine, I say, in new cloth would be sold out of all measure.

The skinne and moone horns etc.

The wild Indians.

The wild people goe naked, without any thing vpon them. The women weare the skinne of a Deere, before their pinnities, and nothing else vpon all their bodies. They haue no care for any thing but onely from day to day for that which they haue neede to eate. They are bigger men, and likewise the women, they shoote in bowes, which they make of a cherrie tree, and their arrows are of a Cane, with a sharpe flint stone in the end of the same: they will pierce any coate of maile, and they kill Deere, and Cranes, and wild Geese, Duckes, and other fowle, and Wopines, and Snakes, and diuers other vermin, which they eate. They liue very long, for I haue seene men that haue bene 100. yeeres of age. They haue but very litle haire in their face, nor on their bodies.

Fraters in theuicence.

The Indians haue the Fraters in great reuerence. The occasion is, that by them, and by their meane, they are free, & out of bondage, which was so obtained by Charles the Emperour, which is the occasion, that now there is not so much gold and siluer comming into Europe, as there was while the Indians were slaves. For when they were in bondage, they could not chuse but doe their easke euery daye, and bring their Masters so much metall out of their Spynes. But now they must be well paid, and much entreated to haue them worke. So it hath bene, and is a great hindrance to the owners of the Spynes, and to the Kings quinto of custome.

Copper mines.

There are many Spynes of Copper in great quantitie, wherof they spend in the Countrey, as much as serueth their turnes. There is some gold in it, but not so much as will pay the costes of the mining. The quantitie of it is such, and the Spynes are so farre from the sea, that it will not be woorth the freight to carry it into Spaine. On the other side, the Kings officers will giue no licence to make Ordnance thereof: wherupon the Spynes, lie vnlaboured, and of no valuation.

The pompe of owners of Spynes.

There is much lead in the Countrey, so that with it they couer Churches, and other religious houses: wherfore they shall not neede any of our lead, as they haue had neede thereof in times past. The pompe and liberalitie of the owners of the Spynes, is meruelous to behold. The apparell both of them, and of their wiues, is more to be compared to the apparell of Noble persons, then otherwise. If their wiues goe out of their houses, as vnto the Church, or any other place, they goe out with great Pageantie, and with as many men and maides, as though they were the wife of some Noble man. I will assure you, I haue seene a Spynners wife goe to the Church, with 100. men, and 20. Gentlewomen, and maides. They keepe open house, who will, may come to eate their meate. They call men with a bell to come to dinner and supper. They are Princes in keeping of their houses, and housefull in all manner of things.

A good owner of Spynes must haue at the least 100. slaves, to carrie, and to stamp his metalls: he must haue many Spules, and men to keepe the Spynes: he must haue mills to stamp his metalls: he must haue many waines, and Oxen to bring home wood to fire the vye: he must haue much quicksiluer, and a meruelous quantitie of salt pyne, for the metalls, and he must be at many other charges. And as for this charge of quicksiluer, it is a newe inuention, which they finde more profitable, then to fire their vye with lead. Notwith the same is very costly. For there is neuer a hundredth of quicksiluer, but costeth at the least 60. pounds sterling. And the Spynes fall dayly in decay, and of lesse value: and the occasion is, the fewe Indians that men haue to labour their Spynes.

The plenty of coccol.

There is in new Spaine, a meruelous increase of coccol, which daily doeth increase, and they are of a greater groweth then ours are. You may haue a great store of that both an hundred weight of coccol callow in his bell stone. They set the red. They spend m ery is great, so is t commonly hal the we in Cuba, and P and into Spaine. C them. They haue n serueth the Countre made in the Citie Gogall, and the v lam, and Spall. La they make no cloth cloth. The wooll s ry of the Countre

and doth serue but They make hat
cheape, then they c Spany people at
and in neede of oil worke to fire a the for lesse then 12. pe They haue mus
of all colours, and but: but the blacke They haue man
haue as good Item their Spules they There is raine
uery day, which tin waters which fall
would be destroyed
the common peopl the same. This without it, they cou of this Paiz, and
The Indians
of Paiz, which is Hispania, of as m
free, because the C And although at t dispute vpon them
the King, which is tribune, as the oth
The ships wh
let charge the sal
stone, in the south
here they doe thi 3. months, and t
ships are lost in t seeke Salomons I Man ch many them. And beca
went not on land, in Noua Hispani
ry, whereas the p They haue in which are certai

oberers, and of all young men that go ere are many whe
e groate, which
a boate of wood,
of asser, neither
e Spaniards came
e otone invention,
all it their Cowa
idern, and onely
gs that were neede
they make a maner
y shirts & stocks spaniards use it to is kind of cloth, all fall measure.

are the skime of a ue no care for any re bigge men, and
and their arrowes
ny coate of made,
nd Coyms, and I haue serue men
oy on their bodys,
hem, and by their Temperour, which hope, as there was chuse but doe their
s. But now they is a great hinde

in the Countrey, as they the colles of spat it will not be will giue no liuere
saluation,
nd other religious
ceof in times past.
old. The apparell le persons, then o
er place, they goe
re the tosse of some h, with 100. men,
come to eate their in keeping of

Stampe his me nts to stamp his ye: he must haue
e must be at many chey finde more of, there is neuer
gynes fall dayly ue to labour their crease, and they ar pounded weight of callowe

callowe in his bellie for 16. shillings, and some one man hath 20. thousand head of cattell of his name. They sel the hides vnto the Merchants, who lade into Spaine as many as may be w<sup>e</sup>l sp<sup>a</sup> ren. They spend many in the Countrey in shoes and bootes, and in the mynes: and as the Count rey is great, so is the increase of the cattell wonderfull. In the Island of Santo Domingo, they commonly kill the beastes for their hides and callowe, and the fowles eate the carcases: and so they ue in Cuba, and Porto Ricco, whereas there is much suger, and Cansahuala, which daily they send into Spaine. They haue great increase of sheepe in like maner, and daily doe intend to increase them. They haue much wool, and as good as the wooll of Spaine. They make cloth as much as serue the Countrey, for the common people, and send much cloth into Peru. I haue seene cloth made in the Citie of Mexico, which hath bene sold for ten pezos a bare, which is almost 4. pounds English, and the bare is less then our pard. They haue Dye growing in the Countrey, and Al lam, and Brazil, and diuers other things to dye withall, so that they make all colours. In Peru they make no cloth, but hereafter our cloth will be little set by in these partes, vntill it be some fine cloth. The woolls are commonly 4. shillings euery roue, which is 25. pounds: and in some pla ces of the Countrey that are farre from the places wher as they make cloth, it is worth nothing, and both serue but onely to make bents for men to lye on.

Sheepe, wool Cloth.

Dye.
Brazil.
Alall.

They make hats, as many as doe serue the Countrey, very fine and good, and sell them better cheape, then they can be brought out of Spaine, and in like maner send them into Peru.

Spany people are set on worke, both in the one, and in the other: they spin their wooll as we do, and in steede of oyle, they haue hoggs greate: they twill not their threds so much as we doe, neither worke so fine a threed. They make no kersies, but they make much cloth, which is coarse, and sell it for less then 12. pence the bare. It is called Bayall.

They haue much silke, and make all maner of stoyes thereof, as Cassataes, Wattins, Celuetes of all colours, and they are as good as the silkes of Spaine, sauing that the colours are not so per fect: but the blackes are better then the blackes that come out of Spaine.

Woolles, Hules.
Armetes.

They haue many hoxes, and mares, and mules, which the Spaniards brought thither. They haue as good firmness, as any are in Spaine, and better cheape then they be in Spaine. And with their Hules they carry all their goods from place to place.

There is raine vsually in this Countrey, from the month of May, to the midd of October, e uery day, which time they call their winter, by reason of the said waters. And if it were not for the waters which fall in these hot seasons, their Spais, which is the greatest part of their sustenance, would be destroyed. This Spais is the greatest maintenance which the Indian hath, and also all the common people of the Spaniards. And their hoxes and mules which labour, cannot be without the same. This graine is substantiall, and increaseth much blood. If the Spiners thould bee without it, they could not labour their Spines: for all their seruantes eate none other bread, but onely of this Spais, and it is made in cakes, as they make oaten cakes, in some places of England.

Spais graine for man and beast.

The Indians pay tribute, being of the age of 20. yeeres, 4. shillings of money, and an hanget of Spais, which is woorth 4. shillings more, vnto the King euery yeere. This is paid in all Noua Hispania, of as many as be of the age of 20. yeeres, sauing the citie of Tlascalla, which was made free, because the Citizens thereof were the occasion that Cortes tooke Mexico in so litle a time.
And although at the first, they were freed from payment of tribute, yet the Spaniards now begin to charge vpon them, and make them to till a great field of Spais, at their owne colles euery yeere for the King, which is as beneficiall vnto him, and as great toll vnto them, as though they paid their tribute, as the others doe.

The ships which goe out of Spaine with goods from Peru, goe to Nombre de dios, and there uncharge the said goods: and from thence they be carried over the necke of a Lande, vnto a port towne, in the south sea, called Panama, which is 17. leagues distant from Nombre de dios. And thence they doe ship their goods againe, and so from thence goe to Peru. They are in going thither 3. months, and they come backe againe in 20. daies. They haue selldome foule weather, and few ships are lost in the south sea. Fourte yeeres past, to wit, 1568. there was a ship made out of Peru, to seeke Salomons Islands, and they came some what to the south of the Equinoctiall, and founde an Island, wher many blacke people, in such number, that the Spaniards durst not goe on land among them. And because they had bene long vpon the voyage, their people were very weake, and so went not on land, so know what commoditie was vpon it. And for want of victuals, they returned in Noua Hispania, in a port called Porte de Nauidad, and thence returned backe againe vnto Pe ru, whereas they were exill entreated, because they had not knowen more of the same Islands.

Salomons Is lands sought,
and found in the South sea.
1568.

They haue in this port of Nauidad, ordinarily their ships, which goe to the Islands of China, which are certain Islands, which they haue found within these 7. yeeres. They haue brought from thence

China found by the West.

thence gold, and much Cinamon, and dishes of earth, and cups of the same, so fine, that every man that may haue a peece of them, will giue the weight of silver for it. There was a mariner that brought a pearle, as big as a doves egge, from thence, & a stone, for which the Viceroy would haue giuen 3000. buckets. Spany things they bring from thence, most excellent. There are many of these Islands, & the Spaniards haue not many of them as yet: " for the Portugals disturbe them much, & combat with them every day, saying, it is part of their conquest, & to the maine land they cannot come at any hand. There are goodly people in them, & they are great mariners, richly apparelled in cloth of gold, & silver, & like of all sorts, & goe apparelled after the manner of Turkes. This report make such as come from thence. The men of the maine lande, haue certaine traffike with some of these Islanders, & come thither in a kind of ships, which they haue with one saile, and bring of such merchandize as they haue neede of. And of these things there haue bene brought into Newe Spaine both cloth of gold, & silver, & diuers maners of silkes, & wokes of gold and silver, maruelous to be seene. So by their saying, there is not such a Countrey in the whole world. The maine land is from the Islands 150. leagues: and the Islands are not farre from the Moluccas northwards. And the people of those Islands, which the Spaniards haue, say, that if they would bring their wiues & children, that then they should haue among them what they would haue. So there goe women daily, & the king payeth all the charges of the married men & their wiues, that go to those Islands. And there is no doubt, but the trade will be meruelous rich in time to come.

It was my fortune to be in companie with one Diego Gutierres, who was the first Pilot that euer went to that Countrey of the Phillipinaes. He maketh report of many strange things in that Countrey, as well riches, as others, and saith, if there be any Paradijs vpon earth, it is in that countrey: and addeeth, that sitting vnder a tree, you shall haue such sweete smells, with such good content and pleasure, that you shall remember nothing, neither wife, nor children, nor haue any kind of appetite to eate of, or drinke, the odoriferous smells will be so sweete. This man hath good liuing in Noua Hispania, not withstanding he will returne thither, with his wife and children, and as for treasure, there is abundance, as he maketh mention. In this Countrey of Noua Hispania, there are many Bucks and Does, but they haue not so long hoines as they haue here in England. The Spaniards kill them with handguns, and with grayhounds, and the Indians kill them with their bowes, and arrowes, and with the skins they make chamoyre, such as we in England make doublets and hols of, as good as the skins that are dyed in Flanders, and like wise they make maruelous good Spanish leather of them. There is a bird, which is like vnto a Rauen, but he hath some of his feathers white: there is such abundance of them, that they eate all the corrupt and dead flesh which is in the Countrey. Otherwise the abundance of carren is so much, that it would make a maruelous corrupt aire in all the Countrey, and be so noisome, that no man could abide it. Therefore it is commaunded, there shall none of them be killed. These birds are alwaies about Cities, and Townes, where there is much flesh killed.

The Indians are much fauoured by the Iustices of the Countrey, and they call them their Opphanes. And if any Spaniard should happen to doe any of them harme, or to wrong him in taking any thing from him, as many times they doe, or to strike any of them, being in any towne, whereas iustice is, they are as well punished for the same, as if they had done it one Spaniard to another. When a Spaniard being farre from Mexico, or any place of iustice, thinking to doe with the poore Indian what he list, considering he is so farre from any place of remedie, he maketh the Indian doe what he commaundeth him, and if he will not doe it, he beateeth and misuseth him, according to his owne appetite. The Indian holdeth his peace, vntill he find an opportunity, and then taketh a neighbour with him, and goeth to Mexico, although it be 20. leagues off, and maketh his complaint. This his complaint is immediatly heard, and although it be a Knight, or a right good Gentleman, he is forthwith sent for, and punished both by his goods, and also his person is imprisoned, at the pleasure of the Iustice. This is the occasion that the Indians are so tame and ciuill, as they are: and if they should haue this fauour, the Spaniards would scarce dispatch all the Indians, or the Indians would kill them. But they may call them dogs, and use other euill words, as much as they will, and the Indian must needs put it vp, and goe his way.

The poore Indians will goe every day 2. or 3. leagues to a Faire or Market, with a childe vpon their necks, with as much fruite or rootes, or some kind of ware, as coccon wooll, or Cables of all colours, as shall be not past worth a pennie: and they will maintaine themselves vpon the same. For they liue with a maruelous small matter.

They are in such pouertie, that if you neede to ride into the Countrey, you shall haue an Indian to goe with you all the day, with your bed vpon his backe, for one roll of plate: and thus you shall haue from one Towne to another. Here you are to vnderstand, that all men that travel by the

" This is to be briker food of the time when this dilcouerie
was written.
anno 1572.

China ships
with one saile.

Chamoire.

Spanish leas
ther.
Iohn Rauens
not killed, so beuotus carol.
87.

Spanys home to the Indians punished.

Iustice com-
of children.

the way, are a loo-
all that they may.

The garment
a woman struck one to put on flowers, of red and then they haue
waite, and reache
to some halfe the men haue a small cheir beeches, an
and with a knot by cheir apparell, all The walls of t shall not well per che means that c rie in their walls.
very little, so that cheir houses, are l calke one with an full of images, an
and sleepe on the

The Indians

for they know n
In Noua Hisp
Mexico: so there

Mutezuma wh
hane bene seene
they, and all man
all trees, and flow
his treasure, and in they say that the would giue none though he were n
so that he was not to bring at such a free, but himselfe.
Alwaies when lo
mens shoulders,
and many colours,
this day, so doe al

The Spaniards
not dagger, nor k may they ride by which they take tions, but they ha

There remain
the bones of a Sp that had no other come againe, wh place, about the s their mynes they

They haue in
of the commodie They haue a l meruelous good
There are in l

fine, that every man was a mariner that Ciceroy would have

There are many of ingals disturbe them
the maine land they mariners, richly apmaner of 3 Turkes have certaine traffike ie with one isle, and have bene brought in s of gold and silver, the whole world. The
from the Moluccas
that if they would their wives, that go
in time to come,

is the first Pilot that change things in that ly, it is in that comwith such great com-
noy have any kinde
in hath good living children, and as for oua Hispania, there
e in England. The all them with their England make bove they make maner n, but he hath some grape and dead fish at it would make a to abide it. There
ates about Cities,

call them their Dyong him in taking up to one, whereas aniard to another.
doe with the poore maketh the Indian
him, according to and then taketh a o maketh his com-
be, or a right good
o his person is im-
are so tame and cle-dispatch all the other euill woordes,

t, with a childe up-oll, or Cadis of all s upon the same.

shall have an Indi-
ate: and this you
om that travel by
the

the way, are a waies wont to carry their beds with them. They are great theues, and will steale all that they may, and you shall haue no recompence at their hands.

The garments of the women, are in this manner. The vppermost part is made almost like to a woman's smock, sauing that it is as broad about as beneath, and hath no sleeves, but holes on e-che side one to put out the ir armes. It is made of lumen cloth, made of cotton wooll, and filled full of flowers, of red Cadis and blew, and other colours. This garment cometh downe to the knees, and then they haue another cloy made after the same manner, and that goeth round about their waite, and reacheth to their shoes and ouer this a white fine sheete upon their heads, which goeth downe halfe the legges. Their haire is made vp round with an haire lace about their head. And the men haue a small paire of breeches, of the same cotton wooll, and their shirts which hang ouer their breeches, and a broad girdle about their middles, and a sheete with flowers vpon their backs, and with a knot vpon one shoulder, and an hat vpon their heads, and a paire of shoes. And this is all their apparell, although it be a Calique, which they vse in all the Countrey.

The apparit of the Indis
ans.

The wals of the houses of the Indians, are but plaine, but the stones are laid so close, that you shall not well perceaue the ioynts betweene one stone and another, they are so finely cut: and by the means that the stones are so workmanly done, and finely ioynted together, there is some beau-tie in their wals. They are meruelous small and light, as Pumie stones. They make their doozes very little, so that there can goe in but one man at a time. Their windowes, and rooms within their houses, are small, and one roome they haue reserved for their friends, when they come to take one with another, and that is alwaies faire matted, and kept meruelous cleane, and hanged full of images, and their chaires standing there to sit in. They eate their meate vpon the ground, and sleepe on the ground vpon a mat, without any bed, both the gentlemen, and other.

The houses of the Indians.

The Indians strike their fire with one stick in another, as well the tame people, as the wilde.

Fire ribben out of two sticks.
Diners speeches.

For they know not howe to doe it with an yron, and a stone.
In Noua Hispania, euerp 10. or 12. leagues they haue a contrarie speech, sauing onely about Mexico: so there is a number of speeches in the Countrey.

Mutezuma which was the last King of this Countrey, was one of the richest Princes which haue bene seene in our time, or long before. He had all kind of beasts, which were then in the country, and all maner of birds, and fishes, and all maner of wormes, which creepe vpon the earth, and all trees, and flowers, and herbes, all fashioned in silver and gold, which was the greatest part of al his treasure, and in these things had he great ioy, as the olde Indians report. And vnto this day, they say that the treasure of Mutezuma, is hidden, and that the Spaniards haue it not. This King would giue none of his people freedom, nor forgive any of them that shoulde paye him tribute, though he were neuer so poore. For if it had bene told him, that one of his tributaries was poore, that he was not able to pay his tribute, according to the custome, then he would haue him bound to bring at such times as tributes shoulde be paid, a quill full of Xpre, saying, he would haue none free, but himselfe. He had as many wives, or concubines, as he would haue, and such as liked him.
Alwaies when he went out of his Court, to passe the time, he was borne vpon 4. of his noble mens shoulders, set vpon a table, some say, of gold, and very richly dressed with feathers, of diuers and many colours and flowers. He washed all his bodie euery day, were it neuer so cold. And vnto this day, so doe all the Indians, and especially the women.

Mutezuma,
and his riches

The Spaniards keepe the Indians in great subiection. They may haue in their houses no sword nor dagger, nor knife with any pointe, nor may weare vpon them any maner of armes, neither may they ride vpon any horse, nor mules, in any saddle nor bydle, neither may they drinke wine, which they take for the greatest paine of all. They haue attempted diuers times to make insurrections, but they haue bene ouerthrowen immediately by their owne great and healthy cowardlines.

The Indians
wash them-
selues euery
day.

There remaine some among the wilde people, that vnto this day eate one another. I haue seene the bones of a Spaniard, that haue bene as cleane burnt, as though it had bene done by men that had no other occupation. And many times people are carried away by them, but they neuer come againe, whether they be men or women.

Campbala.

They haue in the sea Islands of red salt in great abundance, whereas they lade it from place to place, about the sea coast: and they spend very much salt with salting their hides, and fische: and in their mynes they occupie a great quantitie.

Island of Gale.

They haue much Allam, and as good as any that is in all the Leuane, so that they neede none of that commoditie.

They haue also of their owne growing, much Cana fistula, and much Salsa Perilla, which is meruelous good for many kind of diseases.

Canna fistula,
Salsa Perilla

There are in Florida, many Tarretalcans, and many other kind of Quakes, which the Gen-men

Florida,
men

men of Noua Hispania send for euery yeere. The Spaniards haue two fortcs there, chiefly to keepe out the Frenchmen from planting there.

The 3. vnfortunate voyage made with the Iesus, the Minion, and foure other shippes, to the partes of Guinea, and the West Indias, in the yeeres 1567. and 1568, by M. Iohn Hawkins.

October.

A storme.

The shippes departed from Plymmouth, the second day of October, Anno 1567. and had reasonable weather, until the seventh day, at which tyme foxtie leagues North from Cape Finester, there arose an extreme storme, which continued foure daies, in such sort, that the fleet was disperfed, and all our great boates lost, and the Iesus our chiefe shippe, in such case, as not thought able to ferre the voyage: whereupon in the same storme we sette our course homeward, determining to giue ouer the voyage: but the eleuenth day of the same moneth, the winde changed with faire weather, whereby we were animated to followe our enterpryse, and so did, directing our course with the Islands of Grand Canaries, where according to an order before prescribed, all our shippes before disperfed, mette in one of those Islands, called Gomera, where we tooke water, and departed from thence the fourth day of Nouember, towarde the coast of Guinea, and arrived at Cape Verde, the eighteenth of Nouember: where wee landed 150. men, hoping to obtaine some Negroes, where we gatte but fewe, and those with great hurt and damage to our men, which chiefly proceeded of their enuemenomed arrowes: & although in the beginning, they seemed to be but small hurtes, yet there hardely escaped any, that had bloode drawn of them, but died in strange sort, with their mouthes swete, some ten dayes before they died, and after their woundes were whole, where I my selfe had one of the greatest woundes, yet thanks be to God, escaped. From thence we past the time vpon the coast of Guinea, searching with all diligence, the Rivers from Rio grande, vnto Sierra Leona, till the twelfth of Ianuarie, in which time wee had not gotten together a hundred and fiftie Negroes: yet notwithstanding the sickness of our men, and the late time of the yeere commanded vs away, and thus hauing nothing where to goe to seeke the coast of the West Indias, I was with the rest of our companie in consultation to goe to the coast of the Spynie, hoping there to haue obtained some golde for our wares, and thereby to haue defraied our charge. But euen in that present instant, there came to vs a Negro, sent from a King, oppressed by other Kings his neighbours, desiring our aide, with promise, that as many Negroes as by these wares might be obtained, as well of his part, as of ours, should be at our pleasure: whereupon we concluded to giue aide, and sent 120. of our men, which the fiftene of Ianuarie, assaulted a towne of the Negroes of our Allies aduersaries, which had in it 8000. Inhabitants, and very strongly impaled and fenced, after their manner, but it was so well defended, that our men prevailed not, but lost the men, and 40. hurt: so that our men sent forthwith to me for moze helpe: whereupon considering that the good successe of this enterpryse might highly further the commoditie of our voyage, I went my selfe, and with the helpe of the King of our side, assaulted the towne, both by land and sea, and very hardly with fire (their houses being couered with drye Palme leaues) obtained the towne, and put the Inhabitants to flight, where we tooke 150. persons, men, women, and children, and by our friends the King of our side, there was taken 600. prisoners, whereof we hoped to haue had our chaffe: but the Negro (in which nation is seldom of neuer found truth) meant nothing lesse: for that night he remooued his campe, and prisoners, so that we were faine to content vs with those fewe which we had gotten our selues.

Gomera.

Nouember.

Enuemenomed
arrowes.December.
Ianuarie.A towne of 8000. Negroes was taken.No truth in Negroes.

February.

March.
Dominica.

April.

May.

How had we obtained betwene 4. and 500. Negroes, wherewith we thought it somewhat reasonable to seeke the coast of the West Indias, and there, for our Negroes, and other our merchandise, we hoped to obtaine, whereof to counteruaile our charges with some gaine, whereunto we proceeded with all diligence, furnished our warring, tooke fuel, and departed the coast of Guinea the third of February, continuing at the sea with a passage more hard, then before hath bene accustomed, till the 17. day of March, which day we had sight of an Island, called Dominica, vpon the coast of the West Indias, in 14. degrees: from thence we coasted from place to place, making our traffike with the Spaniards, as we might, somewhat hardly, because the King had straightly commanded all his Governours in those partes, by no meanes to suffer any trade to be made with vs notwithstanding we had reasonable trade, & courteous entertainment, from the Isle of Margarita into Cartagena, without anything greatly worth noting, sauing at Capo de la Vela, in a towne called Rio de la Hacha, from whence come all the pearles: the treasurer who had charge there, would by no meanes agree to any trade, or suffer vs to take water, he had fortified his towne with

duces

duces bulwarke gambiers, so that which purpose he could by no meane
their bulwarke to the Spaniards Thus hauing
partly by frien reioined to vs by we traued the S At Cartagena
caine to deale w finished we thou yeare departed f
then loone after ba, towarde the
which continued
buildings, her r
rather vpon the passe sought the halowes of the after 3. dayes, w called Saint I
our way w. ship
be a meane to b
of our fleet: ho
and in our ente the Countrey e but immediatly found also in the River, all which in my way chie
a grate: ouer
tion and sent p Counsell there, of the repaire o
ship to be furnis
all conuenient l hed for, there m
of amitie, their
the fiftene of m morning which shippes, and w
General of the fl
to enter y<sup>e</sup> port, and maine nau
nor three foot Island standeth
there is not in a wind hath there and vpon this I Queen was so li not giue place t
said I, I am in keepe oue the fle
or els suffer the
where they may there bin preser

... chiefly to keepe

Minion, West In

October, Anno 1567.

... tyme soztye leagues

... which continued

... all our great boares

... the able to serue the

... toward, determin

... vnde changed with

... to did, directing ou

... soze prescribed, all

... where we tooke wa

... of Guineza, and ap

... men, hoping to ob

... damage to our men,

... vinding, they seeme

... of them, but did in

... after their wounde

... be to God, escaped,

... illigence, the Rivers

... time we had not god

... of our men, and the

... ity to seeke the coast

... oe to the coast of tje

... to haue defraied our

... in a King, oppelled

... my Negroes as by

... pleasure: whereup

... Januarie, assaulted

... habitants, and very

... that our men praye

... or moze helpe, wher

... e the commoditie of

... ed the towne, both

... y Palme leaves Job

... sons, men, women,

... sonsers, wherof we

... never found trus)

... hat we were faine to

... ght it som what ren

... other our mercenar

... wherunto we

many bulwarke in ail places where it might be entered, and furnished himselfe with a 100. Car-gubblers, so that he thought by famine to haue enforced vs to haue put a land our Negroes: of which purpose he had not greatly failed vntill we had by force entered the towne: which (after we could by no means obtaine his fauour) we were enforced to do, & so with 200. men brack in vpon their bulwarke, & entered the towne with the losse only of ii. men of our partes, and no hurt done to the Spaniards because after their voise of shot discharged, they all flew.

Thus hauing the towne, with some circumsiance, as partly by the Spaniards desire of Negroes, & partly by friendship of the Treasorer, we obtained a secreete trade: whereupon the Spaniards reioiced to vs by night, & bought of vs to the number of 200. Negroes: in all other places where we traded the Spaniards inhabitants were glad of vs and traded willingly.

At Caragena the last towne we thought to haue serue on the coast, we could by no means obtaine to deale with any Spaniard the gouernor was so straight, & because our trade was so neere knulped we thought not good either to aduenture any landing, or to detract further time, but in peace departed from thence the 24. of Iulij, hoping to haue escaped y<sup>e</sup> time of their stormes which then soone after began to raigne, the which they cal Furicanos, but passing by the west end of Cuba, towards the coast of Florida there happened to vs the xii. day of August an extreme storme which continued by the space of 4. daies, which so beat the Iesus, that we cut downe all her higher buildings, her rudder also was soze shaken, and with all was in so extreme a leake that we were eager vpon the point to leaue her then to keepe her any longer, yet hoping to hing all to good passe sought the coast of Florida where we found no place nor Hauen for our ships because of the shalownes of the coast: thus being in greater dispaire, & taken with a new storme which continued other 3. dayes, we were enforced to take for our succor y<sup>e</sup> Port which serueth the Citie of Mexico called Saint Iohn de Vllua which standeth in six. degrees: in seeking of which Port we tooke in our way iii. ships which carried passengers to y<sup>e</sup> number of C. which passengers we hoped should be a meane to vs the better to obtaine victuals for our money, and a quiet place for the repairing of our fleet: vntill after this the xvi. of September we entered the Port of Saint Iohn de Vllua and in our entrie the Spaniards thinking vs to be the fleet of Spaine, the chiefe officers of the Countrey came aboide vs, which being deceiued of their expectation were greatly dismayed: but immediately when they sawe our demaund was nothing but victuals, were reconcited, & found also in the same Port xii. ships which had in them by the report. 200000. li. in golde and silver, all which (being in my possession, with the Kinges Island as also the passengers before in my way thitherwarde stayde) I set at libertie, without the taking from them the waygbe of a croce: onely because I would not bee delayed of my dispatch, I stayde two men of estimation and sent post immediatly to Mexico, which was 200. miles from vs, to the Presidents and Counsell there, shewing them of our arriual there by the force of weather, and the necessitie of the repaire of our shippes and victualles, which wantes we required as friends to king Philip to be furnished of for our money, and that the Presidents and Counsell there should with all conuenient speede take order, that at the arriual of the Spanishe fleet, which was daily tooked for, there might no cause of quarrel rise betweene vs and them, but for the better maintenance of amitie, their commaundement might bee had in that behalfe. This message being sent away the sixteenth day of September at nyght, being the very day of our arriual, in the next morning which was the sixteenth day of the same moneth, we sawe open of the Hauen xiii. great shippes, and vnderstanding them to be the fleet of Spaine, I sent immediatly to aduertise the General of the fleet of my being there, doing him to vnderstand, that before I would suffer them to enter y<sup>e</sup> Port, there should some order of condicions passe betweene vs for our safe being there, and maintenance of peace: now it is to be vnderstood that this Port is a little Island of stones not thre foote aboue the water in the highest place, and but a bow shoote of length any way, this Island standeth from the maine land two bowe shootes or moze, also it is to be vnderstood that there is not in all this coaste any other place for shippes to arrive in safetie, because the North wind hath there such violence, that vnles the shippes be very safely moyed wth their ankers fast-ned vpon this Island, there is no remedie for these North windes but death: also the place of the Hauen was so little, that of necessitie the shippes must ride one aboord the other, so that we could not giue place to them, nor they to vs: here I began to bewaile y<sup>e</sup> which after folowd, for now saib I, I am in two dangers, & forced to recreate the one of them. That was, either I must haue kept out the fleet from entering the Port, y<sup>e</sup> which wth Gods helpe I was very well able to do, or els suffer them to enter in wth their accustomed reason, which they neuer faile to execute, where they may haue opportunity, or circunuet it by any meane: if I had kept the out, then had there bin preser<sup>u</sup>ed shipwarke of al y<sup>e</sup> fleet which amounted in value to sixe Millions, which was in value

Tune.
Rio de la Hacha taken.

Caragena.

Iulij.
Furicanos.

Storme.

September.
Saint Iohn
de Vllua a Port.
The Spane
pays dectures

Our request.

The fleet of Spaine.

The manner of
the Port S.
Iobide Vllua.

North winds
perious.

C e e.

1800. thons
sand. pound.

A vice Roy.

Faire voydes beghed.

Our requests.

The peace concluded.

Treason.

A vice Roy
saile of his woyde.The treason
broke forth.

Sudden feare.

The opinion
escaped hardly.The Iesus escaped hardly.

Sharpe wars.

3. Shippes of the Spanyarde
continued.

value of our money 180000. li. which I considered I was not able to answer, fearing the Queens Spatities indignation in so waighey a matter. Thus with my selfe resolving I doubte, thought rather better to abide Iust of the vn certainty, then the certainty. The vn certaine doubt I account for their treason which by good policy I hoped might be prevented, & therefore as chusing the least mischiefe I proceeded to conditions. Now was our first messenger come & returned from the fleet with reports of the arrival of a vice Roy, so that he had aucthority, both in all this Spouince of Mexico (other wise called noua Hispania) & in the sea, who sent vs word that we should send our conditions, which of his part should (for the better mainenance of amity be. weene I Spinces) be both fauorably granted, & faithfully performed, with many faire woys how passing the coast of the Indies he had understood of our honest behaviour towards the inhabitants where we had to do actual elsewhere as in I same Voyt, the which I let passe, thus following our demand we required victual for our money, & licence to sel almost ware as might furnish our woys, & that there might be of either part xi. gentlemen as hostages for the mainenance of peace: and that the Island for our better safety might be in our owne possession, buring our abode there, & such ordinance as was planted in the same Island which was xi. peeces of Brasle: & that no Spanyarde might land in the Island with any kind of weapon: these conditions at the first, he somewhat misliked, chiefly the gard of the Island to be in our owne keeping, which it wey had had, we had soone known our fare: for with the first North wind they had cut our cables and our ships had gone ashore: but in the ende we concluded to our request, bying the xi. hostages to x. which with all speede of epyther part weare receaued, with a writing from the vice Roy signed with his hand and sealed with his seale of all the conditions concluded, & forthwith a trumpet blowing with commandement that none of either part should be meane to inuolate the peace vpon paine of death: & further it was concluded that the two generalls of the fleetes should meete, & giue faith eche to the other for the performance of the premises which was so done. Thus at the end of 3. daies all was concluded and the fleet entered the Voyt, saluting one another as the manner of the sea doth require. Thus as I said before, thursday we entered the Voyt, friday we sawe the fleet, and on monday at night they entered the Voyt: then we laboured it, daies placing the English ships by them selues & the Spanish ships by them selues, the captaines of each part & interour men of there partes promising great amity of all sides: which euen as to all civility was ment of our part, so the Spanyardes ment nothing lesse of their parts, but from the maine land had furnished them selues with a supplie of men to the number of 1000. and ment the next thursday being the 23. of September at dinner time to set vpon vs of all sides, the same thursday in the morning the treason being at hand, some appearance they we, as shifting of weapon from ship to ship, planting and bending of ordinance from the ship to the Island where our men warde, passing too & fro of companies of men more then required for their necessary business, and many other yll licklyhodes which caused vs to haue a vehement suspicion, and therewithall sent to the vice Roy to enquire what was ment by it, which sent immediately straight commandement to byplant all chinges suspicious, & also sent word that he in the faith of a vice Roy would be our defence from all villanies. Wee we being not satisfied with this answer because we suspected a great number of men to be hid in a great ship of 900 tonnes which was moyed next vnto the Spouince sent againe to the vice Roy the master of the Iesus which had the Spanish tongue and required to be satisfied if any such thing were or not, which seeing the vice Roy that the treason must be discouered, forthwith sayd our master, bid we the trumpet, and of all sides set vpon vs: our men which warde a hope being stricken with sudden feare, gaue place, fled, and sought to recouer succour of the shippes, the Spanyardes being before provided for the purpose landed in all places in multitudes from their shippes which they might safely doe without boates, and steele all our men a hope without mercy, a fewe of them escaped aboide the Iesus. The great shippe which had by the estimation 300. men placed in hid secretly, immediately fell aboide the minion which by Gods appointment in the time of the suspicion we had, which was onely one halfe houre, the opinion was made ready to auoide and so leaving hie headsteeles, and bayling away by the stearne fastes shee was gotten out: thus with Gods helpe she defended the violence of the first hunc of these CCC. men. The opinion being passe out they came aboide the Iesus, which also with very much a doe and the losse of many of our men weare defended and kept out. Then were there also two other shippes that assailed the Iesus at the same instant, so that they had hard getting loose, but yet with some time we had cut our headsteeles and gotten out by the stearne fastes. Now when the Iesus and the opinion weare gotten abroad two shippes length from the Spanish fleet, the fight beganne both of all sides that within one houre the Admirall of the Spanyardes was supposed to be suncke their vice Admirall burned and one other of there principall ships supposed to be sunke, so that the ships, ships were little

Then is it to

bendes, which

sus, in such soys

whereupon wee

abide all the bat

to take such rel

fer vs, and to le

the hott of the ming directly v marcellous fear

the winde will

wayes there say

sent of the Cap

the opinion.

The most par

nion in a small

the mercy of the Iudith (a small

our great myse

two bowe spoo

lande a myle fr

onely with two

Ankers) were e

to a longer tye

The weather

ber of men and the Spanyarde

to the Indoles

so thus with ma

teene dayes, ty

meate, rattes, mountaynes that counne one dinn

bottom of the s hane founde in

of our shippe

hooting of our fende and keep

weyther people

some perill we whereunto I co

And such as

wards, I put ap

of the other sides

which being lan

victuals to take

The next da

dier preparing o

roul by no mea

looked for ship

But yet God

departed the sh

ther all the fir

the coast of the

weene the Cap

the colde Coun

ere, fearing the olving of doubt,
 in certaine doubt
 d, & therefore as ger come & retray ship, both in all
 vs word that we amity be. weene vs how passing habitants where our demand
 our waite, & the ease: and that the here, & such ordi
 no Spanyarde
 e somewhat mis
 had, we had loone ships had gone a
 r. which with all
 with his hand and vnc with coman ne of death: & fur
 with eche to other vles all was con
 sea doeh require.
 no on monday as by them selues &
 there partes yo art, so the Span them selues with
 3. of September
 treason being at
 and bending of companies of men which caused vs
 hat was ment by
 cious, & also sene
 bet we being not id in a great ship oy the master of ch thing were of sayd our master,
 he being stricken
 the Spanyarde
 ur shippes which hereby, a fewe of 300. men placed in the time of the oy to auoide and out: thus with the Opinion being the losse of many pps that attan ch some time we us and the Opin beganne boot
 ed to be suncke
 sunke, so that the ships,

ships were little to annoy vs.

Then is it to be understood that all the ordinance upon the Lande was in the Spanyarde handes, which did vs so great annoyance, that it cutt all the Spawes and yarde of the Je sus, in such sort that there was no hope to cary her away: also it sunke our small shippes, whereupon we were determined to place the Jesus on that side of the Opinion that wee myght abide all the batterie from the Lande, and so be a defence for the Opinion till night, and then to take such reliefe of victuall and other necessaries from the Jesus as the time woulde suf fer vs, and to leaue her. As wee were thus determining and had placed the Opinion from the foot of the lande, suddenly the Spanyarde had fired two great shippes which were com manding directly with vs, and hauing no meanes to auoide the fire, it bred among our men a marvellous feare, so that some sayd, let vs depart with the Opinion, other sayde, let vs see where the winde will carrie the fyre from vs. But to bee short, the Opinions men which had al wayes there sayles in a readinesse, thought to make sure waye, and so without epyther con sent of the Captayne or Master cutte their sayle, so that verie hardy I was receaued into the Opinion.

The most part of the men that were left a lyeue in the Jesus, made shift and followed the Opi nion in a small boate, the rest which the little boate was not able to receaue, were enforced to abide the mercy of the Spanyarde (which I doubt was very little): so with the Opinion onely and the Judith (a small barke of fiftye tunne) were escaped, which barke the same nyght forsooke vs in our great myserie: wee were nowe remoued with the Opinion from the Spanyarde shippes two boate spores and there roade all that nyght: the next morning wee recovered an Is lande a myle from the Spanyarde where there tooke vs a North winde, and being left onely with two Ankers and two cables (for in this conflict we loste thre cables and two Ankers) wee thought alwayes upon death which euer was present, but God preserued vs to a longer tyme.

The weather wayed reasonable, and the Satturday wee set sayle, and hauing a great num ber of men and lyeite victualls our hope of life wayed lesse and lesse: some desired to yelde to the Spanyarde, some rather desired to obayne a place where they might giue themselves to the Indians, and some had rather abide with a little pittance the mercie of God at Sea: so thus with manie sorrowfull hearts wee wandred in an unknowen Sea by the space of four teene dayes, till hunger enforced vs to seeke the lande, for bites were thought very good meate, rattes, catter, mice and dogges none escaped that myght bee gotten, parrots and monkayes that were had in great pyll, were thought there very profittable if they serued the course one dinner: thus in the ende the epyght day of October wee came to the lande in the bottom of the same bay of Mexico in twenty three degrees and a halfe where wee hoped to haue founde inhabitants of the Spanyarde, reliefe of victualles, and place for the repaire of our shippe, which was so foze beaten with thotte from our enemyes and hysed with shooting of our owne ordinance, that our heary and weake armes were scarce able to de fend and keepe out the water. But all thinges happened to the contrary, for we founde neyther people, victuall, nor haue of reliefe, but a place where hauing faire weather with some perill we might land a boate: our people being enforced with hunger desired to be set a land, whereunto I concluded.

And such as were willing to land I put them apart, and such as were desirous to goe home wards, I put apart, so that they were indifferently parted a hundred of one side and a hundred of the other side: these hundred men we set a land with all diligence in this little place before said, which being landed, we determined there to refresh our water, and so with our little remaine of victualls to take the Sea.

The next day hauing a lande with me fiftie of our hundred men that remained for the spee der preparing of our water aboode, there arose an extreme storme, so that in thre dayes we could by no meanes repayre our shippes: the shippe also was in such perill that euery houre we looked for shipwacke.

But yet God againe had mercie on vs, sent faire weather, had aboode our water, and departed the sixtene day of October, after which day wee had faire and prosperous wea ther all the sixtene day of Nouember, which day God be prayled wee were cleere from the coast of the Indians, and out of the Chanell and Goulls of Bahama, which is be tweene the Cape of Florida, and the Landes of Cuba. After this growing neere to the colde Countrie, our men being oppressed with famine, died continually, and they that were

Hard case.

Fire.

Small hope to be had of renewal.
No hope.Small hope of life.

Hard case.

Myserie.

October 1568.

Spany mis erie.The greatest miserie of all.Nouember.
The goulls of Bahama.

were left, grewe into such weakenes that we were scanty able to manure our Ship, and the wind being alwaies yll for vs to recouer England, determined to go wth Galicia in Spaine, with intenc there to releue our company & other extreme wants. And being arriued the last day of December. December in a place neare vnto Vigo called Ponte vedra, our men wth excess of frethe meane grew into miserable diseases, and died a great part of them. This matter was boyme out as long as it might be, but in the end although there was none of our men suffered to goe a lande, yet by access of the Spaniards, our feblenes was knowen to them. Whereupon they ceased not to seeke by all meanes to betray vs, but wth all speede possible we departed to Vigo, where we had some helpe of certaine English ships & xlii. fresh men wherewith we repaired our wants as wee might, and departing the xx. day of January 1568, arriued in Spaines bay in Cornuwall the xxii. of the same moneth, praised be God theretoze.

January.

If all the miseries and trouble some affaires of this sorrowfull voyage should be perfectly and thoughtly written, there should neede a paynfull man wth his penne, and as great a time as hee had that w<sup>o</sup>uld the liues and deaches of the martirs.

John Hawkins.

The Relation of Dauid Ingram of Barking, in the Countie of Essex Saylor, of sundry things which he with others did see, in traueiling by land from the most Northerly partes of the Baie of Mexico (where he with many others were set on shoare by Master Hawkins) through a great part of America, vntill he came within fiftie leagues or thereabouts of Cape Britton.

About the beginning of October, Anno 1568. Dauid Ingram wth the rest of his company being 100. persons in all, were set on land by M<sup>r</sup>. John Hawkins, about five Leagues to the West of the riuer La mina, or Rio de Minas, which standeth about 140. leagues west & by North from the cape of Florida, who traueiling towards cape Britton, spent about 12. moneths in the whole. And about seuen moneths therof in those Countiees, which lie towards the North of the riuer of May, in which time (as the said Ingram thinketh) he traueiled by land two thousand miles at the least, and neuer continued in any one place about thre or foure dayes, sauing onely at the Citie of Balma, where he stayed fixe or seuen dayes.

Kings.

There are in those partes (as he) very many Kings, commonly within a hundred or a hundred and twenty miles one from an other, who are at continual waeres together: The first King that they came befoze, dwelt in a Countrey called Giricka, who caused them to be stripped naked, and wounding greatly at the whitenes of their skins, let them depart without further harme.

Large precious stones.

The Kings in those Countiees are clothed wth painted or colourd garments, and thereby you may know them, and they weare great precious stones, which commonly are Rubies, being 4. inches long, and two inches broad. And if the same bee taken from them, either by force or sleight, they are presently deuyied of their kingdomes.

The Kings in their maiestie.

When they meane to speake with any person publicly, they are alwaies carried by men in a sumptuous chaire of Siluer or Chittal, garnished wth diuers sortes of precious stones.

The manner of saluting their Kings.

And if you will speake with the king at your first appoaching neere to him, you must kneele downe on both your knees, and then arise againe and come somewhat neerer him, wthin your length, the kneele downe againe as you did befoze. Then take of the earth or grasse between both your hands, kissing the backside of each of them, and put the earth or grasse on the croome of your head, and so come, & kisse the kings seete. Which circumstances being performed, you may then arise and stand vp, and talke with him.

How to know the noble men.

The Noble men and such as be in special fauour wth the King, do commonly weare feathers in the haire of their heads for the most part, of a Byrde, as bigge as a goose of russet colour. And this is the best marke that this Ingram can giue to know him by.

Pearle.

There is in some of those Countiees great abundance of pearle, for in euery cottage he found pearle, in some houses a quart, in some a pottle, in some a pecke, moze or lesse, where he did see some as great as a beane. And Richard Browne one of his companions, found one of these great pearles in one of their Canoes or boats, which pearle he gaue to Mounfier Campaign, who tooke them aboard his Ship, and brought them to Newhauen in France, Bacelets of Gold.

All the people generally do weare Spanillos or Bacelets, as big as a mans finger, vpon each of their armes, and two siluer.

And many of the people of currees, a

The people counte high, somewhat of somewhat calumnia foote, the haire of

In the South wities are covered of the palme tree, being next to their being are to buy

They are natur but wile them cour sende them exce

hemmes, or such li

If any of them on both sides, then may be.

If any of them that hee is a spee the king, or any w

mayes either Ent

If you will ha

If you will ha

and go from it a will giue for it in you like it not, a moze. Where wille

it, vntill you hau

When they g

Their Crum

they make of bea

wth willowes tw

Their meapone

long, which are s

They haue al

rowes are of bon

small force wth

They haue h bearing edges th

Their haue cr

will carue excell

Their Ensign

colours, as red, y

The people in

Canibals doe mo

and thereby you

vnto some wood

poyned arrow

Their buildin

les, and they doe

boules in the top

and chypstall, str

of age, and some

This Ingram

of their armes, and the like on the small of erbe of their legs, whereof commonly one is golde and two silver.

And many of the women also doe weare plates of golde, covering their bodies in maner of a poyse of cures, and many braceletts and chains of great pearle.

The people commonly are of good favour, feuler & shape of body, of growth aboute five foote high, somewhat thicke, with their faces and skins of colour like an olive, and toward the North somewhat tawnye, but some of them are painted with divers colours, they are very swift of foote, the haire of their heads is shaven in sundry spots, and the rest of their head is traced.

In the South partes of these countreys they go all naked, saving that the Noble mens piliuities are covered with the necke of a goose, and the womens piliuities with the haire of leafe of the palme tree. But in the North partes they are clothed with beastes skins, the happye side being next to their bodies in winter.

They are so brutish & beastly, that they wil not sojbeare the use of their wines in open presence. They are naturally very courteous, if you do not abuse them, either in their persons or goods, but vie them courteously. The killing or taking of their beastes, birds, fishes, or fruites cannot offend them, except it be of their cattell which they keepe about their houses, as Kine, Swinie hennes, or such like.

If any of them doe holde by both their hands at length together, and kisse the backes of them on both sides, then you may undoubtedly trust them, for it is the greatest token of friendship that may be.

If any of them shal come unto you with a boysetaile in his hand, then you may assure your selfe that hee is a Messenger from the King, and to him you may safely committe your person, or go to the king, or any where else, or by him send any thing or message to the king. For these men are alwayes either Ensigne bearers in the warres, or the kings messengers, who wil never betray you.

If you will have any of the people come aboarde your ship, hang out some white cloth upon a staffe, so that is a signe of amitie.

If you will bargaine for wares with them, leave the thing that you will sell upon the ground, and go from it a pteetic way of: then will they come and take it, and set downe such wares as they will give for it in the place: And if you thinke it not sufficient, leave the wares with signes that you like it not, and they will bring more, untill either they or you be satisfied, or will give no more. Othertwise you may hang your wares upon a long poles end, and so put more or less on it, untill you have agreed on the bargain.

When they goe to the warres, they march in battell aray two and thre in a ranck.

Their Crumpees they doe make of certaine beastes teeth, they have a kinde of Drum which they make of beastes skins, they make Shields and Targets of the skins of beastes, compassed with willowe twigs, and being dyed, they are strong and defensible.

Their weapons are bartes, headed with yron, the heads are two fingers broad, and halfe a foot long, which are fastened within a socket.

They have also shot bowes, strung with y bark of trees, being halfe an ynch broad, & the arrows are of bone, yarde long, nocked and headed with silver & bone, and their arrows are of small force within a stones cast of them, and you may yut them by with a staffe a pteetic way off.

They have shot broad swordes of blacke yron of the length of a yarde, or very neere an elle, bearing edges thicker then backs of knives, somewhat like the foyles in our fence schooles.

They have crooked knives of yron, somewhat like a woodknife, or hanger, wherewith they will carue excellently both in wood and bone.

Their Ensigne is a hoyle taile, with glasse or Chrystall in some of them being dyed in sundry colours, as red, yellow, greene, &c.

The people in those Countreys are professed enemies to the Canibals or men eaters: The Canibals doe most inhabite betweene Norumbega, & Barinia, they have teeth like dogs teeth, and thereby you may know them. In the warres they doe pitch their campe as neere as they may unto some wood of Palme tree, which yeelde them meate, drinke, and present remedy against poisoned arrows.

Their buildings are weake and of small force, their houses are made round like Dove houles, and they doe dwell together in Townes and Villages. And some of them have banqueting houles in the top of them, made like the loover of a hall, bullded with pillars of masse silver, and chrystall, framed square: whereof many of them are as big as a doyes leg of fiftene peeres of age, and some less.

This Ingram did also see divers Townes and Villages, as Gunda, a Towne a slight Cures of golde. The fashion and shape of the people.

Naked people

Whitish beastes. The manner of their courtesies.

A signe token of friendship.

Spettengers from the king

To allure the people to speech.

The manner of traffique and dealing with them.

How they march in battell. Their weapons and instruments for warre.

Canibals.

Their houses and buildings

Townes and Villages.

shoote in length.

Ochala, a great Towne a mile long.

Balma, a rich Citie, a mile and a halfe long.

Bega, a Countrey, and Towne of that name, thre quarters of a mile long, where are good store of Dye woods.

Saguanah, a Towne almost a mile in length.

Barinia, a Citie a mile and a quarter long: Also there is a River and a Towne of that name, but lesse then the first above named.

Guinda, a small Towne and a River, both of that name. And this is the most Northerly part, that this Ingram was at.

There are besides those Townes aforesaid, many other great Townes which this Ingram passed by, commonly distant six or eight miles one from the other, which have divers small Villages within eight or ten miles from them.

Vessels of masse silver, for common
uses.

They have in every house scowpes, buckets, and divers other vessels of masse silver, wherewith they doe shovve out water and dust, and otherwise doe employ them to their necessary uses in these houses: All which this Ingram did see common and usual in some of these Countreys, especially where he found the great Pearles.

Gold in the heads of Rivers.

There are also great rivers, at the heads whereof, this Ingram & his companions did find sum-my pieces of golde, some as big as a mans fist, the earth being washed away with the water,

Rocks of chyp-stan.

And in other places, they did see great rocks of Chypstal, which growe at the heads of great and many Rivers, being in quantitie to loade shippes.

Fine Furrtes.

There are also in those partes, plentie of fine Furrtes, unknown to this Ingram, dressed according to the manner of the Countrey.

Sweete turke
to burne.

The people there doe burne a kind of white Turke earth, which they dig out of the marishes, a sadome deepe in the ground, & burneth very cleare, and smelleth as sweete as muske, and that earth is as wholesome, sweete, and comfortable, to smell unto, as any Pomander. They doe make their fire of this earth for the sweetnes thereof, having great abundance of wood.

Their manner
of kindling fire

When they want fire, they take briers, and rub them very hard together betwene their fist, and so with hard and often rubbing they kindle and make fire.

Iron and Minerall salt.

They have great plentie of Iron, and there is also great plentie of minerall salt, in the marish ground which looketh reddish, a thing necessary for the great fishings neere the sea boze, which are there abundant, and the fish very large and huge.

The fertilitie
of the soyle.

The ground & Countrey is most excellent, fertile and pleasant, & specially towards the River of May. For the grasse of y<sup>e</sup> rest is not so greene, as it is in these partes, for the other is burnt away with the heate of the Sunne. And as all the Countrey is good and most delicate, having great plaines, as large & as saye in many places as may be seene, being as plaine as a board: And then great & huge woods of sundry kind of trees, as cedar, Lignum vite, Bombasse, plants & bushes, bark that bitech like Pepper, (of which kind, yong M. Winter brought home part from y<sup>e</sup> straight of Magelane) with the fruitfull Palme tree, & great plentie of other sweete trees to this Ingram Plaines.

Great woods.

Palmes.

Cloves and pastures.

unknown. And after these plaines againe, and in other places great closes of pasture, environed with most delicate trees, in stead of hedges: they being as it were set by the hands of men: Yet the best grasse for the most part is in the high Countreys, somewhat farre from the Sea side, and great Rivers, by reason that the lowe grounds there be so rancke, that the grasse groweth sader then it can be eaten, whereby the olde grasse lieth withered thicke, and the newe grasse growing through it. Whereas in the upper partes, the grasse and ground is most excellent and greene.
The ground not being overcharged with any olde withered grasse, as is aforesaid specified.

The Palme
tree.

The Palme tree aforesaid carrieth hayres on the leaves thereof, which reach to the ground, whereof the Indians doe make ropes and cords for their Cotten beds, and doe use the same to many other purposes.

Wine of the Palme.

The which Tree, if you picke with your knife, about two foote from the roote, it will peede a Wine in colour like wybe, but in taste strong and somewhat like Balsam, which is most excellent to drinke. But it wil dissemper both your head and body, if you drinke too much thereof, as our strong Wines will doe in these partes.

Spente of the Palme.

The branches of y<sup>e</sup> top of y<sup>e</sup> tree, are most excellent meat raw, after you have pared away y<sup>e</sup> bark.
Also there is a red oyle that cometh out of y<sup>e</sup> roote of this tree, which is most excellent against poisoned arrows & weas: ons: for by it they doe recover themselves of their poisoned wounds.

The plantaine which is fruits

There is a tree called a Plantaine, with a fruite growing on it like a pudbing, which is most excellent meate rawe.

They have a growth on the greene Kallin, & they keepe in be They have a

There is all like ours in Also, they ha Graine is like a
They doe all small as they ca
There is also shewe, & are most part being great store of t
having long ear
hed like Rams

The Hives of t ples, male and f
There is also g great knoweth n
of course wood
exceeding fatte
at night, untill
but after they b in some 500, an Saint Marie, a Mooltes. The mes both white

This Exam
and in proporti
towards the bir long growing

Hee did also strange Beall M his head. This like a Rat, full

There are i are also Birds
There are gre as big as Geel led a flaming and is very go teth the River wings are cou
like the peep for the Count
also in these d Bird, thise as Peacocks sea his head and c by colours an proportion lik Touching
sayd, that he
the houses to g He farther
ly turneth co

They have also a red berry like a Pestod, called Guyarhos, two or three puches long, which groweth on short bushes full of prickles like the Sloe or Thorne tree, and the fruite eateth like a greene Raisin, but sharper somewhat: They stamp this berry and make Wine thereof, which they keepe in vessels made of wood.

They have also in many places, Vines which beare Grapes as big as a mans thumb.

There is also great plentie of herbes, and of all kinde of flowers, as Roses, and Gilckflow-ers, like ours in England, and many others which he knoweth not.

Vines with great Grapes, Herbes and flowers.

Also, they have a kinde of Graine, the eare whereof is as big as the wrist of a mans arme: the Graine is like a flat pease, it maketh very good bread and white.

They doe also make bread of the roote called Cassava, which they doe drie, and beate it as small as they can, and temper it with water, and so bake it in cakes on a stone.

Bread of a Cassava.

There is also great plentie of Buffes, Beares, Hoxes, Kine, Woolues, Foxes, Deare, Goats, Sheepe, Vares, Conies: Also other cattell like ours, to this Examinee unknowen, the most part being white: the Hides and Skinnes of them are good Marchandise. There is ber great sort of those Buffes, which are beasts as big as two Dren, in length almost twentie foot, having long eares like a Blood hound, with long haire about their eares, their hoznes be crooked like Rams hoznes, their eyes blacke, their haire long, blacke, rough, & shagged as a Goat: The Hides of these beasts are solde very deare, this Beast doeth keepe companie onely by couples, male and female, & doeth alwayes fight with others of the same kinde when they do meete.

Beasts of many kindes.

Deere gibbous la, suppoied a Buffe.

There is also great plentie of Deare both red, white, and speckled. This last sort this Examinee knoweth not. There is also great plentie of another kinde of Sheepe which carie a kinde of course wooll: This Sheepe is very good meate, although the flesh be very red. They are exceeding fatte, and of nature loth to rise when they are laid, which is alwayes from five a clocke at night, untill five a clocke in the morning: betwene which time you may easily kill them, but after they be on foote they are very wilde, & rest not in one place, but lute together in herds, in some 500, as it happeneth, moze or lesse: And these red Sheepe are most about the Bay of Saint Marie, as this Examinee getteth. There are Beares both blacke and white. There are Woolues. The Foxes have their skins moze grised then ours in England. There are Conies both white and red, and grey in every place great plentie.

Deare. Sheepe bearing wooll the flesh red.

This Examinee did also see in those Countries a monstrous beast whose as big as an Hoxe, and in proportion like to an Hoxe, both in maine, hoofs, haire, and neyging, saving it was small towards the hinder partes like a Grey hound. These Beasts hath two teeth or hoznes of a foote long growing straight forth by their noses: they are naturall enemies to the Hoxe.

A strange Beast.

Hee did also see in that Countrey both Elephants and Dunces. Hee did also see one other strange Beast bigger then a Beare, he had neither head nor necke: his eyes and mouth were in his breast. This beast is very ugly to beholde, and cowardly of kinde. It beareth a very fine skin like a Rat, full of silver haire.

Elephants and Dunces. A strange shapeless Beast.

There are in those Countries abundance of Rustlet Parrots, but very fewe greene. There are also Birds of all sortes as we have, and many strange Birds to this Examinee unknowen. There are great plentie of Guinie hennes which are tame Birds, and proper to the Inhabitants, as big as Geese, very blacke of colour, having feathers like Downe. There is also a Bird called a Flamingo, whose feathers are very red, and is bigger then a Goose, billed like a Shouell, and is very good meate. There is also another kinde of Foule in that Countrey which hunteth the Rivers neere unto the Islands: They are of the shape and bignesse of a Goose but their wings are covered with small yelow feathers, and cannot flie: You may dye them before you like theye: They are exceeding fatte and very delicate meate, they have white heads, and therefore the Countrey men call them Penguins (which seemeth to be a Welsh name.) And they have also in the divers other Welsh words, a matter worthy the noting. There is also a very strange Bird, whose as big as an Eagle, very beautifull to beholde, his feathers are moze orient then a Peacocks feathers, his eyes are glittering as an Hawks eyes, but as great as a mans eyes, his head and thigh as big as a mans head and thigh: It hath a crest and tuft of feathers of sundry colours on the top of the head like a Lapwing hanging backwards: His beake and talents in proportion like Eagles, but very huge and large.

Rustlet Parrots. Birds like Guinie hens.

A red Bird.

Penguins.

A great strange Bird.

Touching Tempests and other strange monstrous things in those partes, this Examinee saith, that he hath scene is Lightning and Thunder in sommer season by the space of foure & twentie houres together: the cause whereof he iudgeth to be the heate of the Climate.

He farther saith, that there is a Cloud sometime of the yeere scene in the ayre, which commonly turneth to great Tempests. And that sometimes of the yeere there are great windes in manner Tempests.

Thunder.

Tempests.

Tempests.

Tempests.

Tempests.

, where are good

a Towne of that most Motherly

which this Ingram divers small Cit-

tieles silver, where-their necessary uses these Countreys,

ations did find sum-

the water.

the heads of great

gram, dressed af-

t of the marishes,

as muske, and that

er. They do make

wood,

twene their fits,

sale, in the marsh

the sea Hoze, which towards the River

er is burnt away

ate, having great

a board: And then

plants & bushes,

re from a straight

are also Birds of all ature, environed

nds of men: Yet

the Sea a live, and le groweth faster

grasse growing

lent and greene.

perished.

y to the ground,

he use the same to note, it will peede

rich is most excel-

ch thereof, as our

red away a bark.

excellent against stoned wounds.

y, which is most

They

of Whirlewindes.

*Their manner
of Religion.*

*T*ouching their Religion, he saith that they honoꝝ for their God a Deuil, which they call Colluchio, who speaketh vnto them sometimes in the likenesse of a blacke Dogge, and sometimes in the likenesse of a blacke Calf.

And some doe honoꝝ the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres.

Whulterie punished with death.

He saith þ the people in those Countreies are allowed many Wines, some blue, some terme, & a king sometimes an hundred: And þ Whulterie is very severely punished in manner following, that is to say: The woman taken in adulterie, must with her owne hands cut þ throte of the Adulterer, and the next of his kindred doth likewise cut þ throte of the Adulteresse. And being asked in what manner they take their executions, he saith: That they are brought to execution by certaine Magistrates, who do deliuer vnto þ woman the knife, wherewith the cutteth þ throte of the Adulterer.

Then appeareth their Colluchio of Deuil, in the likenesse aforesaid, and speaketh vnto them, and to that Deuil the parties brought to execution doe great reuerence, and with many prayers to it doe take their death.

*Their manner
of Burials.*

He saith that such persons as are put to death in such sort, haue not any of their friends buried with them: but such as die naturally, haue alwayes buried quicke with them one of their dearest friends to keepe them companie, and to prouide necessaries and vtuall for them, who doe willingly consent thereto, being thereto persuaded by their Colluchio of Deuil, whi they do worship.

The Deuil sed abowp at the name of the holy Trinitie.

He saith further, that he & his two fellowes, namely, Richard Broune, and Richard Twide, went into a poore mans house, & there they did see the said Colluchio of Deuil, with very great eyes like a blacke Calf: Upon the sight whereof, Broune saide, There is the Deuil, and there vpon he blessed himselfe: In the name of the Father, and of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghost. And Twide saide very vehemently, I desie thee and all thy workes. And presently the Colluchio spranke away in a stealing maner forth of the doores, and was seene no moꝝe vnto them.

Great Riuer.

Also they passed ouer many great Riuers in those Countreies, in Canoes or Boates: some foure, some fixe, some eght, some tenne miles ouer: whereof one was so large, that they coude scarce crosse the same in foure and twentie houres.

Spittall instruments.

Also he saith, that in the same Countrie, the people haue instruments of Musick made of a peece of a Cane, almost a foote long, being open at both endes: which sitting downe, they smite vpon their thighes and one of their handes, making a pleasant kind of sound,

And they do vse an other kind of instrument like a Taber, covered with a white skinne somewhat like Parchment.

This Examine can very well describe their gestures, dauncing, and songs, After long traualle, the aforesaid David Ingram with his two companions Broune and Twide, came to the head of a riuer called Garinda, which is 60. Leagues West frõ Cape Bleton: where they vnderstood by the people of that Countrey of þ arriuall of a Christian. Where vpon they made their repaire to the Sea side, and there found a French Captaine named Monsieur Champaigne, who tookethem into his Shippe and brought them vnto Newhauen, & from thence they were transported into England, Anno. Dom. 1569.

Wher in exchange of trades.

This Monsieur Champaigne, with diuers of his companie was brought into þ Village of Barrinah, about twentie miles by into the Countrie by þ said Examine and his two Companions, by whose meanes he had a trade with the people of diuers sortes of fine fures, & of great redde leaues of trees almost a yard long, & about a foote broad, which he thinketh are good for dying.

Also the said Monsieur Champaigne, had there for exchange of trifling wares, a good quantitie of ruide, and wrought siluer.

He saith further, that diuers of the said Frenchmen which were in the said Shippe called the Gargarine, are yet liuing in Domstet vpon the coast of France, as he thinketh, for he did speake with some of them within these three yeeres.

About a fourtnight after their comming from Newhauen into England, this said Examine and his two companions came to master John Hawkins, who had let them on shore vpon the Baye of Perico, and vnto eche of them he gaue a reward.

Richard Broune his companion was slaine about fixe yeeres past in the Elizabeth of master Cockins of London: And Richard Twide his other companion died at Ratcliffe in John Shers woods house there, about three yeeres past.

The language of some of the Countreies.

{ Gwando. Is a woꝝde of Salutation, as among vs: Good moꝝrow, Good euen, God saue you or such like.
Caricon. A King.
Caracona. A Loꝝd,

Fona.

For Ca
Ke

Also the sayd Northside of Am
the people signifi
ground the shape
proueth the passa
do, which found

Also the sayd
of six thousand a flane to a Span hundred of two b ding from the mo
at the least, euery
with as great reu
nere them by the
of those people, a

A discours

the compan

yecre

Sp

Wherein is shew number, and an dealing vpon

taine Master Jo Captaine Thom
D. Francis Dy
fir of the Swall
age vncill the ce
fier, which duce
another, and our page, and to cr
and the winde co
And so commin cording to an o
wee then tooke
our course, vpon Africa, at cape

{ Fona. Bread.
 Carmugnar. The Priuitles.
 Kerucca. The Sunne.

Also the sayd David Ingram traueiling towardes the North, found the maine sea vpon the North side of America, and traueiled in the sight thereof the space of two whole dayes, where the people signified vnto him, that they had seene shippes on that coast, and did shew vpon the ground the shape and figure of shippes, and of their sailes and flagges. Which thing especially moueth the passage of the Northwest, and is agreeable to the experience of Vasques de Coronado, which found a Shippe of China or Cataia vpon the Northwest of America.

Also the sayd examine saith, that there is an Island called Corrasau, and there are in it fine or six thousand Indians at the least, and all those are governed by one onely Negro, who is but a slave to a Spaniard. And moreover the Spaniards will send but one of their slaves with an hundred or two hundred of the Indians, when they goe to gather golde in the Rivers descending from the mountaines. And when they shal be absent by the space of twentie or thirty dayes at the least, euery one of the Indians will neuertheless obey all the slaves commaundments with as great reuerence, as if he were their naturall King, although there be neuer a Christian nere them by the space of an hundred or two hundred miles: which argueth the great obedience of those people, and how easly they may be governed when they be once conquered.

A discourse written by one Miles Phillips Englishman, one of the company put a shore in the West Indies by M. Iohn Hawkins in the

yeere 1568. contayning many speciall things of that countrie and of the Spanish gouernement, but specially of their cruelties vsed to our Englishmen, and amongst the rest to himselfe for the space of 15. or 16. yeeres together, vntill by good and happy meanes he was deliuered from their bloody hands and returned to his owne countrie. Anno, 1582.

The first Chapter.

Wherein is shewed the day and time of our departure from of the coast of England, with the number, and names of the shippes, their Captaines and Masters, and of our traffique and dealing vpon the coast of Africa.

Vpon munday being the second of October, 1567. the weather being reasonable sayle, our Generall M. Iohn Hawkins, hauing commaunded all his captaines and masters to be in a readinesse to make sayle with him, hee himselfe being imbarked in the Iesus, whereof was appointed for Master, Robert Barret, hoysed sayle, and departed from Plymnoth vpon his intended voyage for the parts of Africa, & America, being accompanied with five other sayle of shippes, as namely the Mynion, wherein went for Captaine Master Iohn Hampton, and Iohn Garret Master. The William and Iohn, wherein was Captaine Thomas Bolton, and James Rauce Master. The Iudith, in whome was Captaine M. Francis Drake now knyght, and the Angel whose Master, as also the Captaine and Master of the Swallow I now remember not. And so sayling in companie together vpon our voyage vntill the tenth of the same moneth, an extreme storme then tooke vs nere vnto cape Finister, which durd for the space of foure dayes, and so separated our shippes, that wee had lost one another, and our Generall finding the Iesus to be but in yll case, was in minde to giue ouer the voyage, and to returne home. Howbeit the eleuenth of the same moneth the seas waxing calme, and the winde comming sayle, he altered his purpose, and helde on the former intended voyage, and so comming to the Islands of Gomera being one of the Islands of the Canaries, where according to an order before appoynted, we met with all our shippes which were before disperfed, wee then took in fresh water and departed from thence the fourth of Nouember, and holding on our course, vpon the eighteenth day of the same moneth we came to an anker vpon the coaste of Africa, at cape Verde in twelue sadome waters, and here our Generall landed certaine of our men,

This fleet consisteth of 6 shippes.
 1 The Iesus.
 2 The Phoenix.
 3 The Mynion.
 4 The Iudith.
 5 The Angel.
 6 The Swallow.

men, to the number of 160 or there about, seeking to take some Negroes. And they going by in to the country for the space of six miles, were encountred with a great number of the Negroes: who with their enuomed arrowes did hurt a great number of our men, so that they were enforced to retyre to the Shippes, in which conflict they recovered but a few Negroes, and of these our men which were hurt with their enuomed arrowes, there died to the number of 7. or 8. in very strange manner, with their mouths flat, so that we were forced to put sticks & other things into their mouths to keepe them open, & so after ward passing the tyme upon the coast of Guinea, untill the twelfth of Januarie, we obtained by that time the number of 150 Negroes. And being ready to depart from the sea coast, there was a Negro sent as an Ambassadour to our Generall, from a King of the Negroes, which was oppressed with other Kings his bordering neighbours, desiring our Generall to graunt him succour and ayde against those his enemies, which our Generall granted unto, and went himselfe in person a land, with the number of 500 of our men or thereabouts, and the sayde King which had requested our ayde, did toyne his force with ours, so that thereby our Generall assaulted, and set fyre vpon a towne of the sayd King his enemies, in which there was at the least the number of 8 or 10 thousand Negroes, and they perceiving that they were not able to make any resistance fought by sight to saue themselves, in which their flight there were taken prisoners to the number of 8 or 900, which our Generall ought to haue had for his share: howbeit the Negro King which requested our ayde falsifying his word and promise, secretly in the night couayped himselfe away with as many prisoners as hee had in his custodie: but our Generall notwithstanding finding himselfe to haue nowe very neere the number of 500 Negroes thought it best without longer aboue to depart with them, and such marchandize as he had from the coast of Africa to wardes the West Indies, and therefore commaunded with all diligence to take in fresh water and fuel, and so with speede to prepare to depart. Howbeit before we departed from thence, in a storme that we had, we lost one of our ships namely the William and John, of which ship and of her people, we heard no tidings during the time of our voyage.

The 2. Chapter.

Wherein is shewed the day and time of our departure from the coast of Africa, with the day and time of our arriall in the West Indies, also of our trade, and traffike there, and also of the great crueltie that the Spaniards vsed towards vs, by the Vice-Roy his direction, and appointment, falsifying his faith and promise giuen, and seeking to haue intrapped vs.

LI things being made in a readinesse, at our Generall his appointment, vpon the thirtieth day of February, 1568. we departed from the coast of Africa, hauing the weather somewhat tempestuous, which made our passage the more hard, and lasting for the space of 25. dayes, vpon the 27. of March, 1568. we came in sight of an Island, called Dominica, vpon the coast of America in the West Indies, situated in 14. degrees of latitude, and 222. of longitude: from thence our Generall coasted from place to place, euer making traffike with the Spaniards, and Indians as he might, which was somewhat hardly obtayned, for that the king had straightly charged all his gouernours in those partes not to trade with any: yet notwithstanding, during the monthes of April, and May, our General had reasonable trade and traffike, and curious entertainment in sundry places, as at Margarita, Corasao, and els where, till we came to Cape de la vela, & Rio de Hacha, (a place from whence all the pearles doe come): the gouernour there would not by any meanes permit vs to haue any trade or traffike, nor yet suffer vs to take in fresh water: By means whereof our Generall for the auoyding of famine & thirst about the beginning of June, was enforced to lande two hundred of our men, and so by maine force and strength to obtaine that which by no faire meanes he coulde procure: And so recovering the Towne with the losse of two of our men, there was a secreete and peaceable trade admitted, and the Spaniards came in by night, and bought of our Negroes to the number of two hundred and bywards, and of our other marchandize also. From thence we departed for Carthagena, where the Gouernour was so straight, that we coulde not obtaine any traffike there, and so for that our trade was neere finished, our Generall thought it best to depart from thence the rather for the auoyding of certaine dangerous stormes called the Huricanos, which accustomed to beginne there about that time of the yeere, and so the 24. of July 1568. we departed from thence directing our course North, leaving the Islands of Cuba vpon our right hand, to the East ward of vs, and so sailing towarde Florida, vpon the 12. of August, an extreme tempest arose, which durd for the space of eight dayes, in which our ships were most dangerously tossed & beaten hither, & thither, so that we were

and in the ende a Cruz, situated which is the port Generall met by and so the sixten Spaniards there
the countrey the
to haue made an beit our Generall
which by report
our Generall his which he had be sayd two men Don Pedro de R
thre score leagu
stirre as our
that there fore he Rome, and quiet
arriall of the
there might no heach of amitie
some speciall o
it being the bet
number, we dese
had the king of heretof, of our shoulde enter the Generalls some peace betweene
And at this instar
that if he shoul
able to doe with losse of all their crownes. Agai stirre by all maner that the other flo
that if their fleet
haued done so, th
mighte a caus
assurance, and so which we were Marsine de Hen
ric to commaun
did certifie our
and our Honer fourmed: signi
our Generall, e
the sayde voye 1 The first was, as might 2 The secon
3 The thir
In which I stan ced certaine o
might so cont
bearing any k 4 The four

to they going up in re of the Negroes:
at they were infop groes, and of these mber of 7, or 8
es & other things
e coast of Guinea, groes. And being to our Generall, bordering neigh
s enemies, which mber of 200 of our yne his force to King his ene
, and they perer
mselves, in which Generall ought sipping his wope
ers as hee had in e very nere the t them, and such erefoze comman
pare to depart.
of our ships name
during the time to that wee were in continuall feare to bee drowned by reason of the shallownesse of the coaste, and in the ende we were constrained to flee for succour to the port of S. John de Villa, or Ve Cruz, situated in 19 degrees of latitude, and in 200. seuentie nine degrees of longitude which is the porte that serueth for the citie of Mexico: in our seeking to reconer this porte our Generall met by the way, three small shippes that carped passengers, which heeooke with him, and so the thirtenth of September, 1568 we entered the sayde port of S. John de Villa. The Spaniards there supposing vs to haue bene the King of Spaynes flecte, the chiefe officers of the countrey there abouts came presently aboide our Generall, where perceiving themselves to haue made an vnwise aduencure, they were in great feare to haue bene taken and slayed: how beit our Generall did vse them all very curteously: in the sayd porte there were twelue shippes, which by report had in them in treasure to the valewe of 200 thousand pound, all which bring tu our Generall his power and at his deuotion, hee did freely set at libertie, as also the passengers which hee had before slayed, not taking from any of them all the valewe of one groate: onely hee slayed two men of credite and account, the one named Don Laurenzo de Alua, and the other Don Pedro de Reuera, and presently our Generall sent to the Vizroye to Mexico which was thirtie leagues of, certifying him of our arriual there by force of weather, desiring that for asmuch as our Queene his Soueraigne, was the King of Spayne his louing sister and friend, that therefore he would, considering our necessities and wants, furnish vs with victuals for our flams, and quietly to suffer vs to repaire and amend our shippes. And furthermore that at the arriual of the Spannish flecte which was there dayly expected and looked for, to the ende that there might no quarrell arise betweene them, and our Generall and his companie for the hearch of amitie, hee humbly requested of his excellencie, that there might in this behalf some speciall order bee taken. This message was sent away the 16 of September, 1568, it being the very day of our arriual there. The next morning being the seuententh of the same moneth, we descried 13 sayle of great shippes: and after that our Generall vnderstood, that it was the king of Spaynes flecte then looked for, hee presently sent to aduertise the Generall herof, of our being in the sayde porte, and gaining him further to vnderstand, that before hee shoulde enter there into that harbour, it was requisite that there shoulde passe betweene the two Generals some orders and conditions to bee obserued on either part, for the better contriuing of peace betweene them and theirs, according to our Generals request made vnto the Viceroye.

And at this instant our Generall was in a great perplexitie of minde, considering with himselfe that if he should keepe out that flecte from entering into the porte, a thing which he was very wel able to doe with the helpe of God, then should that flecte be in danger of present shipwacke and losse of all their substance, which amounted vnto the valewe of one myllion and 800 thousand crownes. Again hee saw that if he suffered them to enter, hee was assured that they would pra ctise by all maner of meanes to betray him and his, and on the other side the haue was so litle, that the other flecte entering, the shippes were to ride one hard aboide of another: also hee sawe that if their flecte should perish by his keeping of them out, as of necessitie they must if he should haue done so, then should hee in great feare of the Queene our Soueraignes displeasure in so weightie a cause, therefore did hee choose the less euill, which was to suffer them to enter vnder assurance, and so to stande vpon his garde, and to defende himselfe and his from their treasons which we were wel assured they would praetise, and so the messenger being returned from Don Martine de Henriques, the new Viceroy, who came in the same flecte, and had sufficient autho ritie to commaund in all cases both by sea and by land in this ppointe of Mexico or new Spaine, did certifie our Generall, that for the better maintenance of amitie betweene the king of Spaine and our Soueraigne, all our requests should bee both fauourably graunted, and faithfully per formed: signifying further that he heard and vnderstood of the honest and friendly dealing of our Generall, toward the King of Spaynes subjects in all places where hee had bene, as also in the sayde porte: so that to be yeefe our requests were articulated, and set downe in writing, viz.

ica, with the day
there, and also of his direction, and intrapped vs.

pointment, vpon
of Africa, hauing
the moze hard, and 568, we came in
in the West In
: from thence out
ds, and Indians
ghtly charged all
ring the moneths
s entertainment
de la vela, & Rio
e would not by a fresh water: By inning of Iune, rength to obtaine
one with the losse Spaniards came ywards, and of e the Governour at our trade was for the auoiding
time there about
ee directing our ard of vs, and in which dured for the gether, & whicher, so

- 1 The first was that we might haue victuals for our money, and license to sell as much wares, as might suffice to furnish our wants.
- 2 The second, that we might be suffered peaceably to repayre our shippes.
- 3 The third that the Island might bee in our possession during the time of our abode there.
In which Island our Generall for the better safetie of him and his, had alreadye planted and plac ed certaine ordnance which were eleuen peeces of brass, therefore hee required that the same might so continue, and that no Spaniard should come to land in the sayde Island, hauing of bearing any kinde of weapon about him.
- 4 The fourth and the last, that for the better and moze sure performance and maintenance of peace

4. Articles concluded vpon
on, betwixt the English and Spaniards:
although the travellers Spaniards
kept none of
them.

peace, and of all the conditions, there might twelue gentlemen of crevise be deliuered of either part as hostages. These conditions were concluded and agreed vpon in writing by the viceroy and signed with his hande, and sealed with his seale, and tenne hostages vpon either part were receiued. And further it was concluded that the two Generals should meete, and giue faith eche to other for the performance of the promises. All which being done, the same was proclaimed by the sound of a trumpet, and commandement was giuen that none of either part should violat or breake the peace vpon payne of death: thus at the end of thre dayes all was concluded, and the flecte entred the port, the ships saluting one another as the manner of the sea doth require: the morow after being Friday we laboured on all sides in placing the English ships by themselves, and the Spanish ships by them selues, the captaines and inferiour persons of either part, offering, and shewing great curtesie one to another, and promising great amitie vpon all sides. Howbeit as the sequel shewed, the Spaniards meant nothing lesse vpon their parts. For the Viceroye, and gouernour thereabout, had secretly at land assembled to the number of 1000 chosen men, and with appointed, meaning the next thursday being the 24 of September at dinner time to assault vs, and set vpon vs on all sides. But before I goe any further, I think it not amisse by itselfe to describe the maner of the Island as it then was, and the force & strength, that it is now of. For the Spaniards since the time of our Generals being there, for the better fortifying of the same place, haue vpon the same Island built a faire castle, and bulwarke very well fortified: this port was then at our being there, a litle Island of stones, not past three foute about water in the highest place, and not past a bowthoote ouer any way at the most, and it standeth from the mayne land, two bowthootes or moze: and there is not in all this coast any other place for ships safely to arriue at: also the North windes in this coast are of great violence and force, and vnlesse the shippes bee safely mozed in, with their ankers fastened in this Islande, there is no remedie, but present destruction and shipwacke. All this our generall wisly foreseeing, did prouide that hee would haue the sayde Island in his custodie, or els the Spaniards might at their pleasure, haue cut our cables, and so with the first Northwinde that blew wee had our passage, for our shippes had gone a shoze. But to returne to the matter. The time approaching that their treason must bee put in practise, the same Thursday morning, some appearance thereof beganne to shewe it selfe, as shifting of weapon from shippe to shippe, and planting, and bending their ordinance against our men that warded vpon the lande, with great repaying of people: which apparant shewes of breach of the Viceroyes faith, caused our Generall to sende one to the Viceroye, to enquire of him what was ment thereby, which presently sent and gaue order, that the ordinance aforesayde, and other things of suspicion shoulde bee remooued, returning answer to our Generall in the sayth of a Viceroye, that hee would bee our defense, and safetie from all villanous treacherie: this was vpon Thursday in the morning. Our Generall not being therewith satisfied, seeing they had secretly conuaid a great number of men aboode a great hulke of ship of theppes of 300 tunne, which shippe rode hard by the Mynion, hee sent againe to the Viceroy Robert Barret the master of the Iesus, a man that coulde speake the Spanish tongue very well, and required that those men might bee vnshipped againe, which were in that great hulke. The Viceroy then perceiuing that their treason was thoroughly espied, stayed our Master, and sounded the trumpet, and gaue order that his people should vpon all sides charge vpon our men, which warded on shoze, and else where, which brooke such a masse, and sudden feare among vs, that many gaue place, and sought to recouer our ships for the safetie of themselves. The Spaniards which secretly were hid in ambush at lande were quikly conuaid ouer to the Island in their long boates, and so comming to the Island, they slew all our men that they coulde meete with, without any mercie. The Mynion which had somewhat before prepared her selfe to auoyde the danger, hailed away and aboue the first hunt, of the 300 men that were in the great hulke: then they sought to fall aboode the Iesus, where was a cruel fight, and many of our men slayne: but yet our men defended themselves, and kept them out: so the Iesus also gotte loose, and joyning with the Mynion, the fight waxed what vpon all sides: but they hauing wonne and got our ordinance on shoze, did greatly annoy vs. In this fight, there were two great ships of the Spaniards sunke, and one burnt, so that with their shippes they were not able to harme vs, but from the shoze they beat vs cruelly with our owne ordinance, in such sort that the Iesus was very sore spoiled, and suddenly the Spaniards hauing fired two great shippes of their owne, they came directly against vs, which bred among our men a maruelous feare. Howbeit the Mynion which had made her sailes ready, shifted for her selfe, without consent of the Generall, captaine or master, so that very hardly our Generall could be receiued into the Mynion: the most of our men that were in the Iesus shifted for themselves

The vailts of a Spanish Viceroy his sayth.

The villanous treacherie of the Spaniards & their cruelty.

selues, and follow
come, were most men and the In common cruelty
aine of our men
blow burst out o thers yet all us, here at home in
and tokens of th

Wherein is shew
perish with trained to p mongst the two bowthoote

he wored anker,
with a Northwin
bers left: for in the forme being number, and but wee were in dis
mide to pebble of Indels, and and vs to eate h our hunger was get to eate.

And on the ci where hee hoped mailes, and a pl
sacrificable with in the one line, gan to be in woo great many that with themselves
des, where the
by appointing, p quest our Gener
him to lessen his solow to set half sudden mens
were none of rail was in fore
lions of offence
account, as we he appointed su
howe they shou eather come hi

taken, and followed the Spanion in the boate, and those which that small boate was not able to receive, were most cruellly slaine by the Spaniards. Of our Shippes none escaped saving the Spanion and the Judith; and all such of our men as were not in them were enforced to abide the tyrannous cruellty of the Spaniards. For it is a certaine certet, that whereas they had taken certayne of our men at shoare, theyooke and hung them by by the armes upon high postes untill the blood burst out of their fingers thus: of which men so vied, there is one Copflow, and certayne others yet aliue, who though the mercifull prouidence of the almighty, were long since arrived here at home in England, carrying still about with them (and shall to their graues) the markes and tokens of those they inhumane and moze then barbarous cruell dealing.

The third Chapter.

Wherein is shewed, how that after we were escaped from the Spaniards, we were like to perish with famine at the Sea, and how our Generall, for the auoiding thereof was constrained to put halfe of his men on land, and what miseries wee after that sustayned amongst the Savage people, and how we fell a gaine into the hands of the Spaniards.

After that the Vice Roy, Don Martin Henriques, had thus contrary to his faith and promise, most cruellly dealt with our Generall maister Watkins, at S. Iohn de Vlua, where most of his men were by the Spaniards slaine and drowned, and all his Shippes sunke and burnt, saving the Spanion, and the Judith which was a small barke of stiee tuncie, wherein was then captaine, maister Francis Drake, atoleat: the same night the said barke lost vs, we being in great necessitie, and enforced to remooue with the Spanion two bowshooce from the Spaniard fleet, where we ankered all that night: and the next morning we weighed anchor, and recovered an Island a mile from the Spaniards, where a stormeooke vs such a North winde, in which we were greatly distressed, hauing but two cables, and two anchors left: for in the conflict before, we had lost three cables and two anchors. The storme being ceased, and the weather sayne, we weighed, and set saile, being many men in number, and but small hope of victualles to suffice vs for any long time: by means whereof we were in dyspaye and feare that we should perish through famine, so that some were in minde to perdie themselves to the mercie of the Spaniards; other some to the Sauages or Induels, and wandering thus certayne dayes in these unknowne Seas, hunger constrained vs to eat hides, caces and dogges, mice, rattes, parats and munkyes: to be short, our hunger was so great, that we thought it lawourie and sweete; whatsoeuer we coude get to eat.

And on the eight of October we came to lande againe, in the bottome of the bay of Mexico, where we hoped to haue found some inhabitants, that we might haue had some reliefe of victualles, and a place where to repaie our shippe, which was so greatly bruised, that we were scarce able with our weary armes to keepe forth the water: being thus oppressed with famine on the one side, and danger of drowning on the other, not knowing where to finde reliefe, we began to be in woonderfull despaye, and we were of many mindes, amongst whom there were a great many that did desire our Generall to set them on lande; making theyr choise rather to submit themselves to the mercie of the Sauages or Induels: then longer to hazard themselves at Sea, where they very well saw, that if they should all remayne together, if they perished not by drowning, yet hunger would enforce them in the ende to eat one another: to which request our Generall did very willingly agree, considering with himselfe that it was necessary for him to lessen his number, both for the safetie of himselfe and the rest: and thereupon being resolved to set halfe his people on shore that hee had then left aliue, it was a woilde to see howe suddenly mens mindes were altered; for they which a little before desired to be set on land, were nowe of another minde, and requested rather to stay: by means whereof our Generall was enforced, for the more contentation of all mens mindes, and to take away all occasions of offence, to take this order: first hee made choise of such persons of seruice and account, as were necessfull to stay, and that being done, of those which were willing to goe he appointed such as hee thought might be best spared, and presently appointed that by the boate they should be set on shore, our Generall promising vs that the next yeere he would seeke come himselfe, or else sende to seeke vs home. Where againe it would haue caused any man's heart to have relented to heare the pitifull moane that many did make, and how loth they were to depart: the weather was then somewhat stormie and tempestuous, and therefore we were to passe with great danger, yet notwithstanding there was no remedy, but we that were appointed to goe away, must of necessitie doe so. Howbeit those that were in the first boate were safelie set a shoare, but of them which went in the second boate, of which number I my selfe was one, the seas wrought so high, that we could not attayne to the shoare, and therefore we were constrained through the cruell dealing of John Hampton capitaine of the Orizon, and John Sanders boatewaine of the Jesus, and Thomas Ballard his mate, to leape out of the boate into the maine Sea, hauing more then a mile to shoare, and so to shift for our selues, and either to smicke or swimme. And of those that so were (as it were) throwen out, and compelled to leape into the Sea, there were two drowned, which were of capitaine Blands men.

In the evening of the same day, it being Friday the eighth of October, 1568, when we were all come to shoare, we found fresh water, whereof some of our men dwinke so much, that they had almost cast themselves away, for we could scarce get life in them for the space of two or three hours after: other some were so cruellly swollen, what with the drinkeing in of the salt water, and what with the eating of the fruites which were found on land, hauing a stone in it much like an almond (which fruite is called Capule) that they were all in very ill case, so that we were in a manner all of vs both feeble, faint and weake.

The next morning it being Tuesday the ninth of October, we thought it best to trauell along by the Sea coast, to seeke out some place of habitation: whether they were Christians or Indians, we were indifferent, so that we might haue wherewithall to sustaine our hungry bodies, and so departing from an hill where wee had rested all night, not hauing any dry theed about vs, for those that were not wet being throwne into the Sea, were thrownto wet with raine, for all the night it rained cruellly: As we went from the hill, and were come into the plaine, we were greatly troubled to passe for the grasse and woods that grew there higher then any man. On the left hand we had the Sea, and upon the right hand great woods, so that of necessitie we must needs passe on our way Westward, through those marshes, and going thus, suddenly we were assailed by the Indians, a warlike kinde of people, which are in a manner as Cannibals, although they do not feed vpon mans flesh as Cannibals do.

These people are called Chichemici, and they vse to wear the haire long, cuen downe to their knees, they doe also colour their faces greene, yellow, red and blacke, which maketh them to seme very ougly and terrible to beholde: These people doe keepe warres against the Spaniards, of whom they haue bene oftentimes very cruellly handled: for with the Spaniards there is no mercy. They proceeding vs at our first coming on land, supposed vs to haue bene their enemies, the bordering Spaniards, and hauing by thes forerunners descried what number we were, and how feeble and weake without armour or weapon, they suddenly according to their accustomed manner, when they encounter with any people in warlike sort, rayed a terrible and huge crye, and so came running fiercely vpon vs, shooting off their arrowes as thicke as haile, with whose mercy we were constrained to yeeld, not hauing amongst vs any kinde of armour, nor yet weapon, sauing one caluer, and two olde rustie swoordes, whereby to make any resistance, or to saue our selues: which when they perceiued, that we soughte not any other then fauour and mercy at thes hands, and that we were not thes enemies the Spaniards, they had compassion on vs, and came and cauled vs all to sit downe: and when they had a while sturueyed, and taken a perfect view of vs, they came to all such as had any coloured clothes amongst vs, and those they did stripe sharke naked, andooke their clothes away with them, but they that were apparelled in blacke they did not meddle withall, and so went their wayes, and left vs, without doing vs any further hurt, onely in the first burst they killed eight of our men. And at our departure, they perceiuing in what weake case we were, pointed vs with their hands which way we should goe to come to a towne of the Spaniards, which as we afterwards perceiued, was not past ten league s from thence, being these towne s: Tampoco, tampoco Christiano, tampoco Christiano, which is as much (we thinke) as to say in English, So that way, and you shall finde the Christians. They weaone that they vs are no other but bowes and arrowes, and their aime is so good, that they very seldome misse to hit any thing that they shooe at. Shortly after they had left vs stripe (as aforesaid) we thought it best to diuide our selues into two companies, and so being separated, halfe of vs went vnder the lea ding of one Anthony Gobard, who is yet a man alive, and dwelled at this instant in the towne of Winnmouth, whom before we chose to be capitaine ouer vs all, and those which went vnder his lea ding, of which number I Miles Phillips was one, trauelled Westward that way which the Indians with their hands had before pointed vs to go. The other halfe went vnder the leading

Chichemici a warlike and cruell people.

of one John Doe with him, David by after, with and their captain
themselves, and gone Westward, countie of the
we began to reck
the number to be haire at the first it went Westward
gram since hart
but six and thre
there is yet lackin I doe thinke that hereafter I pur that make me so and simoy others
we trauelled on codgels to breake
we should trauell
as we passed in stricken by the men as they went were also ostent Tequani, and che ber of other kind
they be so small,
and if you kill the cruelly, euen as goe away of the somewhat bigger
flies, not knowin
ken: as for colde
led thus for the up into the toppes they coude not p length they destr after, we heard a that we were nee comfoyt, and with has also no small Spaniards haue
before we heard:
shoate vpon our le water in fire. Daye to come to the pla reined many S
and they perceiui
the Chichemici, andooke an I
hauing taken the out any delay in the Canoas, they
to that side of th them with thes
Anthony Gobard
thence into them

make, and how is, and therefore out we that were in our first boate
were
I my selfe was hope we were con-
and John Dan-be boate into the
to leape into the

3, when we were sch, that they had two of three hours
water, and what like an almond ere in a maner all

to trauell along distants of Span-
hungrie bodies,
p theed about vs,
raune, for all the
we were greatly
On the left hand must needs path were assaulted by ough they do not

men downe to their eth them to seme
the Spaniards, of wards there is no ue bene their ene-
what number we oyding to their terrible and longe
as haile, with of armour, nor yet any resistance, or in fauour and mer-
compassion on vs,
and taken a perfit
se they did stripe
led in blacke they
any further hurt, perceiving in what
come to a towne of
com thence, being much (we thinke)
pons that they did adme mite to be we thought it best ent vnder the lea-
nt in the towne of pent vnder his lea-
t way which the vnder the leading of one John Hooper, whom they did choose for their captain, and with the company that went with him, David Ingram was one, and they tooke their way and trauelled Northward, and shortly after, within the space of two dayes, they were againe encountered with the savage people, and their captain Hooper and two more of his company were slaine: then againe they divided themselves, and some held on their way still Northward, and other some, knowing that we were come Westward, sought to meet with vs againe, as in truth there was about the number of sixe or seuen of sise and twentieth of them that mette with vs in the space of four dayes againe, and then we began to reckon amongst our selues, how many we were that were set on board, and we found the number to be an hundred & fouretee, whereof two were drowned in the Sea, and eight were slaine at the first encounter, so that there remained an hundred and foure, of which five and the next were Westward with vs, and two and fiftie to the North with Hooper and Ingram: and as Ingram since hath often tolde me, there were not past three of the company slaine, and there were but five and twenty of them that came againe to vs, so that of the company that went Northward, there is yet lacking, and not certainly heard of, the number of thye and twentie men. And verely I doe thinke that there are of them yet alive, and married in the sayd countrey, at Sibola, as hereafter I purpose (God willing) to discourse of more particularly, with the reason and causes, that make me so to thinke of the that were lacking, which were David Ingram, Thide, Whotone, and sundry others, whose names we could not remember. And being thus met againe together, we trauelled on still Westward, sometime thowto such thicke woods, that we were enforced with cogrels to breake a way the byambles and bushes from clearing our naked bodies: other some times we should trauell thowto the plaines, in such high grasse that we could scarce see one another, and as we passed in some places, we should haue of our men slaine, and fall downe suddenly, being stricken by the Indians, which stood behinde trees and bushes, in secret places, and so killed our men as they went by, for we went scatteringly in seeking of fruites to relieue our selues. We were also oftentimes greatly annoyed with a kinde of fle, which in the Indian tongue is called Tequani, and the Spaniards called them Muskeras. There are also in the sayd countrey a number of other kinde of flies, but none so noyfull as these Tequanies be: you shall hardly see them they be so small, for they are scarce so bigge as a gnat: they will sucke ones blood maruelously, and if you kill them while they are sucking, they are so venomous that the place will swell extremely, euen as one that is stung with a waspe or bee: but if you let them sucke they fill, and to goe away of themselves, then they doe you no other hurt, but leaue behinde them a redde spotte somewhat bigger then a fleabiting. At the first we were terrible troubled with these kinde of flies, not knowing their qualities, and resistance we coude make none against them, being naked: as for colde we feared not any, the countrey there is alwayes so warme. And as we trauelled thus for the space of tenn or twelue dayes, our captain did oftentimes cause certaine to goe vnto the toppes of high trees, to see if they could descie any towne or place of inhabitants, but they could not perceiue any, and vling often the same order to climbe by into high trees, at the length they descryed a great riuer that fell from the Northwest in the maine Sea, and presendie after, we heard an harquebulle shotte off, which did greatly incourage vs, for thereby we knew that we were nere to some Christians, and did therefore hope shortly to finde some succour and comfort, and within the space of one houre after, as we trauelled, we heard a cocke crowe, which was also no small ioy vnto vs, and so we came to the North side of the riuer of Panuco, where the Spaniards haue certaine Salines, at which place it was that the harquebulle was shot off, which before we heard: to which place we went not directly, but missing thereof, we left it about a bow-shotte vpon our left hand: of this riuer we thanke very greedilie, for we had not mette with any water in sixe dayes before, and as we were heere by the riuer side resting our selues, and longing to come to the place where the cocke did crowe, and where the harquebulle was shot off, we perceiued many Spaniards vpon the other side of the riuer, riding vp and downe on horsebacke, and they perceiuing vs, did suppose that we had bene of the Indians they bordering enemies, the Chichemici, the riuer was not past halfe a bowe shoot over: and presendly one of the Spaniards tooke an Indian boate called a Canoa, and so came ouer, being rowed by two Indians, and having taken the view of vs, did presendly rowe ouer backe againe to the Spaniards, who with- out any delay made out about the number of twentie horsemen, and imbarcking themselves in the Canoas, they led their horses by the reines swimming ouer after them, and being come ouer to that side of the riuer where we were, they sadled their horses, and being mounted vpon them with their lances charged, they came very fiercely, running at vs. Our captain Anthony Godard seeing them come in that order, did persuaide vs to submitte and yeelde our selues vnto them, for being naked, as wee at this time were, and without weapon, we could not make any resistance, whose bidding wee obeyed, and upon the peeding of our selues, they perceiued vs to be Christians, and did call for more Canoes, and carryed vs ouer by foure and foure in a boate, and being come on the other sho, they vnderstanding by our capitaine ho to long we had bene without meate, imparted betwene two and two a loafe of bread made of that countrey wheat, which the Spaniards call Mayfe, of the bignesse of one of our halpennie loaves, which bread is named in the Indian tongue Clashacally. This bread was very sweet and pleasant vnto vs, for wee had not eaten any in a long time before, and what is it that hunger doth not make to haue a fawny and a delicate taste? and hauing thus imparted the bread amongst vs, those which were men they sent afoze to the Towne, hauing also many Indians inhabitants of that place to garde them: they which were young, as boyes, and some such also as were feeble, they tooke by vpon the shoulders, behinde them, and so carryed vs to the Towne where they dwelt, which was very nere distant a mile from the place where we came ouer.

David Ingram.

This Towne is well situated, and well replenished with all kindes of fruites, as Oranges, Limmons, Pomgranets, Apples, and Peaches, and sundry others, and is inhabited with a great number of tame Indians, or Mexicans, and had in it also at that time about the number of two hundred Spaniards, men, women, and children, besides Negroes. Of theyr Salines, which lie vpon the West sho of the riuer, more then a mile distant from thence, they make a great profit, so that it is an excellent good merchandize there: the Indians doe buy much thereof, and carrie it by into the Countrey, and there sell it to theirowne Countrey people, in doubling the price. Also much of the Salt made in this place, is transported from thence by Sea to sundry other places, as to Cuba, S. Iohn de Vilua, and the other Voyers of Tamiago, and Tamachos, which are two barred Hauens West and by South about threescore leagues from S. Iohn de Vilua. When we were all come to the Towne, the Governour there shewed himselfe very ferece vnto vs, and threatened to hang vs all: and then he demanded what money wee had, which in truth was very little, for the Indians which we first met withall, had in a manner taken all from vs, and of that which they left, the Spaniards which brought vs ouer, tooke away a good part also: howbeit, from Anthony Godard the Governour here had a chaine of golde, which was giuen vnto him at Carthagena, by the Governour there: and from others he had some small sorce of money: so that we accounted that amongst vs all he had the number of five hundred Pezoes, besides the chaine of golde.

And hauing thus satisfied himselfe, when he had taken all that we had, he caused vs to be put into a little house much like a Dogstie, where we were almost smothered: and before we were thus shutte by into that little coate, they gaue vs some of the Countrey wheat, called Mayfe, sodden, which they feed theyr Dogges withall. But many of our men which had bene hurt by the Indians at our first comming on land, whose wounds were very sore and grievous, desired to haue the helpe of theyr Surgeions to cure theyr wounds. The Governour, and most of them all answered, that we should haue none other Surgeion but the hangman, which should sufficiently heale vs of all our griefes: and thus reuiling vs, and calling vs English dogges, and Lutheran heretikes, we remayned the space of thre dayes in this miserable state, not knowing what should become of vs, waiting euery houre to be bereaued of our liues.

The fourth Chapter.

Wherein is shewed how we were vsed in Panuco, and in what feare of death we were there, and how we were carryed to Mexico to the Vice Roy, and of our imprisonment there and at Tescuco, with the courtesies and cruelties wee receiued during that time, and how in the end we were by proclamation giuen to serue as slaues to sundrie Gentlemen Spanyardes.

Mou the fourth day after our comming thither, and there remaining in a perplexitie, looking euery houre when we should suffer death, there came a great number of Indians and Spaniards weaponed to seeth vs out of the house, and amongst them we espied one that brought a great many of newe balcers, at the sight whereof wee were greatly amazed, and made no other account but that we should presently haue suffered death, and so crying and calling to God for mercy and for forgiveness of our sinnes, we prepared our selues, making vs ready to die, yet in the end, as the sequell shewed, their meaning was not for vs when we were come out of the house, with those balcers they bound our armes behinde vs, and in coupling vs along the count West and by the house, they be homes and were could say at night

call it Santa Ma lies to, and g all, made of the chole, which fr feeding caused b hee one of our n
the first incount

The next mo
and garden as holic leagues of
there are about theyre sent vs m ry courteously,
very like of the
which fruite did selues. The in as aforesaid, I souldly increas ry to the veterin
and neuer depart
and sometimes as he required c betwene the ne
he cry and say much in say in e Had the next day this towne of P leagues distant

Deere at this nighers, hauing
man his compa
the villages, an we had neede, c sustaine vs. A which is called a fayre house of wards in the W of we were all b
ued, and let tree
thus carryed bo wy, nor be mer
otherwise.

The next mo
led till we came church, called ou high, as large of liter as there Spaniards pal
the church, e k
whether he be ho spealed, which they call in the s

In coming by two and two together, they commanded us to march on through the Towne, and so along the country from place to place toward the citie of Mexico, which is distant from Panuco West and by South the space of threety leagues, having onely but two Spaniards to conduct us, they being accompanied with a great number of Indians warding on either side with bowes and arrows, lest we should escape from them. And travelling in this order, upon the second day at night we came unto a Towne which the Indians call Nobeles, and the Spaniards call it Santa Maria: in which Towne there is a house of White fryers, which did very courteously receive us, and gave us hote meat, as mutton and hooch, and garments also to cover our selves withall, made of better hayes: we fed very greedily of the meat, and of the Indian fruite, called Nohole, which fruite is long and small, much like in fashion to a little Cowmunder: Our greete feeding caused us to fall sicke of hote burning agues. And herre at this place one Thomas Barber one of our men died of a hurt: for he had bene before shot in with an arrowe into the throat at the first encounter.

The next morning about ten of the clocke, we departed from thence, having two of two together, and garden as before, and so travelled on our way toward Mexico, till we came to a towne within five leagues of Mexico, named Mexiclan, where is a house of Blacke fryers: and in this towne there are about the number of threety Spaniards, both men, women, and children. The fryers sent us meat from the house ready dyed, and the fryers, and men and women, bid us very courteously, and gave us some shirts and other such things as we lacked. Here our men were very sicke of their agues, and with eating of another fruite called in the Indian tongue, Guaceros, which fruite did hurt us so sore, that for the space of ten or twelve dayes we could not see our selves. The next morning we departed from thence with our two Spaniards & Indian yate, as before. Of these two Spaniards the one was an aged man, who altho way did very courageously increase us, and would carefully goe before to provide for us both meat and things necessary to the betterment of his power: the other was a young man, who all the way travelled with us, and never departed from us, who was a very cruell catiffe, and he carried a iavelin in his hand, and sometimes when as our men with very feebleness and faintness were not able to go so fast as he required them, he would take his iavelin in both his hands, and strike them with the same betwene the necke and the shoulders so violently, that he would strike them downe, then would he cry and say: Marches, marches Engleses perros, Luterianos, enemigos de Dios: which is as much to say in English: March, march on you English dogges, Lutherians, enemies to God. And the next day we came to a towne called Pachuca, and there are two places of that name: as this towne of Pachuca, and the mines of Pachuca, which are mines of silver, and are about five leagues distant from this towne of Pachuca toward the North-west.

Here at this towne the good olde man our Governour suffered us to stay two dayes and two nights, having compassion of our sicke and weak men, full sore against the minde of the young man his companion. From thence we took our journey, and travelled foure or five dayes by little villages, and Sciencias, which are Farmes or Dairie houses of the Spaniards, and ever as we had neede, the good olde man would still provide us sufficient of meates, fruites, and water to sustaine us. At the end of which five dayes we came to a towne within five leagues of Mexico, which is called Quoghliclan, where we also stayed one whole day and two nights, where was a large house of Gray fryers, howbeit, we saw none of them. Here we were tolde by the Spaniards in the Towne, that we had not past fiftene English miles from thence to Mexico, wherof we were all very ioyfull and glad, hoping that when we came thither, we should either be relieved, and set free out of bondage, or els be quickly dispatched out of our lives: for seeing our selves thus carried bound from place to place, although some bled us courteously, yet could we never be, nor be merry till we might perceive our selves set free from that bondage, either by death of ourselfe.

The next morning we departed from thence on our journey toward Mexico, and so travelled till we came within two leagues of it, where there was built by the Spaniards a very large church, called our Lady church, in which there is an image of our Lady of silver and gile, being as high & as large as a tall woman, in which church, and before this image, there are as many lamps of silver as there be dayes in the yeere, which upon high dayes are all lighted. Whensoever any Spaniards passe by this church, although they be on horsebacke, they will alight, and come into the church, & kneele before this image, and pray to our Lady to defend them from all evil: so that wher they be horseman or footman he will not passe by, but first goe into the church, and pray as a freeman, which if they doe not, they thinke and beleue that they shall never prosper, which image they call in the Spanish tongue, Nuestra signora de Guadalupe: At this place there are certaine colde baths, with cold springing by as though the water did stretch: the water whereof is somewhat brackish in taste, but very good for any that have any sores or wounds, to wash themselves therewith, for as they say, it healeth many: and every yeere once upon our Lady day the people be to repaired together to offer, and to pray in that Church before the image, and they say that our Lady of Guadalupe doeth worke a number of miracles: About this Church there is not any towne of Spaniards that is inhabited, but certaine Indians doe dwell there in houses of theyr owne coun-treys building.

Perce we were met with a great number of Spaniards on horsebacke, which came from Mexico to see us, both gentlemen, and men of occupations, and they came as people to see a wonder: we were still called upon to march on, and so about foure of the clocke in the afternoon of the said day we entered into the cite of Mexico, by the way of street called La casa Sancta Catherrina: and we stayed not in any place till we came to the house of pallace of the Vice Roy, Don Martin Henriquez, which standeth in the middell of the city, hard by the market place, called La plaza del Marquesse. We had not stayed any long time at this place, but there was brought vs by the Spaniards from the market place great store of meat, sufficient to have satisfied five times so many as we were: some also gave vs hoes, and some gave vs money: in which place we stayed for the space of two houres, and from thence we were conveyed by water in to large Canoes to our hospitall where as certaine of our men were lodged, which were taken before the sight at S. John de Vlioa: we should have gone to our Ladies hospitall, but that there were also so many of our men taken before as that sight that there was no room for vs. After our comming thither, many of the company that came with me from Panuco dyed within the space of fouretee dayes: some after which time we were taken forth from that place, and put altogether into our Ladies hospitall, in which place we were courteously used, and visited oftentimes by veruous gentlemen and gentlewomen of the cite, who brought vs divers things to comfort vs withall, as succres and masticades, and such other things, and would also many times give vs many things, and that very liberally: In which hospitall we remained for the space of five moneths, untill we were all whole and sound of body, and then we were appointed by the Vice Roy to be carred unto the towne of Tescuko, which is from Mexico Southweat distant eight leagues: in which towne there are certaine houses of correction and punishment for all people called Obrajes, like to Bridewell here in London: into which place divers Indians are sold for slaves, some for ten yeeres, and some for twelve. It was no small griefe unto vs when we understood that we should be carred thither, and to be used as slaves, we had rather be put to death: howbeit there was no remedy, but we were carred to the prison of Tescuko, where we were not put to any labour, but were very straitly kept, and almost famished, yet by the good providence of our mercifull God, we happened there to meet with one Robert Swearing, who was the soune of an English man borne of a Spanish woman: this man could speake very good English, and by his means we were holpen very much with victualles from the Indians, as mutton, hennes, and bread. And if we had not bene so relieved, we had surely perished: and yet all the provision that we had gotten that way was but slender. And continuing thus straightly kept in prison there for the space of two moneths, at the length we agreed amongst our selves to speake forth of prison, come of it what would, for we were minded rather to suffer death then longer to live in that miserable state.

And so having escaped our prison, we knew not what way to sit for the safetie of our selves, the night was darke, and it rained terribly, and not having any guide, we went we knew not whither, and in the morning, at the appearing of the day, we perceived our selves to be come hard to the cite of Mexico, which is foure & twentieth English miles from Tescuko. The day being come we were espyed by the Spaniards, and pursued, and taken, and brought before the Vice Roy and head iudices, who threatened to hang vs for breaking of the kings prison. Yet in the end they sent vs into a garden belonging to the Vice Roy, and comming thither, we found there our English gentlemen which were deliuered as hostages when as our generall was betrayed at S. John de Vlioa, as is aforesaid, and with them we also found Robert Barret, the Spaiiser of the Jesus, in which place we remained labouring and doing such things as we were commanded, for the space of foure moneths, having but two sheepe a day allowed to suffice vs all, being very neere a hundred men, and for bread, we had euery man two loaves a day, of the quantity of one halfepemie loafe: At the end of which foure moneths, they having remooued our gentlemen hostages, and the Spaiiser of the Jesus to a prison in the Vice Roy his owne house, did cause it to be proclaimed, that what gentleman Spaniard sooner was willing, or would haue any English man to serue him, and be bound to keepe him forth comming, to appeare before the Iudices within one moneth after notice given, that they should repaie to the said garden, and there take their choise: which proclamation proclamation was that happy was be

Wherein is the
the commi
imprisonm gainst vs, an

and by Negroes
the said cite of Mexico many of vs
to be, and to see a many of vs did pre-by a peere, which I brought under our Spaniards whi-
in vs 3 marks of ch-19. Peeres of a hal-meanly bestow our five thousand pe-As concerning the
in the Viceroy his
as aforesaid, they comming thither,
to goe for Spaine,
have heard it credi-the Inquisition how tion of that house
sent away with the drew in the In-four moie of our I knew, for they them I know not.

How after that time we had bene yeere of our Lord
shed in the Indies, untill this time
that bloodie and Contreras, and Lola Rios, the Sherre
the white Friers,
that their most dete-
it be to call vs the perfect knowledge
declared, and there
began our sorowes proclamation mad
we keepe secret any apprehended in all

proclamation was no sooner made, but the gentlemen came and repaired to the garden againe, so that happy was he that could soonest get one of vs.

The 5. Chapter.

Wherein is shewed in what good sort, and how wealthily we liued with our masters vntill the coming of the Inquisition, when as agayne our sorowes began a fresh: Of our imprisonment in the holy house, and of the seuerer judgement and sentences giuen against vs, and with what rigour and crueltie the same were executed.

The gentlemen that thus tooke vs for their seruants or slaues, did not apparre vs throughout, with whom we abode, being such seruice as they appointed vs vnto, which was for the most part to attend vpon them at the table, and to bee as their chamberlaines, and to waite vpon them when they went abroad, which they greatly accounted of: for in that countrey no Spaniard will serue one another, but they are all of them attended and serued by Indians weekly, and by Negroes which be their slaues during their life. In this sort we remained and serued in the said cite of Mexico, and thereaboutes for the space of a yeere and somewhat longer. Afterward many of vs were by our masters appointed to go to sundry of their Spines wher they had to doe, and to bee as ouerscers of the Negroes and Indians that laboured there. In which Spines many of vs did profite and gaue greatly: for first we were allowed thre hundred Peces a man for a yeere, which is thre score pound sterling, and besides that the Indians and Negroes which wrought vnder our charge, vpon our well vsing and increasing of them, would at times as vpon some dayes wher they had left to worke, labour for vs, & giue as much siluer as should be worth vnto vs 3, marks of chereaboutes, euery marke being worth 6 Peces, & a halfe of their mony, which is 19 Peces, & a half, is worth 4. li. 10. s. of our mony. Sundrie weekes we did gaue so much by this means besides our wages, that many of vs became very rich, and were worth thre thousand or some thousand Peces, for wee liued and gained thus in those Spines some thre or foure yeeres. As concerning those Gentlemen which were deliuered as hostages, and that were kept in prison, in the Viceroy his house, after that we were come from out the garden to serue sundry Gentlemen as aforesaid, they remained prisoners in the sayde house for the space of foure moneths after their coming thither, at the ende wherof the Fleet being readie to depart from S. Iohn de Villua, to goe for Spaine, the said Gentlemen were sent away into Spaine with the fleet, where as I haue heard it credibly reported, many of them died with the cruell handling of the Spaniards in the Inquisition house, as those which haue bene deliuered home after they had suffered the persecution of that house can moze perfectly declare. Robert Barret also the master of the Iesus, was sent away with the fleet into Spaine the next yeere following, where afterwards he suffered persecution in the Inquisition, and at the last was condemned to bee burnt, and with him thre or foure more of our men, of whom one was named Gregorie, and another John Bournie, whom I know, for they were of our Generall his Spulicians, but the names of the rest that suffered with them I know not.

Now after that fye yeeres were fully expired since our first coming into the Indies, in which time we had bene imprisoned and serued in the said countreys as is before truly declared. In the yeere of our Lord one thousand five hundred seuentie foure, the Inquisition beganne to be established in the Indies, very much against the mindes of many of the Spaniards themselves: for neuer vntill this time since their first conquering and planting in the Indies, were they subject to that bloodie and cruell Inquisition. The chiefe Inquisitor was named Don Pedro Moya de Contreras, and Iohn de Bouilla his companion, and Iohn Sanchis the Fiscal, and Pedro de la Rios, the Secretarie: they being come and settled, and placed in a very faire house nere vnto the white Friers, considering with themselves that they must make an entrance and beginning of that their most detestable Inquisition here in Mexico, to the terrour of the whole countrey, thought it best to call vs that were Englishmen first in question, and so much the rather, for that they had perfect knowledge and intelligence, that many of vs were become very rich, as hath bene already declared, and therefore we were a very good bootie and praye to the Inquisitors: so that now again began our sorowes a fresh, for we were sent for, and sought out in all places of the countrey, and proclamation made vpon paine of loosing of goods, and excommunication, that no man should hide or keepe secret any Englishman or any part of their goods. By means wherof we were all soon apprehended in all places, and all our goods seized and taken for the Inquisition vs, and so from all all partes of the countrey we were coueied and sent as prisoners to the cite of Mexico, and there committed to prison in stony darke dungeons, where we could not see, but by candle light, & were neuer past two together in one place, so that we sawe not one another, neither could one of vs tell what was become of an other. Thus we remained stoll unpysioned for the space of a yere and a halfe, and others for some lesse time, for they came to prison euer as they were appyled. During which time of our imprisonment, as the first beginning we were often called before the Inquisitors a one, and there severly examined of our faith, and commaunded to say the Pater noster, the Ave Maria, and the Credo in Latin, which God knoweth a great number of vs could not say, otherwise then in the English tongue. And hauing the said Robert Sweering who was our friend at Tescuco alwayes present with the sayd an inquisitor, he made reply for vs, & in our owne countrey speech, we could say them perfectly, although not word for word as they were in Latin. Then did they proceed to demaund of vs upon our othes what we did beleue of the Sacrament, & whether there did remaine any bread of wine after the words of consecration, yea or no, and whether we did not beleue that the host of bread which the priest hold vpon ouer his head, and the wine that was in the chalice, was the very true and perfect body & blood of our Saviour Christ, yea or no: To which if we answered not yea, then was there no way but death. Then they would demaund of vs what we did remember of our selues, what opinions we had held, or had bin taught to hold contrary to the same whiles we were in England: to which we for the safetie of our liues were constrained to say, that we neuer did beleue, nor had bene taught otherwise then as before we had sayd. Then would they charge vs that we did not tell them the truth, that they knew to the contrary, and therefore we should call our selues to remembrance, & make them a better answer at the next time, as els we should be rackt, and made to confesse the truth whether we would or no. And so coming againe before them the next time, we were still demaunded of our beliefs whiles we were in England, and how we had bene taught, & all what we thought or did know of such of our owne countrey as they did name vnto vs, so that we could neuer be free from such demaunds, and at other times they would promise vs, that if we would tell them truth, then should we haue fauour & be set at liberty, although we very well knewe their false speeches were but means to incite vs to the hazard and losse of our liues: howbeit God so mercifully wrought for vs by a secret meane that we had, that we kept vs still to our first and true, & would still say that we had told the truth vnto them, and knewe no more by our selues nor any other of our fellowes then as we had declared, and that for our finnes and offences in England against God and our Ladie, or any of his blessed saintes, we were heartily sorry for the same, and did crye God mercie, and besought the Inquisitors for Gods sake, considering that we came into those countreies by force of weather, and against our wills, and that nature in all our liues we had rather spoken of done any thing contrary to their lawes, that therefore they would haue mercy vpon vs, yet all this would not serue: for still from time to time we were called vpon to confesse, and about the space of 3. moneths before, they proceeded to their seuerer iudgement, we were all rackt, and some enforced to vtter that against themselves, which afterwards cost them their liues. And thus hauing gotten from our owne mouthes matter sufficient for the iudgement in iudgement against vs, they caused a large scaffold to be made in the middell of the market place in Mexico right ouer against the head church, & 14. or 15. dayes before the day of their iudgement, with the sound of a trumpet, and the noise of their Attabalies, which are a kind of drummes, they did assemble the people in all partes of the cite, before whom it was then solemnly proclaimed, that whosoever would vpon such a day repaire to the market place, they should heare the sentence of the holy Inquisition against the English heretikes, Lutheranes, and also see the same put in execution. Which being done, and the time appoaching of this cruell iudgement, the night before they came to the prison where we were, with certaine officers of that holy hellish house, bringing with them certaine fooles coats which they had prepared for vs, being called in their language S. Benitos, which coats were made of pealow cotton & red crosses vpon them, both before & behind: they were so busied in putting on their coats about vs, and in bringing vs out into a large yard, and placing and pointing vs in what order we should go to the scaffold or place of iudgement, vpon the morow, that they did not once suffer vs to sleepe all that night long. The next morning being come, there was giuen to euery one of vs for our hearkfast a cuppe of wine, and a slice of bread fried in honte, and so about eight of the clocke in the morning, wee set forth of the prison, euery man alone in his pealow coat, and a rope about his necke, and a great greene Waxe candle in his hand vntighted, hauing a Spaniard appoynted to go vpon a yther side of euery one of vs: and so marching in this order and maner toward the Scaffold in the Market place, which was a bowe shoote distant of thereabouts, wee found a great assemble of people all the way, and such throng, that certayne of the Inquisitors officers on horsebacke were constrained to make way, and

and so coming to and prepared for ment. We being the pair of stairs
to one and a place to a great number of let in the place manden and then

The first man to batt
for 10. yeres

After him was and one Thomas

he committed to Then was call
demmed to serue

Then were st
call iudgement,

to the galleys, for
And then was without any stry

Then were call Doywell and C

some for 3. yeres
being done, and in the Jailman, who

to the place

quickly burnt and we were caried to

by, the yere of
we found a hostle

and to be commit
up on horseback

people to behold stripes to euery

by sundry men a cries which cries

the way as they takehell order st

Gods enemies was to the Inqui

were then taken sent into Spain

with me to which the monasteries.

Wherein is expired, Francis I
how I se gaine I

This was
of a bery

Spain, and there candle light, & were could one of us tell space of a peece and appeyement. Du-before the Inqui-Peter nother, the
 could not say other was our friend at in Latin. Then did rament, & whether
 and whether we did
 the wine that was dist, pea o) no 1 Ca and demaund of us light to hold contra-lues were contra-
 before we had sayd,
 to the contrary, and at the next time, ag And so comming
 we were in Eng-
 of our owne compa-
 and aother times
 favour & be set at liay us, to the hazard cause that we had wech into them, and red, and that for our d faintes, we were for Gods sake, con-dils, and the noise that therefore they time we were calld their seuer iudge-ch afterwards col-
 rment for the to yonddest of the market day of their iudge-
 kind of hummes,
 solemnly yprociat-
 ould heare the sco-
 so see the same put ment, the night be-bellish house, by in-
 in their language
 eh before & behinde
 into a large yard,
 of iudgement, by next morning bo-
 and a slice of bread
 the prison, every ene waxe candle
 of every one of us
 lace, which was a
 all the way, and tied to make way,
 and

and so comming to the Scaffold, wee went by by a paire of Staires, and found seates reabic made and prepared for vs to sit downe on, every man in order as he should be called to receive his iudgement. The being thus set downe as we were appointed, presently the Inquisitors came by another paire of Staires, and the Clergy and all the chiefe Justices with them. When they were set downe and placed under the cloth of estate agreeing to their degrees and calling, then came by also a great number of Friers, white, blacke and gray, about the number of 300. persons, they being set in the places for them appointed. Then was there a solemne Oyes made, and Silence commanded, and then presently began their seuer and cruell iudgement.

The first man that was called was one Roger the chiefe Armourer of the Iesus, and hee had iudgement to haue three hundred stripes on horsebacke, and after condemned to the gallies as a slave for 10. yeeres.

The cruell iudgements of the Spanish Inquisitors upd our poore countreymen.

After him was called John Gray, John Howme, John Rider, John Poone, James Collier, and one Thomas Howme: these were adiudged to haue 200. stripes on horsebacke, and after to be committed to the Gallies for the space of 8. yeeres.

Then was called John Keers, and was adiudged to haue 100. stripes on horsebacke, and condemned to serue in the gallies for the space of 6. yeeres.

Then were severally called the number of 53. one after another, and every man had his seuerall iudgement, some to haue 200. stripes on horsebacke, and some 100. and condemned for slaves in the gallies, some for 6. yeeres, some for 8. and some for 10.

And then was J Phillips called, and was adiudged to serue in a monasterie for 5. yeeres, without any stripes, and to weare a fooles coate, of S. Benito, during all that time.

Then were called John Scobie, Richard Williams, David Alexander, Robert Cooke, and Postwell and Thomas Hull: these five were condemned to serue in monasteries without stripes, some for 3. yeeres and some for foure, and to weare the S. Benito during all the said time. Which being done, and it now being towards night, George Ruelle, Peter Pomfrie, and Cornelius the Iustman, were called, and had their iudgement to be burnt to a shes, and so were presently sent away to the place of execution in the market place but a litle from the scaffold, where they were quickly burnt and consumed. And as for vs that had receiued our iudgement, being 68. in number, we were carried backe that night to prison againe. And the next day in the morning being good Friday, the yeere of our Lord 1575. we were all brought into a court of the Inquisitors pallace, where we found a horse in a readinesse for every one of our men which were condemned to haue stripes, and to be committed to the gallies, which were in number 60. and so they being inforced to mount up on horsebacke naked from the middle upward, were carried to be shewed as a spectacle for all the people to behold throughout the chiefe and principall streets of the Citie, and had the number of stripes to every one of them appointed, most cruellly layd upon their naked bodies with long whips by handy men appointed to be the executioners thereof: & before our men there went a couple of criers which cried as they went, Behold these English dogs, Lutherans, enemies to God, and all the way as they went, there were some of the Inquisitors themselves, and of the familiars of that rakehell order, that cried to the executioners, Strike, lay on those English heretikes, Lutheranes, Gods enemies: and so this horrible spectacle being shewed round about the citie, and they returned to the Inquisitors house, with their backs all goze blood, and swollen with great bumps, they were then taken from their horses, & carried againe to prison, where they remained untill they were sent into Spaine to the gallies, there to receive the rest of their martyrdom, and I and the 6. other with me which had iudgement, and were condemned amongst the rest to serue an appentiship in the monasteries, were taken presently & sent to certaine religious houses appointed for the purpose.

The 6. Chapter.

Wherein is shewed how we were vsed in the religious houes, and that when the time was expired, that wee were adiudged to serue in them, there came newes to Mexico of M. Francis Drakes being in the South Sea, & what preparation was made to take him, and how I seeking to escape, was againe taken and put in prison at Vera Cruz, and how againe I made mine escape from thence.

Miles Phillips and William Lowe, were appointed to the blacke Friers, where I was appointed to be an overseer of Indian workemen, who brought there in building of a new church: amongst which Indian I learned their language of Spanish tongue very perfectly, and had great familiaritie with many of them, whom I found to bee a cruell

curteous and louing kind of people, ingenious, and of great vnderstanding, and they hate & abhorre the Spaniards wth all their hearts, they haue vsed such horrible cruelties against them, and doe still keepe them in such subiection and seruitude, that they and the Negroes also doe daily lie in waite to partise their deliuerance out of that thraldome and bondage, that the Spaniards doe keepe them in. William Lowe he was appointed to serue the Cooke in the kitchen, Richard Williams and David Alexander were appointed to the gray Friers, John Stoye and Robert Cooke to the white Friers: Paule Hovsewell the Secretarie tooke to be his seruant: Thomas Hul was sent to a monasterie of priests, where afterward he died. Thus we serued out the yeeres that wee were condemned for, wth the vse of our fooles coats, and we must needs confesse that the Friers did vse vs very curteously: for euery one of vs had his chamber wth bedding and diet, & all things cleane and neat: yea many of the Spaniards and Friers themselves doe bitterly abhorre and mislike of that cruel Inquisition, and would as they durst betwaile our miseries, and comfort vs the best they could, although they stood in such feare of that diuelish Inquisition, that they durst not let the left hand know what the right doeth. Now after that the time was expired for which we were condemned to serue in those religious houses, wee were then brought againe before the chiefe Inquisitor, and had all our fooles coats pulled off and hanged vp in the head church, called Ecclesia Maiore, and euery mans name and iudgement w<sup>ritten</sup> thereupon wth this addition, An heretike Lutheran reconciled. And there are also all their coats hanged vp, which were condemned to the gallies, wth their names and iudgements, and vnderneath his coat, Heretike Lutheran reconciled. And also the coats and names of the thre that were burned, wherupon were w<sup>ritten</sup>, An obstinate heretike Lutheran burnt. Then were we suffered to goe vp and to done the country, and to place our selues as we could, and yet not so free, but that we very well knew that there was good espyall alwayes, attending vs and all our actions, so that wee durst not once to speake or looke awyie. David Alexander and Robert Cooke they returned to serue the Inquisitor, who shortly after married them both to two of his Negro women: Richard Williams married a rich widow of Bilikate wth 4000. Pezoes: Paule Hovsewell is married to a Melita, as they name those whose fathers were Spaniards, and their mothers Indians, and this woman which Paule Hovsewell hath married, is sayd to be the daughter of one that came in wth Hernando Cortes the Conquerour, who had wth her in marriage foure thousand Pezoes, and a faire house: John Stoye hee is married to a Negro woman: William Lowe had leaue and licence to goe into Spaine where hee is now married: for mine owne part I could neuer thoughtly settle my selfe to marrie in that country, although many faire offers were made vnto mee of such as were of great abilitie and wealth, but I could haue no liking to liue in that place, where I must euerj where see and knowe such horrible idolatrie committed, and durst not once for my life speake against it: and therefore I had alwayes a longing and desire to this my native countrey: and to returne and serue againe in the Indies where I might haue gathered great riches and wealth, I theyr well saw that at one time or another I should fall againe into the danger of that diuelish Inquisition, and so be stript of all, wth losse of life also, and therefore I made my choise rather to learne to weaue Crogranes and Cassataes, and so compounding wth a Silke weauer, I bound my selfe for 3. yeeres to serue him, and gaue him 150. Pezoes to teach me the science, other wise he would not haue taught me vnder teuen yeeres penitency, and by this meanes I liued the more quiet, and free from suspicion. Howbeit I should many times bee charged by familiars of that diuelish house, that I had a meaning to runne away into England, and to bee an heretike Lutheran againe: To whom I would answer that they had no neede to suspect any such thing in mee, for that they knewe all very well that it was impossible for mee to escape by any maner of meanes: yet notwithstanding I was called before the Inquisitor, and demanded why I did not marrie: I answered that I had bound my selfe at an occupation. Well sayd the Inquisitor, I knowe thou meanest to runne away, and therefore I charge thee here vpon payne of burning as an heretike relapsed, that thou depart not out of this cite, nor come nerre to the porte of S. Iohn de Villa, nor to any other porte, To the which I answered, that I would willingly obey. Hea sayd he, see thou doe so and thy fellows also, they shall haue the like charge.

So I remained at my science the full time, and learned the Arte, at the end whereof there came newes to Mexico that there were certaine Englishmen landed wth a great power at the port of Acapulco, vpon the South sea, & that they were coming to Mexico to take the spoile thereof, which brought a maruelous great feare amongst them, & many of those that were rich, began to shift for themselves, their wiues & children: vpon which burlie burlie the Microp caused a generall muster to be made of all the Spaniards in Mexico, and there were found to the number of 7000. and odder householders of Spaniards in the cite & suburbs, & of single men vnmarried, the number of 3000. and of Mexico, which thousand persons,

my, and were sent for to Captaine
but one, which was
of Plimouth in
we answered, no.

While these things
was there eight was sent to Luis Soares, the John Cortes, & two by captaine Don it was sayd that Corte, wth whom When we thence, more then preparatly embark part with him
as interpreter in certaine, if we ha buried kept our co
as we could, and come of twentie
ships which came of the coast more landed, our Capt while that I was Duke, we should re wherem I liue thereof, when I doubt any man kn strained to make my towards Me 50 leagues from Tepaca 24. leag
hill which catter Mexico, from the most of his men
ten weekes of the sare he hau traue heard of. To wh lands wherem a la Sur, it is not poss sire him to land
cite of Mexico,
there I should going to Meca
that they had the rie for me to goe
and comming t intelligence cha
S. Iohn de Vill des, preparing wth my selfe, a our, and to goe
more standing dozes, sometimes

they hate & abhorre maint them, and doe also doe daily lie in the Spaniards doe thin, Richard Gill and Robert Cooke Thomas Hul was the peeres that wee the friends
 and dies, & all things by abhorre and mis-
 and comfort by the
 and they durst not let for which we were efuse the chiefes
 b, called Ecclesia dition, An heretike condemned to the Lutheran reconci-
 written, An ob-
 the country, and to ac that there was good I speake of lookes who shortly after rich widow of Bisi-
 me those whose fa-ule Postwell hath the Conquerour,
 tozie hee is married
 where hee is now
 in that country,
 ric and wealthy, but we knowe such boy-therefoze I had al-erue againe in the w that at one time
 so be stripes of all Crogranes and
 teres to serue him,
 caught me under in suspicion. Now I had a meaning join I would an-standing I was that I had bound runne a way, and at thou depart not er poize, To the by fellows al-

of Phillips, which are counted to be the sounes of Spaniards borne of Indian women twentie thousand persons, and then was Paule Postwell and Miles Phillips sent for before the Viceroy, and were examined if we did know an English man named Francis Drake, which was brother to Captaine Hawkins: to which we answered, that Captaine Hawkins had not any brother his one, which was a man of the age of thre score yeeres or thereabouts, and was now gouernour of Bermoothe in England. And then he demanded of vs if we knew one Francis Drake, and we answered, no.

While these things were in doing, there came newes that all the Englishmen were gone, yet was there eight hundred men made out under the leading of severall captaines, wherof two hundred were sent to the poize of S. Iohn de Villua, vpon the North Sea vnder the conduct of Don Lays Suares, two hundred were sent to Guatimala in the South sea, who had for their captaine Iohn Cortes, two hundred more were sent to Guatulo, a port of the South sea, ouer whom went the captaine Don Pedro de Roblis, and two hundred more were sent to Acapulco, the port wher it was sayd that Captaine Drake had bene. And they had for Captaine doctor Roblis Alcalde de Corte, with whom Miles Phillips went as interpreter, hauing licence given by the Inquisitors. When we were come to Acapulco, we found that Captaine Drake had departed from thence, more then a moneth before we came thither. But yet our captaine Alcalde de Corte there presently embarked himselfe in a small ship of thre score tunne or thereabout, hauing also in com-panie with him two other small barkes, and not past two hundred men in all, with whom I went as interpreter in his otone ship, which God knoweth was but weake and ill appointed, so that for certaine, if we had met with captaine Drake, he might easily haue taken vs all: Wee being im-backed kept our course and raine Southward to wards Panama, keeping still as nigh the shore as we could, and leaving the land vpon our left hand, and hauing coasted thus for the space of eightene or twentie dayes, and were more to the South then Guatimala, wee met at last with other ships which came from Panama, of whom we were certainly informed that he was cleane gone off the coast more then a moneth before: and so we returned backe to Acapulco againe, and there landed, our Captaine being thereunto forced, because his men were very sore sea sicke: All the while that I was at Sea with them, I was a glad man, for I hoped that if we met with master Drake, we should all be taken, so that then I should haue bene freed out of that banger and miserre wherein I liued, and should returne to mine otone countrey of England againe. But missing thereof, when I sawe there was no remedie but that wee must needs come on land againe; like with any man knowe the sorrow and grieue that inwardly I felt, although outwardly I was constrained to make faire weather of it. And so being landed, the next morow after, wee began our iour-ney towards Mexico, and past these towne of name in our way, as first the towne of Tuatpec, 30. leagues from Mexico, from thence to Washaca, 40. leagues from Mexico: from thence to Tepiaca 24. leagues from Mexico, and from thence to Lo pueblo de los Angeles, wher is a high hill which catcheth our fire three times a day, which hill is 18. leagues in manner directly West from Mexico, from thence we went to Scapelapa, 8. leagues from Mexico, and there our captaine and most of his men tooke boate, and came to Mexico againe, hauing bene fourty about the space of seven weekes of thereabouts. Our captaine made report to the Viceroy what he had done, and how farre he had trauelled, and that for certaine he was informed that captaine Drake was not to bee heard of. To which the Viceroy replied and said, Surely we shall haue him shortly come into our hands vpon a land though necessitie in some one place or other, for he being now in these seas of Sea, it is not possible for him to get out of them againe, so that if he perish not at sea, yet hunger will force him to land. And then againe I was commanded by the Viceroy that I should not depart the cite of Mexico, but alwayes be at my masters house in a readinesse at all bowres warning, when sooner I should be called for: that notwithstanding within one moneth after certaine Spaniards going to Mecameca, 18. leagues from Mexico, to sell a way certaine hides and Cuchichello, that they had there at the Spaniards of daite houses, and my master hauing leaue of the Secretary for me to goe with them, I tooke my iourney with them being very well hoised and appointed, and coming thither and passing the time there at Mecameca certaine dayes till we had perfect intelligence that the fleet was ready to depart, I not being past 3. dayes iourney from the poize of S. Iohn de Villua, thought it to be the meetest time for me to make an escape, and I was the bol-der, pressing vpon my Spanish tongue, which I spake as naturally as any of them all, thinking with my selfe, that when I came to S. Iohn de Villua, I would get to bee entertained as a soldier our, and so goe home into Spaine in the same fleet, and therefore secretly one euening late, the moone shining faire, I conueted my selfe away, and riding so for the space of two nightes and two dayes, sometimes in, and sometimes out, resting very little all that time, vpon the second day at night

The Spaniard Viceroy propheticall, but false.

hereof there came at the poize of A-uille thereof, which began to shift for a generall mutter
 of 7000. and abde number of 3000. and
 of

night I came to the towne of Vera Cruz, distant from the poye of S. Iohn de Villua, where the ships rode, but only 8. leagues, and here purposing to rest my selfe a day or two, I was no sooner sighted, but within the space of one halfe hower after, I was by ill hap arrested, and brought before Iustices there, being taken and suspected to be a gentleman some of Spexico, that was runne away from his father, who in truth was the man they sought for: So I being arrested, and brought before the Iustices, there was a great hurle burle about the matter, every man charging me that I was the sonne of such a man dwelling in Spexico, which I flatly denied, affirming that I knew not the man, yet would they not belecue me, but begged still upon me that I was he that they sought for, and so I was conueied away to prison. And as I was thus going to prison, to the further increase of my griefe, it chanced that at that very instant there was a poore man in the preak that was come to towne to sell hennes, who told the Iustices that they did me wrong, and that in truth hee knew very well that I was an Englishman and no Spaniard. They then demaunded of him how hee knew that, and threatened him that he sayd so, for that hee was my companion, and sought to conuey mee away from my father, so that hee also was threatened to be laid in prison with mee: he for the discharge of himselfe stood stille in it, that I was an Englishman, and one of captain Hawkins men, and that hee had knowen me weare the S. Benito in the blache friers at Spexico, for three or foure whole yeeres together, which when they heard they forsooke him, and began to examine me a new whether that speech of his were true, yea or no, which when they perceived that I could not deny, and perceiuing that I was run from Spexico, and came thither of purpose to conuey my selfe away with the fleet, I was presently committed to prison with a sorrowfull heart, often wishing my selfe that that man which knew me had at that time bene further off, to wit: hee in sinceritie had compassion of my distressed state, thinking by his speech, and knowing of me, to haue set me free fro that present danger which he saw me in: howbeit, contrary to his expectation, I was thereby brought into my extreme danger, & to the hazard of my life, yet there was no remedie but patience perforce: and I was no sooner brought into prison, but I had a great paire of boles clapt on my legs, and thus I remained in that prison for the space of 3. weeks, where were also many other prisoners which were thither committed for sundry crimes, and condemned to the gallies. During which time of imprisonment there, I found amongst those my prison fellows some that had knowen me before in Spexico, and truly they had compassion of me, and would spare of their vituals & any thing els that they had to do me good, amongst whom there was one of them that told me that hee understood by a secret friend of his which often came to the prison to him, that I should be shortly sent back againe to Spexico by wagon, so loone as the fleet was gone from S. Iohn de Villua, for Spexico. His poore man my prison fellow of himselfe, & without any request made by me, caused his said friend which came often unto him to the grace of the prison to bring him some & vituals to buye for him two knives which had files in their backs, which files were so well made that they would serue & suffice any prisoner to file off his irons, and of those knives of files hee brought one to me, & told me that hee had caused it to be made for me, & let me haue it at very price it cost him, which was 2. pieces, the value of 8. s. of our mony, which knife when I had it, I was a topfull man, and conueied the same into the foote of my boot, vpon the inside of my left leg, and so within 3. or 4. dayes after that I had thus receiued my knife, I was suddenly called for, & brought before the head Iustice which caused those my irons with the round bolt to be striken off and sent to a Smiths in y<sup>e</sup> towne, where was a new paire of boles made ready for me of another fashion, which had a broad iron barre running between y<sup>e</sup> shackles, & caused my hands to be made fast with a paire of manacles, and so was I presently laid into a wagon all alone, which was there ready to depart with sundry other wagons to the number of 60. towards Mexico, and they all were laden with sundry merchandize which came in the fleet out of Spaine.

The wagon that I was in was foremost of all the companie, and as wee travelled I being alone in the wagon, began to trie if I could plucke my handes out of the manacles, and as God would although it were somewhat painfull for mee, yet my handes were so slender that I could pull them out, and put them in againe, and euer as wee went, when the wagons made most noyse, and the men busied, I would be working to file off my boles, and travelling thus for the space of eight leagues from Vera Cruz, wee came to an high hill, at the ending by of which (as God would) one of the wheelies of the wagon wherein I was, brake, so that by that means the other wagons went a foare, and the wagon man that had charge of me set an Indian Carpenter a worke to mend the wheele: and here at this place they barked at an odde that a Negro woman keepe, and at this place for that the going by of the hill is very steepe, for the space of two leagues and better, they doe alwayes accustome to take the moles of 3. or 4. wagons, and to place them all together for the drawing by of one wagon, & so to come downe againe, and so by others in that order.

which came to me to vnto by t ing my time in t
my selfe into the hills, and two fra
and then couered that night. And t finding the roller.

Wherein is new port of Cau uana, and prisoner, an into Engla

that going on t mountaine wher
was, and my br
were hunting of them to helpe mee that I was thus them to guide me kingly did: and s laps, where I sta that I had quille foes, and so traua one that I had b and one that did me very courteo
adventure to see pay him of his a me which was n
three dayes, and there amongst t
freely gaue vnto from Mexico, a from thence I r till I here at this tow
that in trinita l
were two India
boles which he and every night
which we place with Cypres, s open standing W port of Cadiz leagues, and t without either was, where I n

luis, where the ships was no sooner ely brought before I at was runne along
ed, and brought to changing me that I rning that I know
be that they thought to the further in in the pears that ag, and that in truth then demaunders of my companion, and laid in prison with man, and one of cap e blake Friars at ooke him, and be when they percei
me either of priso
with a sorrowful
the further off, how b, and knowing of contrary to his expe per, yet there was no
had a great paine oreks, where were to be condemned to prison fellowes some
and would spare of re was one of them
prison to him, that as gone from wh
it hurt any requit
prison to bring him fines were so well
of kniues of fles be e it at y very price I had it, I was a my left leg, and so led for, & brought then off and sent to her fashion, which e fast with a paine
e ready to depart
were laden with welld I being es, and as God nder that I could

made most noyse,
is for the spare of which (as God neanes the other
arpenter a woyme
a woman keepe,
two leagues and nce from all toge
pers in that order.
All

All which came very well to passe for as it drew towards night whil most of the Waggoners were gone to vnto vpon their wagons, in this soe I being alone had quickly slied off my bolts, & so espyng my time in the darke of the evening before they returned vnto the bill againe, I conueyed my selfe into the woods there adoyning, carrying my bolts and manacles with me, and a few biscuits, and two small cheeses. And being come into the woods I threw my yrons into a thicke bush, and then covered them with moss and other things, and then hidde for my selfe as I might all that night. And thus by the good prouidence of Almighty God, I was freed from mine yrons all being the collar, that was about my necke, and so got my libertie the second time.

The 7. Chapter.

Wherein is shewed how I escaped to Guatimala, vpon the South sea, and from thence to the port of Cauallios, where I got passage to goe into Spaine, and of our arriuall at the Havana, and our comming to Spaine, where I was againe like to haue bene committed prisoner, and how through the great mercie of God I escaped, and came home in safetie into England, in Februarie 1582.

The next morning (day light being come) I perceiued by the Sunne rising what way to take to escape their handes, for when I fledde, I tooke the way into the woods vpon the left hande: and hauing left that way that went to Mexico vpon my right hand, I thought to keepe my course as the woods and mountaines lay, still direct South as nere as I coulde: by meanes wherof I was sure to conuey my selfe farre enough from that way that went to Mexico. And as I was thus going on in the woods, I saw many great fires made to the North not past a league from the mountaine where I was, and crauailing thus in my bootes with mine yron collar about my necke, and my head and cheeke the very same forenoone I met with a companie of Indians which were hunting of beare for their sustenance, to whom I spake in the Mexicane tongue, and toke them notice that I had of a long time bene kept in prison by the cruel Spaniards, and did desire them to helpe me slied off mine yron collar, which they willingly did, reioycing greatly with mee, that I was thus escaped out of the Spaniards handes. Then I desired that I might haue one of them to guide me out of those desart mountaines towarde the South, which they also most willingly did: and so they brought me to an Indian towne 8. leagues distant from the euere named Shalpa, where I stayed 3. dayes, for that I was somewhat sickely. At which towne (with the golde that I had quiled in my dibler,) I bought me an horse of one of the Indians, which cost me 6. Pefoes, and so crauailing South, within the space of 2. leagues I happened to overtake a gray frier, one that I had bene familiar withall in Mexico, whome then I knowe to be a zealous good man, and one that did much lament the crueltie vsed against vs by the Inquisition, and truly hee vsed me very courteously: and I hauing confidence in him did indeede tell him, that I was minded to adventure to see if I could geet out of the said countrey, if I could finde shipping, and did therefore pray him of his ayde, direction, and aduice heren, which hee faithfully did, not onely in directing me which way was my safest way to crauaile, but hee also of himselfe kept me company for the space of three dayes, and euer as we came to the Indians houses (who vsed and incertained vs well) hee gathered among them in money to the value of 20. Pefoes, which at my departure from him hee freely gaue vnto me. So came I to the citie of Guatimala vpon the South sea, which is distant from Mexico, about 250. leagues, where I stayed 6. dayes, for that my horse was weake. And from thence I crauailed still South and by East seuen dayes journey, passing by certaine Indian townes, until I came to an Indian towne distant from Mexico, direct South 309. leagues. And here at this towne enquiring to goe to the port Cauallios in the Northward sea, it was answered that in crauailing thither I should not come to any towne in 20. or 12. dayes journey: so here I hired two Indians to be my guide, and I bought hennes, and bread to serue vs so long time, and toke with vs stings to kindle fire every night, because of wilde beastes, and to byle two meate: and euery night when we rested, my Indian guides would make two great fires, betwene the which we placed our selues, and my horse. And in the night whil we should here the Lions roare, with Cypers, Dunces, and other beastes, and some of them we should see in the night, which had eyes shining like fire. And crauailing thus for the space of twelue dayes we came at last to the port of Cauallios vpon the East sea, distant from Guatimala South and by East, two hundred leagues, and from Mexico 440. or thereabouts. This is a good harbor for shipping, and is without either taffe of bulwarke. I having dispatched my guides, went downe to the harbor, where I saw certaine ships bounde chiefly with Canary wines, where I spake with one of the

Passers, who asked me what Country man I was, and I told him that I was borne in Granada, & he said, that then I was his councryman. I requir'd him that I might passe home with him in his ship paying for my passage: And he said yea, so that I had a safe conduct, or letter testimonial to the wch, that he might incur no banger; for said he, it may be that you haue killed some man, or be indebted, and would therefore runne away: To that I answered that there was not any such cause. Well, in the end we got to a place, that for 60. pezoes, he would carry me into Spaine: a glad man was I at this good hap, and I quickly sold my horse, & made my provision of hennes and bread to serue me in my passage; And thus within 2. dayes after we set saile, and neuer stayed untill we came to the Hauana, which is distant from port de Cauallios by sea 500. leagues: where we toke the whole flecte of Spaine, which was bounde home from the Indies. And here I was hired for a souldier to serue in the Admirall ship of the same Beete, wherein the General himself went. There landed while I was here 4. ships out of Spaine, being all full of souldiers and ordnance, of which number there were 200. men landed here & 4. great hualt pieces of ordnance, although the castle were before sufficiently poulded: 200. men more were sent to Campeche, & certaine ordnance: 200. to Florida with ordnance, And 100. lastly to S. John de Villu. As for ordnance there they haue sufficient, and of the very same which was ours, which we had in the Iesus, and those others which we had planted in the place, where the Vice Roy betrayed M. Hawkins our general, as hath bene declared. The sending of those souldiers to euery of those places, and the strengthening of them, was done by commandment from the king of Spaine, who wrote also by them to the general of his flecte, giuing him in charge so to doe, as also directing him what course he should keepe in his coming home into Spaine, charging him at any hand not to come nigh to the ples of Azores, but to keepe his course more to the Northward, aduertising him withall, what number and power of French ships of warre, and other, Don Anthony had at that time at the Tercera, & ples aforesaid: which the general of the flecte well considering, and what great store of riches he had in bring home with him into Spaine, did in all very dutifully obserue and obey: for in truth he had in his said flecte 37. saile of ships, and in euery of them there was as good as 30. pipes of siluer one with another, besides great store of gold, Cochenlio, sugars, hides, and Cana Fistula, with other Apothecarie drugs. This our general, who was called Don Pedro de Gusman, did proudly take order for, for their mozt strength and defence, if neede should be to the vttermozt of his power, and commanded vpon paine of death, that neither passenger nor souldier should come aboard without his command and harquebulle, with shot and powder, to the end that they might be the better able to encounter the flecte of Don Anthony, if they should hap to meete with them, or any of them: and euer as the weather was faire, the said general would himselfe come aboard from one ship to another, to see that euery man had his full provision according to the commandment giuen. Yet to speake truly what I thinke, too good tall ships of warre would haue made a foule spoile amongst them. For in all this fleet there were not any that were strong and warlike appointed, sauing onely the Admirall, and Vice Admirall: And againe ouer and besides the weakenes and the ill furnishing of the rest, they were all so deeply laden, that they had not bene able (if they had bene charged) to haue held out any long fight. Well, thus we set saile, & had a very ill passage home, & weather was so contrary. We kept our course in manner Northward, and brought our selues to the height of 42. degrees of latitude, so be sure not to meete with Don Anthony his flecte, and were vpon our waye from the 4. of June, until the 10. of September, & neuer saw land til we fell with the Arenas Gordas had by S. Lucar. And there was an order taken that none should go on shore until he had licence: as for me, I was knowne by one in the ship, who told the Master that I was an Englishman, which (as God would) was my good hap to heare: for if I had not heard it, it had cost me my life. Notwithstanding, I would not take any knowledge of it, and seemed to be merry, & pleased that we were all come so well in safetie. Wherewith after licence came that we should goe on shore, and I pressed to be gone with the first boat, the wch came vnto me and said, Sirra, you must goe with me to Siuil by water: I knew his meaning well enough, & that he ment there to offer me vp as a sacrifice to his Holy house. For the ignorant zeale of a number of these superstitious Spaniards is such, that they thinke, that they haue done God good seruice, when they haue brought a Lutheran heretike to the fire to be burnt: For so do they account of vs. Well, I perceiving all this,ooke vpon me not to suspect any thing, but was still iocund and merry: to witte, I knew to it shode me vpon to this for my selfe. And so waoping my time when the Master was in his cabin asleepe, I romieped my selfe secretly vnto me by the shouders into the ship boate, and made no stay but cut the rope where withall she was moored, and so by the cable haled on shore, where I lepe on land & let the boate go whither it would. Thus by the helpe of God I escaped that day, & then neuer staid at S. Lucar, but went all night by the way which I had seene other take toward Siuil: so that the next morning I which was the

not for my life on in 4. dayes after I Englishman that to 60. I might within doores at
to get me new clo
and bought me a be overbolde to b S. Lucar bound fo that I might ha those which Cay
haue him crea sed
I came. Which me without wa where I put my iorca, and commit
the one of London
for a faire wind, I had bene 2. pee
and see my friend I toke shipping,
uing sustained m
came home to thi huarie in the ship

The voy

nia i

A

Rober Engl
in a within son remained 15 within 4. dayes a and from thence r ed to one Iohn F
pices married wi
one whole peece o
to see the order o flecte the flectes o flecte, pearles, p
determine with him where such great had I. Field (when himself, with his cause of the King
the late Tomson cellary provision
all ready to depa cedd til further Tomson and his
and seeing the part, determined Lucar, and there
make stay at the next

next morning I came to Siuill, and sought me out a workemaster, that I mighte fall to my science, which was weauing of cassataes, and being incertained I set my selfe close to my worke, and durst not for my life once to stirre abroad for feare of being knowen, and being thus at my worke, within 4. dayes after I heard one of my felowes say, that he heard there was great inquirie made for an Englishman that came home in the fleete: what an heretique Lutheran (quoth I) was it, I would to God I might knowe him, surely I would present him to the Holy house. And thus I kept still within doores at my worke, and fained my selfe not well at ease, & that I would labor as I might to get me new clothes. And continuing thus for the space of 3. moneths I called for my wages, and bought me all things newe, different from the apparell that I did weare at sea, and yet durst not be overdole to walke abroad: and after vnderstanding that there were certaine English ships at S. Lucar bound for England, I tooke a boate and went aboard one of them, and desired the Master that I mighte haue passage with him to goe into England, and told him secretly that I was one of those which Captaine Hawkins did set on shoare in the Indies: he very courteously prayed mee to haue him excused, for he durst not meddle with me, & prayed mee therefore to returne from tobenee I came. Which when I perceiued, with a sojoyfull heart God knoweth I tooke my leaue of him, not without waerie cheekes. And then I went to S. Mary port, which is 3. leagues from S. Lucar, where I put my selfe to be a souldier to go in the k. of Spaines Gallies, which were bound for Maiorca, and comming thither in the end of 3. Christmas holypayes, I found there 2. English ships, the one of London, and the other of the West country, which were ready freighted and staped but for a faire wind. To the head of the one, which was of the West country went I, and told him that I had bene 2. yeeres in Spaine to learne the language, and that I was nowe desirous to go home and see my friends, for that I lacked maintenance: and so hauing agreed with him for my passage I tooke shipping. And thus through the prouidence of Almighty God, after 16. yeeres absence, hauing sustained many and sunny great troubles and miseries, as by this discourse appeareth, I came home to this my natieue countrey of England, in the yeere 1582. in the the moneth of February in the shippe called the Landret, and arrived at Poole.

The voyage of Robert Tomson marchant, into Noua Hispania in the yere 1555. With diuers obseruations concerning the state of the Countrey: And certaine accidents touching himselfe.

Robert Tomson borne in the towne of Andouer in Hampshire, begun his trauaille out of England in An. 1553. in the moneth of March, who departing out of the citie of Bristol in a good ship called the Barke yong, in companie of other marchants of the saide citie, within 8. dayes after arrived at Lisbon in Portugal, where the said Robert Tomson remained 15. dayes, at the end of which he shipped himselfe for Spaine in the said shippe, and within 4. dayes arrived in the bay of Cadiz in Andalusia, which is vnder the kingdom of Spaine, and from thence trauailed by to the Citie of Siuill by land, which is 20. leagues, and there he repaired to one Iohn Fields house an English marchant, who had dwelt in the said citie of Siuill 18. or 20. yeeres married with wife and children: In whose house the said Tomson remained by the space of one whole yeere or there about, for 2. causes: The one to learne the Castilian tongue, The other to see the orders of the countrey, and the customes of the people. At the ende of which time hauing seene the fleetes of ships come out of the Indies to that citie, with such great quantitie of gold and silver, pearles, precious stones, sugar, hides, ginger, and diuers other riche commodities, hee did determine with himselfe to seeke meanes & opportunitie to passe ouer to see that rich countrey from whence such great quantitie of rich commodities came. And it fel out that within short time after the said Field (where the said Tomson was lodged) did determine to passe ouer into the West Indies himselfe, with his wife, children & familie, and at the request of the said Tomson, he purchased a licence of the King to passe into the Indies, for himselfe, his wife & children, & among them also for the said Tomson to passe with them: so that presently they made preparation of victual & other necessary prouision for the voyage. But the ships which were prepared to performe the voyage being all ready to depart, vpon certaine considerations by the kings commandement were stayed & arrested till further should be knowen of the kings pleasure. Whereupon the said Iohn Field, with R. Tomson and his company being departed out of Siuill & come downe to S. Lucar 15. leagues off, and seeing the stay made vpon the ships of the said fleete, & being not assured when they would depart, determined to shippe themselves for the ples of the Canaries, which is 250. leagues from S. Lucar, and there to stay till the said fleete would come thither: for that is continually their port to make stay at five or eight dayes, to take fresh water, bread, flesh, and other necessaries.

So that in the moneth of February in An. 1553. the said Rob. Tomson with the said John Field and his company, shipped themselves out of the towne of S. Lucar in a caruel of the citie of Cadiz, and within 6. dayes they arrived at the port of the Grand Canaria, where at our coming the ship that rode in the said port beganne to cry out of all measure with loud voyces, in so much that the Caste which stood fast by began to shooe at vs, and shot 6. or 8. shot at vs, and strooke down our maine mast, before we could hoist out our boate to go on land, to know what the cause of the shooting was, seeing that we were Spanish ships, and coming into his countrey. So that being on land & complaining of the wrong and damage done unto vs: they and wether, that they had thought we had bene French rowers, that had come into the said port, to do some harme to the shippes that were there. For that 8. dayes past, there went out of the said port a caruel much like unto ours, laden with sugars and other merchandise for Spaine, and on the other side of the point of the said Island, met with a Frenchman of warre, who took the said caruel, & unladed out of her into the said Frenchship, both men & goods. And being demanded of the said Spaniards what other shippes remained in the port whence they came, they answered that there remained divers other shippes, and one laden with sugars (as they were) & ready to depart for Spaine, w<sup>ch</sup> the which nettes the Frenchmen put 30. tall men of their ship wel appointed, into the said caruel that they had taken, and sent her backe againe to the said port from whence she had departed the day before. And somewhat late towards the evening came into the port, not the wing past 3. or 4. men, and so came to an ancre hard by the other shippes that were in the said port, & being seene by the castle & by the said shippes, they made no reckoning of her, because they knew her, and thinking that she had found contrary winds at the sea, or had forgot some thing behinde them, they had returned backe againe for the same, & so made no account of her, but let her alone riding quietly among the other shippes in the said port: So that about midnight the said caruel with the Frenchmen in her, went aboard the other ship that lay hard by laden with sugars, and moue the Spaniards that were in her vnder hatches, and presently let slip her cables and ancre, and set saile and carried her cleane away, & after this foze deieined them: And they thinking or fearing that we were the like, did shooe at vs as they did. This being past, the next day after our arrival in the said port, we did vnbark our selues and went on lande by the citie of head towne of the great Canaria, where we remained 18. or 20. dayes: and there found certaine Englishmen marchants seruants of one Anthony Hickman & Edward Castellin, marchants of the citie of London, that lay there in craque, of whom we received great courtesie and much good cheere. After the which 20. dayes being past, in the which we had seene the countrey, the people, and the disposition thereof, we departed from thence, and passed to the next yle of the Canaries 18. leagues off, called Teneriffe, & being come on land, went by to the citie called the La Laguna, where we remained 7. moeths, attending the coming of the whole flecte: which in the ende came, and there hauing taken that which they had neede off, we shipped our selues in a ship of Cadiz, being one of the said flecte, which was belonging to an Englishman married in the citie of Cales in Spaine, whose name was John Sweeting, and came in the saide ship for captaine also an Englishman married in Cadiz, & sonne in law to the saide John Sweeting, whose name was Leonard Chilton, and also came in the saide ship another Englishman which had bene a marchant of the citie of Exeter, one of 50. yeeres or there about, whose name was Raph Sarrc. So that we departed from the said Islands in the moneth of October the foresaid yeere 8. shippes in our company, and so directed our course towards the bay of newe Spaine, and by the way towards the Island of S. Domingo, otherwile called Hispaniola. So that within 42. dayes after we departed from the yles of Canaries, we arrived with our ship at the port of S. Domingo, & went in ouer the barre where our ship knocked her keele at her entrie: and there our ship rid before the towne, where we went on land and refreshed our selues 16. dayes, where we found no bread made of wheate, but biskeit brought out of Spaine, and out of the bay of Mexico: for the countrey it selfe doeth yeeld no kinde of graine to make bread withall. But the bread they make there is certaine cakes made of rootes, called Cassaua, which is something substantiall, but it hath but an vnflauery taste in the eating thereof. Flesh of beefe and mutton they haue great store: for there are men that hath 10000. head of caetel, of oxen, bulles and hine, which they do keepe onely for the hides, for the quantitie of flesh is so great, that they are not able to spend the sumbert part. Doggs flesh is there good store, very sweete & sauery, and so wholesome, that they giue it to sicke folkes to eat in stead of beemes and capons: although they haue good store of poultre of that sort, as also of Guinycocks & Guiny hens. At the time of our being there, the citie of S. Domingo was not of about 500. householdes of Spaniards, but of the Indians dwelling in the suburbs there were more. The countrey is most part of the yere very hot, & very full of a kind of flies or gnats with long bills, which do picke & molest the people very much in the night when they are asleepe, in picking their faces & hands, and other parts parts of their bodies of that manner which they use to that it would make

3. or 4. inches of and hine, & finger,
ners there is fo
in that place, is bl like money of g
they should haue g
gods of stuer, and were comming fr ember, which was the day of Mexicc
we came within charge: And betw from Terra Flori should be cast by the winde and sea
that were cogethe company being o
as we did, but we John de Vlna, bu
of that ship 75. ye meanes to saue th
present the yere hould be. The tw might, by sterou
the were a fashio
by feare of sinkin
would not serue.
piece, which earl God there was o
great fogge, wh
great experience,
them for the loue
our foresaile as of the bid: A
of sea, strooke in there was no ho
nery wife her to Almighty G
when all hope w within 2. houres man, woman & c
last person that of the ship into ch was a good whi
of her clothes ro
fill her childre w childre would not childre so fall vnt our shippe and I
when we left it.
Newe Spaine,
ther, in the night
little light, muc sancto, and fald

he said John Field
the citie of Cadiz, comming the ship
so much that the stroke doth our cause of the sho-
do that being on they had thought to the shippes that like unto ours, la-
point of the said Iof her into the said
other shippes remai-
the shippes, and one was the French had taken, and some and somewhat late
to an ancre hard shippes, they made stray winds at the
the same, & so made said port: So that ship that lay hard to presently let slip it deteined them:
This being past,
went on lande by to S: and there found Castelin, mar-
great courtesie and
reue the country,
the next yle of the itie called the La
leete: which in the selues in a ship of ried in the citie of capitaine also an name was Leo-
nene a marchant of
ere. So that wee shippes in our compa-
to wardes the Jester wee departed
went in ouer the ye to towne, where made of wheate, but like doeth yeeld no
fine cakes made of
in lauerie (as in are men that hath wides, for the quan-
tish is there good in stead of hennes mycocks & Guiny 100. houtholds of they is most part no yricke & molest & hands, and other parts

parts of their bootes & we encounter, & make them to swell wondrously. Also there is another kinde of small worme which creepeth into the soles of mens feete & especially of y<sup>e</sup> blacke Spoozes & children which use to go barefoot, and maketh their feete to grow as big as a rians head, & doth so ake that it maketh them to run mad. They haue no remedy for the same, but to open y<sup>e</sup> flesh sometimes 3. or 4. inches & so digge them out. The countrey yeeldeth great store of sugar, sides of oxen, buls and hie, ginger, Cana fistula & Salsa perilliamines of silver & gold there are none, but in some riuers there is found some small quantitie of gold. The principall comode that they do craque withall in that place, is black money made of copper & brass: and wherthey say they do use noe for that they take money of golde and silver to trade withall out of the other partes of India, but because if they should haue good moile, the marchants that deale with them in trade, would carry away their gold & silver, and let the countrey commodities lie still. And thus much for S. Domingo. So wee were comming fro the yles of Canaries to S. Domingo, and there staying until the month of December, which was 3. moneths. About the beginning of January we departed thence to wardes the bay of Mexico and new Spaine, towarde which we set our course, and so sailed 24. dayes till we came within 15. leagues of S. John de Villua, which was the port of Mexico of our right distance: And being so neere our said port, there rose a storme of northerly winds, which came off from Terra Florida, which caused vs to cast about into the sea againe, for feare least that night we should be cast vpon the shoare before day wd breake, & so put our selues in danger of casting away: the winde and sea grew so foule and strong, that within 2. houres after the storme began, 8. shippes that were together were so dispersed, that we could not see one another. One of the shippes of our company being of the burthen of 500. tunne called y<sup>e</sup> hulke of Carion, would not cast about to sea as we did, but went that night with the land, thinking in the morning to purchase the port of S.
John de Villua, but missing the port went with the shoare & was cast away. There were boorded of that ship 75. persons, men women and children, and 64. were saued that could swimme, and had meanes to saue themselves: among those that perished in that ship, was a gentleman who had bin present the yere before in S. Domingo, his wife and 4. daughters with the rest of his seruants and household. We with y<sup>e</sup> other 7. shippes cast about into the sea, the storme during 10. dayes with great might, boisterous winds, fogs & raine: our ship being old & weak was so tossed, that she opened at the keene a fathom vnder water, & the best remedy we had was to stop it wth beds & pilobiers, and for feare of sinking we thre wth lightened into the sea all the goods we had or could come by: but that would not serue. Then we cut our maine mast & thre we all our ordnance into the sea sauing one piece, which early in a morning when we thought we should haue sunke, we shot off, & as pleased God there was one of the shippes of our company nere vnto vs, which we saw not by meanes of the great fogge, which hearing the sound of the peece, & vnderstanding some of the company to be in great extremite, began to make to wards vs, & when they came within hearing of vs, we desired them for y<sup>e</sup> loue of God to helpe to saue vs, for that we were all like to perish. They willed vs to hoist our foresaile as much as we could & make to wards them, for they would doe their best to saue vs, and so we did: And we had no sooner hoisted our foresaile, but there came a gale of winde & a peece of sea stroke in the foresaile, and carried saile and maste all ouerboord, so that then wee thought there was no hope of life. And then we beganne to embrace one another, euery man his friends, euery wife her husbande, and the children their fathers and mothers, committing our soules to Almighty God, thinking neuer to escape aliuie: yet it pleased God in the time of most neede when all hope was past, to asse vs with his helping hand, & caused the wind a litle to cease, so that within 2. houres after, the other ship was able to come aboard vs, & tooke into her with her boare man, woman & child, naked without hose or shoe vpon many of our feete. I do remember that the last person that came out of the ship into the boate, was a woman blacke Spooze, who leaping out of the ship into the boate with a yong sucking child in her armes, lepe to thort and fell into the sea and was a good while vnder the water before the boate could come to rescue her, and with the hpyding of her clothes rose aboue water againe, and was caught by the coat & pulled into the boate hauing still her child vnder her arme, both of them halfe drowned, and yet her naturall loue towards her child would not let her let the child goe. And when she came aboarde the boate, she helde her child so fast vnder her arme still, that two men were scant able to get it out. So we departed out of our shippe and left it in the sea: it was worth foure hundred and threescore, shippes and goods when we left it. And within thre dayes after wee arrived at our port of S. John de Villua in Newe Spaine. I doe remember that in the great and boisterous storme of this foule weather, in the night, there came vpon the toppe of our maine parte and maine maste, a certaine little light, much like vnto the light of a little candle, which the Spaniards called the Corpus sancto, and saide it was saint Elmo, towhome they take to be the aduocate of Seailers. At the which

As the Spaniards fell downe upon their knees and worshipped it, and praying God and saint Elmo to cease the tempest, and save them from the perill that they were in, with promising him that at their coming on lande, they would repair unto his Chappell, and there cause Masses to be saide, and offer rekenonies to be done. The Priests cast reliques into the sea, to cause the sea to be still, and likewise saide Gospels, with other crossings and ceremonies upon the sea to make the storme to cease: which (as they said) did much good to weaken the furie of the storme. But I could not perceive it, nor gaue no credite to it, till it pleased God to sende vs the remede and deliuered vs from the rage of the same. His Name be praised therefore. This light continued, a boorde our shippe about 3. houres, flying from masse to masse, and from topppe to topppe: and sometime it would be in ebow of three places at once. I informed my selfe of learned men afterward what that light should be, and they saide, that it was but a congelation of the winde and vapours of the sea congelated with the extremitie of the weather, and so flying in the winde, many times doeth chance to be in the masts and sprowes of the shippes that are at sea in foule weather. And in truethe I do take it to be so: for that I have seene the like in other shippes at sea, and in sunny shippes at once. By this men may see how the Papists are giuen to beleue and worship such vaine things, and toyes, as God, to whome all honour doth appertaine, and in their needs and necessities doe let to call vpon the liuing God, who is the giuer all good things.

The 16. of Apriill in An. 1556. we arrived at the port of S. Iohn de Villua in the west Spaine, very naked & distressed of apparel, & all other things, by meanes of the losse of our foyle said ship & goods, and from thence we went to the new towne called Vera cruz, 5. leagues from the said port of S. Iohn de Villua, marching still by y sea side, where we found lying vpon the sands great quantitie of mightie great trees with roces & al some of them of 4. 5. & 6. cart load by our estimation, which as the people told vs, were in the great stormy weather which we dured at sea, rooted out of y ground in Terra Florida, right against that place, which is 300. leagues ouer by sea, and brought thither. So that we came to the said towne of Vera cruz, where we remained a moneth; and there the said Iohn Field chanced to meet with an old friend of his acquaintance in Spaine, called Gonçalo Ruiz de Cordoua, a very riche man of the saide towne of Vera cruz: who hearing of his coming thither with his wife & family, and of his misfortune by sea, came vnto him & receiued him and al his household into his house, & kept vs there a whole moneth, making vs very good chere, & giuing vs good intertainment, & also gaue vs that were in al 8. persons of the said I. Fields house, double apparel new out of the shop of very good cloth, coates, cloakes, hose, shirts, smocks, gownes for the women, hose, shoes, and al other necessary apparel, and for our way by to the citie of Mexico, horse, molyes, & men, & money in our purses for the expences by the way, which by our account might amount vnto the summe of 400. crownes. So that after we were entered 2. dayes iourney into the countrey, I the said Robert Tomson fel sicke of an ague, so that the next day I was not able to ste on my horse, but was faaine to be carried vpon Indians backs, from thence to Mexico, And when we came within half a dayes iourney of the citie of Mexico, the said I. Field also fel sicke, and within 3. dayes after we arrived at the said citie, he died: And presently sickened one of his children, and 2. more of his household peopple, and within 8. dayes died. So that within 10. dayes after we arrived at the citie of Mexico, of 8. persons that were of vs, of y said company, there remained but 4. of vs a liue. I the said Tomson at the point of death of the sicknes that I got vpon the way, which continued with me the space of 6. moneths. At the end of which time it pleased almighty God to restore me my health againe, although weak & greatly disabled. And being some thing strong, I procured to seeke meanes to liue, & to seeke a way how to profit my self in y countrey, seeing it had pleased God to send vs thither in safetie. Then by friendship of one Th. Blake a Scottish man borne, who had dwelt & had bene married in the said citie about 20. yeeres before I came to the saide Citie, I was preferred to the seruice of a gentleman a Spaniard dwelling there, a man of great wealth, and one of the first conquerers of the saide citie, whose name was Gonçalo Serezo, with whom I dwelt 2. moneths & a half. At the end of which I was maliciously accused by the holy booke for matters of religion, & so apprehended and carried to prison, where I lay close prisoner 7. moneths, without speaking to any creature, but to y Jailer that kept the said prison, when he brought me my meate & drinke. In the meane time was brought into the said prison one Augustin Boacio an Italian of Genoua also for matters of religion, who was taken at Sacatecas 80. leagues to the Southeastward of the citie of Mexico: At the ende of the sayde seuen moneths, wee were both carried to the high Church of Mexico, to doe open penance vpon an high Scaffold, made before the high Altar, vpon a Sunday, in the presence of a very great number of people, who were at the least five or six thousande. For there were that came one hundredeth mile off, to see the sayde Auto (as they call it) so that there were neuer none before, that had done the like in the saide saide Countrey, of any such thinge backe, which is by our a mans behauiour. S. Andrew. The common people stand, that we too we had bene more than people children began to they neuer late to us so much cruel persons of such a great pittie that v high Church, and the people, vntill and putting vs in vpon vs, for that faith of the Catho to rectie in this p ches, euery man that was that e his life, and put it ed and lost. And bertie. And for to done from Me for Spaine, which wickers, the sp all into the Inquisit should full our p ches giuen. For was 65. leagues carried for Spaine himselfe in Spair get, when we we the Azores: the si meanes to get hi ly got him to the ringall, in the w ended his life in the Spaine, and was close prison, till I ly put out of pris an English merca Citie of Mexico had got great fur for Spaine, and b name was Mari with her. The mels of great price put their trust in the world, should could attaine bu set by in the high ble & custome, w Church doct rat diuers others of d And because it th

God and saint El-peth promising him these cause Spallers
 the sea, to cause the ties upon the sea to curie of the Ropine, be vs the remedie
 his light continued, to coppe: and some earned men after-n of the winde and in the winde, many in foule weather,
 the sea, and in sunny towship such vaine
 ede and necessities

ne the Spaine, very el said ship & goods,
 the said port of S.
 great quantitie of timation, which as oted out of y<sup>e</sup> growin id brought thither,
 ; and there the said
 lla. Gonçalo Ru-of his coming thi-ued him and all his o cheere, & giving elds house, double
 s. gownes for the
 of Mexico, hope, ur accompt might
 s journey into the
 was not able to lie
 ico. And when we
 cke, and with 3,
 is children, and 2,
 as after we arrived
 ained but 4, of vs
 e way, which ch-they God to restore g strong, I procureeing it had plea-
 y man boque, who the saide Citie, I of great wealth, 20, with whom the holy house for oner 7. months,
 e brought me my n Boacio an Ita-
 o. leagues to the s, wee were both de, made before ole, who were at f, to see the layde
 the like in the saide

saide Countrey, nor could not tell what Lutheranes were, nor what it meant; for they neuer heard of any such thing before. We were brought into the Church, every one with a S. Benito upon his backe, which is halfe a part of yellow cloth, with a hole to put in a mans head in the midst, and call over a mans beade: both flaps hang one before, and an other behinde, and in the midst of euery flap, a S. Andrewes crosse, made of red cloth, so wed on upon the same, and that is called S. Benito.
 The common people, before they sawe the penitents come into the Church, were given to understand, that we were Heretikes, Infidels, and people that did despise God, and his workes, and that we had bene more like devils then men, and thought we had had the fauour of some monisters, or heathen people. And when they saw vs come into the Church in our plaiers coates, the women & children began to cry out, and made such a noise, that it was strange to see and heare, saying, that they neuer sawe goodlier men in all their liues, and that it was not possible that there could be in vs so much euil, as was reported of vs, and that we were more like Angels among men, then such persons of such euil religion as by the priests and Frickers we were reported to be, and that it was great pittie that we should be so used for so smal an offence. So that being brought into the saide high Church, and set vpon the stalfold which was made before the high altar, in the presence of al the people, vntill high Masse was done, and the sermon made by a Frier, concerning our matter, and putting vs in all the disgrace they coult, to cause the people not to take so much compassion vpon vs, for that we were Heretikes, and people that were seduced of the deuill, and forsaken the faith of the Catholike Church of Rome, with diuers other repporchful wordes, which were too long to recite in this place. High Masse & sermon being done, our offences, as they called them, were recorded, euery man what he had said and don, and presently was the sentence pronounced against vs.
 That was, that the said Augustine Boacio was condemned to weare his S. Benito all the daies of his life, and put into perpetual prison, where he should fulfil the same, and all his goods confiscated and lost. And I the said Tomson to weare the S. Benito for 3. yeres, and then to be set at libertie. And for the accomplishing of this sentence, or condemnation, we must be presently sent downe from Mexico, to Vera Cruz, and from thence to S. Iohn de Villua, and there to be shipped for Spaine, which was 65. leagues by land, with strait commandement, that vpon paine of 1000. wickets, the Spallers euery one should looke strailly vnto vs, and carpe vs to Spaine, and deliuer vs into the Inquisitors of the Holy house of Siuill, that they should put vs in the places, where we should fulfil our penances that the Archbishop of Mexico had enjoyned vnto vs, by his sentence there giuen, for performance of the which, we were sent downe from Mexico, to the sea side, which was 65. leagues, with fetters vpon our feete, and there deliuered to the Spallers of the ships, to be caried for Spaine, as before is said. And it was so, that the Italian fearing, that if he had presented himselfe in Spaine before the Inquisitors, that they woulde haue burned him, to prevent that danger, when we were coming homeward, & were arrived at the Island of Terceira, one of the Isles of the Azores: the first night that we came into the said port to an anker, about midnight he found the men, to get him naked out of the ship into the sea, and swamme naked a shoare, and so presently got him to the further side of the Island, where he found a little Canuel ready to depart for Por-tingall, in the which he came to Lisbon, and passed into France, and so into England, where he ended his life in the Citie of London. And I for my part kept still aboard the ship, and came into Spaine, and was deliuered to the Inquisitors of the Holy house of Siuill, where they kept me in close prison, till I had fulfilled the 3. yeres of my penance, which time being expired, I was freely put out of prison, and set at libertie, and being in the citie of Siuill a calser of one Hugh Typton, an English merchant of great doing, by the space of one yere, it fortuned that there came out of the Citie of Mexico, a Spaniard, called Iohn de la Barrera, that had bene long time in the Indias, and had got great summes of gold and silver, and with one only daughter shipped himselfe for to come for Spaine, and by the way chanced to die, and gaue all that he had vnto his onely daughter, whose name was Marie de la Barrera, and being arrived at the Citie of Siuill, it was my chance to marry with her. The marriage was worth to me 2500. pounds in bars of golde and silver, besides seuers of great price. This I thought good to speake of, to shewe the goodnes of God to all them that put their trust in him, that I being brought out of the Indias, in such great miserie and infamie to the world, should be poynted at Gods hande in one moment, of more then in all my life before. I could attaine vnto by my owne labour. After we departed from Mexico, our S. Benitos were set by in the high Church of the saide Citie, with our names written in the same, according to their use & custome, which is and shall be a monument and a remembrance of vs, as long as the Romish Church doeth raigne in that Countrey. The same haue bene seene since by one Iohn Chilton, and diuers others of our nation, which were left in that Countrey long since, by sir Iohn Hawkins.
 And because it shall be knowne wherfore it was that I was so punished by the Clergies hand, as before

before is mentioned, I will in these wordes declare the same.

It is so, that being in Mexico, at the table, among many principal people at dinner, they began to inquire of me being an Englishman, whether it were true, that in England they had overthrowen all their Churches, and houses of religion, and that all the images of the saints, of heauen they were in them, were thowen downe and broken, and burned, and in some places stoned high maies with them, and denied their obedience to the Pope of Rome, as they had beene certified out of Spaine, by their friends, To whom I made answer, that it was so, that in deede they had in England put downe all the Religious houses of Friars, and Monks, that were in England, and the images that were in their churches, & other places, were taken away, & vsed there no more, for that (as they say) by making of them, and putting of them where they were adored, was cleane contrary to the expresse commandement of Almighty God, Thou shalt not make to thy selfe any graven image, &c. & that for this cause they thought it not lawfull that they should stand in the church, which is the house of adoration. One that was at the declaring of these wordes, who was my Spader, Gonfalo Cerefo answered and said, if it were against the commandement of God, to haue images in the churches, that then he had spent a great deale of money in vaine, for that a perres past, he had made in this monastery of Santo Domingo, in this city of Mexico, an image of our Lady of pure silver & gold, with pearles & pretious stones, which cost him 7000, & odde pesos, & euery peso is 6, s. 8. d. of our money, which in deede was true, for that I haue seene it many times, my selfe where it stands. At the table was an other gentle man, who presuming to defende the cause, moe then any other that was there, said, that they knew wel ynough that they were made but of stocks & stones, & that to them was no worship giuen, but that there was a certaine veneration due vnto them, after they were set up in the church, & that they were set there to a good intentione one, for that they were bookes for the simple people, to make them vnderstand the glozy of the saints that were in heauen, & a shewe of them, to put vs in remembrance to cal vpon them, to be our intercessors vnto God for vs, for that we are such miserable sinners, that we are not worthy to appeare before God, & that by our deuotion to saints in heauen, they may obtaine at Gods handes the sooner, the thing that we demand of him. As for example, said he, imagin that a subiect hath offended his king vpon this earth, in any kind of respect, is it for the partie to go boldly to the king in person, & to demand pardon for his offences: no saith he, by presumption were to great, & possibly he might be repulled, & haue a great rebuke for his labour. Better it is for such a person to seeke some priuate man neere the king in his Court, & make him acquainted with his matter, and let him be a Mediator to his Maieste, for him, & for the matter he hath to do with him, and so might he the better come to his purpose, & obtaine the thing which he doeth demande: euen so saith he, it is with God & his saints in heauen, for we are wretched sinners, and not worthy to appeare, nor present our selues before the Maieste of God, to demand of him the thing that we haue neede of: therefore thou hast neede to be deuout, and haue deuotion to the mother of God, and the saints of heauen, to be intercessors to God for thee, & so maist thou the better obtaine of God the thing that thou doest demand. To this I answered, & saide, first, as touching the comparison you made of the intercessors to the king, how necellare they were, I would but aske you this question. Set the case that this king you speake of, if he be so merciful, as when he knoweth that one, or any of his subiects hath offended him, he send for him to his owne towne, or to his owne house, or place, & say vnto him, come hither, I knowe that thou hast offended many lawes, if thou doest knowe thereof, & doest repent thee of the same, with full intent to offend no more, I will forgive thy trespassse, & remember it no more: said I, if this be done by the kings owne person, what then hath this man neede to go seeke friendship at any of the kings priuate seruants handes, but goe to the principal, seeing that he is readier to forgive thee, when thou art to demand forgiveness at his handes. Euen so is it with our gracious God, who calleth & crieth out vnto vs throughout all the world, by the mouth of his Prophets, Apostles, & by his owne mouth, saith, Come vnto me all ye that labour, & are ouer laden, & I will refresh you, besides 1000, other offers & proffers which be doth make vnto vs in his holy Scriptures. What then haue we neede of the saints helpe that are in heauen, whereas the Lord himselfe doth so freely offer himselfe vnto vs: At which sayings, many of the hearers were assuied, & said, that by that reason, I would giue to vnderstand, that the inuocation of saints was to be disallowed, & by the lawes of God not commanded. I answered, that they were not my wordes, but the wordes of God himselfe: looke into the scriptures your self, & you shal to find it. The talke was perceaued to be prejudiciall to the Romish doctrine, & therefore it was commanded to be no more entreated of, & al remained without giuing vpon, had it not bene for a villanous Portingall that was in the company, who said, Basta fer Ingles para saber todo esto y mas: who the next day, without imparting any thing to any body, went to the Bishop of Mexico, and his Promitor, & saide, that in a place where he had bene the day before, was an Englishman, who of Quines, vpon none other thing, as how to speake of S. Iohn de Villu, of not aboute a bow there was but one ward, is made by wherefore the great come and goe al alone, and an other whereby winds, is all away to the l in nothing else, de Countrey: al these great quantitie of go by into the wil from this poze the, all you come v wood, till you come without water, T for the folke of the the owners and the with also in a very blomen from the le to wne also is subie who we with those r not knewe the dang fruite of the Count cheit first comming. Passe a vates is the Rinconado, where the Indians betwix that and V you do begin to em in the world, & the de los Angelos, w of 600, household, come thorough wa Riuers of fresh wa gelos, to Mexico, city in my time, of the Suburbs of thic of Mexico, is 6 with in the midst o lake of standing w of the city, are man also with great m of lake of standing ter doth proceede themselves togeth ground, & in the m of in the midst of the not halfe finished, houses where Mus Cicropes that th Cicrop a gentler out against the fa inner, they began

y had ouerthow
es of beauen the oned high waies
ne certified out of they had in Eng
ngland, and the no moze; for that cleane contrary
selfe any grauen
be church, which was my Spatter, to haue images
peres past, he had our Lady of pure
every yeto is 6, mp selfe whete it more then any o
orks & stones, &
unto them, after for that they were to were in heauen,
toys unto God for oize God, & that he thing that wee
ing upon p earth,
emand pardon for ed, & haue a great meere the King in his Spacitie, for his purpose, & ob
aintes in heauen,
to fore the Spacitie
e to be deuout,
to God for the,
his J and were, &
to necessarie they
of, if he be lo mer
end for him to his
that thou halt of
sh full intent to of done by the kings king's puiat de
en thou art to de y & crieth out w
ton mouth, saith, 1000, other of
haue we need of himselfe unto vs?
I would giue to God not consumm
oke into the scrip
the Romish doo
oughte upon, ha
r Ingles para la
body, went to the
we say before, was an

an Englishman, who had said, that there was no neede of sautes in p church, nor of any inuocation of Saints, vpon whose denomination I was apprehended for the same wordes here repeated, and none other thing, and thereupon was vled, as before is written.

Now to speake somewhat of the description of the countrey, you shall vnderstande, that the port of St. Iohn de Villua, is a very litle Island lott by the water side, the breadth is longed part the rest of it about a bowe shoote ouer, and standeth within two furlongs of the firme land. In my time there was but one house, and a litle Chappell to say Masse in: in all the Island, the side to the land wards, is made by mans hands, with free stone and grauel, and is 4. fathom deepe downe right, wherfoze the great ships that come in there, doe ride so nere the shoare of the Island, that you may come and goe aland vpon their beake noses. They vde to put great chaines of yron in at their halles, and an auker to the landward, and all litle ynough to moze well their shippes for feare of the wytherly winds, which come off the coast of Florida, that sometimes haue caried ships, and hoults, & all a way to the shoare. The king was wont to haue 20. great mighty Negroes, who did serue for nothing else, but onely to repaire the said Island, where the soule weaether doth hurt it. The Countrey al there about, is very plaine ground, & a mile from the sea side a great wildernes, with great quantitie of red Dzeere in the same, so that when the marriuers of the ships are disposed, they go by into the wildernes, & do kil of the same, & bringeth them aboord to eate, for their recreation.

From this port to the next towne, which is called Vera Cruz, are 5. leagues almost by the sea side, if you come within one league of the place, and then you turne by towards the land, into a wood, till you come to a litle riuer hard by the said towne side, which some times of the yere is dry without water. The towne of Vera Cruz in my time, had not past 300. householdes, and serued but for the folke of the ships, to buy and bring their goods aland, and deliuer it to their owuers, as also the stomers and their factors to receaue their goods of the Spatters of the ships. This towne standeth also in a very plaine on the one side the riuer, and the other side is entoured with much land blownen from the sea side with the tempest of weaether, many times comming vpon that coast. This towne also is subiect to great sicknesses, & in my time many of the mariners & officers of the ships did die with those disease, there accustomed, & especially those that were not vded to the Countrey, nor knew the danger thereof, but would commonly go in the fume in the heat of the day, & did eat fruits of the Countrey, which much disorder, & especially gaue themselves to womens company at their first comming: wherupon they were cast into a burning ague, of the which fewe escaped.

Halfe a daies iourney from Vera Cruz, towards Mexico, is a lodging of 5. or 6. houses, called the Rinconado, which is a place, where is a great pinnacle made of lime & stone, fast by a riuer side, where the Indians were wont to do their sacrifices vnto their gods, which is a plaine & low ground betwix that and Vera Cruz, and also subiect to sickness: but afterward, halfe a daies iourney that you do begin to enter into the high land, you shall find as faire, good, and sweete Countrey, as any in the world, & the farther you go, the goodlier and sweeter the countrey is, till you come to Pueblo de los Angeles, which may be some 43. leagues from Vera Cruz, which in my time a towne of 600. householdes, or thereabout, standing in a goodly soile. Betweene Vera Cruz & that, you shall come thorough many townes of the Indians, & villages, & many goodly fields of meadow grounds, Rivers of fresh waters, forrests, & great woods, very pleasaunt to behold. From Pueblo de los Angeles, to Mexico, is 22. leagues of very faire way, & countrey, as before is declared. Mexico was a city in my time, of not about 1500. householdes of Spaniards inhabiting there, but of India people in the Suburbs of the said City, dwelt about 300000. as it was thought, and many moze. This Citie of Mexico, is 69. leagues from the Noth sea, and 75. leagues from the south sea, so that it standeth in the midst of the maine land, betwixt the one sea & the other. It is situated in the middell of a lake of standing water, & entoured round about with the same, sauing in many places, going out of the city, are many broad waies through the said lake of water. This lake and city is entoured also with great mountaines round about, which are in compasse about 30. leagues, & the said city & lake of standing water, doth stand in a great plaine in the midst of it. This lake of standing water doth proceede from the shedding of the raime, that falleth vpon the said mountaines, & so gather themselves together in this place. All the whole proportion of this city doth stand in a very plaine ground, & in the midst of the said city, is a square place of a good bowe shoote ouer from side to side: & in the midst of the said place, is the high church, very faire & wel builded al though, at that time not halfe finished, & round about the said place, are many faire house & built: on the one side, are the houses where Mutezuma the great king of Mexico that was, dwelt, & nowe there lie alwaies the Altarpes that the king of Spaine sendeth thither euery 3. yeres. And in my time was there for Miceroy a gentleman of Castil, called Don Luis de Velasco. And on the other side of p said place, was against the same, is the Bishops house, very faire built, and many other house of goodly building:

ding. And hard by the same, are also other very faire houses, built by the Marques de Valle, otherwise called Hernando Cortes, who was he that first conquered the said Citie and Countrey, who after the said conquest which he made with great labour and trauell of his person, and danger of his life, and being grown great in the Countrey, the King of Spaine sent for him, saying that he had some particular matters to impart vnto him. And when hee came home, he could not be suffered to returne backe againe, as the King before had promised him. With the which, for sorrow that hee took, hee died, and this hee had for the reward of his good seruice. The said Citie of Mexico, hath the streets made very broad, and right, that a man being in the high place, at the one ende of the streete, may see at the least a good mile forward, and in all the one part of the streets of the North part of their Citie, there runneth a pretie lake of very cleere water, that every man may put into his house, as much as he wil, without the cost of any thing, but of the letting in. Also there is a great caue, of ditch of water, that cometh through the Citie, runneth vnto the high place, where come euery morning at the break of the day, 20. or 30. Canoes, of troughes of the Indians, which bring in them all manner of provision for the Citie, which is made, and groweth in the Countrey, which is a very good commodity for the Inhabitants of that place, And as for victuals in the said Citie, of Beefe, Mutton, and Pennes, Capons, Quails, Quince, Cocks, and such like, all are very good cheape: to say, the whole quarter of an Oxe, as much as a slaue can carry away from the Butchers, for 5. tompnes, that is, 5. Roials of place, which is iust 2. shillings, and 6. pence, and a fat Sheepe at the Butchers, for 3. Roials, which is 18. pence, and no more. Bread is as good cheape as in Spaine, as Apples, Peares, Pomegranats, and Quinces, at a reasonable rate. The Citie goeth wonderfully forwards in building of Friceries and Sunneries, and Chappels, and is like in time to come, to be the most populous Citie in the world, as it may be supposed. The weather is there alwaies very temperate, the day differeth but one howre of length all the yeere longe. The fieldes and the woods alwaies greene. The woods full of Popiniayes, and many other kind of birdes, that make such an harmonie of singing and crying, that any man will reioyce to heare it. In the fieldes are such odoriferous smells of flowers and herbes, that it giueth great content to the senses. About the Citie of Mexico 2. 3. or 4. leagues off, are diuers towncs of Indians, some of 4000. or 6000. households, which doe stand in such a goodly soile, that if Christians had the inhabitation thereof, it would be put to a further benefite. In my time were dwelling and aliaue in Mexico, many ancient men, that were of the Conquerors at the first conquest, with Hernando Cortes: for then it was about 36. yeeres agoe, that the said Countrey was conquered. About Mexico, there are diuers Spynes of silver, and also in other places there about, but the principall Spynes that are in all New Spaine, are in Sacatecas, 80. leagues from Mexico, and the Spynes of S. Martines, 30. leagues, both to the eastward of Mexico, where is great store of gold and silver. Also there is a place, called the Miltca, 50. leagues to the north west, whith doth yeeld great store of very good silke, and cochinnell. Wine and oile there is none growing in the Countrey, but what cometh out of Spaine. Also there are many goodly fruites in that Countrey, wherof wee haue none such, as Plantanos, Cuyanes, Sapotes, Cumes, and in the wilderness great store of black cherries, & other wholesome fruites. The Cochinnell is not a woome, or a flye, as some say it is, but a herrie that groweth vpon certaine bushes in the wilde field, which is gathered in time of the yeere, when it is ripe. Also the Indico that doth come from thence to die blew, is a certaine herbe that groweth in the wild fieldes, and is gathered at one time of the yeere, and burnt, and of the ashes thereof, with other confections put therunto, the said Indico is made. Balme, salsa perilla, Cana fistula, sugar, Oxe hides, and many other good & seruiciable things the Countrey doth yeeld, which are yeerely brought into Spaine, and there sold and distributed to many nations.

Robert Tomson.

A notable discourse of Master Iohn Chilton, touching the people, manners, Mynes, Cities, riches, forces, and other memorable things of the west Indias, seene and noted by himselfe in the time of his trauals, continued in those partes, the space of 17. or 18. yeeres.

In the yeere of our Lord, 1562, in the moneth of July, I Iohn Chilton, went out of this Citie of London into Spaine, where I remained for the space of 7. yeeres, and from thence I sailed into Noua Hispania, and so trauelled there, and by the south sea, vnto Peru, the space of 17. or 18. yeeres: after whose time expired, I returned into Spaine, and so in the yeere, 1586, in the moneth of July, I arrived at the foresaide Citie of London, where perusing the notes which I had taken in the time of my trauell in those yeeres, I haue set downe, where, as followeth.

In the yeere
sett in the Baye in her lading, a within a moneth pania, and came
2. miles from the the Spyes, and a building, and cel
There are built where the ships a shoare. From the, where all the
as come thither, into Spaine. The Spanish fleet of
ning of a pill for miles further up
never any woman with child, the y
the euery moir
pours of the ear
certaine houses
wards, who accu
the land. It stand store of know, wh
first number of Perota, 9. league
out of certaine houses, for the use the Angels, to cal belides a great
topping to it, ma thousand Indians
handfull of wher ren by the Kings but, anely for th
whom the Tlaxc
The Governour
fresh chiefest can ter vices, as vni
are chosen euery 14. yeeres olde hamege of Diaz
among them, pay
the clothe with diuers and fine 14. from Mexic
then 60. thousand
about two leag or 12. Spaniards
belides these, the and Tichamacha Cities, they b to the Citie of M the Indias, ha in length, and s bring their provi

ques de Valle, orber and Countrey, who person, and danger
he sent for him, sup came home, he could With the which, good service. The being in the high and in all the one of very cleere wa
of any thing, but of ough the Citie, euen of 30. Canoas, of Citie, which is made,
bitants of that place, s, Quatles, Guimpe
n Ore, as much as of plate, which is worth ich is 18. pence, and as Apples, Peares,
ly forward in build
to be the most popu
les very temperate,
the woods alwaies
make such an harmo are such odoriferous the Citie of Mexico
of such goodnes, wh ould be put to a fur e men, that were of as about 36. yeeres
s Pynes of silver, New Spaine, are in ues, both to the east called the Miltuca, and cochinele. Wine
ine. Also there are uncanos, Guapares, of some fruites. The
werth upon certaine
re. Also the Indico wild fieldes, and is her confections put re hides, and many oughte into Spaine,

son.
g the people,
things of the continued in

Chilton, went out of ce of 7. yeeres, and
and by the south sea, turned into Spaine, Citie of London,
yeeres, I have set
volume,

volume, as followeth.

In the yeere 1568, in the moneth of March, being desirous to see the world, I embarked my selfe in the Baye of Cales in Andalusia, in a Ship bound to the Isles of Canaries, where she toke in her lading, and set forth from thence for the voyage, in the moneth of June, the same yeere, Within a moneth after, we fell with the Isle of S. Domingo, and from thence directly to Noua His pania, and came into the port of S. Iohn de Vllua, which is a litle Island, standing in the sea, about 2. miles from the land, where the king maintaineth about 50. souldiers, and capitaines, that keepe the Voyes, and about 150. Negroes, who all the yeere long are occupied in carrying of stones for building, and other uses, and to helpe to make fast the ships that come in there, with their cables.
There are built two bulwarkes at each ende of a wall, that standeth like wise in the said Island, where the ships use to ride, made fast to the said wal, with their cables so neere, that a man may leape a boare. From this port I journeyed by land to a towne called Vera Cruz, standing by a rivers side, where all the factors of the Spanish merchants dwell, which receive the goods of such ships as come thither, and also take the same with such creature, and merchandize, as they returne backe into Spaine. They are in number about 400. who onely remaine there, during the time that the Spanish fleet discharge, and is loden againe, which is from the ende of August, to the begin ning of April following. And then for the unwholesomes of the place, they depart thence, 16. miles further by within the Countrey, to a towne called Xalapa, a very healthful soile. There is never any woman deliuerer of child, in this port, for so soone as they perceiue themselves conceiued with child, they get them into the Countrey, to auoid the perill of the infected aire, although they ke every moeying to buye throughout the towne about 2000. head of carrell, to take away the ill va pours of the earth. From Xalapa 7. leagues, I came to another place, named Perota, wherein are certaine houses builded of straw, called by the name of Ventz, the Inhabitants whereof are Sp aniards, who accustom to harbour such trauellers, as are occasioned to iourney that way by the land. It standeth in a great wood of Pine, & Cedar trees, the soile being very cold, by reason of slope of snow, which lieth on the mountaines there, all the yeere long. There are in that place, an infinite number of Deere, of bignes like unto great mules, hauing also homes of great length. From Perota, 9. leagues, I came to the fontes of Ozumba, which fontes are springes of water, issuing out of certaine rocks, into the midst of the high waies, where likewise are certaine raiuges, and houses, for the uses before mentioned. Eight leagues off from this place, I came to the Citie of the Angels, so called by that name, of the Spaniards, which inhabiteth there, to the number of 1000.
besides a great number of Indians. This Citie standeth in very plaine fieldes, hauing neere ad joining to it, many sumptuous Cities, as namely the Citie of Tlaxcala, a Citie of two hundred thousand Indians, Tributaries to the King, although he exacteth no other tribute of them, then a handfull of wheate a yeere, which amounteth to 13. thousand Spanneges, yearly, as hath app eared by the Kings booke of account. And the reason why he contenteth himselfe with this tri bute onely for them, is, because they were the occasion that he tooke the Citie of Mexico, with whom the Tlaxcallians had warre at the same time, when the Spaniards came into the Countrey.
The Governour of this Citie, is a Spaniard, called among them, the Alcalde Maior, who admini strerth chiefest causes of iustice, both vnto the Christians, and Indians, referring smaller and lig ter vices, as drunkennes, and such like, to the iudgement, and discretion of such of the Indians, as are chosen every yeere to rule amongst them, called by the name of Alcaldes. These Indians from 14. yeeres olde vnto wards, pay vnto the King for their yeerely tribute, one ounce of silver, and an hamege of Wax, which is valued among them commonly, at 12. Roials of plate. The widows among them, pay halfe of this. The Indians both of this Citie, and of the rest, lying about Mexico, are clothed with mantels of linnen cloth, made of cotton wool, painted throughout with workes of diuers and fine colours. It is distant from the Citie of the Angels, 4. leagues to the northward, and 14. from Mexico. There is another Citie a league from it, called Cholula, consisting of more then 60. thousand Indians, tributaries, and there dwelleth not about 12. Spaniards there. From it, about two leagues, there is another, called Acazingo, of about 50000. Indians, and about 8. or 12. Spaniards, which standeth at the foote of the Vulcan of Mexico, on the East side. There are besides these, three other great Cities, the one named Tepiac, a very famous Citie, Waxazingo, and Tichamachalcho: all these in times past, belonged to the kingdom of Tlaxcal, and from these Cities they bring all their Curbanos into Spaine. The distance from the Citie of the Angels, to the Citie of Mexico, is 20. leagues. This Citie Mexico, is the Citie of greatest fame in all the Indies, hauing goodly, and costly houses in it, builded all of lime and stone, and seven streetes in length, and seven in breadth, with rivers running thorough every second streete, by which they bring their provision in Canoas. It is situated at the foote of certaine hills, which containe in com passe

Durcan is a hill that conti nually burn
eth with fire.
Cochinilla.

passe by estimation, about 20. leagues, compassing the said Citie on the one side, and a lake which is 14. leagues about on the other side. Upon which lake, there are built many notable and sumptuous Cities, as the City of Tezcuc, where the Spaniards built 6. frigates, at that time when they conquered Mexico, and where also Fernando Cortes made his abode 5. or 6. moneths, in curing of the sickness of his people, which they had taken at their coming into the Countrey. There dwelt in this Citie, about 60000. Indians, which pay tribute to the King. In this Citie the said Fernando built the finest Church that ever was built in the Indies, the name whereof is S. Peters. After I had continued 6. yeeres in this Citie, being desirous to see further the Countreys, I imploied that which I had, and tooke my voyage towards the provinces of the California, in the which was discovered a certaine Countrey, by a Byskaine, whose name was Diego de Guirara, and called it after the name of his Countrey, New Biskaye, where I sold my merchandize for exchange of silver, for there were there certaine rich Mines discovered by the aforesaid Biskaine. Going from Mexico, I directed my voyage toward the south west, to certaine Mines, called Tamascal Tepec, and so travelled forwarde, the space of 20. daies, through desert places uninhabited, till I came to the valley of S. Bartholomew, which joyneth to the province of New Biskaye. In all these places the Indians for the most part goe naked, and are wild people. Their common armour is bowes, and arrows, they use to eate up such Christians as they come by. At my returne to Mexico, I came along by the coast of the South sea, throught the province of Sacatula, from thence into the province of Coloa, where I imploied the silver that I had, in a certaine graine, growing like an Almond, called amongst the Indians, Cacao, which in Nova Hispania is current for money, to buy things of small value, as fruits, &c. for that they have no small money there, and in which also they pay the King his tribute. They grinde this graine to a powder, and mingle it with water, and so is made both bread, and drinke unto them, which is a provision of great profit, and good strength. From hence departing, I came to another province, named Xalisco, and from thence to the port of Nauidad, which is 66. leagues from Mexico, in which port arrive alwaies in the moneth of Aprill, all the ships that came out of the South sea, from China, and the Philippines, and there they laie their merchandize a shoare. The most part whereof, is manuels made of cotton wool, waxe, and fine platters gilded, made of earth, and much gold. The next summer following, being in the yeere 1570. (which was the first yeere that the Spanes Bulls were brought into the Indies) I undertooke another voyage to wards the province of Sonsonate, which is in the kingdom of Guaximala, wherher I carried divers merchandize of Spaine, all by land, on Mules backs. The way thitherward from Mexico, is to the Citie of the Angels, and from thence to another Citie of Christians, 80. leagues off, called Guaxaca, in which there dwelt about 50. Spaniards, and many Indians. All the Indians of this province, pay their tribute in manuels of cotton wooll, and Cochonello, wherof there groweth abundance throughout this Countrey. Neere to this place there lieth a port in the South sea, called Aquatulca, in the which there dwelleth now about 3. or 4. Spaniards, with certaine Negroes, which the King maintaineth there: in which place, Sir Francis Drake arrived, in the yeere, 1579. in the moneth of Aprill, where I lost with his being there, about 1000. duckets, which he tooke away, with much other goods of other merchants of Mexico, from one Francisco Gomes Rangifa, factor there for all the Spanish merchants that then traded in the South sea: for from this port they use to imbarke all their goods that goe for Peru, & to the kingdom of Hunduras. From Guaxaca, I came to a towne named Nixapa, which standeth upon certaine very high hills, in the province of Sapotecas, wherem inhabiteth about the number of 20. Spaniards, by the king of Spaines commandement to keepe that Countrey in peace, for the Indians are very rebellious: & for this purpose, he bestoweth on them the townes & cities that be within that province. From hence I went to a Citie, called Teccoantepec, which is the farthest towne to the Eastward in all Nova Hispania, which sometimes did belonge to the Marques De Valle, and because it is a very fit port, standing in the South sea, the king of Spaine, upon a rebellion made by the said Marques against him, tooke it from him, and doth now possesse it as his owne. Here in the yeere 1571. I saw a peece of Ordnance of brass, called a Demy culverin, which came out of a ship, called the Jesus of Lubeecke, which Captaine Hawkins left in S. John de Villu, being in fight with the Spaniards, in the yeere, 1568. which yeere they afterwards carried 100. leagues by land, over mighty mountains to the said city, to be imbarked there for the Philippines. Leaving Teccoantepec, I went still along by the South sea, about 150. leagues in the desolate province of Soconusco, in which province there groweth Cacao, which the Christians carry from thence into Nova Hispania, for that it will not growe in any colde Countrey. The Indians of this Countrey, paye the King their tribute, in Cacao, giving him 400. Cartas, and every Cart is 2000. Almonds, which Cart is worth in Mexico 30. peeces of reals of plate. They are Acto Biskap.

The haven where the ships of China & the Philippines arrive.

Aquatulca.

A ship
called the Jesus of Lubeecke being in fight with the Spaniards.

men of great 20. christians.
Guafacapan:
about 200. In Guaximala, wh yards, & here t repairs for the land, and is bet Citie to the S
I carried out lyeth 7. league
caxula, where lade backe ag
nare: I traile beth all the shi
to Costaricca, Panama, and t not passe by L annele (which Cauillos, lyin
ming in of the strength, hau merch of Augu receiv in agat
though it be u and golde of N
dize they retur course by the I
pades of no g intermost part which is the ch greatest impo
ca, & all other they take in v
for said place this port it is famous deepe towne, in whic on the Sea, an people of the c stand therof.
the Tower the ance subvert
fayle of ships, the towne of H
taineth there
ed in it about though at the cher towne call
place, 60. leag
land. The chie led Cuba, wh Southside of they kill only taine there ma led, and cut in come for Span ouer to Nonib

de, and a lake which is notable and fump
that time when they moneths in curing metre. There be the said Fernan-
of S. Peters. After tre is, I imploied ia, in the which was Guaira, and called it
e for exchange of kaine. Going from Tamalescal Tepec, bites, till I came to In all these places in armour is better, turne to Mexico, I from thence into the ne, growing like an current for money to re, and in which also ing it with water,
at profit, and good
o, and from thence to e alwaies in the mo-
the Phillipinz, and made of cotton wool, ner following, being ought into the Indi-
is in the kingdome
e, on Pules backs, thence to another Ci-e 50, Spaniards, and of cotton wool, and I recee to this place
ellect not about 3, of in which place, this I lost with his being other merchants of merchants that then
ys that goe for Peru, apa, which standeth
about the number of antrey in peace, for to lunces, & cities that , which is the farthest to the Marques De aine, vpon a rebellion
stesse it as his owne, culuerin, which came ohn de Villua, being caried 100, leaguers hillippinas. Learning
e do late prouince of carry from thence to The Indians of this as, and every Carge of place. They are men

men of great riches, and withall very proud, and in all this prouince throug hout, there dwell not 20. christians. I traualled through another prouince called Suchtepec: thence to y prouince of Guadalacapan: in both which prouinces are very fewe people, the biggest towne therein hauing not about 200. Indians, the chiefest marchandize there is Cacao, and hence I went to the City of Guatemala, which is the chief city of all this kingdome. In this cite do inhabit about 80. Span-yards, & here the kin: hath his gouernors, & Counsell, to whom all the people of the kingdome repaire for Justice. This City standeth from the coast of the South sea, 14. leagues within the land, and is very riche by reason of the gold that they fetch out of the coast of Veragua. From this cite to the Eastward 60. leagues, lyeth the prouince Sonsonate, where I sold the marchandize I carred out of noua Hispania. The chiefest cite of this prouince is called S. Saluador, which lyeth 7. leagues from the coast of the South sea, and hath a port lying by the Sea coast called A-cazuela, where the ships arriue with the marchandize they bring from noua Hispania: from thence I came againe the Cacao there dwill be to the number of 60. Spanyards. From Sonsonate I traualled to Nicoya, which is in the kingdome of Nicaragua, in which port the king buildeth all the shipping that trauele out of the Indies to the Molucces. I went forward from thence to Costaricca, where the Indians both men and women goe all naked, & the lande lyeth between Panama, and the kingdome of Guatemala: and for that the Indians there liue as warriors, I durst not passe by land, so that here in a towne called S. Saluador, I bestowed that which I carred, in ancke (which is a kinde of thing to dye blew withall) which I carred with mee to the port of Cauallas, lying in the kingdome of Honduras, which port is a mighty huge riuer, and at com-ming in of the one side of it, there lyeth a towne of little force without oppinance, any other strength, hauing in it houses of strawe: at which towne the Spaniards vse yearly in the mo-neth of August, to vnlade 4. ships, which come out of Spaine laden with riche marchandize and receiue in againe here their lading of a kind of marchandize called Anneile and Cutchanelio(al, though it be not of such value as that of noua Hispania) and siluer of the mines of Tomangua, and golde of Nicaragua, and bites, and Salsa perilla, the best in all the Indies, al which marchandize they returne and depart from thence alwaies in the moneth of Aprill following, taking their course by the Island of Iamaica, in which Island there dwell on the West side of it certaine Span-yards of no great number. From this place they goe to the cape of S. Anthonie, which is the westernmost part of the Westward of the Island of Cuba, and from thence to Hauana lying hard by, which is the chiefest port of the king of Spaine hath in all the Countreies of the Indies, and of greatest impoytance: for all the ships, both from Peru, Honduras, Portorricco, S Domingo, Iama-ica, & all other places in his Indies, arriue there at their returne to Spaine, for that in this port they take in victuals, and water, and the most part of their lading: here they meete from all the foreignest places alwaies in the beginning of May by the kings commandement: at the entrance of this port it is so narrow, that there can scarce come in two ships together, although it be about 6. leagues deepe in the narrowest place of it. In the Northside of the coming in their standeth a towne, in which there watcheth euery day a man, to descric the Sailes of ships, which he can see on the Sea, and as many as he discovereth so many banners he fettereth vpon the Tower that the people of the towne (which standeth within the port about a mile from the towne) may vnder-stand thereof. Under this tower there lyeth a sandy shoie, where men may easily go a land, and by the Tower there runneth a hill along by the waters side, which easely with small force of oppinance subdueth the towne and port. The port within is so large that there may easely ride a slepe of ships, without anker or cable, for no winde is able to hurt them. There inhabit within the towne of Hauana about 300. Spanyards, and about 60. Souldiers, which the King maintaineth there for the keeping of a certaine Castell, which he hath of late erected, which hath plain-ted in it about 12. peeces of small ordnance, and is compassed round with a small ditch, where though at their pleasure, they may let in the sea. About 14. leagues from Hauana, there lyeth another towne called Wanabacoa, in which there is dwelling, about 100. Indians, and from this place, 60. leagues, there lyeth another towne named Bahama, situate on the Northside of the Island. The chiefest cite of it is the Island of Cuba, (which is about 200. leagues in length) is also called Cuba, where dwelleth a 3. shop, and about 200. Spanyards, which towne standeth on the Southside of the Island, about 2. leagues from Hauana. All y trades of this Island is cattel which they kill onely for the byss y are brought thence into Spaine: for which end the Spaniards maintaine there many Negroes to kill their cattel, & foster a great number of hogges, which being killed, and cut into small peeces, they dry in the sunne, and so make it pousiffon for the ships, which come for Spaine. Hauing remained in this Island ii. moneths, I tooke shipping in a Frigate, & went ouer to Nonibre de Dios, and from thence by land to Panama, which standeth vpon y Southsea.

The description
of Hauana
at large.

The final force
of Hauana.

The common dities of Cuba

From Nombre de Dios to Panama, it is 17 leagues distant. From which towne there runneth a river which is called the river of Chagre, which runneth within 5 leagues of Panama, to a place called Cruces, through which river they carry their goods, & disembark it at the sayd Cruces, and from thence it is conveyed in Poles backes to Panama by lande: where they againe imbarke it in certaine small ships in the South sea for all the coast of Peru. In one of these ships, I went to Potossi, and from thence by lande to Cusco, and from thence to Paica. There I remained the space of seven moneths, & then returned into the kingdome of Guatimal, and arrived in the prouince of Nicoya, and Nicaragua. From Nicaragua I traueiled by lande to a prouince called Nicamula (which lyeth toward the North sea in certaine high mountaines) for that I could not passe thorough the kingdome of Guatimal at that time for waters, where with all the lowe Countreies of the Prouince of Suconusco, lying by the South sea is drowned, with the raine that falleth about in the mountaines enduring alwaies from Aprill to September: which season for that cause they call their winter. From this prouince, I came into another called de Vera Paz, in which the chiefest Citie is also called after that name, where there dwelleth a Bishop, and about foure Spaniards. Among the mountaines of this Countreie toward the North Sea, there is a prouince called La canona, where are Indian men of warre which the king cannot subdue, for that they haue Townes and Fortes in a great lake of water about in the saide mountaines, the most part of them go naked, and some weare mantels of Cotten wooll. Distant from this about eight leagues, I came into another Prouince called the Prouince of Chiapa, wherein the chiefest Citie is called Sacatlan, where there dwelleth a Bishop, and about a hundred Spaniards. In this Countreie there is great store of Cotton wooll, wherof the Indians make fine linnen cloth, which the Christians buye and carie into Noua Hispania. The people of this Prouince pay their tribute to the king all in Cotton wooll and Fetters. Fourteene leagues from this Citie, there is another called Chiapa, where are the finest Gennes in all the Indies, which are caried hence to Mexico, 300 leagues from it. From this Citie I traueiled hill through hills and mountaines, till I came to the ende of this Prouince, to a hill called Ecatepec, which in English signifieth the hill of wind: for that they say, it is the highest hill that euer was discovered: for from the toppe of it may be discovered both the North, and the South Seas, and it is in height supposed to be nine leagues. They which traueile ouer it, lie alwaies at the foote of it ouernight, and begin their iourney about midnigh, to trauell to the toppe of it before the Sunne rise the next day, because the winde bloweth with such force afterwards, that it is impossible for any man to goe vpon the foote of this hill, to Teoantepec, the first Towne of Noua Hispania, are about fiftene leagues, and so from hence I iourneyed to Mexico. By and by after I came to Mexico (which was in the yeere 1572.) in the companie of another Spaniard, which was my companion in this iourney, we went together toward the Prouince of Panuco, which lieth vpon the coast of the North Seas, and within thre dayes iourney we entered a Citie called Mexiclan, where there dwelleth twelue Spaniards: the Indian inhabitants there were about thirtie thousand. This Citie standeth vpon certaine high mountaines, which are very thicke planted with Townes very holtsome, and fruitfull, hauing plentifull fountaines of water running through them. The hie wayes of these hilles are all set with frutes, and trees of diuers kindes, & most pleasant: in euery Towne as we passed through, the Indians presented vs with victuals: Within twentie leagues of this place, there is another Citie called Clanchinolitepec, belonging to a Gentleman, where there inhabiteth about fourtie thousand Indians: and there are among them eight or nine Fryers of the order of Saine Augustine, who haue there a Monasterie. Within thre dayes after we departed from this place, and came to a Citie called Guaxutla, where there is another Monasterie of Fryers of the same order: there dwell in this Towne about twelue Spaniards. From this place forwarde beginneth a Prouince called Guastecan, which is all plaine grownds without any hills. The first Towne we came vnto is called Tanguialabe, in which there dwell many Indians high of stature, hauing all their bodies painted with blew, and weare their haire long downe to their knees, tyed as women vse to doe with their hairelaces. When they goe out of their doores, they carrie with them their bowes and arrowes, being very great archers, going for the most part naked. In those Countreies they take neither golde, nor siluer for exchange of any thing, but onely Salt, which they greatly esteeme, and vse it as a principall medicine for certaine wormes which breed in their lippes, and in their gummies. After nine dayes trauell from this place, we came to a Towne called Tampica, which is a port Towne vpon the Sea, wherein there dwell I thinke fourette Christians, of which number whilst we abode there, the Indians killed fourteene, as they were gathering of Salt, which is all the trade that they haue in this place: it standeth vpon the entrie of the river of Panuco, which is a mightie great river, and there it is not for a sand that lieth

Ecatepec a hill nine leagues high.

Salt a principall part marchants
vse.

John Chilton.
at the mouth of hence we went tie, where the k
the Christians,
In this count
ter, which wate pation came to stare, which I came to me, an withstanding n
forward in our ner in a Canoa, many wayes, c
about two leagu
in certaine co
their bowes and I made signes
lovs which was
and laid me vpo hought vnto m mounded to ask them: for (sayd to whom I answ chou in ayre: th eare thce. So I med about any c asked me what I hile water to dri guided full of w
that the Casique
the hilles where which this Casic other things a res
with them about her, & I desired
way, going befo
hought me into come to a towne plaine fields wall
about 4. or 5. & th
tries subiect vnto partes of the Ind
In this towne af of me but that I
those kinde of Ju great pride in kill bought it about dayes, till I recou hdom the Micco
certaine way fro travoye their ma
So this captaine
which he had brou wine called Tanc las Palmas of Gre
by this river the sp sufficed to cut tim swimming in the wa
through woods, ha

in all the Indies, and from thence they fetch most siluer: In which mines there dwelt about 300. Christians, and there our Captaine gaue vs leaue to depart. So we came to the valley of S. Michael towards Mexico, and from thence to Pueblo nouo, & from that place to the prouince of Mechuacan, after which name the chiefest Citie of that place is called, where there dwels a Bishop, and about 100. Spaniards in it. It aboundeth with all kinde of Spanish fruites, and hath woods full of nutt trees, and wilde vines there are many mines of copper, and great store of catel: It lyeth 60. leagues from Mexico, whither we came within 4. daies after: the Indians of this Countrey are very mightie and bygge men. Afterwards I returned another way to the prouince of Sonfonate by Vera cruz, and so to Rio Aluarado, and from thence to the prouince of Campego, which lyeth on the Southside of the bay of Mexico: The chief towne of this prouince is called Merida, in which is a Bishop and almost C. Spaniards. The Indians of this prouince pay all their tribute in mantles of cotten wooll and cacao. There is no poxe in all this prouince for a theyr of a C. tunne to ryde in, but onely in the riuer of Tabasco, by which riuer this Citie of Merida standeth. The chiefest marchandize which they lade there in final Frigates is a certaine wood called Campege, (where with they vse to dye) as also hydes and annyle. By this there lyeth the prouince Iucatan where the Hundura by the Nozle sea coast, where there is also another Bishop, and a towne likewise named Iucatan where there dwell a fewe Spaniards. They haue no force at all in all this coast to defende themselves withall, save onely that the sea is low, and there is no Port to receive any shipping, unlesse they be Frigates, which carry from thence to the Port of S. John de Villua waxe, Cacao, honny, & also mantels of cotten wooll, whereof they make there great store, and of which kinde of Marchandize there is great trade thence to Mexico: of the same also they pay their tribute to the King. The king hath tribute brought him yeerely out of the Indies into Spaine betwene 17. and 7. Millions of gold, and siluer: for he receiuech of euery Indian which is subiect vnto him, excepting those which doe belong to the Incomendados (which are the childre of those Spaniards, who first conquered the land) to whom the king gaue, and graunted the government of the Citie and townes subdued for three liues, twelue royals of plate, and a bannege of Spais (which is a wheat of the Countrey, v. of them making a quarter of English measure) and of euery widow woman he hath vi. royals and a bannege of Spais, and so if any Indidell haue 17. children in his house he payeth for euery one of them being aboute 17. yeres old after that rate: this wheat being duely brought to the Governour of euery prouince and Citie, is solde in Mexico by the Kinges gouernours there euery yeere: so that the monee receiued for it, is put into the kings Treasurie there, and so is yeerely caried from thence into Spaine. Of the Spaniards which are owners of the mines of gold and siluer, he receiuech the fife part of it, which hee calleth his Quintas, which being taken out of the heape, there is his armes set on it, for otherwise it may not be brought out of the lande into Spaine, vnder paine of death. The marke of siluer which is 8. ounces, when it cometh out of the mines not hauing the Kinges Seale vpon it, is woorth fortye thre royales of plate, and so it is currant, and when they will bring it to Spayne, they carry it to the Kinges Treasure house, where his Seale is set vpon it, and so it is rayled in value thereby to thre score and foure royals of plate, and so the king hath for his custome of euery marke of plate twenty and one royals. From the yeere of 70. which was the yeere, that the Popes Bulls came into the Indies, as is aforesaid mentioned, he hath receiued both of Indians which are tributaries vnto him, and also of all others belonging to the Incomendados of euery one being aboute 12. yeeres of age, 4. royals of euery bull. Also they carry other pardons with them into the Indies for such as bee dead, although a 100. yeeres before the Spaniards came into the countrey: which pardons the Fryers in their preaching perswaded the poore Indians to take, telling them that with giuing 4. royals of plate for a Masse, they would deliuer their soules out of purgatory. Of the Christians likewise dwelling there he hath 14. royals for euery Bull, and there be certaine Bulls brought thither for the Christians besides the former, which serue for pardoning all such faules wherein they haue transgressed either against the king by keeping backe his customes, or one against another by any other inuery, for euery hundred crownes whereof his conscience doth accuse him that hee hath decreed the king or any other, he must giue 10. for a Bull and so after that rate for euery C. which he hath any way stolen, and so is pardoned the fault. The reuenuue of his Bulls after this maner yeereth vnto his Treasurie yeerely aboute thre Millions of gold as I haue bene credibly informed: although of late both the Spaniards, and Indians do refuse to take the Bulls, for that they perceiue he doth make a yeerely custome of it: onely the Indians take one pardon for all his household, whereas in former time euery Indian vsed to take one for euery person in his house, and searcht the same into small peeces, and giueth to euery one of his household a little

Copper mines

The greatest of the king of Spaine recei-ueth out of the west Indies.

The Quinto.

peere, saying for, they had seen where they somes, which
ple of both loze other King of
that they should he brought our groweth in S.
wayes in subie
and lost of good
the people their undoubtedly do

About Mexi Nege, which ye make hennep, re
leaf, there grow
any thing.

Thus to n
haue obserued.

The first ve ant Capt.

and ano
yeere
ner

uers, and found him after the sa
people hereupo
their sleepe fled
mainting as me Towne. But
the market plac ket place they d caliures at thos
one of the princ
the rest of thei
seeing that they they in the Tow
taine comming
great feare, the waded all to the Thus this flew onely one ter was, and of But hee bein of Darienc, & h Panama, and N
golde and situa

peere,

well about 300,
the valley of S.
to the prouine of here dwells a Sp.
fruites, and hath
great store of ear.
the Indians of this
ap to the prouine
duince of Campe.
prouince is called prouince pay all his prouince for a this Citie of Mexi.
is a certaine wood
his there lyeth the
also another Sp.
ardes. They haue
e L and is low, and from thence to the whereof they make ce to Mexico: of the jim yeerely out of e receiue of eur.
Incommenderos
poin the king gaue,
s, we lue royals of
aking a quarter of annage of Spayle,
them being aboue
e of every prouince
e that the money
d from thence into er, he receiue the
eape, there is his aine, vnder paine of minis not hauing
it is current, and e houle, where his
ure royals of plate, royals. From the
as is afoze mentio.
of all others belon.
oyals of euery bull,
ad, although a 100.
pers in their yea.
4, royals of plate for is likewise dwelling thicher for the Chi.
they haue receiued
r by any other inu.
e hath deceiued the e which he hath a.
his maner yeeldeth
dibly in forment: al.
s, for that they per.
don for all his houl.
person in his houl.
houlshoulde a litle
pierre,

peace, saying thus, they neede nowe no more, seeing in that which they bought the yeere before, they had about 10000. peeres pardon. These pieces they sticke vp in the wall of the houses where they lie. Both the Chyilians and Indians are weary with these infinite taxes and customs, which of late he hath imposed vpon them, more then in the yeeres before. So as the people of both partes did rebell thus in the time that I was among them, and would haue set vp another King of them selues: For which cause the King hath commanded vpon paine of death, that they should not plant either wine or oyle there, but should alwayes stand in neede of them to be brought out of Spaine, although there would more growe there in foure yeeres, then there groweth in Spaine in twentie, it is so fertile a countrey. And the King to keepe the countrey alwayes in subiection, and to his owne vse, hath straightly prouided by Law, vpon paine of death, and loss of goods, that none of these countreies should traffike with any other nation, although the people themselues doe much more desire to trade with any other then with them, and would undoubtedly doe, if they feared not the perill ensuing thereupon.

Rebellions in Noua Hispania,
by too great
exactions.

About Mexico, and other places in Noua Hispania, there groweth a certaine plant called Nege, which yeeldeth Wine, vinegar, Honey, and black Sugar, and of the leaues of it dried, they make hempe, ropes, shooes which they vse, and cytes for their houses: and at the ende of euery leaf, there groweth a sharpe point like an awle, wherewith they vse to boze or pearce through any thing.

Thus to make an ende, I haue here set downe the summe of all the chiefest things that I haue obserued, and noted in my 17. yeeres trauelle in those partes.

The first voyage, attempted and set forth by the expert, and valiant Captaine M. Francis Drake himselfe, with a ship called the Dragon, and another ship, and a Pinnesse, to Nombre de Dios, and Dariene, about the yeere 1572. Written, and recorded by one Lopez a Spaniard, in this manner following: which Spaniard, with the discourse about him, was taken at the Rauer of Plate by the Ships set forth by the Right Honourable the Earle of Cumberland, in the yeere 1586.

There was a certaine English man named Francis Drake, who hauing intelligence howe the Towne of Nombre de Dios in Noua Hispania, had but small store of people remaining there, came on a night, & entered the Port with foure Pinnesses, and landed about 150. men, and leauing 70. men with a trumpet, in a fozte which was there, with the other 80. he entered the Towne, without doing any harme, all hee came to the market place, and there discharged his calliwers, and sounded a trumpet very loude, and the other which he had left in the Fozte answered him after the same maner, with the discharging their calliwers, and sounding their trumpet: the people hereupon not thinking of any such matter, were put in great feare, and waking out of their sleepe fled all into the mountaines, inquiring one of another what the matter should be, remaining as men amazed, not knowing what that vproze was which happened so suddenly in the Towne. But fourteene or fiftene of them toyning together with their barquebusses, went to the market place to knowe what they were that were in the Towne, and in a corner of the market place they did discouer the English men, and seeing them to be but fewe, discharged their calliwers at those English men: their fortune was such that they killed the Trumpetter, and shot one of the principall men thorow the leg, who seeing himselfe hurt, retyped to the Fozte, where the rest of their company was left: they which were in the Fozte sounded their trumpet, and seeing that they in the Towne did not answer them, and hearing the calliwers, thought that all thep in the Towne had bene slaine, and thereupon fled to their Pinnesses: The English Captaine comming to the Fozte, and not finding his men which he left there, hee and his were in so great feare, that leauing their furniture behinde them, and putting off their hose, swamme, and waded all to their Pinnesses, and so went with their shippes againe out of the Fozte.

Thus this English Captaine called Francis Drake departed from Nombre de Dios, and flew onely one man in the Towne which was looking out of a windowe to see what the matter was, and of his men had onely his Trumpetter slaine.

But hee being discontented with the repulse which he had receiued there, came to the sound of Dariene, & hauing conference with certaine Negroes which were fled from their masters of Panama, and Nombre de Dios, the Negroes did tell him, that certaine Spules came laden with golde and silver from Panama to Nombre de Dios, who in companie of these Negroes went

The battaine
exploite of M.
Francis Drake
betwixt Panama and Nombre de Dios.

thereupon on land, and stayed in the way where the treasure should come with 100. shot, and soooke two companies of muses, which came onely with their dryeres mistrusting nothing, and he caried away the golde onely, for they were not able to carrie the siluer through the mountaines. And two dayes after he came to the house of Crosses, where hee killed sixe or seuen marchants, but found no golde nor siluer but much marchandise: so he fired the house, where was burnt about 200000. Duckets in marchandise, and so went to his shippe againe: and within halfe an houre after he was a shipboorde, there came downe to the sands 300. shot of the Spaniards in the sight of his shippes, of purpose to seeke him, but hee cared little for them being out of their reach, and so departed with his treasure.

The voyage of Iohn Oxnam of Plymmouth, to the West India, and ouer the Straight of Dariene into the South

Sca. Anno 1575. Written by the foresayd Lopez in the same discourse.

There was another English man, who hearing of the spoyle that Francis Drake had done upon the coast of Noua Hispania, and of his good aduerture and safe returne home, was thereby prouoked to vndertake the like enterpryse, with a ship of 140. tunnes, and 70. men, and came thither, and had also conference with the foxe sayde Negroes: and hearing that the golde and siluer which came by the Strailes from Panama to Nombre de Dios, was now conducted with souldiers, he determined to doe that which neuer any man before enterprised: and landed in that place where Francis Drake before had had his conference with the Negroes. This man courtes his ship after he had brought her aground with boughes of trees, and hid his great Ordnance in the ground, and so not leauing any man in his shippe, hee tooke two small pieces of ordnance, and his calliers, and good store of victuals, & so went with the Negroes about twelue leagues into the maine land, to a Riuer that goeth to the South sea, and there hee cut wood and made a Pinnele, which was 45. foote by the keele, and hauing made this Pinnele, he went into the South sea, carrying sixe Negroes with him to be his guides, & so went to the Island of Pearles, which is 25. leagues from Panama, which is in the way that they come from Peru to Panama, and there he was ten dayes without shewing himselfe to any man, to see if he might get any ship that came from Peru: At last, there came a small Barke by, which came from Peru from a place called Quito, which hee tooke, and found in her 60. thousand waight of golde, and much victuals. But not contenting himselfe with this prise, hee stayed long without sending away his prise of any of the men, and in the ende of sixe dayes after, hee tooke another Barke which came from Lima, in which hee tooke 100. thousand waight of siluer in barres, with the which hee thought to haue gone, and entered the Riuer, but first hee went into the Islands to see if he could finde any Pearles: Where hee found a fewe, and so returned to his Pinnele againe, and so sayling to the Riuer from whence hee came, and comming nere to the mouth of the sayd Riuer, hee sent away the two prises that hee tooke, and with his Pinnele hee went by the Riuer. The Negroes that dwelt in the Island of Pearles, the same night that hee went from them, went in Canoas to Panama, and the Governour within two dayes sent foure Barkes with 100. men, twentie five men in euery one, and Negroes to rowe with the Captaine, Iohn de Ortega, which went to the Island of Pearles, and there had intelligence, which way the English men were gone, and following of them, hee met by the way the ships which the English men had taken, of whom hee learned, that the English men were gone by the Riuer, and hee going thither, when hee came to the mouth of the Riuer, the Captaine of Panama knew not which way to take, because there were three passages in the Riuer to goe by in, and being determined to goe by the greatest of the three Riuers, hee saue comming downe a lesser Riuer many feathers of hennes, which the English men had pulled to eate, and being glad thereof, hee went by that Riuer where hee saue the feathers, and after that hee had bene in that Riuer foure dayes, hee discied the English mens Pinnele upon the sands, and comming to her, there were no more then sixe English men, whereof they killed one, and the other five escaped away, and in the Pinnele hee found nothing but victuals: But this Captaine of Panama not herewith satisfied determined to seeke out the Englishmen by land, and leauing twentie men in his Pinneles, hee with 80. shot went by the countrey: hee had not gone halfe a league, but hee found a house made of boughes, where they found all the English mens goods, and the gold and siluer also, and carrying it backe to their Pinneles, the Spaniards were determined to goe away, without following the English men any further.

Sp. Francis Drake burnt the house of Crosses.

The Island of Pearles 25. leagues from Panama.

But at the end and about 200 hauing the adu English men, a two were slaine

Among other why they went Captaine had where they had of foure iourne eines would be his word, fell out killed the Cape would seeke Negroes to car from the Spaniards had done treasure if they bowes and arrow companie were England. They ten all things tued to Panama would have done

Nowe when os, and they of wards say) four that the Uiceroy countrey, sent them out, who some Barke of groes, who in the And the Justice of the licence of upon hee and alaine, the Past was executed by

The King of those Negroes niards, and as selues to the Spaniards,

At the first great iustice by the Spaniards

The Span quering of this neuer sawe Eng due many ffe two English in All these appointed to k after that this aduerture to ap with a strong na. and S. Aug of Spaine liue, from the naual

But

...shot, and firing nothing, and the mountaineers, seven marchants, were burnt within halfe an houre, the Spaniards being out of their

West India,

Francis Drake venture and safe capture, with a conference which was conducted with and landed in that this man coured great Ordinance in times of ordinance, and made a see went into the land of Pearles, Peru to Panama, might get any ship from a place much victuals, way his pisse of, hee thought to could finde any to sayling to the, he sent away Negroes that Canoas to Panama five men went to the Island and following of hee learned, that to the mouth of e were three part of the three Ri- the English men the feathers, and minesse upon the he killed one, als: But this men by land, and hee had not gone the English mens Spaniards were

But at the end of three dayes, the English Captaine came to the River with all his men, and about 200. Negroes, and set upon the Spaniards with great furie: But the Spaniards hauing the aduantage of trees which they stood behind, did easely preuaile, and killed cleuen English men, and five Negroes, &ooke other seven English men aaine, but of the Spaniards, two were slaine and five soe hurt.

A skirmish betwene the English men, and the Spaniards.

Among other things, the Spaniards enquired of the English men which they tooke, why they went not away in thiese dayes libertie which they had. They answered, that their Captaine had commaunded them to carry all that golde and silver which they had, to the place where they had left their shippe, and they had promised him to carry it, although they made thepe of fourte iourneys of it, for he promised to giue them part of it besides their wages, but the mariners would haue it by and by, and so their Captaine being angry because they would not take his word, fell out with them, and they with him, in so much that one of the companie would haue killed the Captaine, so that the Captaine would not haue them to carry the treasure, but sayd hee would seeke Negroes to carry it, and so he went, and sought for Negroes, and bringing those Negroes to carry it, he met with the five English men that he had left in his Pinelle which ran from the Spaniards, and the rest also which ran from the house, & they tolde him what the Spaniards had done, and then making friendship with all his men, he promised them halfe of all the treasure if they got it from the Spaniards, and the Negroes promised to helpe him with their bowes and arrowes, and thereupon they came to seeke the Spaniards, and now that some of his companie were killed and taken, he thought it best to returne to his ship, & so to passe backe for England. The Spanish Captaine hearing this, hauing buried the dead bodies, & hauing gotten all things into his Barks, and taking the English men and their Pinnes with him, he returned to Panama: so the voyage of that English man did not prosper with him, as hee thought it would haue done.

Nowe when the four Barks were come to Panama, they sent aduise also to Nombre de Dios, and they of Nombre de Dios, sent also from them other foure Barks (which, as the Spaniards say) found the English ship where he was hid, and brought her to Nombre de Dios: and that the Viceroy of Peru, not thinking it good to suffer fittle English men to remaine in the countrey, sent a seruant of his called Diego de Frees, with 150. shot into the mountaines to seeke them out, who found them making of certaine canoas to go into the North sea, and there to take some Barke or other: some of them were sicke, and were taken, and the rest fled with the Negroes, who in the end betrayed them to the Spaniards, so that they were brought to Panama. And the Justice of Panama asked the English Captaine whether hee had the Ducenes licence, or the licence of any other Prince or Loyde for his attempt. And he answered he had none, whereupon he and all his companie were condemned to dye, and so were all executed, sauing the Captaine, the Waster, the Pilote, and five boyes which were carried to Lima, and there the Captaine was executed with the other two, but the boyes be yet liuing.

The English brought to the Spaniards.

The death of John Oxnam.

The King of Spaine hauing intelligence of these matters, sent 300. men of warre against those Negroes which had assisted those English men, which before were slaines vnto the Spaniards, and, as before is sayd, fled from their masters into those mountaines, and so toynded themselves to the English men, to the end they might the better reuenge them selues on the Spaniards.

At the first comming of these 300. souldiers, they tooke many of the Negroes, and executed great iustice vpon them: But after a season, the Negroes grew wise and wary, and prevented the Spaniards, so that none of them could be taken.

The Spaniards of that Countrey maruelled much at this one thing, to see that since the conquering of this land, there hath bene many French men, that haue come to those Countries, but neuer saw English men there but onely those two of whom I haue spoken. And although there haue many French men bene on the coast, yet neuer durst they put foote vpon land, onely those two English men aduентured it, and did such exploits, as are before remembred.

All these things comming to the hearing of the King of Spaine, he pouided two Gallies well appointed to keepe those coasts: and the first yeere, they tooke sixe or seuen French ships. And after that this was knowne, there were no more French men of warre that durst aduementure to appoch the coast, vntill this present yeere 1586, that the aforesayd Francis Drake, with a strong flecte of 24. shippes arrived there, and made spoyle of S. Domingo, Carthage-na, and S. Augustine, things that are knowne to all the world. But it is likely that if the King of Spaine liue, he will in time provide sufficient remedy, to keepe his Countreys, and subiects from the inuasion of other nations,

The English mens coming to the Indies, caused the King of Spaine to build Gallies to keepe the Stra.

A discourse written by Sir Humfrey Gilbert Knight, to prooue a Passage by the Northwest to Cathaia, and the East Indies.

The Table of the matters contained in euery Chapter of this discourse.

Capitulo 1.

To prooue by authoritie a passage to be on the Northwest side of America, to goe to Cathaia, China, and to the East India.

Capitulo 2.

To prooue by reason a passage to be on the Northwest side of America, to goe to Cathaia, Molluccæ, &c.

Capitulo 3.

To prooue by experience of sundry mens trauailes the opening of this Northwest passage, whereby good hope remaineth of the rest.

Capitulo 4.

To prooue by circumstance, that the Northwest passage hath bene sayled throughout.

Capitulo 5.

To prooue that such Indians as haue bene diuised vpon the coasts of Germanie came not thither by the Southeast, and Southwest, nor from any part of Africke or America.

Capitulo 6.

To prooue that the Indians aforesaid came not by the Northeast, and that there is no thorough passage nauigable that way.

Capitulo 7.

To prooue that these Indians came by the Northwest, which induceth a certaintie of this passage by experience.

Capitulo 8.

What severall reasons, were alleaged before the Queenes Maestie, and certaine Lordes of her Highnesses priuie Counsell, by M. Ienkinson a Gentleman of great traualle and experience, to prooue this passage by the Northeast, wth my seuerall answers then alleaged to the same.

Capitulo 9.

To shew that this passage by the Northwest, is more commodious for our traffike, then the other by the Northeast, if there were any such.

Capitulo 10.

What commodities would ensue, this passage being once discovered.

To prooue by authoritie a Passage to be on the North side of America, to goe to Cathaia, and the East India.

Chapter 1.

When I gaue my selfe to the studie of Geographie, after I had perused and diligently scanned the descriptions of Europe, Asia, and Africke, and conferred them with the Mappes and Globes both Antiquie and Moderne: I came in fine to the fourth part of the world, commonly called America, which by all descriptions I founde to be an Island enuironed round about with the Sea, hauing on the Southside of it, the frete, or straight of Magellan, on the West side Mare de Sur, which Sea runneth towards the North, separating it from the East partes of Asia, where the Dominions of the Cathaians are. On the East part our West Ocean, and on the North side the Sea that seuereth it from Groneland, chooswe which Northren Seas, the Passage lyeth, which I take nowe in hand to discover.

Plato in Timæo, and in the Dialogue called Critias, discourseth of an incomparable great Island, then called Atlantis, being greater then all Africke, and Asia, which lay Westward from the Straights of Gibraltar, nauigable round about: affirming also that the Princes of Atlantis, did atwell enjoy þe gouernance of all Africke, & the most part of Europe, as of Atlantis it selfe.

Also to prooue Platoes opinion of this Island, and the inhabiting of it in auncient time, by them of Europe, to be of the more credite: Marinus Siculus, in his Chronicle of Spaine, reporteth that there hath bene found by the Spaniards, in the Golde Mines of America, certaine pieces of Money, ingraued with the Image of Augustus Cæsar: which pieces were sent to the Pope, for a testimonie of the matter, by Iohn Rufus, Archbishop of Conuentinum.

Moreouer, this was not only thought of Plato, but by Marsilius Ficinus, an excellent Florentine Philosopher,

Philosopher, C
booke De Muni
with water, by r
The like where Superum, it cut
ning of his four

And also the
the Corinthian the sea, and are known of long Vespucius, in th strophis Col

The same ca
time, which son for the manner
vsual moneth,

So that in e cell of this Acl
cerning ther

Then, if wh
round about th Northwest, see not detery tak
the olde, and a Northwest pa America, was acresse of mo

Also Aristo
notations by peare, Asia, A passed about t Island, and in

Also many East of India,
sik, Mare Acl
the earth.

So that it name Atlanti or yet the Se that those S the one and t King ther eol bed between

Therefore this our ente confirmed by Geographers

Michael Tra monranus, P our Anno 1 lega to C. D wards any p sea, from any

All which that Americ land, by the passed to Cat either the S

Philosopher, Crantor the Grecian, Proclus, also Philo the famous Iewe, (as appeareth in his Proclus pag. 4. booke De Mundo, and in the Commentaries vpon Plato) to be ouerflown, and swallowed up with water, by reason of a mighty earthquake, and streaming down of the beu'nly Floodgates. The like whereof happened vnto some part of Scalic, when by the forciblenes of the Sea, called Superum, it cut of Sicilia from the Continent of Calabria, as appeareth in Iustine, in the beginning of his fourth booke. Also there chaunced the like in Zeland a part of Flanders. Iustine Lib. 4.

And also the cities of Pyrrha, and Antissa, about Meotis palus: and also, the citie Buryis, in Plinie the Corynthian bosome, commonly called Sinus Cormthiacus, haue bene swallowed up with the sea, and are not at this day to bee discerned: By which accident, America grew to bee vnknewen of long tyme, vnto vs of the later ages, and was lately discouered againe, by Americus Vesputius, in the yere of our Lord, 1497, which some say to haue bene first discouered, by Christophorus Columbus a Genuois, Anno. 1492.

The same calamitie happened vnto this Ile of Atlantis 600, and odde yeres before Plato his time, which some of the people of the southeast partes of the world accounted as 9000, yeres: for the manner then was to reckon the moone her Period of the Zodiak for a yere, which is our vsual moneth, depending vpon Luminari minore.

So that in these our dayes there can no other mayne of Islande be found or Iudged to bee parcel of this Atlantis, then those Westerne Islands, which beare now the name of America: concerning thereby the name of Atlantis, in the knowledge of our age.

Then, if when no part of the said Atlantis was oppressed by water, & earthquake, the coast round about the same were nauigable: a farre greater hope nowe remaineth of the same by the Northwest, seeing the most part of it was, since that time, swallowed up with water, which could not directly take away the old occyes and chanelles, but rather, be an occasion of the enlarging of the olde, and also an inforcing of a great many newe: why then shoulde we nowe doubt of our Northwest passage & nauigation from England to India? &c. seeing that Atlantis nowe called America, was euer knowne to be an Island, and in those dayes nauigable round about, which by access of moze water coulde not be diminited.

Also Aristotle in this booke de Mundo, and the learned Germaine, Simon Gryneus in his annotations vpon the same, saith that the whole earth (meaning thereby as manifestly doeth appere, Asia, Africk, and Europe, being all the countries then knowne) to be but one Island, compassed about with the reach of the Sea Atlantine: which likewise appoueth America to bee an Island, and in no part adioyning to Asia, or the rest.

Also many Auncient writers, as Strabo and others, called both the Ocean sea (which lieth Strabo lib. 15. East of India) Atlanticum pelagus, and that Sea also on the West coastes of Spayne and Africk, Mare Atlanticum: the distance betweene the two coastes, is almost halfe the compass of the earth.

So that it is incredible, as by Plato appeareth manifestly, that the East Indian Sea had the name Atlanticum pelagus, of the mountaine Atlas in Africk, or yet the Sea adioyning to Africk, or yet the Sea adioyning to Africk had name Oceanus Atlanticus, of the same mountaine: but that those Seas and the mountaine Atlas, were so called of this great Island Atlantis, and that the one and the other, had their names for a memoriall of the mightie yince Atlas, sometime King thereof, who was Iapher yongest sonne to Noah, in whose time the whole earth was deuided betweene the thre brethren, Sem, Cam, and Iaphet.

Wherefore I am of opinion that America by the Northwest, will be founde fauourable to this our enterprise, and also the rather imbodened to beleuee the same, for that I finde it not only confirmed by Plato, Aristotle, and other ancient Philosophers: but also by all the best moderne Geographers, as (Gemma Frisius, Munsterus, Appianus, Hunterus, Gastaldus, Guyccardinus, Michael Trameisus, Franciscus Demongenitus, Barnardus Puteanus, Andreas Vauaso, Tramoncanus, Petrus Martyr, and also Ortelius) who doth coast out in his generall Spappe (set out Anno 1569, all the countreys and capes, on the Northwest side of America, from Hochelegata to C. De Paramantia: describing likewise the sea coastes of Cataia and Grondland, towards any part of America, making both Grondland and America, Islands distoynd by a great sea, from any part of Asia.

All which learned men and painefull traouellers haue affirmed, with one consent and voice, that America was an Island: and that there lyeth a great Sea betweene it, Cataia, and Grondland, by the which any man of our countrey, that will giue the attempt, may with smal danger passe to Cataia, the Molucces, India, and all other places in the East, in much shorter time, then either the Spaniard, or Portugale doeth, or may doe, from the nearest parte of any of their countreys.

Valerius Anselmus in Catago annorum et principum, fol. 6. Gen. 9. 10.

crets within Europe.

We ought by reason right to have a reasonable opinion of worthy men.

What mooued these learned men to affirme thus much, I know not, or to what end so many and sundry travellers, of both ages, haue allowed the same: But I coniecture that they would neuer haue so constantly affirmed, or notified their opinions therein to the world, if they had not had great good cause, and many probable reasons, to haue lead them therunto.

How Lord Burleighs high Creatur of Englands. A Nauigator on of our Ocheber made in King Alirels title.

Now least you should make smal accompt of ancient writers or of their experiences which trauelled long before our times, reckoning their authoritie amongst fables of no importance: I haue for the better assurance of those proofes, set downe some part of a discourse, written in the Saxon tongue, and translated into English by Mr. Nowel seruant to Maister Secretarie Cecil, wherein there is described a Nauigation, which one Ochther made, in the time of King Alired, King of Westsaxe Anno. 871. the wordes of which discourse were these: He sailed right North, hauing alwaies the desert land on the Starborde, and on the Larbord the mayne sea, continuing his course, vntill he perceived that the coast bowed directly towards the East, or else the Sea opened into the lande he could not tel how far, where he was compelled to stay vntill he had a westerne winde, or somewhat vpon the North and sayled thence directly East, alongst the coast, so farre as he was able in foure dayes, where he was a gaine inforced to tary vntill he had a North winde, because the coast there bowed directly towards the South, or at least opened he knew not how far into the land, so that he sayled thence along the coast continually full South, so far as he could trauel in the space of fise dayes, where he discovered a mightie riuer, which opened far into the lande, and in the entrie of this riuer he turned backe againe.

A perfect description of our Mucouia vopage.

Whereby it appeareth, that he went the very same way, that we now do perely trade by S. Nicholas into Mucouia, which way no man in our age knew, for certaintie to be sea, vntill it was since discovered by our English men, in the time of King Edward the sixt: but thought before that time that Groneland had toynd to Normoria Byarmia, & therefore was accompted a new discovery, being nothing so in deede, as by this discourse of Ochthers it appeareth.

25p Sir Hugh Wylloubby, knight, Chauncery and 26p 1599.

Nevertheless if any man should haue taken this soiage in hand, by the incouragment of this onely author, he should haue bene thought but simple: considering that this Nauigation was written so many yeres past, in so barbarous a tongue by one onely obscure author, and yet wee in these our dayes finde by our owne experiences, his former reports to be true.

Howe much moze then, ought we to beleue this passage to Cataia to be, being verified by the opinions of all the best, both Antique, and Moderne Geographers, and plainly set out in the best and most allowed Mappes, Charts, Globes, Cosmographical tables, and discourses of this our age, and by the rest not denyed, but left as a matter doubtful.

To proue by reason, a passage to be on the Northside of America: to goe to Cataia, &c.

CHAP 2.

Experimented by our english ships.

If all seas are maintained by the abundance of water, so that the neerer the ende, any Riuer, Baye or Pauen is, the shallower it waret, (although by some Accidental barre, it is sometime found otherwise) But the farther you saille West, from Island, towards the place, where this fretis thought to be, the more deeper are the seas: which giueth vs good hope, of continuance of the same sea, with Marc del Sur, by some frets that lyeth betwene America, Gronelande, and Cataia.

2 Also, if that America were not an Islande, but a part of the continent adlopying to Asia, either the people which inhabite Mangia, Anian, and Quinzay, &c. being borderers vpon it, would before this time, haue made some roade into it: hoping to haue found some like commodities to their owne:

where makes the old wale so correct.

3 Where the Scythians, and Tartarians (which often times heretofore, haue sought far & nere, for new seats, diuen thereunto, though the necessitie of their colde, and miserable countreys) would in all this time, haue found the way to America, and entred the same, had the passages bene neuer so strait, or difficult: the countrie being so temperate, pleasant and fruitful, in comparison of their own. But there was neuer any such people found there, by any of the Spaniards, Portingals, or Frenchmen, who first discovered the Inland of that Countrie: which Spaniards, or Frenchmen, must then of necessitie, haue seene some one Ciuit man in America, considering how full of ciuit people Asia is: But they neuer sawe so much as one token, or signe, that euer any man of the known part of the world, had bene there.

4 Furthermoze,

4 Furthermoze the people newly discovered in America, haue entred many yeres, before to Cataia, or to any part of Asia, being to Asia, &c. other.

5 Whereunto the the Confines gone from the them together,

6 But neel America, and y performed a y ques de Coron thence by land, 7 Also it ap the East to the inferior bodie wntely seeme from the East to ager, Eastward uers courses, t upon the fret of the earth: and son of the narr yelding to ac farte as Cap. F which is about

8 So that affereth it to America, then Westward to by the authori Finmarke, an force, the n it Magellan to the Spenele ent remainin which it doct show this

The like Conterenus all the coast Gibraltar, by Barbarie, by It may thereby im such soze as Coast of A such like m if pe linke a two gunne counte of cl By the farte soue

9 Also

4 Furthermore, it is to be thought, that if by reason of mountaines, or other craggy places, the people neither of Cataia, or Tartarie coulde enter the countrie of America, or they of America, have entered Asia, if it were so ioynd: yet some one sauage, or wandring beaſt would in ſo many yeeres, haue paſſed into it: but there hath not any time bene found any of the beaſts proper to Cataia, or Tartarie &c. in America: nor of thoſe proper to America, in Tartarie, Cataia, &c. or any part of Aſia. Which thing pꝛoueth America, not only to be one Iſland, and in no part adioyning to Aſia, But alſo that the people of thoſe Countreys, haue not had any traffyke with eache other.

5 Hopeouer at the leaſt ſome one of thoſe painefull trauellers, which of purpoſe haue paſſed the Conſines of both countreys, with intent only to diſcouer, would, as it is moſt likely haue gone from the one to the other: if there had bene any piece of land, or liſthmos, to haue ioynd them together, or elſe haue declared ſome cauſe to the contrary.

6 But neither Paulus venetus, who lꝛued, and dwelt a long time, in Cataia, euer came into America, and yet was at the Sea coaſtes of Mangia, ouer againſt it, where he was imbarked, and perſormed a great Nauigation along thoſe Seas: Neither yet Verarzanus, or Franciſcus vaſques de Coronado, who trauelled the North parte of America by lande, euer found entry from thence by land, to Cataia, or any part of Aſia.

7 Alſo it appeareth to be an Iſland, inſomuch as the Sea runneth by nature circularly, from the Eaſt to the Weſt, following the Diurnal motion of Primum Mobile, and carrieth with it all inferiour bodies mouable, atwel ceſtiall, as elemental: which motion of the waters, is moſt euidently ſeene in the Sea, which lyeth on the Southſide of Afrik, where the current that runneth from the Eaſt to the Weſt, is ſo ſtrong (by reaſon of ſuch motion) that their Portugals in the voyages, Eaſtward to Callicute, in yelling by Cap. De buona ſperança, are enforced to make diuers courſes, the current there being ſo ſwift, as it ſtriketh from thence, all along Weſtward, vpon the ſet of Magellan, being diſtant from thence, neere the fourth part of the longitude of the earth: and not hauing free paſſage and entrance, thow that free towards the Weſt, by reaſon of the narrownes of the ſaid ſtraite of Magellan, it runneth to ſalue this wrong (Nature not yielding to accidental reſtraints) all along the Eaſterne coaſts of America, Northwardes, ſo farre as Cap. Fredo, being the fartheſt knowne place of the ſame continent, towards the North: which is about, 4800. leagues, reckoning therewithal the trending of the land.

8 So that this Current, being continually maintained with ſuch force, as Iaques Cartier affirmeth it to be, who met with the ſame being at Baccalaos, as he ſailed alongſt the coaſtes of America, then, either it muſt of neceſſitie, haue way to paſſe from Cap Fredo, thow that this ſet, Weſtward towards Cataia, being known to come ſo farre, onely to ſalue his former wrongs, by the auſpicious beſoye named: or els it muſt needs ſtrike ouer, vpon the coaſt of Iſland, Lappia, Finmarke, and Norway, (which are Eaſt from the ſaid place, about 360. Leagues) with greater force, then it did from Cap. de buona Sperança, vpon the ſet of Magellan or from the ſet of Magellan to Cap. Fredo, vpon which coaſtes, Iaques Cartier mette with the ſame, conſidering the ſhortneſſe of the Cut, from the ſaide C. Fredo, to Iſland, Lappia, &c. And ſo the cauſe Efficient remaining, it would haue continually followed along our coaſtes, though the narrow ſeas, which it doth not, but is diſſected about the North of Labrador, by ſome though paſſage there, thow this ſet.

The like courſe of the water, in ſome reſpect, happeneth in the Mediterrane Sea (as affirmeth Concerenus) whereth the current, which cometh from Tanais, & the Euxinus, running along all the coaſtes of Greece, Italie, France and Spaine, and not finding ſufficient way out through Gibraltar, by meanes of the ſtraightneſſe of the ſet, it runneth backe againe, alongſt the coaſtes of Barbarie, by Alexandria, Nartolia, &c.

It may (peradventure) bee thought that this courſe of the ſea, doth ſometime ſurceaſe, and thereby impugne this pꝛinciple, becauſe it is not diſcerned all along the coaſt of America, in ſuch ſoye as Iaques Cartier found it: Whereunto I anſwere this: that albeit, in euery part of the Coaſt of America, or els where, this Current is not ſenſibly perceiued, yet, it hath euer moſt ſuch like motion, either the vppermoſt, or nethermoſt part of the ſea: as it may bee proued true, if ye ſinke a ſayle by a couple of ropes, neere the grounde, faſtning to the nethermoſt corners, two gunne chambers or other weights: by the diuining whereof you ſhall plainly perceiue, the courſe of the water, and Current, running with ſuch like courſe in the bottome.

By the like experiment, you may finde the opinarie motion: of the ſea, in the Ocean: howe farre ſoener you be off the land.

9 Alſo there cometh another Current from out the Northeaſt from the Sythian Sea (as Dr. Ienkinſon

The Sea hath three motions. 1 Motum ab oriente in occidentem. 2 Motum fluxus et refluxus. 3 Motum circumlarem. Ad cetera nomina elementa omnia (excepta terra) mouentur.

Postea causa, posterior effectus.

Concerenus.

an oblection answereth The Sea hath euer more peculiar motion, either in Suprema, or concaua superficie aquae.

pp. Jenkinson a man of rare vertue, great trauaile and experience, told me) which runneth Westward towards Labrador, as the other did, which cometh from the South: so that both these Currents, must haue way thowth this our fret, or else incounter together and runne contrary courses, in one line, but no such conflict of streames, or contrary courses are found about any part of Labrador, or Terra noua, as witness our yerely fishers, and other saylers that way, but is there disgraced, as aforesaid, and founde by the experience of Barnard de la Torre, to fall into Mare del Sur.

10 Furthermoze, the Current in the great Ocean, coulde not haue beene maintained to runne continually one way, from the beginning of the world, vnto this day, had there not bene some thowth passage by the fret aforesaid, and so by circular motion, bee brought againe to maintaine it selfe: For the Tides, and courses of the Sea are maintained by their interchangeable motions: as fresh riuers are by springes, by cbbing and flowing, by rarification and condensation.

The flowing is occasioned by reason that the beate of the moone doyleth and maketh the water thine by way of rarification. An experience to proue the falling of this Current, into Mare del Sur.

So that it seemeth not possible (so farre as my simple reason can comprehend) that this perpetuall current, can by any meanes be maintained, but onely by continuall reaccess of the same water, which passeth thowth the fret, and is brought about thither againe, by such Circular motion as aforesaid. And the certaine falling thereof by this fret into Mare del Sur, is proued by the testimonie & experience, of Barnard de la Torre, who was sent from P. del la Natiuidad to the Molluccz, Anno domini 1542. by commaundement of Anthonie Mendoza, then Viceroi of Noua Hispania, which Barnard, sayled 750. Leagues, on the Northside of the Equator, and there met with a current, which came from Northeast the which dyoue him backe againe to Tidore.

Wherefoze, this current being proued to come from C. de buona Speranza, to the fret of Magellan, and wanting sufficient entrance there, by narrownes of the Straite, is by the necessity of nature forced, brought to Terra de Labrador, where Jacques Cartier met the same, and thence certainly knowne, not to strike ouer vpon Island, Lappia, &c. and found by Barnard de la Torre, in Mare del Sur, on the backeside of America, therefore this current (hauing none other passage) must of necessity, fall out thowth this our fret into Mare del Sur, and so trending by the Molluccz, China, and C. De buona Speranza, maintaieth it selfe by circular motion, which is all one in nature, with Morus ab Oriente in Occidentem.

So that it seemeth, we haue now moze occasion to doubt of our returne, then whether there be a passage that way, yea or no: which doubt, hereafter shall be sufficiently removed. Wherefoze, in mine opinion, reason it self, grounded vpon experience, assureth vs of this passage, if there were nothing els to put vs in hope thereof. But least these might not suffice, I haue added in this Chapter following, some further prooffe hereof, by the experience of such as haue passed some part of this discovery: and in the next adioyning to that the authoritie of those, which haue sayled wholly, thowth euery part thereof.

To prouue by experience of sundrie mens trauels, the opening of some part of this Northwest passage: Whereby good hope remaineth of the rest.

CHAP. 3

Paulus Venetus, who dwelt many yeeres in Cataia, affirmed that he sailed 1500 miles, vpon the coastes of Mangia, and Anian, towards the Northeast: alwayes finding the Seas open before him, not onely as farre as he went: but also as farre as he coulde discerne.

2 Also Francisus Valques de Coronado passing from Mexico by Ceuola, through the countrey of Quiuir, to Sierra Neuada, found there a great Sea, where were certaine Schippes laden with Merchandise, the mariners wearing on their heads the pictures of certaine birds, called Alcatrazzi, part wherof were made of golde, and part of siluer: who signified by signes, that they were thirtie dayes comming thither: which likewise proueth America by experience to bee distoynd from Cataia, on that part, by a great Sea, because they could not come from any part of America, as I haue thereof: for that, so farre as is discovered, there hath not bene founde there any one Schippe of that countrey.

3 In like maner, Iohan. Baros, ittifieth that the Cosmographers of China (where he himselfe Baros lib. 9. Of his first Sea voy. cap. 1.

like had bene) allu-tioner all latitude of: And that the hinder.

By whose experience it is proued that what might

4 And I found the weste Grondle de Labrador, 500

5 Spozouer
cier, who made the
of America.

6 Like wise
of the same land,

7 Also I haue that there was a passed to be the po-

Furthermoze
scribed this passage like at Whiteba
the same fret: affir-Northside of Terra rude of 67, & a h
gone to Cataia, &

How as these shall put you in part thereof.

To pr

1 First, as passage wherere

2 Also Plin
there were certai
ted by the king

3 And Plin where there is
lage that way,

4 And for ted, to proue m ly in that behal
were likewise
great tempest,

5 Also wh other Indians

6 Like the Emperours, &

itch runne th... so that both these... contrary... are found about any... lers that way, but... a Torre, to fall into ene mainteined to... had thre not bene... brought againe to... their interchangea-... rification and con-

nd) that this perpe-... successe of the same... such Circular mo-... ur, is p'oued by the... la Natiuidad to the... a, then Viceroy of... e Aequator, and... n backe againe to a, to the fret of Ma-... by the necessitie of... e same, and thence... arnard de la Torre... one other passage)... g by the Molluccs, which is all one in then whether there... emoo'ed, Where-... his passage, if there... I haue added in this... haue passed some... which haue sayled the opening... hope

ermed that he failed... wardes the North-... nely as farre as he om Mexico by Ce-... found there a great... handise, the ma-... part wherof were... ie dayes comming... n Cataia, on that... as Natives ther-... one Shippe of that a (where hee him-... selfe like had bene) affirme that the Sea coast, trendeth from thence North-east, to 50. degrees of Septentrionall latitude, being the farthest part that may, which the Portugals had then knowledge of: And that the saide Cosmographers knewe no cause to the contrary, but that it might continue further.

By whose experiences, America is p'oued to be separate from those partes of Asia, directly against the same. And not contented with the iudgements of these learned men onely, I haue feared what might be further said for the confirmation hereof.

4 And I found that Franciscus Lopes de Gomara affirmeth, America to be an Island, and likewise Gronland: and that Gronland is distant from Lappia 40. leagues, and from Terra de Labrador, 50.

5 Howouer, Aluarus Nunnius a Spaniard, and learned Cosmographer, and Iacobus Cartier, who made two voyages into those partes, and sayled 500. myles upon the North-east coastes of America.

6 Likewise Hieronimus Fracastorius, a learned Italian, and traualler in the North partes of the same land.

7 Also Iaques Carier hauing done the like, heard say at Hochelaga in Noua Francia, howe that there was a great Sea at Saguinay, wherof the end was not known: which they p'cep-ted to be the passage to Cataia.

Furthermore, Sebastian Cabota, by his personal experience and trauell hath set forth, and described this passage in his Charts, which are yet to be seene in the Queenes Maiesties priute Gal-lerie at Whitehall, who was sent to make this discouerie by king Henrie the seventh, and cured the same sex: affirming, that he sayled very farre Westward, with a quarter of the North, on the North-west of Terra de Labrador, the elsuenth of June, untill he came to the Septentrionall latitude of 67. & a halfe degree, and finding the Seas still open, said, that he might, and would haue gone to Cataia, if the mutinie of the Spasser and Spairners had not bene.

Now as these mens experience hath p'oued some part of this passage: so the chapter following shall put you in full assurance of the rest, by their experiences which haue passed through euery part thereof.

To prouue by circumstance that the Northwest passage hath bene failed throughout.

Cap. 4.

The diuersitie betwene brute beastes and men, or betwene the wilde and the imple is, that the one iudgeth by sense onely, and gathereth no iudgement of any thing that he hath not seene, feelt, heard, tasted, or smelled: And the other not so onely, but also smutheth the certaintie of things by reason, before they happen to be seene.
Wherefore I haue added proofes of both sortes, that the one and the other might thereby be satisfied.

Quinq' sensus.
1. Visus.
2. Auditus.
3. Olfactus.
4. Gustus.
5. Tactus.
Singularia sensus, vniuersalia vero
mente percipiun-
tur.

1 First, as Gemma Frisius reciteth, there went from Europe thre brethren through this passage: wherof it tooke the name of Fretum trium fratrum.

2 Also Plinie affirmeth out of Cornelius Nepos, (who wrote 57. yeeres before Christ) that there were certaine Indians vsituen by tempest, vpon the coast of Germanie which were presented by the king of Sueuia, vnto Quintus Metellus Celer, then Gouernour of France.

3 And Plinie vpon the same saith, that it is no maruell though there be Sea by the North, where there is such abundance of moisture: which argueth, that he doubted not of a nauigable passage that way, though which those Indians came.

4 And for the better proofe that the same authoritie of Cornelius Nepos, is not by me wrested, so p'oue my opinion of the Northwest passage: you shall finde the same affirmed moye plainly in that behalfe, by the excellent Geographer Dominicus Marius Niger, who dwelt howe many wayes the Indian Sea stretcheth it selfe, making in that place recital of certaine Indians, that were likewise vsituen through the North Seas from India, vpon the coastes of Germanie, by great tempest, as they were sapling in trade of merchandize.

5 Also whilst Frederic Barbarossa reigned Emperour, Anno Do. 1160. there came certaine other Indians vpon the coast of Germanie.

6 Likewise Othon, in the North of the Gothes affirmeth, that in the time of the Germane Emperours, there were also certaine Indians call by force of weaether, vpon the coast of the

lib. cap. 66.

pag. 590.

Wherof by Franciscus Lopes
de Gomara in his discouerie of India, lib. 1.
cap. 10.

said countrey, which foresaid Indians could not possibly haue come by the Southeast, Southwest, nor from any part of Affrike or America, nor yet by the Northeast: therefore they came of necessity by this our Northwest passage.

To prouue that these Indians aforesaid, came not by the Southeast, Southwest, nor from any other part of Affrike, or America,

Cap. 5.

First, they could not come from the Southeast by Cape de buona Sperança, because the roughness of the Seas there is such (occasioned by the currents and great winds in that part) that the greatest Armadoes the King of Portugal hath, cannot without great difficultie passe that way, much lesse then a Canoa of India could liue in those outrageous seas without shipwacke (being a vessel but of very small burden) and haue conducted themselves to the place aforesaid, being men vnexpert in the Arte of navigation.

2 Also, it appeareth plainly that they were not able to come from alongst the coast of Affrike aforesaid, to those partes of Europe, because the windes doe (for the most part) blow there Easterlie off from the Shore, and the current running that way in like sort, should haue driuen them Westward vpon some part of America, for such windes and tides could neuer haue led them from thence to the said place where they were found, nor yet could they haue come from any of the counteries aforesaid, keeping the seas alwayes, without skillfull mariners to haue conducted them such like courses as were necessarie to performe such a voyage.

3 Presuppasing also, if they had bene driuen to the West (as they must haue bene, comming that way) then they should haue perished, wanting supplie of victuals, not hauing any place (once leauing the coast of Affrike) vntill they came to America, nor from America, vntill they arriued vpon some part of Europe, or the Islands adioining to it to haue refreshed themselves.

4 Also, if (notwithstanding such impossibilities) they might haue recouered Germanie, by comming from India by the Southeast, yet must they without all doubt haue striken vpon some other part of Europe before their arrivall there, as the Isles of Spadera, Portugall, Spaine, France, England, Ireland, &c. which if they had done, it is not credible that they should or would haue departed vndiscovered of the inhabitants: but there was neuer found in those dayes any such ship or men, but onely vpon the coasts of Germanie, where they haue bin sundry times and in sundry ages cast a land: neither is it like that they would haue committed themselves againe to sea, if they had so arriued, not knowing where they were, nor whether to haue gone.

5 And by the Southwest it is vnpossible, because the current aforesaid which commeth from the East, striketh with such force vpon the feet of Spagellan, and fallerh with such swiftnesse and furie into Mare de Zur, that hardly any ship (but not possible a Canoa, with such vnkilfull mariners) can come into our Westerne Ocean through that fret, from the West seas of America as Magellans experience hath partly taught vs.

6 And further, to prouue that these people so arriuing vpon the coast of Germanie, were Indians, and not inhabitants of any part either of Affrike or America, it is manifest, because the natives both of Affrike and America, neither had, or haue at this day (as is reposed) other kind of boates then such as do beare neither masts nor sailes, (except onely vpon the coasts of Barbarie and the Turkes ships) but do carrie themselves from place to place neere the shore, by the oar onely.

To prouue that those Indians came not by the Northeast, and that there is no thorow Nauigable passage that way.

Cap. 6.

It is likely that there should be no thorow passage by the Northeast, whereby to goe round about the world, because all Seas (as aforesaid) are maintained by the abundance of water, waxing more shallow and shellie towards the ende, as we find, it doeth by experience, in Mare Glacial towards the East, which breedeth small hope of any great continuance of that sea, to be nauigable towards the East, sufficient to saile thereby round about the world.

Why the Indians could not come by the Southwest.

That the Indians could not be natives either of Affrike, or of America.

2 Also, it may be obserued the inuention of the partes of it sheweth them an extreme degree, by an arrowe sold for such as the

3 Furthermore, since the sailes are sette neerer the water of no boat

4 Also, the arrowe can well see, rich

5 Also, the colour here their

6 Moreover, to be discerned on the sea, as Mare Mea other knownen hat to the maine sea, which Mare Glacial followeth that open to the maine

7 Moreover, by from the maine the like whereon the sea toward the 8 Also, the fact could not happen (Euery thing the seas are, in fact)

And therefore, the like as Mare Nilus, Danu

9 Furthermore, the throughout uppermost part, small depth, with losing his rest, it is frozen, not in his light or be effect.

10 And yet, yet must it be by of the same about great darkness 11 Furthermore, the no shippe can be to danger of (yet) farre to the 12 And it is recited, for them from the Continent other part of the

And if the purpose for our

Southeast, South
they came of us

not by the

ona Sperança, be the currents and of Spouting bath, then a Canoa of In being a vessel but of e aforesayd, heing

the coast of Affrike
t) blow there Ca
have driven them
haue led them from any of the coun nducted them such

ue bene, comming
ing any place (once untill they arrived
delus.

red Germanie, by Striken upon some
yng gall, Spaine, ep should or would ofe dayes any such
y times and in sum
tes againe to sea.

ch commeth from ch Northwest and ch unskillfull ma
as of America as

manie, were Indi
because the natives der kind of boates Barbarie and the e of onely.

theast, and

east, whereby to re maintained by rds the ende, as ll, which breedeth
owards the East,

1 Also, it standeth scarcely with reason, that the Indians dwelling under Torrida Zona, could more the inuairie of the cold ayre, about the Septentrionall latitude of 80. degrees, under which elevation, the passage by the Northeast, cannot bee (as the often experience had of all the South partes of it the west) seeing that some of the inhabitants of this cold climate (whose Sommer is to them an extreme Winter) haue bene stricken to death, with the cold dampes of the aire, about 72 degrees, by an accidentall mistay, and yet the aire in such like Elevation is alwayes cold, and too cold for such as the Indians are.

Quicquid natu-
rali loco prius
tur, quam climi-
me corrumpitur.

Qualis causa, talis effectus.

3 Furthermore, the piercing cold of the grosse thicke aire so neere the Pole, will so stiffen and furre the sailes and ship cackling, that no mariner can either boiste or strike them (as our experience hath neerer the South, then this passage is presupposed to bee, hath taught vs) without the vse whereof no botage can be performed.

4 Also, the aire is so darkened with continuall mists and fogs so neere the Pole, that no man can well see, either to guide his ship, or direct his course.

5 Also the compass at such elevation doeth very suddenly varie, which things must of force haue bene their destructions, although they had bene men of much more skill then the Indians are.

6 Moreover, all Bays, Gulfes and Riuers doe receiue their increase vpon the fload, sensible to be discerned on the one side of the hope or the other, as many wayes as they be open to any main Sea, as Mare Mediterraneum, Mare Rubrum, Sinus Persicus, Sinus Bodicus, Tharnesis, and all other known hauens or riuers in any part of the world, and each of them opening but on one part to the maine sea, doe likewise receiue their increase vpon the fload the same way, and none other, which Mare Glaciale doeth onely by the West (as W. Jenkinson affirmed vnto me) and therefore it followeth that this Northeast sea, receiuing increase but onely from the West, cannot possible open to the maine Ocean by the East.

Similium finibus ratio.

7 Moreover, the farther you passe into any sea towards the end of it, on that part which is shut up from the maine Sea (as in all those aboue mentioned) the lesse and lesse the tides rise and fall.
The like whereof also happeneth in Mare Glaciale, which prooueth but small continuance of the Sea toward the East.

8 Also, the further ye goe toward the East in Mare Glaciale, the lesse salt the water is: which could not happen, if it were open to the salt Sea towards the East, as it is to the West onely, seeing (Euery thing naturally ingendereth his like) and then must it bee like salt throughout, as all the seas are, in such like climate and elevation.

Quicquid cor-rumpitur à contrario corrup-
tius.

And therefore it seemeth that this Northeast sea is maintained by the riuer Ob, and such like rivers as Mare Ponticum, and Mare Mediterraneum, in the vppermost parts thereof by the riuers Nilus, Danubius, Neper, Tanais, &c.

Omne simile
ignis sui simile.

9 Furthermore, if there were any such Sea at that elevation, of like it should be alwayes frozen throughout (there being no tides to hinder it) because the extreme colouelness of the aire in the vppermost part, and the extreme colouelness of the earth in the bottome, the sea there being but of small depth, where by the our accidentall colouelness doeth meet with the other, and the Sunne not having his reflection so neere the Pole, but at very blunt angles, it can neuer bee dissolved after it is frozen, notwithstanding the great length of their day: for that the sunne hath no heate at all in his light of beames, but proceeding onely by an accidentall reflection, which there wanteth in effect.

10 And yet if the Sunne were of sufficient force in that elevation, to vpeate against this ice, yet must it be broken before it can be dissolved, which cannot bee but through the long continuance of the sunne about their Horizon, and by that time the Sommer would be so farre spent, and so great darkness and cold ensue, that no man could be able to endure so cold, darke, and discomforta-ble a navigation, if it were possible for him then, and there to liue.

11 Further, the Ice being once broken, it must of force so vniue with the windes and tides, that no shippe can saile in those seas, seeing our Fishers of Island, and the New found land, are subiect to danger through the great Islands of Ice which flie in the Seas (to the sailors great danger) farre to the South of that presupposed passage.

12 And it cannot be that this Northeast passage should bee any neerer the South, then before receiued, for then it should cut of Ciremissi, and Turbi, Tartarij, with Vzelucani, Chifani, and others from the Continent of Asia, which are known to be adjoining to Sceptia, Tartaria, &c. with the other part of the same Continent.

And if there were any chonow passage by the Northeast, yet were it so small ende and purpose for our traffique, because no shippe of great burden can navigate in so shallow a Sea:

and ships of small burde are very vnfit and vnprofitable, especially towards the blustering North, to performe such a volage.

To prooue that the Indians aforesnamed, came onely by the Northwest, which induceth a certaintie of our passage by experience.

Cap. 7.

Tis as likely that they came by the Northwest, as it is unlikely that they should come either by the Southeast, Southwest, Northeast, or from any other part of Africa or America, and therefore this Northwest passage hauing bene already so many wayes prooued, by vnsuouing of the others, &c. I shall the lesse need in this place, to vse many wordes other wise then to conclude in this sort, That they came onely by the Northwest from England, hauing these many reasons to lead me therunto.

1 First, the one halfe of the windes of the compasse might bring them by the Northwest, bearing alwayes betweene two heats, with which kinde of sayling the Indians are onely acquainted, not hauing any vse of a bowe line, or quarter winde, without the which no shippe can possibly come either by the Southeast, Southwest, or Northeast, hauing so many sundry Capes to double, whereunto are required such change and shift of windes.

2 And it seemeth likely that they should come by the Northwest, because the coast whereon they were diuic'd, lay East from this our passage, And all windes doe naturally driue a ship to an opposite point from whence it bloweth, not being other wise guided by Arte, which the Indians do vterly want, and therefore it seemeth that they came directly through this our fret, which they might doe with one wind.

3 For if they had come by Cape de buona Sperança, then must they (as aforesaid) haue fallen vpon the South partes of America.

4 And if by the fret of Magellan, then vpon the coasts of Africke, Spaine, Portugall, France, Ireland or Englund.

5 And if by the Northeast, then vpon the coasts of Ceremissi, Tartarij, Lappia, Island, Terra de Labrador, &c. and vpon these coasts (as aforesaid) they haue neuer bene found.

So that by all likelihood they could neuer haue come without ship wracke vpon the coastes of Germanie, if they had first striken vpon the coastes of so many countries, wanting both Arte and shipping to make orderly discovery, and altogether ignorant both in the Arte of Nauigation, and also of the Rocks, flats, Sands, or Hauens of those parts of the world, which in most of these places are plentifull.

6 And further it seemeth very likely, that the inhabitauntes of the most part of those countries, by which they must haue come any other way besides by the Northwest, being for the most part Anthropophagi, or men eaters, would haue deuoured them, slaine them, or (at the least wise) kept them as wonders for the age.

So that it plainly appeareth that those Indians (which as you haue heard in sundry ages were diuic'd by tempest vpon the shoare of Germanie) came onely through our Northwest passage.

7 Moreover, the passage is certainly prooued by a Nauigation that a Portugall made, who passed through this fret, giuing name to a Promontorie farre within the same, calling it after his owne name, Promontorium Corterialis, neere adioyning vnto Poliscus fluiuius.

8 Also one Scolmus a Dane, entred and passed a great part thereof.

9 Also there was one Salua Terra, a Gentleman of Victoria in Spaine, that came by chance out of the West Indias, into Ireland, Anno 1568, who affirmed the Northwest passage from vs to Cataia, constantly to be beleeued in America nauigable, And further said in the presence of Sr Harry Sidney (then lord Deputie of Ireland) in my hearing, that a Frier of Mexico, called Andro Vrdaneta, more then eight yeeres before his then comming into Ireland, tolde him ther, that he came frō Mare del Sur into Germanie through this Northwest passage, and shewed Salua Terra (at that time being then with him in Mexico) a Sea Card made by his owne experience and trauell in that volage, wherein was plainly set downe and described this Northwest passage, agreeing in all points with Ortelius mappe:

And

Crux, borb in venis oblique fimbrius, as al sa in venis ex
diametro spi
cibus,

B

he found a Naui
gation, which he

The first was very farre towar dage to be that w

Whereunto I

the Arte of Naui gation true: an east in a wide sea,

Or if he failed doubling of man
along the shoare.

And further, in nothing that was small assurance beejudged by th at sea.

Northwe

And further, west) that there
to publish the same
make the passage and experience (as Salua Terra ua Terra, being y Spaniards in ha which of like be And now as t
these things (g
to prooue this pas
then vterly vnkn
yeeres before Ch
hath these wordes dayes of Asiuera Christ. Also Qu
India. Also, Aria
Aria, and of Gara that both India &

These things
by the Northwest
and in all, by the named, the India
And yet no certai tain by the North
the year followi

Certaine

North

And further, this Frier tolde the king of Portugall (as hee returned by that countrey home-ward) that there was (of certaintie) such a passage Northwest from England, and that he meant to publish the same: which done, the king most earnestly desired him not in any wise to disclose or make the passage knowne to any nation: For that (sayde the king) if England had knowledge and experience thereof, it would greatly hinder both the king of Spayne and me. This Frier (as Salua Terra reported) was the greatest Discoverer by sea, that hath bene in our age. Also Salua Terra, being perswaded of this passage, and by the common opinion of the Spaniards inhabiting America, offered most willingly to accompanie mee in this Discouerie, which of like he would not haue done if he had stood in doubt thereof.

And now as these moderne experiences cannot be impugned, so least it might be objected that these things (gathered out of ancient writers, which were so many yeeres past) might serue little to prouoe this passage by the North of America, because both America and India were to them then utterly unknowne: to remouee this doubt, let this suffice: That Aristotle, (who was 300. yeeres before Christ) named Mare Indicum. Also Berofus (who liued 330. yeeres before Christ) hath these wordes, Ganges in India. Also in the first chapter of Helles hee these wordes, In the dayes of Afluerus which ruled from India to Aethiopia, which Afluerus liued 580. yeeres before Christ. Also Quintus Curtius (where hee speaketh of the Conquests of Alexander) mentioneth India. Also, Arianus Philostratus, and Sidrach in his discourses of the warres of the king of Bactria, and of Garaab, who had the most part of India vnder his government. All which assured vs, that both India and Indians were knowne in those dayes.

These things considered, we may (in my opinion) not onely assure our selues of this passage by the Northwest, but also that it is nauigable both to come and goe, as hath bene prououed in part and in all, by the experience of diuers s, as Sebastian Cabora, Corterialis, the three brethren aboue named, the Indians, and Vrdaneta the Frier of Mexico, &c.

And yet notwithstanding all which, there be some that haue a better hope of this passage to Cataia by the Northeast then by the West, whose reasons with my seuerall answers ensue in the chapter following.

Certaine reasons alleaged for the proueing of a passage by the Northeast, before the Queenes Maiestie, and certaine Lordes of the Counsell, by Master Anthome Ienkinson, with my seuerall answers then vsed to the same.

Cap. 8.

BEcause you may vnderstand as well those things alleaged against mee, as what doth serue for my purpose, I haue here addeed the reasons of M. Anthome Ienkinson a worthy gentleman, and a great traveller, who conceiued a better hope of the passage to Cataia from vs, to be by the Northeast, then by the Northwest.

He first said that hee thought not to the contrary, but that there was a passage by the Northwest, according to mine opinion: but assured hee was, that there might be found a nauigable passage by the Northeast from England, to goe to all the East parts of the world, which hee endeouored to prouoe three wayes.

The first was that hee heard a Siberian of Tartaria say in hunting the Morce, that hee sailed very farre towards the Southeast, finding no ende of the Sea: whereby hee hoped a thoro' waye passage to be that way.

Whereunto I answered, that the Tartarians were a barbarous people, and utterly ignorant in the Arte of Nauigation, not knowing the vse of the Sea Card, Compaſſe or Starre, which hee counted true: and therefore they could not (said I) certainly knowe the Southeast from the Northeast, in a wide sea, and a place unknowne from the sight of the land.

Or if hee sailed any thing neere the Shore, yet hee (being ignorant) might be deceiued by the bounding of many points and Capes, and by the trending of the land, albeit hee kept continually along the Shore.

And further, it might be that the poore Siberian though simplicitie, thought that there was nothing that way but Sea, because hee sawe no land: which prooue (vnder correction) giueth small assurance of a nauigable Sea by the Northeast, to goe rounde about the world. For that hee iudged by the eye onely, seeing we by this our cleare eye doe account twentie miles a heuere at Sea.

The words of the king of Portugall, to Salua Terra, touching the concealing of this Northwest passage from England to Cataia.

An objection.

Aristotle lib. de mundo, cap. 3. Berofus lib. 5.

The Northwest passage affirmed vnder.

The first reason.

The answer on resolution.

Vitus nonnunquam fallitur in suo obiecto.

st passage.

uffering North,

y by the

that they should
any other part of ing bene already all the lesse need in his voye. That they many reasons to Northwest, bee onely acquaint-

type can possibly Capes to double,

e coast whereon
drive a ship to re, which the In-
is our fret, which

e said) haue fallen

Portingall, France,

pia, Island, Terra
and.

pon the coastes of ing both Arte and Nauigation, and most of these pla-

f those countries;
for the most part least wise) hepe

in sundry ages Northwest pas-

ingall made, who calling it after his

e came by chance
best passage from
of the presence of
of Mexico, called
tolde him there,
and between Salua
dome experience Northwest passage,

And

The second reason of allegation.

This second reason is, that there was an Unicoynes home found upon the coast of Cataia, which could not come (sayd he) thither by any other means then with the tides, though some free in the North-east of Mare Glaciale, there being no Unicoyne in any part of Asia, saving in India and Cataia, which reason (in my simple iudgement) forceth as little.

The answer of
resolution.

First, it is doubtfull whether those barbarous Cartarians do know an Unicoynes home, yea, or no: and if it were one, yet it is not credible that the Sea could haue dyuen it so farre, being of such nature that it wold not swimme.

Also the tides running too & fro, would haue dyuen it as farre backe with the ebbe, as it brought it forward with the flood.

There is also a beast called Ainus Indicus (whose home most like it was) which hath but one home like an Unicoyne in his forehead, whereof there is great plentie in all the North parts thereof adjoining, as in Lappia, Noruegia, Finmarke, &c. as Iacobus Zeiglerus writeth in his historie of Scandia.

And as Albertus saith, there is a fish which hath but one home in his forehead like to an Unicoyne, and therefore it seemeth very doubtfull both from whence it came, and whether it were an Unicoynes home, yea, or no.

The third and last reason of assertion.

This third and last reason was, that there came a continuall streame of currant, through Mare Glaciale, of such swiftnesse (as a Colmax told him) that if you cast any thing therein, it would presently be carried out of sight towards the West.

The answer of
resolution.

Whereunto I answered, that there doth the like flow from Mzotis Palus, by Pontus Euxinus, Sinus Bosphorus, and along the coast of Græcia, &c. As it is affirmed by Contarenius, and diuers others that haue had experience of the same: and yet that Sea lieth not open to any maine Sea that way, but is maintained by freshets as by Tanais, Danubius, &c.

In like manner is this currant in Mare Glaciale increased and maintained by the Dvina, the riuer Ob, &c.

Now as I haue here briefly recited the reasons alleaged, to prouoe a passage to Cataia by the North-east, with my severall answers thereunto: so will I leave it to your iudgement, to hope or dispaire of either at your pleasure.

How that the passage by the Northwest is more commodious for our traffique, then the other by the East, if there were any such.

Cap. 9.

First, by the North-east (if your windes doe not giue you a matuelous speedie and luckie passage) you are in danger (being so neere the Pole) to bee benighted almost the one half of the yeere, and what danger that were, to liue so long comfortlesse, void of light, (if the cold killed you not) each man of reason or understanding may iudge.

2 Also Mangia, Quinzai, and the Molluccæ, are neerer vnto vs by the North-west, then by the North-east, more then two five parts, which is almost by the halfe.

3 Also we may haue by the West a yeerely returne, it being at all times nauigable, whereas you haue but 4. months in the whole yeere to goe by the North-east: the passage being at such elevation as it is formerly expressed, for it cannot be any neerer the South.

4 Furthermore, it cannot be finished without diuers windings by the way, hauing no hauiens in any temperate climate to harbour in there: for it is as much as wee can well saile from hence to S. Nicholas, in the trade of Spoutouta, and returne in the nauigable season of the yeere, and from S. Nicholas to Cerimiffi Tartarij, which standeth at 80. degrees of the Septentrional latitude, it is at the least 400. leagues, which amounteth scarce to the third part of the way, to the ende of your voyage by the North-east.

5 And yet after you haue doubled this Cape, if then there might be found a nauigable Sea to carrie you South-east according to your desire, yet can you not winter conueniently, until you come to 60. degrees, and to take by one degree running South-east, you must saile 24. leagues and three foure partes, which amounteth to 495. leagues.

6 Furthermore, you may by the North-west saile thither with all Easterlie windes, and to returne with any Westerly windes, whereas you must haue by the North-east sumptie windes, and those proper, according to the lying of the coast and Capes, you shall bee enforced to double,

which

which windes
be greatly pro-longable, who

7 Whereupon
there were any what privilege riching (so great hauling to great

But by the Christian of W

8 Also the great princes of the succour the should happen.

Further, no
is at this present er, for it is the l

How it seeme things were, a are highly decla

Wh

2 For throu-hought from e
And further, th

any part of Am

3 Also we jurisdictions, ious stones, c chandise of an
the Mournies.

4 Also we
our countrey,
ced to commit

5 Whereupon
scape some co
seme best for

6 Beside w appeareth in H
then the colour
as part of his ur, of such like great estimati farre better be ding either by part of Europ

which winde is not alwaies to be had; when they are looked for: whereby your iourney should be greatly prolonged, and hardly endured so neere the Pole. As we are taught by Sir Hugh Willoughby, who was frozen to death farre neerer the South.

7 Howeuer, it is very doubtful, whether we should long ioy that trade by the Northwest, if there were any such passage that way, the commodities thereof once knowne to the Spaniards, what priuilege soeuer he hath granted, seeing pollice with the maze of exorbitant gaine; to the wishing (so greatly) of himselfe and all his dominions, would perswade him to presume the same, being so great an opportunity, to better the commodities of those countries by the Narue.

But by the Northwest, we may safely trade without danger, or annoyance of any prince living, Christian or Heathen, it being out of all their trades.

8 Also the Queenes Spanisches dominions are neerer the Northwest passage then any other great princes that might passe that way, and both in their going and returne, they must of necessity succour themselves and their shippes upon some part of the same, if any tempestuous weather should happen.

Further, no prince in auiie of the world, is able to encounter the Queenes Spanisches nauie, as it is at this present: and yet it should be greatly increased by the traffike ensuing upon this discovery, for it is the long voyages that increase and maintaine great shipping.

Now it seemeth necessarie, to declare what commodities would growe thereby, if all these things were, as we haue heretofore presupposed, and thought them to be: which next adioyning are briefly declared.

What commodities would ensue, this passage once discovered.

Chap. 10.

If it were the onely way for our princes, to possesse the wealth of all the East parts (as they terme them) of the world, which is infinite: as appeareth by the experience of Alexander the great, in the time of his conquest of India, and other the East partes of the world, alleged by Quintus Curtius, which would be a great advancement to our countrey, woonderfull enriching to our prince, and vspeakable commodities to all the inhabitants of Europe.

2 For though the shortness of the voyage, we should be able to sell all manner of merchandize, brought from thence, farre better cheape then either the Portugall or Spaniard doth or may doe. And further, there with the Portugall in the East, and the Spaniard in the West, by trading to any part of America, thow in Mare del Sur, where they can no manner of way offend vs.

3 Also we sayle to diuers marvellous rich countreyes, both ciuill and others, out of both their iurisdictiones, trades and traffikes, where there is to be found great abundance of golde, siluer, precious stones, cloth of golde, silkes, all manner of spices, grocery wares, and other kindes of merchandize of an inestimable price, which both the Spaniard and Portugall, through the length of their iournies, can not well attaine vnto.

4 Also we might inhabit some part of those countreyes, and settle there such needie people of our countrey, which no way trouble the common wealth, and though want here at home, are inclined to commit ourragious offences, whereby they are daily consumed with the gallows.

5 Howeuer, we might from all the aforesaid places haue a yeerely returne, in inhabiting for our staple some convenient place of America, about Sierra Neuada, or some other part, whereas it shall seeme best for the shortning of the voyage.

6 Beside bettering of our countrey commodities, which the Indians, &c. much esteeme: as appeareth in Hester, where the prince is expelled of the great king of India, Assuerus, who matcheth the coloured clothes, where with his houses and tents were apparelled, with golde and siluer, as part of his greatest treasure: not mentioning either veluets, silkes, cloth of golde, cloth of siluer, or such like, being in those countreyes most plentiful: whereby it plainly appeareth in what great estimation they would haue the clothes of this our countrey, so that there would be found a farre better vent for them by this meanes, then yet this realme euer had: and that without depending either vpon France, Spayne, Flanders, Portugall, Hambowgh, Emiden, or any other part of Europe.

7 Also

7 Also, heere we shall increase, both our shippes and mariners, without burthening of the State.

8 And also haue occasion to set poore mens children to learne handie craftes, and thereby to make cristles and such like, which the Indians and these people do much esteeme: by reason whereof, there should be none occasion to haue our country combed with loiterers, bagabonds, and such like idle persons.

All these commodities would grow by following this our discovery, without injury done to any Christian prince, by crossing them in any of the sayd trades, whereby they might take any just occasion of offence.

This haue I briefly shewed you some part of the grounds of mine opinion, trusting that you will no longer iudge me fantastike in this matter: seeing I haue conceived no hope of this voyage, but am persuaded therunto by the best Cosmographers of our age, the same being confirmed, both by reason and certaine experiences.

Also this discovery, hath bene diuers times heretofore by others, both offered, attempted and performed.

It hath bene offered by Stephan Gomes vnto Carolus the sixt Emperour, in the yeere of our Lord God 1527, as Alphonso Villu testifieth in the story of Carolus life: who would haue set him forth in it (as the story mentioneth) if the great want of money, by reason of his long warres had not caused him to surreas the same.

And the king of Portugal, fearing lest the Emperour would haue persecuted in this his enterprise, gaue him, to leaue the matter vnattempted, the summe of 35000 crownes: and it is to be intended that the king of Portugal would not haue giuen to the Emperour such summes of money for eggs in mooneshine.

It hath bene attempted by Corterialis the Portugall, Scolmus the Dane, and by Sebastian Cabota in the time of king Henry the seuenth.

And it hath bene performed by the thye brethren, the Indians aforesaid, and by Vrdaneta the friser of Mexico.

Also diuers haue offered the like vnto the French king, who hath sent two or thre times to haue discovered the same: The discoverers, spending & consuming theyr vicualles, in searching the gulffes and bays betweene Florida and Terra de Labrador, whereby the life is spoken to the after commers.

So that the right way may now easily be found out in short time: and that with little expence and little expences.

For America is discovered so farre towards the North, as Cape Fredo, which is at 62 degrees, and that part of Gronland next adioyning, is knowne to stand but at 72 degrees. So that we haue but 10 degrees to saile North and South, to put the world out of doubt herof: and it is likely that the king of Spaine, and the king of Portugal would not haue sat out all this while, but that they are sure to possess to themselves, all that trade they now vse, and fear to deale in this discovery, lest the Queenes Maiestie, hauing so good opportunity, and finding the commodity which thereby might ensue to the common weale, would cut them off, and enjoy the whole traffique to her selfe, and thereby the Spaniards and Portugalls, with theyr great charges, should beate the bushe, and other men catch the birds: which thing they forseeing, haue commanded, that no pilot of theys, vpon paine of death, should seeke to discover to the Northwest, or plat out in any Sea card any thow way passage that way by the Northwest.

Now, and if you will indifferently compare the hope that remaineth, to animate me to this enterprise, with those likelihoods which Columbus alleged before Ferdinando the king of Castilia, to prouue that there were such Islands in the West Ocean, as were after by him and others discovered, to the great commodity of Spaine and all the world: you will thinke then this Northwest passage to be most woorthy trauell thereto.

For Columbus had none of the West Islands set forth vnto him, either in globe or card, neither yet once mentioned of any writer (Plato excepted, and the commentaries vpon the same) from 942 yeeres before Christ, vntill that day.

Howeuer, Columbus himselfe had neither seene American or any other of the Islands about it, neither vnderstood he of them, by the report of any other that had seene them, but onely comforted himselfe with this hope, that the land had a beginning where the Sea had an ending: for as touching that which the Spaniards doe vnder a Biscaine, which should haue taught him the way thither, it is thought to be imagined of them, to depprue Columbus of his honour, being none of the country man, but a stranger boyne.

This discovery offered.

This discovery attempted.

This discovery performed.

The labour of this discovery shouled by other mens trauell.

Why the kings of Spaine and Portugal would not perseuer in this discovery.

And if it were the knowledge of And albeit, touching experience, and authoritie, and cure part of lumbus wance.

These things which this discovery with learned Bay, bene referred for happy: desiring if I may perceive you a large discovery.

And further, to performe the same wherein I haue as I haue bene.

And therein I make the degree.

And haue also first knowing of And a price of any discovery, mayes then one.

Desiring you will enterprise: the same remaine.

And therefore is not worthie and his owne hope in this behalfe.

Certain

F

ought in respect of. Our weight, books, for like South-eastern, lie acquainted of all men, and spoken of, better further.

The second South continent doe reade of, for doubt the Sp there, could the theretwixt the y burthening of the and thereby to e: by reason tober gabonds, and such injury done to any might take any ill trusting that you hope of this voy-

being confirmed,
ed, attempted and in the peere of our ho would have let
of his long warres
red in this his en-
wines: and it is to re such summes of
and by Sebastian
d by Vrdaneta the
of three times to alles, in searching is is spoken to the
with little to operdie which is at 63 de-72 degrees. So doubt hereof: and we see out all this ble, and feare to le, and finding the hem off, and entoy
with the py great
they foreteling,
to discover to the
thwest.
make me to this co-
king of Castilia,
and others discov-
in this voythe
globe of earth, nei-on the same) from The Islands about but onely comfop-
an ending: for as he taught him the hour, being none
And

And if it were true of the Biscane, yet did yet but roue at the matter, or (at the least) gathered the knowledge of it, by conjectures onely.

And albeit, my selfe haue not seene this passage, or any part thereof, but am ignorant of it as touching experience (as Columbus was before his attempt made) yet haue I both the report, relation, and asseveration of diuers most credible men, which haue both seene and passed through some and euery part of this discouerie, besides sundry reasons for my assurance thereof: all which Columbus wanted,

These things considered, & indifferently weighed together, with the wonderfull commodities which this discouerie may bring, especially to this realme of England: I must needs conclude with learned Baptista Ramusius, and diuers other learned men, who said, that this discouerie hath bene reserved for some noble prince or woorthie man, thereby to make himselfe rich, and the world happy: desiring you to accept in good part this briefe and simple discourse, written in haste, which if I may perceiue that it shall not sufficiently satisfie you in this behalfe, I will then impart vnto you a large discourse, which I haue written onely of this discouery.

And further, because it sufficeth not, onely to know that such a thing there is, without abilitie to performe the same, I will at leasure make you partaker of another simple discourse of nauigation, wherein I haue not a little crauelled, to make my selfe as sufficient to bying these things to effect, as I haue bene readie to offer my selfe therein.

And therein I haue deuised to amend the errors of vsuall sea cards, whose common fault is, to make the degrees of longitude in euery latitude of one like bignesse.

And haue also deuised therein a Spherickall instrument, with a compasse of variation for the perfect knowing of the longitude.

And a precise orderto prick the sea card together, with certaine infallible rules for the voyning of any discouery, to know at the first entering of any fret, whether it lie open to the Deau more wayes then one, how farre fouer the sea stretcheth it selfe into the land.

Desiring you hereafter to uer to mislike with me, for the taking in hand of any laudable and honest enterprise: for if through pleasure or idleness we purchase shame, the pleasure vanissheth, but the shame remaineth for euer.

And therefore to giue me leaue without offence, alwayes to liue and die in this minde. That he is not woorthie to liue at all, that for feare, or danger of death, shunneth his country seruice, and his owne honour: seeing death is inuicible, and the fame of vertue immortall. Whereto in this behalfe, Mutare vel timere sperno.

Peres qui vult bras tunc.

Certaine other reasons, or arguments to prouue a passage by the Northwest, learnedly written by M. Richard Willes Gentleman.

Our famous wayes there be spoken of to those fruitfull and wealthy Islands, which we do vsuallly call Mollucacs, continually haunted for gain, and dayly trauelled for riches therein growing. These Islands, although they stand East from the Meridian, distant almost halfe the length of the world, in the extreme heate, vnder the Equinoctiall line, possessed of Indidelles and Barbarians: yet by our neighbours great abundance of wealth there is painefull sought in respect of the voyage decreely bought, and from thence dangroufully brought home vnto vs. Our neighbours I call the Portugallies in comparison of the Molucchians for narrowness vnto vs, for like situation Westward as we haue, for they vsuall trade with vs, for that the farre South-eastlings doe knowe this part of Europe by no other name then Portugall, not greatly acquainted as yet with the other Nations thereof. The voyage is very well understood of all men, and the South-easterne way rounde about Affrike by the cape of Good hope, more spoken of, better knowne and crauelled, then that it may seeme needfull to discourse thereof any further.

The seconde way lyeth South-west, betweene the West Indle of South America, and the South continent, though that narrow straighe where Magellanus first of all men that euer we doe reade of, passed these latter yeeres, leaving thereunto therefore his name. This way no doubt the Spaniards woulde commodiously take, for that it lyeth neere vnto theyr dominions there, could the Easterne current and leuant windes as easily suffer them to returne, as speedily therewith they may be carryed thither: for the which difficultie, or rather impossibility of striving against

1. By the Southwest.

2. By the Southwest.

against the force both of winde and streame, this passage is little or nothing vfed, although it be very well knowne.

3. By the Northwest.

The third way by the Northwest, beyond all Europe and Asia, that woorthy and renowned knight Sir Hugh Willoughbie sought to his perill, enforced there to end his life for colde, congealed and frozen to death. And cruelly this way consisteth rather in the imagination of Geographers, then allowable either in reason, or approved by experience, as well it may appear by the dangerous trending of the Serpenth Cape led by Ortelius under the 80 degree North, by the unlikely sailing in that Northerne sea alwaies clad with ice & snow, or at the least continually pestered therewith, if happily it be at any time dissolved: besides bays and shelves, the water waiping more shallow towards the East, that we say nothing of the foule mists and darke fogs in the colde climate, of the little power of the Sunne to cleare the ayre, of the uncomfortable nights, so nere the Pole, sixe moneths long.

Ortelius, Astr.

4. By the Northwest.

A fourth way to go unto these aforesaid happy Islands Molucca, Sir Humfrey Gilbert learned and ballant knight, disourseth of at large in his new passage to Cathayo. The enterprise of it selfe being vertuous, the fact must doubtlesse deserue high praise, and whensoever it shall be finished, the fruits thereof can not be small: where vertue is guide, there is fame a follower, and fortune a companion. But the way is dangerous, the passage doubtful, the voyage not thoroughly knowne, and therefore gainesaid by many, after this maner.

Ob. 1.

First, who can assure vs of any passage rather by the Northwest then by the Northeast? doe not both wayes lye in equal distance from the North Pole? stande not the North Capes of either continent under like elevation? Is not the Ocean Sea beyonde America farther distant from our Meridian by thirtie or forty degrees West, then the extreme pointes of Cathayo Eastward, if Ortelius generall Carde of the world be true. In the Northwest that noble knight Sir Hugh Willoughbie perished for colde: and can you then promise a passenger any better happe by the Northwest? who hath gone for triall sake, at any time, this way out of Europe to Cathayo.

In Centre.

Ob. 2.

If you seeke the aduise herein of such as make profession in Cosmographie, Ptolome the father of Geographie, and his eldest childe, will answere by theyr mapes with a negatiue, concluding most of the sea within the land, and making an end of the world Northward, nere the 63 degree. The same opinion, when learning chiefly boythen, was received in the Romans time, as by theyr Poets writings it may appear: Et re colet vltima Thule, said Virgil, being of opinion, that Island was the extreme part of the world habitable toward the North. Ioseph Moletius an Italian, and Mercator a Germane, for knowledge men able to be compared with the best Geographers of our time, the one in his halfe Apphars of the whole world; the other in some of his great globes, haue continued the West Indies land, euen to the North Pole, and consequently cut off all passage by sea that way.

The same doctors, Mercator in other of his globes and mapes, Moletius in his sea carde, notwithstanding doubting of so great continuance of the former continent, haue opened a gulfe betwixt the West Indies and the extreme Northerne land: but such a one, that richer is not to be traueled for the causes in the first objection alleged, or cleare that by from vs in Europe by Greenland: the South end wherof Moletius maketh firme land with America, the North part continent with Lapland and Norway.

Ob. 3.

Thirdly, the greatest fauourers of this voyage, can not deny but that if any such passage be, it lyeth subiect vnto ice and snow for the most part of the yere, whereas it flourisheth in the edge of the frosty Zone. Before the Sunne hath warmed the ayre, and dissolved the ice, how will it knoweth that there can be no sailing: the ice once broken through the continuall abode the Sunne maketh a recreate reason in those parts: how shall it be possible for so weak a vessel as a Shippe is, to holde out amid whole Islands, as it were of ice continually beathing on each side, and at the mouth of the gulfe, issuing downe furiously from the North safely to passe, when whole mountains of ice and snow shall be combed downe vpon her.

Ob. 4.

Well, grant the West Indies not to continue continent vnto the Pole, grant there be a passage betwene these two lands, let the gulfe lye neerer vs then commonly in cartes we finde it set, namely, betwene the 61 and 64 degrees North, as Gemma Frisius in his mapes and globes imagineth it, and so left by our country man Sebastian Cabor in his table which the Earle of Derby hath at Chertles: Let the way be voyde of all difficulties, yet doeth it not follow that we haue free passage to Cathayo. For examples sake: You may tread all Norway, Finmarke, and Lapland, and then bow Southward to Saint Nicholas in Moscovia: you may likewise in the Mediterranean Sea fetch Constantinople, and the mouth of Tanais: yet is there no passage passage by Sea in the aforesaid parts and Spic bayes iourney lucas, for though the North, usually called pan, yea three thors to passage there being open unto any one that minde, no French Geog of a Part you well agreeth to part est, Asia part of Asia.

Furthermore by such a new and siluer, no lawe denyng nature to let in a there impious the woorthy temper to be brought in those Seas, hollie.

Finally, all traueilers might say, that wealthiers, haue sought singalles doe hardly taught by viously on that can returne thence, then we following after other currant fr ether it is of necessity consequently the South into Mahans fret, both in Don Diego set downe.

Neuertheles Europe, we h Frisus receiue Pratum. Further spea Spanish pious out of Mar del by his owne credit.

Now if the ceberth arte, that cure were Europe into M way to be nau although it be be-

by and renowned is like for cold, conmation of Geogra-
may appear by the North, by the in-continually pecked
water working more in the colde climate,
so neere the Pole,

Freyc Gilbert a leat-The enterprise of ruer it shall be fini-
lower, and forme
throughly knowne,

the North-east doe North Capes of Cy-rica farther distant prizes of Cathayo North-east that noble like a passenger any his way out of Eu-

Proleme the father a negative, conclurd, neere the 63 de-Romans time, as by being of opinion, Ioseph Moletius an with the best Geo-
ether in some of his d consequently cut

in his sea carde, ne-ned a gulf betwixt
not to be trauelled by Groenland: the part continent with such passage be, it

the edge of the fro-
one well knoweth the Summe maketh a shippe is, to holde the mouth of that uncertaine of use and

tant there be a pas-des we finde it ser-happes and globes the Earle of Bed-
not follow that true or way, Finmarke, a: so way may like-
his: yet is there no passage

passage by Sea through Moscouia into Pont Euxine, now called Mare Maggiore. A game, in the aforesaid Mediterranean sea, we sail to Alexandria in Egypt, the Barbarians bring the peare and spices from the Moluccas by the red sea and Arabian goulph to Sues, yearly theye payes iourney from the aforesaid haven: yet haue we no way by sea from Alexandria to the Moluccas, for that Istmos of little straight of land betwene the two seas. In like manner although the Northerne passage be free at 61 degrees latitude, and the West Ocean beyond America, usually called Mar del Zur, known to be open at 40 degrees elevation, for the Island Giapan, yea three hundred leagus Northely about Giapan: yet may there be lande to hinder the shorow passage that way by Sea, as in the examples aforesaid it falleth out, Asia and America there being ioyned together in one continent. We can this opinion seeme also together frivolous unto any one that diligently peruseth our Cosmographers doings. Iosephus Moletius is of that minde, not onely in his plaine Hemisphere of the worlde, but also in his Sea card. The French Geographers in like manner, be of the same opinion, as by the mappe cut out in some of a Cart you may perceiue: as though the West Indies were part of Asia. Which sentence well agreeth with that olde conclusion in the Schooles: Quidquid præter Africam & Europam est, Asiæ est. Whatsoeuer land doth neither appertaine unto Africke nor to Europe, is part of Asia.

Furthermore it were to small purpose to make so long, so painefull, so doubtfull a voyage as by such a new found way, if in Cathayo you should neither be suffered to lande for silkes and siluer, nor able to seth the Molucca spices and pearle for piracle in those Seas. Of a late dening all Aliens to enter into China, and forbidding all the inhabitants vnder a great penalty to let in any stranger into those countreyes, shall you reade in the report of Galeotto Perera there imprisoned with other Portugallies: as also in the Giaponish letters, howe for that cause the woorthie traueler Xauierus bargained with a Barbarian merchant for a great summe of pey- per to be brought into Canton, a port in Cathayo. The great and dangerous piracie used in those Seas, no man can be ignorant of, that listeth to reade the Giaponish and East Indian histories.

Finally, all this great labour would be lost, all these charges spent in vaine, if in the end our travellers might not be able to returne againe, and bring safely home into theyr owne native countrey, that wealth and riches, they in foreyn regions with aduventure of goods, and danger of theyr liues, haue sought for. By the North-east there is no way, the South-east passage the Portugallies doe holde, as the Lords of those Seas. At the South-west Magellanus experience hath partly taught vs, and partly we are persuaded by reason, how the Easterne current striketh so violently on that straight, and falleth with such force into that narrow goulph, that hardly any ship can returne that way into our West Ocean out of Mar del Zur. The which, if it be true, as truly it is, then we may say that the aforesaid Easterne current or leuant course of waters continually following after the heauenly motions, looeth not altogether his force, but is doubled rather by another current from out the North-east, in the passage betwene America and the North land, whither it is of necessitye carryed: hauing none other way to maineaine it selfe in circular motion, and consequently the force and fury thereof to be no lesse in the straight of Anian, where it striketh South into Mar del Zur, beyond America (if any such straight of Sea there be) then in Magellans free, both straightes being of like breadth: as in Belogina Zalerius table of new France, and in Don Diego Hermano de Toledo his card for nauigation in that region we do finde precisely set downe.

Neuertheless to approue that there lieth a way to Cathayo at the North-west, from out of Europe, we haue experience, namely of three brethren that went that iourney, as Gemma Frisius receiveth, and left a name unto that straight, whereby now it is called Fretum trium Fratrum. We doe reade againe of a Portugall that passed this straight, of whome Halster further speaketh, that was imprisoned therfore many yeeres in Lisbon, to verifie the olde Spanish prouerbe, I suffer for doing well. Likewise An. Vidaneta a flyer of Mexico came out of Mar del Zur this way into Germanie: his Carde, for he was a great discoverer, made by his owne experience and trauell in that voyage, hath bene scene by Gentlemen of good credit.

Now if the obseruation and remembrance of things breedeth experience, and of experience proceedeth arte, and the certaine knowlege we haue in all faculties, as the best Philosophers that euer were do affirme: truly the voyage of these aforesaid trauelers that haue gone out of Europe into Mar del Zur, and returned thence at the North-west, do most evidently conclude that way to be nauigable, and that passage free. So much the more we are so to thinke, for that the

Ge. i. de orat.
An. pri.
Metaph.

first

first principle and chiefe ground in all Geographie, as Ptolome saith, is the history of travel, that is, reports made by travellers full in Geometrie and Astronomie, of all such things in their journey as to Geographie do belong. It onely then remaineth, that we now answer to those arguments that seemed to make against this former conclusion.

The first objection is of no force, that generall table of the world set forth by Ortelius of Mercator, for it greatly skilleth not, being unskillfully drawn for that point: as manifestly it may appeare unto any one that conferreth the same with Gemma Frisius his universall mappe, with his rounde quartered card, with his globe, with Sebastian Cabota his table, and Ortelius his generall mappe alone, woorthily preferred in this case before all Mercator and Ortelius other dotings: for that Cabota was not onely a skillfull Sea man, but a long traveller, and such a one as entered personally that straight, sent by King Henry the seventh to make this aforesaid discovery, as in his owne discourse of navigation you may reade in his card drawn with his owne hand, that the mouth of the Northwesterne straight lyeth neere the 318th Meridian, betwene sixtie one and sixtie foure degrees in the elevation, continuing the same byeth about tenne degrees West, where it openeth Southerly moze and moze, untill it come under the tropique of Cancer, and so runneth into Mar del Zur, at the least eigheteene degrees moze in byeth there then it was where it first begonne: otherwise I coulde as well imagine this passage to be moze vniuersally then; the voyage to Moscouia, and moze impossible then it for the farre situation and continuance thereof in the frostie climate: as now I can affirme it to be very possible and most likely in comparison thereof, for that it neither coasteth so farre North as the Moscouian passage doeth, neither is this straight so long as that, before it bowe downe Southerly towards the Sunne againe.

The second argument concludeth nothing. Ptolome knew not what was about extreme degrees South beyond the Equinoctiall line, he was ignorant of all passages Northward from the elevation of thirtie three degrees, he knew no Ocean sea beyond Asia, yet haue the Portugals traueled the Cape of Good hope at the South point of Afrike, and traueled to Giapan an Island in the East Ocean, betwene Asia and America: our merchants in the time of King Edward the first discovered the Moscouian passage farther North then Thule, and shewed Groenland not to be continent with Lappeland and Norway: the like our Northwesterne travellers haue done, declining by their navigation that way, the ignorance of all Cosmographers that either doe ioyne Groenland with America, or continue the West Indies with that frosty region vnder the North pole. As for Virgil he sang according to the knowledge of men in his time, as an other Poet did of the hot Zone:

Quarum quæ media est, non est habitabilis æstu. Imagining, as most men then did, Zonam torridam, the hot Zone, to be altogether inhabitable for heat, though presently we know many famous and woorthy Kingdomes and cities in that part of the earth, and the Island of St. Thomas neere Aethiopia, or the wealthe Islands of the which chiefly all these voyagers are taken in hand, to be inhabited euen vnder the equinoctiall line.

To answer the third objection, besides Cabota and all other travellers navigations, the only credit of M. Frobisher may suffice, who lately through all these Islands of ice, and mountaines of snowe, passed that way, euen beyonde the gulfe that runneth betwene the North, and in some places though he byew one inch thicke ice, as he returning in August did, came home safely againe.

The fourth argument is altogether frivolous and vaine, for neither is there any isthmus or straight of lande betwene America and Asia, ne can these two landes ioinly be one continent. The first part of my answer is manifestly allowed of by Homer, whom that excellent Geographer Strabo followeth, prebiding him in this facultie the pyce. The author of that booke likethwise to Alexander, attributed vnto Aristotle, is of the same opinion that Homer and Strabo hee of, in two or three places. Dionysius in his history hath this verse: οὐκ ἔστιν ἵσθμὸς ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν. So doeth the Ocean Sea runne round about the world: speaking onely of Europe, Afrike, and Asia, as then Asia was traueled and knownen. Which these Doctours may you ioyne Pomponius Mela. capit. 2. lib. 1. Plinius lib. 2. capit. 67. and Pius 2. cap. 2. in his description of Asia. All the which writers doe no lesse confirme the whole Eastern side of Asia to be compassed about with the Sea, then Plato doth affirme in Timæo, vnder the name Atlantis, the West Indies to be an Island, as in a speciall discourse thereof R. Eden writeth, agreeable vnto the sentence of Proclus, Marsilius Ficinus, and others. Out of Plato it is gathered that America is an Island. Homer, Strabo, Aristotle, Dionysius, Mela, Plinie, Pius 2. affirme the continent of Asia, Afrike, and Europe, to be circumscribed circumscribed with the Ocean, (as none at all) that Asia and Europe, contrary to the opinion hath bene brought in contrary fourth objection.

The second part, namely οὐκ ἔστιν ἵσθμὸς ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας εἰς τὴν Ἀμερικήν where the earth is most hollow, as it goeth further, Omega, Duina, Ob, potwye may doeth that sea strike the more shallowe: from the 2. Met. cap. 1. of necessity the earth there to shake off those of waters augmented in them. Alber. in 2. Meteor. change of water. So that the South on the West of Groenland, or betwixt Groenland and the North, if you experience it doeth, it may to me, the deeper although name where the chanel is deeper fall continually from the straight we speake of, and being downe furiously out froing impossible to want sea discovered no land. Finally which after that hee had seen land betwixt the aforesaid together that conclusion from the world then knownen, and

The last objection requirer Barbarians favour by some shall haue the repulse in one vnder time, and disreere for a violent entrie, would of so great a Nation, farre to the waters, unless their part

Couching their lawes at Galeotto Perera, that the trade into his Countrey for Moores had, until such time came the Saracene: wherefore at Fuquien, a great title in C they bee most detestous to be strictly handled there at the insomuch that the Lourea of the Canoa halley those sea and downe that reach from lucaas: and shall an English name) cease to talle in that voyce of perill:

To the last argument. I shall they be constrained well to be in danger of the same way they doe goe. The reason alleaged for

Lib. 1. Geog. cap. 2.

Sol. 1.

Quid. 1. Meta.

Sol. 3.

Sol. 4.

Lib. Geog.

Pios.

considered with the Ocean. I may therefore boldly say, (though later intelligences thereof had we name at all) that Asia and the West Indies be not tied together by any Isthmos or straight of land, contrary to the opinion of some newe Cosmographers, by whome doubtfullly this matter hath bene brought in controuersie. And thus much for the first part of my answer vnto the fourth objection.

The second part, namely that America and Asia cannot be one continent, may thus be proued, where the earth is most holowe and deepe, wikteth Aristotle: and the Sea, (saith hee in the same place,) as it goeth further, so is it founde deeper. Into what guise doe the Moscouian riuers Onega, Duina, Ob, poune out their streames Northward out of Moscouia into the sea. Which may weeth that sea strike? The South is maine lande, the Easterne coast waretly moze and more holowe: from the North, either naturally, because that part of the earth is higher Aristot.
 2. Met. cap. 1. or of necessity, for that the forcible influence of some Noztherne starres causeth the earth there to shake off the Sea, as some Philosophers doe thinke: or finally for the great slope of waters engendred in that frostie and colde climate, that the bankes are not able to holde them. Alber. in 2. Meteo. cap. 6. From the North I say, continually falleth downe great abundance of water. So that this Noztheasterne current must at the length abruptly bowe towarde the South on the West side of Finmarke and Norway: or else strike downe Southward aboute Groneland, or betwixt Groneland and Iceland, into the Northwest straight wee speake of, as of congruence it doeth, if you marke the situation of that Region, and by the report of M. Frobisher, experience teachech vs. And M. Frobisher the further hee trauielled in the former passage, as he tolde me, the deeper alwayes he found sea. Lay you now the summe hercof together. The riuers runne where the channels are most hollowe, the sea in taking his course waretly deeper, the sea waters fall continually from the North Southward, the Noztheasterne current striketh downe into the straight we speake of, and is there augmented with whole mountaines of yce and snowe, falling downe furiously vnto the land vnder the North pole. Where slope of water is, there is it a thing impossible to want sea, where sea not onely doeth not want, but waretly deeper, there can be discouered no land. Finally, whence I pray you came the contrary tide, that M. Frobisher mette withal after that hee had sailed no small way in that passage, if there be any Isthmos or straight of land betwixt the aforesaid Nozthwesterne, gulfe and Mar del Zur, to ioyne Asia and America together? That conclusion frequented in scholes Quidquid preter, &c. was ment of the partes of the world then knowen, and so is it of righte to be vnderstoode.

The sixt objection requirerth for answer, wisdom and policie in the trauieler, to winne the Barbarians fauour by some good meanes: and so to arme and strengthen himselfe, that when he shall haue the repulse in one coast, he may safely trauiel to an other, commodiously taking his commerces times, and discretely making choise of them with whome hee will thoughtly deale. To hope a violent entrie, would for vs Englishmen be very hard, considering the strength and valour of so great a Nation, farre distant from vs, and the attempt thereof might be most perillous vnto the doers, in lesse their part were very good.

Touthing their lawes against strangers, you shall reade neuertheless in the same relations of Galeotto Perera, that the Cathaian king is wont to graunt free access vnto all sojourners that trade into his Countrey for Marchandise, and a place of libertie for them to remaine in: as the Moores had, until such time as they had brought the Loucea or Lieutenant of that coast to be a circumcised Saracene: wherofore some of them were put to the sword, the rest were scattered abroad: at Pucien, a great citie in China, certaine of them are yet this day to be seene, as for the Giapans they be most desirous to be acquainted with strangers. The Portingals though they were strictly handled there at the first, yet in the ende they founde great fauour at the Prince his handz, insomuch that the Loucea or president that misused them, was therefore put to death. The rude Indian Canoa halleth those seas, the Portingals, the Saracenes, and Moores trauiel continually by and downe that reache from Giapan to China, from China to Malacca, from Malacca to the Mo-lucceas: and shall an Englishman, better appointed then any of them al (that I say no more of our name) see to saile in that Ocean? What feat at all doe want piracie? what Nauigation is there voyde of perill?

To the last argument. Our trauielers neede not to seeke their returne by the North-east, neither shall they be constrained, except they list, either to attempt Magellane straight at the Southwest, or to be in danger of the Portingals for the South-east: they may returne by the North-west, that same way they doe goe sooth, as experience hath shewed.

The reason alleaged for prooofe of the contrary, may be disposed after this manner. And first.

it may be called in controuersie, whether any currant continually be forced by the motion of Primum mobile, round about the world, or no: for learned men doe diuersly handle that question. The naturall course of all waters is downeward, wherefoze of congruence they fall that way where they finde the earth most lowe and deepe: in respect whereof, it was first laide, the seas do strike from the Northzen landes Southerly. Violently the seas are tolled and troubled diuers wayes with the windes, encreased and diminished by the course of the Moone, holled by & downe through the sundry operations of the Sunne and the starres: finally, some be of opinion, that the seas be carried in part violently about the world, after the daply motion of the highest moueable heauen, in like maner as the elements of aire and fire, with the rest of the heauynly spheres are, from the East vnto the West. And this they doe call their Easterne currant, or leuant streame. Some such currant may not be denied to be of great force in the hot Zone, for the neere nesse thereof vnto the centre of the Sunne, and blustering Easterne windes violently duiuing the seas Westward: howbeit in the temperate climes, the Sunne being further off, and the windes more diuers blowing as much from the North, the West and South, as from the East, this rule doeth not effectually withhold vs from traauiling Eastward, neither be wee kept ever backe by the aforesayde Leuant windes and streame. But in Magellans straight wee are violently duiuen backe Westward: Ergo, though the Northwesterne straight of Anian strette shall wee not be able to retorne Eastward: it followeth not. The first, for that the Northwesterne straight hath moze sea room at the least by one hundred English miles, then Magellans fret hath, the onely want whereof causeth all narrowe passages generally to be most violent. So would I say in Anian gulfes, if it were so narrowe as Don Diego and Zalcerius haue painted it out, any returre that way to bee full of difficulties, in respect of such straightnesse thereof, not for the neere nesse of the Sunne, or Easterne windes, violently forcing that way any leuant streame: But in that place there is more sea come by many degrees, if the Carpes of Cabota, and Gemma Frisius, and that which Framazine impuere, be true.

And hitherto reason see I none at all, but that I may as well giue credite vnto their doings, as to any of the rest. It must be Peregrinationis historia, that is true reportes of skilful traauilers, as Ptolome writeth, that in such controuersies of Geographic must put vs out of doubt. Ortelius in his vniuersall tables, in his particuler Mappes of the West Indies, of all Asia, of the Northzen kingdomes, of the East Indies, Mercator in some of his globes, and generall Mappes of the world, Molecius in his vniuersall table of the Globe dished, in his sea Carde, and particuler tables of the East Indies, Zalcerius, and Don Diego, with Fernando Bertely, and others, doe so much differ both from Gemma Frisius and Cabota, among themselues, and in diuers places from themselues, concerning the diuers situation and sundry limites of America, that one may not so rashly, as truly I surmise, these men either to be ignorant in those points touching the aforesaide region, or that the Mappes they haue given out vnto the world, were collected onely by them, and neuer of their owne making.

The first voyage of M. Martine Frobisher, to the Northwest for the search of the straight or passage to China, written by Christopher Hall, and made in the yeere of our Lord 1576.

Apr.

June.

I am assured
that the
was Captaine of the ship.

Don Sunday the 13. of May the Barke Gabriel was launched at Redriff, and vpon the 27. day following she valed from Redriff to Ratcliffe.

The 7. of June being Thursday, the two barkes, viz. the Gabriel, the Michael, and our pinnelle set saile at Ratcliffe, and bare downe to Detford, and there we ancred: the cause was, that our pinnelle burst her boulsprit, and forasmuch aboard of a shippe that rode at Detford, elle wee ment to haue past that day by the Court then at Greenewiche.

The 8. day being Friday, about 12. of the clocke we wayed at Detford, and set saile all three of vs, and bare downe by the Court, where we shotte off our ordinance, and made the best we wee could: Her Maestie beholding the same commended it, and bade vs farewell with shaking her hand at vs out of the window. Afterward she sent a Gentleman a boote of vs, who declared that her Maestie had good liking of our doings, and thanked vs for it, and also willed our Captaine to come the next day to the Court to take his leaue of her.

The same day towards night M. Secretarie Woolly came aboarde of vs, and declared to the companie Luc. lib. 1.

Pharal.

What the Easterne currant is.

Lib. 1. Geog.
Cap. 1.

companie, that to their Capta
The ninth day
set saile to be pa againe.

Sunday the
the winde being well sunne, the

The 12. day
dore, which wa
green and a half at Northzen by the Hope, and at home being low

The 13. day
downe the Sea East Northeast
and so came to a

The 14. day
in Orfordnesse,

The 15. we v
led downe to Alb
we downe to So high water being Northwest sunn

The 16. day
sailed to A a stiff gale, the

The 17. day
sailed, and by No East Sunne, and

The 18. day
sailed out of Har

The 19. day
Southeast, and quarter's blow, I Northwest the e

From tenn
a faire gale, et

The 20. day in a faire gale, the
the forenoone, th
glasses, foure lea

to eight stre leag we hauing 30. f
a clocke in the m hauing 37. fatho

From 4. a clo Southeast, a fair
west 6. leagues,
present we obser

The 22. day fr
faire Southeast Shippe sailed, Nor all 12. a clocke a west 3. leagues, I

From 12. to fo
North 1. league

by the motion of Pri-ole that question. The p fall that way where side, the seas do strike roubled divers wayes to by & downe through nton, that the seas bee moueaible heauen, spheres are, from the tant Streame. Some erecence thereof was the seas Well worde:
es moze diuers blow-
rule doeth not effectu-cke by the aforesayde p byuen backe. Which not be able to returne hach moze sea roome ouely want whereof say in Anian gulfe, at ture that way to bee esse of the Sunne, at at place there is more that which Trame-

te into their doings,
of skillful traualers,
out of doubt. Orrefall Asia, of the Roygenerall Appoynted Carde, and particuler 7, and others, doe so in diuers places from that one may not fo
the aforesayde cod one ly by them, and

Northwest
ritten by

unched at Redriff,
to Ratcliffe,
the Gabriel, the Miunte to Derford, and at her boultspitt, and ee ment to haue pass

to set saile all thre of e the best the we were ell with shanking her of vs, who declared to be our Cap-
and declared to the company

company, that her Hateshe had appointed him to giue them charge to be obedient, and diligent to their Capteine, and gouernours in all things, and walke vs happy successe.

The ninth day about noone the winde being Westerly, hauing our ancre aboarde ready to set saile to depart, wee wanted some of our companie, and therefore stayed, and moated them againe.

Sunday the 10. of June, wee set saile from Blackewall at a South west, and by West sunne, the winde being at North Northwest, and sailed to Grauesend, and ancred there at a West northwest sunne, the winde being as befoze.

The 11. day being ouer against Grauesend, by the castle of blockhouse we obserued the latitude, which was 51. degrees 33. min. And in that place the variation of the Compasse is 11. degrees and a halfe. This day we departed from Grauesend, at a West South west sunne, the winde at North and by East a faire gale, and sailed to the West part of Tilberie hope, & so turned downe the Hope, and at a West sunne the winde came to the East South east, and wee ancred in 7. fathome being lowe water.

The 12. day wee set saile at a North east sunne, the winde at West South west, and sailed downe the Swane and ouer the Spits, and at a South south west sunne, the winde came to the East North east, then we turned downe to the Raze and so ouer the Raze, & in the craling ground, and so came to ancre.

The 13. day we wayed at 3. of the clocke afternoone, the winde at Southeast, and sailed downe to Orfordnesse, and there ancred being litle winde, and the floud in hand.

The 14. we wayed at 2. a clocke in the morning being litle winde at North north west, and sailed down to Alborough, and thwart of Alborough the wind came to the North north east, we turned downe to Solde, and there ancred at 9. a clocke in 5. fathoms, and rode all the floud, and at a high water being a stiffe gale at North North east wee wayed and put roome with Harwiche at a North west sunne, being 9. a clocke at night.

The 15. day wee wayed and set saile at 3. of the clocke afternoone the winde at South southeast, & sailed to Alborough. And at that present the winde came to the North north west, and North a stiffe gale. Wee put roome with Orfordnesse, and there rode all the night.

The 16. day we wayed at Orfordnesse at a Southeast, & by East sunne, the winde at North east, and by North, a good gale, and put roome with Harwich, and ancred there at a South, and by East sunne, and did obserue the latitude of the place which was 51. deg. 54. min.

The 17. day we wayed at Harwich, at a North east sunne, the winde at West south west, and sailed out of Harwich Haufe.

Their depature from Harwich the 18. of June.

The 18. day wee set saile from Yarmouth roade at a South west sunne, the winde at East Southeast, and sailed betwix the Cockle and the maine in thre fathome, and a halfe at thre quarters floud. From 7. to 10. a clocke at night the winde at South Southeast, the shippe sailed North west thre leagues.

From tenne a clocke at night to 2. of the clocke in the morning the winde at South Southeast, a faire gale, the shippe sailed North west 4. leagues.

The 19. day in the morning from 2. of the clocke to sixe a clocke, the winde at South Southeast a faire gale, the shippe sailed North west foure leagues. From 6. a clocke to tenne of the clocke in the forenoone, the winde at South Southeast a faire gale, the shippe sailed North west eight glasse, foure leagues. From tenne a clocke to two a clocke foure leagues moze. And from two to eight sixe leagues: from eight to midnight we sailed North North west five leagues, we found two hauing 30. fathome, and fine sande with blackes among and one shell. From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning, the shippe sailed with all sailes 6. leagues, and that way out we founde hauing 37. fathomes, and fine gray sand.

From 4. a clocke in the morning to 8. in the forenoone, being the 21. day, the winde at South-Southeast, a faire gale, the shippe sailed North North west 8. glasse, 5. leagues, then North north west 6. leagues, the maine yard a crosse: we founde hauing 40. fathome, and fine sand. And at that present we obserued the latitude, which was 54. degr. 41. min.

The 22. day from 4. a clocke in the morning till 4. a clocke the next morning we sailed with a faire Southeast winde, 3. leagues. This day from 4. to 8. of the clocke the winde as befoze the shippe sailed, North North west five leagues, founde 50. fathome, and fine sand. From 8. a clocke till 12. a clocke at noone, the winde at South litle winde with fogge, the ship sailed North North west 3. leagues, I founde hauing 54. fathome, and fine sand like ore.

The 23. day.

From 12. to foure of the clocke, the winde at South South west litle winde, the shippe sailed North 1. league with great fogge. At the end of 8. weech founde, hauing 55. fathome & fine sand, From

From 4. to 8. a clocke the winde at West Northwell, litle winde with fogge, the ship went North 2. leagues. Sounded hauing 50. fathome, and by some sands. From 8. to midnight, the winde at Northwell litle wind of fog, the ship went Northnortheast 3. leagues, & to midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning of wind at Northwell, & by North smooth waters, & the ship went Northeast 3. leagues.

The 24. day from 4. to 8. a clocke in the forenoone, the wind at North northwell, faire weather, the sea smooth, the ship went West, 3. leagues and a halfe, and at the end of this waite the founte, hauing 60. fathome, and ozle sand, & litle white shels. From 8. to 12. a clocke at noone, the winde at Northwell and by North, a faire gale, the sea smooth, the ship went West 3. leagues and a halfe: sounded hauing 53. fathome, and streame ground with litle shels. From 12. to 4. in the afternoone the winde at North northwell, the ship went Northnortheast 4. leagues.

Fare Island.

At 2. of the clocke after noone I had sight of Faire yle, being from vs 6. leagues North, and by East, and when I brought it Northwell and by North, it did rise at the Southermost ende with a litle hommocke, and swampe in the middes.

From 4. a clocke at afternoone to 8. a clocke litle wind, & the ship sailed Northnortheast 2. leagues, I sounded hauing 60. fathomes, & streame ground with shels, 4. leagues from the land. From 8. a clocke to midnight caline, and without accompt. From midnight to 4. a clocke, in the morning, the winde Northwell, and by North litle winde, the ship sailed Northnortheast 1. league.

Shotland.

The 25. day from 4. to 8. a clocke in the forenoone, the winde at Northwell, and by North a fresh gale, I call about to the Westward, the Southermost head of Shotland called Swinborne head Northnorthwest from me, and the land of Fare yle, West Southwell from me. I sailed directly to the Northhead of that said land sounding as I ranne in, hauing 60. 50. and 40. fathoms, and gray redde shels: and within halfe a mile of that Island, there are 36. fathoms, so I sailed to that Island to see whether there were any reddeerde for a Northwell winde, and I soude by my sounding hard rocks, and soule ground and deepe water, within two cables length of the shore, 28. fathome, and so did not ancre but plied to and fro with my foresaile, and mixt till it was a high water vnder the Island. The tide seteth there Northwell and Southeast: the floud seteth Southeast, and the ebb Northwell.

Fowlay Island.

The 26. day I hauing the winde at South a faire gale, sayling from Fare yle to Swinborne head, I did obserue the latitude, being the Island of Fowlay West Northwell frō me 6. leagues, and Swinborne head East southeast from me, I found my elevation to be 37. degr. and my declination 22. degr. 46. min. So that my latitude was 59. degr. 46. min. At that present being nere to Swinborne head, hauing a leake which did trouble vs, as also to take in fresh water, I plyed roome with a founte, which is called S. Tronions, and there did ancre in seuen fathoms water, and faire sande. You haue running in the sound's mouth in the entring 17. 15. 12. 10. 9. 8. and 7. fathoms, and the sound lyeth in North Northwell, and there roade to a West sunne, and stopped our leake, and hauing refreshed our selues with water, at a North Northwell sunne, I set saile from S. Tronions the winde at South Southeast, and turned out till wee were cleare of the sound, and so sailed West to go cleare of the Island of Fowlay. And running off toward Fowlay, I sounded, hauing fiftie fathome, and streame ground, and also I sounded Fowlay, being North from mee one league off that Island, hauing fiftie fathome at the South head, and streame ground, like broken oemell, and one shell being redde and white like mackerell.

Whee they began to take Northwell. Latitude 59. deg. 59. min.

The 27. day at a South sunne I did obserue the latitude, being the Island of Fowlay, from mee two leagues East Northwell: I founde my selfe to be in latitude 59. degrees, 59. min. truly obserued, the winde at South Southwell: I sailed West, and by North.

From 12. to foure a clocke afternoone, the winde at South, a faire gale the shippe sailed West and by North 6. leagues, and at the end of this waite, I sounded hauing 60. fathome, with litle stones and shels, the Island from vs 8. leagues East.

From 4. to 8. a clocke the winde at South a good gale, the shippe sailed West and by North 6. leagues.

From 8. a clocke to midnight, the winde at South Southeast, a good gale, the ship sailed west, and by North 7. leagues, I sounded hauing 65. fathoms. In balling by the lead the line brake, and so we lost our lead.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning, the winde at Southeast a good gale, our maine saile ferled our maine topsaile, foresaile, and spereclade aboard, the ship sailed West and by North 8. leagues.

The 28. day from 4. to eight a clocke, the winde at Southeast a good gale, the shippe sailed West and by North eight leagues: from eight to 12. a clocke, the winde at East Southwell a fresh gale, the shippe sailed West and by North eight leagues.

From

From 12. to 4.

East and by North

From 4. to 8.

3. leagues. I did

From 8. to mid

From midnight

sailed West 8. lea

From 4. to 8.

West 8. leagues.

From 8. to 12

to West 6. leagu

fathome.

From 4. to 8.

From 8. to mi

From midnig

The 30. day fr

From 8. to 12

From 12. to 4.

and hauing 100.

From 4. to 8.

From 8. to mi

From midnig

The first of Ju

had so much w

From 8. to 12

From 12. to 4.

From 4. to 8.

From 8. to mi

From midnig

The second da

From 8. to 12

the end of this

From 4. to 8.

From midnig

The 3. day to

4. to 8. a clocke

From 8. to 12

Compass to be

From 12. to 4

From 4. to 8.

From 8. to m

From midnig

The 5. day fr

From 8. to 1

From 12. to

6. leagues. From

From midnig

North 7. leagues

The 6. day fr

From 12. to

the ship went North onight, the winde at night to 4. a cloke in North 3. leagues.
well, faire weather,
his watche sounded,
at noone, the winde
leagues and a halfe; 4. in the afternoone

gues North, and by hermost ende with a

North 2. leagues,
in the land. From 8.
the in the morning, 1. league.

st, and by North a I called Swinborne om me. I failed to
b. and 40. fathoms, oms, so I failed to
and I founde by my
ngth of the hoare, mixin till it was a
all: the fload fetter)

yle to Swinborne frob me 6. leagues, degr. and my berth
present being nere fresh water, I plyed fathoms water, and
2. 10. 9. 8. and 7. fame, and stopped out me, I set sail from re of the sound, and owlay, I founde,
g North from mee
mine grounde, like

of Fowlay, from es, 59. min. crutch

hippe sailed West athome, with little

st and by North 6.

the ship sailed west,
and the line brake,

od gale, over maine West and by North

, the shippe sailed
East South East 1

From

From 1. to 4. a clocke at afternoone, the winde at East South East, a fresh gale, the ship sailed East and by North 8. leagues.

From 4. to 8. a clocke at night, the winde at East South East a fresh gale, the ship sailed West 8. leagues. I did sound, and could not get ground at 70. fathome.

From 8. to midnight the winde at East South East a good gale, the ship sailed West 8. leagues. From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning, the winde at East North East, a fresh gale the ship sailed West 8. leagues and a halfe.

From 4. to 8. a clocke the 29. day the winde at East North East a good gale, the shippe sailed West 8. leagues. 29.

From 8. to 12. a clocke at noone, the winde at East North East, the ship sailed West 8. leagues.

From 1. to 4. a clocke in the afternoone the winde at East North East a faire gale, the ship sailed West 6. leagues, and at the ende of this watche I did sounde, and could get no ground at 100. fathome.

From 4. to 8. a clocke at night, we sailed West 5. leagues.

From 8. to midnight 4. leagues.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning 4. leagues West.

The 30. day from 4. to 8. a clocke in the forenoone, we sailed West 3. leagues. 30.

From 8. to 12. a clocke 3. leagues.

From 1. to 4. a clocke at afternoone West 5. leagues. And at the ende of this watch I sounde having 100. fathome and no ground.

From 4. to 8. a clocke 6. leagues.

From 8. to midnight, we sailed West 8. leagues.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning 8. leagues.

The first of July, from 4. to 8. a clocke, we sailed West 4. glasses 4. leagues, and at that present July the first we had so much winde that we spooned afoze the sea South West 2. leagues.

From 8. to 12. at noone West and by North 6. leagues.

From 1. to 4. a clocke 6. leagues.

From 4. to 8. foure miles.

From 8. to midnight we sailed with 2. coarles 4. leagues West.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning 6. leagues.

The second day from 4. to 8. a clocke, 6. leagues and a halfe West.

From 8. to 12. West 7. leagues. From 1. to 4. at afternoone West 7. leagues more. And at the ende of this watch I sounde having 100. fathome, and no ground. 31.

From 4. to 8. a clocke 7. leagues. From 8. to midnight West, and by North 7. leagues.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning west and by North 6. leagues.

The 3. day we found our COMPASSE to bee varied one point to the Westwards: this day from 4. to 8. a clocke we sailed West, and by North 6. leagues. 32.

From 8. to 12. a clocke at noone West, and by North 4. leagues. At that present I found our COMPASSE to be varied 11. deg. and one 4. part to the Westwards which is one point.

From 1. to 4. a clocke at afternoone West and by North one league.

From 4. to 8. West, and by North one league.

From 8. to midnight West, and by North 2. leagues.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning West, and by North 3. leagues.

The 4. day from 4. to 8. the winde at North West and by North 4. leagues. 33.

From 8. to 12. at noone West and by North 2. leagues. And at that present we sent off our pin- nace from the Gabriel to fish being calme.

From 1. to 4. a clocke at afternoone calme, and without accompt.

From 4. to 8. a clocke at night, West and by North 2. leagues.

From 8. to midnight West, and by North 7. leagues.

From midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning 9. leagues.

The 5. day from 4. to 8. a clocke West and by North 8. leagues. 34.

From 8. to 12. having calme and fogge, West and by North 6. leagues.

From 1. to 4. at afternoone West and by North 7. leagues. From 4. to 8. North North West 6. leagues. From 8. to midnight North and by West 4. leagues.

From midnight to 6. a clocke in the morning we were hulled by the winde, and went West and by North 5. leagues.

The 6. day from 8. to 12. at noone, West and by North 5. leagues. 35.

From 1. to 4. a clocke West and by North 5. leagues.

From

7. From 8. at night to 8. in the morning 4. leagues.
From 12. to 4. a clocke at afternoone, North Northwest 4. leagues.
From 4. to 8. at night North Northwest 4. leagues.
From 8. to midnight, North two leagues.
From midnight to 8. a clocke calme, and without accompt.
8. The 8. day from 8. to 12. at noone, 3. leagues West.
From 12. to 4. a clocke West, 6. leagues.
From 4. to 8. eight leagues.
From 8. to midnight wee tooke in all our sails, and spooned aloft the sea because of our pin-nelle, and at that present came fogge and miste, and so we lost sight of her. Wee sailed West five leagues.
From midnight to 4. a clocke, West south west 4. leagues, with very much winde.
9. From 4. to 8. in the forenoone, the sea being mightily growne, 4. leagues.
From 8. to 12. South west above the sea 4. leagues.
From 12. to 4. a clocke, West South west 5. leagues.
10. From that time to 8. a clocke the next day I layd the ship a hal, her way was south 4. leagues.
From 8. to 4. a clocke calme, and without accompt.
From 4. to 8. five leagues. From 8. to midnight 7. leagues.
From midnight to 4. a clocke, North 8. leagues.
11. From 4. to 8. a clocke, West and by south 5. leagues. From 8. to 12. a clocke at noone West, and by south 4. leagues, & at the south east sunne we had sight of the land of Friseland being from us West north west 16. leagues, and rising like pinacles of steeples, and all covered with snow. I found my selfe in 61. deg. of latitude. Wee sailed to the shoare & could finde no ground at 150. fathome, we hoisted out our boate, & the Captaine with 4. men rowed to the shoare to get on land, but the land lying full of yce they could not get on land, and so they came aboarde againe: Wee had much adoe to get cleare of the yce by reason of the fogge. Yet from Thursday 8. a clocke in the morning to Friday at noone we sailed South west 20. leagues.
12. The 13. day, a North east wind cleared us of the thicke miste, & we sailed south west 5. leagues.
13. The 14. day the vehemencie of the winde brake our forepart, and boze ouer boord our mylles maste, so we put our spert saile yard, with the spert saile coarce to our foremast, and spooned aloft the sea South west 15. leagues, till it was Sunday.
14. This day from 4. in afternoon to 8. we sailed South west 2. leagues. From thence to Sunday morning 4. of the clocke, calme, and without accompt.
15. The 16. day from 4. to 8. the winde at South south west, we sailed 6. leagues and a half. From 8. to 12. 5. leagues and a half, and from 12. to 4. 6. leagues. At the ende of this watch the head of our maine mast, maine topmaste, with the top saile brake, and fel into the sea altogether.
From 4. to 8. we ranne somewhat a drift, because we layd by the ropes of our maine mast, and set our maine saile againe. From 8. to midnight, North west and by West 3. leagues.
16. The 17. day from 4. to 8. 3. leagues. From 8. to 12. two leagues, from 12. to 4. at afternoone
3. leagues, from 4. to 8. a clocke 2. leagues, in our old cource: I ppoosed to sounde but sounde no ground. From 8. to midnight, West and by South 2. leagues, from midnight to 4. a clocke in the morning 2. leagues.
17. From 4. to 8. three leagues, from 8. to 12. at noone 3. leagues, and here at a South east sunne, I found the sunne to be elevated 33. deg. And at a South south east 40. deg. So I obserued it ill I founde it at the highest, and then it was elevated 52. deg. I Iudged the variation of the Compasse to be 2. points and a halfe to the West.
18. From 12. to 4. three leagues, from 4. to 8. three leagues, from 8. to midnight 2. leagues. From midnight to 4. a clocke one league, being litle winde.
From 4. to 8. North, 4. leagues, from 8. to 12. 8. leagues, from 12. to 4. foure leagues, from 4. to 8. 4. leagues, and at the end of this watch we call about to the Eastwards. From 8. to midnight
3. leagues, from midnight to 4. a clocke East and by North 3. leagues.
19. From 4. to 8. 3. leagues, from 8. to 12. 3. leagues, from 12. to 4. 4. leagues. From 4. to 8. three leagues, from 8. to midnight 4. leagues. From midnight to 4. a clocke 4. leagues, from 8. to 12.
North north east 4. leagues. From 12. to 4. 4. leagues, from 4. to 8. 4. leagues, from 8. to midnight four leagues North east. From midnight to 4. a clocke, North east four leagues, and at the ende of this watch we had sight of a great drift of yce, seeing a firme land, and we call Westward to be cleare of it.
20. From 4. to 8. south west 3. leagues, from 8. to 12. 2. leagues, from 12. to 6. 3. leagues, from 6. at night

The Island of Frisland.

Deep deepe
sea.

The variation
of the needle,
two points
and a halfe to the West.

A great drift
of yce.

night to five the
From 6. to 1
north east, 8. leag
north west, 7. leag

From 4. to 8.
8, 5. leagues: from
ning, west, north
From 4. to 8,
leagues: from 8
the clocke, 4. leag

This day was latitude was 62.
From 4. to 8,
morning calme,
From 4. to 8,
leagues, but very

ring up of the fog
yce about the lan
and the yce being Upon Friday, I full of yce, and ou length of the yoa
current is there g
we would haue se halfe, in one how

This day at 4
as we lodged, be that land, and yce stretched alo

Wednesday the led out, being ha
den within two ca
founde againe
we founde the n
that present bein
as if a great cliff
had 90. fathome, fit to the boare.

Wee sailed this
The next day I
The next day
moone we call abo
The first day it towards night, w
The strength di
of againe.

The eight day
The ninth day
calme.

The tenth I to the maine, and ch as I could not ge me, and I feared o the Island, and be aboard.

The 11. we fou
night.

The 12. we se

night to flye the next morning, northeast five leagues,

From 6. to 12. west line leagues, from 12. to 4. northnorthwest, 6. leagues: from 4. to 8. northnorthwest, 8. leagues: from 8. to midnight, 7. leagues: from midnight to 4. of the clocke, northnorthwest, 7. leagues.

From 4. to 8. 7. leagues: from 8. to 12. 7. leagues more: from 12. to 4. 5. leagues: from 4. to 8. 5. leagues: from thence to midnight, 6. leagues: from midnight to 4. of the clocke in the morning, west, northwest, 6. leagues.

From 4. to 8. 7. leagues: from 8. to 12. 7. leagues: from 12. to 4. 8. leagues: from 4. to 8. 8. leagues: from 8. to midnight, 4. leagues, west, northwest, and with fogge: from midnight to 4. of the clocke, 4. leagues.

This day was litle wind, and we tried with both our courses: we had sight of a land of yce: the latitude was 62. degrees, two minuts. We ran from 12. to 4. 4. miles.

From 4. to 8. 4. miles: from 8. to 4. calme, and fogge: from thence to 4. of the clocke in the morning calme, and foggie also.

From 4. to 8. 4. leagues: from 8. to 12. 3. leagues: from 12. to 4. northwest and by west, five leagues, but very foggie: from thence to 8. of the clocke in the morning, litle wind: but at the rising up of the fogge, we had sight of lande, which I supposed to be Labrador, with great store of yce about the land: I ran in towards it, and sounded, but could get no ground, at 100. fathom, and the yce being too thicke, I could not get to the shoare, and so lay off, and came cleare of the yce. Upon Spunday, we came within a mile of the shoare, and sought a harborow: all the sound was full of yce, and our boate toying a shoare, could get no ground, at 100. fathom, within a Cables length of the shoare: then we failed Call northeast along the shoare, for the lande lieth, and the current is there great, setting northeast, and south west: and if we could have gotten anker ground, we would have seen what force it had runne, but I iudge a ship may drive a league and a halfe, in one howe, with that tide.

This day, at 4. of the clocke in the morning, being faire and cleere, we had sight of a head land, as we iudged, bearing from vs north, and by East, and we sailed northeast, and by North, to that land, and when we came thither, we could not gette to the lande for yce: for the yce stretcht along the coaste, so that we could not come to the land, by five leagues.

Monday the first of August, it calmed, and in the after noone, I caused my boate to be hoisted out, being hard by a great Island of yce, and I and foure men rowed by that yce, and sounded within two cables length of it, and had spereyne fathome, and after that sounded againe within a Spindon shotte, and had ground, at an hundred fathome, and faire land: we sounded the next day a quarter of a myle from it, and had sprie fathome rough grounde, and at that present being aboard, that great Island of yce fell one part from another, making a noyce as if a great cliffe had fallen into the Sea. And at foure of the clocke, I sounded againe, and had 90. fathome, and small blacke stones, and litle white stones, like peacles. The tide here did sit to the shoare.

We failed this day south southeast of ward, and layd it aerie.

The next day was calme and thicke, with a great sea.

The next day we failed South, and by East, two leagues, and at eight of the clocke in the fore noone we cast about to the Eastwards.

The first day it cleered, and we ranne northwest into the shoare, to get a harborow, and being towards night, we norwithstanding kept at sea.

The second day we plyed roome with the shoare, but being neere it, it waxed thicke, and we bare off againe.

The eight day we benved in towards the shoare againe.

The ninth day we sounded, but could gette no ground: at 130. fathome: the weather was calme.

The tenth Iooke foure men, and my selfe, and rowed to shoare to an Island one league from the maine, and there the shoode stretcht Southwest alongst the shoare, and it sheweth as neere as I could iudge for to, I could not carry to pprove it, because the shippe was a great way from me, and I feared a fogge: but when I came a shoare, it was a lowe water. I went to the toppe of the Island, and before I came backe, it was hied a foot water, and so without carrying, I came aboard.

The 11. we found our latitude to be 63. degrees, and eight minuts, and this day ended the first night.

The 12. we set saille towards an Island, called the Gabriels Island, which was 10. leagues then 23 24 25 26 27 28 31 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 because of our pinne failed West five inde.

four 4. leagues,
at noone West,
land being from ered with snow. I ground at 150. fa-
to get on land, but againe: We had 8. a clocke in the thwest 5. leagues,
boord our mylles
and spooned afoye n thence to Sun-and a half. From weach the head of gether.
maine mast, and
gues.
o. 4. at afternoone
de but founde no 4. a clocke in the South: I minne,
I obserued it till
tion of the Com-
b. leagues. From leagues, from 4.
m 8. to midnight
from 4. to 8. three
From 8. to 12.
m 8. to midnight
and at the ende Westward to be agues, from 6. at night

The latitude
of 62. de. 2. mi.
Sight of land
supposed to have bene Labrador.

then from vs.

13 We espied a shoare, and bare with it, and came to a sandie Baye, where we came to an anchor, the land bearing East fourteenths of vs, and there we rode all night in 8. fathome water. It showed there at a Southcast Poone. We called it Priors sounde, being from the Gabriels Island, tenne leagues.

14 The 14. we waied, and ranne into another sounde, where we ankered in 8. fathome water, faire land, and blacke oaze, and there calked our ship, being weake from the wailes byward, and tookt in fresh water.

15 The 15. day we waied, and sailed to Priors Baye, being a mile from thence.

16 The 16. day was calme, and wee rode still, without pre, but presently within two houre it was frozen round about the shippe, a quarter of an ynche thicke, and that daye very faire, and calme.

17 The 17. day we waied, and came to Thomas Williams Island.

18 The 18. day, we sailed north north west, and ankered againe in 23. fathome, and caught oaze, vnder Burchers Island, which is from the former Island, ten leagues.

19 The 19. day in the morning, being calme, and no winde, the Captaine and I, tookt our boate, with eight men in her, to rowe vs a shoare, to see if there were there any people, or no, and going to the coope of the Island, we had sight of fouen boates, which came rowing from the East side, toward that Island: whereupon we returned aboord againe: at length we sent our boate with five men in her, to see whether they rowed, and so with a white cloth brought one of their boates with their men along the shoare, rowing after our boate, till suchtime as they sawe our shippe, and then they rowed a shoare: then I went on shoare my selfe, and gaue eury of them a thred-den point, and brought one of them aboord of me, where he did eate and drinke, and then carried him on shoare againe. Whereupon all the rest came aboord with their boates, bearing nineteene persons, and they spake, but we vnderstoode them not. They be like to Tartars, with long blacke haire, broad faces, and flatte noses, and tawnie in colour, wearing Seale skinnes, and so doe the women, not differing in the fashion, but the women are marked in the face with blishe streakes to wote the cheekes, and round about the eyes. Their boates are made all of Seale skins, with a keele of wood within the skinn: the ypposition of them is like a Spanish Gallie, save onely they be flat in the botcome, and sharpe at both ends.

Height of the Country perple.

The description of the people.

7. of our men
taken by the people.

20 The twentieth day, we waied, and went to the East side of this Island, and I and the Captaine, with foue men more went on shoare, and there we sawe their houses, and the people cyping vs, came rowing to wardes our boate: whereupon wee plied to our boate: and wee being in our boate, and they aboarde, they called to vs, and wee rowed to them, and one of their companie came into our boate, and wee carried him aboord, and gaue him a Bell, and a knife: so the Captaine and I willed five of our men to set him a shoare at a rocke, and not among the companie, which they came from, but their wilfulness was such, that they would goe to them, and so were taken themselves, and our boate lost.

21 The next daye in the morning, wee stode in neere the shoare, and shoott of a sauronet, and sounded our trumpet, but wee coulde heare nothing of our men: this sounde wee called the five mens sounde, and plied out of it, but ankered againe in thirte fathome, and oaze: and rising there all night, in the morning, the snowe laye a foote thicke vpon our ha-ches.

22 The two and twentieth daye in the morning, we waied, and went againe to the place where wee lost our men, and our boate. Wee had sight of fouereteene boates, and some came neere to vs, but we coulde learne nothing of our men: among the rest, we intised one in a boate to our shippes side, with a Bell, and in giuing him the Bell, wee tookt him, and his Boate, and so kept him, and so rowed dotune to Thomas Williams Island, and there ankered all night.

23 The 26. day we waied, to come homeward, and by 12. of the clocke at noone, we were thwart of Trumpeys Island.

27 The next day, we came thwart of Gabriels Island, and at 8. of the clocke at night, we had the Cape Labradore West from vs, ten leagues.

28 The 28. day we went our course Southcast.

29 Wee sailed Southcast, and by East, 22. leagues.

Account of
the

30 The first day of September in the morning, we had sight of the land of Friseland, being eight leagues from vs, but we could not come neerer it, for the monstrous pre that lay about it. From that day, till the sixth of this month, wee came along Island, and had the South part part of it at right

The seventh

men was blowe

held, till the Cap

The 25. day

we

The first day

at Yarmouth, an

A
C A K
M
C
C A
C A P A
C
T I K
M
Y

The sec
Ves

Lord Admirall

well furnished

volage, for the

by west and mo

west parts of A

though our De

North: most p

greater beaustie

the same. Our s before, with two they attempte row

the benefite of th

second voyage,

those people, an

the page the pecc

Upon which to Harwich, w ladies, and with gaily Orkney, b

part of it at eight of the clocke, Cast from vs ten leagues.

The seventh day of this month, we had a very terrible storme, by force whereof, one of our men was blown into the sea out of our waste, but he caught holde of the foresaide sheate, and there held, till the Captaine plucked him againe into the ship.

The 25. day of this month, we had sight of the Island of Orknye, which was then Cast from

The first day of October, we had sight of the Shetls, and so sailed along the coast, and ankered at Yarmouth, and the next day we came into Harwicke.

The language of the people of Meta incognita.

Argotteyr, a hand.
Cangnawe, a nose.
Arered, an eye.
Keiotot, a tooth.
Mutchwer, the head.
Chewat, an eare.
Comagaye, a legge.
Atoniagay, a foot.
Callagay, a paire of shooes.
Artegay, a coate.
Polleuetagay, a knife.
Accaskay, a shippe.
Coblone, a chumbe.
Teckkere, the foremost finger.
Ketteckle, the middle finger.
Mekellacanc, the fourth finger.
Yackerrone, the little finger.

The second voyage of Master Martin Frobisher, made to the West, and Northwest Regions, in the yeere, 1577. With a description of the Countrey, and people: Written by Dionisic Settle.

In Whitsundaye, being the five and twentieth of Maye, in the yeere of our Loyde God, 1577. Captaine Frobisher departed from Blacke Wall, with one of the Queenes Maiesties shippes, called The Aide, of nine score came, of thre hundred: and two other litle Barkes likewise, the one called The Gabriell, whereof Master Fenton, a Gentleman of my Lord of Warwikes, was Captaine: and the other, The Michael, whereof Master Yorke, a Gentleman of my Lord Admiralls was Captaine, accompanied with seven score Gentlemen, soldiers, and sailers, well furnished with victuals, and other provision necessarie for one halfe yeere, on this his second voyage, for the further discovering of the passage to Cathay, and other countreies therunto adiacent, by west and north-west navigations: which passage of way, is supposed to be on the north & north-west parts of America: and the said America to be an Island enuironed with the Sea, where though our Merchants might haue course and recourse with their merchandize, from these our Northernmost parts of Europe, to those Orientall coastes of Asia, in much shorter time, and with greater benefite then any others, to their no litle commoditie and profit: that wee of shall traffike the same. Our said Captaine and General of this present voyage and companie, hauing the yeere before, with two litle pinnets, to his great danger, and no small commendations, given a voyage attempt towards the performance thereof, is also prest (when occasion shall be ministered, to the benefite of his Prince, and native Countrey) to adventure himselfe further therein. As for this second voyage, it seemeth sufficient, that he hath bene employed and searched the commodities of those people, and Countreies, with sufficient commoditie vnto the aduenturers, which in his first voyage the yeere before, he had found out.

Vpon which considerations, the day and yeere before expressed, we departed from Blacke Wall to Harwicke, where making an accomplishment of things necessarie, the last of May we hoised by sailles, and with a merrie wind the 7. of June, we arrived at the Islands, called Orchades, by which The Islands Orchades, as they are called.

of

The Dutch and upon final occasion flee their home.

In wood in Dhnyep.

Fisher men of England haue daily traffike to Dhnyep.

In June and July no night in this well
and north-west
regions.

Fr. Snow, and hale in June and July.

Friland be wre to fogge.

Frobishers
strait.

side of 1603.

of fresh waer: in the doing whereof, our General licensed the Gentlemen and Souldiers, for their recreation, to goe on shoare. At our landing, the people fled from their poore cottages, with whyles and alarms, to waerne their neighbours of enemies, but by gentle persuasions we reclaimed them to their houses. It seemeth they are often frighted with Pirates, or some other enemies, that moue them to such sudden feare. Their houses are very simply builded with stibble stone, without any chimnies, the fire being made in the middell thereof. The good man, wife, children, and other of their familie, eate and sleepe on the one side of the house, and their cattell on the other, very healthly and ruderly, in respect of ciuilitie. They are destitute of wood, their fire is turkie and Cowhardes. They haue corne, bigg, and oates, with which they pay their Kings rent, to the maintenance of his house. They take great quantitie of fische, which they drie in the winde and Sunne. They dresse their meate very fleshy, and eate it without salt. Their apparell is after the rudest sort of Scotland. Their money is all base. Their Church and religion is reformed according to the Scots. The Fisher men of England, can better declare the dispositions of these people then I: wherefore I remit other their vsages to their reports, as perely repairs this bet, in their course to goe from Island to fische.

We departed here hence, the 8. of June, and followed our course betweene West and North-west, until the 4. of Iulie: all which time, we had no night, but that easly, and without any impediment, we had when we were so disposed, the frustration of our bookes, and other pleasures to passe away the time: a thing of no small moment, so such as wander in unknown seas, and long navigations, especially, when both the winde and raging surges, do passe their common and wonted course. This benedite endureth in those parts not 6. weekes, whilst the sunne is neere the Tropike of Cancer: but where the Pole is raised to 70. or 80. degrees, it continueth the longer.

All along these seas, after we were six daies sailing from Orkney, we met floating in the Sea, great fire trees, which as we iudged, were with the furie of great floods rooted by, and so byuen into the sea. Island hath almost no other wood nor fuel, but such as they take by vppon their coastes. It seemeth, that these trees are byuen from some part of the New found lande, with the current that stretch from the West to the East.

The 4. of Iulij, we came within the making of Frilande. From this shoare 10. or 12. leagues, we met great Islands of ice, of halfe a mile, some more, some lesse in compasse, the being about the sea, 30. or 40. fathoms, and as we supposed, fast on ground, where, with our lead we could scarce find the bottom, for depth.

Here, in place of odoriferous and fragrant smells of sweete gums, & pleasant notes of muscicall birds, which other Countreys in more temperate Zone do yeeld, we tasted the most boisterous Boeal blasse, mixed with snow & haille, in the moneths of June & July, nothing inferior to our intemperate winter: a sudden alteration, and especially in a place of Paralele, where the Pole is not 6. leuats above 61. degrees: at which height other Countreys more to the North, yet, unto 70. degrees, be themselves more temperate then this doth.

All along this coast ye liech, as a continual bulwarke, & so defendeth the Countrey, that those which would land there, incur great danger. Our General 3. daies together, attempted with the ship to goe on shoare, which, for that without great danger he could not accomplish, he deferred it until a more convenient time. All along the coast lie very high mountaines, covered with snow, except in such places, where, through the steepness of the mountaines, of force it must needs fall. Four daies coasting along this land, we found no signe of habitation. Little birds, which we iudged to haue lost the shoare, by reason of thicke fogges, which that Countrey is much subiect vnto, came flying to our ships, which caused vs to suppose, that the Countrey is both more tollerable, and also habitable within, then the outward shoare maketh shewe of signification.

From hence we departed the eight of Iulie: and the 16. of the same, we came within the making of land, which land our General, the yere before, had named The Queenes foreland, being an Island, as we iudge, lying neere the supposed continent with America: and on the other side, opposite to the same, one other Island, called Halles Ille, after the name of the Passer of the ship, neere adiacent to the firme land, supposed continent with Asia. Betweene the which two Islands there is a large entrance, or streight, called Frobishers streight, after the name of our General, the first finder thereof. This said streight, is supposed to haue passage into the sea of Sur, which I leaue unknown as yet.

It seemeth, that either here, or not farre hence, the sea should haue more large entrance, then in other partes, within the frozen or intemperate Zone: and that some contrary tide, either from the East or West, with maine force casteth out that great quantitie of ice, which cometh floating from this coast, even vnto Frilande, causing that Countrey to seeme more intemperate then others, much moe

I cannot but then declination
tion harmonize and huge pee, a and tide, with

Before we c med, we had ch
that opinion.

As our first c no little cause of
and difficile acc Prince, and Co
them to the Cal
lay off and on so

Which he b threwed themse miration to our inuius, and oth
being laid on th
of theirs to coun
to our General
vnto them: who on them, but the them, (not respe
arowes hurt th

Which our
the East shoare,
that he had final amongst and in had bene of force
all necessities, b scent come to s minent dang
we had not incur General and A als: but by the
ates, men exp
the dangers of struction of our l

The day foll newes of great
we were all fact
might before, wit
pouches, ho to forgetting both
tanning riches,
the his greedie

Within four whines of perfect
any impedimem ter, with great v ough for the ship and young the Gods visitation.

As our first ar
be spared from e
ons, that at our e

ould bits, for their eages, with spikes
we reclaimed them
emies, that moose Stone, with busse llyden, and other becher, very health and Colo Garden. be maintenance of vunne. They besse rudest foze of Scor
ding to the Scots.
then 3: wherefore
re course to 9 from

West and North without any impo
other pleasures to wen seas, and long common and won is neere the Cro
the longer.
locking in the Sea, ted by, and so by ake by bypon their nd lande, with the

0. 02 1. leagues,
be wing aboute the ad we could scarce
e notes of muscull
off boisterous Bo
for to our venter the Pole is not 6 2, yea, unto 70. be ountrey, that those attempted with the not accomplish, be mountaines, covered

s, of force it must action. A lile bitre, Countrey is much
erep is both more signification,
me with the ma
forceland, being on the other side, Waster of the ship,
which two Islands
of our Generall,
of Sur, which I entrance, then in de, either from the commeth being temperate then o ther

thers much more noxtherly then the same.

I cannot iudge, that any temperature vnder the Pole, beinge the tyme of the Sunnes Max thern declination, haile a yeere together, and one whole day, (considring, that the Sunnes eleva tion surmounteth not 23. degrees, and 30. minutes,) can haue power to dissolve such monstrous and huge yce, comparable to great mountaines, except by some other foze, as by swift currents and tides, wch the helpe of the said day of halfe a yeere.

Islands of yce comparable to mountaines.

Before we came within the making of these lands, we casted cold Snowes, in so much that it fre wed, we had changed summer with winter, if the length of the bayes had not remoued vs from that opinion.

At our first comming, the Streights seemed to be shut vp with a long mure of yce, which gaue no litle cause of discomfozt vnto vs all: but our Generall, (to whose diligence imminent dangers, and difficulte attempts seemed nothing, in respect of his willing minde, for the commoditie of his Prince, and Countrey,) with two litle Pinnell's prepared of purpose, passed twice thorough them to the East Hoare, and the Islands therunto adiacent: and the ship, with the two Barkes, lay off and on something further into the sea, from the danger of the yce.

Captain Fro bisher his spe ciall care and diligence for the benefite of his Prince and Countrey.

While he was searching the Countrey neere the Hoare, some of the people of the Countrey threw themselves, leaping and daunting, with strange spikes, and cries, which gaue no litle ad miracion to our men. Our Generall desirous to allure them vnto him by faire meanes, caused knives, and other thing s, to be profered vnto them, which they would not take at our handes: but being laid on the ground, and the partie going away, they came andooke by, leauing some thing of theirs to counteruaile the same. At the length, two of them leauing their weapons, came downe to our Generall and Waster, who did the like to them, commanding the company to stay, and went vnto them: who, after certaine dumbe signes, and mute congratulations, began to lay handes vpon them, but they beliuerly escaped, and came to their bowes and arrowes, and came fiercely vpon them, (not respecting the rest of our companie, which were ready for their defence) but with their arrows hurt diuers of them: we tooke the one, and the other escaped.

The other of the people app earing on hoare.

Arrows and bold people,
one taken.

While our Generall was builed in searching the Countrey, and those Islands adiacent on the East Hoare, the ship and barkes hauing great care, not to put farre into the sea from him, for that he had finall hope of victuals, were forced to abide in a cruell tempest, chancing in the night, amongst and in the thickest of the yce, which was so monstrous, that euen the least of a thousand had bene of force sufficient, to haue shattered our ship and barkes into smal peccions, if God (who in all necessities, hath rare vpon the infirmitie of man) had not provided for this our extremitie a suf ficient remedie, through the light of the night, whereby wee might well discern to flee from such imminent dangers, which we auoided with 14. Bourdes in one watch the space of 4. houres. If we had not incurred this danger amongst these monstrous Islands of yce, we should haue lost our Generall and Waster, and the most of our best sailers, which were on the Hoare betwixt of victu als: but by the nature of our Waster Gunner, Waster Iackman, and Andrew Dier, the Wasters Wates, men expert both in navigation, and other good qualities, wee were all content to incurre the dangers afoze rehearsed, before we would, with our owne safetie, runne into the seas, to the de struction of our said Generall, and his companie.

Richard Cox,
Waster Gun
ner.
Waster Jack
man.
Andrew Dier,

The day following, being the 19. of Iulie, our Capteine returned to the shippe, with good newes of great riches, which shewed it selfe in the bowels of those barren mountaines, togeth we were all facilitated. A sudden mutation. The one part of vs being almost swallowed by the night before, with cruell Neptunes foze, and the rest on hoare, taking thought for their greedie pamches, how to find the way to New found land: at one moment we were all vnayd with ioy, forgetting both where we were, and what we had suffered. Behold the glorie of man, to night con tending riches, and rather looking for death then ocherwise: and to morrowe deuising how to sa tisfie his greedie appetite with golde.

New found
land.

Within foure daies after we had bene at the entrance of the Streights, the northward and West winnes dispersed the yce into the sea, and made vs a large entrance into the Streights, that without any impediment, on the 19. of Iulie, we entered them, and the 20. thereof, our Generall and W ster, with great diligence, soughte out and founde the West Hoare, and founde out a faire Harbo rough for the shippe and barkes to ride in, and named it after our Wasters mate, Iackmans sound, Iackmans and brought the ship, barkes, and all their companie to safe anker, excepte one man, which died by Gods visitation.

Jackmans
sound.

At our first arrivall, after the ship had at anker, our Generall, with such companie as could wel be spared from the shipps, in maning order entered the lande, hauing speciall care by exhortati ons, that at our entrance thereto, we should all with one voice, kneeling vpon our knees, thanke God.

thanke God for our safe arrivall: secondly, beseech him, that it would please his divine Maieste, long to continue our Queene, for whom he, and all the rest of our companie, in this order toke possession of the Countrey: and thirdly, that by our Christian Studie and endeavour, those barbarous people craven up in Paganie, and insubelitic, might be reduced to the knowledge of true religion, and to the hope of saluation in Christ our Redeemer. Which other wordes were apt to signifie his willing mind, and affection towards his Maieste, and Countrey: whereby all suspicion of an unwhisfull Subject, may credibly be iudged to be heartily exempted from his mind. All the rest of the Gentlemen, and other, bestreue worshiply herein, their due praise and commendacion.

possession is his.

These things in this order accomplished, our Generall commanded all the companie to be obedient in things needefull for our owne safegard, to Master Fenton, Master Yorke, and Master Beale, his Lieutenant, while he was occupied in other necessary affaires, concerning our coming thither.

After this order we marched through the Countrey, with Ensigne displayed, so farre as was thought needefull, and namd and then beaped by stones on high mountaines, and other places, in token of possession, as likewise to signifie unto such as hereafter may chance to arrive there, that possession is taken in the behalfe of some other Maieste, by those which first found out the countrey.

For needfull to be regarded of fearing
men.

Also to make their navigacions to these Countreys, hath not onely extreme windes, and furious seas, so encounter withall, but also many monstrous and great Islands of yce: a thing both rare, wonderfull, and greatly to be regarded.

We were forced sundry times, while the ship did ride here at anker, to have continual watch, with boates & men ready with halbers, to kuit fall unto such yce, which with the ebbe & flood were tolled to & fro in the harborough, & with force of oares to hale them away, for endangering of ship.

Our Generall, certaine daies searched this supposed continent with America, and not finding the commoditie to answer his expectation, after hee had made triall thereof, hee departed thence with two little barkes, and men sufficient, to the East shoare, being the supposed continent of Asia, and left the ship with most of the Gentlemen, souldiers, and sailers, unvill such time as he, either thought good to send, or come for them.

Stones glister with sparkles
like gold.
It cometh spencerie.

The stones of this supposed continent with America, be altogether sparkled, and glister in the Sunne like gold: so likewise doth the sand in the bright water, yet they verifie the old proverbe: All is not golde that glistereth.

On this West shoare we found a dead fish floating, which had in his nose a hozne straight and corquet, of length two yarres lacking two yuches, being broken in the top, where he might perceive it hollowe, into which some of our sailers putting spiders, they presently died. I sawe not the triall hereof, but it was reported unto me of a truth: by the vertue whereof, we supposed it to be the sea Unicorn.

The sea Unicorn.

After our Generall had found out good harborough for the ship and barkes to anker in, and also such store of gold ore, as he thought himselfe satisfied withall, he returned to the Michael, whereof Master Yorke aforesaid, was Captaine, accompanied with our Master, and his Mate: who coasting along the West shoare, not farre from whence the ship rode, they perceaved a faire harborough, and willing to sound the same, at the entrance thereof they espied two tents of Seale skins, unto which the Captaine, our said Master, and other companie repaired. At the sight of our men, the people fled into the mountaines: neuertheless, they went to their tents, where leaving certaine trifles of ours, as glasses, bells, knives, & such like things, they departed, not taking any thing of theirs, except one dogge. They did in like manner leave behind them, a letter, pen, iyncke, and paper, whereby our men, whom the Captaine left the peere before, and in that peoples custome, might (if any of them were alive) be advertised of our presence, and being there.

The people
fled at the sight
of our men.

On the same day, after consultation had, all the Gentlemen, and others likewise, that could be spared from the ship, under the conduct and leading of Master Philpot, (unto whom, in our Generall his absence, and his Lieutenant Master Beale, all the rest were obedient) went a shoare, determining to see, if by faire means we could either allure them to familiaritie, or otherwise take some of them, & so attain to some knowledge of those men, whom our Generall left of peere before.

Master Phil-pot.
Master Beale.

At our coming backe againe to the place where their tents were before, they had removed the tents further into the said Bay, or Baynes, where they might, if they were driven from the land, flee with their boates into the sea. While parting our selves into two companies, and compassing a mountaine, came suddenly upon them by land, who espying us, without any tarryng, fled to their boates, leaving the most part of their oares behind them for halfe, and rowed downe the bay, where our two Ministers met them, and drove them to shoare: but, if they had had all their oares, it doubtles they in rowing, it had bene lost time to have chased them.

Which

When they wounded they leape off the ice submitted them they iudged to be received at our nets, in extreme was miserably perceiving the danger to escape to escape young child, and himself, or a wife heve and deformed men the place to after the name of Having this as yet, is not an, something to an old spirit, a thing else unto Their riches the skins of red black, with other ditie needefull Thus returne with America, call on the East to which is an found and the. In this Isle, with such a second August might both be expect a much time hath conceger of our Generall, that fear of our Generall the ship and two In the mean unto us, sundry to have some he paired with the ned to bring the desired penne, y iudged bying t They also mar ried on mens t With this they would not tooke up: which which is left, so It seemeth they farre distans fr After 4. daies before. Our the boate, and s teine point of th in divine Paetic, in this order took our, those barbarous knowledge of true things very apt to signify by all suspicion of mind. All these commendation.

company to be obeyed, and Master concerning our com so farre as was to other places, in our arrivie there, that our the country, and furious a thing both rare, continual watch, ebbe & flood were endangering the ship, and not finding we departed the continent of Asia, in time as he, either and glister in the the old howe:

boyme straight and here we might perily died. It is we not if, we supposed it to to anchor in, and the Michael, where his Spair: who made a faire harbor of Seale skins, the sight of our men, where leaving cer taking any thing pen, yncke, and paper peoples custome, wife, that could be borne, in our Se were a hoare, by other will take lost the peere before. They had remoued the bymen from the mines, and comp any carrying, led to ed downe the bay, to all their care.

When

When they were lanoed, they nereely assailed our men with their bowes and arrowes, who wounded thre of them with our arrowes: and perceiuing them felues thus hurt, they desperately leape off the Rocks into the Sea, and drowned them selues: which if they had not done, but had submitted them selues, or if by any means we could haue taken aliue (being their enemies as they iudged) we would both haue saued them, and also haue sought remedie to cure their wounds inflicted at our hands. But they, altogether voyde of humanitie, and ignorant what mercy meant, in extremities looke for no other then death: and perceiuing they should fall into our hands, thus miserably by drowning rather desired death, then other wise to bee saued by vs: the rest, perceiuing their fellows in this distresse, fled into the high mountaines. Two women, not being so apt to escape as the men were, the one for her age, and the other being incompared with a young child, we tooke. The olde wretch, whom diuers of our Saylers supposed to be eyther a diuell, or a witch, had her buskins plucked off, to see if she were elouen footed, and for her ougly betwe and besomitic, we let her goe: the young woman and the child, we brought away. We named the place where they were slaine, Bloude point: and the Bay of Warbozough, Yorkes found, after the name of one of the Captaines of the two Barkes.

so fierce assault of a few.

Having this knowledge both of their fiercenesse and cruelty, and perceiuing that faire means, as yet, is not able to allure them to familiaritie, we disposed our selues, contrary to our inclination, on something to be cruel returned to their tents, and made a spole of the same: where we found an olde shirt, a doublet, a girdle, and also shoes of our men, whom we lost the peere before: on nothing else vnto them belonging could we see our eyes.

faire means not able to allure them to familiaritie.

Their riches are not gold, silver, or precious Dycpery, but their said tents and boates, made of the skins of red Deare and Seale skins: also, dogges like vnto wolues, but for the most part black, with other cruell, moxe to be wounded at for their strangenesse, then for any other commodity needfull for our vse.

Boates of skinned.

Thus returning to our ship the 3. of August, we departed from the west Hoare, supposed firme with America, after we had anchored there 13. daies: and so, the 4. thereof, we came to our Generall on the East Hoare, and anchored in a faire Harbozough named Anne Warrwicks found, vnto which is annexed an Island both named after the Countesse of Warwicke, Anne Warrwicks found and Isle.

our departure from the west Hoare.

In this Isle, our Generall thought good, for this voyage, to freight both the ships and barkes, with such Stone or gold minerall, as he iudged to counteruaille the charges of his first, & this his seconde Nauigation to these countries, with sufficient interest to the venturers, where by they might both be satisfied for this time, and also in time to come (if it please God and our Prince) to expect a much more benefite, out of the bowels of those Septentrionall Paralels, which long time hath concealed it selfe, till at this present, though the wonderfull diligence, and great danger of our Generall and others, God is contented with the revealing thereof. It first so abundantly, that from the beginning of August, to the 22. thereof (euery man following the diligence of our General) we rayed about ground 200. tunne, which we iudged a reasonable freight for the ship and two barkes, in the sayd Anne Warrwicks Isle.

In the meane time of our abode here, some of the countrie people, came to shewe themselves vnto vs, sundry times on the maine Hoare, neere adiacent to the said Isle. Our General, desirous to haue some newes of his men, whom he lost the peere before, with some company with him repaired with the ship boar, so common, or signe with them for familiaritie, wherunto he is perswaded to bring them. They, at the first shewe, made tokens, that thre of his true men were aliue, and desired penne, yncke, and paper, and that within thre or foure daies, they would returne, and (as we iudged) bring those of our men, which were liuing, with them.

The countrie people shewe their letters vnto vs.

They also made signes or tokens of their King, whom they called Cacough, & how he was carried on mens shoulders, & a man farre surmounting any of our company, in bignesse & stature. With these tokens and signes of writing, penne, yncke, and paper was deliuered them, which they would not take at our hands, but being layd vpon the Hoare, and the parcie gone away, they tooke vp: which like wise they do, when they desire any thing for change of theirs, laying for that which is left, so much as they thinke will counteruaille the same, and not comming neare together. It seemeth they haue bene vied to this trade or traffique, with some other people adoyning, or not farre distant from their Countrie.

Their place in traffique of exchange.

After 4. daies, some of them shewed themselves vpon the firme land, but not where they were before. Our General very glad thereof, supposing to heare of our men, went from the Island, to the boate, and sufficient company with him. They seemed very glad, and allured him, about a certaine point of the land: behind which they might perceiue a companie of the craftie villains to lye lurking,

The people shewe them letters the third time.

lurking, whom our Generall would not deale withall, for that he knew not what company they were, & so with few signes dismissed them, & returned to his company.

The people
showe them selves againe on sicine land.

Their first meanes to al-
lure vs to shoare.
Their second
meanes.

Their third and craftiest attirement.

An other time, as our said Generall was coasting the countrey, with two litle Pinicks, whereby at our returne he might make the better relation thereof, of the craftie villians, with a whicie skin allured vs to them. Once againe, our Generall, for that he hoped to heare of his men, went towards them: at our comming neare the shoare, where on they were, we might perceiue a number of them lie hidden behinde great stones, & those theye in sight labouring by al meane possible, that some would come on land: & perceiving we made no halt by wayes nor friendly signes, which they vsed by clapping of their hands, and being without weapon, and bus theye in sight, they sought further meanes to p'voke vs thereunto. One alone layd self on the shoare, which wee ooke up with the Boate hooke, as necessary victuals for the relieuing of the man, woman, and childe, whom we had taken: for that as yet, they could not digest our meate: where by they perceiued themselves deceiued of their expectation, for all their craftie allurementes. Yet once againe, so make (as it were) a full shewe of their craftie natures, and subtille sleightes, to the intent thereby to haue intrapp'd and taken some of our men, one of them conceited himselfe impotent and lame of his legges, who seemed to descend to the water side, with great difficultie: & to cover his craftie the moze, one of his fellowes came downe with him, and in such places, where hee seemed unable to passe, heooke him on his shoulers, set him by the water side, and departed from him, leaving him (as it should seeme) all alone, who playing his craftierite pagane very well, thought thereby to p'voke some of vs to come on shoare, not fearing, but that one of vs might make our partie good with a lame man.

Compassion to cure a craftie lame man.

Our Generall, having compassion of his impotencie, thought good (if it were possible) to cure him therof: wherefore, he caused a souldiour to shoote at him with his Calieuer, which grazed befoye his face. The countierite villaine deliuerly fled, without any impediment at all, and got him to his bowe and arrowes, and the rest from their lurking holes, with their weapons, bowes, ar-rowes, slings, and darts. Our Generall caused some calieuers to be shot off at them, whereby some being hurt, they might hereafter stand in moze feare of vs.

This was all the sunnwere, for this time, we could haue of our men, of our Generals letter, their craftie dealing, at these thre severall times, being thus manifest unto vs, may plainly shewe, their disposition in other things to be correspondent. We iudged, that they vsed these tra-gagemmes, thereby to haue caught some of vs, for the deliueing of the man woman and childe whom we had taken.

They are men of a large corp'ature, and good p'p'ozition: their colour is not much unlike the Sunne burnt Countrey man, who laboureth daily in Sunne for his living.

They weare their haire something long, and cut befoze, either with stone o' knife, very disorderly. Their women weare their haire long, and knit up with two loupes, shewing forth on either side of their faces, and the rest soltred vpon a knoe. Also, some of their women race their faces p'p'ortionally, as chinne, cheekes, and fozehead, and the w'p'ices of their hands, whereupon they lay a colour, which continueth darke azurine.

They eate their meate all rawe, both fleshe, fishe, and soule, of something perboyled with bloud and a litle water, which they drinke. If o' lacke of water, they will eate pee, that is hard frozen, as pleasantly as we will doe Sugar, Candie, o' other Sugar.

If they, for necessitees sake, stand in neede of the yemilles, such grasse as the countrey yeeldeth they plucke vpp, and eate, not deintily, o' fallerwise to allure their stomaches to appetite: but for necessitees sake, without either salt, oyles, o' washing, like brute beasts deuouring the same. They neither vs table, stooles, o' table cloth for comelines: but when they are imbued with bloud, amice-kle berpe, and their kniues in like sort, they vs their tongues as apt instrumentes to lick them cleane: in doing whereof, they are assured to loose none of their victuals.

Doggs like unto wolues.

They frack o' keepe certeine doggs, not much unlike Wolues, which they p'oke together, as we do open o' houses, to a sled o' traile: and so carrie their necessaries ouer the pee and snow, from place to place: as the captiue, whom we haue, made perfect signes. And when those doggs are not apt for the same vse: o' when with hunger they are constrained for lacke of other victuals, they eate them: so that they are as needful for them, in respect of their bignesse, as our oren are for vs.

They eate doggs flesh.

They apparell themselves in the skinnes of such beastes as they kill, sewed together with the sinewes of them. All the foule which they kill, they skin, and make there of one kinde of garment o' other, to defend them from the colde.

Woods and taires to their apparel.

They make their apparel with woods and tailes, which tailes they giue, when they thinke to gratifie any friendshippe shewed vnto them: a great signe of friendshippe with them. The men haue

haue them not so spde

The men and women are open before, as with the furre side in they put their kniues their hole, which reach in place of garter, etc.

They vse their they weare the furre
the said skinnes.

Those beastes, fish ing, hole, shoes, they in neede, and almost a

Their houses are meeting at the coppe, so pitched up, that the

They haue other stones and whale bone
the entrance of them is a time to fishe, hunt,
gaine.

Their weapons are long, sinewed on the bowe stringes are lik ed with bone, with th part of litle moze. Th thers layd vpon the ar are tyed on, to haue fo foze of stone o' p'one, p head, with a hooke on e pointed. They are not casion, the arrowe lea ry neere, when they sh

Their Dares are m likewise in the middl they cut out of an ind lays, with a long bore their most hurt: all wa They haue two soz artificially tyed toget ties, wherein streene
as they kill, very fine litle and rowe in, with

Their order of fishe o' how they vse them, I can suppose the
are of such force to be all in nyether doe I see

Those houses, o' ra troden, which is one of them, when they haue haue sufficiently stoyed to their winter statio perceiue to be in chat

They haue some p
to woike their boats, withall, but without It seemeth, that the

have them not so loose as the women.

The men and women wear their hose close to their legges, from the waist to the knee, without any open before, as well the one kind as the other. Upon their legges they wear hose of leather, with the furred side inward, two or three paire on at once, and especially the women. In those hose, they put their knives, needles, and other things needfull to beare about. They put a bone within their hose, which reacheth from the soole to the knee, whereupon they draw their said hose, and so in place of garters, they are holden from falling downe about their feete.

They weare these skinnes very soft and souple with the haire on. In cold weather or Winter, they weare the furred side inward: and in Summer outward. Other apparell they haue none, but the said skinnes.

Those beastes, fishes, and fowles, which they kill, are their meate, drinke, apparell, houses, bedding, hose, shoes, theye, and sailes for their boates, with many other necessaries, wherof they stand in neede, and almost all their riches.

Their houses are tents, made of Beale skins, pitched vp with 4. Firre quarters, foure square, meeting at the toppe, and the skinnes sewed together with sinewes, and layd therupon: they are so pitched vp, that the entrance into them, is alwaies South, or against the Sunne.

Their houses of Beale skins and furs.

They haue other sortes of houses, which we found, not to be inhabited, which are raised with stones and Whale bones, and a skinne layd ouer them, so with stande the raine, or other weather: the entrance of them being not much vnlike an Duens mouth, whereto I thinke, they resort for a time to fish, hunt, and fowle, and so leaue them vntill the next time they come thither againe.

Their weapons are bowes, arrowes, darts, and slinges. Their bowes are of wood, of a yard long, sinewed on the back with strong sinewes, not glued too, but fast girded and tyed on. Their bowe strings are likewise sinewes. Their arrowes are three perces, nooked with bone, and ended with bone, with those two endes, and the wood in the middell, they passe not in lengthe halfe a yerd or little more. They are fettered with two fetthers, the penne end being cutt away, and the fetthers layd upon the arrow with the broad side to the wood: in so much that they seeme, when they are tyed on, to haue foure fetthers. They haue likewise three sortes of heades to those arrowes: one sort of stone or yron, proportioned like to a heare: the second sort of bone, much like vnto a floyre head, with a hooke on the same: the third sort of bone like wise, made sharpe at both sides, and sharp pointed. They are not made very flat, but lightly tyed to, or else set in a nocke, that vpon small occasion, the arrowe leaueh these heades behinde them: and they are of small force, except they be very nere, when they shooe.

Their weapons of beastes.

Their sorts of heades to their arrowes.

Their Darts are made of two sortes: the one with many forkes of bones in the foze ende, and likewise in the middell: their proportions are not much vnlike our toasting yrons, but longer: these they cast out of an instrument of wood, very readily. The other sort is greater then the first aforesayd, with a long bone made sharpe on both sides, not much vnlike a Rapier, which I take to bee their most hurtfull weapon.

Two sortes of darts.

They haue two sortes of boats made of leather, set out on the inner side with quarters of wood, artificially tyed together with thongs of the same: the greater foze are not much vnlike our wherries, wherem in sixteen or twenty men may sit: they haue for a sayle, yest the guttes of such beastes as they kill, very fine and thinne, which they sewe together: the other boate is but for one man to sit and rowe in, with one oare.

Two sortes of boats made of leather.

Their order of fishing, hunting, and fowling are with these sayd weapons: but in what sort, or how they vse them, we haue no perfect knowledge as yet.

They be to fowle, fish, and hunt.

I can suppose their abode or habitation not to be here, for that neither their houses or apparell are of such force to withstande the extremity of colde, that the countrie seemeth to be infected with allinethere doe I see any signe likely to performe the same.

It is to be supposed that their inhabitation is elsewhere.

Those houses, or rather dennes, which stand there, haue no signe of footway, or any thing elsse troden, which is one of the chiefest tokens of habitation. And those tentes, which they bring with them, when they haue sufficiently hunted and fished, they remove to other places: and when they haue sufficiently stoyed them of such victuals, as the countrey yeldeth, or bringeth forth, they returne to their Winter stations or habitations. This coniecture do I make, for the infertility, which I perceiue to be in that countrie.

Their best pion.

They haue some yron, wherof they make arrowe heades, knives, and other litle instruments, to worke their boates, bowes, arrowes, and darts withall, which are very vnapt to doe any thing withall, but with great labour.

It seemeth, that they haue conuersation with some other people, of whom for exchange, they Should receiue the same. They are greatly delighted with any thing that is bright, or giueth a sound.

Anthropophagi.

What knowledge they haue of God, or what Idol they adore, we haue no perfect intelligence. I thinke them rather Anthropophagi, or deuourers of mans flesh, then otherwise: for that there is no flesh or skin, which they finde dead (smell it neuer so stinkily) but they will eat it, as they finde it, without any other blessing. A loathsome thing, either to the beholders, or hearers.

Signes of gold cure.

There is no maner of creeping beast hurtfull, except some Spiders (which, as many affirme, are signes of great store of Golde:) and also certeine stinging Gnattes, which bite so fiercely, that the place where they bite, shortly after swelleth, and itcheth very sore.

Signes of gold from other people.

They make signes of certaine people, that weare bright plates of gold in their foreheades, and other places of their bodies.

Description of the Countries

The Countries, on both sides the streights, lye very high with rough stonie mountaines, and great quantitie of snowe thereon. There is very little plaine grounde, and no grasse, except a little, which is much like vnclo mosse that groweth on soft ground, such as we get Turcks in. There is no wood at all. To be hysed, there is nothing fitter, or yosttable for the vie of man, which that Countrie with rooze peelbeth or byingeth forth: Howbeit, there is great quantitie of Deere, whose skinner are like vnclo Alces, their heads or hoznes doe farre exceede, as well in length as also in breadth, any in these our partes of Countrie: their feete likewise, are as great as our opens, which we measure to be seuen or eght ynches in breadth. There are also bares, wolues, slythng bears, and Sea foule of sundy sortes.

As the Countrie is barren and vnfertile, so are they rude & of no capacitie to culture the same, to any perfection: but are contented by their hunting, fishing, and sowling, with rawe fleshe and warme blood, to satisfie their greedie panches, which is their onely glorie.

Signe of Earthquakes or thunder.

There is great likelihood of Earthquakes, or thunder: for that there are huge & monstrous mounteines, whose greatest substance are stones, and those stones so shaken with some extraydinarie means, that one is separated from another, which is discoriant from al other Quarries.

No riuers, but such as the Sunne doeth cause to come of snowe.

There are no riuers, or running springes, but such, as though the heate of the Sunne, with such water as descendeth from the mounteines and hilles, whereon great dykes of snowe doe lie, are ingendred.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

It argueth also, that there should be none: for that the earth, which with the extremitie of the Winter, is so frozen within, that that water, which should haue recourse within the same, to mainteine springes, hath not his motion, whereof great waters haue their originall, as by experience is seene other where. Such ballies, as are capable to receive the water, that in the Summer time, by the operation of the Sunne, descendeth from great abundance of snowe, which continually lyeth on the mounteines, and hath no passage, sinketh into the earth, and so vanissheth away, without any runnell about the earth, by which occasion, or continual standing of the said water, the earth is opened, and the great frost yeldeth to the force thereof, which in other places, foure or five fathoms within the ground for lacke of the said moisture, the earth: (euen in the very Summer time) is frozen, and so combineth the stones together, that scarcely instruments, with great force, can vnknit them.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Also, where the water in those ballies can haue no such passage away, by the continuance of time, in such order as is before rehearsed, the peereley descent from the mounteines, filleteth them full, that at the lowest banke of the same, they fall into the next ballie, and so continue, as slythng ponds or Stagnes in Summer time full of water, and in the Winter hard frozen: as by skartes, that remaine there of in Summer, may easily be perceined: so that, the heate of Summer, is nothing comparable or of force, to dissolve the extremitie of colde, that cometh in Winter.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Neuertheless, I am assured that belowe the force of the frost, within the earth, the waters haue recourse, and vncrypt themselves out of sight into the sea, which though the extremitie of the frost, are constrained to doe the same: by which occasion, the earth within is kept the warmer, and springes haue their recourse, which is the onely nutriment of Golde and Minerals within the same.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

There is much to be said of the commodities of these Countries, which are couched within the bowris of the earth, which I let passe till moze perfect triall be made thereof.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Thus conseruaturg, till time, with the earnest industrie of our Generall and others (who by all diligence remaine prest to employe the truth of that which is vnemployd, as he hath to his excellent praise founde out that which is like to yelde an innumerable benefite to his Prince and countrie) offer further triall, I conclude,

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

Improbability, that there should be neither spring or riuers in the ground.

The 27. of the voyages, though not our own, as are befall with the last to the Court. We lost our of the same month. Byllowe, and two men, one is surge of the S.

I Could declare I we haue bene flanges of temp strange, but I same. I haue vnderstanding the clared.

Countries n webe name giu Our Genera of diuers Robb

The t

The 27. of the readinge, the ykers, and hope then and there a mirall, whom t and were welc rall continued the voyage, vn mitting our sel crep, in such tu the utmost part

And here it and speake of a meeting of cer and Routers: an and sent him a But because mentioning of shippes now fa winde, sometime forslayd in one and craggd la craggd rockes red with foggi

The

The 23. of August, after we had sacrificed our mindes with straight sufficiency for our desires, though not our courteous desires, with such knowledge of the countrey, people, and other commodities as are before rehearsed, the 24. thereof we departed thence hence: the 17. of September we fell with the lands end of England, and so to Hillsyd Haven, from whence our Generall rode to the Court for order, to what Port of Haven to conduct the Shippe.

We lost our two Barkes in the way homeward, the one, the 29. of August, the other, the 31. of the same month, by occasion of great tempest and fogge. Dowber, God rejoyced the one to Byllowe, and the other making his course by Scoeland, to Permouth. In this Voyage we lost two men, one in the way by Gods visitation, and the other homeward cast over boide with a surge of the Sea.

I Could declare unto the Readers, the Latitude and Longitude of such places and regions, as we have bene at, but not altogether so perfectly as our masters and others, with many circumstances of tempests and other accidents incident to Sea faring men, which seeme not altogether strange, but I let them passe to their reportes as men most apt to see soothly and declare the same. I have also left the names of the Countreies on both the Voyes untouched, for lacke of understanding the peoples language: as also for sundry respects, not needfull as yet to be declared.

Countries newe discovered, where commoditie is to be looked for, doe better accept with a newe name given by the explorers, then an uncertaine name by a doubtfull Auctour.

Our General named sundry Islands, Mountaines, Capes, and Harbovoughs after the names of Divers Noble men, & other gentlemen his friends, as wel on the one Voye, as also on the other.

The third and last voyage into Meta Incognita, made by M. Martin Frobisher, in the yeere 1578. Written by Thomas Ellis.

These are to let you knowe, that upon the 25. of May, the Thomas Allen, being Viceadmirall, whose Captaine was M. Yorke, M. Gibbs Master, M. Christopher Hall Pilot, accompanied with the Rearadmirall named the Hopewel, whose Captaine was M. Henrie Carewe, the M. Andrewe Dier, and certaine other Shippes, came to Grauesend, where we ankred and abode the comming of certaine other of our Fleete, which were not yet come.

Master Yorke, Christopher Hall, the Hopewel, Captaine Carewe, Andrew Dier.

The 27. of the same moneth, our Fleete being nowe come together, and all things prest in a readinesse, the winde favouring, and tide serving, we being of sailes in number eight, waied anchors, and hoysed our sailes toward Harwich, to meete with our Admirall, and the residue, which then and there abode our arrivall: where we safely arrived the 28. thereof, finding there our Admirall, whom we, with the discharge of certaine pieces, saluted (according to order and duetie) and were welcomed with the like courtesie: which being finished, we landed: where our Generall continued mustring his Souldiers and Spicers, and setting things in order appertaining to the voyage, untill the last of the sayd moneth of May, which day we hoysed our sailes, and committing our selves to the conducting of Almighty God, we set forward toward the West countrey, in such luckie wise, and good successe, that by the first of June, we passed the Durles, being the best part of Ireland, to the Westward.

Harwich, Durles, Ireland.

And here it were not much amisse, no; farre from our purpose, if I should a litle discourse and speake of our adventures and chances by the way, as our landing at Plymouth, as also the meeting of certaine poepe men, which were robbed and spoiled of all that they had, by Pirates and Rovers: amongst whom was a man of Byllowe, on whom our General used his liberalitie, and sent him away with letters into England.

Plymouth, Byllowe.

But because such things are impertinent to the matter, I will returne (without any more mentioning of the same) to that, from the which I have digressed, and swarved, I name our Shippes now sailing on the surging Seas, sometime passing at pleasure with a wisped Easterne winde, sometime hindered of our course againe by the Westerne blastes, untill the 20. day of the sayd moneth of June, on which day in the morning we fell with Frizeland, which is a very high and cragged land, and was almost cleane covered with snowe, so that we might see nought but craggie rockes, and the tops of high and huge hills, sometimes (and for the most part) all covered with foggie mistes. There might we also perceiue the great Isles of Ice lying on the seas, Frizeland.

like mountaynes, some small, some big, of sundry kindes of Shapes, and such a number of them, that we could not come neere the Shore for them.

Thus sailing alonge the coast, at the last we sawe a place somewhat boyde of yce, where our Generall, (accompanied with certayne other,) wente a Shore, where they sawe certayne tentes made of beastes skins, and boats much like unto theirs of Meca incognita. The tentes were furnished with flesh, fish, skins, and other trifles: amongst the which was found a boxe of nailes: whereby we did conjecture, that they had either Traffickers amongst them, or els a traffike with some other nation. The men ranne away, so that we could have no conference or communication with them. Our Generall (because he would haue them no more to flee, but rather encouraged to stay through his courteous dealing) gaue commaundement, that his men should take nothing away with them, saving onely a couple of white Doggs, for which he left pins, popnes, knives, and other trifling things, and departed, without taking or hurting any thing, and so came a boyd, and boyed sayles, and passed forwarde.

But being scarce out of the sight thereof, there fel such a fogge and hidious mist, that we could not see one another: whereupon we strooke our drums, and sounded our trumpets, to the ende we might keepe together: and so continued all that day and night, till the next day, that the mist brake vp: so that we might easly perceiue all the Shippes thus sayling together all that day, vntill the next day, being the 22. of the same: on which day wee sawe an infinite number of yce, from the which we call about to shun the danger thereof.

But one of our small Barkes, named the Michael, whose Captaine was Master Kinderlieke, the Master Bartholomewe Bull, lost our companie, inasmuch that we could not obtaine the sight of her many dayes after, of whom I meane to speake further anon, when occasion shall be ministered, and opportunitie serued. Thus we continued on our course, vntill the second of July, on which day we fell with the Queenes shoyland, where wee sawe so much yce, that we thought it impossible to get into the Straights: yee at the last we gaue the aduenture, and entered the yce.

Being in amongst it, we sawe the Michael, of whome I spake before, accompanied with the Iudith, whose Captaine was Master Fenton, the Master Charles Jackman, bearing into the shoyland yce, farre distant from vs, who in a shoyne that fell, that present night, (whereof I will at large. God willing, discourse hereafter) were seuered from vs, and being in, wandred vp and downe the Straights, amongst the yce, many dayes, in great perill, till at the last, (by the prouidence of God) they came safely to harbor in their wished Shoye, in the Countesse of Warwickes sound, the 20. of July aforesayd, ten dayes before any of the other Shippes: who going on shoye found where the people of the Countrey had bene, and had hid their prouision in great heapes of stoncs, being both of flesh, and fish, which they had killed: whereof we also found great store in other places after our arrivall. They found also diuers engines, as bowes, slings, and darts. They found likewise certayne peeces of the Dinnette which our Generall left there the yeere before, which Dinnette he had soonke, minding to haue it againe the next yeere.

Nowe, seeing I haue entreated so much of the Iudith, and the Michael: I will returne to the rest of the other Shippes, and will speake a litle of the shoyne which fell, with the mishaps that we had, the night that we put into the yce: whereof I made mention before.

At the first entrie into the yce, in the mouth of the Straights, our passage was very narrowe, and difficult: but being once gotten in, we had a saype open place without any yce, for the most part: being a league in compasse, the yce being round about vs, and inclosing vs, as it were within the pales of a park. In which place, because it was almost night, we minded to take in our sayles, and lie a hull all that night. But the shoyne so increased, and the woues beganne to mount aloft, which brought the yce so neere vs, and comming on so fast vpon vs, that we were faine to beate in and out, where we might espye an open place. Thus the yce comming on vs so fast, we were in great danger, looking euery houre for death. And thus passed we on in that great danger, seeing both our felues, and the rest of our Shippes so troubled and tossed amongst the yce, that it would make the strongest heart to relent.

At the last, the Barke Dionysie, being but a weake ship, and hysed afore amongst the yce, being so leake that she no longer could carry about 3 water, sank without saving any of the goods which were within her: which sight so abashed the whole Fleet, that wee thought verily wee should haue tasted of the same sauce. But neuertheless, we seeing them in such danger, manned our boates, and saved all the men, in such wise, that not one perished, (God be thanked.)

The shoyne still increased, and the yce inclosed vs, that wee were faine to take poune toy and toy masses: for the yce had so entironed vs, that we could see neither land, nor sea, as farre as we could keene: so that we were faine to cut our cables, to hang ouer boye for senders, somewhat

The Countesse
of our Generall
sail.

Master Kinderlieke, Bartholomewe Bull,
new Whill.

The Michael,
The Iudith,
M. Fenton,
Charles Jackman.

The Countesse
of Warwickes
sound.

The entrance of passage, &c.

Barke Dionysie

Barke Shippes
for safetye.

what to caule
some sending diarly with from the Shippes that not onely
ships, that it

Thus cont
for instant bea although be and the fogge ceiue, about a
of winde, wh vs then we de fresh gale at he added more after punishm

Thus we God for our d seeing that no whom I spake bulding off an ge into the

And as we passed all the water, and we scorpe fathom

Also the sh
the same: so sayle, and to well of the
ous fogge hau fogge the teat
of Bridge wate

The streete bearc in with step, which them soules, a they had smal

Then we came by two we sawe none
we were at ranne on rock
vs, opening th ly were, and a rocks.

When we (God be than but the fogge

Then the rocks, brook
as yet had not till the next m gine notice th
which they ou

Then hain and keeping o
bake vp and number of them,

of yee, where our certaine tenets
were fur-
a boze of nailer
s a traffike with our rather encou-ment should take left pins, poppes, ny thing, and so ill, that we could ces, to the rude day, that the mist
all that day, vnto
number of yee,
after Kinderlie,
obtaine the sight
ion shall be cond of July, on that we thought
entered the yce, mpained with the bearing into the (whereof I will wanded by and all, (by the yout-
le of Warwick
o going on shoar
at great boapes of and grent stoie in o-and darts. They
the yeeere before,
ill returns to the mishaps that we
as very narrowe, yee, for the most ng vs, as it were minded to take in boaves beganneto
s, that we were omining on vs so he on in that great
amongst the yce, onght the yce, be-any of the goods ught verily wee danger, manned anked.)
e downe toy and y sea, as farre as y fenders, some what

what to ease the shippes sides, from the great and byrre strokes of the yce: some Captian barres, some sending off with oares, some with planks of two ynches thicke, which were broken immedi- arly with the force of the yce, some going out vpon the yce to beare it off with their shoulders from the shippes. But the rigourousnesse of the tempest was such, and the force of the yce so great, that not onely they burst and spoiled the foresayd prouision: but likewise so raised the sides of the shippes, that it was pitifull to beholde, and caused the hearts of many to faint.

Thus continued we all that dismal and lamentable night, plunged in this perplexitie, looking for instant death: but our God, (who neuer leaueth them destitute which faithfully call vpon him) although hee often punisheth, for amendments sake, in the morning caused the windes to cease: and the foggie, which all that night lay on the face of the water, to cleare: so that wee might perceiue, about a mile from vs, a certaine place cleare from any yce, to the which with an easie breath of winde, which our God sent vs, we bent our selues. And furthermore, hee prouided better for vs then we deserued, or hoped for: for when we were in the foresayd cleare place, hee sent vs a fresh gale at West, or at West Southwest, which set vs cleare without all the yce. And further, he added moie: for he sent vs so pleasant a day, as the like we had not of a long time before, as after punishment, consolation.

Thus we ioyfull wighetes, being at libertie, tooke in all our sailes, and lay a hull, praying God for our deliuerance: and stayed to gather together our flecte: which once being done, wee seeing that none of them had any great hurt, neither any of them wanted, sauing onely they of whom I spake before, and the ship which was lost, then at the last we hoised our sailes, and lay hulling off and on, till such time as it would please God to take away the yce, that wee might get into the Straights.

And as we thus lay off and on, we came by a marueilous huge mountaine of yce, which sur- passed all the rest that euer we sawe: for wee iudged it to be nere foure scoie fathoms aboue water, and we thought it to be a ground for any thing that wee could perceiue, being there nine scoie fathoms deepe, and of compass about halfe a mile.

Also the sixt of July, there fell a bidious foggie and mist, that continued till the nineteenth of the same: so that one shippe could not see another, Therefore we were faine to beare a small sayle, and to obserue the time: but there ran such a current of Tide, that it set vs to the North- west of the Quenees foyleland, the backside of all the Straights: where (though the contag- ious foggie hauing no sight either of Sunne or Starre) we scarce knew whers we were. In this foggie the tenth of July, wee lost the companie of the Viceadmirall, the Anne Francis, the Busse of Bridgewater, and the Francis of Foy.

The sixteenth day, one of our small Barks, named the Gabriel, was sent by our Generall to beare in with the land, to descrite it, where being on land, they met with the people of the Coun- trey, which seemed very humane and ciuill, and offered to traffike with our men, profering their foules, and skins, for knives, and other trifles: whose courtisie caused vs to thinke, that they had small conuersation with the other of the Straights.

Then we bare backe againe, to goe with the Quenees foyleland: and the eighteenth day wee came by two Islands, whereon we went on shoare, and found where the people had bene: but we sawe none of them. This day we were againe in the yce, and like to be in as great perill as we were at the first. For though the darkenes and obscuritie of the foggie mist, we were almost runne on rocks and Illands, before we sawe them: But God, euen miraculously, prouided for vs, opening the foggies, that we might see clearly, both where, and in what danger we present- ly were, and also the way to escape: so els, without faile, wee had ruinously runne vpon the rockes.

When we knew perfectly our instant case, we call about, to get againe on Sea boarde, which (God be thanked) by night we obtained, and praised God. The cleare continued fraise an houre, but the foggie fell againe as thicke as euer it was.

Then the Rearadmirall, and the Beare got them selues cleare without danger of yce and rockes, strooke their sayles, and lay a hull, hoping to haue the rest of the flecte come forth: which as yet had not found the right way to cleare themselves from the danger of rockes and yce, vntill the next morning, at what time the Rearadmirall discharged certaine warning pieces to give notice that he had escaped, and that the rest (by following of her) might see themselves free, which they did that day.

Then hauing gathered our selues together, we proceeded on our purposed voyage, bearing off, and keeping our selues distant from the coast, till the 19. day of July: at which time the foggies brake vp and dispersed, so that wee might plainly and clearly beholde the pleasant ayre, which Gods prou- idence.

A mountaine of yce appea- ring in this way.

A fog of long continuance.

The Gabriel.

The people offer to traffike with vs.

Warning pieces of the vantage discharge.

which so long had bene taken from vs, by the obscuritie of the foggie mists: and after that time, we were not much encombyed therewith, vntill we had left the confines of the Countrey,

A faire found
betwene the Queenes sojland & Jack-mans found.

Then we espying a fayre found, supposed it to go into the Straights, betwene the Queenes sojeland, & Jackmans found, which yfould, as we imagined, for our Generall sent forth againe the Gabriel, to discouer it, who passed through with much difficultie: for there ran such an extreme currant of a tide, with so horrible a gulfie, that with a fresh gale of winde they were scarce able to sterme it: yet at the length with great trauaile they passed it, and came to the Straights, where they met with the Thomas Allen, the Thomas of Ipswich, and the Bulle of Byrdgewater: who all together aduentured to heare into the yce againe, to see if they could obtaine their wished Poyle. But they were so encombyed, that with much difficultie they were able to get out againe, yet at the last they escaping, the Thomas Alline, and the Gabriel bare in with the Westerne Hoyle, where they found harbour, and there moored their shippes, vntill the fourth of August, at which time they came to vs in the Countesse of Warwickes found. The Thomas of Ipswich caught a great leake, which caused her to cast againe to Sea boye, and so was mended.

We sailed along still by the coast, vntill we came to the Queenes sojeland, at the point whereof we met with part of the gulfie aforesayd, which place of gulfie (as some of our Spasters do credibly report) doeth flowe nine houres, and ebb but thre. At that point wee discouered certaine lands Southwarde, which neither time nor opportunitie would serue to search. Then being come to the mouth of the Straights, we met with the Anne Francis, who had laine bulding by and downe euer since her departure alone, neuer finding any of her companie. We met then also the Francis of Foy, with whom againe we intended to venter and get in: but the yce was yet so thicke, that we were compelled againe to retyre and get vs on Sea boye.

An horrible snowe fell in Iuly.

There fell also the same day, being the 26. of Iuly, such an horrible snowe, that it lay a foote thicke vpon the barenes, which froze as fast as it fell.

We had also at other times, diuers cruell stormes, both of snowe and halle, which manifestly declared the diffeperature of the Countrey: yet for all that we were so many times repulsd and put backe from our purpose, knowing that lingering delay was not profitable for vs, but hurtfull to our voyage, we mutually consented to our valiant Generall once againe, to giue the onset.

The time of our setting forward, &c.

The 28. day therefore of the same Iuly we assayed, and with little trouble (God be prayd) we passed the dangers, by day light. Then night falling on the face of the earth, we builed in the cleare, till the cheare full light of the day had chased away the noysome darkenes of the night: at which time we set forward toward our wished poyle: by the 30. day we obtined our expected desire, where we found the Iudich, and the Michael: which brought no small ioy vnto the Generall, and great consolation to the beaute hearts of those wearied wights.

The 30. day of Iuly we brought our ships into the Countesse of Warwickes found, and moored them, namely these ships, the Admirall, the Rereadmirall, the Francis of Foy, the Beare, Arniel, the Salomon, and the Bulle of Byrdgewater: which being done, our Generall commaunded vs all to come a shoyle, vpon the Countesse Island, where he set his Spiners to worke vpon the Spine, giuing charge with expedition to dispatch with their lading.

The Countesse
of Suffex Island.
Winters sojnace.
Dauids found.

Our Generall himselfe, accompanied with his Gentlemen, diuers times made rodes into sundry partes of the Countrey, as well to finde new Spines, as also to finde out and see the people of the Countrey. He found out one Spine, vpon an Island by Beares found, and named it the Countesse of Suffex Island. One other was found in Winters Foynace, with diuers others, to which the ships were sent sundrerly, to be laden. In the same rodes hee met with diuers of the people of the Countrey, at sundry times, as once at a place called Dauids found: who shot at our men, and very desperately gaue them the onset, being not about thre or foure in number, there being of our Countrey men about a dosen: but seeing themselves not able to preuaile, theyooke themselves to flight: whom our men pursued, but being not vsed to such craggy cliffes, they soone lost the sight of them, and so in vaine returned.

The pollicie
of the people for saferie of their lives.

We also saw of them at Beares found, both by Sea and land, in great companies: but they would at all times keepe the water betwene them and vs. And if any of our ships chanced to be in the found, (as they came diuers times) because y harbor was not very good, the ship labed, & departed againe: then so long as any ships were in sight, the people would not be seene. But when as they perceived the ships to be gone, they would not only shew themselves standing vpon high cliffes, and call vs to come our vnto them: but also would come in their boats, very neere to vs, as it were to brag at vs: whereof our Generall hauing aduertisement, sent for the Captaine and Gentlemen of the shippes, to accompanie and attende vpon him, with the Captaine also of the Anne Francing lost vs: the 2

they found good
wowe we had all (who compelled our lading.

Our Genera
the Countesse of tes, and went ou
in hall left certai
could not finde.

The next mo
thole to them, in neere vnto them
their cunning an ching, our Gene
booyd with our
in: for often kno
in the morning
is a calme and dap of August w

But before I will turne my inhabited all the
that neither fear
perature of so v betwe of such an neither regarde lifer a thing of a
to be of sufficien
haue profited the
and singular ma
and vntuill pro
manifest and im
so many casual Theftes aston
serue speciall co
with hood their

For the Bark and should haue
which, which ha see her, since th
causes, hauing
and therefore la

But before we and garnished i on horsebacke a critic the peop

Thus haui the Bulle had n meane while, th an outragious walked about:
great goodnes
danger was mo
not any one sh
bles, some bot
This boye

after that time,
unterp.
ne the Queenes
nt forth againe such an extreme ere scarce able
be straighte,
ulle of Byrdge could obtaine
ey were able to bare in with the ll the fourth of he Thomas of
o was mended,
he point where Pasters do cre ouered certaine arch. Then be d laine bulding
e. We met then but the pee was at it lay a foote which manifestly
times repul'd
ble foys, but ine, to giue the Don be prayd)
we bulled in the
of the night: at our expected bevnto the Gene-ound, and moo, the Beare, Arrall commanwoyke vpon the made robes into and see the pro-
nd named it the
diuers others,
y diuers of the
: who shot at ure in number,
o yeuall, they
y cliffs, they mics: but they s chanced to be ship laded, & de-
ene. But when ding vpon big
ry nere to vs,
the Captaine Captaine also
of

of the Anne Francis, who was but the night befoze come vnto vs. For they, and the seebore hauing lost vs the 26. day, in the great snowe, put into an harbour in the Queenes foeland, where they found good care, wherewith they laded themselves, and came to seeke the Generall: so that nowe we had all our shippes, sauing one Barke, which was lost, and the Thomas of Ipswich, (who compelled by what furie I know not,) so forsooke our companie, and returned home without lading.

Our Generall accompanied, with his Gentlemen, (of whom I spake) came altogether to the Countesse of Suffex Island, nere to Beares sound: where he manued our certaine Pinnisses, and went ouer to the people: who perceiuing his arriual, scode away with all speede, and in half left certaine darts and other engines behind them, which we found: but the people we could not finde.

The next morning our Generall perceiuing certaine of them in bote vpon the Sea, gaue chase to them, in a Pinnisse vnder saile, with a fresh gale of winde, but could by no meanes come nere vnto them: for the longer he sailed, the further off he was from them: which well he woe their cunning and actiuitie. Thus time wearing away, and the day of our departure appoching, our Generall commanded to lade with all expedition, that we might be againe on Sea boord with our ship: for whilst we were in the countrie, we were in continual danger of freezing in: for often snow and halle often the water was so much frozen and congealed in the night, that in the morning we could scarce rowe our boates of Pinnisses, especially in Diers sound, which is a calme and still water: which caused our Generall to make the more haste, so that by the 30. day of August we were all laden, and made all things ready to depart.

But befoze I proceede any further herein, to shewe what fortune befell at our departure, I will turne my penne a litle to M. Captaine Fenton, and those Gentlemen, which should haue inhabited all the yeere in those countries, whose valiant mindes were much to bee commended, that neither feare of foze, nor the cruel nipping stoynes of the raging winter, neither the intemperature of so vnhealthfull a country, neither the sauagenesse of the people, neither the sighe and heue of such and so many strange Pecesozes, neither the desire to returne to their native soile, nither regarde of friends nor care of possessions and inheritances: finally, not the loue of life (a thing of all other most sweete) neither the terrour of dreadfull death it selfe, might seeme to be of sufficient foze, to withdraue their yronesse, or to restraine from that purpose, there by to haue possided their countrey: but that with most willing hearts, venturous mindes, stout stomacks, and singular manhood they were content there to haue tarried for the time, among a barbarous and vnciuill people, Infidels and miscreants to haue made their dwelling, nor terrified with the manifest and imminent dangers which they were like to runne into: and seeing befoze their eyes so many casualties, whereto their life was obiect, the least wherof would haue made a milk soy Theatres astonishd and vterly discomfited: being I say thus minded and purposed, they deserue speciall commendation: For doubtlesse, they had done as they intended, if lucke had not withstood their willingnesse, and if that fortune had not so frowned vpon their intents.

For the Barke Dionys, which was lost, had in her much of their house, which was prepared and should haue ben builded for: here, with many other implements. Also the Thomas of Ipswich, which had most of their yrouillon in her, came not into the Streights at all: neither did we see her, since the day we were separated in the great snow, (of which I spake befoze.) For these causes, hauing not their house, nor yet yrouillon, they were disapointed of their presence to earte, and therefore laded their shippes, and so came away with vs.

But befoze weooke shipping, we builded a litle house in the Countesse of Marwicks Island, and garnished it with many kinds of crisses, as Pinnes, Pointes, Laces, Glasses, Rombes, Bases on horsebacke and on foote, with innumerable other such fancties and toys: thereby to allure and entice the people to some familiaritie against other yeres.

Thus hauing finished all things we departed the countrie, (as I haue befoze:) but because the Busse had not lading enough in her, she put into Beares sound to take in a litle more. In the meane while, the Admirall, and the rest, without the Sea, layed for her. And that night fell such an outrageous tempe, bearing on our shippes, with such vehement rigor, that anchor and cable a-uallid nought: for we were byuen on rocks and Islandes of yee, insomuch that (had not the great goodnes of God bene miraculouly shewed to vs,) we had bene cast away euery man. This danger was more doubtful and terrible, then any that proceeded of went befoze: for there was not any one Shippe, (I thinke) that escaped without danage. Some lost anchor and also gables, some bores, some Pinnisses: some anchor, gables, bores, and Pinnisses.

This boystrous stoynie so scattered vs one from another, that one Shippe knewe not what was become

Their speede flight at our Sines also arrual.

Gentlemen
shoold haue inhabited the Countrie.

Referreth
vnto the same nhabitation.

An house errected and garnis-
hed with di-
uerse fancties.

An outrage ous tempest.

become of another. The Admirall knew not where to finde the Uccadmirall of Rear admirall, or any other ship of our companie. Our Generall being on land in Beares sound, could not come to his shippe, but was compelled to goe a booyde the Gabriel, where hee continued all the way homeward: for the dangerous blastes continued so extremely and so long a time, that it sent vs homeward (which was Gods fauour towarde vs) will we, nill we, in such haste, as not any one of vs were able to keepe in companie of other, but were separated. And if by chaunce any one ship did ouerakee other, by swiftnesse of saile, or mette (as they often did:) yet was the rigour of the winde so hidious, that they coulde not continue companie together the space of one whole night.

Our entering the coastes
dangerous.

Thus our Iourney outward was not so pleasaunt, but our coming thither entering the coastes and countrie, by narrow streights, perillous yce, and swift tides, our times of aboade there in snow, and stormes, and our departure from thence, the 3. of August, with dangerous blustering winde and tempests, which that night arose, was as vncomfortable & separating vs so, as we failed, that not any of vs met together, until the 28. of September, which day we fell on the English coastes, betwene Sylley and the landes ende, and passed the channell, untill our arrival, in the riuer of Thames.

The report of Thomas Wiars, passenger in the Emanuel, otherwise called the Busse of Bridgewater, wherein James Leeche was Master, one of the shippes in the last voyage of Master Martin Frobisher, 1578. concerning the discouerie of a great Island in their way homeward the 12. of September.

The Busse of Bridgewater, was left in Beares sounde at Meta incognita, the second day of September behind the Flete, in some distreffe, through much winde ryding neere the Lee shore, and forced there to ride it out vpon the board of her cables and ankers, which were all aground but two. The thirde of September being saye weather, and the wind North northwest the sea sayle, and departed thence and fell with Friland, on the 8. day of September, at 6. of the clocke at night, and then they set off from the Southwell poynt of Friland, the winde being at East, and East southeast, but that night the winde beared Southerly, and shifted oftentimes that night: but on the tenth day in the morning, the wind at west north west saye weather, they steered southeast, and by south, and continued that course untill the 12. day of September, when about 11. a clocke before noone, they descried a lande, which was from them about five leagues, and the Southermost part of it was Southeast by East from them, and the Northmost next, North North east, or North east. The master accompted that Friland, the South east poynt of it, was from him at that instant, when hee first descried this newe Island, North west by North, 50. leagues. They account this Island to be 25. leagues long, and the longest way of it South east, and North west. The Southerne part of it is in the latitude of 57. degrees and 1. second part, or thereabout. They continued in sight of it, from the 12. day at 11. of the clocke, till the 13. day three of the clocke in the after noone, when they left it: and the last part they saw of it, bare from them, North west by North. There appeared two harbours vpon that coast: the greatest of them seuen leagues to the Northwardes of the Southermost poynt, the other but foure leagues. There was verie much yce neere the same lande, and also thirtie or thirtie leagues from it, for they were not cleare of yce, till the 15. day of September, after noone. They plied their voyage homeward, and fell with the west part of Ireland about Galway, and had first sight of it on the 25. day of September.

The Island is length 25.
leagues.
This Island is in the latitude
of 57. degrees
and 1. second part.

Notes

M. Hak

Notes from

quire, g North
pt

land have accell
seare is to bee
sweete water,
up of those, as filling of mine
of those neede

Stone of White M
such a Stone of may Timber
to be Reede co
like,

The people
and by trade of herd by want of fire, and so will Spaniards, but by yce becomes then in hande.

And by trade
commodities,
that the natur
for the same,
supply of the

Such natur
ter with force

And for the lander's man bearing of re
hours, so that rich and stron
to be brought lake, and the dispersing of Nothing
best discouer strengths, at rate in peace
sequence.

...of heat admiral,
and could not come
turned all the way for a time, that it sent such haste, as not a and if by chance a did: yet was the ti
per the space of one

...either entering the ness of aboade there dangerous blis
parating us so, as day we fell on the well, untill our ar

Emanuel, on James e last 3.

...eta incognita, the
...the, though much
...it our upon the ba-
...two. The shure of
...with the sea sayle,
...September, at 6,
...island, the wind
..., and shifted often
...est saye weather,
...ay of September,
...n them about five
...and the North-
...land, the South-
...ve Island, North-
...g, and the longest
...de of 57. degrees
...day at 11. of the
...: and the last part
...boroughs by a
...urthermost point,
...and also twentie
...September, after
...land about Gal-

Notes framed by M. Richard Hakluit of the middle Temple Esquire, giuen to certaine Gentlemen that went with M. Frobisher in his Northwest discouerie, for their directions: And not vnfit to be committed to print, considering the same may stirre vp considerations of these and of such other things, not vnmeet in such newe voyages as may be attempted hereafter.

That the first Seate be chosen on the seashore so as (if it may be) you may haue your owne Hauke within Bay, riuer or lake, within your seate safe from the emie: and so as the emie shall be forced to lie in open rode abroade without, to be dispersed with all windes and tempests that shall arise. Thus seced you shall bee least subiect to annoy of the emie, so may you by your Ha-uie within, passe out to all partes of the world, and so may the shippes of England haue access to you to supply all wants, so may your commodities be caried away ails. This seate is to be chosen in temperate Climat, in sweete ayre, where you may possesse alwayes sweete water, wood, seacoales, or turfe, with fish, flesh, grayne, frutes, herbes and rosetts, or so many of those, as may suffice very necessitie for the life of such as shall plant there. And for the possessing of mines of golde, of siluer, copper, quicksiluer, or of any such precious thing, the wantes of those needefull things may be supplied from some other place by sea, &c.

- Stone to make Lyme of,
- Slate stone to cile withall or such clay as maketh tyle,
- Stone to wal wall, if Wycke may not be made,
- Timber for buyding easely to be conuied to the place,
- Reede to couer houses or such like, if tile or slate be not, are to be looked for as things without which no Citie may be made nor people in ciuil socy be kept together.

The people there to plant and to continue are eyther to liue without trafficke, or by trafficke and by trade of marchandise. If they shall liue without sea trafficke, at the first they become naked by want of linen and wollen, and very miserable by infinite wants that will ocherwise ensue, and so will they be forced of themselves to depart, or else easely they will be consumed by the Spaniards, by the Frenchmen, or by the naturall inhabitants of the countrey, and so the interpice becomes reprochfull to our nation, and a let to many other good purposes that may be taken in hande.

And by trade of marchandise they can not liue, except the sea or the lande there may yeelde commoditie. And therefore you ought to haue most speciall regard of that poynt, and so to plant, that the naturall commodities of the place and seate, may drawe to you access of Nauigation for the same, or that by your owne Nauigation you may carie the same out, and fetch home the supply of the wants of the seate.

Such nauigation so to be employed, shall besides the supply of wants, bee able to encounter with foxye force.

And for that in the ample bene of such things as are brought to you out of England by sea, standeth a matter of great consequence, it behouery that all humanitie and curtesie and much forbearing of reuenge to the inland people be used, so shall you haue firme amitie with your neygbours, so shall you haue their inland commodities to maintaine traffike, and so shall you waue rich and strong in force. Diuers and seuerall commodities of the inland are not in great plenty to be brought to your hands, without the ayde of some portable or Nauigable ryuer, or ample lake, and therefore to haue the helpe of such a one is most requisite: And so is it of effect for the dispersing of your owne commodities in exchange into the Inlands.

Nothing is moye to be indouored with the Inland people then familiaritie. For so may you best discouer all the naturall commodities of their countrey, and also all their wants, all their strengths, all their weaknesse, and with whome they are in warre, and with whome confederacye in peace and amitie, &c. which knowne you may worke many great effects of greatest consequence.

Notes

And

And in your planninge the consideration of the climate and of the soyle be matters that are to be respected. For if it be so that you may let in the salt sea water, nor mixed with the fresh into flats, where the sunne is of the heats that it is at Rochel, in the Bay of portingall, or in Spaine, then may you procure a man of skill, and so you haue wonne one noble commodity for the fishing, and so trade of merchandise by making of Salt.

Or if the soyle and climate bee such as may yeelde you the Grape as good as that at Durdeu, as that in Portingall, or as that about Duill in Spaine, or that in the Islands of the Canaries, then there resteth but a workman to put in execution to make wines, and to vse the Resigns of the sunne and other, &c.

Or if ye finde a soyle of the temperature of the South part of Spaine or Barbarie in which you finde the Olive tree to growe: Then you may be assured of a noble merchandize for this realme, considering that our great trade of clothing doth require oyle, and weying howe deere of late it is become by the vent they haue of that commodity in the West Indies, and if you find the wilde Olive there it may be grafted.

Or if you can find y<sup>e</sup> herrye of Cochenille with which we colour Stammelles, or any Roote, Berrye, Fruite, wood, or earth fitte for dying, you winne a notable thing fitte for our State of clothing. This Cochenille is naturall in the west Indies on that firme.

Or if you haue hides of beasts fit for sole Lether, &c. It wold be a merchandize right good & the saunges there yet can not tame Lether after our kind, yet excellently after their own maner.

Or if the soyle shal yeeld Figges, Almonds, Sugar Canes, Quinces, Oranges, Lemons, potatoes, &c. there may arise some trade & traffick, by figs, almonds, sugar, marincade, surker, &c.

Or if great woods be found, if they be of Cypres, chests may be made, if they be of some kinde of trees, pitch and tarre may be made, if they be of some other then they may yeeld Rosin, Turpentine, &c. and all for trade and trafficke, and Calkes for wine and oyle may be made, likewise ships and houses, &c.

And because trafficke is a thing so material, I wish y<sup>e</sup> great obseruation be taken what euery soyle yeeldeth naturall, in what commoditye sort, & what it may be made to yeeld by indouour, & to send vs notice home, y<sup>e</sup> therupon we may deuise what means may be thought of to raise trades.

Now admit that we might not be suffered by the saunges to enioy any whole countrie of any more then the scope of a citie, yet if we might enioy trafficke & be assured of the same, we might be much enriched, our Reuie might be increased, and a place of safetie might there bee founde, if change of religion or ciuil wars should happen in this realme, which are things of great benefit. But if we may enioy any large territorye of apt soyle, we might so vse the matter, as we should not depend vpon Spaine for oyles, sarks, religas, oranges, lemons, Spanish skins, &c. For vpon Fraunce for wood, baylax, and galeoyne wines, nor on England for flaxe, pitch, tarre, mallas, &c. So we should not so exhaust our treasure, and so exceedingly enrich our doubtful friends, as we do, but should purchase the commodities that we want for halfe the creature that now we do; but should by our owne industries and the benefits of the soile there cheaply purchase oyles, waxes, salt, frutes, pitch, tarre, flaxe, hempe, mallas, woods, fish, gold, siluer, copper, tallow, hides & many commodities: besides if there be no flats to make salt on, if you haue plenty of wood you may make it in sufficient quantitie for common vses at home there.

If you can keepe a safe haue, although you haue not the friendship of the neere neighbours, yet you may haue trafficke by sea vpon one shoare or other, vpon that firme in time to come if not present.

If you find great plenty of timber on the shoare side or vpon any portable riuer, you were best to cut downe of the same the first winter, to be seasoned for ships, barks, boats and houses. And if neere such wood there be any riuer or brooke vpon the which a sawing mill may be placed, it would doe great seruice, and therefore consideration would be had of such place.

And if such place or chosen place of settling were in possession & after fortified by art, although by the land side our Englishmen were kept in, and might not enioy any traffick with the next neighbours, nor any vituals: yet might they victual themselves of fish to serue very necessitie, and enter into amitie with the enemies of their next neighbours, and so haue vent of their merchandize of England & also haue victual, or by meanes herevpon to be vfed to force the next neighbours to amitie. And keeping a nauie at the settling place, they should finde out along the coast of the land to haue trafficke, and at diuers Islands also. And so this first seat might in time become a stapling place of the commodities of many countreys and territoryes, and in time this place might become of all the prouinces round about the only gouernour. And if the place first chosen should not so well please our people, as some other more lately found out: There might be an easie

remoue

remoue, and the
If the soles
pie then men
facts therein, and

To plant vpon ring into the ri
portable tarre in
the one or on the king contenting

Such rivers the same. These win of the bart of

Since euery hing in your re quire to amend planting place to careped thier e some fruit, and th

shoely after shall trees shall be ab
as may suffice th

If the soile haue
dly to haue after make mention of

A letter

an Italian gen and father in la known among ter, which he ha both giue with h a thousand roue woy or lesse. A whole ingenio living Lord th

Also certaine
few dayes past,
for maisters to berp much. T and in twenty f

the tropike of C

Howeouer, t
this countrey, f
me to giue me come hither wi

God sending in dether from La proced may be

...ers that are to
with the fresh
al, as in Spaine,
for the fishing.

... as that at Dur
... of the Cana
... of the Religions

... barle in which
... change for this
... ing howe deere
... and if you find

... s, as any Roote,
... our State of clo

... e right good of the
... in own maner.
... nges, Lemons,
... in case. Further ge
... be of some kinde
... cloe Kofin, Tur
... be made, likewise

... taken what every
... ed to by indour,
... of to raise trades,
... ole countrie of any
... e same, we might
... here bee founde, if
... s of great benefi
... ter, as we should
... ins, &c. For upon
... care, makes, &c.
... ful friends, as we
... at now we do; but
... these opies, wines,
... allow hides & man
... tie of wood you

... here neighbours,
... me to come if not

... uer, you were best
... and houses.
... g mill may be pla
... ch place.

... by art, although
... sick with the next
... e very necessitie,
... vent of their mar
... ce the next neigh
... along the tract of
... be in time become
... in time this place
... place first chosen
... might be an easie
... remoue

... remoue, and that might be raised, as rather kepe for others of our nation to avoid an ill neigbdr).
If the soiles adjoining to such convenient haven and setting places be found marshie and boggy then men skilfull in dypping are to be carryed thither. For arte may worke wonderfull effects therein, and make the soile rich for many uses.

To plant upon an Island in the mouth of some noceable river, as upon the point of the land entering into the river, if no such Island be, were to great end. For if such river were navigable or passable farre into the land, it would arise great hope of planting in freill soiles, and traffike on the one or on the other side of the river, or on both, or the linking in amitie with one or other partie being contenting there for dominion.

Such rivers found, both barges & boats may be made for the safe passage of such as shall pierce the same. These to be covered with doubles of course linnen artificially wrought, to defend the armo of the bart of the sawge from the rower.

Since every soile of the world by arte may be made to yeld things as feed and to cloch man, being in your returne a perfect note of the soile without and within, and we shall deusse if neede require to amend the same, and to draw it to more perfection. And if you finde not fruites in your planting place to your liking, we shall in due times furnish you with such kindes of plantes to be carryed thither the winter after your planting, as shall the best next summer following yeld you some fruit, and the yere next following, as much as shall suffice a towne as big as Calice, and that shortly after shall be able to yeld you great store of strong durable good siter to dyke, and these trees shall be able to increase you within lesse then seven yeres as many trees presently to beare, as may suffice the people of divers parties, which at the first setting may stand you in great need, if the soile have not the commoditie of fruites of goodnesse already. And because you ought greatly to haue after things that yeld present reliefe, without trouble of carriage thither, therefore I make mention of these, thus specially, to the end you may haue it specially in minde.

A letter written to M. Richard Stapers by John Whichall from Brasill, in Santos the 26 of June.

1 5 7 8

Whysfull sir, and welbeloued friend M. Staper, I haue me most heartily recommended vnto you, wishing your health euen as mine owne.

These few words may be to let you vnderstand, that, whereas I wrote vnto you not many dayes past, by the way of Lisbon, how that I determined to be with you very shortly, it is in this countrey offered me to marry, and to take my choice of thre or foure: so that I am about three dayes ago comforted with an Italian gentleman to marrie with his daughter within these foure dayes. This my friend and father in law Signior Ioffo Dore is borne in the citie of Genua in Italie: his kindred is well knowne amongst the Italians in London: also he hath but onely this child which is his daughter, which he hath thought better bestowed vpon me then on any Portugall in all the countrey, and doth giue with her in marriage to me part of an Ingenio which he hath, that doth make euery yere a thousand routes of sugar. This my marriage will be woorth to me two thousand ducets, little more or lesse. Also Signior Ioffo Dore my father in law doth intend to put into my handes the whole Ingenio with fiftie or seuentie slaues, and thereof to make me factor for vs both. I giue my liuing Lord thanks for placing me in such honoy and plentifulnesse of all things.

Also certaine dayes past I talked with the pnyeboy and the captaine, and they haue certified me few dayes past, that they haue discouered certaine mines of siluer and golde, and looke euery day for maisters to come to open the said mines: which when they be opened will enrich this countrey very much. This place is called Saine Vincent, and is distant from youe two thousand leaguers, and in tweney foure degrees of latitude on the South side of the equinoctiall line, and right vnder the tropike of Capricorne. A countrey it is very healthfull without sickness.

Spoyeouer, I haue talked with the captaine and pnyeboy, and my father in law, who rule all this countrey, for to haue a shippe with goods to come from London thither, which haue promised me to giue me licence, saying that now I am free denizen of this countrey. To cause a shippe to come hither with such commodities as would serue this countrey, would come to great gaines, God sending in safetie the profit and gaines. In such wares and commodities as you may shippe thither from London is for euery one commoditye deliuered here thre for one, and then after the pnyeboy may be employed in white sugar at foure hundred reis the route.

Whites of gold a siluer new is discouered at S. Vincent.

The daye to S. Vincent would this for one.

¶ m m

How

I meane also to haue a friend in London to send me a shippe of 60 or 70 tunnes, little more or less, with such commodities as I shall giue aduice for. This voyage is as good as any Peru voyage. If you and maister Osborne will deale herre, I will deale with you before any other, because of our olde friendly friendship in time past. If you haue any Hamache thereon, in the name of God doe you crie out a fine barke of seruente or eighty tunnes, and send her hither with a Hoyngeall pilot to this port of saint Vincent in Basill, bordering vpon the borders of Peru.

Also I herewith write vnto you in what forme and maner you shall furnish this voyage both in commodities and otherwise.

In what maner to be a voyage to be. Whence with a shippe
of 70 or 80
tunnes to be sent.

First you must lade in the said shippe certayne Hampshire and Devonshire hartles; for the which you must let her depart from London in October, and to couch in the Canaries, and there to make sale of the said hartles, and with the proceed thereof to lade fifteene tunnes of waxes that be perfect and good, and six dozen of cobouan shimmes of these colours, to wit, orange tawne, yellow, red, and very fine blacke. I thinke you shall not finde such colours there. Therfore you must cause them that shall go vpon this voyage, to take fasten with them, to cause the same shimmes to be put into the said colours, Also I thinke you shall finde oyle there. Ther hogheads of sweet oyle for this voyage is very necessary, of a hundred and thirtie barres of oyle.

Also in London you may lade in the said shippe these parcels of commodities or wares, as foloweth:

- In primis, Foure pierces of hollands of middle saye.
- Item, One pierce of fine holland.
- Foure hundred elles of osenbygen very fine.
- Foure dozen of llypps of all sayes.
- Seventeene hntals of pierce of the Canaries,
- Twentie dozen of great knives which be made in fardles, of a lowe price.
- Foure dozen of a small saye.
- Sixe pierces of bays of the lowest saye.
- One very fine pierce of bays.
- Foure hundred elles of Spanish cottons, most blacke, greene, some yellow.
- Eight or tenne dozen of hats, the one halfe trimmed with castles, the other plaine, with the bands of Cyprus.
- Sixe dozen of course sherts.
- Thye dozen of doublets of canvas.
- Thye dozen of doublets of steebed canvas.
- One pierce of fine Millan fullian barres.
- Sixe dozen of locks for doores and chests.
- Sixe thousand of all maner of sh books.
- Foure dozen reames of paper.
- Two dozen of glasses of diuers sayes.
- Two dozen of Venice glasses, the one halfe great, the other middle saye.
- Two dozen of mantles of frize of the lowest price that can be.
- Thye dozen of frize gowones.
- Foure hundred pound of tinne of the best of Hoyngeall, most small dishes and treuchers.
- Foure pound of silke of all colours.
- Twentie pound of spices, cloves, cinnamon, pepper, and caston.
- Two hntals of white saye.
- Thye pound of chyeed, white, blacke, and blew.
- Thye pound of fine white chyeed.
- Item, halfe a dozen of Hoyngeall hartles of diuers colours.
- Foure sayng clothes, blew, red, yellow, and greene.
- Sixe Hoyngeall dozens of diuers colours.
- One fine blew cloth of eight pound.
- One fine damell of tenne or twelue pound.
- One fine sheeps coloured cloth of twelue pound.
- One fine blacke hartle.
- One fine damell hartle.
- Sixe yards of blacke veluet.
- Thye barrells of nails for chests.
- Two barrells of nails for shippes and barkes.

Dit

Sixe hntals of ocrem
Two dozen of veluet Foure yards of cassata
Two dozen of leather Sixe dozen of apes, hats Foure mases of gittone Foure hundred of fine and sherts.

Fourte tunne of yron.
These be such saye of mar hether, haue you no doubt, to your contentment and pro sumery.

My father in law and I finger we intend to shippe for you to be ale with us in this me answere thereof, and sent of hand.

Beside the premises I Sixe yards of crimolin
Sixe yards of crimolin
Twelue yards of fine y There in this country in they haue used this name so fo. When you write vnto m

Thus I commit you with If you send this shippe, I Quinte nor any of her coast, writes let her be dispatched Also a dozen of sherts for Item, six or eight pierces can be sent.

A copie of the letter

Whitthall

An

M

After
by your s Whitthall
we haue
them to s did write tertainment, but also should every thing, and that for to red dye sugars; a pound of great credit that they and be heerunder written, to toy to send this good shippe to fo, but also with as many o countrey. And we craue of hant in you and of your letter to other intinde of your purpose shall nor anly haue cause to the magistrates there to be

Six huzalles of ocom.

Two dozen of velvet girdles without hangers.

Four yards of cassaca red, blacke, and blew, with some greene.

Two dozen of leather girdles.

Six dozen of axes, hatchets, and small billies to cut wood,

Four mases of gittone strings.

Foure hamper of sixe hundred elles of some linnen cloth that is of a lowe price to make shires and sherts.

Foure tunne of yron.

These be such sorte of wares as I would you should send, If you meane to deale or send any ship hither, have you no doubt, but by the helpe of God I shall put all things in good order according to your contentment and profite: for my father in law with the capitaine and youeodor doe rule this countrey.

My father in law and I shall (God willing) make a good quantity of sugar every yeere, which longer we intend to shippe for London from hence soforth, if we can get a trustie and good friend as you to deale with vs in this matter. I pray you presently after the receit of this my letter to write me answere thereto, and send your letter to Sp. Wolber to Lisbon, and he will conuey it to me out of hand.

Besides the promise send sixe yards of skarkt, parchment lace of divers colours, Sixe yards of crimosin velvet.

Sixe yards of crimosin latten.

Twelve yards of fine yuke blacke.

Here in this countrey in stead of John Whithall they haue called me John Leitoom: so that they haue vsed this name so long time, that at this present there is no remedie but it must remaine so. When you write vnto me let the superscription be vnto John Leitoom.

Thus I commit you with all yours to the Holy ghost for euer,

If you send this shippe, I would haue you give order that she touch in no part of the coast of Guinie nor any other coast, but to come directly hither to the port of S. Vincent, and from the Canaries let her be dispatched in my name, to wit, John Leitoom,

Also a dozen of shires for my wearing let be sent if you send the shippe.

Item, sixe or eight pieces of sayes for mancles for women, which is the most necessarie thing that can be sent.

By your assured friend

John Whithall.

A copie of the letters of the Aduenturers for Brasill sent to Iohn Whithall dwelling in Santos, by the Minion of London.

Anno 1580 the 24 of October in London.

After Whithall, as vnaquainted we commend vs vnto you, &c. vnderstanding by your friends, M. John Bird, Sp. Robert Chalkaden, & your brother James Whithall of certaine letters that they haue receiued of yours from Santos, which we haue seene and read, wherein from time to time you doe require, and desire them to send a good shippe to Santos, with such wares and commodities as you did write for, whereby you did not onely promise that they should haue good entertainment, but also should sell the said commodities to make thre of one outward at the least in euery thing, and that for to reade they shippe backe, they should haue of the best, finest, and whitest sugers 3 pound of one we (gbe for a bucket at the most. The promise is considered, with the great credit that they and we do give to your writing and promise, haue caused vs, whose names be hereunder written, to loine our selves in company together, and to be at great charges purpose to send this good shippe the opinion of London, not onely with such merchandises as you wrote for, but also with as many other things as we thought might any wayes please you, of those the countrey. And we craue of you, that we and our factours may haue some credit of you, as we haue in you and of your letters, which is to beleue vs that we haue taken this voyage vpon vs, with no other minde or purpose then to deale faithfully and cruelly in the trade by sea and land, so as you shall not onely haue cause to reioyce, and deserve thanks for our coming, but also you will procure the magistrates there to be bound, as they use in Galizia, that they may be preserved and defended

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

14 12.8 13.6 13.2 13.0 12.5 12.0 11.8 5

110 10 13.6 13.2
12.8

from all repressalls and imbargements of princes or subjects for any causes or matters whatsoever, whereby we may be encouraged by them, giuing vs this security of good intertainment, to continue the trade peerelely henceforth: and for our parts we promise vpon our credits and fidelities, to commit no outrage at the sea nor land, nor suffer any to be done in our company that we may let, but rather to defend and protect all other peaceable merchantes as we are with the sayd shippes and goodes.

And to the end that you and others shall know that we meane as we say, we haue giuen order to our factours to giue you good hostages for your assurance of our good fidelities: and further we haue sent a testimoniall of our owne true meaning in writing vnder the seales of this honourable citie of London, which we will not discredit by our behauiours for all the treasure that you haue, and so we haue written to your magistrats of your poze, and others in Spanissh, the copy whereof we send you heerewith closed in English. And if the time should fall out so contrary to our expectations, that there should not be fine white sugar sufficient to lade our said shippe in due time at Santos, then we pray you direct our factours where they may go with the shippe in safete to supply their want, and helpe them to a good sure pilot for that purpose, and write your letters to your friends where the best sugar is made in the sayd parts, and helpe our factours to haue a testimoniall from Santos, that they and you traded together friendly, and so departed in good and perfect amity, and shew them that the iust cause of our coming is to trade as merchantes peaceably, and not as pirates to commit any offence to one or other.

Also we pray you if there be any store of waere, or salt pecker, whereby the price there may yeeld vs as much profit as the white sugars at a bucket the roue, or any other commodity of like profit, then to procure that we may lade it without danger of law, be it euere of golde or silver or whatsoeuer els.

We haue sent you copper cauldrions for your enginos with iron, and all other necessaries for your purpose, and artificers to set the same: and as we haue at your request bene at great charges in sending these men, so we pray you let vs haue lawfull fauor in like courtesie to fauor all our causes. And if any of our mariners or passengers should in any respect of displeasure against their company, or in hope of preferment of marriage or otherwise, would procure to tarp and dwell there, and leaue his charge & office, that then you will be a meane to the iustice that such fugitiues should be sent aboard the shippe as prisoners: for as you know, without our men we can not bring home our shippes.

We haue giuen order to our factours to vse your counsell and helpe in the sayd affaires, and to grauntie you for the same as to your courtesie and faithfull friendship shall appertaine to your good liking: and in the meane time for a token of our good willes towards you, we haue sent you a field bech of walnut tree, with the canopy, valens, curtaines, and gilt knops. And if there be any commodity els that may pleasure you or your friends, we haue giuen order that they shall haue the refusing of it before any other, giuing for it as it is woorth.

And thus to conclude, promising to performe all the foresayd things on our parts in every condition, we commit you to God, who euere preserve you with all his blessings.

Your louing friends Christopher Hodsdon.
 Anthonie Garrard.
 Thomas Bramlie.
 John Bird.
 William Elkin.

Certaine notes of the voyage to Brasill with the Minion of London aforesaid, in the yeere 1580, written by

Thomas Grigges Purser of the said shippe.

The third day of Nouember in the yeere aforesaid we departed in the opinion of London from Harwich, from which time no great thing woorth the knowledge or regard of others happened untill the 22 of December the next moneth, which day for our owne learning & vse we obserued the setting of the sunne, which was West south west, we then being vnder the line equinoctiall, where we found the aire very temperate, and the wind for the most part Southeast & East south east.

The same day we also obserued the rising of the moone, being one day after the full, which rose at East north east.

60. Christoph.
Hare was captaine in this voyage.

Nouember.

December.

The first we arrived
The 16 da
they met
thence to arrived at

Our court by West, and

This shipp
at nine fatho

Upon the
The third

we and inter
The fourth

shippe, and the
The eighth were sent to h

The 18 da

great French but were deli

upon the cap liners, and the

The 19 da
againe, and b

to be taken th
The 20 da

shoten in th
The 22 da

Santos, and r for the straig

The 23 da
gaine, and ca

at Santos,

This day pill, for they

haue trade th
About this that the shipp

that the shipp

The 25 da
in a barke th

The 22 da
with the Pad

they were so
Rio Genero

Rome and he they church

to stand ou
and further r

The 28 of The 21 of

The 10 da
English writ

to haue a pil
The 11 da

eighteenth d
and leakes

and in the m

The first land that we fell with upon the coast of Brasil was the Island of S. Sebastian, where January we arrived the 14 day of January, in the yeere 1581.

The 16 day Thomas Babington, and others in our pinnell, went a shoare to Guaybea, where they met with John Whitball his father and mother in law, who hauing receiued letters from thence to be deliuered at Santos, came aboard, and then we weped and set saile, and the 28 day we arrived at the Island of Santa Catelina, neere the entrance of Santos.

Our course from S. Sebastians was South west and by West, and betwixt the South west and by West, and West south west.

This Island of Catelina seemeth at the first to be a part of the Island of Girybia. We ankered at nine fathome blacke oile ground.

Upon the Island there growe many Palmito trees, but no fresh water is there to be found.

The 17 day of February we arrived before the towne of Santos, and were there well receiued February 17 and intertaind of the captaine, the kings officers, and all the people.

The fourth day we tooke into our shippe a hiefe alitie, which serued for the victualling of the shippe, and the refreshing of our men, and to make vs the merrier at Shrouetide.

The eight day we deliuered to M. John Whitball a bedsted with the appurtenances, which were lent to him from our merchants of London.

The 18 day the captaine of Santos came aboard our ship, by whom we had knowledge of foure great French shippes of warre, that had bene at the riuier Genero, which there tooke thre canoas, but were taken from thence by the captaines & foyses, and were looked for here at Santos. Whereupon the captaine requested vs to lend them some armoz and artillery, and we lent them twenty caliuers, and two barrels of powder.

The 19 day our skiffe which we had sent to Alkatrafes, and had bene away sixe dayes, came againe, and brought good stoye of great and good fish, and tolde vs that there was good stoye of fish to be taken there by the booke, and as much wood as we would haue of the Palmito tree.

The 20 day at night, Nicholas Gale, one of our company, fell ouer our shippes sides, and was drowned in the port of Santos before the towne, where our shippe rode at anker.

The 22 day two of the canoas which the Frenchmen tooke in the riuier of Genero, returned to Santos, and reported that the foure French shippes were past to the Southwards as they thought for the straights of Magellan, and so into the South sea.

The 23 day the aforesaid Nicholas Gale, who fell ouerboard two dayes before, was founde againe, and taken by thre miles from our shippe, & our company went to his buriall in the church at Santos.

This day the captaine and iustices of Santos bid vs to carry in theiyr road till the last of Apyll, for they had sent a barke of Santos to Bayea at the kings charges, to know whether we should haue trade there or no, and this barke could not returne before that time.

About this time there arriued at Fernanbucke a shippe from Portugall, which brought the newes that the Islands, Indies, & Portugall ic selfe was molested and troubled by the Spaniards, and that the Portugalls had both English & Frenchmen to Lisbon to defend them against Spaine.

The 25 day we sent two of our men, namely Thomas Michael & Simon Thorne to Bayea in a barke that went thither from Santos.

The 22 day of Apyll our maister and Thomas Babington hauing some talke and conference with the Padrez of Santos, they (our men being ready to go to the riuier Genero) tolde them that they were sorry for our banishment from the church, which was by the Spinistrador written from Rio Genero, that sayn much as this 20 yeeres or more the English nation had denied the church of Rome and her proceedings, therefore the Spinistrador commaunded that none of vs should come to theiyr church: the Padrez willed vs heerein to haue patience, and to take it in good part, and promised to haue our friends in theiyr word & writing, both to the Spinistrador, and to the bishop at Bayea, and further requested all our English company to haue no ill opinion of them.

The 28 day of Apyll we laden sugars into our shippe.

The 21 day we tooke in fresh victualles from Santos.

The 10 day of June we gratified one Ioho Thorno, dwelling in Santos, with some of our English victualles, and intertaind him in good soye in our shippe, and this day we were provided to haue a pilot at Santos to carry vs to Bayea.

The 11 day we went to fish, to make provision for our shippe & men, and from that time till the eighteenth day we fet water, and cut wood for our fire, and trimmed our shippe of the barnes and leakes which the woynes had made in her while we rided at the Island of S. Sebastians, and in the meane time wee departed from before the towne of Santos. Our Maister sent his

Day. June.

Weeks in the opinion made by woynes.

ceers whaforcurr, inment, to contri, es and fidelities, to y that we may let, y they shippes and le haue giuen order es: and further we of this honourable sure that you haue, sly, the copy wher- itary to our expect- ppe in due time at in safetie to supply our letters to your haue a testimoniall ood and perfect ami- careably, and not as nice there may peeld modity of like profit, of siluer or whatsoe.

ether necessaries for beene at great char- restie to fauor all our pleasure against their ary and dwell there, uch fugitiues should can not bying home theyr affayres, and to ertaine to your good haue sent you a field if there be any com- they shall haue the re-parts in euery condi

opher Hodsdon. onie Garrard. as Bramlic. Bird. am Elkin.

Minion of by red in the opinion of ooth the knowledge e next month, which the sunne, which was where we found the east & East south east, er the full, which role

The

Whose name was Christopher Hare.

skiffe from the barre of Santos, thinking to have brought Thomas Babington and William Cuet, with the pilot, which we had carryed for three dayes, and as the skiffe was going William Cuet being by the riuers side, called to our pinnelle, & sent a letter to our maister, which Thomas Babington had written, wherein was no newes, but that the Spinistrado was arrived at Santos from the riuer Genero, and would speake with our maister, but he willed that whatsoeuer Thomas Babington did write, no credit should be giuen to it. And further willed vs by presently to depart for S. Sebastians, and there to dispatch our businelle, and then to send backe for Babington and himselfe to Guaybea, where he (if he were well) would giue his attendance to come aboard.

As we rid two leagues a sea boord the barre of Santos, we broke a cable in the open sea, which hapned the 15 day of this moneth.

We arrived at S. Sebastians the 15 day, and there tyfied our ballast, and had in stones, and belied our shippe a ground to stoppe our leaks, and carryed our calke a shoare to be booped for water, which in deed might better haue bene done in Santos, before the Spinistrado came thither: yet we finished all things pertaining to our shippe, by the 22 of this moneth, at S. Sebastians.

July.

The first day of July Thomas Babington came aboard with William Cuet, in our pinnelle, and the rest of our men that went for them: but there was no pilot brought according to promise, to carry vs to Bayca.

The things that we obserued and noted in the time of our being at Santos, were these.

All such wares and merchandizes as owe no custome in Byasil, they vse us, to set a price vpon the same, howe it shall be solde: which is done by the magistrats of the towne, according to the ordinances of their king.

But for all such merchandizes as do owe custome there, the merchants are to sell them according as they may, to the greatest profit and aduantage that they can.

Concerning the prouince of Peru, we learned that one part of it by land and water is but theue dayes iourney from the towne of Santos, and from thence it may be about foure or five dayes iourney by water to the maine riuer of Plate.

From the head of the riuer of Plate, and from the two chiefest townes there, they do trade & traffike by land into Peru by maggones, and hostes of mules.

The said riuer of Plate is so full of sands and dangers, and the strech so fierce sometimes, that no shipping bares to deale with it, small barks to their knowledge may go vpon it, and not els.

The Portugals here can not be suffered to vntill they mines of treasure in these parts, vpon paine of death, the contrary being commanded by the king, and the Viceroy, who is as their king in place of authority.

About 20 leagues from Santos, there is a certaine kinde of wilde Sauages, lying in the mountaynes, which are in friendship with the Portugals, and they haue continuall warres with certaine other Sauages that dwell about the borders of Peru, which is distant from Santos about 40 or 50 leagues: These Sauages of Peru haue store of golde and siluer, but they know not the vse of it.

Looke what Sauages of their enemies they take, they sell them to the Portugals for knives, combs, axes, or hatchets, and other trifles: they will sell one for a penny knife to a Portugall, and after two peeces they are worth twenty or thirty buckets to a Portugall.

This people haue also continuall warres with the Spaniards: and this was tolde vs by one of those Sauages, which hath dwelt among the Portugals these seven peeces, with his maister called Senior Manoel Veloso. And this fellowe would willingly haue come with vs for England.

There are certaine rocks that lie off betwene Alcatrazes and S. Sebastians, about two leagues, which are to be taken heed of, which a farr of in saye weather shew like the sailes of shippes.

There are other rocks that lie off S. Carolina also five leagues to the East and by South into the sea off the Island.

At our coming vp to Santos we found foure fathome & a halfe water in the shallowest place, and the like we found within a league after we were parted from S. Carolina, little more or lesse, but after you haue runne in the depth of foure fathome & a halfe, about a mile or lesse, then you shall haue it deeper againe more and more.

Before the towne of Santos we rode in eight and tenne fathome water.

Instructions

S. Fran
The fa
Sea

On the four a inhabit nerall, be aboard, o boord our prouisio
mongst departed
The m fecting ou
them, the
and so lay
of himselfe Dur y ber, and a which w ther we
The within
into the uen his m
In ch is, and l which th
All ch
with vs
sall, wh
The called M did pecc
tray of T the mha
per the n prouisio
ter and (as by miles, &

The famous voyage of Sir Francis Drake into the South Sea, and there hence about the whole Globe of the Earth, begun in the yeere of our Lord, 1577.

The 15. day of November, in the yeere of our Lord, 1577. Sir Francis Drake, with a flecte of five ships and barkes, and to the number of 164. men, Gentlemen and Sailers, departed Plimmouth, giving out his pretended voyage for Alexandria: but the winde falling contrary, he was forced the next morning to put into Falmouth haven in Coynwall, whers such and so terrible a tempest tooke vs, as few men have seene the like, and was in deed so vehement, that all our ships were like to have goneto wracke, but is pleased God to preserve vs from that extremitie and to afflict vs only for that present with these two particulars: The maste of our Admirall which was the Pellican, was cut our hood for the safegard of the ship, and the Starre godd was driven a shoare, & some what buisied, for the repairing of which damages we returned againe to Plimmouth, and having recovered those harmes, and brought the ships againe in good state, we set forth the second time from Plimmouth, and set saile the 13. day of December following.

The 25. day of the same month we fell with the Cape Canine, upon the coast of Barbarie, and coasting along, the 27. day we found an Island called Magador, lying one mile distant from the maine, betwene which Island and the maine, we found a very good and safe harbour for our ships to ride in, as also very good entrance, and void of any danger.

The Isle of Magador on the coast of Barbarie.

On this Island our Generall erected a pinnace, wherof he brought out of England with him foure already framed, While these things were in doing, there came to the waters side some of the inhabitants of the countrey, the wyng tooch their flags of truce, which being scene of our Generall, he sent his ships to care to the shoare, to know what they would: they being willing to come aboard, our men left there one man of our companie for a pledge, and brought two of theirs aboard our shippe, which by signes shewed our Generall, that the next day they would bring some provision, as Sheepe, Capons and Hennes and such like, whereupon our Generall bestowed among them some linnen cloth and shoes, and a iaveling, which they very joyfully received, and departed for that time.

The next morning they failed not to come agayne to the waters side, and our Generall againe setting out our boats, one of our men leaping oner rashly a shoare, and offering friendly to embrace them, they set violent hands on him, offering a dagger to his throte if he had made any resistance, and so laying him on a boise, carried him away, so that a man cannot bee too circumspect and wary of himselfe among such miscreants.

Our pinnace being finished, we departed from this place the thirtieth and last day of December, and coasting along the shoare, we did desire, not contrary to our expectation, certaine Caniers which were Spanish shermen, to whom we gave chase, and tooke 3. of them, and proceeding further we met with 3. Caruells and tooke them also.

The 17. day of January we arrived at Cape Blanco, where we found a ship riding at anchor, within the Cape, and but two simple Mariners in her, which ship we tooke and carried her further into the harbour where we remained 4. dayes, and in that space our Generall mulctred, and trapped his men on land in warlike maner, to make them fit for all occasions.

January.

In this place we tooke of the Fishermen such necessaries as was wanted, and they could yeld vs, and leaving here one of our little barkes called the Benedic, wee tooke with vs one of theirs which they called Camers, being of the burden of 40. tunnes of thereabouts.

All these things being finished, we departed this harbour the 22. of January, carrying along with vs one of the Portugall Caruells which was bound to the Islands of Cape de Verde, for saile, wherof good store is made in one of those Islands.

The master of Pilot of that Caruell, did advertise our Generall that upon one of those Islands called Mayo, there was great store of dried Cabaritas, which a few inhabitants there dwelling, did yeerely make ready for such of the kings ships as did there touch, being bound for his countrey of Brasile or else where. We fell with this Island the seven and twentieth of January, but the inhabitants would in no case traffique with vs, being thereof forbidden by the kings Edict: yet the next day our Generall sent to view the Island, and the likelihoods that might be there, of provision of victuals, about three score & two men under the equano: & gouernment of Wincer and master Doughtie, and marching towards the chiefe place of habitation in this Island (as by the Portugall wee were informed) hauing travelled to the mountains the space of three miles, and arriving there somewhat before the day break, wee arrested our selves to see day

The Isle of Mayo.

ber Hare.

son and William going William, which Thomas arrived at Santos asfoever Thomas sent to depart for bington and him above.

in stones, and halloped for water, came chicher: yet baskians.

et, in our pinnelle, being to promise to ere these, to let a price upon copying to the ope to sell them acco

water is but twelve of five dayes jour do trade & traffike

sometimes, that no and not els.

these parts, upon do is as their king ying in the moun- t warres with cer Santos about 40 they know to not the ngals for knives, a Portugall, and as tolde vs by one es, with his mai- come with vs for out two leagues, as of Shippes.

nd by South into shallo west place, little more of tell, Me, then you shall structions

The voyages and discoueries Sir Fran. Drake.

before vs, which appearing, wee found the inhabitants to bee few: but the place by reason that it was manured, we found to bee more fruitfull then the other part, especially the halles among the hills.

Ripe grapes in Winter.

Here we gaue our selues a little refreshing, as by very ripe and sweete grapes, which the fruitfullnesse of the earth at that season of the yeere prouided vs: and that season being with vs the depth of Winter, it may seeme straunge that those fruites were then there growing: but the reason thereof is this, because they being betwene the Tropike and the Equinoctiall, the Sunne passeth twice in the yeere through their Zenith ouer their heads, by meanes whereof they haue two Summers, and being so nere the heate of the line, they neuer lose the heate of the Sunne so much, but the fruites haue their increase and continuance in the midst of Winter. The Island is wonderfully storied with goates and wilde hennes, and it hath salt also without labour, save onely that the people gather it into heapes, which continually in great quantitie is increased vpon the sands by the flowing of the sea, and the receding heate of the sunne heating the same, so that of the increase thereof they keepe a continuall traffique with their neighbours.

The description of the tree that beareth Cocos.

Amongst other things we found here a kind of fruit called Cocos, which because it is not commonly known with vs in England, I thought good to make some description of it.

The tree beareth no leaues nor branches, but at the very top the fruit groweth in clusters, hard at the top of the stemme of the tree, as big every leuerall fruit as a mans head: but hauing taken off the vttermost bark, which you shall find to be very full of strings or sinowes, as I may terme them, you shall come to a hard shell which may hold of quantitie in liques apine commonly, of some a quart, and some lesse: within that shell of the thickness of halfe an inch good, you shall haue a kind of hard substance and very white, no lesse good and sweete then almonds: within that againe a certaine cleere liques, which being drunke, you shall not onely find it very delicate and sweete, but most comfortable and cordiall.

31 goates.

After we had satisfied our selues with some of these fruites, wee marched further into the Island, and sawe great store of Cabaritas alite, which were so chased by the inhabitants, that we could doe no good towards our pposition, but they had taken out as it were to stop our mouths withall certayne old wyed Cabaritas, which being but ill, and small and few, wee made no account of.

The Isle of S. Iago.

Being returned to our ships, our Generall departed hence the 21. of this moneth, and sayled by the Island of S. Iago, but fare through from the danger of the inhabitants, who tooke and discharged at vs three pieces, but they all fell short of vs and did vs no harme. The Island is large and large, and as it seemeth rich and fruitfull, and inhabited by the Portugals, but the mountaines and high places of the Island are sayd to be possessed by the Wooes, who hauing bene slaued to the Portugals, to ease themselves, made escape to the desert places of the Island, where they abide with great strength.

A prize, and a Portugall prize taken.

Being before this Island, we espied two ships vnder sayle, to the one of which we gaue chase, and in the end boorded her with a ship boate without resistance, which we found to be a good prize, and pelded into vs good store of wine, which prize our Generall committed to the custodie of Sp. Doughtie, and receiving the pilot, sent the rest away with his pinnace, giuing them a Buize of wine and some victuals, and their wearing clothes, and so they departed.

The Isle of Fogo.

The same night we came with the Island called by the Portugals, Ila del fogo, that is, the burning Island: in the Mouth whereof is a consuming fire, the matter is sayd to bee of Sulphure, but notwithstanding it is like to bee a commodious Island, because the Portugals haue built, and doe inhabit there.

Upon the Southside thereof lieth a most pleasant and sweete Island, the trees whereof are alwayes greene and faire to looke vpon, in respect whereof they call it Ila del Braua, that is, the braue Island. From the banks thereof into the sea doeth run in many places reasonable streames of fresh waters easie to be come by, but there was no convenient roade for our ships: for such was the depth, that no ground could be had for anchoring, and it is reported, that ground was neuer found in that place, so that the tops of Fogo beare not so high in the ayre, but the rootes of Braua are quenched as low in the sea.

Being departed from these Islands, we went towards the line, where wee were becalmed the space of 3. weekes, but yet subject to diuers great stormes, terrible lightenings and much thunder: but with this miserie we had the commoditie of great store of fish, as Dolphin, Bonitas, and flying fishes, whereof some fell into our shippes, where hence they could not rise againe for want of more cure, for when their wings are drye, they cannot flye.

From the first day of our departure from the Islands of Cape Verde, wee sayled 54. dayes with without light the list of

S. Fran

at 12 by the we learned ceremonie gathered to the calling
ments.

The crew Carter who care in dis
led the Ca cure and su were great welling fur
that they w
some whar
of the corke pposition r

From be and ranne ships sine againe to le Doughtie
many and haue laden derfull to s
want of fee

Our G
people of e lique with call vpon
be very act

The ei were abien
we espied
and to fear
into vs an bare and e we flew to

Here on pposition sh burnt h
cayne of c
of haire an colours, a was an ell
liuer, and men might at length and bee of his gold b
the one.

Hauin
vpon our Generall
Good boy
The n

Drake.

S. Fran. Drake. of the English nation.

without sight of land, and the first land that we fell with was the coast of Brasil, which we sawe the first of Aprill in the height of 33. degrees towards the pole Arctarctike, and being discovered by the inhabitants of the countrey, they made upon the coast great fires for a sacrifice (as we learned) to the devills, about which they use contrivations, making heapes of sands and other ceremonies, that when any ship shall goe about to stay upon their coast, not onely sands may be gathered together in shoales in every place, but also that stormes and tempests may arise, to the casting away of ships and men, whereof (as it is reported) there have bene divers experiments.

33 degrees.

The seventh day in a mightie great storme both of lightning, rayne and thunder, wee lost the Canter which wee called the Christopher: but the eleventh day after, by our Generalls great care in dispersing his ships, we found her againe, and the place where we met our Generall called the Cape of Joie, where every ship took in some water. Here wee found a good temperature and sweete aire, a very faire and pleasant countrey with an exceeding fruitfull soile, where there were great store of large and mightie Deere, but we came not to the sight of any people: but travelling further into the countrey, we perceived the footing of people in the clay ground, shewing that they were men of great stature. Being returned to our shippes we waped anchor, and ranne somewhat further and harboured our selves betweene a rocke and the maine, where by meanes of the rocke that brake the force of the sea, we rid very safe, and upon this rocke wee killed for our provision certaine sea wolues, commonly called with vs Seales.

The Cape of Joy.

From hence we went our course to six and thirtie degrees, and entered the great river of Plate, and ranne into 54. and 53. fadomes and a halfe of fresh water, where we filled our water by the ships side: but our Generall finding here no good harbourough as he thought her should, bare out againe to sea the 27. of Aprill, and in bearing out we lost sight of our Flie boate wherein matter Doughtie was, but wee lay sailing along, found a fayre and reasonable good Baie wherein there were many and the same profitable Islands, one whereof had so many Seales as would at the lead have laden all our ships, and the rest of the Islands are as it were laden with foules which is wonderful to see, and they of divers sortes. It is a place very plentifull of victuals, and hath in it no want of fresh water.

These entrance into the river of Plate.

Abundance of Seales.

Our Generall after certaine dayes of his abode in this place, being on shoze in an Island, the people of the countrey thewed themselves unto him, leaping and dauncing, and entered into treatise with him, but they would not receive any thing at any mans hands, but the same must bee cast upon the ground. They are of cleane, comely, and strong bodies, swift on foot, and seeme to be very active.

The eighteenth day of May our Generall thought it needfull to have a care of such shippes as were absent, and therefore intending to seeke the Flie boate wherein matter Doughtie was, we espied her againe the next day: and whereas certaine of our ships were sent to discover the coast and to search an harbour, the Marygold and the Canter being employed in that buisnes, came unto vs and gave vs understanding of a safe harbour that they had found, where with all our ships bare and entered it, where we watered and made new provision of victuals, as by seales, whereof we flew to the number of 2.01.300. in the space of an hower.

MAP.

Here our Generall in the Admirall did close aboard the Flie boate, and tooke out of her all the provision of victuals and what els was in her, and halling her to the land, set fire to her, and so burnt her to saue the iron worke, which being a doing, there came downe of the countrey certaine of the people naked, sawing onely about their waite the skinn of some beast with the furre of white on, and something also wreathed on their heads: their faces were painted with divers colours, and some of them had on their heads the similitude of hognes, every man his bowe which was an ell in length, and a couple of arrowes. They were very agill people and quicke to deliver, and seemed not to be ignorant in the feates of warres, as by their order of ranging a few men might be appeare. These people would not of a long time receive any thing at our hands, yet at length our Generall being a shoze and they dauncing after their accustomed manner about him, and hee once turning his backe towards them, one leapt suddenly to him, andooke his cap with his gold band off his head, and ran a little distance from him and shewed it with his fellow, the cap in the one, and the band to the other.

The Flie boat cast off and burnt.

The people of the countrey.

Having dispatched all our buisnes in this place, wee departed and set sayle, and immediately upon our leaving forth we lost our Canter which was absent thye or foure dayes, but when our Generall had her againe, he tooke out the necessaries, and so gaue her over nere to the Cape of Good hope.

Cape Good hope.

The next day after being the twentieth of June, we harboured our selves againe in a very good

The voiaiges and discoueries Sir Fran. Drake.

S. Fran

The hundred lea which begett Eclipse of the Sunned Octen sold.

From the South among the farre from Canoas with vs for the which was as also at the of Capricorn the sunne

The 8 then we found to be Thus b to lie as the to the 1200 hitherto will set downe a We can we call and where we for their ow the being bringing them other gaine to the for Span them, and

Our G coast of Ch thinking t was a gre gaue him which is a

When aros and med vs to as we we stroke on One of th himselfe: desperate morning

They Dur G sing come ner. chall his mmi wee fi wood, all

Post. 2. Jus. 1111.

good harborough, called by Magellan Port S. Julian, where wee found a gibber standing vpon the maine, which we supposed to be the place where Magellan did execution vpon some of his disobedient and rebellious company.

The two and twentieth day our Generall went a shoze to the maine, and in his company, John Thomas and Robert Winterhie, Oliuer the master gunner, John Brewer, Thomas Hood, and Thomas Drake, and entering on land, they presently met with two or thre of the countrey people, and Robert Winterhie hauing in his hands a bow and arrowes, went about to make a shoze of pleasure, and in his draughte his bow string brake, which the rude Sauages taking as a token of warre, began to bend the force of their bowes against our company, and dioued them to their last very narrowly.

In this port our Generall began to enquire diligently of the actions of M. Thomas Doughtie, and found them not to be such as he looked for, but tending rather to concretion of murdrine, or some other disorder, whereby (withour reuells) the successe of the voyage might greatly haue bene hazarded: whereupon the companie was called together and made acquainted with the particulars of the cause, which were found partly by master Doughties owne confession, and partly by the euidence of the fact to be true: which when our Generall saw, although his priuate affection to M. Doughtie (as hee then in the presence of vs all secretly protested) was great, yet the care hee had of the state of the voyage, of the expectation of her maiestie, and of the honour of his countrey did more touch him, (as in deed it ought) then the priuate respect of one man, so that the cause being thoroowly heard, and all things done in good order as nere as might be to the course of our labours in England, it was concluded that M. Doughtie should receiue punishment according to the qualitie of the offence: and hee seeing to remede but patience for himselfe, desired before his death to receiue the communion, which hee did at the hands of M. Fletcher our Minister, and our Generall himselfe accompanied him in that holy action: which being done, and the place of execution made ready, he hauing embraced our Generall and taken his leaue of all the companie, with prayer for the Queens maiestie and our reialme, in quiet for laied his head to the blocke, where he ended his life. This being done, our Generall made diuers speeches to the whole company perswading vs to vnitie, obedience, loue, and regard of our voyage, and for the better confirmation thereof, willed euery man the next Sunday following to prepare himselfe to receiue the communion as Christian brethren and friends ought to do, which was done in very reuerent sort, and so with good contentment euery man went about his busines.

M. Thomas Doughtie executed.

August.

The freight of Magellan.

The 17. day of August we departed the port of S. Julian, & the 20. day we fell with the freight of freat of Magellan going into the South sea, at the Cape of headland whereof, we found the body of a dead man, whose flesh was cleane consumed.

The 21. day we entered the freights which we found to haue many turnings, and as it were shuttings vp, as if there were no passage at all, by meanes whereof we had the wind often against vs, so that some of the flecte recovering a Cape or point of land, others should be forced to turne backe agayne, and to come to an anker where they could.

In this freight there be many faire harbor, with store of fresh water, but yet they lacke their best commodities for the water is there of such deperth, that no man shall find ground to anker in, excepte it be in some narrow riuier or coryer, or between some rocks, so that if any extreme blast or contrary winds doe come (whereunto the place is much subject) it canerly with it no small danger.

The land on both sides is very huge and mountainous, the lower mountains whereof although they be monstrous and wonderfull to looke vpon for their height, yet there are others which in height exceed them in a strange manner reaching themselves aboue their fellowes so high, that betwene them did appeare three regions of cloudes.

These mountains are covered with snow: at both the Southerly and Easterly partes of the freight there are Islands, among which the sea hath his indynghte into the freights, euen as it hath in the maine entrance of the freat.

This freight is extreme colde, with frost and snow continually, the trees seeme to sleepe with the burden of the weather, and yet are greene continually, and many good and sweete herbes doe very fruitfully grow and increase vnder them.

The breadth of the freight is in some place a league, in some other places 2 leagues, and thre leagues, and in some other 4. leagues, but the narrowest place hath a league ouer.

The 24. of August we arrived at an Island in the freights, where we found great store of foule which could not flye, of the bignesse of geese, whereof we killed in lesse then one day 3000. and victualled our seluers thoroowly therewith.

The abundance of foule in the freight.

September.

The 6. day of September we entered the South sea at the Cape of head shoze.

The

The twentieth day wee were driven by a great storme from entering into the South sea two hundred leagues and odd in longitude, and one degree to the Southward of the straight, in which height and so many leagues to the Westward, the fifteenth day of September fell out the Eclipse of the Moone: at the houre of five of the clocke at night, but neither did the Eclipse all consist of the Moone impair our state, nor her clearing againe amend us a whit, but the accustomed Eclipse of the seas continued in his force, wee being darkened more then the Moone seuen fold.

From the Bate (which we called the Bate of severing of friends) wee were driven backe to the Southward of the straight in 55. degrees and a cerce: in which height wee came to an anchor among the Islands, having there fresh and very good water, with herbes of singular vertue. Not farre from hence we entered another Bate, where we found people both men and women in their Canoes naked, and ranging from one Island to another to seeke their meate, who entered traffike with us for such things as they had.

Wee returning hence Northward againe, found the 3. of October three Islands, in one of which was such plenty of birdes as is scant credible in report. Wee had by proofs in this place, as also at the furthestmost Islands, that the sunne being at the least 8. degrees from the Tropike of Capricorne, the night was but two howers long, and scant that, so that we perceived that when the sunne should be in the Tropike, there would be no night at all.

The 8. day of October we lost sight of one of our Consoys wherein M. Winter was, who then we supposed was put by a storme into the straight againe, which at our returne home was found to be true, and he not perished as some of our company feared.

Thus being come into the height of the straight againe, we ran, supposing the coast of Peru to lie as the general Maps have described it, namely Northwest, which we found to lie and trend to the North east and Eastward, whereby it appeareth that this part of Peru hath not bene truly hitherto discovered, or at the least not truly reported for the space of 12. degrees at the least, being set downe either of purpose to deceive, or of ignorant conjecture.

We continuing our course, fell the 29. of November, with an Island called la Moucha, where we cast anchor, and our Generall hoysing out our boate, went with ten of our company to shore, where wee found people, whom the cruell and extreme dealings of the Spaniards have forced for their owne safetie and libertie to flee from the maine, and to forsake themselves in this Island. Wee being on land, the people came downe to us to the water side with fiew of great cuttles, bringing to us potatoes, rootes, and two very fat sheepe, which our Generall received and gave them other things for them, and had promise to have water there: but the next day repassing againe to the boze, and sending two men a land with barrels to fill water, the people taking them for Spaniards (to whom they vsed to be in no favour if they take them) laid violent handes on them, and as we thinke slew them.

Our Generall seeing this, staid here no longer, but wayed anchor, and set sayle towards the coast of Chile, and drawing towards it we met neere to the shore, an Indian in a Canoe, who thinking vs to have bene Spaniards, came to vs and told vs, that at a place called S. Iago, there was a great Spanish ship laden from the kingdome of Peru, for which good newes our Generall gaue him diuers trifles, whereof he was glad, and went along with vs and brought vs to the place which is called the port of Valparizo.

When we came thither, we found in deed the ship riding at anchor, having in her eight Spaniards and three Negroes, who thinking vs to have bene Spaniards and their friends, welcomed us with a humme, and made ready a Buttrick of wine of Chile to drinke to vs: but as soon as we were entered, one of our company called Thomas Moore began to lay about him, and stroke one of the Spaniards, and said unto him, Abaxo Perro, that is in English, we downe dog. One of these Spaniards seeing persons of that qualitie in those seas, all corrected, and blessed himselfe but to be hoze, we showed them under hatches all save one Spaniard, who suddenly and desperately lepe over boord into the sea, and swamme a hoze to the towne of S. Iago, to give them warning of our arrivall.

They of the towne being not above 9. households, presently fled a way and abandoned the towne. Our Generall manned his boate, and the Spanish ships boate, and went to the Towne, and being come to it, we rifled it, and came to a small chappell which we entered, and found therein a silver chalice, two cruets, and one altar cloth, the spoyle whereof our Generall gaue to M. Fletcher his minister.

We found also in this towne a warehouse stoyed with wine of Chile, & many hoodes of Cedar wood, all which wine we brought a way with vs, and certaine of the hoodes to burne for firewood.

The voiaiges and discoueries Sir Fran. Drake.

and so being come aboard, we departed the haven, having first set all the Spaniards on land, saving one John Grego a Greeke boye, whom our General carried with him for his Pilot to bring him into the haven of Lima.

John Grego
a Pilot taken

When we were at sea, our Generall rifled the ship, and found in her good store of wine of Chile, and 25000. peeces of very pure and fine gold of Baldivia, amounting in value to 37000. duckets of Spanish money and above. So going on our course, we arrived next at a place called Coquimbo, where our Generall sent 14. of his men on land to fetch water: but they were chisped by the Spaniards who came with 300. horsemen and 200. footemen, and slew one of our men with a piece, the rest came aboard in safetie, and the Spaniards departed: wee went on shore againe, and buried our man, and the Spaniards came downe againe with a flag of truce, but we set sayle and would not trust them.

Coquimbo.

Taurapaza.

From hence we went to a certaine port called Taurapaza, where being landed, wee found by the sea side a Spaniard lying a sleepe, and had lying by him 13. barres of silver, which weighed 4000. duckets Spanish, weooke the silver and left the man.

Arica.

Here hence we sailed to a place called Arica, and being entered the port, we found there three small barkes which we rifled, and found in one of them 57. wedges of silver, each of them weighing about 20. pound weight, and euery of these wedges were of the fashion and bignesse of a byckbat. In all these 3. barkes we found not one person for they mistrusting us strangers, were all gone a land to the Towne, which consisteth of about threentie houses, which wee would haue ransacked if our company had bene better and more in number, but our Generall contented with the spoile of the ships, left the Towne and put off againe to sea and set sayle for Lima, and by the way met with a small barke, which he booyed, and found in her good store of linnen cloth, whereof taking some quantitie, he let her goe.

February.
Lima.

To Lima we came the 13. day of February, and being entered the haven, we found there about threelue sayle of ships lying fast moored at an anchor, hauing all their sayles carried on shore, for the masters and merchants were here most secure, hauing neuer bene assaulted by enemies, and at this time feared the approach of none such as wee were. Our Generall rifled these shippes, and found in one of them a chest full of royals of plate, and good store of silkes & linnen cloth, andooke the chest into his owne ship, and good store of the silkes and linnen. In which ship he had newes of another ship called the Cacafuego which was gone towards Paica, and that the same ship was laden with treasure, whereupon we staid no longer here, but cutting all the cables of the ships in the haven we let them drue whither they would, either to sea or to the shore, and with all speed we followed the Cacafuego toward Paica, thinking there to haue found her, but before wee arrived there she was gone from thence toward Panama, whom our Generall still pursued, and by the way met with a barke laden with ropes and cackle for ships, which he booyed and searched, and found in her 80. li. weight of gold, and a crucifixe of gold with goodly great Emperours therein which he tooke, and some of the voyage also for his owne ship.

The rich ship taken the Cacafuego taken.

From hence we departed still following the Cacafuego, and our Generall promised our company that whosoeuer could first descrite her, should haue his chaine of gold for his good newes. It fortuned that John Drake going by into the top, descrite her about three of the clocke, and about five of the clocke we came to her and booyed her, and stoote at her three peeces of ordinaunce, and strake downe her Masten, and being entered, we found in her great riches, as iewels and precious stones, thirtene chests full of royals of plate, foure score pound weight of gold, and five and twentie tunne of silver. The place where we tooke this prize, was called Cape Francisco, about 170. leagues from Panama.

Cape Francisco.

The Pilots name of this ship was Don Francisco, and amongst other place that our Generall found in this ship, he found two very fatte guilt boales of silver, which were the Pilots: to whom our Generall says: Senior Pilot, you haue here two silver cups, but I must needs haue one of them, which the Pilot because he could not otherwise chuse, yelued vnto and gaue the other to the steward of our Generals ship.

When this Pilot departed from vs, his boy said thus vnto our Generall, Captaine, our ship shall bee called no more the Cacafuego, but the Cacaplata, and your shippe shall bee called the Cacafuego, which pretty speech of the Pilots boy ministered matter of laughter to vs, both then and long after.

When our Generall had done what hee would with this Cacafuego, hee cast her off, and wee went on our course still towards the West, and not long after met with a ship laden with linnen cloth and fine China dishes of white earth, and great store of China silkes, of all which things wee tooke as we listed.

China silks.

The

S. Fran

The of our Gen
lot of the

This Spaniards
to wine, an with their which I to witte
water, they found a p

And by spring eis, which

At this he took set them ved, and b shed our

And v in her ched the place, an niards an sufficien counten
to count

The Spaniards
being let
of the me
as he fou course to Islands Bona Sp

Upon
fesse wh counte, u longitud
y still, all

The
that sur
the furt
time to ren ouer grees to with a g

In cl waters Why rail (oo
ly bedd
good, an were fe

The circle, c by reat
The

The owner himselfe of this shippe was in her, who was a Spanish Gentleman, from whom our Generall tooke a Fawcon of golde, with a great emraude in the breast thereof, and the Pilot of the shippe he tooke also with him, and so call the shippe off.

This Pilot brought vs to the haven of Guatulca the towne wherof as he told vs, had but 17 Spaniards in it. As soone as we were entered this haven wee landed, and went presently to the towne, and to the Towne house, where we found a Judge sitting in iudgement, he being assidee with three other officers, upon three Tre grots that had conspired the burning of the Towne: both which Judges, and prisoners we took, and brought them a shipboord, and caused the rible Judge to write his letter to the Towne, to command all the Townsmen to avoid, that we might safely water there. Which being done, and they departed, we ransaked the Towne, and in one house we found a pot of the quantitie of a bushell, full of copals of place, which we brought to our shippe.

And here one Thomas Moone one of our companie, tooke a Spanish Gentleman as he was flying out of the towne, and searching him, he found a chaine of golde about him, and other Jewels, which he tooke, and so let him goe.

At this place our Generall among other Spaniards, set a boare his Portugall Pilot, which he tooke at the Islands of Cape Verde, out of a shippe of St. Marie port of Portugall, and having set them a boare, we departed hence, and sailed to the Island of Canon, where our Generall landed, and brought to shore his amze ship, and discharged her, mended, and graued her, and furnished our shippe with water and wood sufficiently.

And while we were here, we espied a shippe, and set saile after her, and tooke her, and founde in her two Pilots, and a Spanish Gouvernour, going for the Islands of the Philipinas: we searched the shippe, andooke some of her marchandizes, and so let her goe. Our Generall at this place, and time, thinking himselfe both in respect of his private injuries received from the Spaniards, as also of their contemptes and indignities offered to our countrey and Prince in general, sufficiently satisfied, and reuenged; and supposing that her Malicie at his returne would not contented with this service, purposed to continue no longer upon the Spanish coasts, but began to consider and to consult of the best way for his Countrey.

He thought it not good to returne by the Streights, for two speciall causes: the one, least the Spaniards should there waite, and stand for him in great number and strength, whose hands being left but one shippe, could not possibly escape. The other cause was the dangerous situation of the mouth of the Streights in the south side, where continuall stormes raining and blustering, as he found by experience, besides the shoales, and sands upon the coast, he thought it not a good courie to adventure that way: he refused therefore, to goe forward to the Islands of the Moluccaes, and there hence to saile the course of the Portugals by the Cape of Bona Speranza.

Upon this resolution, he began to thinke of his best way to the Moluccaes, and finding himselfe where he now was becalmed, he sawe, that of necessitie he must be forced to take a Spanish countreymen to saile somewhat Northerly to get a winde. He therefore set saile, and sailed in latitude 600. leagues at the least for a good winde, and thus much we sailed from the 16. of the pill, till the 3. of June.

The 5. day of June, being in 42. degrees towards the pole Arctike, we found the aire so colde, that our men being grievously pinched with the same, complained of the extremite thereof, and the further we went, the more the colde increased upon vs. Whereupon we thought it best for that time to seeke the land, and did so, finding it not mountainous, but some plaine land, and rather low over with lowe, so that we dye we backe againe without landing, till we came within 58. degrees towards the line. In which height it pleased God to send vs into a faire and good Bay, with a good winde to enter the same.

In this Baye we anchored, and the people of the Countrey, having their houses close by the waters side, showed themselves unto vs, and shew a present to our Generall.

When they came unto vs, they greatly wondered at the things that we brought, but our Generall (according to his naturall and accustomed humanitie) courteously increased them, and liberally bestowed on them necessarie things to cover their nakednes, whereupon they supposed vs to be gods, and would not be persuaded to the contrary: the presents which they sent our Generall, were feathers, and eals of networke.

Their houses are digged round about with earth, and have from the extremest brimmes of the circle, clifts of wood set upon them, joining close together at the toppe like a spere temple, which by reason of that closenes are very warme.

Their beds is the ground with rushes strewed on it, and lying about the house, have the fire in the

The Portugall Pilot for our use. The Island of Cockles.

It ship with a government for the Islands of Philipinas.

It purposed to returne by the Streights of Malacca.

Time. St. Francis sailed on the backe of the line to 42. deg. and 58. degrees.

It being the nature of the wood and the way of the house.

the modest. The men goe naked, the women rake busshes, and kinde them after the manner of hemp, and thereof make their loose garments, which being knit about their middles, hang downe about their hippes, hauing also about their shoulders a skinne of Deere, with the haire vpon it. These women are very obedient and seruicable to their husbonds.

After they were departed from vs, they came and visited vs the second time, and brought with them feathers and bags of Tabacco for presents: And when they came to the top of the hill (as the booke we had written we had written) they staid themselves: where one appointed for speaker, wearied himselfe with making a long oration, which done, they left their bowes vpon the hill, and came downe with their presents.

In the meane time, the women remaining on the hill, comented themselves lamentably, tearing their flesh from their cheekes, whereby we perceiued that they were about a sacrifice. In the meane time, our Generall, with his companie, went to prayer, and to reading of the Scriptures, at which exercise they were attentive, & seemed greatly to be affected with it: but when they were come vnto vs, they cryed againe vnto vs those things which before we bestowd vpon them.

The newes of our being there, being spread through the Countrey, the people that inhabited round about came downe, and amongst them the King himselfe, a man of a goodly Nature, & comely personage, with many other tall, and warlike men: before whose coming were sent two Ambassadors to our Generall, to signifie that their King was comming, in doing of which message, their speech was continued about halfe an houre. This ended, they by signes requested our Generall to send some thing by their hand to their King, as a token that his comming might be in peace: wherein our Generall hauing satisfied them, they returned with glad tidings to their King, who marched to vs with a princely maiestie, the people crying continually after their manner, and as they drew neere vnto vs, so did they strive to behaue themselves in their actions with comelines.

In the face front was a man of a goodly personage, who bare the scepter, or more before the King, whereupon hanged two crownes, a leese and a bigger, with three chaines of a maruelous length: the crownes were made of knit woole wrought artificially with feathers of diuers colours: the chaines were made of a brittle substance, and seue by the persons among themselves are admitted to wear them: and of that number also the persons are limited, as some ten, some 12, &c. Next vnto him which bare the scepter, was the King himselfe, with his Garde about his person, clad with Coate of Armes, & other things: after them followed the naked children of the people, every one hauing his face painted, some with white, some with blacke, and other colours, & hauing in their handes one thing or another for a present, not so much as their children, but they also brought their presents.

In the meane time, our Generall gathered his men together, and marched with his fenced place, making against their approaching, a very warlike shew: They being trooped together in their order, and a general salutation being made, there was presently a general silence. Then he that bare the scepter before the King, being informed by another, whome they assigned to that office, with a manly and loud voice, proclaimed that which the other spake to him in secret, continuing halfe an houre: which ended, and a general Amen as it were giuen, the King with the whole number of men, and women (the children excepted) came downe without any weapon, who descending to the foot of the hill, set themselves in order.

In comming to ward our bulwarke and tents, the scepter bearer began a song, observing his friends in a dance, and that with a stately countenance, whom the King with his Garde, and every degree of persons following, did in like manner sing and dance, leaving onely the women which danced, & kept silence. The Generall permitted them to dance within our bulwarke, where they continued their song and dance a reasonable time. When they had satisfied themselves, they made signes to our Generall to sit downe, at which the King and others of them made several orations, or rather supplications, that he would take their promise of Kingdome into his hand, and become their King, making signes that they would resigne vnto him their right and title of the whole land, and become his subiectes. In which, as he was persuading vs the better, the King and the rest, with one consent, and with great reverence, together singing a song, did set the crowne vpon his head, fastened his necke with all their chaines, and offered vnto him many other things, honouring him by the name of Hoh, adding thereto as it were, a signe of triumph: which thing our Generall though he not intend to receiue, because he knewe not what honour and profit it might be to our Countrey. Wherefore in the name, and to the vse of her Maiestie he took the scepter, crowne, and signet of the said Countrey into his hand, wishing that the riches & treasure thereof might be so conveniently transported to the hurting of our home, as it should be in his time.

The common voice of people leaving the King, and his Garde with our Generall, fastened themselves together with their sacrifices among our people, taking a diligent viewe of every person person: and such as offered their sacrifices to their faces with their wishing this, and the whome onely they offered them at our hands, in state of their griefes, sacrifices vnto vs, but could not be long absence, which departure increased vs, that betwixt we nullified.

Our necessarie bulwarke to their was most large, and fat.

We found the tobacco as be the Barre of a Rat being gathered her meate, great acrompy of the

Our Generall called of the white banks some assistance with on

There is no part of silver.

At our departure justices right and title ingrauen her Spanish the prouince and people in a peere of five pence the name of our Generall

It seemeth that the did ever discover the

After we had set forth following, which ward of the line, from 4. in some 6. and in 11 noas were hollow without and bearing of one soxe, preiding for a haure, and on more or less, according

This people haue love vpon their cheekes hands are an yche of an herbe with a kin purpose.

We leaving this uers others, some with

We continued on the Portugals, the

The 14. of Nouer receed our course to King of Ternate, die all haue, and came at sunne in with Ternate comming, and would that might be

S. Fran. Drake. of the English nation.

person: and such as pleased their fancie, (which were the pongest) they inclosing them about of fred their sacrifices unto them with lamentable weeping, scratching, and tearing the flesh from their faces with their nails, whereof issued abundance of blood. But wee bled signes to them of dissliking this, and staled their hands from soyce, and directed them bywards to the living God, whome onely they ought to worshippe. They shewed unto vs their wounds, and craued helpe of them at our hands, whereupon wee gaue them lotions, plaisters, and ointments agreeing to the state of their griefes, beseeching God to cure their diseases. Euery thirde day they brought their sacrifices unto vs, vncill they vnderstoode our meaning, that we had no pleasure in them: yet they could not be long absent from vs, but daily frequented our companie to the houre of our departure, which departure seemed so grieuous unto them, that their ioy was turned into sorrow, they increated vs, that being absent we would remember them, and by such provided a sacrifice, which we mistiked.

Our necessarie buslines being ended, our Generall with his companie traualled vp into the <sup>Great heades</sup> Countrey to their villages, where wee found heardes of Deere by 1000. in a companie, being <sup>of Deere.</sup> most large, and fat of bodie,

We found the whole Countrey to be a warren of a strange kinde of Connies, their bodie is <sup>Abundance of</sup> bignes as be the Barbarie Connies, their heads as the heads of ours, the feete of a Munt, and the <sup>strange conies</sup> taile of a Rat being of great length: vnder her chymie on either side a bagge, into the which she gathereth her meate, when she hath filled her bellie abroad. The people eate their bodie, and make great account of their skinnes, for their Kings coate was made of them.

Our Generall called this Countrey, Noua Albion, and that for two causes: the one in respect <sup>Noua Albion.</sup> of the white bankes and cliffes, which lie to wards the sea: and the other, because it might haue some affinitye with our Countrey in name, which sometime was so called,

There is no part of earth here to be taken vp, wherein there is not a reasonable quantitie of gold <sup>Gold and siluer in the earth of Noua Albion.</sup>
or siluer.

At our departure hence our General set by a monument of our being there, as also of her <sup>Spanishes</sup> righte and title to the same, namely a plate, nailed vpon a faire great poste, whereupon was ingrauen her <sup>Spanishes</sup> name, the day and yeere of our arriuall there, with the free giuing vp of the prouince and people into her <sup>Spanishes</sup> hands, together with her highnes picture and armes, in a peece of fyre pence of currant English money vnder the plate, where vnder was also written the name of our Generall.

It seemeth that the Spaniards hitherto had neuer bene in this part of the Countrey, neither did euer discover the lande by many degrees, to the South wards of this place.

After we had see fallie from hence, we continued without sight of land till the 13. day of Octo- <sup>October.</sup> ber following, which day in the morning we fell with certaine Islands 8. degrees to the North-  <sup>certaine Islands in 8. degrees.</sup>
ward of the line, from which Islands came a great number of Canoas, hauing in some of them 4. in some 6. and in some also 14. men, bringing with them coquos, and other fruites. Their Canoas were hollowe within, and cut with great arte, and cunning, being very smooth within and with out, and bearing a glasse as if it were a houe daintly burnished, hauing a prow, and a sterne of one soyce, peelding in ward circle wise, being of a great heigth, and full of certaine white shels for a byarterie, and on each side of them lie out two peeces of timber about a yard and a halfe long, more or lesse, according to the smalnes, or bignes of the boate.

This people haue the nether part of their eares cut into a round circle, hanging botone very lowe vpon their cheekes, whereon they hang things of a reasonable weight. The nalles of their hands are an ynche long, their teeth are as blacke as pitch, and they renewe them often, by eating of an herbe with a kinde of powder, which they alwaies carrie about them in a case for the same purpose.

After leaving this Island the night after we fell with it, the 18. of October, we light vpon di- <sup>Islands.</sup> uers others, some whereof made a great shew of Inhabitants.

We continued our course by the Islands of Tagulada, Zelon, and Zewarra, being subiect to the Boytingals, the first whereof hath growning in it great stoe of Sinnamon.

The 14. of Nouember we fell with the Islands of Molucca, which day at night (hou. g. di- <sup>Nouember.</sup> receded our course to runne with Tydore) in coasting along the Island of Mury, belonging to the King of Ternate, his Deputie or Viceking seeing vs at sea, came with his Canoa to vs without all force, and came aboard, and after some conference with our Generall, willed him in any wise to runne in with Ternate, and not with Tydore, assuring him that the King would be glad of his comming, and would be ready to doe what he would require, for which purpose he himselfe <sup>The Isle of Ternate.</sup> would that night be with the King, and tell him the newes, with whome if he once dealt, he should finde

The voiaiges and discoueries Sir Fran. Drake.

Ande that as he was a King, so his word should stand: adding further, that if he went to Tydore before he came to Ternate, the King would haue nothing to doe with vs, because he held the Roytingall as his enemy: whereupon our Generall resolued to runne with Ternate, where the next morning early we came to anker, at which time our Generall sent a messenger to the king, with a velvet cloke for a present, and token of his comming to be in peace, and that he required nothing but traffike, and exchange of merchandize, whereof he had good store in such things as he wanted.

In the meane time, the Uiceking had bene with the King according to his promise, signifying vnto him what good things he might receiue from vs by traffike: whereby the King was moued with great liking towards vs, and sent to our Generall with speciall message, that he should haue what things he needed, and would require, with peace, and friendship, and moreover that he would yeelde him life, and the right of his Island to be at the pleasure and commandement of so famous a Prince as we serued. In taken whereof he sent to our Generall a signet, and within short time after came in his owne person, with boates, and Canoas to our ship, to bring her into a better and safer roade then he was in at that present.

In the meane time, our Generalls messenger being come to the Court, was met by certaine noble personages with great solemnitie, and brought to the King, at whose handes he was most friendly and graciously receiued.

The King purposing to come to our Shippe, sent before 4. great and large Canoas, in euery one whereof were certaine of his greatest states that were about him, attired in white lawne of cloth of Callicut, haating ouer their heads from the one ende of the Canoa to the other, a covering of chinie perfumed mats, borne by with a frame made of reedes so: the same vse, vnder which euery one did sit in his order according to his dignitie, to keepe him from the heate of the Sunne, diuers of whom being of good age, and grauitie, did make an ancient and fatherly shew. There were also diuers yong and comely men attired a white, as were the others: the rest were souldiers, which stood in comely order round abe at on both sides, without whome face the rowers in certayne galleries, which being chye on 7. side all along the Canoas, did lie off from the side thereof, at 4. paces, one being orderly builded lower then another, in euery of which galleries, were the number of 4. scoze rowers.

These Canoas were furnished with warlike munition, euery man fo: the most part hauing his shoode, and target, with his dagger, beside other weapons, as lances, caluers, darts, bowes, and arrowes: also euery Canoa had a small cast bale mounted at the least one full yerde vpon a stocke set vpright.

Thus comming neere our Shippe, in order they rowed about vs, one after another, and passing by, did their homage with great solemnitie, the great personages beginning with great grauitie & fatherly countenances, signifying that the King had sent them to conduct our ship into a better roade.

Soone after, the King himselfe repaired, accompanied with 6. graue and ancient persons, who did their obeisance with maruelous humilitie. The King was a man of tall stature, and seemed to be much delighted with the sound of our musicke, to whom as also to his nobilitie, our Generall gaue presence, where with they were passing well contented.

At length the King craved leave of our Generall to depart, promising the next day to come aboard, and in the meane time to send vs such victuals, as were necessarie for our provision: so that the same night we receiued of them meale, which they call Sago, made of the tops of certaine trees, taasting in the mouth like soyze curds, but meltech like sugar, whereof they yeue certaine cakes, which may be kept the space of ten yeeres, and yet then good to be eaten. Wee had of them store of rice, benne, imperfect and liquid sugar, sugar canes, and a fruit which they call Figo, with store of cloves.

The King hauing promised to come aboard, brake his promise, but sent his brother to make his excuse, and to intreate our Generall to come on shore, offering himselfe payntie aboard for his safe returne. Whereunto our Generall consented not, vpon mislike conceaude of the breach of his promise, the whole companie also verely refusing it. But to satisfie him, our Generall sent certaine of his Gentlemen to the Court, to accompanie the Kings brother, reseruing the Uiceking for their safe returne. They were receiued of another brother of the kings, and other states, and were conducted with great honour to the Castle. The place that they were brought vnto, was a large and faire house, where were at the least 1000. persons assembled.

The King being yet absent, there sat in their places 60. graue personages, all which were said to be of the kings Counsell. There were besides 4. graue persons, apparellled all in red, downe to the ground, and attired on their heads like the Turkes, and these were said to be Romanes, and Ligiers there to keepe continual traffike with the people of Ternate. There were also two Turkes

Ligiers

The king of Ternate of old hath beene and his sonnes borne to the service of the Queen of England.

The great and strange Canoes of the King of Ternate.

The king of Ternate came to visite Sir Fran. Drake.

Shops a kind of meale.

It castle in Ternate.

Romanes and Turkes Ligiers in Ternate.

S. Fra

Ligiers to ouer with a called Mon after the m the ground were a pain hooped rim were grea his chaire ring the at sayppes, and moou were licen

This 3. Ilanos be Poones, v

After ch and all ne and how fa longer, Ju Southwa les, 26. val and witho thome in selues an our commu candle.

Crayfishes for 4. bung experience

When haing at need to the continue of againe, an which lie of our ship raune sud in the after rail as he eie and p fully, boe that in the Wee lig meale and changing gate vpon which we

The 8. meane th ly in body we had th lectue our their head on their a of waste, c to Tydore to the Pope

the next king, with a red nothing
he wanted,
figuring
ng was mo
he should ower that he ement of fo
and within ng her into a

by certaine
he was most in euery one stone of cloth

a covering of which euery unne, diuers
There were
e soldiers,
uers in cer
de thereof, 2 ies, were the

et hauing his s, bowes, and upon a stocke

and passing at grauitie
n better road.
persons, who nd seemed to our Generall

ap to come a dition: so that s of certaine
ake certaine
e had of them
yp call Figo,

ther to make adood for his head of his sent certaine Creeking for es, and were 1, was a large

ich were said
in red, do wne omanes, and to two Turks Ligiers

Ligers in this place, and one Italian. The king at last came in garded with 12. launces covered our with a rich canopy, with embossed golde. Our men accompanied with one of their Captaines called Moro, sising to meete him, he graciously did welcome, and intertaine them. He was accited after the manner of the Countrey, but moze sumptuously then the rest. From his waste dovne to the ground, was all cloth of golde, and the same very riche: his legs were bare, but on his feete were a paire of shoes, made of Cordouan skaine. In the attire of his head were finely wreathed hooped rings of golde, and about his necke he had a chaine of perfect golde, the linkes wherof were great, and one folde double. On his fingers hee had sixe very faire iewels, and sitting in his chaire of estate, at his right hand stode a page with a fanne in his hand, wreathing and garbering the aire to the King. The fanne was in length two foote, and in bredth one foote, set with 8. sappires, richly imbrocree, and knit to a staffe 3. foote in length, by the which the Page did hold, and moue it. Our Gentlemen hauing deliuered their message, and receiued order accordingly, were licensed to depart, being safely conducted backe againe by one of the Kings Councell.

The maiestie of the King.

This Island is the chiefest of all the Islands of Molucca, and the King hereof is king of 70.
Islands besides. The king with his people are Spoopes in religion, obseruing certaine newe Spoones, with fasting: during which fasts, they neither eat nor drinke in the day, but in y night.

After that our Gentlemen were returned, and that we had here by the fauour of the king recei-ued all needfull thinges that the place could yeelde vs: our Generall considering the great distance, and how farre he was yett off from his Countrey, thoughte it not best here to linger the time any longer, but waping his ankers, set out of the Island, and sailed to a certaine litle Island to the Southwards of Selebes, where we graued our ships, and continued there in that and other businesses, 26. daies. This Island is thowly growen wth wood of a large and high growth, very straight and without boughes, saue onely in the head of top, whose leaues are not much differing from our broom in England. Amongst these trees night by night, though the whole land, did thew them selues an infinite swarme of fierie wormes flying in the aire, whose bodies being no bigger then our common English flies, make such a shew, and light, as if euery twig of tree had bene a burning candle. In this place breedeth also wonderfull soze of Bats, as bigge as large hermes: of Crabshee also here wanted no plentie, and they of exceeding dignes, one whereof was sufficient for 4. hungrie stomacks at a dinner, being also very good, and restoring meate, whereof we had experience: and they digge them selues holes in the earth like Conies.

This Island
to the South-
wards of Selebes.

Fierie wormes

Bats.
Crabshee.

When we had ended our busines here, we waited, and set saile to runne for the Moluccas: but hauing at that time a bad winde, and being amongst the Islands, with much difficultie we reco-uered to the Northward of the Island of Selebes, where by reason of contrarie windees wee able to continue our course to runne Westwards, we were enforced to alter the same to the Southward again, finding that course also to be very hard and dangerous for vs, by reason of infinite shoales which lie off, and among the Islands: whereof we had too much triall to the hazard and danger of our shippe and liues. For of all other daies vpon the 9. of Januarie, in the yeere 1579. wee raune suddenly vpon a rocke, where we stucke fast from 8. of the clocke at night, till 4. of the clocke in the afternoon the next day, being in deede out of all hope to escape the danger: but our Generall as he had alwaies hitherto shewed himselfe couragious, and of a good confidence in the mercie and protection of God: so now he continued in the same, and left he should seeme to perish wilfully, both he, and we did our best endeavour to saue our selues, which it pleased God so to blese, that in the ende we cleared our selues most happily of the danger.

Januarie in anno 1579.

Their danger
vpon a rocke.

We lighted our shippe vpon the rockes, of 3. tunne of cloues, 8. peeces of ordnance, & certaine meale and beanes: and then the winde (as it were in a moment by the speciall grace of God,) changing from the North wind to the larboard of the shippe, wee boyled our sailes, and the happie gale droue our shippe off the rocke into the sea againe, to the no litle comfort of all our hartes, for which we gave God such praise and thanks, as so great a benefice required.

Cloues.
The helpe of a cunninge in the belluic.

The 8. day of Februarie following, we fell with the fruitful Island of Barateie, hauing in the meane time suffered many dangers by windees and shoals. The people of this Island are comeli-ly in body and stature, and of a ciuill behauiour, iust in dealing, and courteous to strangers, whereof we had the experience sundry waies, they being most glad of our presence, and very readie to re-leue our wants in those thinges which their Countrey doth yeelde. The men goe naked, sauing their heads and ymitities, euery man hauing some thing or other hanging at their eares. Their women are covered from the middle dovne to the soote, wearing a great number of bracelets vpon their armes, for some had 8. vpon each arme, being made some of bone, some of hoine, and some of wastle, the lightest whereof by our estimation wailed two ounces a pece.

Februarie Barateie Is-
land.

With this people linnen cloth is good merchandize, and of good request, wherof they make robs

Instructions giuen by the honourable, the Lordes of the Counsell, to Edward Fenton Eiqwire, for the order to be obserued in the voyage recommended to him for the East Indies and Cathay. April 9. 1582.

I First you shall enter as capitaine Generall, into the charge and gouernement of these Voyages, byz, the Beare Gallion, the Edward Bonauenture, the Barke Francis, and the small Frigate of Dinnest.

2 Item you shall appoint for the furnishing of the vessels in the whole, to the number of 200, able persons, accomping in that number the Gentlemen and their men, the Spinisters, Chirurgians, Factors, &c. which said number is no way to be exceeded, whereof as many as may be, to be sea men, and shall distribute them into euery vessel, as by awise here before your going shall be thought meete: Provided that you shall not receiue vnder your charge of gouernement, any disordered or mutinous person, but that you know ledge had, you shall remoue him before your departure hence, or by what way as soone as you can conveniently auoide him, and receiue better in their places.

3 Item, for the moze and better circumspect execution, and determination in any waightie causes incident in this voyage, we will that you shall take vnto you for assistants, capitaine Pawkins, capitaine Warre, Sir Nicholas Parker, Sir Paddor, Sir Walker, Evans, Randolph, Shato, Gathew, Talboys, with whom you shall consult and conferre in all causes, matters, and actions of importance, not provided for in these instructions touching this seruice now in hand. And in all such matters so handled, argued, and debated, we thinke it convenient that alwayes to be executed, which you shall thinke meetest with the assent also of any 4. of them, the matter hauing bene debated, and so assented vnto, in the presence of your said Assistants. And in case that if such conference and debating the opinions of the aforesaide Assistants be founde in effect any way to differ, then it is thought meete, that all such matters so argued vpon, shall rest to be put in execution in such sort, as you shall thinke most meetest, hauing the assent of any 4. of them as aforesaide. And if any of these Assistants shall die, then the number of the one halfe of the Suruiours to supplye with the General Capitaine for content in all things aforesaid.

4 Of all which your assemblies and consultations, for the matters aforesaid, we thinke it very convenient, that a particular and true note should be kept, for which cause we appoint master Paddor minister, and if he should decease, then the General with halfe the Assistants Suruiours, to name one to keepe a booke of all such matters as shall be brought in consultation, and of all such reasons as shall be propounded by any person, either on the one side, or on the other: what was resolved on, and by whose consent, who dissented therefrom, and for what causes. In which booke he shall in the beginning of the note of euery such assembly, set downe particularly the day, and the place, if it may be, the names of the persons then present, and vpon what occasion the said consultation was appointed or holden, and shall haue to euery acte, the hands of the General, and of all, or so many of the said Assistants as will subscribe: which booke the said master Paddor, or the officer vpon his decease appointed in his place shall keepe secreete, and in good order to be exhibited vnto vs, at your returne home.

5 Item, if there happen any person or persons employed in this seruice, of what calling or condition he or they shall be, should conspire, or attempt priuately or publickly, any treason, mutinie, or other disord, either touching the taking a way of your owne life, or any other of authority vnder you, where by her Majestyes seruice in this voyage might thereby be ouerthrowne, or impinged: we will therefore, that vpon just prooffe made of any such treason, mutinie, or any other disord attempted as aforesaid, the same shall be punished by you, or your Lieutenant, according to the qualitie and enormitie of the facte. Provided alwayes, and it shall not be lawfull neither for you, nor for your Lieutenant to exceede the punishment of any person, by losse of life or limme, vntill the partie shall be iudged to haue deserued it by the rest of your Assistants, as is before expressed, or at the least by foure of them. And that which shall concerne life to be by the verdict of twelue men, of the companie employed in this voyage, to be impanelled for that purpose, with the obseruation of the forme of our Countrey lawes in that behalfe, as neere as you may. Provided, if it shall not appeare, that the forbearing of the execution by death, shall minister cause to increase the facte of the offendour, then it were better to conuince the partie of his facte, by the othes of 12. indifferent persons, and to commit him to hard imprisonment, vntill the returne. And as well of the facte committed by any, as also of the prooffe thereof, and of the opinions of you, and your Assistants, and the manner of the punishment, the Register shall make a particular and true note, in the booke of your consultation, as is before appointed,

29. Carline by an occasion
went not in the boynage.

6 Item, you shall not remouue captain William Dawkins your lieutenant, master captain Luke Ward your Viceadmirall, or captain of the Edward Bonaventure, nor captain Carline from his charge by land, who he will not to refuse any such seruice as shall be appointed to him by the Generall and the counsell, nor any captain of other vessels from their charges, but upon such cause as shall be proved, and by consent of your Assistants, or of 4. of them at the least.

7 Item, by the succellion of the Generall gouernour of this whole boynage, if it should please God to take him away, it is thought meete, that there should be the names of such Gentlemen secretly set downe to succeed in his place one after the other, which are severally written in parchment, included in bals of Waxe, sealed with her Maiesties signet, put into two coffers locked with three severall locks, whereof one key is to be in the custodie of captain Luke Ward, the other of William Dawkins, the third of master Spador the minister, and the same two coffers to be put into two severall shippes, videlicet, the one coffer in the Gallion, in the custodie of the Generall, the other in the Edward Bonaventure in the custodie of the Viceadmirall, the same two coffers by on any such casualtie of the Generalls death by consent of the Assistants which shall overlive, to be opened, and the partie therein named to succeed in the place, who shall thereupon take upon him the charge in the said boynage according to these instructions, in such sort as if they had bene specially directed unto him, and the rest of the companie so to take and repute him in every respect, as they will answer to the contrarie. But if it shall so fall out, (as we hope it will) that there shall be no such need, but that the Generall doe continue still, then shall you at your returne deliuer backe the sayd coffers and bals of waxe sealed in such sort as they be, without opening them, vntill it be in the case aforesayd.

8 You shall make a iust and true inuentorie in every ship and vessel appointed for this boynage of all the tackle, munition, and furniture belonging to them at their setting forth hence, and of all the positions whatacouer, and ofte copie thereof vnder your hand, & vnder the hands of your Viceadmirall and lieutenant, to be deliuered to the Erie of Leicester, and the other to the Gouernour of the companie for them before your departure hence, and the like to be done at your returne home of all things then remaining in the said shippes and vessels, with a true certificate how and by what means any parcel of the same shall haue bene spent or lost.

9 Item, you shall vse all diligence possible to depart from Southhampton with your said ships and vessels, before the last of this present moneth of Aprill, and so goe on your course by Cape de bona Speranca, not passing by the streight of Magellan, either going or returning, except upon great occasion in cident, that shall be thought otherwise good to you, by the aduise and consent of your said Assistants, or 4. of them at the least.

10 Item, you shall not passe to the Northward the fortye degree of latitude at the most, but shall take your right course to the Isles of Moluccaes, for the better discouerie of the Northwest passage, if without hinderance of your trade, and within the same degree you can get any knowledge touching that passage, whereof you shall do well to be inquisitive as occasion in this sort may serue.

11 Item, you shall haue speciall regard after your departure from the coast of England, so to order your course as that your shippes and vessels loose not one another, but keepe company together both out ward and home ward. And least they happen to leuer the one from the other by tempest or other wise, it shall not be amisse that you appoint to the captains and masters, certain places where in you will stay certaine daies. And every ship passing aforesaid, and not knowing what is become of the other ships to leaue upon every Promontorie or Cape, a token to stand in sight with a writing lapped in lead to declare the day of their passage. And if any wilfulness or negligence in this behalfe shall appere in any person or persons that shall haue charge of any of the ships or vessels aforesayd, or if they or any of them shall doe other wise then to them appertaineth, you shall punish such offenders sharply to the example of others.

12 Item, we do straightly exort you, and consequently all the rest employed in this boynage in any wise, and as you and they will answer the contrary at your coming home by the lawes of this realme, that neither going, carping abroad, nor returning, you doe spoile or take any thing of any of the Queenes Maiesties friends or allies, or any christians, without paying iustly for the same, nor that you vse any manner of violence or force against any such, except in your owne defence, if you shall be set upon, or otherwise be forced for your owne safegard to do it.

13 Item, we will that you deale altogether in this boynage like good and honest merchants, trafficking & exchanging wares for wares, with all rutenesse to the nations you shall deale with, as well Christians as others, & for that cause you shall instruct all those that go with you, that whensoever you or any of you shall happen to come in any place to conference with the people of those parts, & in all your doings

doings and chere
sure thet friend
misking, & else

14 Item
in the most str such places bo
some one of th
them for pledge
in deliuering
rather deliuer
it. Howdnt for good excha

15 Item
we be he shall other matter of so sealed of fur soone as he can Lieutenant, a pense he is to punishmet, as punished here a

16 Item
armour, or any lique, that is puiate accom places where t England, and whom it doeth

17 Item
the same ship a as of those you shalbe made, y
you see that th
and the other

18 Item
tions of the sa scriptions, w this our coast
the like to be

19 Item
uerment ma
ly be. And wh and straight
sooth of the brought in an ther order an gainst such a

20 Item
vnderstand, these, as othe conuenient o
if they shall do to them, so mitted, not to like to haue

21 Item
haue an ship
companie re

the master captain
the capitaine Carlisle appointed to him by orders, but upon such

if it should please each Gentleman so written in parchoffers locked with Aard, the other of offers to be put le of the Generall, the two coffers by
shall ouerline, to non take upon him
ey had bene speci-euerly respect, as that there shall be ne deliuer backe em, unless it be to for this voyage

hence, and of all of your Vice-the Governour of returne home of how and by what

th your said ships urke by Cape de
ing, excepte upon le and content of

at the most, but of the Northwell
an get any knowin this sort may

England, so to or-mpany together er by tempest or in places where-what is become sight with a wy-elligence in this e ships or vessels
you shall punish

in this voyage in by the lawes of the any thing sed
justly for the same,
the defence, if you

merchants, traffich, as well they benefit you or arts, in all pene doing a

doings and theirs, you and they so behaue your selues towards the said people, as may rather procure their friendship & good liking toward you by courtesiousness, then to moue them to offence, or mishaking, & especially you shall haue great care of the performance of your word, & promise to them.

14 Item the will, that by the aduise of your Assistants, in places where you and they shall thinke most fitte, you settle if you can, a beginning of a further trade to be had hereafter: and from such places doe bring ouer with you some fewe men, and women, if you may, and doe also leaue some one or two, or moze, as to you, and your Assistants shall seeme convenient of our nation with them for pledges, and to learne the tongue, and secrets of the Countreies, hauing diligent care, that in deliuering, and taking of hostages, you deliuer not personages of more value then you receiue, but rather deliuer meane persons vnder colour of men of value, as the Indians doe for the most part it. Provided that you stay not longer to make continuance of further trade, then shall be expedient for good exchange of the wares presently caried with you.

15 Item you shall haue care, and giue generall warning, that no person of what calling soe-uer he be, shall come by, or keepe to himselfe and his priuate use, any stone, pearle, golde, siluer, or other matter of commoditie to be had or found in places where you shall come, but he the said person so leas'd of such stone, pearle, golde, siluer, or other matter of commoditie, shall with all speede, or so soone as he can detect the same, and make deliuerie thereof to your selfe, or your Viceadmirall, or Lieutenant, and the Factors appointed for this voyage, vpon paine of forfeiture of all the recompense he is to haue for his seruice in this voyage by share, or other wise: and further to receiue such punishment, as to you, & your Assistants, or the moze part of them shall seeme good, & other wise to be punished here at his returne, if according to the qualite of his offence, it shall be thought needfull.

16 Item, if the Captaines, Marchants, or any other, shall haue any apparell, ierwels, chaunces, armour, or any other thing whatsoever, which may be desired in Countreies where they shall traffique, that it shall not be lawfull for them, or any of them to traffique, or sell any thing thereof for their priuate accompt: but the same shall be payed by the most of those that shall be in commission in the places where the same may be so required, rated at such value, as it may be reasonably worth in England, and then solde to the profite of the whole voyage, and to goe as in aduerture for those to whom it doeth appertaine.

17 Item you your selfe shall in the Gallion keepe one booke, and the Factors appointed for the same ship another, wherein shall be a iust accompt kept, as well of the marchandize caried hence, as of those you shall bring home. And as well at your setting forth, as frō time to time, as exchange shall be made, you shall set your hand to their booke, and they theirs to yours, and the like order shall you see that the Captaine, and the Factors in the Edward Bonauenture, shall vse in their shippes, and the other Captaines and Factors in eache other vessel.

18 Item you shall giue straight order to restrain, that none shall make any Cartes, or Descriptions of the said voyage, but such as shall be deputed by you the Generall, which said Cartes and descriptions, we thinke meete that you the Generall shall take into your hands, at your returne to this our coast of England, leauing with them no copie, & to present them vnto vs at your returne the like to be done if they finde any Cartes, or Papers in those Countreies.

19 Item you shall at your returne so direct your course, that all the shippes vnder your go-uernment may come home together, and arrive here in the riuer of Thames, if it may conveniently be. And wherefoeuer in this Realme you, or any of the shippes shall arrive, you shall giue special and straight order, that no person of what condition soeuer he be, shall vnlade, or bring on land, or sooth of the vessels in which it came, any part or parcel of marchandize, or matter of commoditie brought in any of the said vessels, vntill we being certified of your, or their arrivall, shall giue further order and direction therein, vnder the penalties and forfeitures expressed in the 15. article, against such as shall receive any thing to their priuate use, as in the same article is further expressed.

20 Item to the intent that all such persons, as shall goe with you in this voyage may better vnderstand, what they ought to doe, and what to avoide, we thinke it requisite, that aduise out of these, as of heretofore with the aduise of your Assistants, and masters of the ships, you shall cause some convenient order to be set downe in writing for their better government both at Sea, and land, if they shall happen to goe on land any where. And the same to be openly read, and made known vnto them: to the intent they may vnderstand how to behaue themselves; and vpon any faule committed, not to haue any excuse to ppetend ignorance, and so to avoide such punishment, as it is requisite to haue ministered, for the keeping of them in good order.

21 And to the end God may blesse this voyage with happy and prosperous successe, you shall haue an especiall care to see that reverence and respect be had to the ministers appointed to accompanye you in this voyage, as appertaineth to their place and calling, and to see such good orders as

Strange people to be brought home.

as by them shalbe set downe for reformation of life and maners, onely obeyed and performed, by causing the transgressours and concerners of the same to be severely punished, and the ministers to remove sometime from one bestell to another.

22 Provided alwayes, that the whole direction and government of the people, life and limme excepted, as in the fifth article, and the course of this voyage shalbe wholly at your disposition, excepte in the course by the Streight of Magellan, either outward or homeward, and in your passage by the Northward of 40. degrees in latitude, wherein you shall followe the direction set downe in the 9. and 10. articles, as also in the displacing of the Captaine of the Edward Bonaventure, & other captaines, wherein you shal followe the order appointed in the 6. article: Provided that we meane not by this article to derogate any thing to the authoritie of your Assistants established in the third article, or in any other article of these instructions.

23 Item, in all occasions and enterprises that may fall out to be upon the land, wee will that captaine Carille shall have the generall and chiefe charge thereof.

24 And finally wee require you and every of you to have a due regard to the observation and accomplishment of these our instructions, and of all such other things, as may any kind of way tend to the furtherance and benefite of this service committed to your charge.

The voyage intended towards China, wherein M. Edward

Fenton was appointed Generall, written by master Luke Ward his Vice-admirall, and Captaine of the Edward Bonaventure, begun

Anno Dom. 1582.

The second of Aprill I departed with the Edward Bonaventure from Blacke-well, and the 19. of the same arrived in Spetie rode at Hampton, where I found riding the Gallion Leicester, and so remaining there till the first of May, we set saile thence in the forenoone, being of vs in the whole 4. saile.

1 The Gallion Leicester of 400. tunnes Admirall, whereof was Generall, captaine Edward Fenton and William Hawkins the younger lieutenant Generall in her, and Christopher Hall, master.

2 The Edward Bonaventure of 300. tunnes Viceadmirall, whereof was Captaine Luke Ward, and Thomas Perrie master.

3 The Francis of 40. tunnes, whereof was captaine John Drake, and William Parkham master.

4 The Elizabeth of 50. tunnes, whereof was Captaine Thomas Skerwington and Rafe Crane master.

We spent by meanes partly of businesse, and partly of contrary winds, the moneth of May upon the coast, and then leaving the land we put off to sea, and proceeded on our voyage intended by the grace of God for China: untill the moneth of August following, nothing fell out much worthy the knowledge of the world, which is not common to all Nautigants, but about the beginning of August aforesayd, being somewhat neere the coast of Guinie, upon the shooting off of a peece & the putting out of a flag in the Admirall, I went on boord, & M. Walker, M. Shaw, M. Gerries, our master & pilot with me, where the general counsel was assembled to consider of two points, viz.

The first, whether it were necessarie to water presently or not, which was thought very needfull of all men, and so concluded.

The 2. where the best and aptest place was to water in, which was thought of the greater number to be at Sierralcons, on the coast of Guinie, which was also concluded, and by the Master, and Pilotes agreed to goe thence Southward, which determined, we returned aboard, and left Nicholas Allen, my master Carpenter aboard the Gallion, and his bove to take physike.

The 2. day of August, we went all day, and all night Southward: the forenoone in staying our foremast with a sail of the Sea, having the top saile, and all aboyde, we cracked the same within 3. payes under the toppe, since which time we were in great feare of it.

The 3. day at noone master Hall, and Edward Gillman, with others came aboard, and brought our master Carpenter, and one of their Carpenters with him, to mend our maste which we mended not withall; and after some conference they went aboard againe. We were at this day Southward and East Southward, till 6. a clocke at night, that we sawe the lande of Guinie, which bare North-east of vs about 12. leagues off, which scene, we sounded, and had no ground: then went I, and our Master and Pilote aboard the Admirall, & after many debatements, concluded to runne in North-east by East, and at 11. at night we came aboard againe, and went all night Northward by East.

The 4. at 8. in the forenoone, we were within 2. leagues of the land which bare of vs North-east, which rose like a high that it was the

of the hope, and king it a bairn
with larbooye

In this time and the Elizabeth
tongue of a ven
fresh water fish
other unknown South by the woke fish with

The 4. all the east by South of 4. leagues or

The 5. day
frank gale, the der our Lee wa
to the North wa
with our skiffe wards. At 2. o
of the hope we we could lie

The 6. day

well, and so the Northward and Shallow water
so running alo should followe
of vs, and so to
and good heire
under in 10. fa
found a tide to South Southward

The 7. of A master & pilot
a shallow whic cis afoze, and
10. a clocke of North Northward
we ankred in land without and of a small thicke and ran Northward, wh
shore which in rounds alle at night. After put to Leeward

Then the
raped upon the
The 9. at Northward, I
before and de thwart of the mirall shot of
boat and wo
id halfe a m

When the raped upon the
The 9. at Northward, I
before and de
thwart of the
mirall shot of
boat and wo
id halfe a m

and performed, by
and the ministers

ple, life and limme
e disposition, except nd in your passage
nd in your passage
nd in your passage
nd in your passage
nd in your passage

nd, wee will that

e obstruction and y kind of way tend

Edward

s Vice-

are from Blacke.
on, where I found
first of Spay, wee re 4. saile.

of was Generall, Lieutenant Gene-

s Capaine Luke

William Parham

ington and Rafe

ometh of Spay by stage intended by out much woody

the beginning of

off of a peece & the

Sp. Gentries, our two points, viz.

the very needefull

the of the greater

nd by the Paster,

d, and left Richo

me in staying our

the same within

oyd, and brought

which we medel

day South-east which bare North

went I, and our ruine in North east by East.

North-east, which

roft

use like a high hill full of woods, and of each side lowe land, we being perswaded by our Pilots that it was the entrance into Sierraleona, went in North-east until we were within an halfe league of the shore, and had brought the South point South-east by East of vs. At 11. a clocke we finding it a baie, and not Sierraleona, brought our eackes aboard and stood along West by North and West larboord tacked.

In this time our Admiralls pinnace rowed in, and went on land upon the South side of the baie, and the Elizabeths boat with her. They found houses of doughes, and in one of the houses the tongue of a beast, and a bullocks tongue freshly killed. Also a lake with plenty of fresh water, and fresh water fish in it hard by the sea side: they found six pomegranates, and pease like nuts, with other unknown fruites under the trees. The Elizabeth ranne in, and brought the South point South by West of her, and ankred within fawntion shot of the shore in 7. fadome oze, where they woke fish with hookes, while he staid for the boates.

The 4. all the afternoon we ran along the coast (which lieth North west by North, and South-east by South) West, and within a point one way of the other, seeing the land under our Lee, 3. or 4. leagues off, and all night likewise.

The 5. day at 6. in the morning we went West north-west, and North-west by West with a frank gale the North-west land bearing North-west off vs, 12. leagues, & the North-east land under our Lee within 3. leagues. So we ran along till 12. at noone: then the wind shifted upon vs to the North north-west, till 3. afternoon, all which time it ble to litle but rained much. I went off with our kittle, and ankred in 18. fadome with a grapnell, and found the currant to set to the Eastwards. At 3. the wind came againe to South a frank gale, so we went along within 3. leagues of the shore West by South larboord tacked. At 6. at night we shaped our course off as neere as we could to the West next hand, and so went all night.

The 6. day at 6. a clocke in the forenoone, being 5. leagues off the shore, we went in North-west, and so the ships stood along. At 7. a clocke I went aboard the Elizabeth, and ran into the shore North-west and by North, till we were within a league and a halfe of the land, and saw a breach of shallow water under our Lee: then we tacked of West being in 7. fadome sand at 9. a clocke: I and so running along, we saw as we thinke two Islands, but durst not put in with them, least the ships should follow vs and be on the Lee shore. About 11. a clocke we brought the West-most land North of vs, and so we edged off after our ships, and at one afternoon I got aboard the Edward againe, and stood before larboord tacked West of West north-west, till 8. a clocke at night, that we came to anker in 10. fadome lacke a fourth part grey sand, and there rid all night. During which time, we found a tide to run very strong, which runneth in the shore North north-east, and the ebbe stretcht out South south-west.

The 7. of August about 7. afternoon, M. Hawkins came aboard vs, with whom my selfe, our master & piloch had some conference what was best for vs to do, and how to seeke a harbour being on a shallow unknovven to vs all. In the eve we thought good at 9. a clocke to weie, & send the Francis afoze, and to get into deeper water if we could, & when it were cleare to seeke the harbour. At 10. a clocke the ebbe was come, & although it were thicke and rainie weather, we weied, and ran North north-west, and North-west till noone, and then seeing the miserable weather of rainie & fog, we ankred in 9. and a half fadome, hauing gone before betwene 12. fadome, to 4. fadome, 3. parts sand without sight of land. At 4. in the afternoon it cleared by, and we had sight of the Elizabeth, and of a small Island very high, like the pike of Tenerif, 6. leagues off vs, North-east, then tacking thicke and rainie againe. The 8. after 9. a clocke afoze noone, wee weied, and went hence North north-west, until 12. at noone, and from noone till 6. at night we went North next hand to seeke the shore which we had sight of at 5. in the afternoon, and bare north-east of vs being high land. The round Isle and two small Islands which we saw by it, bare East, and to the Southwards at 5. at night. After 6. at night the Elizabeth came by and told vs, she lost an anker and a cable, and was put to Lee wards into 17. fadome water by trussing to an old cable.

Then the Gallion came roomer, and we all ankred at 7. a clocke in 14. fadome sand: Our ship rased upon the shore West south-west.

The 9. at 3. in the morning our Admirall shot off a peece, and at 4. wee weied and went hence North-east. At 5. in the morning we saw the land along, and the Island which wee saw the night before and others other Islands about it, and so ran in North-east until we had brought our steeles thwart of the river, and then ran in East about 6. at night, being a league within the river. Our Admirall shot off a peece, and there we ankred in eight fadome sand. Being at anker, I minded our boat and would have gone aboard the Admirall, but could not the flood was bent so strong, and she rid halfe a mile beneath vs in the tide, but we had no tide.

The

The 10. in the morning at 5. a clocke I sent our skiffe with our pilot in her to find the roade, and waiting place: in the meane time at 6. a clocke, we set saile with our ship, and being calme we rowed with our boar untill 10. and then ankred a mile shoare of the waiting place. After dinner I went a land with my skiffe to finde timber to fill our make, and searching along the shoare we found a good waiting place: and further seeking in the wood, which all the countrey is full of, and of diuers sortes, we found Limmon trees full of fruite: all trees growing by the water side with the halkes hung full of oysters and great periwinkles and crabbes among them: we found dye pomegranates with many other fruits unknowne to vs. In the meane time our Admirall and the Edwards, with the barks, hauing a gale at West, set saile, and ran by and ankred in the roade before the accustomed waiting place.

About 5. afternoone I came aboard, & brought 6. barricoes of water with me: after, I went and supped aboard with the Generall, where we conferred, and about 8. at night I came aboard againe and rid quietly all night.

The 11. day our long boat with the master and pilot, went a land & carried all our water caskes, which they washed and filled to scason, & our Cooper repaired part of the same. In the meane time I with our carpenters & others went in our skiffe, and found a tree to fish our foremast, which we felled, but not able to carie it away because it would not swim, we left it till a better meane were made to bole it. After I with my companie went by into a pretty riuer of fresh water, a mile into the countrey, which was full of oysters growing vpon trees, and very fresh water, which done, we gathered some Limmons and came aboard. The 12. being Sunday, we had a generall communion in both the ships. After dinner I went aboard to the generall, and spent the afternoone with him in conference, and supped aboard, and diuer strangers with me.

The 13. of August, we were assembled aboard the Admirall, for the descending of controuersies, betwene the Captaine, Master, and companie of the Elizabeth: by prooffe it appeared vnto vs, that the Master Ralfe Crane, had in speech deserved some punishment, so that we by generall consent agreed, that he should be put into the Bilboes, which was done: but within halfe an houre, at mine, and others request, he was vpon his submission released. Which done, we dined al with the Generall, and after dinner, with my boate and skiffe, we went and brought the tree for fishes for our make into a sandie Baye, by our waiting place, to haue it squared, which done with our waluers, at night we returned aboard.

The 14. in the forenoone, we washed our ship, and scraped off the Barnackes, the Generall came aboard, and dined with me, and Captaine Drake, Master Hall, and others. After dinner we went to the old waiting place, from thence I went aboard the Elizabeth, and brought diuers things a way: then we carried part of our water caskes to the other waiting place, & there I met with Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Maddox, Mr. Walker, Mr. Lewes, and diuers others, which all supped a land there with Godden Dykers, & a fresh Pullet, and Rice porrage, and came late aboard of all hands.

The 15. day we romaged, and got vp our strong beere out of the formost roome, and placed it by the maine make.

The 16. day in the forenoone, we stricke downe most of our Ordnance, and bestowed most of our things abast make in hold: and in the afternoone, we tooke in 4. tunnes of water, and certain things, which I fetched out of the Elizabeth of ours.

The 17. we romaged, and tooke in water, and I kept my cabbie, being sicke: the Generall came aboard, and supped with me.

The 18. day weooke in water, & romaged our ship all the forenoone. About noone there came vnto the riuer a canoo with 3. Portugals in it, with whom I had conference aboard the Admirall.

The 19. of August being Sunday, it rained all the night before, and all the day, till 2. a clocke after noone: then I manned our long boat and skiffe, and went a land into the oyster baie, where I met captaine Watkins, captaine Drake, with all our boats, and 130. men which came all to gather oysters, where with we laded our boats, and sent them aboard with the greatest number of our men: and we with the rest went ouer land through the Limmon garden, and gathered many which we carried aboard with vs, and so parted to our charges. The 20. day our company stowed our Ordnance, and fetched certaine things from aboard the Elizabeth: the carpenters set by one fish of our foremast, our Cooper repaired some of the caskes which the Spring tide had broken.

The master, pilot and I in our skiffe went along the riuer to the vttermost baie, at the coming in at the West end, where we found a flat baie, yet a crooked channell in it: and we went a league vp a fresh riuer, which at the upper end was so thicke of oyster trees, that we could not get to the head of it, so we returned backe againe to the West point, and there I obserued the same: which done, we felled two Palm-treees and came to the bathing place, where we washed, and refreshed our selves, and came aboard

The 21. day in the morning the riuer in his pinnesse, with our netwe made me meaning to haue made among vs a Crocodile with figgs, ykes, and opened, and flayed, in the

This day also we went

The 22. day the

Portingals and Nether Portingals and of rice, 500. and odde vnto the Generall, and the rice and saltes hauing neede of it and naught, whereof we had 5. bushels, and of the Gallion 300. and a pinnesse by the riuer to vs: who not finding her with the Admirall, and buying had many good

The 23. day I returned and others went on land for wood, and brought

The 24. day in the forenoone in them. After dinner the commissions for the company boate was brought full

The 25. day of August which was fully accroppe, wood, hoopes, and I rooted my tarre, of the scales in my cabbie

The 26. day being Captaine Drake, Mr. Euans with me: after dinner Oliphant, but saw him and supped together.

This night I was stung of a fruite of the tree, and eate foure, some the reason.

The 27. day in the quest that hee mighte be downe, with whom I went, that the stow was sent themselves in the time I sent 4. of my men

The 28. day in the to the West point to the as all our company

During the time of our former boate, which: and also the rest whereof I went aboard our selves, and came aboarde, where wee had prayer, and supped, and so went to bedde: but before morning we had much winde and raine.

The 21. day in the morning I went aboard the Admirall to visite him, and found him gone by the river in his pinnell, then I brake my safte with Captaine Hawkins and the rest: which done, wech our netwe made nettes we went a fishing into the Oyster bay, where wee pitched our nettes, meaning to haue made a draught: and as wee waded with our nettes, wee sawe in the water among vs a Crocodile or Alligato, which we assaulted, and within 3. houres / ter many wounds, with sigges, stkes, and shot, we slew him, and brought him aboarde the Admirall, where hee was opened, and slayed, in whose body we found many small stones, and of Palmito nuts.

His stings hills.

This day also we went a hunting, and being wearie we brought some oysters aboarde the Admirall, and there M. Walker, M. Lewis and I supped: which done we came aboard.

The 22. day the Portingals which had bene with vs before, came towne and brought some ether Portingals and Negroes with them in a shippe boate, wherein they brought vs 80. metres of rice, 500. and odde waighe of Oliphants teeth, and a boy Negro, which boy they gaue the Generall, and the rice and teeth for the Elizabeth which wee solde them, with all her tackle, and sailes, hauing neede of the rice, because our meale which we brought out of England, was decayed and nauight, whereof we had into the Edward 30. bushels, which is a me to and a halfe: the Francis had 5. bushels and the Gallion had the rest. And wee had 200. waight of Oliphants teeth, and the Gallion 300. and a halfe, and 6. li. During this time wee sent our skiffe with the Admirals pinnell by the river to meete with a Gondall, which the Portingals had sent for fresh victuals for vs: who not finding her, returned at night: All this day I with M. Walker remained aboarde with the Admirall, and after their dinner and supper we ended our businesse, and returned aboard, having had many good speaches with the Portingals.

Their traine here with the Portingals.

The 23. day I remained romaging aboarde, in which time the Pastor with the Carpenters, and others went on lande and felled moze wood for fishes for our masse, and cut a boates ladng of firewood, and brought it aboard.

The 24. day in the forenoone our Generall and Captaine Parker came aboarde, where wee passed the forenoone in talke, and after Seruice I sent for M. Hall, and M. Maddox to dine with them. After dinner Captaine Parker and I, our boates full of men went on lande, and gathered limmons for the companie, which done, wee returned aboarde our shippes: in the meane time our boate was brought full of wood aboard, and the Carpenter squared timber.

The 25. day of August I was sent for to the Generall about furnishing by of the Elizabeth, which was fully accomplished and deliuered to the Portingals. Out of her our boate brought yea, wood, hoopees, and many other such necessaries. The Portingals dined with mee: after dinner I cooted my tarre, plared him, and filled him with water: and this day Iohn Johnson brought the sticles in my cabbins.

The 26. day being Sunday, Captaine Hawkins, M. Maddox, M. Hall, M. Bannister, Captaine Drake, M. Euans, M. Hood, and others came aboarde and heard the Sermon, and dined with me: after dinner we went on boate to the lower point where wee followed the footing of an Oliphant, but saw him noe, and so spent the time to and fro till supper time, & then came aboarde, and supped together, which done, ech man departed to his abode.

This night I was very sicke, (and so were all they that were on boate with mee,) with eating of a fruite of the Countrey, which wee founde on trees like nuttes: Whereof some fruite in Guldrone, some foure, some five, some sixe, and moze, but wee vomitted and stoured vpon it without reason.

Sickness by eating some fruite in Guldrone.

The 27. day in the afternoone, the olde Greeke Francisco, came aboarde to mee, with request that hee might haue the Francis boate to goe by for his owne boate: which was not come downe, with whom I talked of this Countrey and Countrey people, untill five of the clocke at night, that the stowd was come, and then I went aboarde to the Admirall, and got his consent, and sent themselves in her: viz. Ferdinando the Portingall Pastor, and his Negro: In the meane time I sent 4. of my men to watch in the Elizabeth all night.

The 28. day in the morning at 4. a clocke, I sent my skiffe with the Admirals pinnell downe to the West point to fish, who came aboarde againe at one in the afternoone, and brought as much fish as all our companies could eat.

During the time that our boates were a fishing, came downe the river a Canot of the Portingals former boate, with beanes, oranges, plantans, which they presented the Generall and mee with: and also the rest of the rice due to vs for the payment of the Elizabeth. For the partition thereof I went aboard the Admirall, where I dined. After dinner, M. Euans beganne to barter

The Portingals
presents.

M. Euans one of our away
chants.

away certaine of the ships commodities with the Negroes, without acquainting the Generall of any other until he had done, wherof grew moze words then yosse, as by the booke of Parthandis appeareth. Which done I came aboard, and had 2. of the Portingals to supper with me. About 2. a clocke in the morning we had a Ternado, and much raine.

They search the Countrey.

The 29. about 4. in the morning, I in my skiffe, and Captaine Parker in his pinnell, went downe to the West point, and there wee laded with 11. men in all well furnished, and searched the woods, plaines and places, after an Olyphant, finding the haunt, footing and soyle of many newly done, yet we sawe none of them. We sawe hogs, goats, of fatons, and divers foxes of foules very wilde: and hauing traualled about two leagues, about noone wee returned to the point, where we landed, and met our boates which had bene at sea, and taken plentie of good fish: there wee refreshed our selues with such victuals as wee had, and came aboarde our frerall shippes, where I found the Portingals and Negroes, who had dined, and after supped aboarde with me.

After supper I batted with them certaine linnen cloth, and gaue them 2. redde cappes for 3. Olyphants teeth, as by the notes thereof appeareth.

The 3. day in the morning at three a clocke I sent my pinnell to sea a fishing, and after our long boate to bee mended and trimmed, which both returned about thye in the afternoone: the Generall, Captaine Parker, and Captaine Drake, came aboarde mee at Seruice time, and after examined certaine of the Portingals and Negroes for things by them bought of our companions, and especially for a staine cloake, which would not be heard of: which doue we supped aboarde together, and after they returned to their charges.

The last of August I went on lande, and obserued the sunne, and made prooue of other Instruments, and had the Pastor, and others with mee: after we dyewe fish with our nette. In this time Pastor Shawe, and M. Euans sawe a bullocke and shote at him: wee rained a great deale of grounde, but coule see none, and so returned aboarde, where supped with mee thye of the Portingals. At two of the clocke in the morning, our skiffe went to sea a fishing, and had foule weather.

September.

The first of September about five of the clocke in the morning wee set saile, and got downe with little winde at North-east, to the Westward two miles: then being calme at 9. a clocke wee ancred.

After Seruice, and dinner, in our long boate, the Pastor, M. Walker, M. Geffreys and others, went on lande into a bay with our nette, where wee dyewe about 70. fishes, and cut a palmetre. The Generall being aboarde a fishing with his pinnell came into me, to whom I gaue part of our fish, and returned aboarde where wee found plentie of fish taken in our skiffe, for which wee thanked God, and supped. About 7. at night wee had a sudden flawe of winde, raine, and lightning, till 9. a clocke: after a faire night.

The 2. we set saile at 6. in the morning, and went out West, betwene 7. and 10. fathome, with a yerie gale at East till 8. then it wared calme, wee being shotte out of the harbour a league and a halfe. It continued calme this day till one in the afternoone, and then it blew by at West South-west, a good gale, so we stood of North North-west, and North-west, till 5. in the afternoone, then we ancred in 12. fathome, being 6. leagues off the point West by North.

This afternoone Captaine Hawkins came aboarde to me and brought the sample of clothes, which he desired to haue put into the aduerture, and to haue our Parchants praise them, which to do the better I sent them aboarde the Admirall, to conferre with the Generall and the rest. Where they supped, and returned without taking them into the venture, for that they could not agree to Captaine Hawkins liking.

The 3. day about 8. a clocke in the forenoone the Generall came aboarde to mee, complaining that his maine crosse trees were broken, and therefore determined to goe into Sierra leona againe when the winde blew at 12. at noone we set saile, and went in East South-east, and South-east, being carried to the Northward with the flow. And at 7. at night wee ancred in 8. fathome 3. leagues of the entrance, West North-west.

All this day the Generall remained aboarde with me, dinner supper, and Seruice, till we ancred, which time we discoursed, &c.

The 4. day about 11. at noone we set saile, and stood in Southeast with the ebb untill we were within a mile of the entrance, and then finding it calme wee ancred in 14. fathome 2. mile of the West point: in coming to ancre, our quarter Pastres, let slip an ancre, and newe cable, ende for ende through negligence: Captaine Drake being a boare with his boat a fishing, put off thinking to recouer his backe but could not, and with much paine got aboarde me where he supped, and his companie, and stayed all night.

They returne to Sierra leona againe.

The

The 5. of
and cable, but the river, and Admirall the where we ridd

About 6. car cans, and sup

The 6. betw by our ancre a ing aboard at v boord the Gen
others, with ou
ped with him.

The 7. day
nere, and wen
some great mu
I stayed late o
and remained a

The 8. day
open to bake b went to the oth met there with

The 9. day t
to that compan
there dined: af
and make place
tooke fish in ou
per. Certaine Smiths and C

The 10. day
noone to kill a net, and at noon
dox, Captaine supper I sent d

The 11. day
and dragged fo at 5. came M. V where we sup
clocke at night

The 12. day
with who the th after that rate t mong the Port After I had be the Generall, M place. Immed at night we be

The 13. in th
after I sent by for one of the board. The M same, brought i

The 14. day
the tree, selled
and ended the

The 15. aft
a great deale of day, I founde

ing the Generall of pouches of Parthian per with me. About his pinnele, went fish, and searched

and soyle of many hers soles of soules turned to the point of good fish: there
of our severall shippes, abooyd with me.
redde cappes for 3.

thing, and after our
the afternoone: the twice time, and after
of our companie, I supped abooyd to

ofe of other Instru-our nette. In this see ranging a great
ped with mee thre
a fishing, and had ille, and got downe te at 9, a clocke wee

effreys and others,
and cut a palmetre.
I gaue part of our
which were thanked lightning, till 9 a

10, fathome, with about a league and by at West South-afternoone, then we

samples of clothes, asse them, which to id the rest. Where y could not agree to

ence, complaining Sierra Leona againe and Southeast, and light wee anchored in ruice, till we anchored, ebb untill we were thome 2. mile of the elwe cable, ende for put off thinking

be supped, and his

The

The 9. of September in the forenoone about 8, a clocke we anchored, & dragged for our ancre, and cable, but found it not: it like wist at 3. in the afternoone till 4. then were let fall, and went into the river, and ranne in Southeast from 4. fathome and a halfe, to 14. fathome, and moored by our Admirall shoure of the Oyiter bay in 8. fathome at 5. a clocke at night, hauing left a barrell boy where we roode, for a marke to finde our ancre.

The oyter bay.

About 6. came the olde Portingall, and 3. more with him, and brought me Dyeuges, and Plantans, and supped with me. After supper they went abooyd the barke.

The 6. before day, both our boates went downe with the Admiralls boates to fish, and dragge for our ancre and cable, and found it not: after our skiffe went a fishing, andooke plencie. I being abooyd at dinner, the Portingals came and dined with me. After dinner, in the boate I went abooyd the Generall, and there left my Carpenter, my selfe, with M. Walker, M. Maddox, and others, with our net byew good plencie of fish, whereof I carried part abooyd the General and supped with him. After supper M. Walker and I came abooyd.

The 7. day in the morning I embred many opinarie businesse: after dinner I called the General, and went downe with the net into the accustomed bay, & there byew 120. fish, whereof were some great mullets. The Generall went abooyd to suppe with Captaine Drake in the Francis: I layed late on shoare, and supped abooyd with our companie, all sauing M. Walker, who supped and remained all night with the General abooyd Captaine Drake in the Francis.

Smiths forge and an oven set by me Sierra Leona.

The 8. day our companie of all handes went on shoare, and set by a Smiths forge, and an oven to bake bread: I went in to the Cockle bay with our net, and finding no plencie of fish there, went to the other bay, and brought abooyd plencie of fish, and Captaine Drake with mee whome I met there without a boate, and 4. men with him.

The 9. day being Sunday, M. Walker went abooyd the Francis to minister the Communion to that companie, and there he dined: I went abooyd the Admirall, and there heard Seruice, and there dined: after dinner most part of our people went on land, with the Generall to play chess, and make place for the Carpenters and Smithes on shoare: and I in my skiffe went downe andooke fish in our nette for supper, and returned before night, and sent the Generall part for his supper. Certaine of our men lay on lande to keepe watche with Captaine Parker, to garde the Smiths and Carpenters.

Watch on land.

The 10. day at 4. a clocke in the morning I went downe in our skiffe, and loode till 11. at noone to kill a Pellicane, but could not: in the meane time our long boate went along with the net, and at noone with both the boates we returned abooyd well fishen, where I founde M. Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, and M. Hall, who ate there, and at night went abooyd their shippe: after supper I sent 6. men to watch on shoare with Captaine Parker.

The 11. day at 6. a clocke in the morning I went downe with my boate, & the Admiralls boate, and dragged for our ancre, but found no hope thereof, and returned abooyd at 3. in the afternoone: at 5. came M. Walker in our skiffe, and brought the Generall, and M. Maddox abooyd with him, where he supped and were merry together: after supper eche returned to his place: about 11. a clocke at night, we had a great storme of winde, and raine at East Southeast.

The 12. day about 8. in the forenoone came downe the three boate with three other Portingals with whosome the Generall bargained, to let them haue 3. barrells of salt, for 5. barrells of rice, and after that rate to exchange for 40. barrells, which hee acquainted mee with: after wards I dined among the Portingals with him, after dinner I went on shoare to the oven, and to the Carpenters, after I had bene on shoare and seene the worke there, I returned abooyd, & there supped with me the Generall, M. Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, and 7. Portingals, after supper eche returned to his place. Immediately after it rained and blew much at Northnortheast. About one a clocke after midnight we had a tornado, which continued 3. hours at East next hand.

Crasque with 3. other Portingals. his. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

The 13. in the afternoone, the Portingals came againe abooyd me, and brake their salt with mee, after I sent by them by the river in my skiffe 12. barrells of salt, and gaue them a boete of wine for one of the sauage Querries. The Carpenters felled a tree, and squared it for planke and boord. The M. had our foresaile on land, and began to binde it, but not hauing time to mend the same, brought it abooyd, where we supped with fish, which came from the nette.

The 14. day after drincking our boate went on land with our foresaile, and men to pit and sawe the tree, felled & he wed the day before they came abooyd to dinner, & after dinner they went againe and ended the saile, and cut a boace full of wood and at night returned abooyd.

The 15. after dinner the M. Walker, M. Walker, and I, accompanied with 12. other traueiled over a great deale of ground to finde some cattle, but founde none: & comming home thow the Oyiter bay, I founde of my companie and of the Admiralls together seeking oysters: and going from

They came by to watch the Country.

in two or three hairs.

them, Thomas Russell one of my companie sawe a strange fish named Vtelis, which had tounge with a Crocodile, and being hurt came neere the boare where he was in, and by the talle drew him a lande, and there slew him, and sent the Generall the hinder halfe of him: the head part I kept, in whose nose is like a sword a bone of two foote long, with 23. pyckes of a fine, sharpe and strange: The body we did eat, and was like a Shark.

The 16. day being Sunday we all kept abooye till after Aduerice, and dinner, then M. Walker and I went abooye the Admirall, where I had diuers debatchments with the Generall about our affaires, and there supped, about 8. a clocke we returned abooye.

The 17. day in the morning I sent Nicholas Allen, and two more of my Carpenters to helpe the Admirall about their maine make: I sent our Cooper, and men to helpe him to cut hoops in the wood. After dinner with my long boate, and the Master with me, we went abooye the Admirall, and there took in the nette, and Captaine Parker and the Master Hall, and went out to the sande to the Northwards in the river a mile about the roade. And sounding when we went of the Southside, had 14. fathome, and sholde by litle and litle, so halfe a fathome and a foote water, on the sand, which is bare two mile long at quarter ebb, hard sand: we dye we there with our net, butooke litle fish, and so turned abooye.

The 18. day we beganne a newe fishing nette for our selues, and remained busie about it all day abooye: our Cooper cut bootes, and the Baker baked bread on lande: M. Walker supped abooye the Admirall.

Wednesday day.

The 19. day before 3. in the morning, I went downe in the Admiralls pinnet, which went with the net to fish. They landed me besides Pellicane bay, and there I tooke up my standing vncil 3. afternoone: in which time I sawe a crane, a martine, and diuers other foules, but shot at none but one hearne, which I killed: after came abooye the Edward, where the Generall, M. Maddox, M. Cotton, and Captaine Parker supped with me.

The 20. day after dinner, I sent my boate with the Master, and companie with him to dragge for our ancre, & cable, who could neither finde the same nor see our booy, which were left riding by a small cagger, for a marke for the other greater ancre, so I accept all lost. By the way in their going downe the river they put me a lande by the Pellicane bay, and there I stood till their returne about 5. at afternoone, and came backe againe with them, and Hooker killed a monkie with a pfeere. At my returne abooye I found the Portingals caruel come downe the river at ancre by our ships.

in Portingal
caruel.

The 21. day in the morning the Generall sent for me and M. Walker, who went abooye them, where hee acquainted vs with the faulces founde in his maine masse, perished in the partterns, which to mende I sent him two of my Carpenters, and two ancre stocks to fish the same: Also hee opened before vs two and M. Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, and Captaine Parker, certaine wordes which happened betweene him and the Master Hall, howe Hall saide vnto him among other speaches, that hee was there appointed Master, as hee was Generall, and that hee would be Master though hee said nay: the which wordes the Master confessed not to speake in effect, but vntil speaches passed betweene them. Whereupon hee demaunded our opinions, whether he might displace him or not, which wee graunted hee might vpon so full a cause, but intreated the Generall rather to accept his submission, which Hall willingly yeelved vnto, which followed presently. At Aduerice the Master openly before the whole companie acknowledged to haue outshotte himselfe in vndecent speaches, and craued pardon of the Generall, who willingly forgoue the offence as though it had not bene committed. After dinner I went on lande, the Master, and M. Walker with me, to ouersee the Baker, the carpenters, the smith, and our ropemakers, all which were at worke on land.

After I had bene on land, comming abooye, and captaine Parker with me, we went abooye the caruel, and there saw 30. or 40. slaues fettered together, the men but the women and children went loose. After the view of them, their behauiour & other trifles there seene, I went abooye. At supper came certaine of the Portingals to me & thanke with me, & after vey long talke, and so departed.

The 22. day in the morning I sent my workmen ahoare, and about 8. a clocke, I and M. Walker, with others went downe in my boat to the Pellicane bay, but got nothing: in the meane time they in the boat went downe to the point, & gathered a good many of great oysters, and so returned abooye about 6. at night well wet with raine, and slouge with Bees.

Bees in Gut
na.

The 23. day being Sunday, while we were at the Sermon came the Portingal Captaine Mathew Fernandes, & brought me a Negro boy of 7. yeres old, which he gaue me, whose name was Iohn Primero. After he had dined with me, came captaine Hawkins, captaine Drake, M. Hoode, M. Faireweather, M. Tailboyes, and M. Bannister, with many others to visite me: after we had talked talked a while together, I Portingall Captaine How debarments with the Gen

The 24. day we remma was filled not 20. dayes b eaten with woymes, which much. M. Blackoller, & but found them not: we too of our caske. This afterne clocke afternoone, among Francis, who died the same

The 26. we filled ware and lead, and all things to a monkie, and an Olyphan

The 27. day at 3. a clo my long boate to the fish the wecke of the land, & pla the cattle, who came so fast for a quarter of an houce, wearing our selues not b so returned to our fishing

This morning came e which came to the Gener as the Parchant and M him. There hee receiued o him a cloake, & certaine c

The 28. day in the mo downe a fishing with our booy. The 29. day after ment concerning our goi forwards with the prouisi kins, Captaine Parker, I to proceede, and with this I went abooye the Elizab they would saile away, a fter, the pilot, M. Shaw, at the Portingals to looke e

The 30. and last day o foymone from fishing w with haire and lymptis which to see I sent for th came and brought with h his companie, who haui and dyelred, proued an e ced all our companys fo

This day during the med in Commission into our going forwards, all gellan: and being in the many hotte, and disba taine Parker, and also th very displeasent, which after to dinner, then a sh part of this day in much great boate laden with o

The 1. day of Octob barrels for the 12. barrel in the morning I Gener talked a while together, I went aboard the Admirall and M. Walker, where wee agreed that the Portingall Captaine should goe to the riuier for our shiffe, who was contented to goe after many debaitements with the Generall, and supper with him I came aboard.

The 24. day we rommaged to take vp some of our ordnance, & perusing our water cask, which was filled not 20. dayes before, founde with greene wood cut. in this place found the same to be eaten with wormes, which caused the greater part of the water to leake out, which troubled vs much. Greene wood subiect to wormes. Robert Rose went downe in our boate to magge for our ancre & cables but found them not: we tooke vp 7. pieces of ordnance, filled some water, and amended some part of our cask. This afternoon the Generall came aboard to me, & conferred about, &c. About 5. a clocke afternoon, among others I went on lande to the buriall of William Marcham of the Francis, who died the same afternoon before. The death of William Marcham of the Francis.

The 26. we filled water, mended our cask and stowed many things in hold, & ended the cooke, and lead, and all things to the net belonging: this afternoon the king Parama, sent our Generall a monkie, and an Olyphanes toothe, by a messenger a Negro of some accompt. What sent to our men by M. Parama.

The 27. day at 3. a clocke in the morning the Spaller and I, well accompanied went downe in my long boate to the fishing bay, where seeing the footing of many cattle, we drew a rope thwart the necke of the land, & placed men to gard the straight: the rest went into the wood to vnde downe the cattle, who came so fast vpo our men that one of them ouerthrew W. Towlson, that he lay dead for a quarter of an houre, and being recouered in 2. hours hee knewe not what he did. Thus we waied our selues not being able to kill any of them, although we gaue them many stripes, and so returned to our fishing againe, where we tooke more fish then we could eat.

This morning came the same messenger aboard, to present mee with an Olyphanes toothe, which came to the Generall from king Parama, but finding me absent, received such incontinement as the Marchants and M. Walker gaue him, & so went aboard the Admirall, taking the toothe with him. There hee received of the Generall to present the king as much scarlet clothe as would make him a cloake, & certaine canuas: and for y<sup>e</sup> Queene a brought Moscouy smocke, & a looking glasse.

The 28. day in the morning came M. Maddox and other aboard mee: after breakfast we went downe a fishing with our net, & returned aboard to supper, and when we had supped, they went aboard. The 29. day after dinner M. Walker and I went aboard the Admirall, and grew in argument concerning our going toothe to the ples of Cape Verde, or whether it were better to proceed forwards with the pouison we now haue. At this conference was the General, Captaine Hawkins, Captaine Parker, M. Maddox, M. Walker and I: after sundry debaitements we concluded to proceed, and with this conclusion we supped there together. After supper by the same consent, I went aboard the Elizabeth and the caruel, and brought their sailes aboard the Admirall, fearing they would saile away, and decriue me of my boate and salt: which done, I imparted to the Spaller, the pilot, M. Shaw, and M. Geffris, what had bene determined, and left 6. of my men aboard the Portingals to looke to them.

The 30. and last day of September, the Francis Cooke came aboard about 7. a clocke in the forenoon from fishing with my net, and brought among other fish, a sea calfe (as wee called it) with haire and lymphits, and barnacles vpon him, being 7. foote long, 4. foote 9. inches about: which to see I sent for the Generall, and such as pleased to come see it out of the Admirall, who came and brought with him M. Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, Captaine Parker, and most part of his companie, who hauing viewed the head, which was ougly being a liue, it being flayed, opened, and dyelled, spouered an excellent, faire, and good meate, broped, roasted, sodde and baked, and sufficed all our companie for that day. A strange fish taken.

This day during the time that our dinner was dressing, the Generall assembled vs before named in Commission into my cabin, where he propounded diuers questions and doubts touching our going forwards, all which being answered, it was agreed to proceed for the straightes of Magellan: and being in the South sea, to deale as occasion should be giuen. In this conference grew many hotte, and disdainfull speeches and comparifons betweene Captaine Hawkins, and Captaine Parker, and also the Generall, as offended with Captaine Hawkins, used speeches to him very displeasing, which with much adoe was all in the ende pacified, and so went to Seruice, and after to dinner then a shoare, and aboard againe to Seruice, and supper, so that we passed the latter part of this day in much good fellowship, the more, because my skiffe came downe with another great boate laden with rice for our salt, whereof we tooke in part.

The 1. day of October in the morning we took in to make vp our full complement of rice 20. barrels for the 12. barrels of salt deliuered y<sup>e</sup> Portingal, Lewis Henriques before. About 7. a clocke in the morning y<sup>e</sup> Generall sent for me & M. Walker, touching certaine speeches, that Miles Euans

Spies Euans
departed from the company
promising to remaine with
the Portugals.

one of our Parchantes vsed at dinner abooye the Gallion in the absence of the Generall, which was set downe in Articles, and hee charged with them, whereof hee confessed a great part, which seemed so odious, and vnbonest, that M. Walker, M. Maddox, M. Parker, the Lieutenant, and J. concluded with the Generall that he might displace him, which thing Euans earnestly often desired, saying that he would go into England well ynough, as from hence in the Elizabeth with the Portingals, with whom in the afternoone he made freight, and carried his chest, a barre, & 2. parks abooyd, which J., M. Parker, and Lieutenant Hawkins searched by the Generalls order.

Hauing done these things, wee found that the Portingals had not brought vs rice for so much sale, as they promised the Generall, who sent Captaine Parker and others to searche for the same in the Elizabeth and the caruell, where was found good store which wee tooke part of, and payed them sale according to our bargaine. Further wee found searching for rice a boye Negro bigger then my boy John Primero, which J. changed him for: and by the Generalls order we tooke foure men Negroes, 2. for the Edward, and 2. for the Admirall, for which wee gaue the owners certaine carsey, and other things, as pease, biker, &c.

The 2. day about five in the morning wee set saile hauing little winde in the Captaine with the Master, and other of their companie of the Portingals came abooye mee complaying that the carsey by them receiued for the foure Negroes of the Generall was not sufficient for their payment, whereupon J. gaue them scarlet caps, and other things to their content, who finding themselves well pleased, departed away in the Gondall, and we hauing little winde, got downe thwart of the fishing bay, and there came to ancre about nine a clocke the same fozenoone.

About one a clocke J. sent my skiffe with the nette a fishing, which came abooye, and brought fish for supper plentie.

The 3. day about two a clocke in the morning wee set saile, and went hence Southwezt by West till two in the afternoone then being little winde: at 5. we ancred five leagues East South-east of the Southermost part of the lande in fifteene fathome, and there wee ride till eight a clocke at night, and then set saile with a stiff gale at Northeast, which sometime blew, and sometime was little winde, and so continued all night. This afternoone Captaine Hawkins, and M. Cotton came to supper with me, and before we could set them abooyd came a ternado, so that they taried all night abooyd with me.

The fourth day about eight a clocke in the fozenoone wee set Captaine Hawkins, and master Cotton abooyd the Admirall, and went Southwezt by West till two afternoone, then being little winde, we made small way, or none at all till the next day: in the afternoone weooke in our boate and skiffe, and at night shtred our companie because some were dead, and wee had taken in more men out of the Elizabeth.

The 5. day it was calme all day till sixe at night, wee lay to and fro dying, which J. can make no allowance of: at sixe at night wee went South by West with a small gale till one at midnight, then we mette the winde at South Southwezt, and went West by North, till thre a clocke following: then came a pretie gale at Northeast, with which we went South Southwezt till sixe in the morning.

The 6. day at 6. in the morning wee had a small gale at West, and went thre booyd tacked South a while there being little winde: we went Southwezt by South till 8. a clocke, from 8. we went South Southwezt, with a small gale all day, and all night.

The 7. day little winde or none but lay still among great shoales of foules, and skulls of fish all day and night by our spyngny Compass: in this place the sunne rose at East, and by South, and to the Southwards, and set West by South to the southwards.

The eight day little winde, or none: all day and night wee laye dying among fish and foule.

The 9. day we had in the fozenoone some raine, and a small gale at Northeast, which continued not long, but was calme till midnight, then we had a Ternado of winde, Northeast and raine: after that a small gale at East and southeast all night.

The tenth day wee went all the fozenoone South Southwezt larre booyd tacked, after the winde shtinking to the Southwezt by South, wee went South, till sixe afternoone: this afternoone the Generall in his long boate, accompanied with M. Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, Captaine Parker, M. Cotton, M. Hoode and others came abooyd to see mee: after dyinking departed a way againe: but when they were in the boate, their shype not comming roome for them, J. was faine to shooote off two minions to make them looke out. After sixe a clocke in the afternoone it continued calme till after midnight, then had wee a Ternado, and after a small gale for 3. houres, at East Northwezt, with which we went South Southwezt.

Winde East
Southwezt.

The 11. day it was calme at 6. it blew more, and

The 12. day we had suffer vs, sometime West

The 13. day we had
and sometime South by

The 14. day we had ether from the Gallion, and which we ate to supper: it was in manner calme, for fighting at dinner.

The 15. day it was calme blew a small gale, at Noone, to dinner, where we n gaine, and Captaine Haw

The 16. day it was calme we went West, and some calme all the rest of the morn and John Collins, byoug all out of the Stewards

The 17. day at ten of afternoone, then had we less South southeast, and som

The 18. day it was a southwezt.

The 19. day we went
we went but little all nig

The 20. day it was ca small gale, at East southe calme, we went little all

The 21. it was calme, afternoone, then it blew e Southwezt among till mi

The 22. it was calme
had an extreme Ternado the raine and a calme cou

The 23. day we had m before in a Ternado, fro red by, we sawe each other All this night we bare a g the South by West, at wards, so farre as wee roome.

The 24. day in the for ten of the clocke, After di next hand, all day and nig

The 25. day we went

The 26. day and night
West southwezt, but mig rall.

The 27. day we went sometime southwezt all d

The 28. day after dy was faine to singe thre them: they tolde vs that we thought not best, for heres close, so that wher next hand South southwe

The

The 11. day it was calme till 2. of the clocke afternoone, then it began to blowe a small gale. At 6. it blew more, and so it continued all night large.

The 12. day we had raine at noone: all the rest of the day, and night, we went as the wind did suffer vs, sometime West, sometime South-west, and sometime South.

The 13. day we had litle wind all day, and all night, but went our course South South-west, and sometime South by West.

The 14. day we had litle wind, or none. In the afternoone came Captaine Hawkins, and other from the Gallion, and Captaine Drake, who brought me a peece of a Porpoise with him, which we ate to supper: after supper they departed aboard the Francis: all the night following, it was in manner calme. This day was Iohn Roberts, and Iohn Hillarde whipped at the mast, for fighting at dinner.

The 15. day it was calme all day, and night, except two howres. In the morning it rained, & blew a small gale, at Notheast. This forenoone Captaine Drake sent for Master Walker, and me, to dinner, where we met Captaine Hawkins, and others. After dinner we returned aboard againe, and Captaine Hawkins went aboard the Admirall.

The 16. day it was calme till 7. at night, then we had a pretty gale at South-west, with which we went West, and sometime West north-west, till 2. of the clocke in the morning, then was it calme all the rest of the night. This day were Robert Parker, Marke Thoughts, Iohn Roberts, and Iohn Collins, brought to the capstone, and there whipped naked, for stealing certaine victuall out of the Storewards roome, the Sunday night before.

The 17. day at ten of the clocke, we had a pretty gale, at East north-east, which lasted till 4. afternoone, then had we lesse wind at Southeast, which continued all night: so we went sometime South-south-east, and sometime South-west by South, and South-west.

The 18. day it was a small gale all day, and all night, so that wee went our course South south-west.

The 19. day we went our course South south-west, till midnight, then being in manner calme, we went but litle all night.

The 20. day it was calme, till ten of the clocke afternoone, then we went South-west, with a small gale, at East south-east, with which we went South south-west till midnight, there being calme, we went litle all night.

The 21. it was calme, till ten afternoone, then a gale till 12. at noone, then calme againe, till 3. afternoone, then it blew a small gale at Southeast, with which we went South south-west, and South-west among till midnight, but then it was calme all the rest of the night.

The 22. it was calme in manner all day, and night, saving at 2. of the clocke after midnight, we had an extreme Tornado of wind, raine, thunder, and lightning. The wind lasted not an howre, but the raine and a calme continued till day.

The 23. day we had much raine, calme, and chicke weather, so that being separated the night before in a Tornado, from our Admirall we lost the sight of him many times: yet when it cleared up, we sawe each other, but hauing no winde, could not come neere together by two leagues. All this night we bare a good saile, and had a reasonable gale, with which wee went betwene the South by West, and the South-west. In the morning wee sawe the Admirall on Lee-wards, so farre as wee might descrye her sayles, with whome the Francis, and wee went roome.

The 24. day in the forenoone, we went roome to our Admirall, West south-west, and West, till ten of the clocke. After dinner we hailed her, and went from ten in the forenoone, south south-west next hand, all day and night following, with a franke gale.

The 25. day we went South-west next hand, all day, and night, with a franke gale.

The 26. day and night, we went with a pretty gale, betwene the South south-west, and the West south-west, but might haue beene neerer the winde, but for going roome with the Admirall.

The 27. day we went West south-west, and south-west by West among, with a pretty gale, and sometime south-west all day, and night.

The 28. day after dinner, our Admirall laye by the Lee, to stoppe a leake in his howes, and was faine to slinge thre men ouer board to doe it: in the meane tyme we came by, and hayled them: they tolde vs that if the winde scanted one point more, they meant to cast about, which we thought not best, for certaine causes. Whereupon we tooke in our spyt saile, and hayled aft our heere close, so that whereras all day before we went South-west, and litle better, now we went next hand South south-west, but alwaies better then South-west by South all night following.

This

This evening I set the Sunne at his going downe, hee set more then halfe a point to the South of West by South.

The next morning, I observed the Sunnes rising, which was to the Southwards, a little of East by South.

The 29. day after dinner, the Francis boate with her Master, and Master Dore, came aboard of vs, for a hoghead of yoke by the Generals order, which was delivered them. All this day and night, we went next hand Southwest by South.

The 30. daye wee went next hande Southsouth West all daye, and all night, with a pretie gale.

The 31. day, and last of October, we went all day, and all night, South Southwest, and Southwest by South among, sailing two watches, which were calme in the night, after the raine.

November.

The first day of November, in the forenoone, we tooke in our maine saile, to mend it: in the meane time, the Admirall came by by vs, and desiring me, with my Master, and Master Blackcoller, to come aboard to him, about certaine conference, hee sent his boate for vs, where by him was propounded, whether it were best for vs to stande on with the coast of Brasile, as we did, or els to stande about Starboord tacked to the Eastwards: whereupon divers of their Charts and reckonings were shewed by some it appeared, we were 115. leagues, by some 150. leagues, by some 140. leagues, and some a great deale further South of Brasile, next hand north-east of vs: but all agreed to be within 20. minutes of the line, some in the line, some to the north, some to the south of the line.

After many debatements, it was agreed by most consent to stande on for the coast of Brasile, except the wind changed, and there to doe, as weather should compell vs. In this consultation, we had speeches of courses, and places of meeting, if by misfortune we should be separated, wherein was no full order concluded, but that we should speake every night with the Admirall, if we conveniently might, and so to appoint our course from time to time, if wee lost companie, to scape 15. daies in River de Plate, and from thence to goe for the Straights, and there to ride, and water, and trimme our shippes (in no certaine place named.)

After dinner, we returned aboard our shippe, Captaine Drake, and his Master, to their barke, and went hence as neere as we could lie South Southwest, and Southwest by South all night to following, with a fresh gale.

The second day and night, we went next hand South by West, and sometime South Southwest among, with a franke gale.

The third day, we went South by West next hand, all day and all night.

The fourth day in like manner.

The fifth day wee went South by West all daye, and all night wee went South with a franke gale.

The sixth day we went South next hand all day, and night, and South by West among.

The seventh day we went South, and South by West all day and night, with a franke gale.

The eighth day we went South, and South by West all day, and night, with a franke gale.

The ninth day we went South next hand all day, and night, with a franke gale.

The 10. day we went South next hand, and South by West, all day and night, lesse wind.

The 11. day being Sunday, in the forenoone, Captaine Hawkins, and Captaine Drake, came aboard, and dined with me. After dinner came the General, Master Maddox, Master Parker, Master Bannister, Master Cotton, and divers others, to visite Master Walker, who sickened the Friday before of a Callentura. After they had drunke, and ate some iunkets, they all departed to their charges. We went all day, and all night, South, and South by West among.

The 12. in the afternoone, Master Maddox, Master Hall, Master Bannister, and other, came aboard to visite Master Walker. After a time of abode with him, they returned to the Gallion all againe, except Master Maddox, who remained with Master Walker here aboard.

This night Master Maddox, and I, behelde many constellations in the firmament, and sette downe certaine newe Starres, raised to the Southwards. All day and night, we went South, and South by East among.

The 13. at 6. in the morning, our mistle tie brake, and the yard fell downe, many men being neere the same, yet God be thanked, it hurt no man, but it brake in peeces, and was splited, and by againe betwixt noone.

This forenoone the General, M. Bannister, Captaine Parker, M. Tailboyes, and others, came aboard, & visited M. Walker, and went aboard the Gallion againe, & M. Maddox with them, leaving M. Bannister with vs, all afternoone that I boate brought M. Maddox againe: then departed Master

M. Walker
sicke of a Callentura.

Observation of the South Winds.

Master Bannister Master Walker
East, with a flat

The 14. day
clocke, Master
forenoone, came Master Maddox went South by C

The 15. day
tion to Master for Maddox, and went South by C

The 16. day
sides in by way
a large and frame and set the same Southwards.

The 17. day
lesse, whome C England, and a Captaine Drake had done before 19. degrees to hence South four

The 18. day
many other, came again. All this

The 19. day
degrees, and 33
when a fresh ga morning, are m
day, and night, Bannister by ou
to speeches bet

The 20. day
and coole we at

The 21. day
ny bles: all w sights, upon the gale, South West

The 22. day
wind shifted to a good gale: th

The 23. in c a small gale, all West among, ou

The 25. bet Maddox, came plac, and reche
we also persued
founde our selu
least our water
ter this detern West.

The 26. day
led vs, and cold

The 27. day

to the South
wards, a little of ore, came aboard

All this day and

gbe, with a petic

well, and South-
the raine.

to mende it: in the
and Master Black-os, where by him
rable, as we did, of their Charrs and e 150 leagues, by thead of vs: but all ome to the south of coast of Brasile, ex-consultation, we eparated, wherein mirall, if we com-

panie, to stave 15.
to ride, and water,

ter, to their barke,
thly all night follow-

south south west &

south with a franke

among.
franke gale.
nke gale.
le.

esse wind.
eaine Drake, came Master Parker, Ma-
o sickened the Fri-
ill departed to their

r, and other, came to the Gallion all
nd.
mament, and lette
ent south, and south

, many men being was splited, and by s, and others came lox with them, le-ain: when departed

Master

Master Bannister, Captaine Hawkins, and all, excepte Master Maddox, who still remained with Master Walker, who made his Will, this afternoone. We went all this day and night South by East, with a floure sheete, and a franke gale.

W. Walker with made.

The 14. day afternoone, Master Walker was let blood againe: afterward, about 9. of the clocke, Master Maddox, and Master Bannister, went aboard the Gallion againe. Also the same forenoone, came the Master, and others of the Francis, to see master Walker, and in the afternoone Master Maddox, and Master Bannister, came againe to visite him. All this day, and night, we went south by East, with a franke gale.

Wind East
north east.

The 15. day afternoone, came Master Maddox, and Master Bannister, aboard, and brought a potion to Master Walker. Afternoone the Generall, Captaine Hawkins, Captaine Parker, Master Maddox, and others, came aboard to visite Master Walker, &c. All this day, and night, we went south by East our course, with a floure sheete, all sailes drawing.

The 16. day we went our course south by East, till noone, and then by the Sunne finding our stur in by wards of 17. degrees, we shaped our course south, and so went till next morning, with a large and franke gale. This morning the Sunne rose East by south, and to the southwards, and set the same night betwene the south west by West, and the West south west, rather to the southwards.

The 17. day afternoone, we shot off three peeces of Ordnance, in honour of our Queenes Pa-lesie, whome God preserve, and grant her a long life, and prosperous raigne over the Realme of England, and all other of vs her subiects. This day after dinner came Master Maddox, and Captaine Drake, with others, to take their leave of Master Walker, as I, with all my companie had done before, supposing him past hope of recouerie. At 4. of the clocke, finding our selues in 19. degrees to the southwards of the line, and cleere of the Shoales, called by vs Powles, we went hence south south west all night following.

19. degrees of south by west
tube.

The 18. day, being Sunday, after dinner, the Generall, Master Maddox, Captaine Parker, & many other, came aboard, and visited Master Walker: which done, they ranke, & departed aboard againe. All this day, and night, we went our course south west by south, with a franke gale.

The 19. day, about noone, the Sunne was our Zenith, being declined to the southwards, 21. degrees, and 33. minuts, where we found the aire fresh, and temperate, as in England in June, when a fresh gale of winde doth blowe in the heate of the day, but the evening, the night, and the morning, are moze fresh, and colder here, then it is in England, either in June, or Julie. All this day, and night, we went our course south west by south, with a good gale: the forenoone Master Bannister brought Master Walker a potion, and Captaine Hawkins came with him: there passed speeches betwixt Master Bannister, and me.

Gold evening

The 20. day we went all day, and all night, south west by south our course, with a fresh gale, and coole weather, wind sometime north east, and sometime East north east.

The 21. day afternoone, we brought our best maine top saile to the part, and cut thole for many uses: a litle we began to make a newe maine coyle and bonnet, and fitted our stauions for our sights, vpon the vpper decks, as afe masse. This day and night, we went our course, with a franke gale, south west by south.

The 22. day we went our course, south west by south, till 8. of the clocke at night: then the wind shifted to the south south east, so that we could lie but south west by west, till 2. a night, with a good gale: the rest till day, was in a manner calme.

The 23. in the morning, it was raine, and calme, till 8. of the clocke, then we went West, with a small gale, till noone, and from noone, till the next morning, we went south west by south, & south west among our course.

Wind north east.

The 24. day we went our course all day, and night, south west, with a small gale.

The 25. being Sunday, in the morning, the Generall, and Captaine Parker, with Master Maddox, came aboard to visite Master Walker: which done, we perused our Masters and Pilots plots, and reckonings, and after I went aboard, and dined with the Generall, where after dinner, we also perused the Master, and Pilots charts and reckonings, aboard the Gallion, where by we founde our selues farre off the lande, and thought good to ege in with the shoare South west, least our water should faile vs, and then being becalmed farre of, might be for want distressed. After this determination, I returned aboard againe, and went all day, and night, our course South west.

The 26. day we went our course all day, and night, south west: this evening the Admirall hat- ted vs, and told vs he would put into the Riuer De Plate.

The 27. day we went our course all day, and night, south west next hand.

The

The 28. day little wind all the forenoone, at noone the wind shifted to the South, with raine, till 3. of the clocke afternoone: then it blew at East fourbeast, till 4. in the morning: at 4. it changed to the East north-east. All this time we went our course south-west, except sometime we had a lache to the westwards, after the Admirall.

The 29. day at noone, wee altered our course to the West south-west, and so haled in with the land all night, being cleere weather, and a faire night, but a stoue gale all night.

The 30. being S. Andrewes day, and the last of November, at 5. of the clocke in the morning, we had much wind at South, and South by West, and very colde weather, which spooke vs into a coarfe, and bonnet of each. At 4. of the clocke afternoone, the wind changed to the south-west, and ble we very much, and rained, being so colde, that we were glad to put on winter apparell. So we stood close by north-west, and west north-west all night.

The first of December, about the of the clocke in the morning, wee sawe lande on the coast of Brasile, in the height of 28. degrees, or thereabouts, which bare north-west, and was 8. leagues from vs very high land. We stood in with it, being much wind, and comming ueere, found diuers Islands: and seeing the Francis, would not come roome, nor runne a heade vs, we stood in with the shoare, and towined in 30. fathome or 32. three leagues off the lande, bearing from the West north-west to the north north-west of vs, and so stood in till it shoaled ouerly into seuen fathome, within a mile of a head lande: then perceauing a breach ouer our boate, and no hope of a good harbour in that place, we bare vp roome, and our Admirall after vs, whome we haled: then he tolde vs he would seeke harbour to Leeward, requiring me to goe a heade. Then seeing the barke was a sterne, I hoised out my skiffe, and sette her maile and saile, taking her ging, and Tobias, one of my Gallies mates with me, and ranne before the shippe, towinding in 15. fathom faire land, leauing a ledge of rockes a sea boord of vs: so the shippe, and the barke looked vp vnder a head land, and ankered in eight fathome, halfe a mile off the land, hauing brought the head land, which lieth in 27. degrees, 50. minutes, south southeast of them, and the North land northeast of them.

I stood on with the skiffe, hoping to find a better harbour to Leeward three leagues, but it proved not so: wherefoe I returned, and in my way aboard, I met with a rocke in the sea, where we landed, and killed good stoe of fowle, and after I went aboard the Admirall, where I presented him with fowle, and returned aboard to supper.

In this time our boates had bene a land, and found water, ballaste, and two decayed houses, as they told me, and our men aboard hooked fresh silbe. This night we rtd quietly.

The second being Sunday, in the morning, our Generall, Captaine Hawkins, Master Maddox, and others, came aboard to visite Master Walker: during his being here aboard, a sudden quaine came ouer his stomake, which made him scooze vp, and downe wards: then I sent for Master Parker, and with him came Master Bannister: after he began to be a little better, we all, except the Generall, which remained sicke in my cabin, went aboard the Gallion to dinner, which was appointed the night before. This forenoone our Gallies moored our shippes further into the Baye. We brought the South point southeast of vs, and the north land northeast, and so rtd.

After dinner, Captaine Parker, with my boate, and company, went a lande, and there placed pipes, and made three Wells. In the meane time, I accompanied with Master Hawkins, Master Maddox, Master Cotton, and diuers of mine owne people landed farther within the Baye, and found two riuers of fresh water, and a good fishing place. Presently I sent a boord for my net, with which at one draught, we drew 600. great spullets, and five great Balles, the like draught was neuer seene with so small a net: with which we went aboard, giuing to the Admirall 240. to the Francis 80. and the rest our companie spent, and gaue Almighty God thanks for his great goodness.

All this while was captaine Parker, and others, gone into the land, and fired the woods, which burne extremely: at length we all met, and supped aboard the Edward with mee, and after supper departed aboard to their charges. All this night we had faire weather.

The third day in the morning, our Carpenter calked without boord, and the Master, and others, took vp all the merchandize in the sterne heetes to the keele, and there put downe a boate loading of stone: and seeing the merchandize well conditioned, towed the same againe: in the meane time, my selfe, and others in our boates, trapped off the worms, and washed the rudder, and part of one side of our ship.

After dinner, the Master, Pilot, and I, went a shoare, and obserued the Soume at noone, which being past, with our net wee drew plenty of diuers sortes of silbes, and went from that Baye to the watering place: from thence, aboard the Generall, which had taken Phylcke, and gaue them

Great cold in the latitude of 28. degrees.

December.

The latitude
of 27. degrees, 50. minutes.

28. daye.

Wells made by our men.

We exceeding great draught of silbe.

The woods
fire on fire by our men.

them and the Francis
maged a foremast,
make.

The 4. day in the
and some to mend our water, to stiffe the lighted her steeple
ped and washed all

This afternoone
I went, andooke Dores: after we were himselfe sicke, whom from boate, and gaue

The 5. day being
shippe to starboord, med our caske, and o
some water, we stoek hindred our business

The 6. daye in the southwards the Ad
appointed me to goe into the Francis, an leagues to the Le
we ankered in the sea
the prize together, be so that about the of

After we had taken with them, before the to aboard the Gener the Gouvernour of the

We founde an
of England foure an
of Place, at a Cotme were no woe determin friers, the rest boye

The olde Frier was Dolte Father, he was Donasterie.

The subsance of
of Magellan, as they nero, where they had company. but came and foure scoze person ber, could not agree, a olde Frier bought this deuided themselves, a before at Riuer de Pla men to remaine abo spleas a way with m
day.

The 7. day in the
dox, certaine articles, ded altogether to the might be discovered b whose comming was which was not determ Then was determin
not to set vp forge, no them and the Francis shipe for their companies, and so went aboard, where our companie had romaged a foyemall, so that this afternoone we tooke in two boates moxe lading of stones afoze make.

The 4. day in the morning, I sent 30. men a land, some to cut hoopes, some to cut fire wood, and some to mend our maine saile: the rest aboard emptied our caske, whicht was filled with salt water, to stiffen the shippe, and with Dynance, and all our meanes trimmed her over to port, and lightned her Demme, that the Carpenter mighte the better come to the leake. After dinner we scraped and washed all her Starboord side, and tooke in a boates lading of stones.

This afternoone the Generall sent for me to goe a land with him in his Pinnelle, with whom I went, and tooke my netts with mee, and there tooke good soze of fishe, especially fishes called Dores: after we went to the warring place, and came aboard the sooner, because the Generall found himselfe sicke, whom I set aboard in my skiffe, and went aboard my selfe, and sent for our peopie from shoare, and gaue God thanks, and supped late.

The necessitie of us.

The 5. day betimes in the morning, we sent our saile menders a shoare, and trimmed our shippe to starboord, and washed the other side. In the meane while, our Cooper, and others, trimmed our caske, and others placed it in holde. Also we tooke in 2. boates lading moxe of stones, and some water, we stocked a heate anker, and bent a netwe cable, for it was very much winde, which hindred our buisines greatly.

The 6. daye in the morning, before 6. of the clocke, wee sawe a saile which went towards the fourthwards the Admirall not hauing knowledge thereof: I went aboard, and certified him, who appointed me to goe and bring her in, and to take Captaine Parker, and some of the Gallions men into the Francis, and the Admirals skiffe with vs: so wee gaue her chase, and tooke her five leagues to the Lewards of the place we rode in. Then not being able to fetch the roade againe, we ankered in the sea. I, intending to come away in the Pinnelle, and leaue the Francis, and the prize together, being readie to depart, the winde blew at South, a stout gale, and raine, so that about five of the clocke, we ankered in the roade, where our ships ride in.

the Galie comes and to. etc.

After we had taken them, and that Captaine Parker, and I, were aboard, we had much talke with them, before they came to the shippes, and being ankered there, the chiefe men were carried aboard the Generall, which was a Gentleman, named Don Francisco de Vera, Nephew to the Gouvernour of the Riuer De Plate, named Don John de Torre Vera.

We founde an Englishman, named Richard Carter, bozne in Limehouse, who had bene out of England foure and twentie yeeres, and hath bene nere twelue yeeres dwelling in the Riuer of Plate, at a Colome named Ascension, three hundred leagues up in the Riuer, whither they were no we determined to goe, and inhabit, hauing two women, and two young children, seven Friars, the rest boyes, and saylers, to the number of 21. persons.

Richard Carter an Englishman taken in the prize.

The olde Friar was had in great reuerence among the rest: in so much that they called him the Holie Father, he was abiding in no place, but as Wilcox, he went visiting from Monasterie to Monasterie.

The number of 21. in the prize.

The substance of all the speeches was, that the Spanish Fleet was before at the Streights of Magellan, as they thought, for they were departed five weekes past from the Riuer of Genero, where they had bene seuen moneths to refresh and winter. And that these were not of that companie, but came out of Spaine, the 26. of Maye, 1582. in a Barke of foure scoze tunne, and foure scoze persons of purpose, for the Riuer of Plate: the Friars beeing eightene in number, could not agree, and their Barke was a ground at Spirito santo, like to be lost: therefore the olde Friar bought this small barke of 46. tunne, at a port, named Spirito santo in Brasile, and so wended themselues, and coming from thence, lost companie at sea, but they thought they were before at Riuer de Plate. After his speeches, I went, and appointed (by the Generals order) men to remaine aboard the prize, with Captaine Parker, and bought one of the Poringals sayles away with mee, and came aboard, where I founde that our men had filled water all day.

The 7. day in the morning, the Generall sent for me, where he shewed me, and Master Madox, certaine articles, which the Friars, and mariners Spaniards were examined of, which ended altogether to the knowledge of the Spanish fletes intent, and of the meanes whereby wee mighte be discovered by way of Riuer de Plate, by land to Peru. In this time came the rest, after whose coming was debated, whether it were best to take the boate, and people with vs, or not, which was not determined, but referred till further examination.

Then was determined to passe by the streights notwithstanding the Spaniards were there, but not to set vp forge, nor to build pinnelle, but water, and so chozung.

Further

Further, it was determined, that Captaine Hawkins, Master Tailboys, Master Gessies, Master Hoode, Master Blackcoller, and two leaders of each shippe, should romage the prize: about the appointment of whome, &c. we vnkinde, and hot speeches, betweene the Generall, and Master Parker, against me, concerning authoritie, and government, and also Captaine Hawkins finding himselfe injured, was plaite with them both: so that we were beyond the termes of Commissioners, and fell to plaine bawling, and bugging: the circumstances I omit, as too long, and vniuse to be written. Time being thus spent, the Generall called for wine, and ended all contentions, and so we dined there with him.

After dinner they searched the barke, and found in her diuers trifles, which are noted in a paper by themselves. I went a fishing, and came aboard, from whence the Generall fetched me, and went aboard to the old Frier in the barke: after we had talked with him, we came aboard, and there supped in the Edward with me, the Generall, M. Maddox, Captaine Parker, and Master Hall: we debated of diuers causes before, and after supper, and so departed, with promise to dine with the Generall the next day.

This day also weooke by all the rest of our Ordnance, and placed them, and tooke in a boate lading of stones, and filled water all day.

The 8. day afoze noone, Master Walker, and I, went aboard the Admiral to dinner, where was determined to discharge the Spanish barke, named our Ladie of pitie, and all the men excepte Richard Carter, the Englishman, and Iohn Pynro, a Portingall, which dwelled at Riuier de Plac.

After dinner, the Generall appointed me, and Captaine Hawkins, to see them all set aboard their ship, and to receaue from them certaine necessaries, which willingly they imparted with vs, and to leaue them satisfied. Which done, I returned aboard, and hauing deuised the necessaries to each ship his part, we entered into consultation, where Master Walker propounded certaine questions to the Generall of vnkindnes, by me conceaued against him, which moued him to some cholerike termes with me, which I answered: and in the ende, all matters almost being agreed betweene vs, then began he to question with Captaine Hawkins, which contention was tedious, and not fully ended before supper, & began againe after supper: so that about 10. of the clocke after supper, we came aboard.

In this morning before my going forth, we trimmed our shippe ouer to port, and came to our leakes, and not being able to stop the same without boord, we stopped the same within boord, and after our men filled all our water caskes, laded, and placed all our Ordnance, and made all things ready to goe hence.

The 9. day being Sunday, in the morning, I sent master Shawe, and master Gessies, aboard the Admirall, to peruse the Spaniards letters, wherein they found the estate of the Fleet, which was in the Streights of Magellane, as by the note thereof appeareth.

About ten of the clocke, the Generall, master Maddox, Captaine Hawkins, and Captaine Parker, came aboard of me, the Generall began to reppoue my Quarter master, for grudging of victuall for the Francis, which was answered, and he well satisfied. Then sent I for the old Frier, and Don Francisco, who all dined with me, and after dinner, the Spaniards hauing receaued the Canoto which was sunke a land, and lones to ballast them, with my boate carried them, and all other things to their liking, and content, they departed from mee: the Generall also departed, and his companie, who being gone, I deuised the sugar, and ginger among my people, which the Spaniards gaue vs, and after spent the day in ordinarie busines.

The 10. day in the morning, our skiffe went a fishing, whereof we eate as much to supper, as serued the companie, the rest we saued for stowe, and to proue if they would take salt or not. In the afternoone our skiffe went againe to fish, and tooke good stowe: the rest of our people tooke their ease, some aboard, and some on boare.

The 11. day, betimes in the morning, our skiffe went againe to fish, & tooke great plenty. About 7. of the clocke, I went a land, taking with me the M. & others of our best men, to the number of 22. persons, & traueled to y place, where our people before had found many great fars of earth, & decayed habitations of the Indians, & trees being dead, and withered of sweete wood. From that place, we saw ouer the tops of a narrow wood, a faire plaine, which at the request of the M. and the rest, I went with them to see. We passed through a thicke & perillous wood, before we came to the supposed plaine: & when we came to it, we found the lowest part thereof higher then any of our heads, and so mossie vnder foote, that we slipped to the knees many steps, which so wearied vs, that for my part, I was very sicke, and so halted aboard, leauing the Master with 15. men, which cut a tree of sweete wood, and brought many peeces thereof aboard.

About 3. afternoone, M. Walker, and many of our men being a shoure, the winde came late,

The Spanish
barke the Admirall
set.

Spaniards
vnder leakes.

Things found in the Island.

and we layd out a warpe with a hende,

The 12. day about ledge of rocks, & the per and all brake, so may the same: after v. hour, and went rooming to helpe out our boate the sooner, and all, and put out a About 6. a clocke at about, 'all night it w

The 13. day about which gale we stood of the land a hebd, al but is all sandy hille dom water and with ans to giue warning: good off, South east South by west all ne

The 14. day we w morning about 7. lea west, and the wind th night for a while, the South by west all ne

This day at 8. a it was in maner calk

The 15. day in the whole default I know then we hapled her, that the wind was boaze, and stood off a boord tacked, and fou

The 16. day being ning, at 8. a clocke in along south by west a clocke, the wind last which bare west sou so we went all night The Sunne set this morning East by sou

The 17. day we lay betweene the S

The 18. day afoze ded them, and rised clocke at night it be and South southw

The 19. day we

The 20. day about ker the Master, the neral; vpon our conning byned, the Seruing two demands,

The effect of the 1. Whether it was considering the for termination was ch necessary businesse

2. Demand was and we layd out a warpe to the North-east, and began to wunde a hebd: after we layd out another warpe with a bende, and wound to the plat, and so ridde by it one anker all night.

The 12. day about 5. a clocke in the morning, we set sayle, and as we ranne out betwene the ledge of rocks, & the mayne in 8. fadom water, as we were cutting our anker, the cartrope, Roper and all broke, so that we were glad to let slip all the cable, and cast off our boate, and kiffe away the same: after we had stood out a good way, the Admirall was vnder sayle, then call we about, and went toome with the Admirall which weaned vs, who sent in his pinnell, and the Francis to helpe out our boate, so by the helpe of the Admirals pinnell, with her sayle, we had our boate the sooner, and about 12. a clocke at noone taken in the awker, cable, our long boate, kiffe, and all, and put out all our sayles bearing after the Admirall, which went hence South by east. About 6. a clocke at night being thicke weather we lost sight of the land, being 4. leagues off: there about, all night it was but litle winde, yet went we our course South by west.

The 13. day about 7. a foxnoone the wind blew at South south-east, & was very fogge, with which gale we stood in larboord tacked west, till 10. a clock the same foxnoone: then had we sight of the land a hebd, all along (so it waxed cleere weather) it theweth a farre off, like white cleeres, but is all sandy hilles, and bays along the sea side: at one a clocke afternoone we were in 16. fadom water and within halfe a league of the shoare, where we saw seuerall fires made by the Indians to giue warning to the other people within the land as we supposed: then we cast about, and stood off, South-east by east till midnichte, that the wind came large: then went wee our course, South by west till next morning.

The 14. day we went our course South by west hauing sight of the land at 6. a clocke in the morning about 7. leagues off, and so went till 6. at night that we saw lande againe, 7. leagues off west, and the wind shifted to the South: then we cast about and stood off East south-east at 7. at night for a while, then came by the wind at North-west and blew a good.

This day at 8. a clocke at night we had a pretty gale and went our course with it till 12. after, it was in maner calme all night.

The 15. day in the morning, the Admirall was a hebd, as farre as we could almost see her, by whose default I know not, & being litle wind we could not get to her, till 4. a clocke afternoone, then we hapled her, and stood in betwene the South south-west, and the south-west till 6. at night that the wind was variable, and soule weather: then we cast about, and sounded in 23. fadom soft oaze, and stood off a while North-east: and presently cast about againe, and went south by east larboord tacked, and south south-east among all night: at 4. in the morning 15. fadom same.

The 16. day being Sunday we saw the land within 3. leagues of vs at 6. a clocke in the morning, at 8. a clocke we cast about and went North-east till 11. the same foxnoone, then we stood along south by west till within 3. or 4. leagues of the shoare, and in 12. fadom water, land about 2. a clocke, the wind larged, so we went south by east: at 6. a clocke we were 6. leagues off the lande which bare west south-west of vs, and was in the 23. fadom, after the wind came by at North-east: so we went all night South with our sheats hapled of: a cleere night of starrs but cold weather. The Sunne set this night at south-west by west, and to the Northwards a litle, and rose the next morning East by south, and to the Southwards.

The 17. day we went our course South till 11. a clocke afternoone: then the wind scanting we lay betwene the South-east, and the East south-east, till the next day morning with litle winde.

The 18. day foxnoone, being calme yet a boylting sea, we tooke in all our sayles, and mended them, and stued newe mayne tides, and repaired many decayes, as a Ramme head &c. at 7. a clocke at night it began to blowe at south-east, & so we lay by larboord tacked, south-west by south, and South south-west all night with a good gale.

The 19. day we stood in next hand south-west all day and night.

The 20. day about 10. a clocke afternoone, we went about the Admirall: viz. Walter Malaker the Master, the Pilot, the two Marchants, and my selfe, being directed so to do by the General: vpon our comming the General was going to dinner where we also dined with him hauing dined, the General called by his Assistants into his cabben, and there deliuered to vs in writing two demands, to bee by vs considered vpon, and by to haue our opinions therein.

The effect of the demands were these.

1. Whether it was best for vs to aduencure our selues to passe the Streights of Magellan or not, considering the force of the enemy, which we knew to be there before vs: and also that our determination was there to set by our pinnell, make vpon hoops, carrene our ships, and do all our necessary buisnesses for the full accomplishment of our voyage.

2. Demand was, if that course were not thought best, which way were meetest for vs to take.

To the first we were of opinion, that it were good to heare the opinions of Captaine Hawkins, Captaine Drake, & the 2. pilots, which had passed the streights, and knew the harbors, and likeliest places to be fortified, & inhabited or not, who were called, and the 3. Masters with them: their opinions were as divers as their names, & almost differed, as befoze this time they were wont usually to do: only they all agreed in this one point, & it was impossible for vs to passe the streights without seeing, and incountring with the ships although the fortification of the lande did not annoy vs, which being long and thoroughly debated, and their opinions with the 3. Masters demanded, which accorded not scant any one with other, they were dismissed.

Then the General received the opinions of vs his Assistants: beginning with the pongest in authority first, which when he had harde them all over, & being set downe in writing vnder our hands, he tooke deliberation till after supper to giue his determination.

When we had all supped then he sent for vs downe into his cabden and deliuered in writing his determination, which was) to victuall, and furnish our selues on this coast befoze we proceeded any further, and named 3. places Riuer de Plate, or S. Vincent to be chosen.

Richard Carter the English man taken in the ylle, carried along with them.

For the better deciphering of Riuer de Plate, and the commoditis thereof, was called befoze vs Richard Carter, which both dwel there, who could not assure vs of any wine except we could stay 4. moneths for it, but other victuals plenty: the riuer shoale & dangerous, & rood 7. leagues from any towne, or place of commoditie: which considered with the trecherie that might from thence be led, into the Streights by sea, & into Peru by land, we all concluded to go to S. Vincent, which place is inhabited with Portugals, and where in honett sort we might conueniently haue all our buisness done.

They returned in the latitude of 33.

With this resolution we tooke our leaues about 8. a clocke at night, & being come aboard presently bare vp, & went roome, hauing all the day befoze beate by the winde larboord tacked East southeast till at night after it was a litle wunde all night, we went North next hande.

The 21. day after scrutice, I declared vnto my company, the intent of our returne to the Port of S. Vincent, wherewith they were wel satisfied being befoze doubtfull that we should not proceede, but returne without performance of our voyage. It continued calme all day till 6. at night, then we went Northwest by west, till 8. at night: and then we cast abbut, and stood off East southeast, and East by South all night with a good gale.

John Drake in the Francis went to the Riuer of Plate wherewith his ship was cast away, but the men gatt to land, and lived 15. moneths among the Sauiages.

The 22. day in the morning, we missed the Francis, which by all presumption went roome in the beginning of the night.

About sixe afozenoone we cast about, and stood in Northwest, till sixe a clocke at night: then we went about, and stood of East by South, and East Southeast among all night, till foure a clocke next morning.

The 23. day at foure a clocke in the morning, we cast about, and stood in West north west, and West by north, till twelue at noon: Then we stood about larboord tacked a while, and presently the winde came large, so we went North by east, & North north east all day & night following.

The 24. day we went North north east, and North by east, till one a clocke after midnigh: then we cast about, and stood of East southeast, and Southeast by east, all the rest of the night.

The 25. day being Christmas day, it was litle winde in the forenoone till ten a clocke, then it blew a fresh gale, with which we went our course North north east: in the afternoon it was lesse winde: yet went we our course North by east, and North north east and North and North by west till midnigh. Then being in shoaled water, we cast about, and lay South southeast, and Southeast by south an houre, & seeing our Admiral came not after vs, we cast about back againe & presently met him, so we went both together next hand South southeast, at the rest of the night.

Infinite number of fishes.

This afternoon we saw the skimme of fishes so thicke in the sea, that it seemed a water troubled with trampling of hoyses, which was thicke, and slimy, for we had taken vp some of it.

The 26. day at 7. afozenoone we cast about, and stood in North by west, and North north west: about 11. at noone we saw the Land which lay North west of vs 4. leagues, at one a clocke we cast about, and stood of Southeast with a South gale all night.

The 27. day we stood off into the sea between the Southeast, and the East by North all day and night with a foule gale of wind at North.

The 28. day it was calme all the forenoone till 12. a clocke then we went West north west: during this calme we tooke in our mayne Sayle and toppe sayles, and mended them all the day and night following much winde.

The 29. day we went West north west with a soure gale, till 6. a clocke at night: then it thundred, lightned and rained, the winde almost calme and drifting, wherewith we went all night, betweene the East, and the North north east.

The

The 30. day being Sunday we went out our skiff: the bank of the Riuer was by our selues of the lande 4. of the clocke we cooled till 8. at night, the sea much fogge.

The 31. day of the month then seeing the land 3.

The first day of January next hand North north east, Carpieter wrought by

The 3. day we went we stood off East south

The 4. day at 4. a clocke in sight of land about and stood of South

This forenoone we

The 5. day at 9. a clocke southeast by east north

The 6. day after midnigh

The 7. day we went

The 8. day we went North west, and betw

The 9. day after we

The 10. day we went

The 11. day we went

The 12. day we went

The 13. day we went

About 3. a clocke then

The 14. day in the

The 15. day we went

The 16. day hauing

The 17. day we went

The 18. day we went

The 19. day we went

The 30. day being Sunday, after Sermon, dinner, and obseruation of the Sunne at noone, we hopped out our skiffe the Waker, P. Walker, and I went a boord the Admirall where wee had a banquet of sweete meates: after that ended, the General and I fell into familiar conference several by our selues of the State of our voyage, & debated long of the same in good sort: then being neere 4. of the clocke we tooke our leaues, & came aboard, & tooke in our skiffe, and went North north-west till 8. at night, then we cast about, and went southeast, and southeast by south at night smooth sea, much fogge.

The 31. & last of Decerber at 6. afojnoon we cast about, & stood in northeast till 5. afternoone: then seeing the land 3. leagues off vs, we cast about, & stood off east southeast at night w hiele wind.

The first day of January, we had litle wind all day and night, but we layd our course withall January. next hand North north-east.

The 2. day our fojertoppmast being perished, we tooke it downe, & the cap of y<sup>e</sup> Mast, which the Carpenter wrought upon a day, & night: we w<sup>e</sup>l our course next hand, north north-east litle wind.

The 3. day we went our course till 11. a clocke at night North by east, then the wind scanted, & we stood off East southeast till 4. next morning.

The 4. day at 4. a clocke afojnoon we went North next hand, till 5. a clocke at night, hauing sunne in sight of land all day, then being in 15. fadom water within 2. mile of the shoare, we cast about and stood of South southeast, and Southeast all night, with a reasonable gale.

This afojnoon we set up our fojertoppmast againe, being wel mended.

The 5. day at 9. a clocke afojnoon, we cast about: whereas all the morning befoze we went Southeast by east now we went North till 5. afternoone: then being in sight of land, 3. leagues hope of the place were we were the day befoze at that time we cast about, and went Southeast all night with a stout gale of wind. This afternoone our mainetoppstaire split from the boltropes, and was greatly cojue wich we got downe, and began to mende.

The 6. day after dinner we gatt by our mainetoppstaire againe, and went all day and night, betweene the southeast, and the East by south with much winde.

The 7. day we went betweene the east by south, & the east all the day & night with a stout gale.

The 8. day we went next hand, East till 5. a clocke afternoone, then we cast about, and stood in North-west, and betweene that and the West all night.

The 9. day after we had stricken and mended our mainesayle we went north by east, litle wind for a while, but afternoone it blew a stout gale: so we went our course all day, and night next hand North north-east.

The 10. day we went all day and night our course North north-east with a stout gale of wind.

The 11. day we went our course North, and North by east all day, and night with a stout gale of winde.

The 12. day we went betweene the north, and the North-west till 12. at midnichte: then we being neere the land cast about, and stood of East north-east till 4. in the morning.

The 13. day we went about after 4. a clocke in the morning, and stood in west hauing sight of the lande West by north till one a clocke afternoone: then being within 4. leagues of the shoare: where we saw a white pinnacle like a watch towe, which bare West north-west of vs: we cast about and stood off east, till 10. a clocke at night litle winde.

About 3. a clock this afternoone I hopped out my skiffe and sent her with the Waker, & Pilot aboard the Admirall, to confere with them there, who shewing them that I was not well at ease, caused the General, P. Maddox, and Captaine Parker, to come aboard and visite me, where they supped: & hauing had some conference with him about our dealings at S. Vincenc &c. he departed and the skiffe brought the Waker & Pilot aboard againe who supped aboard the Gallion.

At 10. a clocke the winde came large and we went all night betweene the North-east by east, and the North-east to goe cleare of the land we saw our night.

The 14. day in the morning it was haplie and thicke weather, so we sawe not the land till 9. a clocke in the fojnoon, vntill which time we halled in West north-west: but then seeing lande beare North north-west of vs we stood hence east north-east til 7. a clocke at night: then our Admirall would needs come to anker upon the hed land, but I thought it not best and lay close by all night, so that at 6. a clocke in the morning we were 4. myles to wyndward of her.

The 15. day we piped off and on in the entrance of the bay, and got litle or nothing all day and night, we kept sight of our Admirall which ridde at anker till 12. at noone: then set sayle, and lay close by the wind as we did.

The 16. day hauing turned to winde wards all night befoze, we found our skies in the morning a league to leeward of the place, where we were overnight by the listings of the winds to our disadvantage, this forenoone about tenne a clocke we meet a change of waters, which runne our South southeast into the sea which wee supposed to be some streetch which came out of the Bay, and lyeth along the coast North north-east and South-south-west with a great difference both of colour and sypling.

This afternoon we rode in North north-east, into eight sadomes and a halfe on the West side of the Bay, and about 4. a clocke we stood out againe South southeast, in hope to see our Admirall, whose sight we lost the night before, but seeing we went so fast to leeward we ankred at 7. a clocke under a small Island, a myle off Westour ship caped East north-east, & North-east most part of the night, which we iudge was some streame which came by way, for it was litle wind,

The 17. day about 7. a clocke the Master, master Blacoller, and I went in our skiffe and rowed, and sounded round about the Ile, and found 16. sadomes within a stones cast hard aboyde the shoare, and faire grounds: after we landed, and found nothing but woods and bushes, and strange wyemes: we saw a saulce, and one other small birde, and therefore named it Faulcon Ile: it is ample about, with a rocke on the East side, which lyeth close to it, and it is in sight without danger, after we came aboord, and byned, at two a clocke, we set saile with winde Southeast, & ranne in North-east a while till the winde shewed: then we went in North north-east, till we were in 7. sadome and a halfe of water, within a league of the shoare: then we cast about, and stood off south southeast all night till 6. a clocke next morning.

The 18. day at 6. a clocke a forenoone we cast about and stood in North by east, North north-east, and sometime North-east, being sometime a gale, sometime calme: about thre a clocke afoze-day we saw our Admirall againe, and kept her company till day.

The 19. day being within a league of the Citron Ile about 8. a clocke a forenoone we went aboyde the Generall viz. M. Walker, the Master, the Pilot, and my selfe rejoycing of our good meeting, who tolde me of their sull roade, where they lost an anker, a cable and a hatscrane how the day before their pinuelle was a shoare on the same Island and found some water there, whither now they had lene their boate, and pinuelle for more water, where I knowe they had small store.

I also taking captaine Parker, the Master, and M. Wilkes with me went a shoare, & traueled to the top of the Ile, which is wooded, & high gras, but euill water, & litle on it, but yong fowle plenty, & dangerous coming to them. By this time I hauing ser the Isles, & had lands about in sight with a compass, came a small gale, at South southeast, then our Admirall shot off a peece for the boate & hence he went, & I dyed aboyde with him: & came after aboyde, and went in North north-east and North-east till morning, at which time we were within a league of the Ile, entering before S. Vincens, but knew not how much water was vpon the barre to go ouer.

The 20. day in the morning being calme, the Generalls pinuelle came into the shoare, with intent to sound the entrance, but seeing 3. Canowes with each at the least 20. men, wherof the greater part were naked Indians which tolde, the rest Portugals, they returned aboyde againe: the Canowes came with a flage of cruce win calling of our ship, & we shewed them the like, asking what we weare & of what nation, at length one Portugall went aboyde the Admirall, by whom the General sent a letter to the Governour craving a Pilot to bring in our ship of curtelie and to haue traffike. About noone hauing the wind at South we bare in North-west, & so to the North-east as the chanel trended: but coming into 7. sadome water we ankred, until our boates had sounded the barre. During which time I went aboord the Admirall to conferre w him about our proceedings.

After I had stayed a while aboyd the Admirall the General came aboyd with me, where wee published vnto all my company very good rules for their behauior & profit, to their great satisfaction: after he went downe into my cabbin, where with all his assistants he conferred of diuers particulars of our voyage: by which time the boate being returned from sounding, we departed, & set saile following our skiffes, and with our ships got within the barre into 7. sadome, then being becalmed ankred againe before a sandy bay, wherein standes a Castle and houses: wee ryd within musket shot of it and ankred about 4. a clocke afternoon.

Then went I forwarde with my skiffe vntill a farther point, sounding along: before my returne, the General had sent for me to supper, & either I went: but being ready to sit downe there came out to vs a Canow wherein were 10. Indians and 11. christians, the one an auncient Senoa the other a Portugall, who came aboord, & there receiued a small banker, declaring their committing was to vnderstand our intents and what we sought, who being satisfied departed with a farewell of thre great peeces from each ship.

Then went we to supper, and after I got me aboord being weary, but before I went to bedde came diuers complaints vnto me of the euill speeches & parties used by Thomas Russell, which I partly

A small Island
which our men called Faulcon Ile.

Citron Ile.

Their arrival at S. Vincens.

3. Canowes of Portugals and Indians.

11. Canowes with 10. Indians and 11. christians wherof
one was an old Genoaite.

partly examined before noon, I committed him carefull watch with ch.

The 21. day being fresh Ast on the North clocke after seruiue, I sing: and also after din-

After dinner I com-
them, but concluded th Also in the presence the Masters mate, was written by M. Walker.

About thre a clocke a Fleming named Pa-
the Generall, and wit-questes a banker was r-pets, and I in my Sha mile by the river: ad-and after vs came Cato attende on the Gen-made our felues merry.

The 22. day being ding of some token an-
to send him thre par-the old Genoaite, S-thre yards of fine bla-rals Skiffe, about nin-

Also this forenoone sed them to goe tow-
found the place both v-mination. This day I

About two a clocke at the Towne becaul stay until there had be-yet, but shortly woul-

The rest of this fo-for the Towne becaul soule speeches betwe-leasure I revealed br-

Then went we to the Generall a stranles, great pins, and b-wards Saint Vincens turned aboyde againe.

The 23. day our Sa shoare to be mend-them aland, to take othe Generall with al-appointed out the fit-for our coopers to tri-

After the well pernerall, M. Parker, M-had some priuate con-
rest of this day in pu-

The 24. day at fo-whome I sent my S-which is married be-I sent word to the C-partly examined before Master Walker, the Master, and M. Jeffries, and finding cause of correction, I committed him to the bilboes, untill further leisure to examine the cause: so placing a carefull watch wth charge to haue care of the same, we passed 8 night very wel, God be prayd.

The 21. day betimes in the morning, I went aland in the skiffe, and tooke good plentie of fresh fish on the North side: for we moored on the South side and found litle of none. At nine a clocke after seruice, I sent to bury Robert Resc, one of the Masters mates, which died this morning: and also after dinner died Griffyn who was there buried.

After dinner I conferred with the Master and Pilot about the choyse of another Mate for them, but concluded that father Kyd should be assistant in the watch, but no Masters made moze.

Also in the presence of the Master, M. Walker, the Pilot, M. Jeffries, M. Shawe, and Tobias the Masters mate, was Thomas Russell examined, and his accusers, which examinations were written by M. Walker, and rest to be further considered of hereafter.

About thye a clocke after noone, came a Canoa, with the old Genouoys, named Ioseph Dory, a Fleming named Paul Badeues, and Steuen Repose a Hoizingale, and brought a letter from the Generall, and withall answer of feare and doubt of vs, &c. After many speches and requests a banket was made them, and the Generall in his Pinnetle with his musike, and trumpets, and I in my Skiffe with trumpets, drum and fife, and taboz, and pipe, accompanied them a mile by the riuer: at going off, saluted them with a voyle of thye great peeces out of eche ship: and after vs came Captaine Parker with the Admirals long boate, and certaine shot in the same, to attende on the Generall. So we returned aboyde the Edwarde, and then supped together, and made our selues merry, and after supper they departed.

The 22. day betimes in the morning, I went aboyde the Admirall to conferre abo<sup>t</sup> the sending of some token and present to the Gouverour, which was by all the Assistants determined to send him thye yards of fine skarlet, and thye yards of fine murrie cloth, and to Ioseph Dory the old Genouoys, Steuen Repose the Hoizingale, & to Paul Badeues the Fleming, eche of them thye yards of fine blacke cloth, which our marchants went by to Santos withall, in the Admirals Skiffe, about nine a clocke afoyenoone.

Also this foynoon we being minded to goe by higher with our stypes into harbor, I aduised them to goe vnto the place, and found the road befoze we went by, which we did, where were found the place both vnconuenient, and the road woyle, and so we returned and left the first determination. This day we tooke downe our maine tops, and top make, and all the stayes.

About two a clocke afternoone our marchants returned with their presents, not hauing bene at the Towne because Steuen Repose by the way met them on the Riuer, and aduised them to stay vntill there had bene woyle sent to the Gouverour, who was vnwilling to speake with them yet, but shortly would send their answer.

The rest of this foynoon, we spent in communication about the appointing of a Purser, for the Edward. Also we signed an assent for comming to this place: about which thing grewe foule speches betweene the Generall, and his Lieutenant after the olde custome. After being at leasure I reuealed vnto him Russels offences.

Then went we to supper, and being at supper, certaine Indians came aboyde, and brought the Generall a strange Crowe, and Potatos, and Sugar canes, to whom he gaue looking glasses, great pins, and bisket, and so we departed being late. Also this afternoone I ranne ouer towards Saint Vincent, and founded the Bay a league ourt, and found the chanel and flats and returned aboyde againe within two houres, hauing a good gale of winde.

The 23. day our Skiffe went a shoare to fish, and tooke prettie stoze: we sent our mayne top a shoare to be mended, and many of our men to wash their clothes: also I went my selfe with them aland, to take order, that no man should any wayes offend the Indians. In the meane time the Generall with all the rest of the chiefest Gentlemen, came a shoare, and viewed the place, and appointed out the fittest roome, to set vp our smithes foize, and ouens to bake our bisket, & place for our coopers to trim our water cask.

After the well perusing of the place, and some familiar conference with the Indians, the Generall, M. Parker, M. Walker and I came aboyde, and dined in the Edward: after dinner we had some priuate conference, and about one a clocke they went aboyde the Gallion: I spent the rest of this day in putting many things in order.

The 24. day at foure a clocke befoze day, we heard one call for a boate on the North Shoare, to whome I sent my Skiffe, who brought aboyde one named Iohn Whitehall an English man, which is married here in this place, and with him two of his Indians: whom I inuertained vntill I sent woyle to the Generall to prepare himselfe to receiue him, in which time he and I talked of

John Whitehall an English man, which is married here in this place, and with him two of his Indians: whom I inuertained vntill I sent woyle to the Generall to prepare himselfe to receiue him, in which time he and I talked of

The Indians presents.

The chanel of S. Vincent founded.

John Whitehall.

many severall particulars.

Good counsell
by the foresaid Englishman
given to our men.

About fixe a clocke I conceived him aboyde the Admirall: there he discovered unto vs, what had bene done at the Towne, as fortification, and sending their wives away, &c. advising vs to receive no more delays, but to come by presently befoze the Towne with our shippes.

About ten a clocke, came a canoa, and brought downe Ioseph Dory, and Steven Repose, who tolde vs that on Saturd day the Governour would meete our General, and take with him, praying vs in the meane time to vse our ordinarie busines of cooperage, carpenters worke, fishing water, fishing, and washing, &c. but not to set voye, nor ouer, vncill speere had with our Governour. After this answer we dined together aboyde the Gallion: After dinner we left the Spelengers sitting in the cabbin, and went vpon the pooy, where the Generall demaunded the aduise of his assistants, whether it were not best to stay these men while we had them or not, or whether it were best to goe by with our ships to the Towne or no.

Whereunto ech man paused to make answer: wherefoze I deliuered my opinion, which was, that we were forbidden to vse violence to any nation for trade.

The opinion
of London some time in Holland
for traffike.

Secondly, I considered that diuers of our nation worshipfull marchants, and notable aduenturers in this voyage, had set out the Spinion hieer, and begun a trade, which with our forcible dealing might be spoiled, and our nation brought in hatred.

Lastly, that with force we were not like to attaine to so much commoditie, as we were in possibility to haue with courtesie.

Whereupon all was concluded, and they suffered to passe away: to whome the Generall gave the three cloke clothes, to Ioseph Dory, to Paul Baudeuse, and to Steven Repose, to ech of them one, which were befoze cut out for them: and so friendly we and they departed about two a clocke afternoone: which done, I went aboyde, and prepared for the enterainment of certaine of the Gallions men, which determined to sup with me.

Three Span with ships discouered.

About foure a clocke this afternoone we sawe three sayle of ships come bearing in about the point, which aldoone as they sawe vs, ankred vpon the barre, and put their selues in readines, sending from one ship to another with their boats, and blowing off their ordinance, meaning to take vs: and we befoze night, getting our men and other necessaries from the shoare which were busie aland, armed our ships to defend our selues. Then went I aboyd y Admirall to know what he meant to doe: who determined to see his watch in warlike sort, and so hee did, for after the trumpets and drumme had sounded he shot off a great peece, as they befoze had done: And presently the Viceadmirall shot at me, whome I answered with another, and so ceased. We then set vp our mayne top, and top made rigged befoze 11. clocke the same night: In the meane while they let slip their ankres and cables, and came vntoing and towing with their boats in vpon vs meaning to haue boarded vs: and being nere our Admirall he hailed them, who refused to tell of whence they were, thinking by spending of time to get aboyde of him, to whome I called still to beware, and to shoote at them in time. At length he let sice at them, yet was glad to let an anker and cable slip to auoyde them: then came they all vntoing downe thwart my hawse, so that I was faine to let slip an anker and cable to stum the Gallion: all this while the ordinance & small shot pyled of all parts, and I was faine to send the Gallion my Skiffe with a hawser to ride by, for the was loose, and with the flood draue vp within me. Then was the Viceadmirall on my board the who was well payde befoze, yet I left not gawling of him, till I thought our powder spent in vaine to shoote at him, he was so toyme and broken downe by vs. About foure a clocke it rained so fast, that we could scant discern one the other the Spone being gone downe, yet ryd the Admirall, and the Rearadmirall, but a litle ahead of vs: during which time we paused, and made ready all our munition.

The fight be twixt the En glish, & Spa nish ships at
S. Vincent.

The Spanish
Viceadmirall
sunke by the English.

This Creeke
to the Sea nearall, that there were
600. and abde in the three Spanish ships

The 25. day, by day light, we sawe the Viceadmirall sunke hard by vs, so that his yards which were hopped acrosse, and his tops, and that ouer head was aboue water: most of their men were gotten away in their boats, sauing about fourtie persons which hung in the spowds, and tops, whom I aduised our Generall to send for away, and had made ready, and well manned our Pinnesses: but being vpon the way going, the General called them backe, and would not suffer them to goe: there were thye of their boats also going for them from their shippes, at whome I shot, and made them to retye and leaue them vpon the spowds. At length our Generall sent for two of the men away, which his Pinness brought to him, the one was heaued ouer boye because he was soze hurt not like to liue, and he was a Harillan, the other was a Creeke doyne in Zanec, boatswaine of the Viceadmirall: the rest of the men, some swanne away vpon rats, some were drowned, and some remained still hanging on her, By this time it was sayze day light, and and I called to our Generall and anker on their went downe, & ankred by wards. There ryd I al Admirals anker would mirall came, he had ben

At length our Admirall gan to stand out into the sea to get out of shot, but coget by her ankres endur her, and sometime the noone. The rest of this our ordinance and furn with vs.

The 26. day in the morn we manned our shippes the night befoze so we lost that anker. I sent vnto the Spanish men ynches, and wee had nothing worth.

After dinner I went to Sea, and thither I found an named Peter, which is a Spaniards calluer, that brought him aboyde to dead men on lande and there were certaine Spaniards, Captaine Hawk and harnes of my Shipp his burtes, who had but

The 27. day we set

The 28. day in the morn we stode to the Northward of S. Vincent.

The 29. day in the morn we stode to the Northward of S. Vincent, where we met the ship Walker, Master Shewell, whome I met, and the ship Pilot, and Masters them, and to meete them I sent for falling into the rest aduised mee to spend consumed victual to get in with calmes and our hands, and from her both aboyd the Admirall

The 30. day our Canoa came, and toyme

The 31. day the like

The first day of February we went the same course to the Northward of S. Vincent

The 5. day about 10. o'clocke of the bloody him ouer booyd, and shot

From the 6. day to the

The 12. day hauing great boyled, with thye of the same.

and I called to our Generall to waite, and byue downe to them, who required mee to goe first and anker on their quarter, and hee would follope, and anker on their bowes. I wayed, and went downe, & ankred by them, yet not so nere as I meant, for the ebbe put me off to the Northwards. There yed I alone spending shot at them, and they both at mee foure houres, before our Admiralls anker would come by, during which time I had some spoyle done, but when our Admirall came, he had her part, and eased me very well.

At length our Admirall began to warpe away, and being come without mee set sayle, and began to stand out into the Sea: I went aboyde of him to knowe his pleasure, who determined to get out of shot, but could not because the winde scanted on them: the Edward before she couly get by her ankres endured many moze shot, after the Gallion was further off a good way then shee, and sometime the Gallion had two or thre: thus we ended about two a clocke afternoon. The rest of this day and part of the night we spent in mending, siting, and putting our ordnance and furniture in order for the next morning, thinking they would haue bene with vs.

The 26. day in the morning wee could not see them, because they were gone by the River: wee manned our boats, and Pinnettes, and wayed two ankres, and one cable that they let slippe the night before: as our men were waying the thirde anker, the booprope brake, and so wee lost that anker. Our Admirall had an anker of twelue hundred, and a good cable of cleuen perches, and wee had an anker about sixe hundred, with a piece of a balle cable, and booprope nothing worth.

After dinner I went aboyde the Admirall, to conferre with him, who determined to goe off to Sea, and thither I carried Senior Pinto, to interprete the Indian language, with an Indian named Peter, which fledde from the Bay where wee yed in a canoa, and brought with him a Spaniards caluer, flasse, and touchpoze, to goe with vs, whome our Admiralls boate met, and brought him aboyde to the Admirall. Hee tolde vs that the Spaniards had brought many dead men on lande and burped them, and also landed many hurt men in their Bay, and that there were certaine Spaniards gone ouer thoyowe the woods to looke after vs. Then the Generall, Capitaine Hawkins, and Master Maddox came aboyde of mee to viewe my hurt men, and harmes of my shippes, both men, shippe, and tackle, and I also went aboyde him to peruse his hurtes, who had but one man a sayler slaine.

The 27. day wee set sayle, and ran South by east, and sometime North by east.

The 28. day in the morning dyed Lancelot Ashe of a hurt, who departed very godly. This day we tooke to the Northwards, and in getting in our ankres and kisse, wee were put thre leagues to leeward of Fiddle Ile, but the Gallion yed still.

The 29. day in the morning, seeing my selfe put to sea from the Admirall, I assembled Master Walker, Master Shawe, Master Ieffries, the Master, the Masters mate, and the Pilote, to whom I shewed, that I was desirous to goe backe to seeke our Admirall, wherunto the master Pilote, and Masters mate answered directly, that we could not fetch the Ile where wee left them, and to meete them in going backe it was very vnlkely and to vs dangerous many wayes, as well for falling into the laps of the Spaniards, as to bee put on a lee shoare: Whereupon all the rest advised mee to stand off into Sea, wherunto I assented, remembering withall, that time spent consumed vnicuall, and howe long we had beaten by and downe in the same Bay before, to get in with calmes and contrary windes.

Thus we concluded that Master Walker should set downe each mans opinion, and we set to our hands, and from henceforth he to keepe a Register of all our proceeding, as Master Maddox doth aboyd the Admirall.

The 30. day our Carpenters wrought in repairing the sides of our ship, which were somewhat brused, and toyme with shot.

The 31. day the like was done, and we went East south east.

The first day of February, we went East by south, and East south east with a stout gale: and went the same course the 3. 4. and 5. dayes following.

The 5. day about 10. a clocke in the forenoone Master Walker dyed, who had bene weak and sicke of the bloody flux 6. dayes, wee tooke a view of his things, and pyised them, and beaue him ouer boord, and shot a peece for his knell.

From the 6. day to the 11. day we went North east and North north east.

The 12. day hauing considered the lacke of water, the company were contented to haue the pease boyled, with thre iacks of freshe water, and two iacks of salte water, for the prolonging of the same.

The

Here the Gallion and the Edward boate were sent, and neuer met afterward.

Whether the preacher die.

The 13. day we went North with a sweete gale.

The 14. day I called into my cabbine the two marchants, the Master and the Pilot shewing them our wants of vittuals and other necessaries, whereupon they and I concluded, that it was best for vs to returne to our Countrey, with as little losse of time and expence of vittuals as might be, being without hope of reliefe upon this coast, and yet to keepe the coast of Brazil to friends for feare of extremitie.

The 15. and 16. dayes we went our course North-east.

The 17. day in the morning hauing much raine, we saued about two tunne of water, of which we were very glad.

Variation of the compasse.

The 18. day I obserued the variation of the compasse, which varied one point, and a halfe to the Southwards, by our ordinarie compasse of London.

From the 19. day to the 27. we went our course North-east, and North, as the winde serued.

The 27. day, I allowed a certaine portion of wine to our men, to wit, halfe a canne of wine to euery sixe men euery night at eight of the clocke, at the setting of the watche, to strengthen their weakenesse.

sp. Wylks
dyeth.

The 28. day M. William Wylks hauing bene sick of the fluxe a moneth before, grewe impatient and outrageous in his discale, but by prayer and good persuasions we recouered him to his former good and quiet minde, and at night after nine a clocke he meekely departed the seruant of God.

sp. arch.

The 1. of March wee heaued him ouer boarde, and gaue him a pierce.

The 2. day the Master, Pilot, and I, agreed to fetch the Ile of Fernado Lorona.

From the 3. day to the 10. day we went West, and by South, and ran in for the shoare.

The 10. day we sawe the land, which was sandy hilles with woods on it.

The 11. day seeking to goe a shoare, we sawe foure men, which weaned to vs with a white shire, and we weaned to them with a flag of truce: At length one of them swamme to our boats side, and there lay in the sea talking with vs, almost an houere: in the ende, being partly perswaded by Pinto, who talked with them in the Indian tongue, and partly enticed with such trifles as I shewed him, he came into our Skiffe, and called to his companions on shoare, who came a boarde swimming: we deliuered them certaine barricos to fetch vs them full of fresh water: after, there came downe 40. Indians, boyes, women, and men, and with them a French boy, but the former Indians deceived vs of our barricos, whereupon Pinto and Russell swamme a shoare to seeke water, but found none.

The same day we sayled to a place where boats might land, and I went a land in my Skiffe, and found the Indians, and Frenchman which were with me the day before, and they brought our thier barricos full of fresh water: for which I rewarded them with some trifles. In y meane time our boate went a shoare, and our men with some of the Indians brought vs twentie barricos more of fresh water, and I my selfe went to shoare and brought 23. hennes of India.

The 12. day betimes in the morning, we manned our boate and Skiffe, &ooke some trifling things to shoare, and barricos: at our first arriual the rude Indians stocked together, wading to the Skiffe wherein I was, begging, and wondring about vs: first I caused them to fetch 27. barricos of water, whom I rewarded with small belles, &c. In the meane time they brought hens to me, wading to the Skiffe, for I kept my selfe alwayes a float, and for thet: hens I gaue them a knife, and a small looking glasse. All this while M. Blackcoller our Pilot, Thomas Russell, Marke Thawghs were still on shoare, and would not tarry aboyd: In the ende, fearing some treacherie, because all the Indians were slipped on shoare from me, I called our men away, and suddenly they laide hands on our men a shoare, & with their bowes shot thicke or vs in the boats, and waded into the water to vs, laying hands on our Skiffe, yet God of his mercy deliuered vs from their hands, with the losse of sixe men slaine, and others hurt.

Creation of the Indians.

Thus we got aboyde with fourtie Hens, Ducks, Turkeys, and Parrats, and thre hogheads of water: and I carried a Frenchman aboyde with me, named Iaques Humfrey, who was by chance in the boate with me when this fray began.

Iaques Humfrey a Frenchman slaine.

The 13. day we set sayle, and went North-east.

The 14. day, the Master shaped our course North north-east, to recouer the coast of Guyny, then the next shoare to vs.

The 15. day we went the same course.

The 16. day it rained, and we saued a butte of water

The 17. day weooke three Barke in the morning.

From that day to the first of April, we went our course, sometime with raine, and sometime with with variable winds, and which boerred about the maine chicke in the sea, Cape verde.

From this day till we went according to the night before spoken by the name, left overbood, went betwixt the North

The 12. day we spreye the cop sayle upon him

From hence to the 2. station of the compasse: a poyn to the West was

From this day to the winde: this 25. day was The 26. day it was in gale at East southeast: a at night betwene the N

The 28. day about 1. wee and split our sayle to tacle, without the burr on it, who were sayne to for barrics, &c. So we the North-east, and the N

The 29. day, our cap North north-east, lesse v

The 30. day with gre course which was meant foze: after we went all weather.

The first day of May the winde blew a little night but North, and N

The 2. day it contin hooke off our bonnets: East southeast, and

The 3. day wee cont the East North-east, and

The 4. day it was les put aboad all our othe large, and a good gale v

The 5. day being S winde but large, with

The 6. day it was fo North, all day and night

The 7. day and night

The 8. day and night day was foggy, and so South-west.

The 9. day it rained night with which wee North-east with which North-east.

The 10. day it rained East southeast: lathoo spyt sayle parde, and wi and night following C with variable winds, and so til the 4. of April, which day wee saw foure byzds with long tailed, which honered about the Ship, and in the afternoone we saw and tooke by many weedes which were churke in the sea, which wee iudged to be byuen with the East windes from the ples of Cape verde.

From this day till the 11. day wee went our course sometime North-east, sometime North-west according to the winds: upon this 11. day George Cope one of our carpenters, hauing the night before broken by the hold, and stolen wine, and drunken himselfe drunke, being taken in the roomes, leapt ouerboard out of the beake heade, and so dyed himselfe: this day and night we went betwixt the North by West, and the North with much winde.

The 12 day wee spied our foremast to bee perished in the botomes, and durst not beare our mayne sayle upon him but went hence with our sayles next hand, North all day, and night.

From hence to the 20. day wee went North-east, and by North. This day I obserued the variation of the compasse: and I noted that the south point of the compasse caried more then halfe a point to the Westwardes.

From this day to the 25. wee went our course North north-east, with a reasonable gale of winde: this 25 day was litle winde stirring.

The 26 day it was in a manner calme, till seuen a clock at night, then it began to blowe a good gale at East south-east all night, with which wee went North-east, and North-east by east, and at night betwene the North-east, and the North-east by east.

The 28 day about 10 a clocke in the forenoone, our mayne yarde brake in sunder in the middest and split our sayle with being put to great streffe, which wee got in and all the sayle, and cackle, without the hurt of any man God be thanked. After dinner our Carpenter wrought upon it, who were sayne to take our do:wee, and anker stocke, the boats masts, pinnes, shaws, capston barres, &c. So we went all day & night following with our foresayle, and sailes betwene the North-east, and the North-east by east, with a stoute gale.

The 29. day, our carpenter wrought all day, we went with our foresayle, and mullen next hand North north-east, litle winde then before, and rayne.

The 30 day with great labour in the rayne, about 6, a clocke afternoone, wee set our mayne course which was mended, and ether of our sayles hauing made small way, on none the day before: after we went all night betwene the North north-east, and the North-east thicke and moyst weather.

The first day of May, it was a great fogge calme, and thicke myste till 4. afternoone, then the winde blew a stiffe gale at East, and still scanted to the Northwards, that we could lye all night but North, and North by west, with much winde and fogge.

The 2. day it continued very foggie, and much winde, so that at 9. a clocke afternoone wee spooke off our bonnets: at 12. at noone wee cast about, and went larbooye tacked betwene the East South-east, and the South-east all day, and night.

The 3. day wee continued in the morning our course with much winde, and went betwene the East North-east, and the East all day, and night.

The 4. day it was litle winde, so that betimes in the morning, wee laced on our bonnets, and put aboade all our other sayles, and went East North-east till 8. at night, then hauing the winde large, and a good gale we went all night our course East by North.

The 5. day being Sunday wee had a stoute gale till 5. a clocke afternoone, then it was litle winde but large, with which we went our course all day, and night East by North.

The 6. day it was foggie, and blew a stiffe gale, with which wee went our course East by North, all day and night.

The 7. day and night we went our course East by North, with a stoute gale.

The 8. day and night, wee went our course East by North with a franke gale, but all the day was foggie, and sometime raine, the winde shifting betwene South-west, and the West South-west.

The 9. day it rained till noone, and blew a stoute gale, at West south-west till 12 a clocke at night with which wee went our course East by North, then it shifted to the East, and East North-east with which wee went the rest of the night, betwene the North, and the North North-east.

The 10. day it rained, and blew much afternoone: about 9. a clocke we cast about, and went East South-east larbooye tacked, at 12. at noone with bearing ouer much sayle, wee brake our spittsayle yarde, and with much paine saued the peeres, and the toyme sayle: so wee went all day and night following East North-east, and sometime East by North, and sometime East with out

our fojecoarse, and the mayne coarse, and beauner.

The 11. day it was lesse winde and by weather till noone: then it blew a good gale, and in the night very much winde, and colde weather: all this day wee made syffe, and made another spitsayle parde of our Top gallant maste, our Pyssen topmast, our mayne Flagstaffe, oars, &c. and went our course East by North, all day and night.

The 12. being Sunday, it was hayzie afoyenoone and much winde, so that hauing out our topsayles, and spitsayles, wee tooke them in at noone, and went all day and night our course East by North with a floute gale.

The 13. day in the morning it was somewhat lesse winde, and we tooke off, and mended our fojebonnet, which was toyne the night before, and at noone brought it to the parde againe, and after dinner put out our topsayles, being litle winde and rapne, so went all day, and night our course East by North with a small gale.

The 14. day we went our course East by North, till 12. at midnight with a pretty gale, then was it flake calme.

The 15. day it was calme till 9. a clocke afoyenoone, then it blew a smal gale, at East south-east, with which we went North-east till noone, then came by the winde, at South south-east, and at midnight blew so much, that wee meaning to haue shaken of our bonnets, tooke in all our sayles, and seeing the winde still increased, we lay to hull from midnight till 6. next morning hauing gone before East north-east, and East by North, and East amongst: this afternoone we saw a sayle but spake nor with them.

The 16. at 6. afoyenoone we set sayle with much winde at South south-west, and went East our course, with a coarse and bonnet of each, all day and night with very much winde.

The 17. day about 8. at night wee sounded, and had no ground, in 160 fathome, so wee kept our course on East till 12. at midnight, then the winde began to scant, so we went betwene the East north-east, and the East by North, all the rest of the night.

The 18. day at 8. at night we sounded againe, but had no ground, so we went all day & night, betwene the North-east, and the North by East with a skant winde.

The 19. being Sunday at 6. afoyenoone, the wind came to the South-east, so we went East North-east till 8. at night, then it was flat calme, and all night litle winde at North, with which we went next hand East south-east saye weather.

The 20. day it was litle wind all the fojenoone at North, then it changed to the North north-east, and blew but litle: so we were all day, and night betwene the East by South, and the South-east with a small gale saye weather.

The 21. day was saye weather and litle winde betwene the East and the North-east with which we went all day and night betwene the South-east by South, and the South by East till spitting: this day wee saw a Turtle done.

The 22. day it was a pretty gale, and saye weather: wee went all day till 8. at night East South-east, then the winde being somewhat larger, wee went all night East.

The 23. day wee went East by North till 8. at night, then hauing sounding in 66. fathome fine sande, we shaped our course North-east, but would not lye so nere, but as we might, went all night betwene the North-east by East, and the East north-east.

The 24. day we wen: East north-east, & East by North, till 7. at afternoone, then we sounded and had 65. fathome gray sand, hauing sayled by many weedes, & burton beds all day before: after we went all night as the day before East north-east, and East by North with litle winde.

The 25. day we went betwene the East north-east, and the North-east with a small gale till 5. a clock afternoone: then had we sight of land, which rose ragged to the Northwards like hopten land, we being about 5. leagues off: that Ile, bare North-east by North of vs, and the Northernmost part bare North by East of vs, with a rock a sea boord: we then sounded, & had 55. fathome gray sande, and mazy great stoe in it: so we stood in North-east till 8. a clocke, and then beled it againe being win 4. leagues of it, bearing as before, but we could not make it, so some thought it to be the fojeland of Fontenay, some iudged it the Ile of Vlsan: the: we sounded againe, in 55. fathome browne sand, and litle mazy in it: at 8. a clocke at night we went about, and stode of South south-west one watche, then the winde shynked to the South-west, that we could lye but South south-west 6. glasses, so that at 3. a clock we cast about, and lay North-west 6. glasses, and North north-west a watche being then 8. a clocke the next day.

The 26. day we lay as nigh as we could betwene the North and the North north-east, and sawe the same land againe, and made it to be the fojeland of Fontenay, and the ragges to bee the Seames, which bare some East North-east of vs: and wee stode on till 10. a clocke, then being being within two leagues we could not bubble the water very faste, for the ebbe forwarde, for the space of our watche: at twelue at noon South south-west one watche afoyenoone.

The 27. day, hauing by before deceiued, and went clearkes to the South-west.

At 7. a clocke afoyenoone of vs, and 57. leagues of

About 9. a clocke, we hoists aboord vs, of whom our men thought it were

But hearing newes of the gale God thanks, and West, and West by South North by West, and the being litle winde.

The 28. we had by our hoysed out our skiffe at 8. noone we had brought North of vs, passing by vs 2. leagues of.

Then we had sight of east, with litle winde all this night about 2. a ton of the Skurrite.

The 29. day at 6. afoyenoone a league of it, and went that at eleven of clocke our ship came aground betw that it was halfe floude.

In this meane time I tuall, and necessaries for The Spaior, B. Bronckhones, and dnyed with us in the yle being South by Weste hurried in the G. Spalter Bronckhones, houle.

The 30. day about 9. a and William Tolwofen sons with diuers gentlen Berimes this morning patched many business things were done: a grethe aboard.

The 31. I wrought at ung pittie of some poore med Purser, which rid in a small ship, which they b of theirs aboard of mee: within wards of him, then our comfort would not con turned into our old roade. Spithooke men againe a being within two leagues of the rockes and lesse, we cast about and stood of south west, because we could not dubble the better most rockes: when we were about wee draue to the Southwardes very faste, for the ebbe set vs West south west, and being spring tydes, it hoysed vs a pace to leewardes, for the space of an houre: then with the flood which was come, we draue againe to windwardes: at twelue at noone it was calme till 6. afternoone, then we stood about larboard tacked, South south west one watche, then at midnight wee cast about and stood ouer North till foure afozenoone.

The 27 day, hauing brought the lande East southeast of vs, wee made it to be Syllye being before deceiued, and went hence East by north to dubble Grymsbie, leauing the Bishop, and his clearkes to the South west wards, which wee before tooke to be the Seames.

At 7. a clocke afozenoone wee sawe the landes ende of England, which bare East by North of vs, and is 7. leagues of from Syllye.

About 9. a clocke, we shewing our flags, and ensigne, and shoting of a peece, there came two boates aboord vs, of whome we thought fish, and some other trifling fresh victuals, with refreshed our men though it were but little.

But hearing newes of them of the health of our Queenes maiestie, and our country in peace, we gaue God thanks, and stood hence East by South hauing brought the Island of Syllye, West, and West by South 3. leagues off vs. At eight at night wee had brought the landes ende North by West, and the Lysard bare East of vs 6. leagues, so wee stood along all night East, being little winde.

The 28. wee had brought the Lysarde West North west of vs, a league and a halfe of, wee hoysed out our skiffe at 8. in the morning, and went along North east by East: at 12 a clocke at noone wee had brought Hellsbide, and the Spanacles rockes which lye two miles of the mayne North of vs, passing by Falmouth: at 2. a clocke afternoone, wee brought Dudman North of vs 2. leagues of.

Then we had sight of Ramme head, and stood on North east by east, and sometime North east, with little winde all day and night following.

This night about 2. a clocke after Midnight dyed Robert Webber, and Walter Skeuington of the Skurrie.

The 29. day at 6. afozenoone wee had brought the Ramhead North of vs, and weare within a league of it, and went in North east next hande, being thicke and foggie, and little winde: so that at eleuen of clocke wee got in within the Island, and their by mistaking of a sounding, our ship came aground betwene the ple, and the mayne, and there sat till 4. a clocke afternoone that it was halfe flabbe.

In this meane time I sent M. Blacoller, and Johnson a shope to prouide men, and fresh victuall, and necessaries for our present neede.

The Spanio, M. Bronkojne, M. Partyn, and many other of the towne, came abooyde to visite me, and dined with mee about 5. a clocke the ship being moored in 7. fadoms water, the castle in the ple being South by East of vs, I went a lande and sawe M. Skeuington, and Robert Webber buried in the Churchyard, and supped with M. Gerryses, and Walter Symberbe, at Walter Bronckhones, and not hauing a boate to come abooyde, I lay a shope all night at that house.

The 30. day about 9. a clocke, with much a doe I furnished away M. Jetties, M. Symberbe, and William Colweson with letters, after dined at M. Blacollers, and made many salutations with diuers gentlemen.

Verimes this morning I sawe a cable bought, cymber for a Dauet, and anker stocks, and dispatched many businesse and at 12. a clocke I came abooyde, and set a cooper to worke, and other things were done: a great many of our weake men went a shope, to refresh themselves, and to lye a shope.

The 31. I wrought abooyde all day, and put our ship, and things in order: Afternoone I hauing pittie of some poore men of Spylbooke which were robbed the night before by a Pyrat named Purser, which rtd in Cawson bay, I consented to go out with the Edward in companie of a small ship, which they had furnished to be their Master, so about 5. afternoone, came 100. men of theirs aboord of mee: about 12. a clocke we set sayle, and by 3. afozeday wee were gotten to windwardes of him, then he set sayle, and went hence to the East wards, and outsayled vs, because our consort would not come neere him: after a small chafe which we gaue him to no effect we returned into our old roade, and there moored the ship about 9. afozenoone, and hence went all the Spylbooke men againe a shope from mee, and thus I ended a troublesome voyage.

An extract out of the discourse of one Lopez a Spaniard before spoken of, touching the foresayd fight of M. Fenton with the Spanish ships together with a report of the proceeding of M. John Drake after his departing from him, Upon the relation of Pedro Sarmiento concerning the Streights, and for that the king heard, that there were shippes in England preparing for the same Streights, hee commanded Diego Flores de Valdes a noble man of Spaine, to passe thither with 23. shippes, and 3500. men to stoppe the passage of the English men.

There went in this flecte the gouernour of Chile with 500. olde Souldiers & came out of Flanders: but this flecte was the unhappiest shippes that euer went out of Spayne: for before they came from the coast of Spaine a storme tooke them, and cast away 5. of the flecte, and in them about 800. men, and the rest came into Caes. But the king sent them word that they should proceede: and so there went out on the voyage 16. of the shippes, for 2. more of their flecte were much spoiled by the storme which they had.

In these 16. shippes, Pedro Sarmiento was sent to bee gouernour in the streights, & had assigned vnto him 500. men to stay there with him, and hee carreyd with him all kinde of Artificers to make him foys, and other necessaries, with great store of ordnance and other munition.

This flecte because it was late, did winter on the coaste of Brasil, in the riuer of Genero and from thence they went when the winter was past, and about the height of 42. degrees they had a sudden storme, so that Diego Flores beat it by and downe 22. dayes, in which time he lost one of the best shippes that he had, which had in her 300. men, and 20. women, that went to inhabitte the streights: and in this shippe also was most part of the munition which should haue bene left in the streights, so in the end the storme grew to be so great, that the shippes were not able to endure it at any longer, but were put backe vnto an Island, called Sancta Catalina: and there hee found a barke wherein were some Fryers going for the riuer of Plate: whyle Fryers tolde him of two great English shippes, and a pynnelle, which had taken them, but tooke nothing from them, nor did them any harme, but onely asked them for the king of Spaynes shippes.

Whereupon Diego Flores, knowing that these English shippes would goe for the Streights, determined to goe thither although it was in the moneth of Februarie, and choosling 10. shippes of the 15. that were left, he left two shippes which were not in case to goe to sea at the Island, and the other three shippes which were old, and shaken with the storme he put into them all the women, and sick men, in all the flecte, and sent them to the riuer of Genero, and hee with the other 10. returned againe for the Streights.

The 3. shippes in which the sick men and women were, went to Brasil, and there they founde wiche in the port of S. Vincent the two English shippes before mentioned.

They would haue had the English men to haue gone out of the harbour, and thereupon they fell to fight, and because that these 3. shippes were weake with the storme, and the men that they had were the worst in all the flecte, the English men easely put them to the worst, and sunke one of them, and might haue sunke another, if the English men would: but they minded not the destruction of any man: for that is the greatest vertue that can be in a man, that when he may do hurt, yet hee will not doe it: so the English men went from this port to Spirito Sancto, where they had victuals for their Marchandise, and so they went backe for England, without doing of any harme in the country.

The cause why these English shippes vnder the conduct of Master Fenton went not to the streights, I know not: but some say that they were put backe by foule weacher: other some say that it was for feare of the kings shippes.

But the pynnelle of these two shippes went from them, in which was Captaine John Drake: the cause why they parted I know not, but the pynnelle came into the riuer of Plate, and within 5. leagues of leale Island, not far from the place where the Earle of Cumberland's shippes did take in fresh water, hee was cast away vpon a ledge of rocks: but the men were saved in their boate, which were in number 18. who went a shoare on the Nozelylloe, and went a daies Iourney into the land, and met with the Saouages, which are no men eaters, but take all the Christians that they can, and make them slaues.

But the English men fought with them, and the saouages slew 5. of them, and tooke 13. aliue, which were with the Saouages about 15. moneths. But the Master of the pynnelle, whose name was Richard Fawcett being not willing to indure the misery that hee was in, and being knowledg that there was a towne of Christians on the other side of the riuer, he in a night cal-

5. Shippes of this flecte cast away on the coast of Spaine.

M. Fenton took these Fryers.

In fight hee sunke our 2. English shippes & the Spanish shippes led John Drake, and another had but two oares, and so were 3. dayes before they might way that went to waite at last came to an house where the Spaniards, white and one of the Indians with 4. boyesmen, and brought

This captaine clothed in a cable, and they were But the Viceroy of Peru but the other too were ke more of their affaires.

Upon this comming of to seeke the rest of the En ple, but I am not certaine

A letter written containing a re b

After I have receiued your kinnesse to me proceeding, I receive benefit your co that you do not onely becom for which I would to be known to those that haue pen, wherewith you cease fires to some parte, though malice of twicked men, the at least few) to proceede aning of the christian faith, vith. Alas the labourers are to increase the number, a chose parts from out of ch

How to answer our friend land, of Terra noua, for fit and therefore be certain the like among vs: who, 50. which commeth to p neighbors haue had great paines perely to go in pson that I do searche the Englishman hath done. So to let this passe, you shall ards that come to take C 02 30. more that come fro and furniture of munition the harbours where they sit an old custome of the count more then a boat of maine lent intruders, who do offe it may be well nere true and they make all wet in bywarde. Of the freer most of their shipping is sanably well appointed, les John Drake, and another young man which was with them, & took a very little Canow, which had but two oares, and so passed to the other side of the riuer, which is about 9. leagues broad, and were 3. dayes before they could get ouer without meate, and comming to land, they hit upon a high way that went towards the christians: and seeing the footing of hoyses, they followe it, and at last came to an house where there was come sowed, and there they met with Indians seruants vnto the Spaniards, which gaue them to eate, and clothes to couer them, for they were all naked, and one of the Indians went to the to tone, and told them of the Englishmen: so the capitaine sent 4. hoysmen, and brought them to the towne behind them.

This capitaine clothed them, and provided lodging for them, and John Drake diered at the capitaine table, and they were all very well intreated, the capitaine purposing to send the for Spaine. But the Viceroy of Peru hauing newes hereof, sent for them, and so John Drake was sent to him, but the other two were kept there, because they were married in the countrey, so that I know no more of their affaires, John Drake sent to the Viceroy of Peru.

Upon this comming of the Englishmen, there were prepared 50. hoysmen to goe ouer the riuer to seeke the rest of the Englishmen, and also certain Spaniards that were among the sassage people, but I am not certaine whether they went forward or not.

A letter written to M. Richard Hakluyt of the middle Temple, containing a report of the true state and commodities of New found land, by M. Anthonie Parkhurst Gentleman, 1578.

M After Hakluyt, after most heartie commendations, with like thanks for your manifold kindnesse to me shewed, not for any merites that hitherto haue bene mine, but wholly preceeding, I must needs confesse, of your owne good nature, which is so ready yrell to benefit your countrey and al such poore men as haue any sparke in them of good desires, that you do not onely become their friend, but also humble your selfe as a seruant in their affaires, for which I would to God I were once in place where I might cause your burning zeale to bee knowne to those that haue authority, power, and abilitie to recompence your trauelling mind and pen, wherewith you cease not day nor night to labour and trauell to bring your good and godly desires to some passe, though not possible to that happy ende that you most thirst for: for such is the malice of wicked men, the diuels instruments in this our age, that they cannot suffer any thing (or at least few) to prosper and prosper, that tendeth to the setting forth of Gods glory, & the amplifying of the christian faith, wherewith hitherto princes haue not bene so diligent as their calling requirer. Alas, the labourers as yet are few, the harvest great, I trust God hath made you an instrument to increase the number, and to moue men of power, to redeeme the people of New found land, and those parts from out of the captiuitie of that spirituall Babilon, the diuell.

As to answer some part of your letter touching the sunny nauies that come to New found land, of Terra noua, for sith you shall vnderstand that some sith not weere the other by 200. leagues, and therefore the certaintie is not knowne, & some yeeres come many more then other some, as I see the like among vs: who, since my first trauell being but 4. yeeres, are increased from 30. saile to 50. which commeth to passe chiefly by the imagination of the Westerne men, who thinke their neighbors haue had greater gaines then in verp deed they haue, for that they see me to take such paines yere ly to go in wyper person, they also suppose that I find some secret commodity by reason that I do search the harbours, creekes and hauens, and also the land much more then euer any Englishman hath done. Surely I am glad that it is increased, wherof soeuer it springeth. But to let this passe, you shall vnderstand that I am informed that there are about 100. saile of Spaniards that come to take God (who make all wet, and doe dye it when they come home) besides 20. or 30. more that come fro Biskae, to kil Whale for craime. These be better appointed for shipping and furniture of munition, then any nation, sauing the Englishmen, who commonly are loyes of the harbours where they sith, and do vse all strangers helpe in sithing if need require, according to an old custome of the countrey, which thing they do willingly, so that you take nothing from them more then a boat or twaine of sale, in respect of your protection of them against rowers of other violence iuruders, who do often put them from good harbour, &c. As touching their tunnage, I thinke it may be well nere five or sixe thousand: but of Portugals there are not lightly about 50. saile, and they make all wet in like sorte, whose tunnage may amount to thre thousand tunnes and bywarde. Of the French nation and Bitcons, are about one hundred and fiftie sailes, the most of their shipping is verp small, not past fortye tunne, among which some are great and reasonably well appointed, better then the Portugals, and not so well as the Spaniards, and the burden of them may be some 7000. tunne. Their shipping is from all partes of France and Britaine, and the Spaniards from most parts of Spaine, the Portugals from Aueiro and Viana, and from 2. or 3. portes more. The trade that our nation hath to Island, maketh that the English are not there in such numbers as other nations.

pp.

burden

How to certifye you of the fertilitie and goodnesse of the countrey, you shall vnderstand that I haue in sundry places sowne Wheate, Barlie, Rie, Oates, Peanes, Pease and seedes of herbes, kernels, plumstones, nuts, all which haue prospered as in England. The countrey yeeldeth many good trees of fruite, as Filberds in some places, but in all places Cherie trees, and a kind of pear tree meete to graffe on. As for Roses, they are as common as Brambles here: Straberberies, Dewberies, and Raspes, as common as grass. The timber is most Firre, yet plentie of Pineapple trees: few of these two kindes meete to make a ship of thre score and ten: but neere the grand baie of Cape Britton big, and sufficient for any ship. There bee also oakes and thornes, there is in all the countrey plentie of Birch and Alder, which be the meekest wood for cole, and also Willow which will serue for many other purposes. As touching the kindes of fish beside Cod, there are Herrings, Salmones, Choynebacke, Blasse, or rather wee should call them Flounders, Dog fish, and another most excellent of taste, called of vs a Cat, Dillers, & Pul kles, in which I haue found pearles aboute 40. in one Spul kle, and generally all haue some, great or small. I heard of a Portugall that found one worth 300. ducches: There are also other kinds of Shel fish, as limpets, cockle, wilkes, lobsters, and crabs: also a fish like a *Smelt which commeth on shore, and another that hath the like property called a Squid: these be the fishes, which (when I please to bee merie with my old companions) I say, doe come on shore when I commaund them in the name of the 5. portes, and cometh them by such like wordes: These also bee the fishes which I may sweepe with byoomes on a heape, and neuer wet my foote, onely pronouncing two or thre wordes whatsoeuer they be appointed by any man, so they heare my voyce: the vertue of the wordes bee small, but the nature of the fish great and strange. For the Squid, whose nature is to come by night as well as by day, I tell them, I set him a candle to see his way, with which he is much deligthen, or els commeth to wonder at it, as doe our fresh water fish, the other commeth also in the night, but chiefly in the day, being forced by the Cod that would deuour him, and therefore for feare comming to neere the shore, is driuen bye by the surge of the Sea on the pibble and sands. Of these being as good as the Smelt, you may take by with a house net, as plentifully as you doe Wheate in a howell, sufficient in thre or foure howers for a whole Citie. There bee also other fishes which I tell those that are desirous of strange newes that I take as fast as one would gather up stones, and them I take with a long pole and hook. Sea marrie say they, wee beleue so, and that you catch all the rest you bring home in that sort, from Portugals and Frenchmen. How surely, but thus I doe: with thre hookes stretched forth in the end of a pole, I make as it were an Cete speare, with which I picke those Flounders as fast as you would take by fritters, with a sharpe pointed sicke, and with that tooke I may take by in lesse then halfe a day Lobsters sufficient to finde thre hundred men for a dayes meate. This pastime ended, I shew them that for my pleasure I take a great Halkie I haue, and say no more to him then thus: Goe fetch me this rebellious fish that obedieth not this Gentleman that commeth from Kent and Cheshire, bringing them to the high water marke, and when hee doubteth that any of those great Coddes by reason of the slaying ground bee like to tumble into the Sea againe, hee will warily take herde and carrie him by backe to the heape of his fellowes. This doeth cause my friendes to wonder, and at the first hearing to iudge them notorious lies, but they laugh and are merie when they heare the meanes how each tale is true.

I told you once I doe remember how in my trauell into Africa and America, I found trees that bare Dillers, which was strange to you, till I told you that their boughes hung in the water, on which both Dillers and Pul kles did sicke fast, as their proprietie is to stikes and timber.

Howe to let these merie tales pass, and to come to earnest matters againe, you shall vnderstand that New found land is in a temperate Climate, and not so colde as foolish Mariners doe say, who finde it colde sometimes when plentie of Ice lie neere the shore: but by in the land they shall finde it hotter then in England in many partes of the countrey toward the South. This colde commeth by an accidentall meanes, as by the Ice that commeth flecting from the North partes of the world, and not by the situation of the countrey, or nature of the Climate. The countrey is full of little small riuers all the peere long proceeding from the mountaines, ingreinded both of snow and raine: fewe springs that euer I could finde or heare of, excepte it bee toward the South: in some places or rather in most places, great lakes with plentie of fish, the countrey very most coured with water Beeres euery where, so heere, and hardly you matters we may take like the other kind of birdes store, may drie them on a place Penguins, and cannot see that fish neere the grand mapes with these birdes grand baie, and in the Sea beastes, as Luzernes and I did see them farre off in the water, and bigger than I read to bee in the countrey Northward, Vares and fish before our faces, whose sons were turning of by the shoot and set the dogges to take your fish before you be forced.

Called by the Spaniards Anchoas, and by the Portugals Capetinas.

How to shew you my red of late by our nation: called of the Frenchmen Isle, which places it by throughout all New found land please the Queenes maiestie lately discovered: but rich Mines in more times we haue seen, where we are very likely by the heere and forie and better: choosing these two commodities some knowledge in such and most diligent inquirers who cried on mee to write haunce: wherefore this name, should be inhabited thereof, as I will shew you that I haue red and in Britton. I had almost forgot black, white & gray: of Mines of iron and copper our great benefite, if our home some of the oare of bene deuced by the vnder to haue searched this riuer benefited our countrey: appointed me of the salt defending them two peeres them.

By meanes whereof I was called to come home into Portugall, to demaund the Queenes maiestie & heere as they haue banished shall be worth 600. li. of way I were best to take up there are that doe very most couered with woods of firre, yet in many places indifferent good graille, and plentie of Beares euery where, so that you may kill of them as oft as you list: their flesh is as good as porck here, and hardly you may knowe the one from the other, if it be powdered but two dayes. Of Divers we may take like stoye. There are Sea Gulls, Sparres, Duckes, wilde geese, and many other kind of birdes stoye, too long to write, especially at one Island named Penguin, where we may drie them on a planke into our ship as many as shall lade her. These birdes are also called penguins, and cannot flie, there is more meate in one of these, then in a goose: the Frenchmen that fish neere the grand baie, doe bring small stoye of flesh with them, but virtuallly they alwayes with these birdes. Nowe againe, for Genison plentie, especially to the North about the grand baie, and in the South neere Cape Race, and Plelance: there are many other kind of beasts, as Luzernes and other mightie beastes like to Camels in greatnesse, and their feete clowen, I doo see them farre off not able to discerne them perfectly, but their steps shewed that their feete were clowen, and bigger then the feete of Camels, I suppose them to be a kind of Buffes which I read to bee in the countreys adiacent; and very many in the firme land. There bee also to the Northward, Hares and Foxes in all partes so plentifully, that at noone dayes they take away our flesh before our faces, within lesse then halfe a paire of butts length, where foure and twentie persons were turning of drie fish, and two dogges in sight, yet stode they not in feare till wee gaue shoot and set the dogges vpon them: the Beares be also as bold, which will not spare at middaie to take your fish before your face, and I beleue assuredly would not hurt any bodie unless they be forced.

Now to shew you my fauile what places I suppose meetest to inhabite in those partes discouered of late by our uation: There is neere about the mouth of the grand baie, an excellent harbour called of the Frenchmen Chateau, and one Island in the very entrie of the streight called Bell Isle, which places if they be peopled and well fortified (as there are stone and things meete for it throughout all New found land) we shall be lordes of the whole fishing in small time, if it doe please the Duenes maiestie, and from thence send wood and cole with all necessaries to Laborador lately discouered: but I am of opinion, and doe most stedfastly beleue that we shall finde as rich Mines in more temperate places and Climates, and more profitable for fishing then any yet we haue vied, where we shall haue not farre from thence plentie of salte made by fire undoubtedly, and very likely by the heate of the Sunne, by reason I finde salte kernes on the rockes in nine and fortye and better: these places may bee found for salte in thre and fortye. I knowe more touching these two commodities last remembered, then any man of our nation doth: for that I haue some knowledge in such matters, and haue most desired the finding of them by painefull crauell, and most diligent inquirie. Now to be short, for I haue bene ouerlong by master Buclers means, who cried on mee to write at large, and of as many things as I call to minde woorthy of remembrance: wherefore this one thing more, I could wish the Island in the mouth of the riuer of Canada, should be inhabited, and the riuer searched, for that there are many things which may rise thereof, as I will shew you hereafter. I could find in my heart to make prooffe whether it be true or no that I haue read and heard of Frenchmen and Portugals to bee in that riuer, and about Cape Britton. I had almost forgot to speake of the plentie of wolues, & to shew you that there be Foxes, black, white & gray: other beastes I knowe none sauethose before remembred. I found also certaine Mines of iron and copper in S. Johns, and in the Island of Iron, which things might turne to our great benefite, if our men had desire to plant thereabout, for prooffe whereof I haue brought home some of the aare of both soyers. And thus I ende assuring you on my faith, that if I had not bene deceiued by the vile Portugals, descending of the Jewes and Judas kind, I had not failed to haue searched this riuer, and all the coast of Cape Britton, what might haue bene found to haue benefited our countrey: but they breaking their bands, and falsifying their faith and promise, did appointed me of the salt they should haue brought me in part of recompence of my good seruice in defending them two yeeres against French Rowers that had spoiled them, if I had not defended them.

By meanes whereof they made me loose not onely the searching of the countrey, but also forced me to come home with great losse aboue, 600.li. for recompence whereof I haue sent my man into Portugall, so demaund iustice at the kings hand, if not, I must pue vp my supplication to the Duenes maiestie & her honourable counsell, so grant me leaue to stay here so much of their goods as they haue dammified mee, or els that I may take of them in New found land, as much silue as shall be worth, 600.li. or as much as the salte might haue made. I may you aduertise mee what way I were best to take, and what hope there may be of a recompence if I followe the suite: many there are that doe comfort mee, and doe bidde mee proceede, for that her Maiestie and the counsell doe tender yoor fishermen, who with me haue sustained 300. pound losse in that voyage. And to conclude, if you and your friend shall thinke me a man sufficient and of credite, to seeke the Riuell of St. John, of the riuer of Canada, with any part of the firme land of Cape Britton, I shall giue my diligence for the true and perfect discouerie, and leaue some part of mine owne businesse to further the same, and thus I end committing you to God. From Willow the 13. of Nouember, 1578.

Yours to vs and commaund, Anthonie Parkhurst,

The Letters Patents graunted by her Maiestie to Sir Humfrey

Gilbert knight, for the inhabiting and planting of our people in America.

ELIZABETH by the grace of God, Queene of England, &c. To all people to whom these presents shall come, greeting. Know ye that of our especiall grace, certaine science and meere motion, we haue giuen and granted, and by these presents for vs, our heires and successours, doe giue and graunt to our trustie and welbeloued seruauant Sir Humfrey Gilbert of Compton, in our Countie of Devonshire knight, and to his heires and assignes for euer, free libertie and licence from time to time, and at all times for euer hereafter, to discouer, finde, searchout, and viewe such remote, heathen and barbarous lands, countries and territories not actually possessed of any Christian prince or people, as to him, his heires and assignes, and to euery or any of them, shall seeme good, and the same to haue, hold, occupie and enioy to him, his heires and assignes for euer, with all commodities, iurisdictions and royalties both by sea and land: and the said Sir Humfrey and all such as from time to time by licence of vs, our heires and successours, shall goe or trauell thither, to inhabite or remaine there, to build and fortifie at the discretion of the said Sir Humfrey, and of his heires and assignes, the statutes or actes of parliament made against fugitiues, or against such as shall depart, remaine out of our Realme of England without licence, or any other acte, statute, lawe, or matter whatsoeuer to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding. And we doe like wise by these presents, for vs, our heires and successours, giue full authoritie and power to the said Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, and euery of them, that he and they, and euery, or any of them, shall and may at all and euery time and times hereafter, haue, take, and lead in the same voyages, to trauel thitherward, or to inhabite there with him, and euery or any of them, such, and so many of our Subjects as shall willingly accompany him and them, and euery or any of them with sufficient shipping, and furniture for their transportations, so that none of the same persons, nor any of them be such as hereafter shall be specially restrained by vs, our heires and successours. And further, that hee the said Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, and euery or any of them shall haue, hold, occupie and enioy to him, his heires or assignes, and euery of them for euer; all the soile of all such lands, countries and territories so to bee discovered or possessed as aforesayd, and of all Cities, Castles, Townes and villages, and places in the same, with the rites, royalties and iurisdictions, as well marine as other, within the sayde landes or countries of the Seas thereunto adioyning, to be had or used with full power to dispose thereof, and of euery part thereof in fee simple or other wise, according to the order of the lawes of England, as neere as the same conveniently may bee, at his, and their will and pleasure, to any person then being, or that shall remaine within the Allegiance of vs, our heires & successours, paying unto vs for all seruices, duties & demands, the fifth part of all the oare of gold & silver, that from time to time, & at all times after such discouerie, subduing and possessing shall be there gotten: all which lands, countries and territories, shall for euer be holden by the said Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, of vs, our heires and successours by homage, and by the sayd payment of the sayd fifth part before referred onely for all seruices.

And moreover, we doe by these presents for vs, our heires and successours, giue and graunt licence to the sayde Sir Humfrey Gilbert, his heires or assignes, & to euery of them, that hee and they, and euery or any of them shall, and may from time to time, and all times for euer hereafter, for his and their defence, encounter, expulse, repell, and resist, as well by Sea as by land, and by all other waies whatsoeuer, all, and euery such person and persons whatsoeuer, as without the speciall licence and liking of the said Sir Humfrey, and of his heires and assignes, shall attempt to inhabite within the sayd countries, or any of them, or within the space of two hundred leagues

neere

neere to the place of planting or inhabiting within the sayd her Maiestie, within any of their territories and adioyning, or that shall by Sea or land, the said their companies: giue licence to the said Sir Humfrey, his heires hereafter to take and set on foot, with their shipping, sayd Sir Humfrey, or by howeough or harborough, Realmes and dominions, yell or shipwracke one goods, and furniture, tion of him the sayd writing in more perfect sealed and inhabited after encouragement of all such countreys so by hee of the allegiance, sayd Sir Humfrey, and all persons, being of our aynd within this our Realme of England, his heires or assignes, shall hereafter, trauel to his heires, that they and euery or any of them, within any the lands, and enioy all the puiissance, any law, custome

And so farre as touching the said territories as themselves in those territories each with other, unto they shall attaine with pleasure and contentment to his heires and assignes to time for euer hereafter by the Seas thither, a pardon, gouerne and vnder in causes capitall or other as shall from time to time of possession, or territories as aforesayd, or where the said Sir Humfrey or companies, shall inhabit, lawes and ordinances, or any of them due, so at waies that the same be agreeable to the forme of the Christian faith or religion of the subjects of our people as their immediate lord and successours, giue as the said Sir William Cecil knight of England, of vs for any four of them were to the place of places within such countries as aforesayd, if they shall not bee before planted or inhabited within the limites aforesayd, with the subjects of any christian prince, being in amitie with her Majesty, where the said Sir Humphrey, his heires, or assignes, or any of them, or his or their, or any of their associates or companies, shall within sixe yeeres next ensuing, make their dwellings and abiding, or that shall enterpryse or attempt at any time hereafter vnlawfully to any, either by Sea or Land: the said Sir Humphrey, his heires, or assignes, or any of them, or his or their, or any of their companies: giving and granting by these presents, further power and authoritie to the said Sir Humphrey, his heires and assignes, and euery of them from time to time, & at all times for euer hereafter to take and surprize by all manner of meanes whatsoever, all and euery person and persons, with their shippes, vessels, and other goods and furniture, which without the licence of the sayd Sir Humphrey, or his heires or assignes, as aforesayd, shall be found traffiquing into any har-borough or harboroughs, creeke or creekes, within the limites aforesayd, (the subjects of our Realmes and dominions, and all other persons in amitie with vs, being diuied by force of tempest or shipwracke ouely excepted) and those persons and euery of them with their ships, vessels, goods, and furniture, to detain and possess, as of good and lawfull prize, according to the discretion of him the sayd Sir Humphrey, his heires and assignes, and of euery of any of them. And for vnting in moze perfect league and amitie of such countreys, landes and territories so to bee possessed and inhabited as aforesayd, with our Realmes of England and Ireland, and for the better encouragement of men to this enterpryse: we doe by these presents graunt, and declare, that all such countreys so hereafter to bee possessed and inhabited as aforesayd, from thenceforth shall bee of the allegiance of vs, our heires, and successours. And we doe graunt to the said Sir Humphrey, his heires and assignes, and to all and euery of them, and to all and euery other person and persons, being of our allegiance, whose names shall be noted or entered in some of our courts of Record within this our Realme of England, and that with the assent of the sayd Sir Humphrey, his heires or assignes, shall now in this iourney for discoverie, or in the second iourney for conquest hereafter, trauele to such lands, countries and territories as aforesayd, and to theire and euery of their heires, that they and euery of any of them being either borne within our said realmes of England, or Ireland, or within any other place within our allegiance, and which hereafter shall be inhabiting within any the landes, countries and territories, with such licence as aforesayd, shall, and may haue, and enjoy all the priuiledges of free denizens and persons native of England, and within our allegiance, any law, custome, or vsage to the contrary notwithstanding.

And so farre as vpon the finding out, discovering, and inhabiting of such remote lands, countries and territories as aforesayd, it shall be necessarie for the safetie of all men that shall aduenture themselves in those iournies or voiajes, to determine to liue together in Christian peace and ciuill quietnesse each with other, where by euery one may with moze pleasure and profit, enjoy that whereunto they shall attaine with great paine and perill: we for vs, our heires and successours are likewise pleased and contented, and by these presents doe giue and graunt to the said Sir Humphrey and his heires and assignes for euer, that he and they, and euery of any of them, shall and may from time to time for euer hereafter within the said mentioned remote lands and countreys, and in the way by the Seas thither, and from thence, haue full and meere power and authoritie to correct, punish, pardon, gouerne and rule by their, and euery of any of their good discretions and pollicies, as well in causes capitall or criminall, as ciuill, both marine, and other, all such our subjects and others, as shall from time to time hereafter aduenture themselves in the said iournies or voiajes habitation or possession, or that shall at any time hereafter inhabit any such lands, countreys or territories as aforesayd, or that shall abide within two hundred leagues of any the said place or places, where the said Sir Humphrey or his heires, or assignes, or any of them, or any of his or their associates or companies, shall inhabit within the yeeres next ensuing the date hereof, according to such statutes, lawes and ordinances, as shall be by him the said Sir Humphrey, his heires and assignes, or euery of any of them devised or established for the better gouernment of the said people as aforesayd so alwaies that the said statutes, lawes and ordinances may be, as neere as conueniently may, as agreeable to the forme of the lawes, & pollicie of England: and also, so as they be not against the true christian faith or religio now possessed in the church of England, nor in any wise to withstand any of the subjects or people of those lands or places from the allegiance of vs, our heires or successours, as their immediate soveraignes vnder God. And further we do by these presents for vs, our heires and successours, giue and graunt full power and authoritie to our trustie and welbeloued counsellor, Sir William Cecil knight, lord Burleigh, our high treasurer of England, and to the lord treasurer of England, of vs for the time being, and to the priuie counsell of vs, our heires and successours, or any foure of them for the time being, that hee, they, or any foure of them, shall, and may from time to time and at all times hereafter, under his or their bandes or Seales by vertue of these presents, authoritie and licence the sayd Sir Humfrey Gilbert, his heires and assignes, and euery of any of them by him and themselues, or by their or any of their sufficient attornies, deputies, officers, ministers, factors and seruants, to imbarke and transport out of our realmes of England and Ireland, all, or any of his or their goods, and all or any the goods of his or their associates and companies, and euery of any of them, with such other necessaries and commodities of any our Realmes, as to the sayd Lord Treasurer or foure of the pryncie counsell of vs, our heyres or Successors for the time being, as aforesaid, shall be from time to time by his or their wisdoms or discretions thought meete and conuenient for the better reliefe and supportacion of him the sayd Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, and euery of any of them, and of his and their, and euery of any of their said associates and companies, any acte, statute, law, or other thing to the contrarie in any wise not withstanding.

Wherbye alwayes, and our will and pleasure is, and wee doe hereby declare to all Christian kings, princes and States, that if the sayd Sir Humfrey, his heires or assignes, or any of them, or any other by their licence or appointment, shall at any time or times hereafter robbe or spoyle by Sea or by land, or doe any acte of violence and vniuall hostilitie to any of the subiects of vs, our heires, or Successors, or any of the subiectes of any king, prince, ruler, gouernour of state being then in perfect league and amitie with vs, our heires or Successors, and that vpon such iniurie, or vpon iust complaint of any such prince, ruler, gouernour of state, or their subiectes, we, our heyres or Successors shall make open proclamation within any the portes of our Realme of England commodious, that the sayd Sir Humfrey, his heires or assignes, or any other to whom these our letters patents may extend, shall within the terme to be limited by such proclamacions, make full restitution and satisfaction of all such iniuries done, so as both wee and the sayd princes, or others so complaining, may hold vs and themselues fully contented: And that if the sayd Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, shall not make or cause to be made satisfaction accordingly, within such time so to be limited: that then it shall be lawfull to vs, our heires & Successors, to put the sayd Sir Humfrey, his heires and assignes, and adherents, and all the inhabitants of the said places to be discouered as is aforesaid, or any of them out of our allegiance and protection, and that from and after such time of putting out of protection the sayd Sir Humfrey, and his heires, assignes, adherents and others so to be put out, and the sayd places within their habitation, possession and rule, shall be out of our protection and allegiance, and free for all princes and others, to pursue with hostilitie as being not our subiects, nor by vs any way to be aduowed, maintained or defended, nor to be holden as any of ours, nor to our protection, dominion or allegiance any way belonging, for that express mention, &c. In witness whereof, &c. Witness our selfe at Westminster the 11. day of June, the 20. yeere of our raigne.

Per ipsam Regiam, &c.

A report of the voyage and successe thereof, attempted in the yeere of our Lord, 1583. by Sir Humfrey Gilbert knight, with other Gentlemen assisting him in that action, intended to discover and to plant Christian inhabitants in place conueni-ent, vpon those large and ample countries extended Northward from the Cape of Florida, lying vnder very temperate Climes, esteemed fertile and rich in Minerals, yet not in the actual possession of any Christian prince, written by M. Edward Haies Gentleman, and principal actor in the same voyage, who alone continued vnto the end, and by Gods special assistance returned home with his retinue safe and entire.

Many voyages haue bene pretended, yet hitherto neuer any thoroughly accomplished by our nation, of exact discouerie into the bowels of those maine, ample, and vast countries, extended infinitely into the North from 30. degrees, or rather from 25. deg. of Septentrion-all latitude, neither hath a right way bin taken of planting a Christian habitation and regiment vpon the same, as well may appeare both by the little wee yet do actually possesse therein, and by our ignorance of the riches and secrets within those landes, which vnto this day we knowe chiefly by the trauel & report of other nations, & most of the French, who albeit they cannot challenge such right and interest into the said countries, as we neither these many yeeres haue had oportunitie nor means so great, to discover & to plant (being vexed with the calamities of intestine warres) as we haue had by the inestimable benefit of our long & happy peace: yet haue they both waies performed more, & had long since attained a sure possession and seled government of many prouinces in those northerly parts of America, if their many attempts into those forren and remote landes had not bene impeached by their garbods at home.

The

The first discouery of Caber, and Sebastian his great tract of land stretch Newfoundland: all which if with like diligence the se coast, and out parts thereo and reuennue had bene mi of Christian religion had brought forth a most plent the chiefe intent of such as ther foundation shall in eu

And although we can hundreds of men spured by yet the euents do the to the hath not permitted so abun wealed vnto those Indiel

But most assuredly, th ward at the time assigned both of thole ample count standing God in his wisde and misty knowledge, by will enough in the yeare of his will against the du

In the meane while, t nation vnto this attempte, suartice, he may assure h Gods protection and alli vpon the land: whom G but not to build vpon so b

Otherwise, if his mot honor of God, compellio full and dreadfull maner sed countreymen, willin ple within this realme di nificant God, wherwit
man.

And the same, who se confidently repose in the the time is complet of re him an instrument to effe by the Spaniards and hath referued the same to

For not long after the West Indies for Spain
rida Northwards, to the

And whensoever affe ueries) did attempt any prouen most unhappie, of many both religious der the Spanish iurisdic might not exceed: as by

The French, as the
by how much the Span vnto Florida, and the ping vpon our right, an they had bene the first but left off to discover permitted them to estab

The first discovery of these coasts (never heard of before) was well begun by John Cabot the father, and Sebastian his sonne, an Englishman borne, who were the first finders out of all that great tract of land stretching from the cape of Florida unto those Islands which we now call the Virgin Islands: all which they brought and annexed unto the crowne of England. Since when, if with like diligence the search of Inland countries had bene followed, as the discovery upon the coast, and out parts thereof was performed by those two men: no doubt her Spanishes territories and revenue had bene mightily enlarged and advanced by this day. And which more is: the seed of Christian religion had bene sowed amongst those pagans, which by this time might have brought forth a most plentiful harvest and copious congregation of Christians. Which must be the chiefe intent of such as shall make any attempt that way: or els whatsoever is builded upon this foundation shall never obtaine happy successe nor continuance.

The coasts of Florida northward, first discovered by the English nation.

And although we can not precisely iudge (which onely belongeth to God) what have bene the humors of men stirred up to great attempts of discovering & plaving in those remote countries: yet the events do shew that either Gods cause hath not bene chiefly preferred by them, or els God hath not permitted so abundant grace as the light of his word and knowledge of him to be revealed unto those Infidels as for the appointed time.

But most assuredly, the onely cause of religion hitherto hath kept backe, and will also bring forward at the time assigned by God, an effectual and complet discovery and possession by Christians both of those ample countries and the riches within them, hitherto concealed: whereof notwithstanding God in his wilddome hath permitted to be revealed, from time to time, a certaine obscure and misty knowledge, by little and little, to allure the mindes of men that way (which els will be well enough in the scale of his cause) and thereby to prepare us unto a readinesse for the execution of his will against the due time attained, of calling those pagans unto Christianity.

It is his comendation.

In the meane while, it behoueth every man of great calling, in whom is any instinct of inclination unto this attempt, to examine his owne motions: which if the same proceed of ambition or avarice, he may assure himselfe it cometh not of God, and therefore can not have confidence of Gods protection and assistance against the violence (els irresistible) both of sea, and infinite perils upon the land: whom God yet may use an instrument to further his cause and glorie some way, but not to build upon so bad a foundation.

Otherwise, if his motives be derived from a vertuous & heroycall minde, preferring chiefly the honor of God, compassion of poore Infidels captiued by the deuil, extannizing in most wonderfull and dreadfull manner over their bodies and soules: advancement of his honest and well disposed countrey-men, willing to accompany him in such honourable actions: reliefe of sunnyp people within this realme distressed. All these be honorable purposes, imitating the nature of the munificent God, wherewith he is well pleased, who will assist such an attour beyonde expectation of man.

And the same, who feeleth this inclination in himselfe, by all likelihood, may hope, or rather confidently repose in the providance of God, that in this last age of the world (or likely never) the time is complet of receiving also these Gentils into merchandize: And that God will raise him an instrument to effect the same. It seemng probable by event of precedent attempts made by the Spaniards and French sundry times: that the countreyes lying North of Florida, God hath reserved the same to be reduced unto Christian civiltie by the English nation.

Probable conjectures that the lands north of Florida, are reserved for the English nation to possess.

For not long after that Christopher Columbus had discovered the Islands and continent of the West Indies for Spaine, John and Sebastian Cabot made discovery also of the rest from Florida Northwards, to the behoofe of England.

And whensoever afterwards the Spaniards (very prosperous in all their Southerne discoveries) did attempt any thing into Florida and those regions inclining to wards the North: they proceeded most unhappily and were at length discouraged utterly by the hard and lamentable successe of many both religious and vallant in armes, endeavouring to bring those Northerly regions also under the Spanish iurisdiction: as if God had prescribed limites unto the Spanish nation which they might not exceed: as by their owne getts recordeed may be aptly gathered.

The Spaniards prosper in the Southerne discoveries, yet unhappily in these Northerly parts.

The French, as they can pretend lesse title unto these Northerne parts then the Spaniards, by how much the Spaniards made the first discovery of the same continent so farre Northward as unto Florida, and the French did but reuiew that before discovered by the English nation, usurping upon our right, and imposing names upon countreyes, riuers, bays, capes, or headlands, as if they had bene the first finders of those coasts, which iniurie we offered not unto the Spaniards, but left off to discover when we approached the Spanish limits: even so God hath not hitherto permitted them to establish a possession permanent upon an others right, notwithstanding they

The French are but discoverers upon our right.

manifest

ent.
le pro p of a sices,
to In compa
sines,
of the ought y his aid ab
with Christian of any Sea
rices,
ben in upon yes of
to com ur led full re
deber
y his y time Hum disco
after erents
all bee sistite
to be of that day of ere ghim
ueni
f Flo not in eman,
Gods
by our es, ex
temi
on and herein,
e know
halfe exuni acres) es per vinces
landes
The

The French also intrusted in those parts of America. A good encouragement for the English nation, to proceed in the conquests of the North of America.

The word of God mooveth circularly.

The planting of Gods word must be handled with reverence.

In actions coloured by pretence of planting upon remote lands.

The first and great preparation of Sir Humfrey Gilbert.

manifesto be attempts, in which the issue hath bene no lesse tragicall then that of the Spaniards, as by the private reports is extant.

Then seeing the English nation onely hath right unto these countreyes of America from the cape of Florida Northward by the privilege of first discovery, unto which Cabot was authorized by regall authority, & set forth by the experience of our late famous King Henry the seventh: Which right also seemeth strongly defended on our behalfe, by the powerfull hand of almighty God, withstanding the enterprises of other nations: It may greatly incourage us, upon so iust ground, as is our right, and upon so sacred an intent, as to plant religion, (our right and intent being meet foundations for the same) to prosecute effectually unto a full possession of those so ample & pleasaunt countreyes apperteyning unto the crowne of England: the same (as is to be concludured by infallible arguments of the worlds end appoyching) being now arrived unto the time by God prescribed of thes; vocation, if ever the; calling unto the knowledge of God may be expected. Which also is very probable by the revolution and course of Gods word and religion, which from the beginning hath mooved from the East, to wards, and at last unto the West, where it is like to end, unless the same begin againe where it did in the East, which were to expect a like world againe. But we are assured of the contrary by the prophesie of Christ, whereby we gather, that after his word preached throughout the world, shall be the end. And as the Gospel when it descended Westward beganne in the South, and after ward spred into the North of Europe: euen so, as the same hath begunne in the South countreyes of America, no lesse hope may be gathered that it will also spred into the North.

These considerations may helpe to suppress all yeards rising of hard euents in attempts made this way by other nations, as also of the heauie successe and issue in the late enterpryse made by a worthy gentleman our country man Sir Humfrey Gilbert knight, who was the first that of our nation carried people to erect an habitation and gouernement in those Northely countreyes of America. About which, albeit he had consumed much substance, and lost his life at last, his people also perishing for the most part: yet the mystery thereof we must leaue unto God, and iudge charitably both of the cause (which was iust in all pretence) and of the person, who was very zealous in prosecuting the same, desiring honourable remembrance for his good minde, and experience of life in so vertuous an enterpryse. Whereby neuertheless, least any man should be dismayed by example of other folks calamity, and misbecome that God doth resist all attempts intended that way: I thought good, so farre as my selfe was an eye witness, to deliuer the circumstance and manner of our proceedings in that action: in which the gentleman was so unfortunately incumbered with wants, and woefully matched with many ill disposed people, that his rare iudgement and regiment ynnemittate for those affaires, was subjected to tolerate abuses, and in sundry extremities to holde on a course, more to upholde credit, then likely in his owne conceit, happily to succeed.

The issue of such actions being alwayes miserable, not guided by God, who abhorreth confusion and disorder, hath left this for admonition (being the first attempt by our nation planned) unto such as shall take the same cause in hand hereafter, not to be discouraged from it: but to make men well aduised how they handle his so high and excellent matters, as the carriage is of his word into those very mighty and vast countreyes. An action doubtlesse not to be intermeddled with base purposes, as many haue made the same but a colour to shadow actions, other wise scarce iustifiable: which doth excite Gods heauy iudgements in the end, to the terrifying of weak mindes from the cause, without pondering his iust proceedings: and doth also incense foren princes against our attempts how iust soeuer, who can not but deeme the sequelle very dangerous unto the; state (if in those parts we should grow to strength) seeing the very beginnings are entered with spoile.

And with this admonition denounced vpon zeale towards Gods cause, also towards such in whom appeared disposition honorable unto this action of planting Christian people and religion in those remote and barbarous nations of America (vnto whom I wish all happinell) I will now proceed to make relation by itselfe, yet particularly, of our voyage vnder taken with Sir Humfrey Gilbert, begun, continued, and ended aduersly.

When first Sir Humfrey Gilbert vnder tooke the Westerne discovery of America, and had procured from her Majesty a very large commission to inhabit, and possesse at his choise all remote and heathen lands not in the actual possession of any Christian prince, the same commission exemplified with many privileges, such as in his discretion he might demand: They many gentlemen of good estimation dye to vnto him, to associate him in so commendable an enterpryse, so that the preparation was expected to grow vnto a puissant fleet, able to encounter a kings power by sea: neuertheless, amongst a multitude of voluntary men, the; dispositions were diuers, which bred a iarre, and made a diuision in the and when the shipping was some time brake course, & others failed of the; generall with few of his of no lesse misfortune, he (more to his griefe) of a v

Hauing burped onely red, his minde yet not dissimulate, good occasion seruing his desire: at last he granted ability, desiring the priuilege of the riuer of Canada, to w of moment was expected, and be a furtherance vnto court, might be excused to gions were of no regard: vertue of his grant, vnto which induced Sir Humfrey Gilbert, because his commission possession.

Time went away with himselfe to take a voyage most was expected of which In furtherance of his vnto lesse very zealous to the men to the; ability is open cause. Who beginning of and things requisite, some such were the difficulties lesse then two yeeres: ma

The last place of four at vnto Plymouth: then before our floze yet remayned doubtlesse it seemed first ended discovery, either fr

The first (that is begun here assured to haue come and would haue furthered wards cape Bixton, and

Also the yeere being finished in Northely courses, which which we had space enough that season, being m long and rigorous.

These & other like contrary was inferred: that diminished and left in suff to haue a course most like way, which was but less that time of the yeere, a fish: we should be relieved might well spare, and fr

Not staying long vnto Summe, vntill we arrived. By which reasons was necessitie, which must be going with it continuall and made a division in the end, to the confusion of that attempt euen before the same was begunne, and when the shipping was in a maner prepared, & men ready vpon the coast to go aboard: at what time some byake course, and followed courses degenerating from the voyage before pretended. Others failed of theyr promises contracted, and the greater number were distract. & leaving the generall with few of his assured friends, with whom he aduentured to sea: where hauing called of no lesse misfortune, he was hoylely driuen to retorne home with the losse of a tall shippe, and (more to his grieffe) of a valiant gentleman Spiles Spogan.

Hauing buried onely in a preparation a great masse of substance, wher by his estate was impaired, his minde yet not dismayd, he continued his former designe and purpose to reuile this enterprise, good occasion seruing. Upon which determination standing long, without meanes to satisfie his desire: at last he granted certaine assignements out of his commission to sundry persons of meane ability, desiring the priuilege of his grant, to plant and settle in the North parts of America about the riuer of Canada, to whom if God gaue good successe in the North parts (where then no matter of moment was expected) the same (he thought) would greatly aduance the hope of the South, and be a furtherance vnto his determination that way. And the wooll that might happen in that countrey, might be excused without prejudice vnto him by the former supposition, that those North regions were of no regard: but chiefly a possession taken in any part of those heathen countries by vertue of his grant, did inuest him of territories extending euery way two hundred leagues: which induced Sir Humfrey Gilbert to make those assignements, desiring greatly theyr expedition, because his commission did expyre after five yeeres, if in that space he had not gotten actual possession.

A constant resolution of Sir H. Gilbert.

Time went away without any thing done by his assignees: insomuch at last he must resolve himselfe to take a voyage in person, for more assurance to keepe his patent in force, which then almost was expired: or within two yeeres.

A second preparation of Sir H. Gilbert.

In furtherance of his determination, amongst others, Sir George Beckam knight serued himselfe very zealous to the action, greatly aiding both by his aduise and in the charge. Other gentlemen to the priuilege ioyned vnto him, resolved to aduenture theyr substance and liues in the same cause. Who beginning theyr preparation from that time, both of shipping, munition, victuall, men, and things requisite, some of them continued the charge two yeeres complet, without intermission, such were the difficulties and crosse accidents, opposing these proceedings, which tooke not end so little then two yeeres: many of which circumstances I will omit.

The last place of our assembly, before we left the coast of England, was in Caulet bay, nere the town of Plymouth: then resolved to put vnto the sea with shipping and prouision, such as we had, before our voyage yet remaining, but chiefly the time and season of the yeere were too farre spent. Wherefore it seemed first very doubtfull, by what way to shape our course, and to beginne our intended discovery, either from the South Northward, or from the North Southward.

The first (that is beginning South) without all controuersy was the likeliest, wherein we were assured to haue commoditie of the currant, which from the cape of Florida stretcheth Northward, and would haue furthered greatly our navigation, discovering from the foresaid cape along towards cape Britton, and all those lands lying to the North.

Consultation about our course.

Also the yeere being farre spent, and arriued to the month of June, we were not to spend time in Northely courses, where we should be surpris'd with timely winter: but to court the South, which we had space enough, then to haue attained: and there mighte with lesse detrimēt haue wintered that season, being more mild and hoze in the South then in the North, where winter is both long and rigorous.

Commodities in discouraging from South Northward.

These & other like reasons alleged in fauor of the Southerne course, first to be taken, to the contrary was inferred: that so much as both our victualls, and many other needfull prouisions were diminished and left insufficient for so long a voyage, and for the wintering of so many men, we ought to shape a course most likely to minister supply: and that was to take the Newfoundland land in our way, which was but seuen hundred leagues from our English coast. Where being usually at that time of the yeere, and vntill the fine of August, a multitude of shippes repaying thither for fish: we should be relieved abundantly with many necessaries, which after the fishing ended, they might well spare, and freely impart vnto vs.

Not staying long vpon that New land coast, we might proceed Southward, and followe still the Sunne, vntill we arriued at places more temperate to our content.

Cause why we began our discovery to the North. The commodities in beginning North.

By which reasons we were the rather induced to followe this Northely course, obeying vnto necessitie, which must be supplied. Other wise, we doubted that sudden approach of winter, hindring with it continuall fogge, and thicke miste, tempest and rage of weather: also contrarietie of currents

Courants descending from the cape of Florida vnto cape Bixton and cape Rafe, would fall out to be great and irrefutable impediments vnto our further proceeding for that parte, and compell vs to labour in those North and colde regions.

Wherefoze suppressing all objections to the contrary, we resolved to beguine our course Northward, and to follow directly as we might, the trade way vnto Newfoundland: from whence after our refreshing and reparation of wants, we intended without delay (by Gods permission) to proceed into the South, not omitting any riuer or bay, which in all that large tract of land appeared to our view worthy of search. Immediately we agreed vpon the manner of our course and orders to be obserued in our voyage: which were deliuered in writing vnto the capitaines and maisters of euery shippe a copie in maner following.

Euery shippe had deliuered two bollets of scrowles, the one sealed by in ware, the other left open: in both which were included seuerall watchwords: that open, seruing vpon our owne coast of the coast of Ireland: the other sealed, was promised on all hands not to be broken by vntill we should be cleere of the Irish coast: which from thencefoorth did serue vntill we arrived and met altogether in such harbours of the Newfoundland as were agreed for our Rendevous. The said watchwords being requisite to know our courses, whensoever by night, either by fortune of weather, our fleet dispersed should come together againe: or one should hale another: or if by ill watch and steardage one shippe chance to fall aboord of another in the darke.

The reason of the bollet sealed, was to keepe secret that watchword while we were vpon our owne coast, least any of the company, stealing from the fleet, might betray the same: which known to an enemy, he might boord vs by night without mistrust, hauing our owne watchword,

Orders agreed vpon by the Capitaines and Maisters to be obserued by the fleet of sir Humfrey Gilbert.

1. Item, the Admirall to carry his flagge by day, and his light by night.

2. Item, if the Admirall shall shoot his saile by night, then to shew two lightes vntill he be answered againe by euery shippe shewing one lighte for a short time.

3. Item, if the Admirall after his shooting of saile, as aforesaid, shall make moze saile againe: then he to shew three lightes one aboue another.

4. Item, if the Admirall shall happen to hull in the night: then to make a waivering lighte ouer his other light, waivering the lighte vpon a pole.

5. Item, if the fleet should happen to be scattered by weather, or other mishap, then as soone as one shall descry another, to hoist both toppes sailes twise, if the weather will serue, and to strike them twise againe: but if the weather serue not, then to hoist the maine toppes saile twise, and forthwith to strike it twise againe.

6. Item, if it shall happen a great fogge to fall, then presently euery shippe to beare by with the admirall, if there be winde: but if it be a calme, then euery shippe to hull, and so to lie at hull till it be cleare. And if the fogge do continue long, then the Admirall to shoot off two pieces euery evening, and euery shippe to answer it with one shot: and euery man bearing to the shippe, that is to leeward so neere as he may.

7. Item, euery maister to giue charge vnto the watch to looke out well, for laying aboord one of another in the night, and in fogges.

8. Item, euery evening euery shippe to haile the Admirall, and so to fall astraine him, saying through the Ocean: and being on the coast, euery shippe to haile him both morning and evening.

9. Item, if any shippe be in danger any way, by leake or other wise, then he to shoot off a piere, and presently to hang out one light, whereupon euery man to beare towards her, answering her with one lighte, for a short time, and so to put it out againe, thereby to giue knowledge that they haue scene her taken.

10. Item, whensoever the Admirall shall hang out her ensigne in the maine spowes, then euery man to come aboord her, as a token of counsell.

11. Item, if there happen any storme or contrary winde to the fleet after the discouery, whereby they are separated: then euery shippe to repaige vnto their last good port, there to meete againe.

Our

The course first Southwardly to of Fermous, & vnto the North to repaige to that place Northward of it: and when you shall depart, to

A directio

Beginning our course Northward such time as the Ocean is subject muchly to 45 to 47 degrees of latitude North of the height of 47 the contrary: but to do so, because cape Rafe

If by contrary winde

ley for a place of our

If we be driven backe

place of our assembly to

If we shall not happen

ton, or the nearest habo

If by meanes of other port to the Westward, &

the after commeth to know

The marks that euery

written by himselfe, sea was not to be opened un instruction of after comm who had bene there, or which way.

Orders thus deterrm himselfe vnto his charge soft gale of winde, we b our Loyd 1583, hau

names and burthens, b

as follo weth:

1 The deliight (alia

Generall, and William

2 The Barke Rato

then Vice admirall: in

3 The Golden hinc

ward Hayes capitaine

4 The Swallow

5 The Squirill, o

one Cade maister.

We were in numbre

as shipwrightes, & al

Generall men and Re

we were prouided of

Dobby hoist, and Pa

Our course agreed vpon.

The course first to be taken for the discovery is to beare directly to cape Rafe the most southerly cape of Newfoundland. And there to harbor our selues either in Rogneux or Fermous, being the first places appointed for our Rende vous, and the next harbors unto the Northward of cape Rafe. And therefore euery shippe separated from the fleet, to repaye to that place so fast as God shall permit, whether you shall fall to the Southward, or Northward of it: and there to stay for the meeting of the whole fleet the space of tenne dayes, and when you shall depart, to leaue marks.

A direction of our course vnto the New found land.

Beginning our course from Silley, the neerest is by West south west (if the winde serue) vntill such time as we haue brought our selues in the latitude of 43 or 44 degrees, because the Ocean is subiect much to Southerly winde in June and July. Then to take traueise from 45 to 47 degrees of latitude, if we be enforced by contrary winde: and not to go to the Northward of the height of 47 degrees of Septentrional latitude by no means, if God shall not enforce the contrary: but to do your induoy to keepe in the height of 46 degrees, so neere as you can possibly, because cape Rafe lyeth about that height.

Notes.

If by contrary winde we be vsuene backe vpon the coast of England, then to repaye vnto Silley for a place of our assembly and meeting.

If we be vsuene backe by contrary winde, that we can not passe the coast of Ireland: then the place of our assembly to be at Beare haueu or Baltimore haueu.

If we shall not happen to meet at cape Rafe, then the place of Rende vous to be at cape Bixton, or the neerest harbor vnto the Westward of cape Bixton.

If by meanes of other shipping we may not safely stay there, then to rest at the very next safe port to the Westward, euery shippe leauing theyr marks behinde them for the more certaintie of the after commers to know to where to finde them.

The marks that euery man ought to leaue in such a case, were of the Generals private deuise, written by himselfe, sealed also close in waue, and deliuered vnto euery shippe one scroutle, which was not to be opened vntill occasion required, whereby euery man was certified what to leaue for instruction of after commers: and euery of vs comming into any harbour or riuer, might knowe who had bene there, or whether any were still there by higher into the riuer, or departed, and which way.

Orders thus determined, and promises mutually giuen to be obserued, euery man with him selfe vnto his charge, the anchors being already weyrd, and our shippe vnder saile, hauing a soft gale of winde, we began our voyage vpon Tuesday the eleuenth day of June, in the yere of our Lord 1583, hauing in our fleet (at our departure from Causet bay) these shippes, whose names and burthens, with the names of the captaines and maisters of them, I haue also inserted, as followeth:

- 1 The delight (alias) the George, of burthen 120 tunnes, was Admirall: in which went the Generall, and William Winter captaine in her, and part owner, and Richard Cleark maister.
- 2 The Barke Ratley, set forth by M. Walter Ratley, of the burthen of 200 tunnes, was then vice admirall: in which went M. Butler captaine, and Robert Davis of Bristoll maister.
- 3 The Golden hinde, of burthen 40 tunnes, was then Reser admirall: In which went Edward Hayes captaine and owner, and William Cox of Lim: house maister.
- 4 The Swallow, of burthen 40 tunnes: in her was captaine Maurice Bologne.
- 5 The Squirrell, of burthen tenne tunnes: in which went captaine William Aubreyes, and one Cade maister.

We were in number in all, about 260 men: among whom we had of euery faculty good choice, as Shipwrights, Halons, Carpenters, Smithes, and such like, requisite to such an action: also Spinners, men and Refiners. Besides, for solace of our people, and allurement of the Sauaiges, we were provided of Muske in good barrey: Not omitting the least toys, as Hoys dancers, Dobby hoys, and Spynlike conceits to delight the Sauage people, whom we intended to winne

Beginning of the voyage.

Our fleet consisted of five Gallies, in which we had about 260 men. Spinners in the ship, for such conceits.

bert.
all our to mpell us e Roytence as ffion) to ppears orders matters of ther left one coast
ntill we
and met The said
e of wall warch
pon our
: which ch word,
c
no light
time.
the moye
the our soone as the them
xythwich
by with ie at hull
es every pe, that nd one of , saying
and cut-
a piece,
ring her hat they then o
scourry,
to merce
Our

by all fayre meanes possible. And to that end we were indifferently furnished of all prett haberdasherie wares to barter with those simple people.

June 11.

In this manner we set forward, departing (as hath bene said) out of Causon bay the eleventh day of June, being Tuesday, the weather and winde fayre and good all day, but a great storme of thunder and winde fell the same night.

June 13.

Obscure.

Thursday following, when we hailed one another in the evening (according to the order before specified) they signified unto vs out of the Vice admirall, that both the captain, and very many of the men were fallen sicke. And about midnight the Vice admirall forooke vs, notwithstanding we had the winde East, fayre and good. But it was after credibly reported, that they were infected with a contagious sicknesse, and arrived greatly distressed at Plymouth: the reason I could never understand. Sure I am, no cost was spared by the y<sup>e</sup>ownc H. Raleigh, in fetching them forth: Therefore I leave it unto God.

By this time we were in 48 degrees of latitude, not a litle grieved with the losse of the most puissant shippe in our fleet: after whose departure, the Golden hinde succeeded in the place of Vice admirall, and remoued her flagge from the mizon unto the foze toppe.

June 15.

From Saturday the 15 of June untill the 28, which was upon a Friday, we never had fayre day without fogge or raine, and windes bad, much to the West north west, whereby we were driven Southward unto 41 degrees scarce.

About this time of the yere the windes are commonly West to wards the Newfoundland land, keeping ordinarily within two points of West to the South or to the North, whereby the course thither falleth out to be long and tedious after June, which in March, April & May, hath bene performed out of England in 22 dayes and lesse. We had winde alwayes so scant from West north west, and from West South west againe, that our traueise was great, running South unto 41 degrees almost, and afterward North into 51 degrees.

July 20.
Great fogges upon the Sea an Sea North ward.

Also we were incumbered with much fogge and mists in manner palpable, in which we could not keepe so well together, but were distressed, losing the company of the Swallow and the Squirit upon the 20 day of July, whom we met againe at severall places upon the Newfoundland coast the third of August, as shall be declared in place convenient.

July 27

Saturday the 27 of July, we might descry not farre from vs, as it were, mountaines of ice driven upon the sea, being then in 50 degrees, which were carried Southward to the weather of vs: whereby may be conjectured that some current doth set that way from the North.

The banks in length unknown
when first they from South into South, in breadth 10
leagues, in depth of water 300 fathome.

Before we come to Newfoundland about 50 leagues on this side, we passe the banks, which are high grounds rising within the sea, and under water, yet deepe enough, and without danger, being commonly not lesse then 25 and 30 fathome water upon them: the same (as it were) some baine of mountaines within the sea) doe runne along, and from the Newfoundland land, beginning Northward about 52 or 53 degrees of latitude, & do extend into the South in sinicity. The breadth of this banke is somewhere moze, and somewhere lesse: but we found the same about 10 leagues over, having sounded both on this side thereof, and the other toward Newfoundland land, but found no ground, with almost 200 fathome of line, both before and after we had passed the banks. The Portugallies, and French chiefly, have a notable trade of fishing upon this banke, where are sometimes an hundred or more fialles of shippes: who commonly begiune the fishing in April, and have ended by July. That fish is large, alwayes wet, having no land nere to drye, and is called Coyre fish.

A great fishing
upon the banks.

During the time of fishing, a man shall know without sounding, when he is upon the banke, by the incredible multitude of sea fowle hovering over the same, to prey upon the offalles and garbage of fish throwen out by fisher men, and floting upon the sea.

Abundance of fowles.

July 30.

First sight of
land.

Upon Tuesday the 11 of June, we forooke the coast of England. So againe Tuesday the 30 of July (seven weeks after) we got sight of land, being immediately embayed in the Grand bay, or some other great bay: the certainty whereof we could not iudge, so great was the fogge did hang upon the coast, as neither we might discern the land well, nor take the Sunnes bright. But by our best computation we were then in 51 degrees of latitude.

Forsoaking this bay and uncomfortable coast (nothing appearing unto vs but hideous rocks and mountaines, bare of trees, and void of any greene herbe) we followed the coast to the South, with wether fayre and cleere.

Islands and a fowle named Penguin.

We had sight of an Island named Penguin, of a fowle there breeding in abundance, almost incredible, which can not flye, the wings not able to carry the body, being very large (not much lesse then a goose) and exceeding fat: which the French men use to take without difficulty upon that Island, and to barrell them up with salt. But for lingering of time we had made vs there the like provision.

Creeping

Creeping this coast the maine to the South which goeth in a great Swallow againe, whereof it seemed they were not to cast by into albeit himselfe was vobesert: who for the mainland, being pirates, and another with salt, was the same ship not from the General) the low the same company consenting to their murder and approbation of byooke ceuenge upon these went under protest.

Therefore byd further home after the fishing too of victual, and the Admiral, they besought might be spared, the charge to deale favourables, and the meno wane our life what mischief) as they tooke sea, and certaine of whom they had before afterward of the poor home (whiche they dengeance not long the world Gods iudge.

Thus after we had against the harbor cal for the enurance into English marchants (of fishermen within meeting both of the ready our fights, & being within of all n to give them knowle for his voyage he had enurance (which is but boord side by great o the hoare, where merchants to helpe vs in which to woe off the

Having taken pling aboard our Ad fleet of Englishmen all satisfied when to the behalfe of p regions, requiring farre as convenient wherof he made off they should demaund dition of his demaun milled them, after p

Trending this coast, we came to the Island called Baccalcu, the same not past 2. leagues from the maine: to the South wherof lieth Cape S. Francis, 7. leagues distant from Baccalcu, betwene which goeth in a great bay, by the vulgar foze called the bay of Conception. Here we met with the Swallow againe, whome we had lost in the fogge, and all her men altered into other apparell wherof it seemed their foze was so amended, that for loy & congratulation of our meeting, they spured not to call by into the aire and overboord, their caps and hats in good plentie. The Capaine albeit himselfe was very honest and religious, yet was he not appoynted of men to his hunt; and desert: who for the most part were such as had bene by vs surpris'd vpon the narrow seas of England, being pirats, and had taken at that instant certaine Frenchmen laden one barke with wines, and another with salt. Both which we rescued, &ooke the man of warre with all her men, which was the same ship now called the Swallow, following still their kinde so oft, as (being separated from the General) they found opportunity to robbe and spoile. And because Gods iustice did follow the same companie, euen to destruction, and to the overthrow also of the Capaine (though not consenting to their misdeameany:) I wil not conceale any thing that maketh to the manifestacion and approbation of his iudgements, for examples of others, perfwaded that God moze sharplyooke reuenge vpon them, and hath tollerated longer as great outrage in others: by howe much the more vnder protection of his cause and religion, which was then presented.

Herfoze by further enquire it was knowne, how this company met with a barke returning home after the fishing with his freight: and because the men in the Swallow were very neere standers of vicual, and chiefly of apparel, doubtful withal where or when to finde and meete with their Admirall, they besought the captaine they might go aboard this Newlander, only to borrow what might be spared, the rather because the same was bound homeward. Leane giuen, not without charge to deale fauorably, they came aboard the fisherman, whom they pressed of tackle, sailes, cables, vitayles, and the men of their apparel: nor sparing by torture (winding ropes about their beaues) to drawe oute else what they thought good. This done with expedition (like men skillfull in such mischief) as they took their rocke boat to goe aboard their owne ship, it was ouerwhelmed in the sea, and certaine of these men there drowned: the rest were preserved euen by those seely soules whom they had before spoiled, who saued and deliuered them aboard the Swallow. What became afterward of the poore Newlander, perhaps destitute of sailes & furniture sufficient to carry them home (whither they had not less to ruine then 750. leagues) God alone knoweth, whoooke vengeance not long after of the rest that escaped at this instant, to reuise the fact, and iustitie to the world Gods iudgements inflicted vpon them, as shall be declared in place conuenient.

Thus after we had met with the Swallow, we held on our course Southward, until we came against the harbor called S. Johns, about 5. leagues from the former Cape of S. Francis: where before the entrance into the harbor, we found also the frigate of Squirrel lying at anchor. All home the English marchants (that were & atwaies be Admiralls by turnes interchangeably ouer the flectes of fishemen within the same harbor) would not permit to enter into the harbor. Glad of so happy meeting both of the Swallow and frigate in one day (being Saturday the 3. of August) we made ready our fighes, & prepared to enter the harbor, any resistance to the contrary notwithstanding, there being within of all nations, to the number of 36. sailes. But first the General dispatched a boate to giue them knowlege of his comming: for no ill intent, hauing Commission from her Maiestie for his voyage he had in hand. And immediately we followed with a slacke gale, and in the very entrance (which is but narrow, not about 2. bures length) the Admirall fell vpon a rocke on the leeward side by great oversight, in that the weather was faire, the rocks much about water fast by the shoare, where neither went any sea gate. But wee found such readinesse in the English Marchants to helpe vs in that danger, that without delaye there were brought a number of boates, which to wedd off the ship, and cleared her of danger.

Hauing taken place conuenient in the road, we let fall anchors, the Captaine & masters repairing aboard our Admirall: whither also came immediatly the Masters and owners of the fishing flecte of Englishmen, to vnderstand the Generals intent & cause of our arrival there. They were all satisfied when the general had shewed his commission, & purpose to take possession of those lands to the behalfe of her Crowne of England, & the aduancement of Christian religion in those paganish regions, requiring but their lawfull ayd for repairing of his flecte, & supply of some necessaries, so farre as conueniently might be afforded him, both out of that & other harbors adjoining. In lieu wherof, he made offer to gratifie them with any fauor & priuiledge, which vpon their better aduise they should demaund, & like being not to be obtained hereafter for greater price. So craving expedition of his demaund, minding to proceed further south without long detention in those parts, he dismissed them, after promise giue of their best endeavour to satisfie speedily his so reasonable request.

An Island called Baccalcu, of the fish taken there.

Wherof some of them in the Swallow.

English ships are the strongest and the Admirals of other flectes, fishing vpon the South parts of these found lands.

The marchants with their Masters departed, they caused forthwith to be discharged all the great Ordinance of their fleet in token of our welcome.

Good order taken by English marchants for our supply in New found land.

It was further determined, that every ship of our fleet should deliuer unto the marchants and Masters of that harbour, a note of all their wants: which done, the ships as well English as strangers, were taxed at an easie rate to make supply. And besides, Commissioners were appointed, part of our owne company, and part of theirs, to goe into other harbours adloyning, (for our English marchants commaund all there) to leaue our provision: wherunto the Portingals (about other nations) did most willingly and liberally contribute. In somuch as we were presented (about our allowance) with wines, marmalads, most fine ruske of bis ket, sweet oyles, and sundry delicacies. Also we wanted not of fresh salmons, troutes, lobsters, and other fresh fish brought bayly unto vs. Moreover, as the maner is in their fishing, euery weeke to choose their Admirall a new, or rather they succeed in orderly course, and haue weekly their Admirals feast solemnized: euen to the General, Captaines and masters of our fleet, were continually inuited and feasted. To growe they, in our abundance at home, the intertainment had bene delighful, but after our wants and tedious passage through the Ocean, it seemed moze acceptable and of greater contentation, by how much the same was unexpected in that desolate corner of the worlde: where at other times of the yere, wilde beastes and birds haue onely the fruition of all those Countreys, which now seemed a place very populous and much frequented.

Good entertainment in New found land. No Sauiages in the South part of Newe found land.

August 4.

The next morning being Sunday the 4. of August, the General & his company were brought on lande by English marchants, who shewed vnto vs their accustomed walke vnto a place they call the Garden. But nothing appeared moze then Nature it selfe without art: who confusedly hath brought forth roses abundantly, wilde, but odoriferous, and to sense very comfortable. Also the like plentie of raspis berries, which do grow in euery place.

August 5.

Possession taken.

Monday foloweing, the General had his tent set vp, who being accompanied with his owne followers, summoned the marchants, and masters, both English and strangers to be present at his taking possession of those Countreys. Before whom openly was read & interpreted vnto the strangers, his Commission: by vertue whereof he tooke possession in the same harbour of S. Johns, and 200. leagues euery way, inuaded the Queenes Maiestie with the title and dignitie thereof, had deliuered vnto him (after the custome of England) a rod and a turffe of the same soile, entering possession also for him, his heires and assignes for euer: And signified vnto al men, that from that time forthward, they should take the same lande as a terricoyle appertaining to the Queene of England, and himselfe authorized vnder her Maiestie to possesse and enjoy it, And to ordeine lawes for the gouernment thereof, agreeable (so neere as conueniently might be) vnto the lawes of England: vnder which all people comming thither hereafter, either to inhabite, or by way of trafique, should be subiected and gouerned. And especially at the same time for a beginning, he posed and deliuered three lawes to be in force immediately. That is to say: the first for Religion, which in publique exercise should be according to the Church of England. The 2. for maintenance of her Maiesties right and possession of those terricoyles, against which if any thing were attempted prejudiciall, the partie or parties offending, should be adiudged and executed as in case of high treason, according to the lawes of England. The 3. if any person should utter words sounding to the dishonour of her Maiestie, he should loose his eares, and haue his ship and goods confiscate.

Three Lawes.

Actual possession maintained in Newe found land.

These contents published, obedience was promised by general voice & consent of the multitude of Englishmen as strangers, paying for continuance of this possession & gouernment begun. After this, the assembly was dismissed, And after ward were erected not farre from that place the Armes of England ingrauen in lead, & inscribed vpon a pillar of wood. Yet further & actually to establish this possession taken in the right of her Maiestie, & to the behoofe of Sir Humfrey Gilbert knight, his heires and assignes for euer: the General granted in fee farme diuers parcels of land lying by the water side, both in this harbor of S. Johns, & elf where, which was to the owners a great commodity, being thereby assured (by their proper inheritance) of groundes conuenient to dresse and to drie their fish, whereof many times before they did faile, being persecuted by them that came first into the harbor. For which groundes they did couenant to pay a certaine rent and seruice vnto Sir Humfrey Gilbert, his heires or assignes for euer, and secretly to mainteine possession of the same, by themselves or their assignes.

Open appointed to make search.

It was remained onely to take in provision graunted, according as euery shippe was taxed which did fish vpon the coast adloyning. In the meane while, the General appointed men vnto their charge: some to repair and reuin the ships, others to attend in gathering together our supply and provisions: others, to search the commodities and singularities of the countrey, to be found by sea or land, & to make relation vnto the General what either themselves could knowe by their owne tra- uail uail and experience quented the same coast coastre exactly grade a briefe description of and such also as are in plats that were by the Admirall: wheretoze

A b

What which or rather (as in the North Laurence it

North side of this Ista 400. miles, accompanying deg of September boys, safe roades for the The common opinion as of some part it may ries of Europe, which of the climate that the Se lie under the climates o so much differ from the the Ocean & Harpe w

Where the mountaine ritie and rigoz of the le the moze subiect to colde not in Newfound land the mountaine are ex which commeth to pas in the countreys lying cents, the valleys also a in Newfound land: it not be so foxyble in the sicke: by howe much most part) by land an where by his motion i the contrary, he passed by a weth and caried to by the Sunnes reuert Northward, Newerth 46, 47, and 48. (effer also there are very ma there be certaine heat seeme, not heard of in c June, July, August & so men remaining by found the cold to erre haue arrived there aft no marueile, consider the place most decli not be found within la breaking off the whole parts, about the w of Russia: yet are the commodities of S. Ioue in the Newfound lan use and experience, or by good intelligence of men English or strangers, who had longest frequented the same coast. Also some observed the elevation of the pole, and by the places of the coast exactly graded. And by that I could gather by each mans several relation, I have drawn a briefe description of the New found land, with the commodities by sea or lande already made, and such also as are in possibilitie and great likelihood to be made: Neerthe lesse the Caros and plates that were drawing, with the de: gradation of the harbours, bays, & capes, did perish with the Admiral: wherefore in the description following, I must omit the particulars of such things.

A briefe relation of the New found land and commodities thereof.

What which we do call the Newfound land, and the Frenchmen Bacalaos, is an Island, or rather after the opinion of some it consisteth of sundry Islands & broken lands, situate in the North regions of America, upon the gulfes & entrance of the great river called S. Laurence in Canada. Into the which navigation may be made both on the South and North side of this Island. The land lieth South & North, containing in length betwene 3. and 400. miles, according from Cape race (which is in 46. deg. 25. min.) unto the Grand bay in 52. deg. of Septentrional latitude. The Island round about hath very many goodly bays and harbours, safe roades for ships, the like not to be found in any part of the known world.

Newfound land is of Islands of broken lands.

Goodly roads and harbours.

The common opinion that is had of intemperature & extreme cold that should be in this countrey, as of some part it may be verified, namely the North, where I grant it is more cold then in countreys of Europe, which are under the same elevation: even so it cannot stand with reason & nature of the climate, that the South parts should be so intemperat as the hute hath gone. For, as if same do lie under the climats of Britton, Aniou, Poictou in France, betwene 46. & 49. deg. so can they not so much differ from the temperature of those countreys: unless upon the outcoasts lying open unto the Ocean & sharpe winds, it must in deede be subject to more colde, then further within the land, where the mountaines are interposed, as walles and bulwarkes, to defende and to resist the aspect and rigor of the sea and weaether. Some holde opinion, that the Newfound land might be the more subject to cold, by how much it lieth high and neere unto the middle region. I graunt, that not in Newfound land alone, but in Germany, Italy & Affricke, even under the Equinoctial line, the mountaines are extreme cold, and sel dome uncovered of snow, in their culme & highest tops, which cometh to passe by the same reason that they are extended towards the middle region: yet in the countreys lying beneath them, it is found quite contrary. Even so at hillies having their discents, the vales also and low grounds must be like wise hot or temperate, as the climate doeth giue in Newfound land: though I am of opinion that the Sunnes restriction is much cooler, and cannot be so forcible in the Newfound land, nor generally throughout America, as in Europe or Affricke: by how much the Sunne in his diurnal course from East to West, passeth over (so) the most part) by land and sandie countreys, before hee arriveth as the West of Europe or Affricke, whereby his motion increaseth heate, with little or no qualification by moyst vapours. Where, on the contrary, he passeth from Europe and Affricke unto America over the Ocean, from whence it draweth and carrieth with him abundance of moyst vapours, which do qualifie and infeeble greatly the Sunnes reuerberation upon this countrey chiefly of Newfound land, being so much to the Northward. Neertheles (as I said before) the cold cannot be so intollerable under the latitude of 46. 47. and 48. (especially within land) that it should be uninhabitable, as some doe suppose, seeing also there are very many people more to the North by a great deale. And in these South parts there be certaine beasts, ounces of leopards, & birds in like maner, which in the Sommer we haue scene, nor heard of in countreys of extreme and vehement coldness. Besides, as in the months of June, July, August & September, the heate is somewhat more then in England at those seasons: so men remaining upon the South parts neere unto Cape Race, until after Hollandes, haue not found the cold so extreme, nor much differing from the temperature of England. Those which haue arrived there after November & December, haue found the snow exceeding deepe, whereat no marvell, considering the ground upon the coast, is rough & brenen, and the snow is driven into the places most declining, as the like is to be scene with vs. The like depth of snow happily shall not be found within lande upon the plainer countreys, which also are defended by the mountaines, breaking off the violence of winds & weather. But admitting extraordinary colde in those South parts, about this which by here: it can not be so great as in Sweueland, much lesse in Moscouia or Russia: yet are the same countreys very populous, and the rigor of colde is dispensed with by the commodity of Scours, warme clothing, meates and drinkes: all which neede not to be wanting in the Newfound land, if we had men there to inhabit.

Newfound land habitable.

Cold by actual means.

Commodities

Fish of sea and fresh water.

In the South parts we found no inhabitants, which by all likelihood have abandoned those coastes, the same being so much frequented by Christians: But in the North are savages altogether barremesse. Touching the commodities of this Countrey, serving either for sustentation of inhabitants, or for maintenance of traffique, there are & may be made divers: that it seemeth Nature hath recompensed that only desert and incommoditie of some sharpe cold, by many benefits: viz. With incredible quantitie, and no lesse varietie of kindes of fish in the sea and fresh waters, as trouts, salmons & other fish to us unknowne: Also codde, which alone hath many nations thither, and is become the most famous fishing of the world. A bundance of whales, for which also is a very great trade in the bays of Placentia & Grand bay, where is made Trane oyles of the whale: Herring the largest that have bene heard of, and exceeding the Hailstrand herring of Norway: but hitherto was neuer benefit taken of the herring fishing. There are sundry other fish very delicate, namely the Bonito, lobsters, turbot, with others infinite not sought after: Oysters hauing peele but not orient in colour: Iooke it by reason they were not gathered in season.

Concerning the inland commodities, as well to be taken from this land, as from the exceeding large Countreys adioyning: there is nothing which our East and Noztherly countreies of Europe doe yeeld, but the like also may be made in them as plentifully by time and industrie: Namely, rosen, pitch, earre, soapashes, dealwood, malkes for shippes, hides, furrer, flaxe, hempe, coyne, cables, roydage, linen cloth, mettals and many more. All which the Countreies will asoarde, and the soyle is apt to yeelde.

The trees for the most in those South parts, are firretrees, pine and Cypressell, all yeelding gumme and carpentine.

Cherrie trees bearing fruit no bigger then a small pease. Also pearre trees but fruitlesse. Other trees of some sortes to us unknowne.

The soyle along the coast is not deepe of earth, bringing forth abundantly peason small, yet good feeding for caele. Roses passing sweete, like vnto our muske roses in soyme, raspases, a berrie we call burts, good and wholesome to eat. The grasse and herbe doth far exceede in very those space, yroued by English merchants which haue caried sheepe thither for fresh vitale, & had them raised exceeding fat in lesse then 7 weekes. Deason which our countrey men haue sowne in the time of May, haue come by faire, & bene gathered in the beginning of August, of which our Generall had a present acceptable for the rarenesse, being the first fruits comming by art and industrie in that desolate and inhabited land.

Lakes or poodes of fresh water, both on the toppes of mountaines and in the valleys. In which are said to be muskels not unlike to haue pearle, which I had put in trial, if by mischance falling vnto me, I had not bene letted from that and other good experiments I was minded to make.

Foule both of water & land in great plenty and diuersitie. All kinde of greene foule: Others as bigge as buzzards, yet not the same. A great white foule called of some a Gaunt.

Vpon the land diuers sortes of haukes, as faulcons, and others by report: Partridges most plentifully larger then ours, gray and white of colour, and rough footed like bones, which our men after one flight did kill with cougels, they were so fat and unable to flye. Birds some like blackbirds, linnets, canary birds, and others very small. Beasts of sundry kinds, red deare, buttolesse of a beast it seemeth by the tract and foote very large in manner of an ox. Beares, ounces of leopards, some greater & some lesser, wolues, foxes, which to the Northward a litle further are blacke, whose furre is esteemed in some Countreies of Europe very rich, Otters, beuers, marternes: And in the opinion of most men that saw it, the General had brought vnto him a Shable alive, which he sent vnto his brother Sir John Gilbert knight of Devonshire: but it was neuer deliuered, as after I vnderstood. We could not obserue the hundredth part of creatures in those inhabited landes: but these mentioned may induce vs to glorifie the magnificent God, who hath superabundantly replenished the earth with creatures serving for the vse of man, though man hath not bled the last part of the same, which the more doth aggravate the fault and foolish slouth in many of our nation, chusing rather to liue indirectly, and very miserably to liue and die within this Realm: reffered with inhabitants, then to aduventure as becormmed men, to obtaine a habitation in these remote landes, in which Nature very prodigally doth minister vnto mens enduors, and for art to worke vpon.

For besides these already recounted and infinite moe, the mountaines generally make the vse of mineral substance: Iron very common, lead, & some where copper. I was not aware of richer mettals: albeit, by the circumstance following, more then hope may be conceiued thereof.

For amongst other charges given to inquire out the singularities of this countrey, the General was most curious in the search of mettals, commanding the minerall man and refiner, especially to be diligent. The same was a Saxon boine, honest, and religious, named Daniel. Who after

Also fourth land both minister commodities abundantly for art and industrie.

after search brought at next time he found ore yielding proceetation, than where it was, aduising deare vnto him as the it fell not out according

My selfe at this indispotion of our refiner therein, and to haue for here it but to facilitate and necessitate, to bring we haue already done haue sent it aboode, by harbor: being here but kept any byuite of mine desire, we may returne contenting me well: vnto land, and proceede to

While the better of matters for plotting of mischiefe, by the Generals and vnto. Others met laden with fish, setting woods to hide themselves departed from the coast other our company much as after we had of men to furnish all o loue with such ypoint

The Captaine of pointed Captaine, M him into the Delight, peracted and committed

The Generall man was amongst them covered vpon the coast doe. Therefore the babes and such small safetie of her and the r

Notue hauing mai Squirrel, and put abo sweete oyles: besides we had other necess boates or pinnelles st as if we had bene in a

We departed from found by exact obseru at Cape Race, as Ilea

This Cape Ipech about halfe a league is easily knowne: It

Vnder this Cape to take codde, and by bays after the fode

From hence the st alle directly to Cap after search brought at first some boxes of oare, seeming rather to be yron then other mettall. The next time he found oare, which with no small shew of contentment he deliuered vnto the Generall, using ypostration, that if sliuer were the thing which might facilitate the Generall & his followers, there it was, aduising him to seeke no further: the perill wherof hee vnderooke vpon his life (as heare vnto him as the Crowne of England vnto her Paetie, that I may vse his owne wordes) if it fell not out accordingly.

Other oare brought vnto the Generall.

My selfe at this instant liker to die then to liue, by a mischance, could not follow this confident opinion of our restner to my owne satisfaction: but afterward demanding our Generalls opinion therein, and to haue some part of the oare, he replied: Content your selfe, I haue seene enough, and were it but to satiffie my private humour, I would proceed no further. The promise vnto my friends, and necessitie, to bring also the South countreys within compass of my Patene (neere expired) as we haue already done these North parts, do onely perswade me further. And touching the oare, I haue sent it aboord, wherof I would haue no speech to be made so long as we remaine within harbor: being here both Portugals, Biscayes and Frenchmen not farre off, from whome must be kept any bryute or muttering of such matter. When we are at sea prooue shalbe made if it be to our desire, we may returne the sooner hither againe. Whole answer I iudged reasonable, and contenting me well I wheretwith I will conclude this narration and description of the New foundland, and proceede to the tell of our voyage, which ended tragically.

Reasons why no further search was made for the Oare mine.

While the better sort of vs were seriously occupied in repairing our wants, and contriuing of matters for the commoditie of our voyage: others of an other sort & disposition, were plotting of mischiefes. Some casting to steale away our shipping by night, watching opportunite by the Generalls and capitaines lying on the shoare: whose conspiracies discovered, they were prevented. Others went together in company, and caried away out of the harbors and yning, a ship laden with fish, feeding the poore men on shoare. A great many more of our people stole into the woods to hide themselves, attending time and meanes to returne home by such shipping as dayly departed from the coast. Some were sicke of fluxes, and many dead: and in briefe, by one meanes or other our company was diminished, and many by the Generall licensed to returne home. Inso-much as after we had reuietued our people, resolved to see an ende of our voyage, we grewe scant of men to furnish all our shipping: it seemed good therefore vnto the Generall to leaue the Swallowe with such provision as might be spared for transporting home the sicke people.

Spies became in our company.

The Captaine of the Delight or Admirall returned into Englaunde, in whose steade was appointed Captaine, Maurice Browne, before Captaine of the Swallowe: who also brought with him into the Delight, all his men of the Swallowe, which before haue bene noted of outrage perpetrated and committed vpon fishermen there mette at sea.

Was brought together these men into the ship, and bound to prison, who before had committed such outrage.

The Generall made choise to goe in his frigate the Squirrel, (wherof the Captaine also was amongst them that returned into England.) the same frigate being most convenient to discover vpon the coast, and to searche into euery harbour or creeke, which a great shippe could not doe. Therefore the frigate was prepared with her nettings and sights, and ouer charged with bales and such small Ordnance, more to give a shewe, then with iudgement to seeke vnto the safetie of her and the men; which afterward was an occasion also of their ouerthrow.

Why Sir H. Gilbert went in the frigate.

Nowe hauing made ready our shipping, that is to say, the Delight, the golden Hinde, and the Squirrel, and put aboarde our provision, which was wines, bread of ruske, fish wette and drie, sweete oyles: besides many other, as marmalades, figs, lymmons, barreled and such like: Also we had other necessary provisions for trimming our shippes, nettes and lines to fishewithall, boates of pinneslesse fit for discoverie. In briefe, wee were supplied of our wants commodiously, as if we had bene in a Countrey of some Citie populous and plentifull of all things.

Liberalitie of the Portugals.

We departed from this harbour of S. Johns vpon Tuesday the twentieth of August, which we found by exact obseruation to be in 47. degrees 40. minutes. And the next day by night we were at Cape Race, 25. leagues from the same harborough.

August 20. S. Johns in 47. deg. 40. min.

This Cape lyeth South Southwest from S. Johns: it is a low land, being off from the Cape about halfe a league: within the sea, riseth by a rocke against the point of the Cape, which thereby is easily knowne: It is in latitude 46. deg. 25. min.

Cape Race in 46. deg. 25. min.

Under this Cape we were becalmed a small time, during which we layde out hookes and lines to take codde, and byen in lesse then two houres, fish so large and in such abundance, that many dupes after we stode vpon no other provision.

Very large and plentiful.

From hence we shaped our course vnto the Island of Sabla, if conveniently it would so fall out, also directly to Cape Britton, Cattel in the Isle of Sabla.

Sabla lieth to the Westward of Cape Britton about 25 leagues, whither we were determined to goe vpon intelligence wee had of a Porcingall, (during our abode in S. Johns,) who was himselfe present, when the Porcingalls (about 30. yeeres past) did put into the same Islande both Meate and Swine to breed, which were since exceedingly multiplied. This seemed vnto vs very happy tidings, to haue in an Islande lying to neere vnto the maine, which wee intended to plant vpon, such store of cattel, whereby we mighte at all times conueniently be relieved of victual, and serued of stowe for beede.

Good soile.

In this course wee trended along the coast, which from Cape Race stretcheth into the North-west, making a baye, which some called Trepassa. Then goeth out againe towarde the West, and maketh a point, which with Cape Race lie in maner East and West. But this point inclineth to the North: to the West of which goeth in the bay of Placentia. We sent men on land to take view of the soyle along this coast, whereby they made good report, and some of them had will to be planted there. They sawe growing pease in great abundance euery where.

The distance betwene Cape Race, and Cape Brigon is 100. leagues. In which Nauigation we spent 8. dayes: hauing many times the wind indifferent good, yet could we neuer attaine sight of any land all that time, seeing we were hindered by the currant. At last we fel into such flats and dangers, that hardly any of vs escaped: where neuertheless we lost our Admirall with all the men and provision, not knowing certainly the place. Yet for inducing men of skill to make coniecture, by our course and way we held from Cape Race thither, And thereby the flats and dangers may be inferred in sea Cards, for warning to others that may follow the same course hereafter: I haue set downe the best reckonings that were kept by expert men, William Coxe Master of the Hind, and Iohn Paul his mate, both of Limehouse.

Reckonings kept in our course from Cape Race towards the Island of Sabla, or Cape Britton, to the time and place where we lost our Admirall.

August 22.	West,	14. leagues.
	West and by South,	25.
	West Northwest,	25.
	West Northwest,	9.
	South Southwest,	10.
	Southwest,	12.
	South Southwest,	20.
August 29.	West Northwest,	12. Here we lost our Admirall, Summe of these leagues,	117.

The reckoning of Iohn Paul Masters mate, from Cape Race.

August 22.	West,	14. leagues.
23.	Northwest and by West,	9.
24.	Southwest & by South,	5.
25.	West and by South,	40.
26.	West and by North,	7.
27.	Southwest,	3.
28.	Southwest,	9.
	Southwest,	7.
	West Southwest,	7.
29.	Northwest and by West,	20. Here we lost the Admiral.
	Summe of all these leagues	121.

Our course we helde in clearing vs of these flats was East Southeast, and South east, and South 14. leagues with a maruelous scant winde.

The

Th

Vpon Tewshope ch
gat to townd, who grees.

Wednesday towarde
West north west, con all, depriued of pow holer other course, alle waies.

The euening was t
of this Wednesday night Delight, continued in Connes, Daughte hopes full haels.

Towards the euening berping yron, hauing s on the yron, but could n nd portens storme. I o of the same night, which s

Thursday the 29. o binging withall raine
betimes in the morning mongest which, wee fo game to townd: but st ned (in his iudgement) ery any land, it being v though the halt and the Immediatly tokens greater shippe, and of be that they knewe not the Admirall stroke a grou whereupon the rest (th cast about East southea that was carried vs to thome, then five fathom then but these fathome, some despaire, so sea too

In this distresse, w power to giue the men saue themselves, either presencing themselves ble meanes. But all i the next, we began v good hap we might esp

This was a heauie
great provision, gather was the losse of our m whome was wounded Budarus, who of piet royd in the L. at the cong uerie, to the honour of and rare Poet of our ti

Here also perished
mongst some of vs in t

No lesse heauie was creeke Gentleman, our restrained, who thewed

The manner how our Admirall was lost.

Vpon Tuesday the 27. of August, toward the evening, our General caused them in his frigat to fownd, who found white lande at 35. fathome, being then in latitude about 44. degrees.

Wednesday toward night, the winde came South, and we bare with the lande all that night, West northe west, contrary to the minde of Master Cox: neuertheless wee followed the Admirall, deprived of power to auoide a mischiefe, which by no contradiction coulde be brought to holde other course, alleaging they could not make the shippe to woyke better, nor to ipe other waies.

The evening was faire, and pleasant, yet not without token of storme to ensue, and most part of this Wednesday night, like the Swanne that singeth befoze her death, they in the Admirall, of Delight, continued in sounding of Trumpets, with Drummes, and Fifes: also winding the Cornets, Waight-hopes: and in the ende of their iollite, left with the battell and ringing of dolefull knels.

Toward the evening also, we caught in the Golden Hinde a very mightie Whorpe, with a harping yron, hauing first striken diuers of them, and brought a way part of their flesh, sticking vpon the yron, but could recouer onely that one. These also passing through the Drean, in heares, did poyrend storme. I omit to recite frivolous reportes by them in the Frigat, of strange voyces, the same night, which started some from the helme.

Thursday the 29. of August, the winde rose, and blew very vehemently at South and by East, bringing withall raine, and thicke miste, that wee could not see a Cable length befoze vs. And betimes in the morning, wee were altogether runne and folded in amongst flats and sandes, amongst which, wee found shoale and deepe in every thre or foure shippes length, after wee began to fownd: but first wee were vpon them vntwaies, buttill Master Cox looking out, discerned (in his iudgement) white riffs, crying (lande) withall, though we could not afterward descry any land, it being very likely the breaking of the sea white, which seemed to be white cliffs, though the hait and thicke weather.

Immediately tokens were giuen vnto the Delight, to cast about to Sea ward, which, being the greater shippe, and of burden 120. tunnes, was yet foremost vpon the beach, keeping so ill watch, that they knewe not the danger, befoze they felt the same, too late to recouer it: for presently the Admirall stroke a grounde, and had soone after her sterne and hinder partes beaten in peeces: whereupon the rest (that is to say, the Frigat, in which was the General and the Golden Hinde) cast about East south east, bearing to the South, euen for our liues into the windes eye, because that way, carried vs to Sea ward. Making out from this danger, we fownded one while seuen fathome, then five fathome, then foure fathome and lesse, againe deeper, immediatly foure fathome, then but thre fathome, the sea going mightily and high. At last we recouered (God be thanked) in some despayre, to sea toome enough.

In this distresse, wee had vigilant eye vnto the Admirall, whom we sawe cast a way, without power to giue the men succour, neither could wee espye any of the men that leaped over boord to saue themselves, either in the same Whinelle or Cocke, or bypon rafters, and such like meanes, presenting themselves to men in those extremities: for we desired to saue the men by euery possible meanes. But all in vaine, sith God had determined their ruine: yet all that day, and part of the next, we heare by and downe as nere vnto the wracke as was possible for vs, looking out, if by good hap we might espye any of them.

This was a heauie and grieuous curst, to lose at one blowe our chiefe shippe fraighted with great provision, gathered together with much trauell, care, long time, and difficultie. But more was the losse of our men, which perished, to the number almost of a hundred soules. Amongst whome was appointed a learned man, an Hungarian, borne in the Citie of Buda, called Therof Budaeus, who of pietie and zeale to good attempts, aduentured in this action, minding to recorde in the Latine tongue; the deeds and things worthy of remembrance, happening in this disaster, to the honour of our nation, the same being adorned with the eloquent stile of this Orator, and rare Poet of our time.

Here also perished our Warren Resiner and Discoverer of inestimable riches, as it was left amongst some of vs in vndoubted hope.

No lesse heauie was the losse of the Captaine Maurice Browne, a vertuous, honest, and discrete Gentleman, our friende giuely in libertie giuen late befoze to men that ought to haue bene restrained, who showed himselfe a man resolute, and neuer vnprepared for death, as by his last act

August. 27.

28

Wherewith
before the wracke.

29

Losse of our Admirall.

Wherewith
Hungarian.

Wherewith
ner of metall.

bert.
etermined
who was of Islande into vs
ended to
of victual,
the Roysh West, and tinely to
to be plan-uigation
hine light
flats and the men
niecture,
ers may I haue
the Hind,
South
The

of this tragedie appeared, by report of them that escaped this wacke miraculously, as shall be hereafter declared. For when all hope was past of recourring the shippe, and that men began to give ouer, and to saue themselues, the Captaine was aduised before to lift also for his life, by the promise at the sterne of the shippe: but refusing that counsell, would not giue example with the first to leaue the shippe, but vsed all meane to exhort his people not to despair, nor so to leaue off their labour, choosing rather to die, then to incurre infamie, by forsaking his charge, which then might be thought to haue perished through his default, he being an ill president vnto his men, by leauing the shippe first himselfe. With this minde he mounted vpon the highest decke, where he attended imminent death, and inuoidable: how long, I leaue it to God, who withouthery noe his comfort from his seruants at such times.

It wonderfull escape and deliverance.
So great be-
dread.
So desperate resolutions.

In the meane season, certaine, to the number of foueteene persons, leaped into a small pin-nelle (the bignes of a Thames barge, which was made in the New found land) cut off the rope wherewith it was to web, and committed themselues to Gods merrie, amidst the boyme, and rage of sea and winde, destitute of foode, not so much as a byppe of fresh water. The boate felling ouercharged in foule weather with companie, Edward Heady a ballant souldier, and well reputed of his companie, preferring the greater to the lesse, thought better that some of them should euen all, made this motion to cast loes, and them to be throwen ouer board vpon whom the loes fell, thereby to lighten the boate, which otherwise seemed impossible to liue, offered himselfe with the first, content to take his aduventure gladly: which neuertheless Richard Clarke, that was Spalder of the Admirall, and one of this number, refused, aduising to abide Gods pleasure, who was able to saue all, as well as a fewe.

Thus was he misled.

The boate was carried before the winde, continuing fixe daies and nightes in the Ocean, and arrived at last with the men (aloue, but weake) vpon the New found land, saving that the foresaide Heady, (who had bene late sicke) and an other called of vs Brasile, of his travell into those Countreies, died by the way, famished, and lesse able to holde out, then those of better health. For such was their poore mens extremite, in colde and wette, to haue no better sustenance then their owne urine, for fixe daies together.

Thus whome God deliuered from drowning, hee appointed to be famished, who doth giue limits to mans times, and appointeth the manner and circumstance of dying: whome againe he will preserue, neither Sea, nor famine, can confound. For those that arrived vpon the Newe founde land, were brought into France by certaine French men, then being vpon that coast.

After this heauie chance, we continued in beating the sea by Gods will, expecting when the weather would cleere vp, that wee might yet beare in with the land, which we iudged not farre off, either the continent of some Island. For we many times, and in studdy places, found ground at 50.
45. 40. fathomes, and lesse. The ground coming vpon our lead, being sometimes oyste lands, and other while a broad shell, with a litle land about it.

Contenting
ing us to returne home as gaine.

Our people lost courage daily after this ill successe, the weather continuing thicke and blistering, with increase of colde. Winter by drawing on, which tooke from them all hope of amendment, feeling an assurance of worse weather to growe vpon vs euery day. The Lesse of vs laye full of flates and daungers inuoidable, if the winde blew harde at South. Some againe doubting we were ingulged in the Baye of S. Laurence, the coast full of dangers, and vnto vs vnknoen.
But about all, prouision waxed scant, and hope of supply was gone, with losse of our Admi-rall.

Those in the Frigate were already pinched with spare allowance, and want of clothes chiefly: Wherevpon they besought the Generall to returne for England, before they all perished.
And to them of the Golden Pinde, they made signes of their distress, pointing to their mouths, and to their clothes of stinne and ragged: then immediately they also of the Golden Pinde, grew to be of the same opinion and desire to returne home.

The former reasons hauing also moued the Generall to haue compassion of his poore men, in whome he sawe no want of good will, but of meane fitt to performe the action they came for, resolved vpon rectie: and calling to the Captaine and Spalder of the Pinde, he peeled them many reasons, inspyring this vnexpected returne, withall protesting himselfe greatly satisfied with that he had seene, and knew already.

Reiterating these wordes, he content, we haue seene enough, and take no care of eppence past:
I will see you forth royally the next Spring, if God send vs safe home. Therefore I pray you let vs no longer sturue here, where we fight against the elements.

Omitting circumstance, both vnto the Captaine & Spalder of the Pinde consented to this this motion, but to our conue returne as Shipping, and with the action as that of

So vpon Saturday
harke for England, as to us and towar of the land not swimming after the er with his whole body about the water, as the re-confidently (setting him-selues in open view and and sight of men. Thus with ouglie demonstration right against the winde) spectacle we all beheld merry strange thing, as to What opinion others ha-uoke it for Bonum Omnium.

The wind was large as the Frigate wherewith

Monday in the after de more then two dayes Race, vnto the place wher gaine is to be impured v in our returne.

This Monday the G
his force, which he hurt of hard successe to be all night, that we might hee created to carry in the harpe boyme, which we

The weather faire, it with the Captaine, Sat morning vnto night. D and to come, lanmenting bookes and notes, and doubles being some man him: yet by circumstance vnto him in the Newe f as not able to containe cer the miscarriying of coast of New found land certaine things: among time, he could neuer confine to neede at hand.

Herein my opinion is me haue the greater hop conceit of these north y land. And as before he r two these north partes, I especially of S. Johns, w money and trauell vpon partie, whome he seemet

Also laying vnto me then to be reattempted discouerie, and referred from the South, and that this motion, his owne compaignie can cease: yet comforced with the Generalls promises, of a speedie returne at Shipping, and induced by other apparant reasons, p[ro]voking an impossibilitie, to accomplish the action at that time, it was concluded on all hands to retire.

So upon Saturday in the afternoon the 31. of August, we changed our course and returned backe for England, at which very instant, even in winding about, there passed a longg betweene us and toward the land we now foresooke, a very lion to our seeming, in shape, haire and colour, not swimming after the manner of a beast by moving of his feete, but rather sliding upon the water with his whole body (excepting the legs) in sight, neither yet diving under, and againe rising about the water, as the manner is of Whales, Dolphins, Tunies, Porpoises, and all other fish: but confidently spewing himselfe above water without hiding: Notwithstanding, we presented our selves in open view, and gesture to amaze him, as all creatures will be commonly at a sudden gaze and sight of men. Thus he passed along turning his heade to and fro, yawning and gaping wide, with ought demonstration of long teeth, and glaring eyes, and to bidde us a fare well (comming sight against the wind) he sent forth a horrible voyce, roaring or bellowing as doeth a lion, which spectacle we all beheld so farre as we were able to discern the same, as men prone to wonder at every strange thing, as this doubtlesse was, to see a lion in the Ocean sea, or fish in shape of a lion. What opinion others had thereof, and chiefly the generall himselfe, I forbeare to deliver: But he wote it for Bonum Omen, rejoycing that he was to warre against such an enemy, if it were the worst.

August 31.

A monster of the sea.

The wind was large for England at our returne, but very high, and the sea rough, insomuch as the Frigate wherein the Generall went, was almost swallowed up.

Monday in the after noone we passed in sight of Cape Race, having made as much way in little more then two dayes and nights backe againe, as before we had done in eight dayes from Cape Race, unto the place where our ship perished. Which hinderance thitherward, and speede backe againe, is to be imputed unto the swift current, as well as to the windes, which we had more large in our returne.

September 2.

This Sunday the Generall came aboard the Hind, to have the Surgeon of the Hind to vesse his foote, which he hurt by treading upon a nail: At what time we comforced each other with hope of good successe to be all past, and of the good to come. So agreeing to carry our lightes alwaies by night, that we might keepe together: he departed into his Frigate, being by no means to be created to carry in the Hind, which had bene more for his service. Immediately after, followed a sharpe storme, which we overpassed for that time. Praised be God.

The weather faire, the Generall came aboard the Hind againe, to make merrie together with the Captaine, Master, and companie, which was the last meeting, and continued there from morning unto night. During which time, there passed sundry discourses, touching affaires past, and to come, lamenting greatly the losse of his great shippe, more of the men, but most of all, of his bookes and notes, and what els I knowe not, for which he was out of measure grieved, the same doubtles being some matter of more importance then his bookes, which I could not take from him: yet by circumstance gathered, the same to be the oare which Daniel the Spanon had brought unto him in the Newe found land. Whatsoever it was, the remembrance touched him so deepe, as not able to containe himselfe, he beate his boy in great rage, even at the same time. So long after the miscarriage of the great ship, because upon a faire day, when we were becalmed upon the coast of New found land, neere unto Cape Race, he sent his boye aboard the Admirall, to fetch certaine things: amongst which, this being chiefe, was yet forgotten and left behind. After which time, he could never conveniently send againe aboard the great ship, much lesse he doubted her time to neere at hand.

Our last conference with our Generall.

Circumstances to be well observed in our Generall, imputing the oare to be of a Musc Shippe.

Wherein my opinion was better confirmed diversly, and by sundry coniectures, which maketh me have the greater hope of this riche mine. For whereas the Generall had never before good conceit of these north partes of the world: now his minde was wholly fixed upon Newe founde land. And as before he refused not to grant assignements liberally to them that required the same into these north partes, now he became contrarily asserted, refusing to make any so large grants, especially of S. Johns, which certaine English merchants made suite for, offering to employ their money and travell upon the same: yet neither by their owne suite, nor of others of his owne companie, whom he seemed willing to pleasure, it could be obtained.

Also laying downe his determination in the Shipping following, for disposing of his voyage then to be reattempted: he assigned the Captaine and Master of the Golden Pemb, unto the South discovrie, and reserved unto himselfe the north, affirming that this voyage had wonne his heart from the South, and that he was now become a northerne man altogether.

Last

Last, being demanded what meanes he had at his arrivall in England, to compasse the charges of so great preparation, as he intended to make the next Spring: having determined upon two fleets, one for the North, another for the South: I enquired of him (he replied) I will take a pennie of no man. I will bring good tidings unto her Majestie, who will be so gracious, to lende mee 10000. pounds, willing us therefore to be of good cheere: for he did thanke God (he said) with all his heart, for that he had scene, the same being enough for us all, and that wee needed not to seeke any further. And these last words he would often repeate, with demonstration of great fervencie of mind, being himselfe very confident, and settled in believe of insurmountable good by this voyage: which the greater number of his followers neuertheless mistrusted altogether, not being made partakers of those secrets, which the Generall kept unto himselfe. Yet all of them that are living, may be witnesses of his wordes and protestations, which sparingly I have delivered.

Leaving the issue of this good hope unto God, who knoweth the truth only, and can at his good pleasure bring the same to light: I will hasten to the ende of this tragedie, which must be knit up in the person of our Generall. And as it was Gods ordinance upon him, even so the vehement perswasion and intreatie of his friends could nothing availe, to divert him from a willfull resolution of going through in his Frigate, which was overcharged upon their deckes, with sightes, needings, and small artillerie, too cumbersome for so small a boate, that was to passe through the Dredan sea at that season of the yere, when by course we might expect much storme and foule weather, whereof in deede we had enough.

But when he was intreated by the Captaine, Master, and other his well willers of the Vinde, not to enter in the Frigate, this was his answer: I will not forsake my little company going homeward, with whom I have passed so many stormes, and perils. And in very truth, he was voyd to be so ont hard, by hard reports giuen of him, that he was afraid of the sea, albeit this was rather rashnes, then advised resolution, to preferre the winde of a vaine report to the weight of his owne life.

Seeing he would not bend to reason, he had provision out of the Vinde, such as was wanting aboard his Frigate. And so we committed him to Gods protection, and set him aboard his Junckell. We being more then 300. leagues outward of our way home.

By that time we had brought the Islands of Acores South of us, yet we then keeping much to the North, until we had got into the height and elevation of England: we met with very foule weather, and terrible seas, breaking hoze and high Pyramid wise. The reason whereof seemed to procede either of hilly grounds high and lowe within that sea, (as we see hills and dales upon the land) upon which the seas doe mount and fall: or else the cause proceeded of diversitie of winds, shifting often into sundry points: as which having power to moue the great Ocean, which againe is not presently settled, so many seas doe encounter together, as there had bene diversitie of winde. Howsoever it cometh to passe, men which all their life time had occupied the sea, never sawe more outrageous Seas. We had also upon our maine yarde, an apparition of a little fire by night, which sea men doe call Callor and Pollux. But we had onely one, which they take an evil signe of more tempest: the same is vsual in stormes.

Sunday the ninth of September, in the afternoone, the Frigate was nere cast away, oppressed by waues, yet at that tyme recovered: and giuing forth signes of ioye, the Generall sitting abast with a booke in his hande, cryed out unto us in the Vinde (so oft as wee did appoche within hearing:) Wee are as nere to heauen by Sea, as by lande. Reiterating the same speerch, well beseeching a souldier, resolute in Iesus Christ, as I can tellie hee was.

The same Sunday night, about twelue of the clocke, or not long after, the Frigate being a head of us in the Golden Vinde, suddenly her lightes were out, whereof as it were in a moment, wee lost the sight, and withall our watch cryed, the Generall was cast away, which was verie true. For in that moment, the Frigate was deuoured and swallowed vpp of the Sea, yet still we looked out all that night, and euer after, until wee arrived vpon the coast of England: Drinking no small salt at Sea, unto which wee graue not the tokens betwene us, agreed vpon, to haue perfect knowledge of each other, if wee shoulde at any time bee separated.

In great torment of weather, and perill of drowning, it pleased God to send safe home the Golden Vinde, which arrived in Falmouth, the 21. day of September, being Sunday, not without as great danger escaped in a flawe, comming from southeast, with such thicke mist, that we could not discern land, as put in right with the haven.

From Falmouth we went to Dartmouth, and lay there at anchor before the range, while the captaine

Withins in the Generall.

It token of a good mind.

It resolute and Christianlike saying in a breath.

Sir Humfrey
G. returned.

Arrivall in England of the Golden Vinde.

taine went a land, to inquire happily have bene before hard successe, whom the
of all occurrences in the for particularly, in dischadoe, holding himselfe satisof his voychers safest, offering to haue his Barke help to tow her in.

Nevertheless, when the every man to his home: a maned money to carry the barke should be carried into benefit of the wind, then Captaine, and great calv-

Reason accompanied with cause of his sudden depart-the Golden Vinde departed of so unprofitable a voy-and labour, hard diet, and les, by his great charges, it without providence follow-whosoever have confidence powerful hand and protect-in which he leaured them, as of their ruine.

Even so, amongst very mortalitie, spoilinges, and to hope a time may be sup-on may be collected, and so support this companie, (of the rest kept together in rethe voyage, which none elcomes, or prevented by dea-

Thus have I delivered brightly, faithfully, for so mu-(though he be extinguisht) pose by all presence honest will of God, and Christian possessed by Christians, as which, as his zeale deterr'd presumption (rather) in the First, when yet there was on secret, neither any den-thel, he both was too proto employ both his and the like his associates were pro-which pleased not God to Secondly, when by his his designements, as it is which God might raise, he ning, the cause pretended ving thus made recient, he went to proceede, least his betwene extremities, he would refused not to enter on the successe whereof hat-

But such is the infinite came vnto a land, to inquire if there had bene any newes of the Frigas, which sailing well, might happily haue bene before vs. Also to certifie Sir Iohn Gilbert, vnto the Generall, of our hard successe, whome the Captaine desired (while his men were yet aboord him, and were withoutes of all occurrences in that voyage.) It might please him to take the examination of euery person particularly, in discharge of his and their faithfull endeour. Sir Iohn Gilbert refused so to doe, holding himselfe satisfied with rejoyce made by the Captaine: and not altogether despairing of his voyagers safetie, offered friendshipp and curtesie to the Captaine, and his companie, requiring to haue his Barke brought into the harbour: in furtherance wherof, a boate was sent to helpe to tow her in.

At motion of the Captaine vnto Sir Humfrey Gilbert.

Nevertheless, when the Captaine returned aboord his ship, he founde his men bent to depart, euery man to his home: and then the winde seruing to proceede higher vpon the coast: they demanded money to carry them home, some to London, others to Harwicke, and else where: (if the barke should be carried into Dartmouth, and they discharged, so farre from home:) or else to take benefite of the wind, then seruing to drawe neerer home, which should be a lesse charge vnto the Captaine, and great ease vnto the men, hauing els farre to goe.

Reason accompanied with necessitie perswaded the Captaine, who sent his lawfull excuse and cause of his sudden departure vnto Sir Iohn Gilbert, by the boate of Dartmouth, and from thence the Golden Hind departed, and tooke her harbour at Wainmouth. All the men tired with the tediousnes of so vnprofitable a voyage to their seeming: in which their long expence of time, much toyle and labour, hard diet, and continuall hazard of life was vntocompensed: the Captaine neuertheless, by his great charges, impaired greatly thereby, yet comforted in the goodnes of God, and his vndoubted providence following him in all that voyage, as it both alwaies those at other times, who soeuer haue confidence in him alone. Yet haue we more neere feeling and perseverance of his powerful hand and protection, when God both bying vs together with others into one same perill, in which he leaured them, and deliuereth vs, making vs thereby the beholders, but not partakers of their ruine.

In all recompense.

Even so, amongst very many difficulties, discontentments, mutinies, conspiracies, sicknesses, mortalitie, spoilinges, and wracks by sea, which were afflictions, more then in so small a flecte, or so short a time may be supposed: albeit true in euery particularitie, as partly by the former relation may be collected, and some I suppressed with silence, for their sakes liuing, it pleased God to support this companie, (of which onely one man died of a maladie inueterate, and long infectious:) the rest kept together in reasonable contentment and concord, beginning, continuing, and ending the voyage, which none els did accomplish, either not pleased with the action, or impatient of want, or preuented by death.

Thus haue I deliuered the contents of the enterpryse and last action of Sir Humfrey Gilbert beinge faithfull, so far as I thought meete to be published: wherein may alwaies appeare, (though he be extinguished) some sparkes of his vertues, he remaining firme and resolute in a purpose by all presence honest and godly, as was this, to discouer, possesse, and to reduce vnto the seruire of God, and Christian pietie, those remote and heathen Countries of America, not actually possessed by Christians, and most rightly appertaining vnto the Crowne of England: vnto the which, as his zeale deserueth high commendation: euen so, he may iustly be taxed of temeritie and presumption (rather) in two respects.

Constancie in Sir Humfrey Gilbert.

First, when yet there was onely probability, not a certaine and determinate place of habitation selected, neither any demonstration of commoditie there in esse, to induce his followers: neuertheless, he both was too prodigall of his owne patrimonie, and too careless of other mens expences, to employ both his and their substance vpon a ground imagined good. The which sailing, very like his associates were promised, and made it their best reckoning to be salued some other way, which pleased not God to prosper in his first and great preparation.

His temeritie and presumption.

Secondly, when by his former preparation he was enabled of abilitie and credite, to performe his designements, as it were impatient to abide in expectation better opportunitye and means, which God might raise, he thrust himselfe againe into the action, for which he was not fitte, presuming, the cause pretended on Gods behalfe, would carry him to the desired ende. Into which, hauing thus made rentrie, he could not yeeld againe to wish what, though he sawe no encouragement to proceede, least his credite foiled in his first attempt, in a second should utterly be disgraced. Betwene extremities, hee made a right aduenture, putting all to God and good fortune, and would not refuse to entertaine euery person and means whatsoever, to furnish out this expedition, the successe wherof hath bene declared.

But such is the infinite bountie of God, who from euery euill deriueth good. For besides that fruit

afflictions werefall in the country of God.

fruites may growe in time of our traueling into those north-west lands, the crosses, turmoiles, and afflictions, both in the preparation and execution of this voyage, did correct the intemperate humors, which before were noted to be in this Gentleman, and made vnsauoye, and lesse delighefull his other manifold vertues.

Then as he was refined, and made neerer drawing vnto the image of God: so it pleased the deuntie will, to reforme him vnto himselfe, whither both his, and euery other high and noble minde, haue alwaies aspired.

Ornatissimo viro, Magistro Richardo Hakluyto Oxonij in Collegio adis Christi, artium, & Philosophia Magistro, amico, & fratri suo.

" Dominus Hakluyt.

Non statueram ad te scribere, cum in mentem veniret promissum literarum tuarum. Putabas te superiore iam Iunio nos subsecuturum. Itaque de meo statu ex doctore Humfredo certiorum te fieri iusseram. Verum sic tibi non esset satisfactum. Itaque scribam ad te ijsdem serere verbis, quia noua meditari & <sup>contemplari</sup> mihi hoc tempore non vacat, Vndecimo Iunij ex Anglia reuera tandem & serio soluimus, portu & terra apud Plemuthum simul relicti. Classis quinque nauibus constabat, maxima, quam frater Amiralij accommodauerat, ignotum quo consilio, statim tertio die a nobis se subduxit. Reliqui perpetuo coniunctim nauigauimus ad 23. Julij, quo tempore magnis nebulis intercepto aspectu alii aliam viam tenuimus: nobis seorsim prima terra apparuit ad Calendas Augusti, ad gradum circiter 50. cum vltra 41. paucis ante diebus descendissemus spe Australium ventorum, qui tamen nobis suo tempore nunquam spirauerunt. Insula est ea, quam vestri Penguin vocant, ab auium eiusdem nominis multitudine. Nos tamen nec aues vidimus, nec insulam accessimus ventis alio vorantibus. Ceterum conuenimus omnes in eundem locum paulo ante portum in quem communi consilio omnibus veniendum erat, idque intra duas horas, magna Dei benignitate & nostro gaudio. Locus situs est in Newfoundlandia, inter 47. & 48. gradum, diuum Ioannem vocant. Ipse Admiralius propter multitudinem hominum, & angustiam nauis paulo afflictiorum comitatum habuit, & iam duos dysentericis doloribus amisit: de ceteris bona spes est. Ex nostris (nam ego me Mauricio Browno vere generoso iuueni me coniunxeram) duo etiam casu quodam submersi sunt. Ceteri salui & longè firmiores. Ego nunquam sanior. In hunc locum tertio Augusti appulimus: quinto autem ipse Admiralius has regiones in suam & regni Anglię possessionem potestatemque vendicauit, iatis quibusdam legibus de religione & obsequio Regiņę Anglię. Reficimus hoc tempore paulo hilarius & lautius. Certè enim & qualibus ventis vsi sumus, & quam festi esse poterimus tam longi temporis ratio docuerit, proinde nihil nobis deest. Nam extra Anglos, 20. circiter naues Lusitanicas & Hispanicas nacti in hoc loco sumus: ex nobis impares non patientur nos esurire. Angli etsi satis firmi, & a nobis tuti, autoritate regii diplomatis omni obsequio & humanitate prosequuntur. Nunc narrandi erant mores, re giones, & populi. Ceterum quid narrem mi Hakluyte, quando præter solitudinem nihil video? Piscium inæhausta copia: inde huc commentibus magnus quæstus. Vix hamus fundum attingit, illicò insigni aliquo onustus est. Terra vniuersa montana & syluestris: arbores vt plurimum pinus: ex partim consenuere, partim nunc adolescunt: magna pars vetustate collapsa, & aspectum terrę, & iter euntium ita impedit, vt nusquam progredi liceat. Herbarum omnes procerę: sed raro a nostris diuersę. Natura videtur velle niti etiam ad generandum frumentum. Inueni enim gramina, & spicas in similitudinem fecales: & facile cultura & fatione in vsum humanum assueseri posse videtur. Rubi in syluis vel potius fraga arborescentia magna suauitate. Vix circa tuguria nonnunquam apparent, & conficiantur: sed albi sunt, vt mihi ex pellibus conicere licuit, & minores quam nostri. Populus an vllus sit in hac regione incertum est: Nec vllum vidi qui testari posset. (Et quis quæso posset, cum ad longum progredi non liceat?) nec minus ignotum est an aliquid metalli subsistat montibus. Causa eadem est, etsi aspectus eorū mineras latentes præ se ferat. Nos Admiralio auctores fuimus sylvas incendere, quo ad inspicendam regionē spaciū pareretur: nec displicebat illi consilium, si non magnū incommodum allaturum videretur. Confirmatum est enim ab idoneis hominibus, cum casu quopiam in alia nescio qua statione id accidisset, septenium totū piceas non comparuisse, ex acerbata maris vnda ex terebynthina, que cõflagentibus arboribus per riuulos defluebat. Cælum hoc anni tempore ita feruidum est, vt nisi piceas, quę arefiunt ad solem, assidui inuertantur, ab adustione defendi non possint. Hyeme

" In the south side of these mountains
there is a stone of plaine
and champion consisteth
as Richard Clark
saith.

" The great state of the mountain
is other.

quã

quam frigidum sit, mensis Maio sexdecim essent insule: quarum item ita inuertiam, vt ne, vt consecrationem ebulę: Et in ipso mari anglicę, & pices capibus in hoc loco, in A deiis quas petimus reuo ne incassum, Impudum intelligere velim. Reuera autem spes, h vt me tuum putes, & eatenus, vt tu quoque & nos ama. In New

To the world Christi and b

I had not purposed
I thought in June last
I would be advertised of I will write therefore meditate new matters

The 11. of June
uing the haue and la greatest, which the knowe not vpon what the of July: at which some of vs sayled one August, about the last degrees in hope of so ay sette time.

It is an Islande wh name. Yet wee neither our course directed to Hauen, whereunto the space of 20. houres b tuated in Newfoundland of Saint Iohns: the ness of his Shippe, be company, which died I toynd my selfe with chance were by our net more healthy. After a possession of the Cou publiques certaine ha at this time our fare the experience of so l quam frigidum sit, magna moles glaciæ in medio mari nos docueret. Relatum est à comitibus mensè Maio sexdecim totos dies interdum se inter tantam glaciem hessisse, vt 60. orgyas altè essent infulg: quarum latera soli opposita cum liquecerent, libatione quadam vniuersam motem ita inuertiam, vt quod antè pronumerat, supinum euaderet, magno presentium discrimine, vt consentaneum est. Aer in terra mediocriter clarus est: ad orientem supra mare perpetuè nebulæ: Et in ipso mari circa Bancum (sic vocant locum vbi quadraginta leucis à terra fundus attingitur, & pisces capi incipiunt) nullus ferme dies absque pluuia. Expeditis nostris necessitatibus in hoc loco, in Austrum (Deo iuuante) progrediemur, tantò indies maiori spe, quò plura de diis quas petimus regionibus commemorantur. Hæc de nostris. Cupio de vobis scire: sed meo ne incassum, Imprimis autem quomodo Vntonus meus absentiam meam ferat, præter modum intelligere velim: Habebit nostrum obsequium & officium paratum, quamdiu vixerimus. Reuera autem spero: hanc nostram peregrinationem ipsius instituto vsui futuram. Nunc restat, vt me tuum putes, & quidem ita tuum, vt neminem magis, Iuuet dei filius labores nostros euenus, vt tu quoque participare possis. Vale amicissime, suavissime, ornatisime Hakluyte, & nos ama. In Newfoundlandia apud portum Sancti Iohannis 6. Augusti 1583.

Stephanus Parmenius Budeius, tuus,

¶ The same in English.

To the worshipfull, Master Richard Hakluyt at Oxforde in Christs church, Master of Art, and Philosophie, his friend and brother.

I had not purposed to write to you, when the promise of your letters came to my mind: But I thought in June last to haue followed vs your selfe, and therefore I had left order that you should be aduertised of my state, by Master Doctor Dunsfrep: but so you would not be satisfied: I will write therefore to you almost in the same words, because I haue no leasure at this time, to meditate new matters, and to vary or multiply words.

The 11. of June we set sayle at length from Englande in good earnest, and departed, leaving the haue and lande behinde vs at Wymmouth: our flecte consisted of five shippes: the greatest, which the Admirals brother had lent vs, with by her selfe from vs the third day, wee knowe not vpon what occasion: with the rest wee sayled still together till the thre and twentie of July: at which time our viewe of one another being intercepted by the great mists, some of vs sayled one way, and some another: to vs alone the first lande appeared, the first of August, about the latitude of fiftye degrees, when as before wee had descended beyonde 41. degrees in hope of some Southerly winde, which notwithstanding neuer blew to vs, at any like time.

It is an Island which your men call Penguin, because of the multitude of birdes of the same name. Yet wee neither sawe any birdes, nor by we nere to the lande, the winde seruing for our course directed to another place, but wee met all together at that place a little before the Haue, whereunto by common Counsell wee had determined to come, and that within the space of thr̄. houres by the great goodnesse of God, and to our great ioy. The place is situated in Newfoundland, betweene fortye leuen and fortye eight degrees, called by the name of Saint Iohn: the Admirall him selfe by reason of the multitude of the men, and the smallnesse of his shippe, had his company somewhat sickly, and had all ready lost two of the same company, which died of the Flux: of the rest wee conceiue good hope. Of our company (for I toynd my selfe with Maurice Bywne, a very proper Gentleman) two persons by a mischance were bywound, the rest are in safetie, and strong, and for myne owne part I was neuer more healchy. Wee arrived at this place the third of August: and the first the Admirall tooke possession of the Countrey, so him selfe and the kingdome of England: hauing made and published certaine Lawes, concerning religion, and obedience to the Queene of England: at this time our fare is somewhat better, and daintier, then it was before: so in good sooth, the experience of so long time hath taught vs what contrary winde wee haue founde, and what great trauell we may enoure hereafter: and therefore we will take such order, that wee will want nothing, for we founde in this place, about twenty Portuguese, and Spanishe Shippes, besides the Shippes of the English: which being not able to marche vs, suffer vs not to be hunger starued: the English although they were of them selues stronge ynough, and safe from our force, yet seeing our aucthoritie, by the Queenes letters patentes, they betwix vs all manner of dutie and humanitie.

Rrr,

what

The manner of this Countrey, and people remaine nowe to bee spoken of. But what shall I say, my good Hakluyt, when I see nothing but a very wilderness? of fish here is incredible abundance, whereby great gayne growes to them, that trauell to their partes: the booke is no sooner throwne out, but it is eftsouenes dyuine by with some goodly fishes: the whole lande is full of hills and woodes. The trees for the most part are Pynes and of them some are very olde, and some yong: a great part of them beeing fallen by reason of their age, doth so hynder the sighte of the Lande, and stoppe the way of those that seeke to trauell, that they can goe no whither: all the grasse here is long, and tall, and little differeth from ours. It seemeth also that the nature of this soyle is fitte for coyne: for I founde certayne blades and eares in a manner bearded, so that it appeareth that by manuring and sowing, they may easilie bee framed for the vse of man: here are in the woodes bushe berries, or rather strawe berries growing vpon like trees, of great sweetnesse, Beares also appeare about the fishers Nagges of the Countrey, and are sometimes killed, but they seeme to be white, as I coniectured by their skinner, and somewhat lesse then ours. Whether there bee any people in this Countrey I know not, neither haue I seene any to witness it. And to say truth who can, when as it is not possible to passe any whither: In like sort it is vnknowne, whether any mettals lye vnder the hills: the cause is all one, although the very colour and hue of the hills seeme to haue some mynes in them: we myned the Admirall to see the woods a fire, that so we might haue space, and entrance to take view of the Countrey, which motion did nothing displease him, were it not for feare of great incontinence that might thereof insue: for it was reported and confirmed by verie credible persons, that when the like happened by chance in another Voye, the fish neuer came to the place about it, for the space of 7. whole yerres after, by reason of the waters made byter by the turpentyne, and rosen of the trees, which ranne into the ryuers vpon the firing of them. The weather is so hot this time of the yeere, that except the very fish, which is layd out to be dyed by the sunne, be euery day turned, it cannot possibly be preserued from burning: but how cold it is in the winter, the great heapes, and mountaines of yce, in the midst of the Sea haue taught vs: some of our company repoze, that in Spay, they were sometimes kept in, with such huge yce, for 16. whole dayes together, as that the Islands thereof were threescore fathomes thicke, the sides whereof which were towards the Sunne, when they were melted, the whole masse of heape was so innerted and turned in manner of balancing, that that part which was before downward rose vppwarde, to the great perill of those that are nere them, as by reason we may gather. The ayre vpon land is indifferent cleare, but at Sea towards the East there is nothing els but perpetual mistes, and in the Sea it selfe, about the Banke (for so they call the place where they find ground at forty leagues distant from the Shoare, and where they began to fische) there is no day without rayne. When we haue serued, and supplied our necessitie in this place, we purpose by the help of God to passe towards the south, with so much the more hope euery day, by how much greater the things are, that are reported of those Countreies, which we go to discouer. Thus much touching our estate.

Now I desire to know somewhat concerning you, but I feare in vaine, but specially I desire out of measure to know how my Patrone Master Henry Ampton doth take my absence: my obedience, and dutie shall alwaies be readie towards him as long as I live: but in drede I hope, that this Iourney of ours shall be profitable to his intentions. It remaineth that you thinke me to be still yours, and so yours as no mans more. The sonne of God bless all our labors, so farre, as that you your selfe may be partaker of our blessing. Adieu, my most friendly, most sweete, most vertuous Hakluyt: In Newfoundland lande, at Saint Johns Port, the sixt of August, 1583.

Steuens Parmenius of Buda, yours.

at hand and vnknowne
to go west north west
fifteene leagues off, The Generall sayd n
I would thewe my se because hee presented of the clocke in the n
the Generall went of shippe cast away men the lande for eyther o God woulde the day
soule with his piece,
to recouer the soule,
it in againe that r burthen one tunne
of the company could ay men as they could They happened on m ted into the boate as rehearse. And when had none: for they di for God, and looked bering so litle and so shippe to brooke hal nights, and that wa
thing to helpe vs wa
and so went euen as that put forth this boate lpueth in the S boate were not ouer shortest lottes wee w to him saying, no, i hance were good: the
was off the lande, an they were but thesel in comfort. Thus we the wordes that swan noter moreouer: the Sunne but once e the day: then we were de and promised they sho

A relation of Richard Clarke of Weymouth, master of the shippe called the Delight, going for the discoverie of Norumbega with Sir

Humphrey Gilbert 1583. Written in excuse of that fault of casting away the shippe and men imputed to his oversight,

DEparting out of Saint Johns Harborough in the Newfoundland land the twentieth of August unto Cape Raz, from thence we directed our course unto the Isle of Sablon or the Isle of Sande, which the generall Sir Humphrey Gilbert would willingly have seen. But when wee came within twenty leagues of the Isle of Sablon, we fell to controuersie of our course. The General came by in his Frigate and demanded of me Richard Clarke Master of the Admirall what course was best to keepe: I said that west south west was best: because the wind was at south & might at hand and unknown sands lay off a great way from the land. The General commaunded me to go west north west. I tolde him againe that the Isle of Sablon was West north west and but fifteene leagues off, and that he should beere upon the Island before day if hee went that course. The Generall sayd my reckoning was vntreue and charged mee in her Maiesties name, and as I would the we my selfe in her Countrey to followe him that night. I fearing his threatnings, because hee presented her Maiesties person, did followe his commaundement, and about seuen of the clocke in the morning the shippe strooke on ground, where shee was cast away. When the Generall went off to Sea, the course that I would haue had them gon befoze and saue the shippe cast away men and all, and was not able to saue a man, for there was not water vpon the sande for eyther of them much lesse for the Admirall that we were foureteen foote. Howe as God would the day befoze it was very calme, and a Souldier of the shippe had killed some foule with his peece, and some of the company desired me that they might hope out the boate to recouer the foule, which I granted them: and when they came aboarde they did not hope it in againe that night. And when the shippe was cast away the boate was a sterne being in burthen one tunne and an halfe: there was left in the boate one oare and nothing els. Some of the company could swimme and recouered the boate and did hale in out of the water as many men as they could: among the rest they had a care to watch for the Captaine of the Admirall: They happened on my selfe being the master, but could neuer see the Captaine: Then they halled into the boate as many men as they could in number 16. whose names hereafter I will rehearse. And when the sixtene were in the boate, some had sinale remembrance, and some had none: for they did not make account to liue, but to prolong their liues as long as it pleased God, and looked euery moment of an hower when the Sea would eate them vp, the boate being so litle and so many men in her, and so foule weather, that it was not possible for a shippe to brooke halfe a course of Sayle. Thus while wee remayned two dayes and two nightes, and that wee sawe it pleased God our boate liued in the Sea, (although wee had nothing to helpe vs with all but one oare, which wee kept by the boate withall vpon the Sea, and so went euen as the Sea would driue vs) there was in our companie one Master Hedely that put forth this question to mee the matter. I do see that it both please God that our boate lyueth in the Sea, and it may please God that some of vs may come to the lande if our boate were not ouer laden. Let vs make sixtene lottes, and those foure that haue the foure best lottes we will cast ouer boord, preferring the Master among vs all. I replied vnto him saying, no, we will liue and dye together. Master Hedely asked mee if my remembrance were good: I answered I gaue God praye it was good, and knewe howe farre I was off the lande, and was in hope to come to the lande within two or thre dayes, and sayd they were but thre score leagues from the lande, (when they were seuenie) all to put them in comfort. Thus wee continued the thirde and fourth day without any sustenance, saue onely the weedes that swame in the Sea, and salt water to drinke. The fifth day Hedely dyed and another moyeouer: then we desired all to die for in all these six dayes and six nightes we sawe the Summe but once & the Starre but one night, it was so foule weather. Thus we did remaine the 6. day: then we were very weake and wished all to die sauing only my selfe which did comforte them and promised they should come soone to land by the helpe of God: but the company were verie 20. Leagues from the Isle of Sablon.

15. Leagues from the Isle of Sablon.

Richard Clarke vntreuey that gett the Generall Sir Gilbert.

The ship cast away on Thursday being the 20 of August 1583.

Wherewith came into the ship boate.

Master Hedelys vngodly proposition.

impotunate, and were in doubt they should neuer come to land, but that I promised them the seuenth day they should come to shoare or els they should cast me ouer boord: which did happen true the seuenth day, for at eleuen of the clocke we had sight of the land, and at thre of the clocke at afternoone we came on lande. All these seuen dayes and seuen nightes the wind kept continually South. If the winde had in the meane time spitted vpon any other point, we had neuer come to land: we were no sooner come to the land, but the winde came cleane conerary at North within halfe an hower after our arriuall. But we were so weake that one could scarcely helpe another of vs out of the boate, yett with much a doo being come all on shoare we kneeled downe vpon our knees and gaue God praise that he had dealt so mercifully with vs. Afterwards those which were strongest holpe their fellowes vnto a fresh brooke, where wee sacrificed our selues with water and berries very well. There were of all sortes of berries plentie, and as goodly a cuntry as euer I saw: we found a very faire plaine Champion ground that a man might see very farre euery way: by the Sea side was here and there a litle wood with goodly trees as good as euer I saw any in Norway, able to mast any shippe, of pyne trees, spruce trees, firre, and very great birch trees. Where we came on land we made a litle house with boughes, where we rested all that night. In the morning I deuised the company thre and thre to goe euery way to see what foooe they could find to sustayne themselves, and appointed them to meete there all againe at noone with such food as they could get. As we went aboord to see found a great stoe of prason as good as any wee haue in England: a man would thinke they had ben sowed there. We rested there thre daies and thre nightes and liued very well with pease and berries, wee named the place Saint Laurence, because it was a very goodly riuer like the riuer of S. Laurence in Canada, and we found it very full of Salmones. When we had well rested our selues wee rowed our boate along the shoare, thinking to haue gon to the Grande Bay to haue come home with some Spaniards which are perely there to kill the Whale: And when wee were hungry or a thirst we put our boate on land and gathered pease and berries. Thus we rowed our boate along the shoare side daies: about which time we came to a very goodly ryuer that ranne farre vpon into the cuntry and sawe very goodly growen trees of all sortes. There we happened vpon a ship of Saint Iohn de Luz, which ship brought vs into Biskap to an harborough called The Passage. The Master of the Shippe was our great friend or els we had bene put to death if he had not kept our counsaile. For when the visitors came aboord, as it is the order in Spaine, they demanding what we were, he sayd we were poore fishermen that had cast away our ship in Newfoundland, and so the visitors inquired no more of the matter: that time, as soone as night was come he put vs on land and bad vs shift for our selues. Then had wee but tenne or twelue myles into France, which we went that night, and then cared no more for the Spaniards. And so shortly after we came into England toward the end of the yeere 1583.

They came on land the 7. day after their ship was wrecked.

The first settlement of the fourth part of Newfoundland land.

Fourteene of our men brought out of Newfoundland land in a ship of S. Iohn de Luz.

A true Report of the late discoueries, and possession taken in the right of the Crowne of England of the Newfoundland Lands, By that valiant and worthy Gentleman, Sir Humfrey Gilbert Knight, Wherein is also briefly set downe, her highnesse lawfull Title therewnto, and the great & manifold commodities, that are likely to grow thereby, to the whole Realme in generall, and to the Aduenturers in particular, Together with the easines and shortnes of the Voyage.

Written by Sir George Peckham Knight, the chiefe aduenturer, and furtherer of Sir Humfrey Gilbertes voyage to Newfoundland,

The first Chapter, wherein the Argument of the Booke is contained.

Master Edward Hays.

It was my fortune (good Reader) not many dayes past, to meete with a right honest and discrete Gentleman, who accompanied that valiant and worthy Knight Sir Humfrey Gilbert, in this last iourney for the Westerne discoueries; and is owner and Capitaine of the onely vessell which is as yet returned from thence,

By

By him I did vnderstand last past, with fine sayings, forsooke his company.

The other four (I men, in Newfoundland Partners of the English themselves with his, his Commission: which honourably as did become that they could, and they

Then he went to be and soldiers. They for that season of the year Fifth of sunny soyes, his victual an Arnie, an Realme right necessitate place more convenient

On Sunday being an hill, in the view of twene thirtie and foure clemen and other foule Englishmen as Spaniards then and there, in the of England to be open berries, and assigned, by liberties, and priuiledges, he tooke possession a Turke and receiuing Lawe and custome of

Then he signified v were to liue in that lawe governed by such law as might be, should be on, presently he opened First, that Religion Church of England.

The second, that if itlie, her Crowne and

The third, if any of his eares, his ship and

All men doo very to Palestines Armes to English men, made sure by handings & byping place great accompt of, which session maintained for dispose of many thing

And after their ship want of men sufficient to proceede any further, the Delight, where returned immediately Capitaine and owner, goe, seeming to him

The 21. day they called, they tooke C where any of them had centia, the Generall

By him I did understand, that Sir Humfrey departed the coast of England the eleventh of June last past, with five sayle of shippes from Cautionbay neere Plymmouth, whereof one of the best forsooke his companie, the thirteenth day of the same moneth, and returned into England.

The other foure (through the assistance of Almighty God) did arrive at Saint Johns Haven, in Newfoundland, the third of August last. Upon whose arrivall all the Masters and chief Partners of the English Fleete, which were in the sayd Haven before, endeavouring to fraughte themselves with fish, repaired unto Sir Humfrey, whom he made acquainted with the effect of his Commission: which being done, he promised to intreate them and their goods well and honourably as did become her Majesties Lieutenant. They did all welcome him in the best sort that they could, and shewed him and his, all such courtesies as the place could afford or yeelde.

Then he went to viewe the Countrey, being well accompanied with most of his Captaines and souldiers. They found the same very temperate, but somewhat warmer then Englands at that season of the yeere, replenished with Beasts and great store of Fowle of divers kindes: And full of sundry foxes, both in the safe water and in the fresh, in so great plenty as might suffice to victual an Armie, and they are very easily taken. What sundry other commodities for this Realme might be necessary, the same doeth yeelde, you shall understand in this treatise hereafter, in place more convenient.

On Monday being the first of August, the Generall caused his tent to be set upon the side of an hill, in the viewe of all the Fleete of Englishmen and Strangers, which were in number betwene thirtie and fourtie sayle: then being accompanied with all his Captaines, Masters, Gentlemen and other souldiers, he caused all the Masters, and principall Officers of the shippes, as well Englishmen as Spaniards, Portugales, and of other nations, to repaie unto his tent: And then and there, in the presence of them all, he did cause his Commission under the great Seale of England to be openly and solempnely read unto them, whereby were graunted unto him, his heires, and assignes, by the Queenes most excellent Majestie, many great and large royalties, liberties, and priviledges. The effect whereof being signified unto the Strangers by an Interpreter, he tooke possession of the sayd land in the right of the Crowne of England by digging of a Turke and receiving the same with an Asel wambe, delivered unto him, after the maner of the Lawe and custome of England.

Then he signified unto the companie both Strangers and others, that from thenceforth, they were to live in that land, as the Territories appertaining to the Crowne of England, and to be governed by such Lawes as by good advise should be set downe, which in all points (so neere as might be) should be agreeable to the Lawes of England: And so to put the same in execution, presently he ordeined and established three Lawes.

First, that Religion publicly exercised, should be such, and none other, then is used in the Church of England.

The second, that if any person should be lawfully convicted of any practise against her Majestie, her Crowne and dignitie, to be adjudged as traitors according to the Lawes of England.

The third, if any should speake dishonourably of her Majestie, the partie so offending, to loose his eares, his ship and goods, to be confiscate to the use of the Generall.

All men did very willingly submit themselves to these Lawes. Then he caused the Queenes Majesties Armes to be ingraued, set by, & erected, with great solempnicie. After this, divers Englishmen, made suite unto Sir Humfrey to have of him by inheritance, their accustomed stagers, Readings & vying places, in sundry parts of that land for their fish, as a thing that they do make great account of, which he graunted unto them, in free farms. And by this means, he hath possession maintained for him, in many parts of that Countrey. To be briefe, he did let, set, give and dispose of many things, as absolute Governour there, by vertue of her Majesties letters patents.

And after their shippes were repaired, whereof one hee was driven to leaue behind, both for want of men sufficient to furnish her, as also to carrie home such sicke persons as were not able to proceede any further, he departed from thence the 20. of August, with the other three, namely, the Delight, wherein was appointed Captaine in Sir William Wincers place, (that thence returned immediately for England) Sir Maurice Browne: the Golden Vinde, in which was Captaine and owner, Sir Edward Day: and the little Frigate where the Generall himselfe did goe, seeming to him most fit to discover and appoach the shoare.

The 21. day they came to Cape Race, toward the South partes whereof, lying a while becalmed, they tooke Cod in largenes and quantitie, exceeding the other parts of Newfoundland, where any of them had bene. And from thence, trending the coast West, toward the Bay of Placencia, the Generall sent certaine men a shoare, to viewe the Countrey, which to them as Sir Humfrey Gilbert did arrive at Saint Johns Haven in Newfoundland the 3. of August. Anno 1583.

Among these there was found the trace of a beare of 7. pines and a ballcour.

Sir Humfrey tooke possession of the new found land in right of the Crowne of England.

Three lawes established there by Sir Humfrey.

Sundry persons, became Swornes to Sir Humfrey, and tooke possession for him in his three places there.

and mercy of Almighty God in planting the Christian faith, in those so long unknown regi- ons, having in purpose to acquaint (as he did) that renowned Prince, the Queenes Father, grandfather, King Henry the seventh, with his intended voyage for the Westerne discourtes, was not onely derided and mocked generally even here in England, but afterwards became a laughing stocke to the Spaniards them selves, who at this day (of all other people) are most bounden to laude and praise God, who first stirred the man to that enterprise.

God doeth not atones begun his great wishes by the great persons.

And while hee was attending there to acquaint the King of Castile (that then was) with his intended purpose, by howe many wayes and meanes was he derided? Some scoyned the pldnes of his garments, some tooke occasion to iest at his simple and silly lookes, others asked if this were he, that totted so lowe, which did take vpon him to bring men into a Countrey that aboundeth with Golde, Pearle, and Precious Stones: If he were any such man (sayde they) hee would carry another manner of countenance with him, and looke somewhat loftier. Thus some iudged him by his garments, and others by his looke and countenance, but none entred into the consideration of the inward man.

His custome was to hold himselfe very lowe in man-
king of count-
erie.

In the ende, what successe his voyage had, who list to reade the Decades, the Historie of the West Indies, the conquest of Hernando Cortes about Mexico, and those of Francisco Pizarre in Peru about Cafamalcha and Cusco, may knowe moze particularly. All which their discoueries, traualles, and conquests, are extant to be had in the English tongue. This deuise was then accounted a fantastical imagination, and a drowle dzeame.

Hernando
Cortez.
Francisco Pizarre.

But the sequel thereof, hath since awaked out of dzeames thousand of soules to knowe their Creator, being theresof before that time altogether ignorant: And hath since made sufficient prooffe, neither to be fantasticke, nor vaine imagines.

Withall, howe mightily hath it enlarged the dominions of the Crowne of Spaine, and greatly enriched the subiects of the same, let all men consider. Besides, it is wel knowne, that sithence the time of Columbus his first discouerie, throughe their planting, possesing, and inhabiting those partes, there hath bene transpoyted and brought home into Europe, greater store of Golde, Siluer, Pearle, and Precious Stones, then heretofore hath bene in all ages, since the creation of the worlde.

I doe therefore hartely wish, that seeing it hath pleased almighty God, of his infinite mercy at the length, to awake some of our worthy Countrey men, out of that drowle dzeame, wherein we all haue so long slumbered:

That wee may nowe not suffer it to qualle for want of maintenance, that by these valiant Gentlemen our Countrey men is so nobly begun and enterprised. For which purpose, I haue taken vpon me to write this simple short treatise, hoping that it shall be able to perswade such as haue bene, and yet doe continue detractors and hinderers of this iourney, (by reason perhaps that they haue not deliberately and aduisedly entred into the iudgement of the matter) that yet now vpon better consideration they will become fauourable furtherers of the same. And that such as are already well affected therunto, will continue their good disposition: And withall, I most humbly pray all such as are no niggards of their purses in buying of costly and rich apparel, and liberal Contributors in setting foorth of games, pastimes, feasting and banquets, (whereof the charge being past, there is no hope of publique profite or commoditie) that henceforth they will bestowe and employ their liberalitie (heretofore that way expended) to the furtherance of these so commendable purposes proceedings.

is reasonable
require.

And to this ende haue I taken pen in hand, as in conscience therunto mooued, desiring much rather, that of the great multitude which this Realme doeth nourish, farre better able to handle this matter then I my selfe am, it would haue pleased some one of them to haue undertaken the same. But seeing they are silent, and that it falleth to my lotte to put pen to the paper, I will endeavour my selfe, and doe stand in good hope (though my skill and knowledge be simple, yet through the assistance of almighty God) to prooue that the voyage, late enterprised for trade, traffike, and planting in America, is an action tending to the lawfull enlargement of her Maiesties Dominions, commobious to the whole Realme in general, profitable to the aduenturers in particular, beneficiall to the Saouages, and a matter to be attained without any great danger or difficultie.

The arguments of the booke.

And lastly (which most of all is) A thing likewise tending to the honour and glory of almighty God: And for that the lawfulness to plant in those Countreies, in some mens iudgements seemeth very doubtful, I will beginne the prooffe of the lawfulness of trade, traffike, and planting.

The

The seconde Chapter sheweth that it is lawfull and necessarie to trade and traffike with the Sauges: And to plant in their Countries: And deuideth planting into two sortes.

As first for traffike, I say that the Christians may lawfully trauell into those Countries and abide there, whom the Sauges may not iustly impugne and forbid in respect of the mutuall societie and fellowship betwene man and man prescribed by the Lawe of Nations.

For from the first beginning of the creation of the world and from the renting of the same after Noes flood, all men haue agreed, that no violence should be offered to Ambassadors: That the Sea with his Hauens should be common: That such as should fortune to be taken in warre, should be seruantes or slaves: And that Strangers should not be driven away from the place of Countrey whereunto they doe come.

If it were so then, I demaund in what age, and by what Lawe is the same forbidden or denied since? For who doubteth but that it is lawfull for Christians to vse trade and traffike with Infidels or Sauges, carrying thither such commodities as they want, & bringing from thence some part of their plenty.

A thing so commonly and generally practised, both in these our dayes, and in times past, beyonde the memoire of man, both by Christians and Infidels, that it needeth no further proofe.

And for as much as the vse of trade and traffike (be it neuer so profitable) ought not to be preferred before the planting of Christian faith: I will therefore some what entreate of planting (without which, Christian Religion can take no roote, be the Preachers neuer so careful and diligent) which I meane to deuide in two sortes.

The first, when Christians by the good liking and willing assent of the Sauges, are admitted by them to quiet possession,

The second, when Christians being vnwillingly repulsed, doe seeke to attaine and mainteine the right for which they doe come.

And though in regard of the establishment of Christian Religion, either of both may be lawfully and iustly exercised: (Whereof many examples may be found, as well in the time of Popes and Iosua, and other Rulers before the birth of Christ, as of many vertuous Emperours and Kings since his incarnation:) yet doe I wish, that before the second be put in practise, a proofe may be made of the first, sauing that for their safetie as well against the Sauges, as all other forraigne enemies, they should first well and strongly fortifie them selues: which being done, then by all fayre speeches, & every other good meanes of persuasion to seeke to take away all occasions of offence.

As letting them to vnderstand, howe they came not to their hurt, but for their good, and to no other ende, but to dwell peaceably amongst them, and to trade and traffike with them for their owne commoditie, without molesting or grieuing them any way, which must not be done by wordes onely but also by deedes.

For albeit, to maintaine right and repel iniurie, be a full cause of warre: yet must there hereof be due care had, that whereas the Sauges be fearful by nature, and sonde otherwise, the Christians should do their best endeour to take away such feare as may grow vnto them by reason of their strange apparel, Armour, and weapon, of such like, by quiet and peaceable conuersation, and letting them liue in securitie, and keeping a measure of blameless defence, with as little diuersion to the Sauges as may bee: for this kinde of warre would be onely defence and not offence.

And questionles there is great hope & likely hope that by this kind of meanes, we should bring to passe all effects to our desired purposes: Considering that all creatures, by constitution of nature, are rendered more tractable and easier wonne for all allayes, by courtesie and mildnesse, then by crueltie or roughnes: and therefore being a principle taught vs by naturall reason, it is first to be put in bre.

For albeit as yet the Christians are not so thoroughly furnished with the perfect rule of their language, either to expresse their mindes to them, or againe to conceiue the Sauges intent: Yet for the present opportunitie, such pollicie may be used by friendly signes, and courteous tokens towards them, as the Sauges may easily perceiue, (were their senses neuer so grosse) an assured friendship to be offered them, and that they are encountered with such a nation, as brings them benefite, commoditie, peace, tranquillity and safetie. To further this, and to accomplish it in deedes, there must bee presented vnto them graces, some kindes of our pettye marchandizes

The principal causes why this voyage is undertaken.

The first kinde of planting.

chandises and trifles: gold, Christall, Amber, accounted by them of more to a liking and a desire. Forsoeuer, it shall be the maine meanes, to signify our being admitted betwixt them, will alwayes bee ready in all inuasions, spoiles, and other hurtfull things: and a man whome it is bestow.

For it appeareth by experience in those countries, that as continuall warre being a cruel kinde of punishment, soe it is not to be used against the Sauges againe: and onely mightily stirred the Christians, proffering frankes, consents shall be correspondent to the Christians: that they haue of Land, thereby by such as the first sort of planting place.

But if after these good successfull factitions, but be Christians from their hope for which they painfull. Then in such a case to pursue reuenge with force, it is allowable by more securitie to increase their dealing.

Wherein if also the (as I iudge) but that it is to see their enemies, subduing murderous: this day is used: and no session, least happily attended, should afterwards their horrible idolatry, their wicked custome.

And in so doing, do of civilitie, for as much bene done by sundry respect to begin their of Christ, mightie and pollicie, and subdue. A

The trade in the old kinde began onely of sued in the Arke with of Nations, which in as much as all their poe their predecessour, & towards being vnderwrite the Land of Co chandises and trifes: As looking glasses, Beis, Beads, Bracelets, Chaimes, or collers of Bewige, Chyffball, Amber, Jet, or Glasse &c. For such be the things thought to vs of small value, yet accounted by them of high price and estimation: and soonest will induce their Barbarous natures to a liking and a mutual society with vs.

Howeuer, it shal be requisite, either by speeche, if it be possible, either by some other certaine meanes, to signifie unto them, that once league of friendship with all louing consuetudine, being admitted betwene the Christians and them: that then the Christians from thence forth will alwayes bee ready with force of Armes to assist & defende them in their iust quarrels, from all inuasions, spoyles and opprellions, offered them by any Tyrants, Adversaries, or their next boyders: and a benefite is so much the more to be esteemed, by howe much the person by whome it is bestowed standeth in neede thereof.

For it appeareth by the relation of a countreman of ours, namely David Ingram, (who trauelled in thole countries xi. moneths and more) That the Sauages generally for the most part, are at continuall warres with their next adioyning neighbours, and especially the Cannibals, being a cruel kinde of people, whose foode is mans flesh, and haue teeth like dagges, and do pursue them with rauenous mindes to eate their flesh, and deuoure them.

And it is not to be doubted, but that the Christians may in this case iustly and lawfully ayde the Sauages against the Cannibals. So that it is very likelic, that by this meanes we shall not onely mightely stirre and inflame their rude mindes gladly to embrace the louing company of the Christians, proffering vnto them both commodities, succour, and kindness: But also by their franke confessions shall easily enioy such competent quantitie of Lande, as euery way shall be co-respondent to the Christians expectation, & contentation, considering the great abundance that they haue of Lande, and howe small account they make thereof, taking no other fruites thereby then such as the ground of it selfe dooth naturally yeelde. And thus much concerning the first sort of planting, which as I assuredly hope, so I most hartelie pray may take effect and place.

But if after these good and fayre meanes vsed, the Sauages neuertheless will not bee herewithall satisficd, but barbarously will go about to practise violence either in repelling the Christians from their Voyes & safe landings: or in withstanding them after wards to enioy the rights for which both painfully and lawfully they haue aduentured themselves thither:

Then in such a case I holde it no breach of equitie for the Christians to defende themselves, to pursue reuenge with force, and to do whatsoeuer is necessarie for the attayning of their safety: For it is allowable by al Lawes in such distresses, to resist violence with violence: And for their more securitie to increase their strength by building of fortres, for auoyding the extremitie of iniurious dealing.

Wherein if also they shal not be suffered in reasonable quietnes to continue, there is no barre (as I iudge) but that in slioure assemblies, the Christians may issue out, and by strong hand pursue their enemies, subdue them, take possession of their Townes, Cities, or Villages, (and in auoyding murderous tyrannie) to vse the Lawe of Armes, as in like case among all nations at this day is vsed: and most especially to the ende they may with securitie holde their lawfull possession, least happily after the deparrure of the Christians, such Sauages as haue bene conuerted, should after wards through compulsion and enioyement of their wicked Rulers, returne to their horribile idolatric (as did the chyldren of Israel, after the decease of Iosua) and continue their wicked custome of most vnnaturall sacrificing of humane creatures.

And in so doing, doubtlesse the Christians shall no whit at all transgresse the bonds of equite or civilitie, for as much as in former ages, (yea before the incarnation of Christ) the like hath bene done by sundry Kings and Princes, Gouvernours of the chyldren of Israel: chiefly in respect to begin their planting, for the establishment of Gods woyle: as also since the Natyuitie of Christ, mightie and puissant Emperours and Kings haue performed the like, I say to plant, possesse, and subdue. For prooue whereof, I will alleadge you examples of both kindes.

We reade in the olde Testament, howe that after Noes flood was ceased, restoracion of mankinde began onely of those fewe of Noes chyldren and familie as were by God prelected to be sauerd in the Arke with him, whose seede in proccesse of time, was multiplied to infinite numbers of Nations, which in diuers sortes deuided themselves to sundry quarters of the earth. And for-asmuch as all their posteritie being mightily increased followed not the perfect life of Noe their predecessour, God chose out of the multitude, a peculiar people to himselfe, to whome afterwards being vnder the gouernement of Moyses in Mount Synay, hee made a grante to inherite the Land of Canaan, called the land of promise, with all the other rich and fertile Countries

The second
kinde of planting.

were next aduoyning therto. Nevertheless, before they came to possession thereof, hauing bene afflicted with many greuous punishments and plagues for their sinnes they fell in dispaye to enjoy the same.

But being encouraged and comforted by their Rulers, (men of God) they proceeded, arming themselves with all patience, to suffer whatsoeuer it should please God to sende: and at last attaining to the lands, they were encountered with great numbers of strong people and mighty Kings.

Iosua 4. Notwithstanding Iosua their leader replenished with the spirit of God, being assured of the iustnesse of his quarell, gathered the chiefe strength of the children of Israel together, to the number of 40000, with whom he safely passed the huge riuer Iordan, and hauing beset some priue spies for the discoverie of the famous citie Ierico, to vnderstand the certaintie of the Cities estate, he forthwith came thither, and enuironed it rounde about, with his whole power the space of seven dayes.

Iosua 6. In which respect, perceiuing none of the Gentiles disposed to yeld or call for merrie, he then commanded (as God before had appointed) that both the citie Iericho should be burned, yea, and all the inhabitants, as well olde as young, with all their cattell should be destroyed onely excepted Rahab, her kindred and familie, because she before had hid secretly the messengers of Iosua, that were sent thither as spies. As for all their golde, siluer, precious stones, or vessels of brasse, they were reserved and consecrated to the Lords treasure.

Iosua 8. In like manner hee burned the citie Hay, slew the inhabitants thereof, and hanged by their King. But for so much as the Gebionites (feearing the like event) sent Ambassadors vnto Iosua, to intreate for grace, fauour, & peace: he commanded that all their liues should be saved, and that they should be admitted to the company of the children of Israel. Yet vnderstanding afterwards they wought this by a policie, he vled them as Iudges to hew wood & to carie water, and other necessaries for his people. Thus began this valiant Captaine his conquest, which he pursued & neuer left till he had subdued all the Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Peresites, Hewites, and Iebusites, with all their Princes and Kings, being thirtie and one in number, and diuers other strange nations, besides whose lands & dominions, he whole deuised among Gods people.

Iosua 9. After that Iosua was deceased, Iuda was constituted Lord over the Armie, who reuerting like charge from God pursued the proceedings of the holie captaine Iosua, and utterly banquished many Gentiles, Idolaters, and aduersaries to the children of Israel, with all such Rulers of Kings, as withstood him, and namely Adonibezek, the most cruell tyrant: whose thombes and great toes, he caused to be cut off, for so much as hee had done the like before vnto sennitie Kings, whome being his prisoners, he forced to gather up their victuals vnderneath his Table. In this God shewed his iustice to reuenge tyanny. Like reade likewise, that Gedeon a most puilliant and noble warrior, so behaued himselfe in following the worthy acts of Iosua & Iuda that in short time he not only deliuered the children of Israel from the hands of the multitude of the fierce Madianites, but also subdued them, and their Tyrants, whose landes he caused Gods people to possesse and inherite.

Judg. 11. 13. I could recte diuers other places out of the Scripture, which apely may be applied hereunto were it not I do endeavour my selfe by all meanes to be briefe. Now in like manner will I alledge some few of Inductions out of the autentick writings of the Ecclesiasticall Historiographers, all tending to the like argument. And first to begin with all, we doe reade: That after our Saviour Iesus Christ had suffered his passion, the Apostles being inspired with the holy ghost, and the knowlege of all strange languages, did immediately disperse themselves to sundry partes of the world, to the preaching of the Gospel. Yet not in so generall a manner, but that there remained some farre remote countries vnvisited by them, among the which it is reported that India the great, called the vttermost India, as yet had receiued no light of the word. But it came to passe, that one Metrodorus, a vertie learned and wise Philosopher in that age, being desirous to search out vnknowne landes, did first discover the same, finding it wonderfull populous and rich, which vpon his returne being published, and for certaine vnderstood, there was another graue Philosopher of Tyrus called Meropius, being a christian, who did resolve himselfe (following the example of Metrodorus) to trauaile thither, and in a short time assidid but with a few, in a small Vessel arrived there, hauing in his company two young youtnes, Edecius, and Frumentius, whome (being his schollers) hee had thoughtly instructed, both in liberall Sciences and christian Religion. Whome after that Meropius somewhat staying there, had (as he thought) sufficient vnderstanding of the Indians whole estate: He determined to depart, and to bring notice thereof vnto the Emperour, whome he meant to exhort to the conquest of the same.

A good note for Al Conquerors to be mercifull. Judg. 6. 7.

But

But by misfortune he was, a soze tempest at of the land: where he by his company, excepte the they were of comely the their King and Queene and ordered Edecius to be son of their learning and tion with the Princes. Some to gouerne, and go to passe to their native so highly fauoured them to reach them to carie and some grew to ripe pre

And Frumentius exerts at his discretion, of christian religion with swation might be best yea to passe accordingly, hee his native countrie. Am flamine, the effect of all thereof, by the abuse and set forth a conuenient position means came the Emperour the possession of all tract hereof, from the Howeuer Eusebius hath mention how Constantine next neighbours, but heathen nations, as the Emperour thoughtly advised to christian religion, then called the Illud, made tributarie, and as to his wisdome seeme the world, and there were by friendly persuasions warde hee determined most parts of the South became victour ouer the ans, that nowe are the name of christians.

In the East likewise woman and brought in some any part of the world, el but in time hee overcame

This worthy beginner ouer Emperours all the booke of Eusebius call hisopic maketh mention his time, as well in converting the prophane Tyrant, as in the overthrow of the West, who father, either in enlarg

Howeuer, it is reported inferior in vertuous li

But by misfortune he was persecuted, for being in the midst of his course on the Sea home-ward, a storme tempest arose, and perforce dyone him backe againe, to an unknowne Ioye of the Cape land: where he by the most cruel barbarous Indians on the suddaine was slaine with all his company, except the two young schollers aforesaid, whom the barbarous Indians, by reason they were of comely stature and beautifull personages, took, and forthwith presented them to their King and Queene: which both being very well liked of, the King courteously created, and ordered Edesius to be his Butler, and Frumentius his Secretarie, and in few yeres by reason of their learning and civill government, they were had in great favour, honour, and estimation with the Princes, But the King departing this life, left the Queene his wife with her young sonne to governe, and gave free scope and libertie to the two christians, at their best pleasure to passe to their native soyles, allowing them all necessaries for the same. Yet the Queene who highly favoured them was verie sorrowfull they should depart, and therefore most earnestly intreated them to tarry and assist her in the government of her people, till such time as her young sonne grew to ripe yeres, which request they fulfilled.

And Frumentius excelling Edesius farre in all wisdom, ruled both the Queene and her subjects at his discretion, whereby hee tooke occasion to put in practice privately, that the foundation of christian religion might best yssue, and that soonest would be given unto him: which being thought to passe accordingly, he then with his fellowe Edesius, took leave of the Queene to returne to his native countrie. And so soone as he was arriv'd there, he revealed to the Emperour Constantine, the effect of all those events: who both commending his verbes and wholie allowing thereof, by the advise and good liking of Athanasius then Bishop of Alexandria, did arme and let forth a convenient power for the aide of Frumentius, in this his so godlie purpose. And by this means came the Emperour afterwards by faire promises, and by force of armes together, unto the possession of all the Indians countrie. The aucthor of this Royall Rufinus, received the truth hereof, from the verie mouth of Edesius companion to Frumentius.

Howsoever Eusebius in his Historie Ecclesiasticall in precise termes, and in divers places maketh mention how Constantine the great, not onely enlarged his Empire by the subduing of his next neighbours, but also endeavour'd by all means, to subiect all such remote Barbarous and heathen nations, as then inhabited the foure quarters of the world. For (as it is written) the Emperour thoughtly aided with a puissant armie of valiant souldiers whom he had before perswaded to christian religion, in proper person himselfe, came even unto this our countrey of England, then called the Island of Brittaines, bending from him full west, which he wholie conquered, made tributarie, and seled therein christian faith, and left behinde him such Rulers there of, as to his wisdome seemed best. From thence he turned his force towards the North coast of the world, and there betwixt subdued the rude and cruell Nation of the Scythians, whom of part by friendly perswasions, part by maine strength, he reduced the whole to Christian faith. Afterwards hee determined with himselfe to search out what strange people inhabited in the better most parts of the South. And with great hazard and labour, making his journey thither, at last became vicour over them all, even to the countrey of the Blemmyans, and the remote Ethiopians, that now are the people of Presbyter John, who yett till this day, continue and beare the name of christians.

In the East likewise, what Nation soever at that time hee could have notice of, hee easily wonne and brought in subiection to the Empire. So that to conclude, there was no region in any part of the world, the inhabitants whereof being Gentiles, though unknowne unto him, but in time hee overcame and vanquished.

This worthy beginning of Constantine, both his sonnes succeeding his route, and also divers other Emperours after ward to their bittermost endeavour followed and continued, which all the booke of Eusebius moze at large sette forth. Theodoretus likewise in his Ecclesiasticall Historie maketh mention how Theodosius the vertuous Emperour, employed earnestly all his time, as well in conquering the Gentiles to the knowledge of the holy gospel, betwixt subverting the poppish Temples and abominable Idolatry, as also in extinguishing of such vsurping tyrannies, as with Paganisme withstood the planting of christian religion. After whose decess his sonnes, Honorius, and Arcadius, were created Emperours, the one of the East, the other of the West, who with all stout godlinesse, most carefully imitated the footsteps of their Father, eicher in enlarging their territories, or increasing the christian flocke.

Howsoever, it is reported by the said aucthor, that Theodosius Junior the Emperour, notwithstanding inferior in vertuous life to any of the aboue named Princes, with great studie & zeale pursued, and Meropius flaur.

Cedius and Frumentius persecuted by the Indians.

Frumentius in great favour with Constantine the great.

An other great work of God begun by a man of irate birth. Rufinus the Bishop of this storie.

Eusebius in his ecclesiasticall Historie maketh mention how Constantine the great, not onely enlarged his Empire by the subduing of his next neighbours, but also endeavour'd by all means, to subiect all such remote Barbarous and heathen nations, as then inhabited the foure quarters of the world.

Eusebius lib. 1. de vita Constant. Cap. 4. et cap. 9.

Eusebius lib. 1. cap. 30.

Theodor. in eccle. lib. 1. cap. 20.

Theodor. cap. 20. eodem lib.

ing bene
page to den, ar
and at last might stured of er, to the foze sent the Citti ower the
be then yea, and ed onely ngers of cessles of
by their unto loaned, and ng after water,
which he Heures, ainers o-
y people.
ung like nglished ulers of ombes stuentie
Table,
n a most
a Juda
ctitude of ed Gods
d hereun-
will I altoplogra-
after oue
p good,
so sway
that there beyond that it came bestious
populous
another
se (follow-
d a fewe,
and Frudences thought)
ng notice
But

and prosecuted the Gentiles, subdued their tyrants & countries, and verely destroyed all their idolatry, converting their soules to acknowledge their onely Goddes and Creator, and their Countries to the enlargement of the Empire. To be briefe, who so lusteth to read Eusebius Pamphilus, Socrates Scholasticus, Theodoritus, Herma, Sozomen, & Eusegius Scholasticus, which all were most sage Ecclesiasticall writers, shall finde great store of examples of the worthy lives of sundry Emperours, tending all to the confirmation of my former speeches.

And for like examples of latter time (yea even in the memoire of man) I shall not neede to recite any other then the conquest made of the West and East Indies, by the Kings of Spaine and Portugale, whereof there is particular mention made in the last Chapter of this booke. Perrin haue I used moze copy of examples, then otherwise I would haue done, seeing that I haue bene in place where this manner of planting the Christian faith, hath bene thought of some to be scarce lawfull, yea, such as doe take vpon them to be moze then mearely learned. To these examples could I Ioyne many moe, but whosoever is not satisfied with these fewe, may satisfie himselfe in reading at large the Authours last aboue recited. Thus haue I as I trust prooued that we may iustly trade and traffike with the Saouages, and lawfully plant and inhabite their Countries.

The third Chapter doeth shewe the lawfull title, which the Queenes most excellent Maiestie hath vnto those Countries, which through the ayde of almightie God are meant to be inhabited.

1170.
Owen Wynne
meth, was then Prince of North Wales.
Nullum tempus occurret Regi.
This Island
was discouered
by Sir Wynne and his company, in this his last journey.

As it is very euident that the planting there shall in time right amply enlarge her Maiesties Territories and Dominions; I might rather say) re- store her to her Dignitie auncient right and interest in those Countries, in- to the which a noble and worthy personage, lineally descended from the blood royal, borne in Wales, named Madock ap Owen Gwyneth, departing from the coast of England, about the yeere of our Lord God 1170. arrived and there planted himselfe and his Colonies, and afterwarde returned himselfe into England leaving certaine of his people there, as appeareth in an auncient Welch Chronicle, where hee then gaue to certaine Islands, beastes, and foules sundry Welch names, as the Islands of Pen- gwin, which yet to this day beareth the same.

There is likewise a Soule in the sayd Countreys, called by the same name at this day, and is as much to say in English, as Whitehead, and in truth, the sayd foules haue white heads.

There is also in those Countries a fruite called Gwynethes which is likewise a Welch word. Moreover, there are diuers other Welch wordes at this day in vse, as Dauid Ingram aforesayd repository in his relations. All which most strongly argueth, the sayd Prince with his people to haue inhabited there. And the same in effect is confirmed by Muczuma that mightie Emperour of Mexico, who in an Oracion vnto his subjects for the better pacifying of them, made in the presence of Hernando Cortes, used these speeches following.

O my kindmen, friends, and seruants, you doe well knowe that eightene yeeres I haue bene your King, as my fathers and Graundfathers were, and alwayes I haue bene vnto you a louing Prince, and you vnto me good and obedient subjects, and so I hope you will remaine vnto me all the dayes of my life. You ought to haue in remembrance, that either you haue heard of your fathers, or else our Diuines haue i. Arcted you that we are not naturall of this Countrey, nor yet our Kingdome is durable, because our forefathers came from a farre Countrey, and their King and Captaine who brought them hither, returned againe to his naturall Countrey, saying, that he would send such as should rule and gouerne vs, if by chance hee himselfe returned not, &c.

These be the very wordes of Muczuma, set downe in the Spanishe Chronicles, the which being thoroughly considered, because they haue relation to some strange noble person, who long before had possessed those Countries, doe all sufficiently argue, the vndoubted title of her Maiestie: Forasmuch as no other Nation can truely by any Chronicles they can finde, make prescription of time for themselves, before the time of this Prince Madoc. Besides all this, for further prooffe of her Dignities title I shew the arriual of this noble Britton into those parts (that is to say) in the time of the D. Pauleties graundfather, of worthy memory, King Henry the seventh, Letters patents were by his Maiestie graunted to John Cabora an Italian, to Lewis, Sebastian, and Santhus, his three sonnes, to discouer remote, Barbarous and Heathen Countries, which discouerie, was afterwards executed to the vse of the Crowne of England, in y<sup>e</sup> said Kings time, by

Muczuma
his Oracion to his subjects in presence of Hernando
Cortes,
which Oracion
was made about
the year. 1520.

by Sebastian and Santhus his sonnes, there is a fayre haven in the cape of Florida, as appeareth in the booke of the Discouery.
And this may stand for an example then any other Christian of possition thereof, obiective ques Nunnes de Balboa, He thinks it needefull to write an

The fourth chapter sheweth likely to prooue very pro

As to the merally to realme, a martiall ready to
of this bo
there in sundry places of this r of fishing only; yet notwithstanding the name of fishermen, will more els brought of strange fish, as the especiall fishing in farre, and knowne safe ha thereabouts: whereas they no pleaseth themselves; or rather as might be sufficient to feed found there) whereof Dauid there is great plenty: & well small growing, yet it might where. Which being brought it be in respect of fishing on ities which are there found.

Moreover, it is well knowe that dwell in the North, so fe vellous delight in any gar ten calloske, a cappe of fish

For I my selfe haue hea dwell in the South of lesse time: that the prop ments. Which being so, i nettle to all such persons & ment of such as are discreet And questionlesse here haue bene, and now are woyke, by reason of the tra path) that by this means is to the enlargement of our

To what end need I e and navigation shalbe in example of the neere neig first discouery of the Indi themselves and theyr sub maisters and maisters. a Besides this, it will p onely a great number of & impossible to this rea

By Sebastian and Santius his sonnes, who were bozne heere in England: In true testimony whereof, there is a sayde haue in the westound land, knowne, and called vncle this day by the name of Santius haue, which ppooueth that they first discouered vpon that coast, from the height of 63; but in the cape of Florida, as appeareth in the Decades.

St. Oluer Halborp.
St. Edward
Roto.
J. H. N. W.
J. H. J. N.

And this may stand for another title to her Majesty: but any of the sayde titles is as much or more then any other Christian prince can pretend to the Indies, before such time as they had any possession thereof, obtained by the discouery of Christopher Columbus, & the conquest of Valques Nunnes de Balboa, Hernando Cortes, Francisco Pysarro, and others. And therefore I thinke it needefull to write any more touching the lawfullness of her Majesties title.

The fourth chapter sheweth how that the trade, traffike, and planting in those countryes, is likely to prooue very profitable to the whole realme in generall.

Now to the how the same is likely to prooue very profitable and benefitfull generally to the whole realme: It is very certaine, that the greatest wealth of this realme, and the chiefest strength and force of the same, for defence or offence in martiall matter and maner is the multitude of shippes, maisters & mariners, ready to assist the most stately and royall nauy of her Majesty, which by reason of this voyage shall haue both increase & maintenance. And it is well knowne, that in sundry places of this realme shippes haue bene built and set forth of late dayes, for the trade of fishing onely: yet notwithstanding the fish which is taken & brought into England by the English nauie of fishermen, will not suffice for the expence of this realme foure moneths, if there were none els brought of strangers. And the chiefest cause why our English men do not goe so far Westward, as the especiall fishing places do lie, both for plenty & greatnesse of fish, is for that they haue no factories and knowne safe harbor in those parts. But if our nation were once planted there, or nere therabouts: where as they now fish but for two moneths in the yeere, they might then fish so long as pleased themselves: or rather as they comming finde such plenty of fish ready taken, salted & dried, as might be sufficient to fraugeth them home without long delay (God granting that sale may be found there) whereof Dauid Ingram (who trauelled in those countryes as aforesaid) saith that there is great plenty: & wisheth all the climate doth giue great hope, that though there were none naturally growing, yet it might as well be made there by art, as it is both in Rochell & Bayon, or els where. Which being brought to passe, shall increase the number of our shippes and mariners, were it but in respect of fishing onely: but much more in regard of the sundry merchandises and commodities which are there found and had in great abundance.

For the main
net.

Moreover, it is well knowne that all Sauages, as well those that dwell in the South, as those that dwell in the North, so soone as they shall beginne but a little to taste of ciuility, will take marvellous delight in any garment, be it neuer so simple: as a tunicke, a blew, yellow, red, or greene coten callocke, a cappe or such like, and will take incredible paines for such a trifle.

For I my selfe haue heard this report made sundry times, by diuers of our countrymen, who haue dwelt in the Southerly parts of the West Indies, some twelues yeeres together, and some of lesse time: that the people in those parts are easily reduced to ciuility both in maners and garments. Which being so, what bene for our English clothes will thereby ensue, and how great benefite to all such persons & artificers whose names are coted in the margent, I do leaue to the iudgement of such as are discreet.

Clothiers, Woolmers, Carders, Spinners, Wauers, Fullers, Shearmen, Dyers, Drapers, Clothers, Cappers, Hatters, &c.
And many be rapid towne
repaired,

And questionlesse hereby it will also come to passe, that all such towne and villages, as both haue bene, and now are bitterly decayed and ruinated (the pooze people thereof being not set on worke, by reason of the transportation of raw wooll of late dayes, more excellently then in times past) that by this means be restored to theyr pristinae wealth and estate, all which do like wise tend to the enlargement of our nauie, and maintenance of our nauigation.

To what end need I endow my selfe by arguments to prooue, that by this voyage our nauie and nauigation shall be enlarged, when as there needeth none other reason then the manifest & late example of the neere neighbors to this realme, the kings of Spaine and Portugall, who since the first discouery of the Indies, haue not onely mightily enlarged theyr dominions, greatly increased themselves and theyr subjects: but haue also by iust account crebled the number of theyr shippes, maisters and mariners, a matter of no small moment and importance.

The able persons of this realme shall by occasion of this voyage be well employed, and set on worke.

Besides this, it will prooue a generall benefite vnto our countrye, that though this occasion, not onely a great number of men which do now liue idly at home, and are burthenous, chargeable, & impossible to this realme, shall hereby be set on worke, but also children of twelue or fourteen yeeres peres of age, or vnder, may be kept from idleness, in making of a thousand knives of trading things, which will be good merchandise for that countrey. And moreover, our idle women (which the realme may well spare) shall also be employed on plucking, drying, and sorting of feathers, in pulling, beating, and working of hemp, and in gathering of cotton, and diuers things which neede necessity for dying. All which things are to be found in those countreys most plentifully. And the men may employ themselves in dragging for pearle, working for mines, and in matters of husbandry, and the worst in hunting the Whale for tallow, and making calkes to put the same in; besides in fishing for cod, salmon, and herring, drying, salting, and barreling for the same, and selling of furs, by buying and sawing of them, and such like works, meet for those persons as are no men of art or science.

Many other things may be found to the great reliefe and good employments of no small number, of the naturall subjects of this realme, which do now liue herre (idle) to the common annoy of the whole state. Neither may I heere omit the great hope and likelihood of a passage by the Grand bay, into the South seas, confirmed by sundry authors to be found leading to Cathay, the Moluccas and Spiceries, whereby may ensue as general a benefit to the realme, or greater then yet hath bene spoken of, without either such charges, or other inconueniences, as by the tedious tract of time and perill, which the ordinary passage to those parts at this day doeth minister.

And to conclude this argument withall, it is well knowne to all men of sound iudgement, that this voyage is of greater importance, and will be found more beneficiall to our countrey, then all other voyages at this day in vse and trade amongst vs.

The fift chapter sheweth, that the trading and planting in those countreys is likely to prooue to the peticular profit of all aduenturers.

But now according to my promise shew forth some probable reasons, that the aduenturers in this journey are to take particular profit by the same. It is therefore convenient that I do diuide the aduenturers into two sortes: the noblemen & gentlemen by themselves, and the merchants by themselves. For as I do heere, it is meant that there shall be one society of the noblemen and gentlemen, and another society of the merchants. And yet not so diuided, but that each society may freely and frankly trade and traffike one with the other.

And first to bend my speech to the noblemen and gentlemen, who do chiefly seeke a temperate climate, wholesome ayre, fertile soile, and a strong place by nature, whereupon they may fortifie, and there either plant themselves, or such other persons as they shall thinke good to send to be lords of that place and countrey: to them I say that all these things are very easily to be found within the degrees of 30 and 60 as before said, either by South or North, both in the Continent, and in Islands thereunto adioyning at their choice: but the degree certaint of the elevation of the pole, and the best climate where the best places of force and fertility are to be found, I omit to make publike, for such regard as the wisest sort can easily coniecture: the rather because I do certainly vnderstand, that some of those which haue the managing of this matter, know it as well or better then I my selfe, and do meane to reueale the same when cause shall require, to such persons whom it shall concerne, and to no other: so that they may learne and testie themselves in such climate as shall best agree with their owne nature, disposition, and good liking; and in the whole tract of that land, by the distribution of as many as haue bene there, great plenty of minerrall matter of all sorts, and in very many places, both stones of ppyre, pearle and chrystall, and great store of beaues, birds, and fowles both for pleasure and necessary vse of man are to be found.

And to such as take delight in hunting, there are Beagges, Wild boyes, Foxes, Hares, Curriers, Badgers, Otters, and diuers other such like for pleasure. Also for such as haue delight in hauking, there are haues of sundry kinds, and great store of game, both for land and riuers, as Foyants, Partridges, Cranes, Heronshaws, Ducks, Gallards, and such like. There is also a kinde of beaue, much bigger then an Ox, whose hide is more then eightene foot long, of which sort a country man of ours, one Walker a sea man, who was vpon that coast, did for a true trust repose in the presence of diuers honourable and worshipfull persons, that he and his company did stand in one cottage about two hundred and forty hides, which they brought away and sold in France for forty shillings an hide: and with this agreeth David Ingram, and describeth that beaue at large, supposing it to be a certaine kinde of Buffe: there are likewise beaues and fowles of diuers kinds, which I omit for breuities sake, great store of fish both in the salt water and in the fresh, plenty of grapes as bigge as a mans thumb, and the most delicate wine of the Palme tree, of which wine there be diuers of good credit in this realme haue tasted: and there is also a kinde of graine called

Worme both
golds worme is. Last faint natur
rally.

Keath the bee
gimming of the bees in
is, diuers voyages concerning the bees
of AMERICA.

Beaues for pleasure.

If there be for forty things a piece.

Wine grapes,
wine of the Palme tree.

Maize, Potato roots, and they are once sown, they

And now for the better well disposed merchants, I will first say vnto the degrees about said, fertility of soile, and euery we do trauell into Barbadoes may be either presently to danger then now we haue likelihood and presumption to thinke that they haue

Of beaues for furs

Marterns.
Beaues.
Foxes, blacke and white Leopards.

Of Wormes.

Silke wormes great

Of Birds.

Hawkes.
Bitters.
Curlewes.

Of Fruits.

Grapes very large.
Muskmellons.
Limmons.
Dates great.
Orenges.
Figgis.
Proines.
Raisins great and small.
Pepper.
Almonds.
Citrons.

And seeing that for the first supply will giue vnto well minded persons of so good an enterprise

Now for the trial of this voyage, there is proposed first aduerture: and yet seruans, his and they other voyagers haue not haue aduencured in the there are to be admitted in therefore generally I shal haue. For if it do so fauour will) the gaine which with little charge, great deepe riuers at the best port for in the most part that three times, or there, & dwell vpon the assistance in the world

Maize, Potato rootes, and sundry other frutes naturally growing there: so that after such time as they are once settled, they shall need to take no great care for themall.

And now for the better contentation and satisfaction of such woorthfull, honest minded, and well disposed merchants, as haue a desire to the furtherance of euery good and commendable action, I will first say vnto them, as I haue done before to the noblemen and gentlemen, that within the degrees aboue said, is doubtlesse to be found the most wholesome and best temperature of ayre, fertility of soile, and euery other commodity of merchandize, for the which, with no small perill we do trauell into Barbary, Spaine, Portugal, France, Italie, Spofconie & Danske. All which may be either presently had, or at the least with in very short time, portured from thence with lesse danger then now we haue them. And yet to the end my argument shall not altogether stand vpon likelihoods and presumptions, I say that such persons as haue discouered and trauelled those parts, do testifie that they haue found in those countreyes all these things following, name ly:

Of beasts for swares.	Herons.	Salmon.
Martens.	Partridges.	Seales.
Beauers.	Cranes.	Herrings.
Foxes, blacke and white.	Mallards.	Of Trees.
Leopards.	Wilde geefe.	Palme trees yeelding sweet Of Wormes.	Stocke dooues.	wines.
Silke wormes great & large	Margaus.	Cedars.
Of Birds.	Blacke birds.	Firres.
Hawkes.	Parrots.	Salafras.
Bitters.	Pengwins.	Oake.
Curlewes.	Of Fishes.	Elme.
	Codde.	Popler.

And sundry other strange Trees, to vs unknowne.

Of Fruits.	Of Mettals.	Chrystal.	Traine oile.
Grapes very large.	Gold.	Sundry other commodities of all sorts.	Muske codde.
Muskemellons.	Siluer.		Salt.
Limmons.	Copper.		Tallow.
Dates great.	Lead.	Rosen.	Hides.
Orenges.	Tinne.	Pitch.	Hempe.
Figges.	Of Stones.	Tarre.	Flaxe.
Proines.	Turkies.	Turpentine.	Cochenello & dies
Raisins great and small.	Rubies.	Frankensence.	of diuers sorts.
Pepper.	Pearls great & faire.	Honny.	Feathers of sundrie Almonds.	Marble, of diuers kinds.	Waxe.	sorts, as for pleasure and filling of Citrons.	Iasper.	Rubarbe.	Featherbeds.
		Oile Oliue.

And seeing that for small costes, the truth of these things may be understood (whereof this intended supply will giue vs more certaine assurance) I doe finde no cause to the contrary, but that all well minded persons should be willing to aduenture some conuenient portion for the furtherance of so good an enterpryse.

Now for the trial<sup>l</sup> hereof, considering that in the articles of the society of the aduenturers in this voyage, there is provision made, that no aduenturer shall be bound to any further charge then his first aduenture: and yet notwithstanding herce still to himselfe, his children, his apprentices and seruants, his and theyr freedom for trade and traffike, which is a priuilege that aduenturers in other voyages haue not: and in the said articles it is likewise provided, that none other then such as haue aduentured in the first voyage, shall become aduenturers in this supply, at any time hereafter are to be admitted in the said society, but as redemptionaries, which will be very chargeable: therefore generally I say vnto all such according to the olde p<sup>r</sup>ouise, Nothing venture, nothing haue. For if it do so fall out, according to the great hope and expectation had (as by Gods grace it will) the gaine which now they reape by traffike into other far countries, shall by this trade returne with lesse charge, greater gaine, & more safety: Little charge I say, by reason of the ample & large deepe riuers at the very bankes, whereof there is many, whereby both easily & quietly they may transport fr<sup>o</sup> innermost parts of the main land, all kinde of merchandize, yea in vessels of great burde, & that three times, or twise in the yere at the least. But let vs omit all prescriptions how we should proceed, & dwell vpon the certaintie of such commodities as were discouered by Sir Humfrey Gilbert, & his assistants in Newfoundland in August last, & of there may be very easily made, Pitch, Tar, Rosen, Commodities found in Newfoundland.

Hope asbes, in great plenty, yea, as it is thought, enough to serue the whole realme of euery of these kindes: And of Trame oile such quantity, as if I should see tohine the value that they doe esteeme it at, which haue bene there, it would seeme incredible.

It is hereby intended, that these commodities in this abundance manner, are not to be gathered from thence, without planting and sowing there. And as for other things of more value, and those of more sorts and kindes then one or two (which were likewise discovered there) I doe holde it for some respects, may meet for a time to be concealed then better.

Of the sowing I do speake nothing, because it is generally knowne: and it is not to be forgotten, what trifles they be that the Saouages do require in exchange of these commodities: yea, for pearle, golde, siluer, and precious stones, All which are matters in trade and traffike of great moment. But admit that it should so fall out, that the aboue specified commodities shall not happily be found out within this first yeere: Yet it is very cleere that such and so many may be found out as shall minister iust occasion to thinke all cost & labour well bestowed. For it is very certaine, that here is one seat for sowing, of great safety, wherein these commodities following, especially are to be had, that is to say, Grapes for wine, Whales for oyle, Krump for voyage, and other necessary things, and fish of farre greater size, and plenty, then that of the newfound land, and of all these so great store, as may suffice to serue our whole realme.

Besides all this, if credit may be giuen to the inhabitants of the same soyle, a certaine riuer doth euer runne aduoyne, which leadeth to a place abounding with rich substance: I do not hereby meane the passage to the Moluccas, whereof before I made mention.

And it is not to be omitted, how that about two yeres past, certaine merchants of M. Mallobes in France, did hyre a shippe out of the Island of Jersey, to the end that they would keepe that trade secret from theyr countrymen, and they would admit no mariner, other then the say boy belonging to the said shippe, to go with them, which shippe was about 70 tunne. I do knowe the shippe and the boy very well, and am familiarly acquainted with the owner, which voyage prooued very beneficiall.

To conclude, this which is already said, may suffice any man of reasonable disposition, to serue for a taste, vntill such time as it shall please almighty God through our owne industrie, to send vs better things. In the meane season, if any man well affected to this iourney, shall stand in doubt of any matter of importance touching the same, he may satisfie himselfe with the iudgement and liking of such of good calling and credit, as are principall dealers therein. For it is not necessary in this treatise, publickly to set forth the whole secrets of the voyage.

The sixt chapter sheweth that the traffike and planting in those countries, shall be vnto the Saouages themselves very beneficiall and gainfull.

Now to the end it may appeare, that this voyage is not undertaken altogether for the peculiar commodity of our selues, and our country (as generally other trades and iournies be) it shall fall out in proofe, that the Saouages shall hereby haue iust cause to blesse the houre, when this enterprise was undertaken.

First and chiefly, in respect of the most happy and glad some tidings of the most glorious Gospell of our Sauiour Iesus Christ, whereby they may be brought from fallhood to truth, from darknesse to light, from the way of death to the path of life, from superstitious idolatry to sincere Christianity, from the deuill to Christ, from hell to heauen. And in respect of all the commodities they can neede vs (where they many more) that they should but receiue this only benefite of Christianity, they were more then fully recompensed.

But herein it may be objected, that the Gospell must be freely preached, for such was the example of the Apostles: vnto whom although the authorities and examples before alleged of Emperours, Kings, and Princes, as well before Christs time as since, might sufficiently suffice: yet for further answer, we may say with S. Paul: If we haue sowed vnto you heauenly things, do you thinke it much that we should reape your carnall things? And withall, The workman is woorthie of his hire. These heauenly tidings which these labourers our countymen (as messengers of Gods great goodnesse and mercy) will voluntarily present vnto them, doe sette vnto theyr earthly riches. Whereouer, if the other inferior worldly & temporal things, which they shall receiue from vs, be weighed in equall ballance, I assure my selfe, that by equall iudgement of any indifferent person, the benefites which they then receiue, shall farre surmount those which they shall depart withall vnto vs. And admit that they had (as they haue not) the knowledge to put theyr hand to some use: yet being brought from iustly ignorance to iustly and knowledge, and made made them to vnderstand map peeld more commodities iust cause of complaint: we create land, to the end they

But this is not all the knowledge how to till and honest manners, from dishonest and withall shall be caught them most vpon, they shall buye the Caribals, where meane many of theyr people, a most horrible and detestable among them. And do feare least I haue already

The seventh chapter sheweth the cultic, as many would

Now therefore without the glorious performance as aforesaid a good upon them to make more rage others, that be very which neither would be

I say and affirme that doe stand vs in need of goodnesse, of long time the same, both from slaughter at this day great number be contented to hazard their out wages, in hope the small charge to the victuall (whereof there great artillery, or costely such a journey may be vntill such time as diuers well woorthy a greater land withall before all

Another helpe we haue in this iourney procure other necessities needful for fish in Newfoundland commonly go with empearth the the fault of money then the detractione, hath in like manner his holy hand blessed the land, we may passe stre our enemies, or doubt selfe some faileth from them make great account of the passage is short, for different winds, & returne same our iourney, by recourse, we may part of goods there, be full of Christian prince, and made make them to understand how the tenth part of the land may be so manured and employed, as it may peeld more commodities to the necessary vse of mans life, then the whole now doth: That w<sup>ch</sup> cause of complaint may they haue? And in my p<sup>ri</sup>uate opinion, I doe ver<sup>y</sup> thinke that God did create land, to the end that it should by culture and husbandry, yeeld things necessary for mans life, But this is not all the benefit which they shall receiue by the Christians: for, ouer and beside the knowledge how to till and dress the grounds, they shall be reduced from wilde, custom<sup>er</sup> to honest manners, from disorderd riotous routs and companies to a well gouerned commonwealth, and withall shall be taught mechanicall occupations, arts, and liberal sciences: and which shalbe them most vpon, they shall be defended from the cruelty of the tyranicall and bloody sucking nig<sup>ro</sup>boys the Canibals, whereby in iustice number of the people shall be preserved. And lastly, by this means many of the poore innocente children shall be preserved from the bloody knife of the sacrifice, a most horrible and detestable custome in the sight of God and man, now and euer heretofore used amongst them. Many other things could I here allege to this purpose, were it not that I do feare least I haue already sayd more then halfe tired the reader.

This bargain can not be used, where both parties are gainers.

The seuenth chapter sheweth that the planting there, is not a matter of such charge or difficulty, as many would make it seeme to be,

Now therefore for prooff, that the planting in these parts is a thing that may be done without the aide of the princes power and purse, contrary to the allegation of many malicious persons, who will neither be actors in any good action themselves, nor so much as aske a good word to the setting forward thereof: and that woofe is, they will take vpon them to make molehills seeme mountaines, and flies elephants, to the end they may discourage others, that be very well or indifferently affected to the matter, being like vnto Clops togge, which neither would eat hay himselfe, nor suffer the poore hungry ass to feed theron:

I say and affirme that God hath provided such means for the furtherance of this enterprise, as doe stand vs in stead of great treasure: for first by reason that it hath pleased God of his great goodness, of long time to doe his mercifull hand ouer this realme in preserving the people of the same, both from slaughter by the sword, and great death by plague, pestilence, or otherwise, there are at this day great numbers (God be knoweth) which live in such penury and want, as they coulde be contented to hazard theyr liues, and to serue one yeere for meate, drinke and apparell only, without wages, in hope thereby to amend theyr estates: which is a matter in fact like iourneys, to a small charge to the prince. Moreover, things in the like iourneys of greatest price and cost, as victual (whereof there is great plenty to be had in that countrey without money) and powder, great artillery, or coforters, are not needfull in so plentifull and chargeable manner, as the few of such a iourney may present: for a small quantity of all these to furnish the fox onely, will suffice vntill such time as diuers commodities may be found out in those parts, which may be thought well woorthy a greater charge. Also the peculiar benefit of archers which God hath blessed this land withall before all other nations, will stand vs in great stead amongst those naked people.

Another helpe we haue also, which in such like cases is a matter of marvellous cost, and will be in this iourney procured very easly (that is to say) To transporte freely as well our people, as all other necessaries needfull for them into those parts by the fleet of merchants, that presently venture for fish in Newfoundland, being not farre distant from the countrey meant to be inhabited, who commonly go with empty vessels in effect, sauing some little freight with salt. And thus it appeareth that the soldiers wages, and the transportation may be defrayed for farre lesse summes of money then the detractors of this enterprise haue giuen out. Again, this intended voyage for conquest, hath in like maner many other singular priuileges wherewith God hath, as it were, richly blessed the same before all others. For after once we are departed the coast of England, we may passe straight way either, without danger of being driuen into any the countreys of our enemies, or doubtful friends: for commonly one winde serueth to bring vs thither, which seldom faileth from the middle of Tanmarie to the middle of May, a benefite which the mariners make great account of, for it is a pleasure that they haue in few or none of other iourneys. Also the passage is short, for we may goe thither in thirtie or fortye dayes at the most, hauing but an indifferent winde, & returne continually in twene or foure & twenety dayes at the most. And in the same our iourney, by reason it is in the Ocean, & quite out of the way from the intercourse of other countreys, we may safely trade and traffike without perill of piracy: neither shall our ships, people, or goods euer, be subiect to arrest or molestation of any Pagan potentate, Turkish tyant, yea, or Christian prince, which heretofore, sometimes vpon slender occasion in other parts, haue Rayed our shippers and merchandizes, whereby great numbers of our countrey men haue bene verily vnder, diuers put to ranfome, yea, and some lost theyr liues: a thing so fresh in memory as it needeth no proofe, and well worthy of consideration.

Besides, in this voyage we do not cross the burne line, whereby commonly both beuerture and vicuall are corrupted, and mens healths very much impayed, neither doe we passe the frozen seas, which yeeld sundry extreme dangers: but haue a temperate climate at all times of the yere, so ferue our turnes. And lastly, there need no delays by the way, for taking in of fresh water and firewell, (a thing vsually done in long iournies) because as I said above, the voyage is not long, and the fresh waters taken in there, our men beere in England, at theyr returne home, haue found so wholesom and sweet, that they haue made choise to drinke it before our beere and ale.

Beholde heere, good countrey men, the manifold benesses, commodities and pleasures beere toforye vnknowne, by Gods speciall blessing not onely reuealed vnto vs, but also as it were infused into our bones, who though hitherto like dormice haue slumbered in ig norance thereof, being like the cats that are loth for theyr pray to wet theyr feet: yet if now therefore, at the last we would awake, and with willing mindes (seeing fruitolous imaginacions aside) become industrious instruments to our felices, questionlesse we should not onely beere by set foot the glory of our beauly father, but also easily attaine to the end of all good purposes, that may be wished of desire.

And may it not much encourage vs to hope for good successe in the countrey of these Saouages, being a naked kinde of people, void of the knowlege of the discipline of warre, seeing that a noble man, being but a subiect in this realme (in the time of our king Henrie the second) by name Stranghowe, then earle of Chepflow in South Wales, by himselfe and his allies and assistants, at theyr owne proper charges, passed ouer into Ireland, and there made conquest of the now countrey, and then kingdome of Lynester, at which time it was very populous and strong, which history our owne chronicles do witness: And why should we be dismayed more then were the Spaniards, who haue bene able within these few peeres to conquer, possesse and enioy so large a share of the earth, in the West Indies, as is betwene the two tropikes of Cancer and Capricorne; not onely in the maine firme land of America, which is 47 degrees in latitude from South to North, and doth containe 2820 English miles at the least, that the king of Spaine hath there in actual possession, besides many goodly and rich Islands, as Hispaniola, now called S. Domingo, Cuba, Jamaica, and diuers other, which are both beautifull and full of treasure, not speaking any whit at all, how large the said land is from East to West, which in some places is accounted to be 1500 English miles at the least, from East to West, betwene the one sea and the other.

Why should our noble nation be dismayed, more then was Vasques Nunnes de Valboa, a private gentleman of Spaine, who with the number of 70 Spaniards at Tichiri, gaue an overthrow vnto the mightie king Chemicus, hauing an armie of an hundred canoes and 5000 men, and the said Vasques Nunnes not long after, with his small number, did put to flight king Chiapes his whole armie.

Like wise Hernando Cortes, being also but a private gentleman of Spaine, after his departure from the Islands of Cuba and Acusamill, and entring into the firme of America, had many most victorious & triumphant conquests, as that at Cynda, where being accompanied with lesse then 500 Spaniards, thirtene horsemen, and sixe pieces of ordnance onely he overthroweth 40000 Indians. The same Cortes with his said number of Spaniards, tooke prisoner the mightie Emperour Mutezuma in his most chiefe and famous cite of Mexico, which at that time he had in it about the number of 500000 Indians at the least, and in short time after obtained not onely the quiet possession of the said cite, but also of his whole Empire.

And in like maner in the countrey of Peru, which the king of Spaine hath now in actual possession, Francisco Pizarro, with the onely ayd of Diego de Almagro, and Hernando Luche, being all three but private gentlemen, was the principall person that first attempted discovery and conquest of the large and rich countrey of Peru, which though the ayde of the almighty, he brought to passe and achieved in the Tambo of Cassiamalcha, (which is a large place of ground, enclosed with walles) in which place he tooke the great and mightie prince Atabalipa prisoner, amidst the number of 60000 Indians his subiects, which were euer before they day accustomed to be a warlike kinde of people, which his great victorie pleased God to grant vnto him in the yere of our Lord God 1533, he not hauing in his company about the number of 210 Spaniards, whereas there were not past thersore horsemen in all: after the taking of which prince Atabalipa, he offered vnto Pizarro for his ranfome, to fill a great large ball full of golde and silver, and such golde and silver vessels as they then used, euen as high as a man might reach with his arme.

And

And the sayd prince caused some Pizarro granted our subiects to bring in gold tomes of Quito, Pacia some writers doe affirm when as the said ball was it was commonly giuen pretence to raise a much overthrowen: wherupon partition of the golde and committing to make perfect his first part, as other wise of 132425 pound weight riches neuer before that the emperour for his first part weight, and to euer y bo very souldiour had 45 50 30000, some 20000, per calling, according to the

Francis Pizarro as the then any of the rest, our which weighed 25000, small a time, and with shoxes, some with golde, West Indies, where as

To this may I adde made round about the in the East Indies, and tpling and planting all a rightly weied and consi account it so hard and uer people, plant and pot aduancing and offering i the actual possession of a (I thinke) should not a li derstanding what large within these few peeres amille, chiefly in partt upon the sudden call the where more at large the of Barbaric the Island tropicaine & chiefe cite of Tangier, Seuta, Maz. of our L. 1535. Also for their vse Cape Verde of Bonauilla and San L. Rouge & Sierra Leone people and built the ca Benin, and Maniconge der the Equinoctiall li un tomes of port of Pa Dias was sent forth, Cape called Bon Espe east part of Africa, bet of the arriens, Madag the peere of our L. 153 through the trauals and drew Corfale, John de

2. Decad. lib. 5. fol. 77. of the West Indies, in English. Canaan is a kinde of boat. 3. Decad. lib. 1. fol. 97. About the peere of our L. 1511.

Conquest of the West Indies. fol. 43 & 45 English.

99 Innumerable victorie.

And the sayd pynce caused the same ball to be marked round about at the sayd heighe, which sausome Pizarro granted to accept. And after, whē as this mightie pynce had sent to his vassals and subiects to buy in gold and siluer for the filling of the ball, as aforesaid, as namely to the cities of toynes of Quito, Paclacama and Cuzco, as also to the Caloa of Lima, in which towne as their owne writers doe affirme, they found a large and faire house, all stord and courted with gold: and when as the said ball was not yet a quarter full, a mutinie arose amongst the Spaniards, in which it was commonly giuen out, that the said pynce had policthely offered this great sauosome vnder pretence to raise a much more mightie power, whereby the Spaniards should be taken, slain and ouerthrowen: wherupon they grew to this resolution, to put the sayd pynce to death, and to make partition of the golde and siluer already brought in, which they presently put in execution. And comming to make perfect Inuention of the same, as well for the emperour then king of Spaine, his sistr part, as other wise, there was found to be already brought in into the sayd ball, the number of 132425. pound weight of siluer and in gold the number of 1828125. pezoes, which was a riches neuer before that no since scene of any man together, of which there did appertaine to the emperour for his sistr part of golde 365625. pezoes, and for his sistr part of siluer, 26485. pound waight, and to euery hoysman eight thousand pezoes of gold, and 67. pound waight of siluer. E-uery souldiour had 4550. pezoes of gold, and 280. pound waight of siluer. Euer y captiue had, some 30000. some 20000. pezoes of gold and of siluer, proportionally answerable to their degrees and calling, according to the rate agreed vpon amongst them.

Francis Pizarro as their generall, according to his degree and calling proportionally, had more then any of the rest, our and besides the masse table of gold which Atabalipa had in his Licer, which waighed 25000. pezoes of golde: neuer was there before that day souldiours so rich in so small a time, and with so litle daunger. And in this iourney for want of iron, they did shoe their hoyses, some with golde, and some with siluer. This is to bee scene in the generall historie of the West Indies, where as the doings of Pizarro, & the conquest of Peru is moze at large set foorth.

To this may I adde the great discoveries and conquests which the pynces of Portugall haue made round about the West, the South, and the East partes of Africa, and also at Calicut, and in the East Indies, and in America, at Brasile and else where in sundry Islands, in forsyng, peopling and planting all along the said coastes and Islands, euer as they discovered, which being rightly wised and considered, worth minister inlrause of incouragement to our countrymen, not to account it so hard and difficult a thing for the subiects of this noble realme of England, to discouer, people, plant and possesse the like goodly lands and rich countries not farre from vs, but were aduiuing and offering it selfe vnto vs (as is aforesaid) which haue neuer yet heretofore, bene in the actual possession of any other Christian pynce, then the pynces of this realme. All which (as I thinke) should not a litle animate and encourage vs to looke out and to aduenture abroad, vnder-standing what large countries and Islands the Portugals with their small number haue within these few yeeres discovered, peopled and planted, some part wherof I haue thoughte it not amisse, by this in particular to name both the townes, countries and Islands, so neere as I coulde vpon the sudden call them to remembrance: for the rest I doe referre the Reader to the historie of where moze at large the same is to be scene. First, they did winne and reuere from the pynce of Barbaric the Islands of Geisera and towne of Arzilla, not past 140. mile distant from their Me-tropolitane & chiefe citie of Fesse: and after that they tooke also from the said pynce the towne of Tangior, Scuta, Mazigam, Azamore, and Azassie, all along the Sea coast. And in the yeere of our Lord, 1455. Alouis de Cadamosta a gentleman Venetian, was he that first discovered for their vse Cape Verd, with the Islands adioining, of which he then peopled and planted those of Bonauita and San Iago discovering also the river Senega, otherwile called Niger and Cape Rouge & Sierra Leone, and in a few yeeres after they did discover the coast of Guinea, and there peopled and built the caille of Sine: then discovered they further to the countries of Melegettes, Benin, and Manicongo, with the Islands of Principe, Anobon, S. Patheu, and S. Thomas vnder the Equinoctiall line, which they peopled and built in the sayd Island of S. Thomas, the hauon towne of port of Pauolan. After that, about the yeere of our Lord, 1494. one Bartholomev Dias was sent south, who was the first man that discovered and doubled that great and large Cape called Bon Esperance, and passing the straits that run vpon the said coast, on the Southeast part of Africa, betwene the said maine land and the Island of S. Lawrence, other wile called of the ancients, Madagascar, he discovered to the harbor named the river of Infants. After that saze the yeere of our Lord God, 1497. and before the full accomplishment of the yeere of Christ, 1510. through the trauals and discoveries of Vasques de Game, Peter Aluares, Thomas Lopes, Andrew Corsale, John de Empoli, Peter Sinter, Sancho Deroar, and that noble and worthy gentleman

erre hath sayd: That before the ende of the world, his word shall be preached to all nations. Wher good worke I trust is reserved for our nation to accomplish in these partes: Wherfore my beate counsellmen, be not dismayed, for the power of God is nothing diminished, nor the love that he hath to the preaching and planting of the Gospell any whit abated. What we then doubt he will be lesse ready most mightily and miraculously to assist our nation in this quarell, which is chiefly and principally undertaken for the enlargement of the Christian faith abroad, and the banishment of idolatry at home, then he was to Columbus, Vasques Nunnes, Hernando Cortes, and Francis Pizarro in the West; & Vasques de Gama, Peter Aluares, and Alonso de Albuquerque in the East: Let us therfore with cheerful minds and courageous hearts, give the attempt, and leave the success to almighty God: for if he be on our part, what forceth it who be against us? Ehus leaving the correction and reformation unto the gentle Reaver, whatsoever is in this treatise too much or too little, or otherwise imperfect, I take leave, and so end.

A letter written from M. Thomas Aldworth merchant, and then Maior of the citie of Brislow, to the right honorable Sir Francis Walsingham principall Secretarie to her Maiestie, concerning a Westerne voiage intended for discoueries in America.

RIght honourable, vpon the receiue of your letters directed vnto mee and deliuered by the bearers thereof M. Richard Hakluyt and M. Struciton, bearing your carefull and speciall commendation, I presently conferred with my friends in priuate, whom I know most affectionate to this godly enterprise, especially with M. William Waltherne depuie of our companie of merchants: whereupon my selfe being as then sick, with as conuenient speed as he could, he caused an assemblee of the merchants to be gathered, where after duefull mention of your honourable disposition for the benefite of this citie, he by my appointment caused your letters being directed vnto me priuately, to be read in publicke, & after some good light giuen by M. Hakluyt vnto them that were ignorant of the countrey and enterprise, and were desirous to be resolved, the motion grew generally so well to bee liked, that there was estioones set down by mens owne hands then present, and apparently known by their owne speech, and very willing offer, the summe of 1000. markes and upward: to which summe if it should not suffice, we doubt not but otherwise to furnish out for this Westerne discouerie, a ship of three scope, and a barke of 40. tunne, to be left in the countrey vnder the direction and gouernment of your sonne in law M. Carlell, of whom we haue heard much good, if it shall stand with your honours good liking and his acceptation. In one of which barkes we are also willing to haue maister Struciton your honours messenger, and one well known to vs, as captaine. God here in humble manner, desiring your honours to vouchsafe vs of your further direction by a general letter to my selfe, my brethren, and the rest of the merchants of this citie, at your honours best and most conuenient leisure, because we meane not to deferre the small proceeding in this voyage, any further then to the end of Aprill next comming. I cease, beseeching God long to blesse and prosper your honourable estate, Brislow. March 27. 1583.

A briefe and summarie discourse vpon the intended voyage to the hithermost parts of America: written by captaine Carlell in Aprill, 1583. for the better inducement to fauour such Merchants of the Moscouian companie and others, as in disbursing their money towards the furniture of the present charge, doe demand forthwith a present returne of gaine, albeit their said particular disbursments are required but in very slender summes, the highest being 25. li. the second at 12. li. 10. s. and the lowest at 6. pound five shillings.

When the Goldsmith desireth to finde the certaine goodnesse of a peece of gold, which is newly offered vnto him, he presently bringeth the same to the Touchstone, where, by comparing the stee of touch of this new peece with the touch of stee of that which he knoweth of old, he forthwith is able to iudge what the value is of that, which is newly offered vnto him. After the example whereof I haue thought it good to make some briefe repetition of the particular estate of many other foreigne voyages and trades already frequented and known vnto vs, whereby you may be the better able to conceiue and iudge what certaine likelihood of good there is to be expected in the voyage, which is presently recommended vnto your knowledge and resolution.

And

Holkow.

And first to lay downe that of Holkow, whose beginning is yet in the remembrance of many: It is well known, that what by the charges of the first discovery, and by the great gifts bestowed on the Emperour and his Nobilitie, together with the lewd dealing of some of their seruants, who thought themselves safe enough from severely punishment, it cost the companie above foure thousand pounds, before it could bee brought to any profitable reckoning. And now that after so long a patience and so great a burthen of expence, the same began to frame to some good course and commoditie: It falleth to very ticklish termes, and to as slender likelihood of any further goodnesse as any other trade that may be named.

For first the estate of those countreys and the Emperours dealings, are things more sicke then are by every body understood.

Dutchmen.

Next, the Dutchmen are there so crept in, as they daily augment their trade either, which may well confirme that uncertaintie of the Emperours disposition to keepe promise with our nation, Thirdly, the qualitie of the voyage, such as may not be performed but once the yeere.

Fourthly, the charges of all Ambassadors betweene that Prince and her Spacie, are always bovie by the merchants looke.

Denmarks.

And lastly, the danger of the king of Denmarke, who besides that presently he is like to enforce a tribute on vs, hath likewise an abauantage upon the ships in their voyage, either homewards or outwards whensoever he listeth to take the opportunitie.

Casterlings.

The badde dealings of the Casterlings are sufficiently known to bee such towards our merchants of that trade, as they doe not onely offer them many injuries ouerlong to bee written, but doe seeke all the means they can, to deprive them wholly of their occupying that way: and by the same purpose haue of late cleane debarr'd them their accustomed and auncient priuileges in all their great toynes.

Turkie.

The traffique into Turkie, besides that by some it is thought a hard point to haue so much familiaritie with the professed and obstinate enemies of Christ: It is likewise a voyage which can not be made but at the deuotion, and as it were in the daunger of many Dates, who for sundry respects are apt to quarrell with vs upon sudden occasions, and the presence to be giuen away in Turkie this yeere, cost little lesse then two thousand pounds.

Barbarie.

As for the trades into all the partes of Italie, it may easilie be considered by euery one of iudgement, that the same stande in the like termes touching the passages, as that of Turkie, and that many times our Shippes being taken in the way by the Gallies of Barbarie, our poore Mariners after the losse of their goods and travell, are set at such excessive ransomnes before they can bee freed of their slauierie, as for the most part they are no way able to discharge. As for example, at this instant there are some prisoners, poore ordinarie Mariners, for whose releasing there must bee paid two hundred Duckets the man, for some three hundred, yea, foure or five hundred Duckets the man for some of them, And both enuiously they doe stande opposite themselves against our frequenting into their partes, may appeare by the late customs which they haue imposed as well upon our English merchandize which we bring them, as also upon such other merchandize which we fetch from them.

Barbarie.

The trade into Barbarie groweth likewise to worse termes then before times, and when it was at the best, our merchants haue bene in danger of all their goods they had there, whensoever it happened the king to die. For untill a new were chosen, the libertie of all disordered persons is such, as they spoile and wrong whom they list, without any redress at all.

Spaine.
Houingall.

Touching Spaine and Houingall, with whom we haue very great trade, and much the greater, by means of their venting a good part of our wares into their Indies, as also of the possession they haue from the same, where with are made many of our returns from them againe: It falleth out that twice the yeere ordinarily we send our Fleets into those parts: So that whensoever the king of Spaine listeth to take the opportunitie, hee may at these seasons deprive vs not onely of a great number of our very good ships, but also of our honestest and ablest sort of Mariners that are to bee found in our whole Realme againe, which is a matter of no small consequence: for it is to be noted, that when hee shall take a quarrell in hand, though it bee but his owne particularly, yet hath hee the means to put in hazard as well those our Shippes which are in his owne Countreies of Spaine and Houingall, as also all others which shall be bound to any the partes of all Italie or of Turkie either. And further whatsoever hee see that is but so meanely affected in Religion, as of necessitie becommeth euery ordinarie man and good Christian to bee, cannot but be aggriued in his heart to consider, that his children and seruants whom hee desireth to haue well brought vp, are in these trades of Spaine and Houingall, and all Italie, forced to denie their owne profession, and made to acquaint themselves with that which the Parents and Masters doe vterlie

denie

denie and refuse, yea to most wicked doctrine.

But who shall looke grees of these abuses, or moment belonging vnto

1 As first it is to be

2 Secondly, that they

3 Thirdly, that it is

4 Fourthly, that the 5 Fifthly, that those

6 Sixthly, that it is to

7 And to the goodly

8 And to the goodly

9 And to the goodly

10 And to the goodly

11 And to the goodly

12 And to the goodly

13 And to the goodly

14 And to the goodly

15 And to the goodly

16 And to the goodly

17 And to the goodly

18 And to the goodly

19 And to the goodly

20 And to the goodly

21 And to the goodly

22 And to the goodly

23 And to the goodly

24 And to the goodly

25 And to the goodly

26 And to the goodly

27 And to the goodly

28 And to the goodly

29 And to the goodly

30 And to the goodly

denie and refuse, yea which many of them doe in their owne hearts abboye as a detestable and most wicked doctrine.

But who shall looke into the qualitie of this voyage, being directed to the latitude of fortye degrees of theseaboures, of that hithermost part of America, shall find it hath as many points of good moment belonging unto it, as may almost be wished for.

1 As first it is to be understood, that it is not any long course, for it may be performed too and fro in foure moneths after the first discoverie thereof.

Commodities of this voyage in the north.

2 Secondly, that one wind sufficeth to make the passage, where as most of your other voyages of like length, are subiect to 3. or 4. winde,

3 Thirdly, that it is to be performed at all times of the yeere,

4 Fourthly, that the passage is upon the high sea, whereby you are not bound to the knowledge of dangers, on any other coast, more then of that countrey, and of ours here at home.

5 Fifthly, that those partes of England and Ireland, which lie next to the proceeding ourward of homeward upon this voyage, are very well storied of goodly harbours.

6 Sixthly, that it is to be accounted of no danger at all as touching the power of any foreign prince or state, when it is compared with any the best of all the other voyages before recited.

7 And to the godly minded, it hath this comfortable commoditie, that in this trade their Sacrosanct Religion enforced upon them, but contrarily shall bee at their free libertie of conscience, and shall finde the same Religion exercised, which is most agreeable unto their Parents and Masters.

As for the merchandising, which is the matter especially looked for, albeit, that for the present, we are not certainly able to promise any such like quantitie, as is now at the best time of the Sposcouian trade brought from thence: So likewise is there not demanded any such proportion of daily expences, as was at the first, and as yet is consumed in that of Sposcouia and other.

Commodities of the country more than those of Sposcouia.

But when this of America shall have bene haunted and practised thirtie yeeres to an ende, as the other hath bene, I doubt not by Gods grace, that for the tenne shippes that are now commonly employed once the yeere into Sposcouia, there shall in this voyage twelfe tenne be employed well, twise the yeere at the least. And if for the present time there doe fall out nothing els to bee found then the bare Fishing, yet doubt I not after the first yeeres planting, but by that matter onely to serue halfe a dozen of your best sort of ships, although my supply of people doe not follow me so substantially, as in all reason may be well looked for.

But when it is asked what may bee hoped from thence after some yeeres, it is first to be considered, that this situation in fourtie degrees, shall bee very apte to gather the commodities either of those partes which stande to the Southward of it, as also of those which are to the Northward.

The severall merchandises.

In the Northerie may bee expected not onely an especiall good Fishing for Salmon, Codde, and Whales, but also any other such commodities, as the Gallerne countreys doe yield us now: as Piche, Tarre, Hemp, and thereof Cordage, Hakes, Lasse hides, riche Fures, and other such like, without being in any sort beholding to a king of Denmarke, or other prince or state that shall be in such sort able to command our ships at their pleasure, as those doe at this day, by meanes of their straight passages and strong shipping.

As for those partes which lie West and to the Southwardes, it may well bee hoped they will yeeld Wines with a small helpe, since the grapes doe growe there of themselves already very faire and in great abundance. Olives being once planted, will yeeld the like Oyle as Spaine, Province and Italie. The countrey people being made to know, that for Wine and hony, we will give them such trifling things as they desire of vs, and by using them once the means how to provide the same, the labour thereof being so light, no doubt but in short time they will earnestly care to haue the same in good quantitie for vs. Besides, what great likelihood there is of good meanes to make Salte, which may serue for the fishing of those partes, may well enough appeare unto them, who can iudge the qualitie of such places as are required to make the same in.

Is late of Gold in Spaine this voyage.

Thus much for the beginning because they may bee had with an easie kind of travell, but when it may haue pleased God to establish our people there any such time as they may haue planted amongst them in sundry partes of the Countrey, and that by gentle and familiar entreating them, they bee made to see what is better for them then they doe as yet understand of, and that in so many sortes of occasions as were infinite to bee set to wiew. It is to bee assuredly hoped, that that they will daily by little and little forsake their barbarous and savage living, and growe to such order and civillitie with vs, as there may bee well expected from thence no little quantitie and universitie of merchaundize then is now had out of Dutchland, Italic, Fraunce, or Spaine. And as the bordering neighbours are commonly the aptest to fall out with vs, so these partes being somewhat remote, are the likeliest to take, or giue lesse occasion of disquiet. But when it is considered that they are our owne kindred, and esteemed our owne countrey nation which haue the government, meaning by those who shall be there planted, who can looke for any other then the dealing of most louing and most assured friends?

There are further to bee considered these two pointes of good importance, concerning the matter of trade. The one is, that by the good prospering of this action, there must of necessitie fall out, a very liberall vnteruaunce of our English Clothes into a maine Countrey, described to bee bigger then all Europe, the larger part whereof bending to the Northward, shall haue wonderfull great vse of our sayde English Clothes, after they shall once come to knowe the commoditie thereof. The like will be of many other things, ouermany to bee reckoned, which are made here by our Artificers and labouring people, and of necessitie must bee provided from hence.

The other is, if there bee any possible meanes to finde a Sea passage or other fresh water course, which may serue in some reasonable and convenient sort, to transport our merchaundize into the East Indian Sea, though any of these Northerly partes of America, it shall be soonest and most assuredly performed by these who shall inhabit and first grow into familiaritie with the Inland people.

What Minerall matter may fall out to bee found, is a thing left in suspence, vntill some better knowledge, because there bee many men, who hauing long since expected some profit here-in, vpon the great promises that haue bene made them, and being as yet in no point satisfied, doe therefore conceiue that they bee but wordes purposely cast out for the inducing of men to bee the more readie and willing to furnish their money towards the charge of the first discoverie.

But nowe to answer some others who begin with an other obiection, saying: That it is not for the merchants purse to continue the charges of transporting and planting: and that since these hundred men which are now to bee planted, will cost foure thousand pound: It is then to bee thought, that the charge of a farre greater number, will bee also a farre greater summe of money.

Wherunto I answer, that in all attempts vnknown, especially such a one as is this, wherewith wee are presently in hande, the first charges are commonly aduentured in more desperate kinde, then those that follow vpon some better knowledge: and therewith it falleth out, that whereas one aduentureth in the first enterpryse, an hundred for that one will of themselves bee willing and desirous to aduenture in the next, if there bee neuer so little more apparance, that the intended matter is by some knowledge of our owne, found true in some pointes of our first presumption.

The examples are many, and may easily be remembred by those who bee merchants, euen in their ordinarie and daily trades, as well as in extraordinary attempts, which of late yeeres haue fallen into those termes of some likelihood, as is abovesayde. So then no doubt, but when certain reports shall be brought by them who directly come from thence, that such a Countrey and people they haue themselves seene, as is by vs spoken of, but that then there will come forward a greater number of those, who now neither haue heard any thing of the matter, as also of others, who presently make such frivolous scruple, and will not otherwise be satisfied, then by the report of Saint Thomas. I speake not this by the merchants call out for their freedomes of trade I would not haue pressed to any further charge then this first preparation, but rather by such as haue great affection to hazard the changing of their estates, and would be well content to goe in the voyage if they might onely be assured that there is such a countrey, and that their money should not be wasted to nothing in the preparations.

The right examination of this point must bee the contrary sequell of the common Thourbe that is vsed, Nothing venture, nothing haue: so on the other side by venturing, many great good profits are found out, to the wonderfull benefite of the Common weale, and to those especially in private, who take on the hazarde of their life and trauell, or substance in the first attempts: and therefore I would wishe that they, who (God bee thanked) are well able to spare that which is required of each one towards the vndertaking of this aduenture, bee well content and willing to employe the same, since the sequell in good and substantiall reason

The other of
merchall dighe
by the Arabis
the cause
the generall supplies. the
the next
next following,
whereof the latter was of fourteene sail
ships.

reason doth promise, no home exercise the trade line in poore estate, and better degree. Whereto who suspecteth least this charge, but that afterward happened in the discover action, which concerneth type of people throughout may be founde a matter towards the furtherance

But as it is a very little matter, so is it more than wise, to make any notable longer to a matter of so

To those who haue an this much more, that on, as any other that may most excellent worke, it but also in respect of our impossible, and often by the long peace, happy Realme, that the people their poynt in their par parties decrease, are by tion they fall into sundry ordinarily troubled, an might bee founde some part of them would bee greatly seruiciable in th

This I speake of mi the Countreys, during and by some little contin I can assure you, was a withall to a purpose of s sured kinde of good hope

Thus you see in eu matter and reason pro ner the quicke, and to s ching the trade which is because my aduise be which followeth, the deeper directly.

In the yeere 1534
America, which ye to which voyage his p haue bene founde out. In year he went no higher returned backe into Sp

The next yeere fol
where hee keeping the nada and other places, by the way, hee arriv of the Grand bay. In the month of Octobe a large in this discover himselfe Holy Crosse.
the like happeneth w reason doth promise, not onely a great commoditie in particular to the marchants, who shall here at home exercise the trade of Sparrhandise: but also to an infinite number of oth'r, who presently live in poore estate, and may by taking the opportunity of this discoverie, alter the same to a farre better degree. Wherefore to make some conclusion vpon this point of the Sparrhandis misthoubt, who suspecteth least this sort of businesse, without returne of present gaine, should not be all his charge, but that afterwards hee might yet further be bygd to continue the like againe, as hath happened in the discoverie of the Moscouian trade: It may suffice to consider, that this is not an action, which concerneth onely the Sparrhandis particularly, but a great deale more the generall sort of people throughout all England: And that when such relation shall be returned, as that it may be founde a matter worthy the following, the whole generalitie will not refuse to contribute towards the furtherance thereof, rather then it should sincke, for want of any reasonable supply.

But as it is a very little time, since I have bene thoughtly resolved, to trie my fortune in the matter, so is it more then thine, the preparation were in hande already, and therefore no fixe time now, to make any number of ignorant men to vnderstande with reason, the circumstance that belongeth to a matter of so great consideration and importance.

To those who have any forward minde in well doing to the generalitie of mankinde, I say this much more, that Christian charitie doeth as greatly perswade the furtherance of this action, as any other that may be layd before vs, in as much as thereby, wee shall not onely doe a most excellent worke, in respect of reducing the savage people to Chistianitie and ciuilitie, but also in respect of our poore sort of people, which are very many amongst vs, liuing altogether vnpolitick, and often times to the great disquiet of the better sort. For who knoweth not, howe by the long peace, happie health, and blessed plentifulnesse, wherewith God hath endued this Realme, that the people is so mightily increased, as a great number being brought vpon, during their youth in their parents houses, without any instruction howe to get their liuinges, after their parents decease, are vniuent to some necessitie, whereby very often, for want of better education they fall into sunny discoveries, and so the good sort of people, as I sayde before, are by them spinwardly troubled, and themselues ledde on, to one shamefull ende or other, whereas if there might bee founde some such kinde of employment, as this would be, no doubt but a greater part of them would bee withheld, from falling into such vile deedes: and in steade thereof, p'pose greatly seruicable in those affaires, where they might be so employed.

This I speake of mine owne experience, hauing seene diuers come ouer to the warres of the late Countreis, during my residence in the same, who here had bene very euill and idle liuers, and by some little continuance with vs, haue grown to be very industrious in their facultie, which I can assure you, was a more painefull manner of liuing, then in this action is like to fall out, and will fall to a purpose of farre lesse valew, in respect of their particular recompence, then with an assured kinde of good hope is looked for in this.

Thus you see in euery point, that may be wished for, in a good action and voyage, there is matter and reason enough to satisfie the well disposed. But nowe to growe some what nearer the quicke, and to shew you some greater apparance, then hath bene yet spoken of, touching the trade which is the onely subiect wherewith I doe meane to enuermuddle at this time, because my aduise herby is chiefly to men of such like facultie: you may vnderstande by that which followeth, the circumstance of a little discourse, which doeth concerne these matters very directly.

In the yeere 1534. James Carthier of S.Malo, made his first discoverie of those partes of America, which lye to the Westwardes, and as it were on the backe side of Newfoundland, In which voyage his principall intention was to seeke out the passage, which hee presumed might haue bene founde out, into the East Indian sea, oth'wise called the passage to Cathayo, but this yeere he went no bigger then the Islande of the Assumption in the great bay of S.Laurence, and so returned backe into France.

The next yeere following hee went with greater provision into the Grand bay againe, where hee keeping the Northerly shoare, ranne vpon the great Riuer that comes downe from Canada and other places, vntill at last with his small pinnacles, (hauing left his great shipping by the way, hee arrived at Hochelaga towne, being thre hundred leagues within the entrance of the Grand bay. In which trauaile hee had spent so much of the yeere, that it was nowe the moneth of October, and therefore thought it conuenient, for the better enioyming himselfe at large in this discoverie, to winter it out in those partes, which hee did at a place called by himselfe Holy Crosse. This Winter fell out to be a very long and hard winter, as many times the like happeneth with vs in these partes, and the savage people, who for the most part

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54 55 56 57 58 59 60 61 62 63 64 65 66 67 68 69 70 71 72 73 74 75 76 77 78 79 80 81 82 83 84 85 86 87 88 89 90 91 92 93 94 95 96 97 98 99

10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 51 52 53 54 55 56 57 58 59 60 61 62 63 64 65 66 67 68 69 70 71 72 73 74 75 76 77 78 79 80 81 82 83 84 85 86 87 88 89 90 91 92 93 94 95 96 97 98
99

make but a slender kinde of provision, such as it were from hande to mouth fell into some scarcity of victuals; yet did they not refuse to serue the Frenchmen, with any thing they had all the Winter long, albeit at somewhat higher prices towards the ende, when the neede was most, as with our selues the like happeneth at such times.

But when the French had had their wautes serued all the yeere, and that as yet they sawe noe any apparance of their intended matter, which was the discouerie of the passage, & yet imagining by the signes wherewith the willing people, endeuoured to declare their knowledge in that point, that some good matter might bee had from them, if they might haue bene well vnderstoode, they resolued with themselves, to take some of the sufficientest men of that Countrey boine into France, and there to keepe them so long, as that hauing once acqruied the French tongue, they might declare moze substantially their minde, and knowledge in the sayde passage, concluding this to be the meane of least charge, of least trauaile, and of least hazard.

And when they came to berthinke themselves, who might bee meetest for it, they determined to take the King, as the person who might be best enfourmed of such partes, as were somewhat remote from his owne Countrey, as also that for the respect of him, the people would bee alwayes readie, and content to doe them any further seruice, when it should happen them to returne thither againe about the discouerie.

Thus the poore King of the Countrey, with two or thre others of his chiefe companions coming aboarde the French shippes, being required thither to a banquet, was traiterously caried away into France, where hee liued foure yeeres, and then died a Christian there, as Theuer the French kings Cosmographer doeth make mention. This outrage and inuiolous dealing, did put the whole Countrey people into such dislike with the French, as neuer since they would admit any conuersation, or familiaritie with them, untill of late yeeres, the olde matter beginning to growe out of minde, and being the rather drawen on by giftes of many trifling things, which were of great value with them, they are (as I saide) within these two or thre yeeres content againe to admit a traffique, which two yeeres since, was begonne with a small barke of thirtie tunnes, whose returne was founde so profitable, as the next yeere following, being the last yeere, by thole Marchants, who meant to haue kept the trade serued vnto themselves, from any others of their owne Countrey men, there was hired a shippe of foure score tunnes out of the Isle of Jersey, but not any one Partner of that place, sauing a shipboy. This shippe made her returne in such sort, as that this yeere they haue multiplied thre shippes, to wit, one of nine score tunnes, an other of an hundred tunnes, and a thirde of foure score tunnes: which report is giuen by very substantiall and honest men of Plimmouth, who sawe the saide shippes in readinesse to depart on their voyage, and were aboard of some of them.

Here is at this instant in the towne a man of Gernesey, Lewis de Vicke, who reporteth to haue credibly heard, that by this last yeeres voyage the Frenchmen gotte foureteene or fiftene hundred for euery one hundred: But howe soeuer it be, it carrieth good likelihood of some notable profite, in asmuch as they doe so greatly, and thus suddenly increase the burthen and number of their shippes this present yeere.

Notwithstanding in so little as two yeeres times this voyage of the Northerne partes bee growne to such good passe as hath bene declared vnto you: it is worthy the thinking on to consider what may be hoped for, from the Southerne part: which in all reason may promise a great deale moze. And so as one who was neuer touched with any indirect meaning, I presume to wish and perswade you to some better taking of this matter to heart, as a thing which I doe verely thinke will turne to your greater and moze assured commoditie, then you receiue by any other voyage, as yet frequented of so many and safe a course as this hath: dealing here in no otherwise with you for your seuerall small summes, then I doe wish my selfe, both for moze of mine owne, then is required of any one of you: besides the hazard and trauaile of my person, and the cocall employment of my poore credit, which (I thanke God) hath hitherto passed cleare and vnsuspected in matters of greater importance and difficultie, then is like to fall out in this betweene you and me.

Articles

there one whole per of the particuler est or presently looked

The charge to cr and other needefull ry readily offered by sande pounds, reman
ture their money in

The Committee from her Maestie. h prouided for.

I will, that they b urers, and shall ha uer, and other meet couerie: yeelding t
to be had out of any

That those partic
be named Enterpri mines of Golde and Golde and siluer, as content of the great Enterprisers.

All, that all trad
discouerie shall be fo their money for this Marchants to deale
of shippe and goods, with: or oherwise by

That no person
mentioned in the str
tion: and they shall propotion of this th

The yeere
1581.

Articles set downe by the Committies appointed in the be*halfe of the Companie of Moscouian Marchants, to conserre* with Master Carleil, vpon his entended discoueries and attempt into the highermost partes of America.

The names of the Committies.

Master Alderman Hart.
 Master Alderman Spencer.
 Master Hoddesden.
 Master William Burrough.
 Master Slany.
 Master Towerfon.
 Master Stapers.
 Master Iohn Castelin.
 Master Leake.

First, the Committies are well perswaded that the Countrey whereunto this action ppretendeth is very fruitfull, inhabited with sauage people of a milde and tractable disposition. And that of all other places which are unfrequented at this day, it is the only most fitte and most commodious for vs to entermeddle withall.

The conuenientest maner of attempting this enterpryse, is thought to bee thus: That there should be one hundred men conueyed thither to remaine there one whole yere: who with friendly entreatie of the people, may enter into better knowledge of the particular estate of the Countrey, and thereby gather what commoditie may be hereafter, or presently looked for.

The charge to transport these hundred men, to victuall them, and to furnish them of munition and other needfull things, will not be lesse then foure thousand poundes: whereof each bene vory readily offered by the Citie of Bristoll one thousande poundes, the residue being three thousande poundes, remaineth to be furnished by this Citie of London: or any others who will aduenture their money in this first preparation.

The Committies thinke it conuenient that a priuiledge should be procured by Master Carleil from her Maiestie, by vertue whereof these conditions and Articles following, may be effectually provided for.

First, that they who shall disburse their money for the first preparation, shall be named Aduenturers, and shall haue the one halfe of all such landes, territories, townes, mines of golde and siluer, and other metalls whatsoeuer, that shall be found, gotten, obtained, and conquered by this discouerie: yeelding to her Maiestie the one fift part of all their part golde and siluer, as shall happen to be had out of any mines that so shall be found.

That those parties which doe employe themselves personally in the present discouerie, shall be named Enterprisers, and shall haue the other halfe of all the landes, territories, townes, mines of Golde and siluer, and other metalles, yeelding to her Maiestie the fift part of the Golde and siluer, as the Aduenturers doe: The same to be distributed by the Generall, with the consent of the greatest part of twelve discrete persons to be chosen out of the whole number of Enterprisers.

Also, that all trade of marchandise which shall bee bled to and from those partes, which by this discouerie shall be found out, shall appertaine onely to the Aduenturers which first shall disburse their money for this discouerie, with prohibition to all other her Maiesties subiects, and other Marchants to deale in the saide partes, without the consent of the first Aduenturers, vpon loss of shippe and goods, and punishment of their persons, that so shall aduenture in trade of marchandise: or otherwise by imprisonment at the Companies pleasure.

That no person shall hereafter adventure in this discouerie, as Aduenturers for the profites mentioned in the first Articles, but such onely as doe disburse their money in this first preparation: and they shall not adventure hereafter any greater summe, then taxably according to their proportion of this their first adventure.

have, holde, occupie and enioye to him, his heires and assignes, and euery of them for euer, all the soile of a ll such landes, territories, and Countreys, so to bee discovered and possessed as aforesaide, and of all such Cities, castles, towines, villages, and places in the same, with the right, royalties, franchises, and iurisdictiones, as well marine as other within the saide landes, or Countreys, or the seas thereunto adjoining, to be had, or vsed, with full power to dispose thereof, and of euery part in fee simple, or otherwise, according to the order of the lawes of England, as nere as the same conveniently may bee, at his, with their will and pleasure, to any persons then being, or that shall remaine within the allegiance of vs, our heires, and successors: reseruing alwayes to vs, our heires, and successors, for all seruices, duties, and demaundes, the first part of all the oare of golde and silver, that from time to time, and at all times after such discouerie, subduing and possessing, shalbe there gotten and obtained: All which landes, Countreys, and territories, shall for euer be holden of the said Walter Ralegh, his heires and assignes, of vs, our heires and successors, by homage, and by the said payment of the said fifth part, reserued onely for all seruices.

And moreover, we doe by these presents, for vs, our heires and successors, giue and graunt licence to the said Walter Ralegh, his heires, and assignes, and euery of them, that he, and they, and euery of any of them, shall & may from time to time, and at all times for euer hereafter, for his and their defence, encounter and expulse, repell and resist as well by sea as by lande, and by all other wayes whatsoeuer, all, and euery such person and persons whatsoeuer, as without the speciall liking and licence of the saide Walter Ralegh, and of his heires and assignes, shall attempt to inhabit within the said Countreys, or any of them, or within the space of two hundred leagues nere to the place or places within such Countreys as aforesaid (if they shall not bee before planted or inhabited within the limits as aforesaide with the subiects of any Christian Prince being in amitie with vs) where the saide Walter Ralegh, his heires, or assignes, or any of them, or his, or their, or any of their associates or company, shall within five yeeres (next ensuing) make their dwellings or abidings, or that shall enterpryse or attempt at any time hereafter unlawfully to annoy, either by sea or lande, the saide Walter Ralegh, his heires or assignes, or any of them, or his or their, or any of his or their companies giuing, and granting by these presents further power and authoritie, to the said Walter Ralegh, his heires and assignes, and euery of them from time to time, and at all times for euer hereafter, to take and surpriue by all manner of meanes whatsoever, all and euery those person or persons, with their shippes, vessels, and other goods and furniture, which without the licence of the saide Walter Ralegh, or his heires, or assignes, as aforesaid, shall be founde trafficking into any harbour, or harbours, creeke, or creekes, within the limits aforesaid, (the subiects of our Realmes and Dominions, and all other persons in amitie with vs, trading to the Newfound lands for fishing as heretofore they haue commonly vsed, or being taken by force of a tempest, or shipwracke ouerly epreyed:) and those persons, and euery of them, with their shippes, vessels, goods, and furniture to deteine and possesse as of good and lawfull prize, according to the discretion of him the saide Walter Ralegh, his heires, and assignes, and euery, or any of them. And for vnting in more perfect league and amitie, of such Countreys, landes, and territories so to bee possessed and inhabited as aforesaide with our Realmes of Englande, and Ireland, and the better encouragement of men to these enterpryses we do by these presents, graunt and declare that all such Countreys, so hereafter to be possessed and inhabited as is aforesaide, from thenceforth shall bee of the allegiance of vs, our heires and successors. And wee doe graunt to the saide Walter Ralegh, his heires, and assignes, and to all, and euery of them, and to all, and euery other person, and persons being of our allegiance, whose names shall be noted or entered in some of our Courtes of recorde within our Realme of Englande, that with the assent of the saide Walter Ralegh, his heires or assignes, shall in his iourneys for discouerie, or in the iourneys for conquest, hereafter traueile to such lands, countreys and territories, as aforesaide, and to their, and to euery of their heires, that they, and euery of any of them, being either boine within our saide Realmes of Englande, or Irelande, or in any other place within our allegiance, and which hereafter shall be inhabiting within any the landes, Countreys, and territories, with such licence, (as aforesaide) shall and may haue all the priuiledges of free Denizens, and persons native of England, and within our allegiance in such like ample maner and forme, as if they were boine and personally resident within our said Realme of England, any lawe, custome, or charge to the contrary notwithstanding.

And for as much as vpon the finding out, discouering, or inhabiting of such remote lands, countreys, & territories as aforesaid, it shall be necessary for the safetie of all men, that shal aduenture them selves in those iourneys or voyages, to determine to liue together in Christian peace, & ciuil quietnes each with other, whereby euery one may with more pleasure & profit enioy that whereunto they

of the certaintie of the premises, or any part thereof, or of any other gift, or grant by vs, or any our progenitors, or predecessors to the said Walter Raleigh, before this time made in these presents be not expressed, or any other grant, or promise, or promise, or proclamation, or restraint to the contrary thereof, before this time, given, obtained, or promised, or any other thing, cause, or matter whatsoever, in any wise notwithstanding. In witness whereof, we have caused these our letters to be made publick, at the towne of Westminter the 27. day of March, in the five and twentieth yeare of our Raigne.

The first voyage made to the coastes of America, with two barkes, wherein were Captaines Master Philip Amadas, and Master Arthur Barlowe, who discovered part of the Countrey, now called Virginia, Anno 1584: Written by one of the said Captaines, and sent to sir Walter Raleigh, knight, at whose charge, and direction, the said voyage was set forth.

The 27. day of April, in the yeere of our redemption, 1584. we departed the west of England, with two barkes, well furnished with men and victuals, having receyved our last, and perfect directions by your letters, confirming the former instructions, and commandements delivered by your selfe at our leaving the river of Thames. And I thinke it a matter both necessarie, for the manifest discoverye of the Countrey, as also for tediousnes sake, to remember unto you the directionall of our course, sailing thither, and returning: onely I have presumed to present unto you this briefe discourse, by which you may iudge how profitable this land is likely to succede, as well to your selfe, (by whose direction and charge, and by whose servants this our discoverye hath bene performed) as also to her Highnes, and the Common wealch, in which we hope your wisdomme will be satisfied, considering, that as much by vs hath bene brought to light, as by those small meanes, and number of men we had, could any way have bene expected, or hoped for.

The tenth of May, we arrived at the Canaries, and the tenth of June in this present yeere, we were fallen with the Islands of the West Indies, keeping a more southeasterly course then was needefull, because we doubted that the current of the Baye of Mexico, disbugging betwene the Cape of Florida, and the Havana, had bene of greater force then after wards we found it to be. At which Islands we found the aire very unwholsome, and our men grewe for the most part ill disposed: so that having refreshed our selves with sweet water, and fresh victual, we departed the twelfth daye after our arrivall there. These Islands, with the rest adjoining, are so well knowne to your selfe, and to many others, as I will not trouble you, with the remembrance of them.

The second of July, we found shole water, which smelt so sweetly, and was so strong a smell, as if we had bene in the midst of some delicate garden, abounding with all kinde of odoriferous flowers, by which we were assured, that the land could not be farre distant: and keeping good watch, and bearing but slacke saile, the fourth of the same moneth, we arrived upon the coast, which we supposed to be a continent, and firme lande, and we sailed along the same, a hundred and twentie English miles, before we could finde any entrance, or river, issuing into the Sea. The first that appeared unto vs, we entered, though not without some difficultie, and cast anchor about threer harbours, which in the hauiens mouth, on the left haunde of the same: and after thanks given to God for our safe arrivall thither, we manned our boates, and went to viewe the lande next adjoining, and to take possession of the same, in the right of the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, as rightfull Queene, and Princessse of the same, and after delivered the same over to your selfe, according to her Maiesties grant, and letters patents, vnder her Highnes great Seale. Which being performed, according to the ceremonies used in such enterprises, we viewed the lande about vs, being whereas we first landed, very sandy, and lowe towards the water side, but so full of grapes, as the very beating, and surge of the Sea overflowed them, of which we founde such plenty, as well there, as in all places else, both on the lande, and on the greene soile on the hills, as in the plaines, as well on every little shrubbe, as also climbing towards the toppes of the high Cedars, that I thinke in all the world the like abundance is not to be founde: and my selfe having seene those partes of Europe that most abound, finde such difference, as were incredible to be written.

July 13. post. tedious labour.

We passed from the Sea side, towards the toppes of those hills next adjoining, being but of meane height, and from thence wee behelde the Sea on both sides to the North, and to the South, finding no ende any of both waters. This land laye stretching it selfe to the West, which after wee founde to be but an Island of twentie leagues long, and not above five miles broade. Under the banke of hill, wheron we stood, we behelde the vallies replenished with goodly Cedar trees, and hauing discharged our harquebusshot, such a flocke of C. ranes (the most part white) arose vnder vs, with such a crye redoubled by many C. rchoes, as if an armie of men had shoted all together.

This Island had many goodly woods, and full of Deere, Conies, Hares, and Fowle, euen in the midst of Summer, in incredible aboundance. The woods are not such as you finde in Bohemia, Moscouia, or Hyrcania, barren, and fruitlesse, but the highest, and reddest Cedars of the world, farre bettering the Cedars of the Acores, of the Indias, of Lybanus, Hyenes, Cypres, Salsappas, the L. entick, or the tree that beareth the Spalliche: he tree that beareth the rinde of blacke Simamon, of which Walter Winter brought from the Streights of Magellane, and many other of excellent smell, and qualitie. We remained by the side of this Island two whole daies, before we sawe any people of the Countrey: the thirde daye we espied one small boate rowing towards vs, hauing in it three persons: this boate came to the landes side, foure harquebusshot from our shippes, and there two of the people remaining, the thirde came along the shoare side towards vs, and we being then all within boord, he walked by and downe vpon the point of the lande next vnto vs: then the Spalter, and the Pilot of the Admirall, Simon Ferdinando, and the Captaine Philip Amadas, my selfe, and others, rowed to the lande, whose comming this fellowe attended, neuer making any shewe of feare, or doubt. And after he had spoken of many things not vnderstoode by vs, we brought him with his owne good liking, aboard the shippes, and gaue him a shirt, a hatte, and some other things, and made him taste of our wine, and our meate, which he liked very well: and after hauing viewed both barkes, he departed, and went to his owne boate againe, which hee had left in a little Coue, or Creeke adjoining: althoughe as he was too bowe shoote into the water, hee fell to fishing, and in lesse then halfe an houre, hee had laden his boate as deepe, as it could swimme, with which he came againe to the point of the lande, and there he deuised his fische into two partes, pointing one part to the shippe, and the other to the Pinnele: which after hee had (as much as he might,) requited the former benefits receaued, he departed out of our sight.

The next daye there came vnto vs diuers boates, and in one of them the Kings brother, accompanied with fortie or fiftie men, very handsome, and goodly people, and in their behauiour as mannerly, and civil, as any of Europe. His name was Granganimeo, and the King is called Wingina, the Countrey Wingandacoa, (and nowe by her Spalliche, Virginia,) the manner of his comming was in this sort: hee left his boates altogether, as the first man did a litle from the shippes by the shoare, and came along to the place ouer against the shippes, followed with fortie men. When hee came to the place, his seruants spread a long matte vpon the grounde, on which hee satte downe, and at the other ende of the matte, foure others of his companie did the like: the rest of his men stood round about him; somewhat a farr off: when wee came to the shoare to him with our weapons, he neuer moued from his place, nor any of the other foure, nor neuer mistrusted any harme to be offered from vs, but sitting still, he beckoned vs to come, and sate by him, which wee performed: and beinge seate, hee makes all signes of ioy, and welcome, striking on his head, and his breast, and afterwards on ours, to shewe we were all one, smiling, and making shewe the best hee could, of all loue, and familiarity. After hee had made a long speech vnto vs, wee presented him with diuers things, which hee receaued very ioyfull, and thankfull, none of his companie durst to speake one worde all the tyme: onely the foure which were at the other ende, spake one in the others eare very softly.

The King is greatly obeyed, and his brothers, and children reuerenced: the King himselfe in person was at our being there sore wounded, in a fight which he had with the King of the next Countrey, called Wingina, and was shotte in two places through the boode, and once cleane thorough the thigh, but yet hee recouered: by reason wherof, and for that hee laye at the chiefe Towne of the Countrey, beinge five dayes iourneye off, wee sawe him not at all.

After wee had presented this his brother, with such things as we thought hee liked, we likewise gaue somewhat to the other that sate with him on the matte: but presently he arose, and tooke all from them, and put it into his owne basket, making signes and tokens, that all things ought to be kept: and after that Chammyne, with other things that hee sawe, sate his breast, and that it would be a terrible warre, with skinnes, woodch the woodch fittie Crow kinnes, and would be two of the daies, of meate, and of our by his wife with him of well fauoured of me with the furre side had a broad bande of brace lets of pearles bracelet) and those had pendants of cor and other Noble m of golde, or copper he by any meanes yarell was as his v on one. They are of men that had very

After that these bringing with them but when Granganimeo such as weare redd betweene the Noble red there, and you h the worlde carry m Kings brothers with of fiftie women alv two daughters, hee as many boates as shoare a farr off, to ched. Their boate knowne to our peo withall: if they ha which as those two Christian shippe, b of the people were of whose sides they Their manner of are winde fallen, a when it hath burne burne it deeper o means thep saltio like scoopes, and n

The Kings by we had: and offer time, because we v stood in what plac ry well vnderstan

He was very i woode, but euer he hyst of two of fact all things ought to be deliuered vnto him, and the rest were but his seruants, and followers. A daye or two after this, we fell to trading with them, exchanging some things that we had for Chamirinos, Buffe, and Deere skins: when we shewd him all our packets of merchandize, of all things that he saw, a bright time was he most pleased him, which he presently tooke vp, & clapt it before his breast, & after made a hole in the bosome thereof, & hung it about his necke, making signes, that it would defende him against his enemies arrows: for those people maintaine a deadly and terrible warre, with the people and King aduoyning. We exchanged our tinne for twenty skines, woorth twenty Crownes, or twenty Nobles: and a copper kettle for fiftie skines, woorth fiftie Crownes. They offered vs very good exchange for our hatchets, and axes, and for knives, and would haue giuen any thing for swords: but we would not depart with any. After two or three daies, the Kings brother came aboard the shippes, and dranke wine, and ate of our meate, and of our bread, and liked exceedingly thereof: and after a few daies ouerpast, he brought his wife with him to the shippes, his daughter, and two or three little children: his wife was very well fauoured, of meane stature, and very bashfull: she had on her backe a long cloke of leather, with the furre side next to her bodie, and before her a peece of the same: about her forehead, she had a broad bande of white Corral, and so had her husband many times: in her eares she had bracelets of pearles, hanging downe to her middle, (whereof we deliuered your Worship a litle bracelet) and those were of the bignes of good peale. The rest of her women of the better sort, had pendants of copper, hanging in euery eare, and some of the children of the Kings brother, and other Noble men, haue five or sixe in euery eare: he himselfe had vpon his head, a broad plate of golde, or copper, for being vnpolished, we knew not what metall it should be, whether would he by any meanes suffer vs to take it off his head, but feeling it, it would bowe very easily. His apparell was as his wifes, onely the women weare their haire long on both sides, and the men but on one. They are of colour yellowish, and their haire blacke for the most, and yet we sawe children that had very fine auburne, and chestnut colour haire.

After that these women had bene there, there came downe from all parts great store of people, bringing with them leather, corral, diuers kinds of dyes very excellent, and exchanged with vs: but when Granganimo, the kings brother was present, none durst to trade but himselfe, excepte such as weare redde peeces of copper on their heades, like himselfe: for that is the difference betweene the Noble men, and Governours of Countries, and the meaner sort. And we both noted there, and you haue vnderstood since by these men, which we brought home, that no people in the world carry more respect to their King, Nobilitie, and Governours, then these doe. The Kings brothers wife, when she came to vs, as she did many times, she was followed with foure or fiftie women at waies: and when she came into the shippe, she left them all on lande, leaving her two daughters, her nurse, and one or two more. The Kings brother alwaies keepe this order, as many boates as he would come withall to the shippes, so many fires would he make on the shoare a farr off, to the ende wee might vnderstand with what strength, and companie he approached. Their boates are made of one tree, either of Pine, or of Birch trees: a wood not commonly knowne to our people, nor found growing in England. They haue no edge tooles to make them withall: if they haue any, they are very fewe, and those it seemes they had twenty yeeres since, which as those two men declared, was out of a wycke which happened vpon their coast of some Christian shippe, being beaten that way by some storme, and outrageous weather, whereof none of the people were saued, but onely the shippe, or some part of her, being cast vpon the sande, out of whose sides they drew the needles, and spikes, and with those they made their best instruments. Their manner of making their boates is this: they burne downe some great tree, or take such as are winde fallen, and putting myrre, and rosen vpon one side thereof, they sette fire into it, and when it hath burnt it hollowe, they cutte out the coale with their shels, and euer where they would burne it deeper or wider, they laye on their gummess, which burneth away the timber, and by this meanes they fashion very fine boates, and such as will transport twenty men. Their oares are like scoopes, and many times they sette with long poles, as the depeh serueth.

The Kings brother had great liking of our armour, a sword, and diuers other things, which we had: and offered to laye a great boze of pearle in gage for them: but we refused it for this time, because we would not make them knowe, that wee esteemed thereof, vntill we had vnderstoode in what places of the Countrey the pearle grew: which nowe your Worshippe doth very well vnderstand.

He was very full of his promise: for many times wee deliuered him merchandize vpon his word, but euer he came within the daye, and performed his promise. Wee sent vs euery daye a basket of two of face Ducks, Conies, Pares, & fische, the best of the world. Wee sent vs diuers kinds kindes of fruites, Melons, Malnuts, Cucumbers, Gourdes, Pease, and diuers rootes, and fruites very excellent good, and of their Countrey corne, which is very white, faire, and well tasted, and groweth three times in five moneths: in Maye they sowe, in July they reape: in June they sowe, in August they reape: in July they sowe, in September they reape: onely they cast the corne into the ground, breaking a little of the soft turfe with wooden mattocke, or pickaxe: our felues psoned the soile, and put some of our Pease into the ground, and in tenne daies they were of foureteene ynches high: they haue also Beanes very faire, of diuers colours, and wonderful plenty: some growing naturally, and some in their gardenes, and so haue they both wheate and oates.

The soile is the most pleuisfull, sweete, fruitfull, and wholsome of all the world: there are aboue foureteene severall sweete smelling timber trees, and the most part of their hinder woods are Bapes, and such like: they haue those Okes that we haue, but faire greater, and better. After they had bene diuers times aboard our shippes, my selfe, with seuen more, went thentie mile into the Riuer, that runneth toward the Citie of Skicoake, which Riuer they call Occam: and the evening following, we came to an Island, which they call Roanoak, distant from the harbour by which we eured, seuen leagues: and at the North end thereof, was a village of nine houses, built of Cedar, and fortified round about with sharpe trees, to keepe out their enemies, and the entrance into it made like a turne pike very artificially: when we came towards it, standing neere vnto the waters side, the wife of Grangyno, the Kings brother, came running out to meete vs very cheerefully, and friendly, her husband was not then in the village: some of her people she commanded to draine our boate on the shoare, for the beating of the villoe: others she appointed to carry vs on their backs to the dry ground, and others to bring our oares into the house, for feare of stealing. When we were come into the better roome, hauing five roomes in her house, she caused vs to sitte vnto by a great fire, and after tooke off our clothes, and washed them, and dried them againe: some of the women pulled off our stockings, and washed them, some washed our feete in warme water, and shee her selfe tooke great paines to see all things ordered in the best manner shee coule, making great haste to dress some meate for vs to eat.

After we had thus dried our felues, shee brought vs into the inner roome, where she set on the hood standing along the house, some wheate like fermentie, sodden Xenison, and roasted, sith sodden, boyled, and roasted, Melons rawe, and sodden, rootes of diuers kindes, and diuers fruites: their drinke is commonly water, but while the grape lasteth, they drinke wine, and for want of caske to keepe it all the yeere after, they drinke water, but it is sodden with Ginger in it, and blacke Shinamon, and sometimes Sallapayas, and diuers other wholsome, and medicinal beaues and trees. We were entertained with all loue, and kindnes, and with as much bountie, after their manner, as they coule possibly deuise. Wee found the people most gentle, louing, and faithfull, void of all guile, and treason, and such as liued after the manner of the golden age. The earth bringeth forth all things in abundance, as in the first creation, without toyle or labour. The people onely care to defend them selues from the cold, in their short winter, and to feede themselves with such meate as the soile affordeth: their meate is very well sodden, and they make both very sweete, and sauorie: their vessels are earthen pots, very large, white, and sweete: their dishes are wooden platters of sweete timber: within the place where they feede, was their lodging, and within that their Idoll, which they worship, of which they speake incredible things. While we were at meate, there came in at the gates, two or three men with their bowes, and arrowes, from hunting, whome when we espied, we beganne to looke one towards another, and offered to reach our weapons: but as soone as they espied our mistrust, they was very much moued, and caused some of her men to runne out, and take away the bowes, and arrowes, and breaketh them, and withall beate the poore fellows out of the gate againe. When we departed in the evening, and would not carry all night, she was very sozie, and gaue vs into our boate our supper halfe vessel, pots, and all, and brought vs to our boates side, in which wee laye all night, remoouing the same a pretie distance from the shoare: shee perceiving our zealousie, was much grieued, and sent diuers men, and chittie women, to sitte all night on the banks side by vs, and sent vs into our boates five matres to couer vs from the rayne, vnto very many wordes to increase vs to rest in their houses: but because wee were fewe men, and if wee had miscarried, the voyage had bene in very great danger, wee durst not adventure any thing, although there was no cause of doubt: for a more kinde, and louing people, there can not be found in the world, as farre as we haue hitherto had trial.

Beyond this Islande, there is the maine lande, and ouer against this Islande falleth into this this spacious water Towne called Pem cite, called Schycos at it, onely they spea heard affirme it, to be

Into this riuer fa Gullets, in which is called Nomopana, the Lord of that Co King of Wingand whome they call M wards the Sunne se Westermoll Town
a shippe call away,
the Countrey people

And after ten daies help of some of the made make vnto th
the Countrey peele shortly after, it seme in another Island a di colour, either some of Inhabitants of Sequ
we were amongst it
to vie to the same: be so strange vnto them ged any peere, were strangenes of the san rowes ate but of sma kill a naked man. C for their defeat. The bones of a flagge, o
of whome they aske sing songs as they m are very cruell, and bl ned of late yeeres and Countrey left desola

Adorning vnto th
with the next King, sioke, stuate vpon
with Wingina, King betweene the King P with vs into Englan Sequotanes, for man diuers men, and o
when they were aloug meere illusion of the and stee them euery since perished vs to will be founde in it may be reuenged of t
after.

Beyond this Island natural increase to some bounding vpon

When we first ha
tinne: but after wee

this spacious water, the great riuer called Occam, by the Inhabitants, on which standeth a Towne called Pemeoke, and shee takes iourney further upon the same in skuate their greatest citie, called Schycoake, which this people affirme to be very great: but the Sauages were neuer at it, onely they speake of it by the report of their Fathers, and other men, whome they haue heard affirme it, to be about one daies iourney about.

Into this riuer falleth another great riuer, called Cipo, in which there is found great store of the Opulents, in which there are praires: like wise there descendeth into this Occam, another riuer, called Nomopans, on the one side whereof standeth a great Towne, called Chowanoack, and the Lord of that Towne and Countrey, is called Pooneno: this Pooneno is not subject to the King of Wingandacoa, but is a free Lord, Beyond this Countrey, is there another King, whome they call Mensoan, and these three Kinges are in league with eache other. Towards the Sunne set, foure daies iourney, is skuate a Towne called Sequotan, which is the Westernmost Towne of Wingandacoa, neere vnto which shee and twentie yeeres past, there was a shippe cast away, whereof some of the people were saued, and those were white people, whom the Countrey people persecuted.

And after ten daies, remaining in an out Island inhabited, called Wococan, they with the helpe of some of the dwellers of Sequotan, fastened two boates of the Countrey together, and made masses vnto them, and sailes of their shutes, and hauing taken into them such victuals as the Countrey yeeldes, they departed after they had remained in this our Island three weekes: but shortly after, it seemed they were cast away, for the boates were found vpon the coast, cast a land in another Island adioyning: other then these, there was neuer any people apperelled, or white of colour, either seene, or heard of amongst these people, and these adioyning were some onely of the Inhabitants of Sequotan which appeared to be very true, for they wondered maruelously when we were amongst them, at the whiteness of our skinnes, euer coueting to touch our faces, and to bite the same: besides they had our shippes in maruelous admiration, and all things els was so strange vnto them, as it appeared that none of them had euer seene the like. When we discharged any peece, were it but a harquebush, they would tremble thereat for very feare, and for the strangeness of the same: for the weapons which themselves vse, are bowes and arrowes: the arrowes are but of small canes, headed with a sharpe shell, or tooth of a fish sufficient enough to kill a naked man. Their swordes are of wood hardened: like wise they vse wooden beak places for their defense. They haue besides a kinde of clubbe, in the end whereof they fasten the sharpe pointes of a stagge, or other beast. When they goe to warres, they carry with them their Idoll, of whome they aske counsell, as the Romanes were wont of the Oracle of Apollo. They sing songs as they march towards the battell, in steede of drummes, and trumpets: their warres are very cruell, and bloodie, by reason whereof, and of their ciuill dissensions, which haue happened of late yeeres amongst them, the people are maruelously wasted, and in some places, the Countrey left desolate.

Adioyning vnto this Towne adioyning, called Sequotan, beginneth a Countrey called Poonouike, belonging to another King, whome they call Piemacum, and this King is in league with the next King, adioyning towards the setting of the Sunne, and the Countrey Neio-sioke, skuate vpon the side of a goodly Riuer, called Neus: these Kinges haue mortall warre with Wingina, King of Wingandacoa, but about two yeeres past, there was a peace made betweene the King Piemacum, and the Lord of Sequotan, as these men which we haue brought with vs into England, haue made vs vnderstande: but there remaineth a mortall malice in the Sequotanes, for many iniuries and slaughters done vpon them by this Piemacum. They invited diuers men, and thirtie women, of the best of his Countrey, to their Towne to a feast: and when they were altogether merrie, and praying before their Idoll, which is nothing else, but a meere illusion of the Deuill: the Captaine or Lord of the Towne came suddenly vpon them, and slew them euery one, reseruing the women, and children: and these too haue oftentimes since perswaded vs to surprize Piemacum his Towne, hauing promised, and assured vs, that there will be founde in it great store of commodities. But whether their perswasion be to the end they may be reuenged of their enemies, or for the loue they beare to vs, we leaue that to the trial hereafter.

Beyond this Island, called Croonoake, are many Islands, very plentifull of frutes, and other naturall increases, together with many Townes, and villages, along the side of the continent, some bounding vpon the Islands, and some stretching by further into the land.

When we first had sight of this Countrey, some thought the first lande we saue, to be the continent: but after wee entered into the Haven, wee saue before vs another mightie long Isle: for there there lieth along the coast a tracte of Islands, two hundred miles in length, adioyning to the Ocean sea, and betwene the Islands, two or three entrances: when you are entered betwene them (these Islands being very narrowe, for the most part, as in most places fve miles broad, in some places lesse, in some more,) then there appeareth another great Sea, containing in breadth in some places fortye, and in some fiftie, in some twentie miles ouer, before you come vnto the continent: and in this included Sea, there are about a hundred Islands of diuers bignesses, whereof one is threeteene miles long, at which we were, finding it to be a most pleasant, and fertile ground, replenished with goodly Cedars, and diuers other sweete woods, full of Currans, of flax, and many other notable commodities, which we at that time had no leisure to view. Besides this Island, there are many, as I haue saide, some of two, of thre, of foure, of five miles, some more, some lesse, most beautifull, and pleasant to behold, replenished with Deere, Conies, Hares, and diuers beastes, and about them the goodliest and best fische in the world, and in greate abundance.

Thus Sir, we haue acquainted you with the particulars of our discouerie, made this yeres voyage, as farre forth, as the shoyms of the time we there continued, would allow vs to take viewe of: and so contenting our selues with this seruice at this time, which we hope hereafter to enlarge, as occasion and assistance shall be giuen, we resolved to leaue the Countrey, and to apply our selues to returne for England, which we did accordingly, and arrived safely in the West of England, about the middell of September.

And whereas we haue about certified you of the Countrey, taken in possession by vs, to her Maesties vse, and so to yours, by her Maesties grant, wee thought good for the better assurance thereof, to recorde some of the particular Gentlemen, and men of accompt, who then were present, as witnesses of the same, that thereby all occasion of cauill to the title of the Countrey, in her Maesties behalfe, may be prevented, which other wise, such as like not the action may vse, and pretend, whose names are:

Master Philip Amadas, Master Arthur Barlowe,	}	Captaines.
William Greeneuile, John Wood, Iames Browewich, Henrie Greene, Beniamin Wood, Simon Ferdinando, Nicholas Petman, John Heyes,	}	Of the companie.

The voyage made by Sir Richard Greeneuile, for Sir Walter Raleigh, to Virginia, in the yeere, 1585.

The 19. day of Maye, in the yeere aboue saide, we departed from Plymouth, our fleet consisting of the number of seven sailes, to wit, the Tyger, of the burden of seuen score tunnes: a flie boate called the Roe Bucke, of the like burden: the Lyon of a hundred tunnes, or thereabouts: the Elizabeth, of fiftie tunnes, and the Dorothea, a small barke, whereunto were also adioyned for speede seruices, 2. small Pinnelles. The principall Gentlemen of our companie, were, Master Ralfe Lane, Master Thomas Candishe, Master John Arundell, Master Raimund, Master Stukely, Master Bremige, Master Vincent, and Master John Clarke, and diuers others, whereof some were Captaines, and other some Assistants for counsell, and good directions in the voyage.

The 14. day of Apriill, we fell with Lançacota, and Forte Ventura, Isles of the Canaries, and from thence we continued our course for Dominica, one of the Antiles of the West India, where with we fell the 7. day of Maye, and the 10. day following, we came to an anchor at Cotesa, a little Island situate neere to the Island of S. Iohn, where wee landed, and refreshed our selues all that day.

The 15. day of Maye, we came to an anchor, in the Baye of Muskito, in the Island of S. Iohn, within a Falcon shot of the Shoard: where our Generall Sir Richard Greenuill, and the most part of our companie landed, and began to foxtie, very neere to the sea side: the river ranne by the one side of our foyle, and the other two sides were environed with woods,

The

The 13. day we be felled in the countrey for bypon crucks, the

The 16. day, there a quarter of a mple fr soone as they saw 7.0

The 19. day, Master of Portugall arrived ben either a Spaniard roome with him, whi of whose coming, o ner of the Seas.

The 22. day, 20. Oct riuer: who being seen ours, moued vpon Island: they shewed to upon two of our men the two Spaniards r with ypon humors, to who notwithstanding that our principal int necessaries wherof w ly means, other wise the Spaniards in cor
mites of all curtesie,

The 23. day our Captaines, and Gen
plaine marsh, they
to furnish vs with came not, wherupon
the same day was fir

The 29. day we sen
the Muskitoes: but nyards vpon the s gat, with good and ransomed for good

The 26. day our
ken, to Roxo hap
by a Spanisch Pilot increnched him self trench: who being of hostemen, and him to offer any re laded his frigate, an mans Bay. The lan

The 1. day of Ju
The 3. day b certified by the re
by our Generall, th to see the Govern
sing within few da

The 5. day the their seruants, & Me scene, our Generall every man appointe Governor received Gentlemen, and the

The 13. day we began to builde a new pinnelle within the Foze, with the timber that we then felled in the countrey, some part whereof we set three myle vp in the land, and brought it to our Foze upon crucks, the Spaniards not daring to make of other resistance.

The 16. day, there appeared vnto vs out of the woods 8. hoysmen of the Spaniards, about a quarter of a myle from our Foze, staying about halfe an hower in viewing our forces: but as soone as they saw 5. of our shot marching towards them, they presently rettyred into the woodes.

The 19. day, Master Candish, who had bene seperated from our fleete in a storme in the Bay of Portugall arrived at Coceia, within the sight of the Tiger: we thinking him a farrer off to haue ben either a Spaniard or French man of warre thought it good to weigh anchors, and to goe roome with him, which the Tyger did, and discerned him at last to be one of our Consoys, for top of whose comming, our ships discharged their ordnance, and saluted him, according to the manner of the Seas.

The 22. day, 20. other Spanishe hoysmen shewed them selues to vs upon the other side of the riuer: who being seene, our General dispatched 20. footemen towards them, and two hoysmen of ours, mounted upon Spanishe hoyses, which wee before had taken in the time of our being on the Island: they shewed to our men a flagge of truce, and made signes to haue a parle with vs: whereupon two of our men went halfe of the way upon the sands, and two of theirs came and met them: the two Spaniards offered very great salutations to our men, but began according to their Spanishe proud humors, to expostulate with them, about their arrival, and fortifying in their countrey, who not withstanding by our mens discrete answers were so cooled, that whereas they were told, that our principal intention was onely to furnish our selues with water, and victuals, and other necessaries whereof we stood in neede, which we craved might be yelued vs with faire, and friendly means, other wise our resolution was to practise force, and to relieue our selues by the sword: the Spaniards in conclusion, seeing our men so resolute, yelued to our requestes with large promises of all curtesie, and great fauor, and so our men and theirs departed.

The 23. day our pinnelle was finished, and lanches, which being done, our Generall with his Captaines, and Gentlemen, marched by into the Countrey about the space of 4. myles, where in a plaine marsh, they layed expecting the comming of the Spaniards according to their promise, to furnish vs with victuals: who keeping their old custome for periurie and breach of promise came not, whereupon our Generall fired the woodes thereabout, and so retired to our Foze, which the same day was fired also, and each man came aboard to be ready to set saile the next morning.

The 29. day we set saile from Saint Johns, being many of vs stooing before upon Hoare with the Huskitoes: but the same night we took a Spanishe frigate, which was forsaken by the Spaniards vpon the sight of vs, and the next day in the morning very early, wee took another frigate, with good and rich fraight, and diuers Spaniards of account in her, which after wards we ransomed for good round summes, and lauded them in Saint Johns.

The 26. day our Lieutenant Master Raffe Lane, went in one of the frigats which we had taken, to Roxo bay vpon the South west side of Saint Johns, to fetch salt, bring thither conducted by a Spanishe Pilot: as soone as he arriued there, he landed with his men, to the number of 20. and increased him selfe vpon the sands immediately, compassing one of their salt hills within the trench: who being seene of the Spaniards, there came downe towards him two of their troopes of hoysmen, and footemen, who gaue him the looking, and gazing on, but durst not come neere him to offer any resistance, so that Master Lane mauer their troopes, carried their salt aboard, and laded his frigate, and so returned againe to our fleete the 29. day, which roade at Saint Germans Bay. The same day we all departed, and the next day arriued in the Island of Hispaniola.

June.

The 1. day of June we ankered at Isabella, in the North side of Hispaniola.

The 3. day of June, the Gouvernor of Isabella, and Captaine of the Port de Plata, being certified by the reports of sundry Spaniards, who had bene wth entertained aboard our shippes by our Generall, that in our fleete were many braue, and gallant Gentlemen, who greatly desired to see the Gouvernor aforesaid, he thereupon sent gentle commendations to our Generall, promising within few daies to come to him in person, which he performed accordingly.

The 5. day the foresaid gouernour, accompanied with a lusty frigate, & 22. other Spaniards, with their seruants, & Negroes, came downe to the sea side, where our ships roade at anker, who being seene, our General manned immediately the most part of his boats wth the chiefe men of our fleete, euery man appointed, and furnished in the best foze: at the landing of our Generall, the Spanishe Gouvernor receiued him very curteously, and the Spanishe Gentlemen saluted our English Gentlemen, and their inferiour foze did also salute our Souldiers and Sea men, liking our men, and likewise their qualities, although at the first, they seemed to stand in feare of vs, and of so many of our boats, whereof they desired that all might not land their men, yet in the end, the curtelles that passed on both sides were so great, that all feare and mistrust on the Spaniards part was abandoned.

In the meane time while our English Generall and the Spanish Governour discoursed betwixt them of diuers matters, as of the State of the Country, the multitude of the Townes and people, and the commodities of the Island, our men provided two banquetting houles covered with greene boughs, the one for the gentlemen, the other for the seruants, and a sumptuous banquet was brought in serued by vs all in Plate, with the sound of trumpets, and consort of musick, wherewith the Spaniards were moze then delighted. Which banquet being ended, the Spaniards in recompense of our curtelles, caused a great herd of white buls, and kync, to be brought together from the Mountaines, and appointed for every Gentleman and Captaine that would ride, a horse ready sadled, and then singled out three of the best of them to be hunted by horsemen after their manner, so that the pastime grew very pleasant, for the space of three houres, wherem all they of the beasts were killed, whereof one tooke the sea, and there was slaine with a musket. After this sport, many rare presents and gifts were giuen and bestowed on both partes, and the next day we played the Marchants in bargaining with them by way of trucke and exchange for diuers of their commodities, as horses, mares, kync, buls, goates, swine, sheepe, bul hydes, sugar, ginger, pearle, tabacco, and such like commodities of the Island.

The 7. day we departed with great good will from the Spaniards from the Island of Hispaniola: but the wisler sort do impute this greateshew of friendship, and curtelles used towards vs by the Spaniards rather to the force that we were of, and the vigilance, and watchfulness that was amongst vs, then to any hartly good will, or sure freindly intertainment: for doubtlesse if they had bene wiser then wee, we might haue looked for no better curtelles at their handes, then Master John Hawkins received at saint Iohn de Vlua, or John Oxnam nere the strights of Dariens, and diuers others of our Countrymen in other places.

The 8. day we ankered at a small Island to take Seales which in that place wee understood to haue bene in great quantitie, where the Generall and certaine others with him in the pinnelle, were in very great danger to haue bene all cast away, but by the helpe of God they escaped the hazard, and returned aboard the Admirall in safetie.

The 9. day we arrived and landed in the Isle of Caycos, in which Islande we searched for salt pomes, vpon the aduertisement, and information of a Portugall: who in deede abused our General and vs, deseruing a halter for his hire, if it had so pleased vs.

The 12. we ankered at Guanema, and landed.

The 15. and 16. we ankered and landed at Sygateo.

The 20. we fell with the mayne of Florida.

The 23. wee were in great danger of a Whacke on a heache called the Cape of Feare.

The 24. we came to anker in a harbor where we caught in one tpe so much silke as would haue pelued vs 77. pounds in London: this was our first landing in Florida.

The 26. we came to anker at Wocokon.

The 29. we waighed anker to bring the Tyger into the harbour, where though the vnskillfullnesse of the Master whose name was Fernando, the Admirall strooke on ground, and sunke.

July.

The 3. we sent word of our arriuing at Wococon, to Wingino at Roznocke.

The 6. M. Iohn Arundell was sent to the mayne, and Manteio with him: and Captayne Aubry, and Captaine Bonien the same day were sent to Croaroan, where they found two of our men left there, with 30. other by Captaine Reymond, some 20. daies before.

The 8. Captaine Aubry, and Captaine Bonien returned with two of our men found by them to vs at Wocokon.

The 11. day the Generall accompanied in his Tilt boate with Master Iohn Arundell, Master Stukelye, and diuers other Gentlemen, Master Lane, Master Candish, Master Harriot, and 20. others in the netwe pinnelle, Captaine Amadas, Captaine Clarke, with tenne others in a ship boate, Francis Dyaque, and Iohn White in another ship boate passed ouer the water from Ococon to the mayne land victualled for eight dayes, in which voyage we first discouered the townes of Pomioke, Aquacogoc and Secota, and also the great lake called by the Sauages Paquye, with with diuers other pl

The 12. we came

The 13. we passe

The 15. we came to

The 16. we retur

cocke to demaund a

it according to his p ing fleshe.

The 18. we retur

ryping at Wocokon

The 21. our fleet

The 27. our fleet

The 29. Grangin

with him.

The 2. The Adm

The 5. Master

The 25. our Gen

About the 31. he made with boards of

and his men were ou

The 10. of Sept

of the Tyger.

The first the T

mouth.

The 18. the Gen

diuerie of his voyth

The nam

that re

M

Master

Master

Master

Thomas

Master

Master

Captain

Master

Master

Robert

Rife Co

Master

with divers other places, and so returned with that discovery to our fleets.

The 12. we came to the Towne of Pomeioke.

The 13. we passed by water to Aquascocke.

The 15. we came to Secotan and were well entertayned there of the Sauages.

The 16. we returned thence, and one of our boates with the Admirall was sent to Aquascocke to demaund a silver cup which one of the Sauages had stolen from vs, and not receiuing it according to his promise, we burnt, and spoiled their coyns, and Towne, all the people being fledde.

The 18. we returned from the discovery of Secotan, and the same day came aboard our fleets lying at Wocokon.

The 21. our fleets ankering at Wokocon, we wayed anker for Hatoraske.

The 27. our fleets ankered at Hatoraske, and there we rested.

The 29. Grangino, brother to king Wingino, came aboard the Admirall, and Manteco with him.

August.

The 2. The Admirall was sent to Weapemeoke.

The 5. Master John Arundell was sent for England.

The 25. our Generall wayed anker, and set saile for England.

About the 31. he tooke a Spanish ship of 300. tunne richly laden, boarding her with a boate made with boards of chests, which fell a lumber, and sunke at the shippe, the, alsoone as euer hee and his men were out of it.

September.

The 10. of September, by soule weather the Generall then shipped in the pisse lost sight of the Tyger.

October.

The first the Tyger fell with the landes ende, and the same day came to an anker at Falmonth.

The 18. the Generall came with the pisse to Plymouth, and was courteously receiued by diuerse of his worshipfull friends.

The names of all those as well Gentlemen as others, that remained one whole yeere in Virginia, under the Governement of Master Ralfe Lane.

Master Philip Amades, Admiral of the countrie, Master Harior, Master Acon,
Master Edward Stafford, Thomas Luddington,
Master Maruyn, Master Gardynier, Captaine Vaughan, Master Kendall, Master Prideox, Robert Holcroft, Rife Courtney, Master Hugh Rogers,

Master Thomas Harrie, Master Snelling, Master Anthony Russe, Master Allyne,
Master Michel Polyson, John Cage,
Thomas Parre, William Randes, Geffery Churchman,
William Farthowe,
John Taylor,
Philippe Robyns,
Thomas Phillippes, Valentine Beale.

Vuu 3

Thomas

- |                    |                       |
|--------------------|-----------------------|
| Thomas Foxe,       | James Skinner,        |
| Edward Nugen,      | George Efeuen,        |
| Darby Glante,      | John Chaudeler,       |
| Edward Kelle,      | Philip Blunt,         |
| John Gostigon,     | Richard Poore,        | | Erasinus Clesi,    | Robert Yong,          | | Edward Ketcheman,  | Marmaduke Constable,  | | John Linsey,       | Thomas Heskett,       | | Theodius Romtaby,  | William Wallie,       | | Roger Deane,       | John Feuer,           | | John Hartis,       | Daniel,               | | Francis Norris,    | Thomas Taylor,        | | Mathewe Lynce,     | Richard Humfrey,      |
| Edward Kettell,    | John Wright,          | | Thomas Wisse,      | Gabriell North,       | | Robert Biscombe,   | Benner Chappell,      |
| William Backhouse, | Richard Saie,         | | William White,     | James Lase,           | | Henry Potkin,      | Smolkin,              |
| Dennis Barnes,     | Thomas Smart,         | | Joseph Borges,     | Robert                | | Doughan Gannes,    | John Euans,           | | William Tenche,    | Roger Large,          | | Randall Latham,    | Humfrey Garden,       |
| Thomas Hulme,      | Francis Whitton,      |
| Walter Myll,       | Rowland Griffyn,      |
| Richard Gilbert,   | William Millard,      |
| Steuen Pomarie,    | John Twyt,            |
| John Brocke,       | Edwarde Seklemore,    |
| Bennet Harpe,      | John Anwike,          | | James Steuenfon,   | Christopher Marshall, | | Charles Steuenfon, | Dauid Williams,       |
| Christopher Lowde, | Nicholas Swabber,     | | Jeremy Man,        | Edward Chipping,      | | James Mason,       | Syluester Beching,    |
| Douid Saker,       | Vincent Cheyne,       | | Richard Ireland,   | Hauuce Walters,       |
| Thomas Booketer,   | Edward Barecombe,     |
| William Phillippe, | Thomas Skeuelabs,     |
| Randall Mayne,     | William Walters,      |

An account of the particularities of the imployments of the English men left in Virginia by Sir Richard Greenewill vnder the charge of Master Raife Lane General of the same, from the 17. of August, 1585, vntill the 18. of Iune. 1586. at which time they departed the Countrie: sent, and directed to Sir Walter Raleigh,

2. parts of this discourse.

That I may proceede with order in this discourse, I thinke it requisite to diuide it into two partes. The first shall declare the particularities of such partes of the Countrey within the mayne, as our weake number, and supply of things necessary was inable vs to enter into the discovery thereof.

The second part, shall set downe the reasons generally mouing vs to resolue on our departure at the instant with the General Sir Francis Drake, and our common request for passage with him, when the barkes, pinnacles, and boates with the Masters and Partners ment by him to be left in the Countrie for the supply of such, as for a further time ment to haue stayed there were not to stay with company, and soule weathers: In the beginning whereof shall be declared the true nature of Pemisapan, with the Sauages of the mayne to haue cutt be off &c.

part 1

part 2

The

thence was thoye
and yet full of fl
which boat cou uen bayes at the shalow sound, (y hand) we thought

To the North
about 130. miles of the sound, and

But the Terr was for pleasan moditie of the woods of Shal

There be sum ming, to the same
lonie of the Eng

To the North
noak about 130
and the chanel
shoales.

The Coimes
The womans
vnder the terrid
into the Riuer, till it come to C minster, and L

Betweene M
high land, and th Ooanoke, and h

Choanoke it berp Coime it
uincer it selfe.

The King of wife for a Saua concerning the
also of his neigh Countrey yeeld gante me more v and Sauages th
last past 1586.

his Riuer of Ch
past our land, but his place of ter round about

Out of this I doeth to opinar
ter force of his g
houses are gar
so see,

The first part declaring the particularities of the Countrey of Virginia.

And therefore touching the particularities of the Countrey, you shall understand our discovery of the same hath bene extended from the Island of Roanoke, (the same having bene the place of our settlement or inhabitation) into the South, into the North, into the North-west, and into the West.

The uttermost place to the Southward of any discovery was Secotan, being by estimation foure score miles distant from Roanoke. The passage from thence was thoro' a broad sound within the mayne, the same being without kenning of land, and yet full of flats and shoales: we had but one boate with foure oares to passe through the same, which boate could not carry above fiftene men with their furniture, baggage, and victual for seven dayes at the most: and as for our Pinnell, besides that the yewe too deepe water for that shallow sound, he would not stirre for an oare: for these and other reasons (winter also being at hand) we thought good wholly to leaue the discovery of those partes untill our stronger supplye.

To the Northward our furthest discovery was to the Chespians, distant from Roanoke about 130. miles, the passage to it was very shallow and most dangerous, by reason of the breadth of the sound, and the litle succour that vpon any flawe was there to be had.

But the Territorie and soyle of the Chespians (being distant fiftene miles from the shore) was for pleasantnes of lease, for temperature of Climate, for fertilitie of soyle, and for the commodity of the Sea, besides multitude of beares (being an excellent good victual, with great woods of Hassackes, and Wall nut trees) is not to be excelled by any other whatsoeuer.

There be sundry Kinges, whom they call Weroances, and Countreies of great fertilitie adjoining to the same, as the Mandoages, Tripanicks, and Oposians, which all came to visit the Colonie of the English, which I had for a time appointed to be resident there.

To the North-west the farthest place of our discovery was to Choanoke distant from Roanoke about 130. miles. Our passage thither lyeth through a broad sound, but all fresh water, and the channell of great depth, nauigable for good shipping; but one of the channell full of shoales.

The Townes about the water side situated by the way, are these following: Pysshokonnok, The womans Towne, Chipanum, Weopomiok, Muscumunge, and Mattaquem: all these being vnder the iurisdiction of the king of Weopomiok, called Okisco: from Muscumunge we enter into the Riuer, and iurisdiction of Choanoke: There the Riuer beginneth to straighten vntill it come to Choanoke, and then groweth to be as narrowe as the Thames betwene Westminster, and Lambeth.

Betweene Muscumunge and Choanoke vpon the left hand as we passe thither, is a goodly high land, and there is a Towne which we called the blinde Towne, but the Sauages called it Ooanoke, and hath a very goodly corne field belonging vnto it: it is subiect to Choanoke.

Choanoke it selfe is the greatest Province and Seignorie lying vpon that Riuer, and the very Towne it selfe is able to put 700. fighting men into the fildes, besides the forces of the Province it selfe.

The King of the sayd Province is called Menatonon, a man impotent in his limbs, but otherwise for a Sauage, a very graue and wise man, and of very singular good discourse in matters concerning the state, not onely of his owne Countrey, and the disposition of his owne men, but also of his neighbours round about him as well farre as neere, and of the commodities that the Countrey yeeldeth. When I had him prisoner with me, for two dayes that we were together, he gaue me more vnderstanding and light of the Countrey then I had receiued by all the searches and saluages that before I or any of my companie had had conference with: it was in March last past 1586. Amongst other things he tolde me, that going three dayes iourney in a canoa vpon his Riuer of Choanoke, and then descending to the land, you are within foure dayes iourney to passe ouer land Northward to a certaine Kings countrey, whose Province lyeth vpon the Sea, but his place of greatest strength is an Island situate as he described vnto me in a Bay, the water round about the Island very deepe.

Out of this Bay hee signified vnto mee, that this King had so great quantitie of Pearle, and doeth so ordinarily take the same, as that not onely his owne skins that he weareth, and the better sort of his gentlemen and followers, are full set with the sayd Pearle, but also his beds, and houses are garnished with them, and that hee hath such quantitie of them, that it is a wonder to see,

The excellency of the lease of Chespians.

The Towne of Choanoke able to make 700. men of warre.

An Island in a Bay.

Pearles in exceeding quantitie.

He shewed me that the sayd King was with him at Choanoak two yeeres before, and brought him certaine Pearle, but the same of the worst sort, yet was hee faine to buy them of him for copper at a deere rate, as he thought: He gaue me a roape of the same Pearle, but they were blacke, and naught, yet many of them were very great, and a few amongst a number very orient and round, all which I lost with other things of mine, comming aboarde Sir Francis Drake his Fleete: yet he tolde me that the sayd King had great Joye of Pearle that were white, great, and round, and that his blacke Pearle his men did take out of shalowe water, but the white Pearle his men fished for in very deepe water.

It seemed to mee by his speech, that the sayd king had traffike with white men that had clothes as we haue for these white Pearle, and that was the reason that he would not depart with other then with blacke Pearles, to those of the same Countrey.

The king of Choanoak promised to giue me guides to goe ouer land into that kings Countrey whensoever I would: but he aduised me to take good store of men with mee, and good store of victuall, for he sayd, that king would be loth to suffer any strangers to enter into his Countrey, and especially to meddle with the fishing for any Pearle there, and that hee was able to make a great many of men into the fielde, which he sayd would fight very well.

Whereupon I resolued with my selfe, that if your supplie had come before the end of April, and that you had sent any store of boats, or men, to haue had them made in any reasonable time, with a sufficient number of men, and victualls to haue found vs vntill the new coyne were come in, I would haue sent a small Barke with two Spanes about by Sea to the Northward to haue found out the Bay he spake of, and to haue founded the barre if there were any, which should haue ridden there in the sayd Bay about that Island, while I with all the small boats I could make, and with two hundred men would haue gone by to the head of the Riuer of Choanoak, with the guides that Menatonon would haue giuen, which I would haue bene assured should haue bene of his best men, (for I had his best beloued sonne prisoner with me) who also should haue kept me companie in an handlocke with the rest foote by foote all the voyage ouer land.

By meaning was further at the head of the Riuer in the place of my descent where I would haue left my boates to haue rayfed a sconle with a small trench, and a pallisado vpon the top of it, in the which, and in the garde of my boates I would haue left five and thwentie, or thirtie men, with the rest would I haue marched with as much victuall as euery man could haue carried, with their furniture, mattocks, spades and axes, two dayes iourney. In the end of my marche vpon some conuenient plot would I haue rayfed another sconle according to the former, where I would haue left 15. or 20. And if it would haue fallen out conueniently, in the way I would haue raised my sayd sconle vpon some coyne fielde, that my companie might haue liued vpon it.

And so I would haue holden this course of insconing euery two dayes marche, vntill I had bene arrived at the Bay of Poxta he spake of: which finding to be worth the possession, I would there haue raised a mayne forte, both for the defence of the harboroughs, and our shipping also, and would haue reduced our whole habitation from Roanoak and from the harborough and port there (which by prooffe is very naught) vnto this other before mentioned, from whence, in the foure dayes marche before specified could I at all times returne with my companie backe vnto my boats ryding vnder my sconle, very neere wherunto directly from the West runneth a most notable Riuer, and in all those partes most famous, called the Riuer of Morotico. This Riuer openeth into the broad sound of Weopomiok: And whereas the Riuer of Choanoak, and all the other sounds, and Bayes, salt and fresh, shewe no current in the world in calme weather, but are moued altogether with the winde: This Riuer of Morotico hath so violent a current from the West and Southwest, that it made me almost of opinion that with oares it would scarce be nauigable: it passeth with many creeks and turnings, and for the space of thirtie miles rowing, and more, it is as broad as the Thames betwixt Greenwich, and the Ile of dogges, in some place more, and in some lesse: the current runneth as strong being entered so high into the Riuer, as at London bridge vpon a dale water.

And for that not onely Menatonon, but also the Sauages of Morotico themselves doe report strange things of the head of that Riuer, and that from Morotico it selfe, which is a principall Towne vpon that Riuer, it is thirtie dayes as some of them say, and some say fourette dayes voyage to the head thereof, which head they say springeth out of a maine rocke in that abundance, that forthwith it maketh a most violent strame: and further, that this huge rocke standeth neere vnto a Sea, that many times in stormes (the winde comming outwardly from the Sea) the waves thereof are beaten into the said fresh streame, so that the fresh water for a certaine space, groweth salt and brackish.

I tooke

Whether spake
M. Ralph Lane meant to reliuious.

I tooke a rest for, and sent his with two double bs, vntill we cou ther kinde of So courring more be
uing in that discou

For Pemisapa
ganimo, had giu
uing bin enforced
and yet he did ne assembly euen at the number of 30
were ioynd in th enterypise: And I found at my co
haue the better b was altogether a who sent them co side he tolde me a

Hee in like fo Riuer, and to kil
red into a leagu Riuer, and ret
much as hauing
a graine of coyne but two dayes v contrarie wildes
of our voyage in then for our copp
putting forth of all, and of mine
soothly by them,
us, and therefor
our returne hom Weopomiok in mans Towne, a

Thus much greatest number some further vic
wise to retyre ou
them to delibera
course accordin
was (and not th
pinte of coyne fo
in the companie fell out) the con
the current to c at the farthest
dayes they wou
either as friends
them selues, a bene rather of el

And that wh friendship or o corious to all and traffike by
This Wine is l

I tooke a resolution with my selfe, hauing dismissed Menatonon vpon a ranfome agreed for, and sent his sonne into the Hinnesle to Roanoak, to enter presently to sarre into that Riuer with two double wherries, and fourtie persons one of other, as I could haue victuall to carrie vs, vntill we could meete with more either of the Moratiks, or of the Mangoaks which is another kinde of Sauages, dwelling more to the Westwarde of the sayd Riuer: but the hope of recovering more victuall from the Sauages made me and my company as narrowly to escape sailing in that discouerie before our returne, as euer men did that missed the same.

For Pemisapan, who had changed his name of Wingina vpon the death of his brother Gran-ganimo, had giuen both the Choanists, & Mangoaks word of my purpose touching them, I hauing bin informed to make him priuie to y<sup>e</sup> same, to be serued by him of a guide to the Mangoaks, and yet he did neuer rest to sollicite continually my going vpon them, certifying me of a generall assembly euen at that time made by Menatonon at Choanoak of all his Weroances, & allyes to the number of 3000. bowes preparing to come vpon vs at Roanoak and that the Mangoaks also were ioynd in the same confederacie, who were able of themselves to bring as many more to the enterprise: And true it was, that at that time the assembly was holden at Choanoak about vs, as I found at my coming thither, which being vnlooked for did so dismay them, as it made vs haue the better hand at them. But this confederacie against vs of the Choanists and Mangoaks was altogether and wholly procured by Pemisapan himselfe, as Menatonon confessed vnto me, who sent them continuall word that our purpose was fully bent to destroy them: on the other side he tolde me that they had the like meaning towards vs.

Yee in like sort hauing sent word to the Mangoaks of mine intention to passe by into their Riuer, and to kill them (as he sayd) both they and the Moratiks, with whom before we were entered into a league, and they had euer dealt kindly with vs, abandoned their Townes along the Riuer, and receyued themselves with their Crencpoces; and thir come within the mapne: inso-much as hauing passed three dayes voyage by the Riuer, we could not meete a man, nor smoe a graine of corne in any their Townes: whereupon considering with my selfe, that we had but two dayes victuall left, and that wee were then 160. miles from home, besides casuallie of contrarie windes or hopes, and suspecting treason of our owne Sauages in the discouerie of our voyage intended, though we had no intention to be hurtfull to any of them, otherwise then for our copper to haue had corne of them: At night vpon the coys of garde, before the putting forth of sentinels, aduertised the whole companie of the ease wee stood in for victuall, and of mine opinion that we were betrayed by our owne Sauages, and of purpose byawen shortly by them, vpon vaine hope to be in the ende starued, seeing all the Countrey fledge before vs, and therefore while we had those two dayes victuall left, I thought it good for vs to make our returne homeward, and that it were necessarie for vs to get the other side of the sound of Weopomiok in time, where we might be releued vpon the weares of Chypanum, and the wemens Towne, although the people were fled.

Thus much I signified vnto them, as the safest way: neuerthelesse, I did referre it to the greatest number of voyces, whether we should aduenture the spending of our whole victuall in some further vielue of that most goodly Riuer in hope to meete with some better hap, or otherwise to recyue our selues backe againe: And for that they might be the better aduised, I willed them to deliberate all night vpon the matter, and in the morning at our going aboide to set our course according to the desires of the greatest part. Their resolution fully and wholly was (and not thre found to be of the contrary opinion) that whiles there was left one halfe pinte of corne for a man, that we should not leaue the search of that Riuer, and that there were in the companie two mastiues, vpon the portage of which with salfastas leaues (if the worst fell out) the companie would make shift to liue two dayes, which time would bring them downe the current to the mouth of the Riuer, and to the entrie of the sound, and in two dayes more at the farthest they hoped to crosse the sounde and to bee releued by the weares, which two dayes they would fast rather then be byawen backe a foote till they had seene the Mangoaks, either as friends or foes. This resolution of theirs did not a little please mee, since it came of them selues, although for mistrust of that which afterwards did happen, I proceeded to haue bene rather of the contrary opinion.

And that which made me most desirous to haue some doings with the Mangoaks either in friendship or otherwise to haue had one or two of them prisoners, was, for y<sup>e</sup> is it a thing most no-toxious to all y<sup>e</sup> countrey, that there is a y<sup>e</sup>rouince to the which the sayd Mangoaks haue recourse and traffike by that Riuer of Moraticco, which hath a marvellous and most strange spinerall. This y<sup>e</sup>rine is so noxious amongst them, as not onely to the Sauages dwelling by the sayd Riuer, but also

Wingina child
get his name

Their wound

is marvellous spinerall in the countrey of Chyanum Riuer, Moraticco.

and brought him for cop
were blarke,
y<sup>e</sup> orient and Drake his bice, great,
is the white
en that had depart with ings Coun good store his Coun was able to
of Apil, and time, with come in, I rde to haue rich should I could Choanoak,
ured should also should uer land,
re I would
the top of
hircie men,
aue caried,
my marhe
mer, where y I would
ed vpon it.
ncill I had n, I would
pping alls,
y and por
nce, in the backe into neth a most
This Ri
noak, and ne weather,
lent a cur
it would irricie mist ogges, in y into the ues doe re
is a princi artic dayes
abundance,
ndeth nere
the waters
e, groweth Iooke

river, and also to the Sauges of Choanoke, and all them to the westward, but also to all them of the map, the countries name is of fame, and is called Chaunis Temoatan.

The mineral they say is Walsador, which is copper, but they call by the name of Walsador currey metall whatsoeuer: they say it is of the couler of our copper, but our copper is better then theirs: and the reason is for that it is redder and harder, whereas that of Chaunis Temoatan is very soft, and pale: they say that they take the sayd metall out of a riuer that falleth very swift from the rocks, and hys, and they take it in shallowe water: the manner is this. They take a great bowle by their discretion as great as one of our targets, and wryap a skinne ouer the hollowe part thereof, leauing one part open to receiue in the mineral: that done, they watch the coming downe of the current, and the change of the couler of the water, and then suddenly chop downe the sayd bowle with the skin, and receiue into the same as much oare as will come in, which is euer as much as their bowle will hold, which presently they cast into a fire, and forthwith it melteth, and doeth peiue in 5. partes, at the first melting, two partes of metall for thre partes of oare. Of this metall the Mangoaks haue so great store, by reposit of all the sauages adioyning, that they beautifie their houses with great plates of the same: and this to be true, I receiued by reposit of all the country, and particularly by pong Skiko, the king of Choanokes sonne my prisoner, who also himselfe had bene prisoner with the Mangoaks, and set downe all the particularities to mee before mentioned: but hee had not bene at Chaunis Temoatan himselfe: for he sayd, it was twentie dayes iourney ouerlande from the Mangoaks, to the saide mineral country, and that they passeth through certaine other territories betwene them and the Mangoaks, before they came to the saide country.

Upon reposit of the premises, which I was very inquisitive in all places where I came to take very particular information of, by all the sauages that dwelt towards those parts, and especially of Menatonon himselfe, who in euery thing did very particularly informe mee, and promised mee guides of his owne men, who shoulde passe ouer with mee, euen to the sayde country of Chaunis Temoatan, (for ouer lande from Choanok to the Mangoaks is but one dayes iourney from sunne rising to sunne setting, whereas by water it is 7. dayes with the soonest.) These things I say, made me verie desirous by all meanes possible to recouer the Mangoaks, & to get some of that their copper for an assay, and therefore I willingly yielded to their resolution: but it fell out very contrarie to all expectation, and likely hood: for after two dayes trauell, and our whole victual spent, lying on shoare all night, we could neuer see man, onely fires wee might perceiue made along the shoare where we were to passe, and by into the countrey until the very last day. In the euening whereof, about thre of the clocke we heard certaine sauages call as we thought, Manteo, who was also at that time with mee in boate, whereof we all being verie glad, hoping of some friendly conference with them, and making him to answer them, they presently began a song, as we thought in token of our welcome to them: but Manteo presently betooke him to his peece, and tolde mee that they ment to fight with vs: which word was not so soone spoken by him, and the lighte hoysman ready to put to shoare, but there lighted a bolle of their arrowes amongst them in the boate, but did no hurt God be thanked to any man. Immediately the other boate lying ready with their shot to shoure the place for our hand weapons to land upon, which was presently done, although the lande was very high and steepe, the Sauges forthwith quitted the boate, and betooke themselves to flight: we landed, and hauing saye and easily followed for a small time after them, who had wooed themselves we knew not where: the sunne drawing then towards the setting, and being then assured that the next day, if wee would pursue them, though wee might happen to meete with them, yet we should bee assured to meete with none of their victuall, which we then had good cause to thinke of, therefore choosing for the companie a convenient grounde in safetie to lodge in for the night, making a strong corps of garde, and putting out good centinels, I determined the next morning before the rising of the sunne to be going backe againe, if possibly wee might recouer the mouth of the riuer into the hoad of the riuer, which at my first motion I found my whole companie ready to assent vnto: for they were now come to their dogs payreage, that they had bespoken for them selves, if that befell them which did, and I before did mistrust we should hardly escape. The ende was, we came the next day by night to the riuers mouth within 4. or 5. miles of the same, hauing rowed in one day downe the current, as much as in 4. dayes we had done against the same: we lodged upon an Islande, where wee had nothing in the world to eate but portage of salfras leaues, the like whereof for a meate was neuer bled before as I thinke. The hoad of the riuer we had to passe, the next day all fresh and falling: that day the winde blew so strongly, and the billow so great, that there was no possibilitie of passage without sinking of our boates. This was upon Easter eue,

I confesse began by the Sauages.

*The great current of the Ri-uer of Choanoke
is.*

which was fallen wee entered the
that wee had left not better to stay
The next morning

I haue set downe (as true it is) the haue persued the
of God, as a palle
in request to be in it with the most manner in the make good appar
worth the set chin

provided also to the Northward search of, and of I should haue had by some: the on ny convenient fu on of P. Harris Mexico, or els fe

And touching seeing the Saun

Therefore a four dayes iour lande though th up the riuer of M scones being set
and hoad shall heart of the map and to the like formed.

Thus fir. I h
of the gentlemen
the Ioye in his r bene performed
had provided for now at the last which cruelly the barks master, sh dusly supplied b
performed the g for some his goo

The second

uu

sonings and suc
The king w

which

which was fasted very true. Upon Easter day in the morning, the wind coming very calme, wee entered the sounde, and by 4. of the clocke we were at Clapannor, where all the Saouages that were had left there were fled, but their waters did peeble vs some fish, as God was pleased not utterly to suffer vs to be lost: for some of our companie of the light boylmen were far spent. The next morning we arrived at our home Roanoake.

I haue set downe this voyage somewhat particularly, to the ende it may appeare vnto you, (as true it is) that there wanted no great good will from the most to the least amongst vs, to haue persued this discouerie of the mine: for that the discouery of a good mine, by the good will of God, is a passage to the South sea, or some way to it, and nothing els can bring this country in request to be inhabited by our nation. And with the discouery of any of the thus above the web, it will be the most sweete, and healthfullest climate, and there withall the most fertile soyle, being manured in the world: and then will Sassafras, and many other rootes & gummes there found make good Marchandise and lauing for shipping, which otherwise of themselves will not be worth the fetching.

It is also, that there be found out a better harborough then yet there is, which must be to the Northward, if any there be, which was mine intention to haue spent this summer in the search of, and of the mine of Chawnis Temoatan: the one I would haue done, if the luckes that I should haue had of S. Francis Drake, by his honorable curtesie, had not bene giuen away by storme: the other if your supply of more men, and some other necessaries had come to vs in so very convenient sufficiency. For this riuer of Moratico promiseth great things, and by the opinion of M. Barrios the heade of it by the description of the country, either riseth from the bay of Mexico, or els from very neere vnto the same, that openeth out into the South sea.

And touching the Minerall, thus both M. Pougham affirme that though it be but copper, seeing the Saouages are able to melt it, it is one of the richest Mineralls in the world.

Wherefore a good harborough founde to the Northward, as before is sayd, and from thence some dayes ouerland, to the riuer of Choanoak soundes being rapied, from whence againe ouerland through the prouince of Choanoak one dayes voyage to the first towne of the Mangoaks by the riuer of Moratico by the way, as also vpon the sayd riuer for the defence of our boates like soundes being set, in this course of proceeding you shall cleare your selfe from all those dangers and head shallowes soundes before mentioned, and gayne within foure dayes trauell into the heart of the mayne 200. myles at the least, and so passe your discouerie into that most notable, and to the likeliest partes of the mayne, with farre greater felicitie then otherwise can be performed.

Thus sir, I haue though simply, yet truly set downe vnto you, what my labour with the rest of the gentlemen, and poore men of our companie, (not without both payne, and perill which the lord in his mercy many wayes deliuered vs from) could peeble vnto you, which might haue bene performed in some more perfection, if the lord had bene pleased that onely that which you had provided for vs had at the first bene left with vs, or that he had not in his eternall prouidence now at the last set some other course in these things, then the wisdome of man could looke into, which truly the carrying away, by a most strange, & vnlooked for storme all our provision, with barks, mastes, sparpners, and sundrie also of mine owne companie, all hauing bene so courteously supplied by the Generall S. Francis Drake, the same hauing bene most sufficient to haue performed the greatest part of the premises, must euer make me to thinke, the hand of God only, for some his good purpose to my selfe yet vnknowne, to haue bene in the matter.

The second part touching the conspiracy of Pemisapan, the discouerie of the same, and at the last, of our request to depart with S. Francis Drake for England.

WHENORE a sauage father to Pemisapan being the only friend to our nation that we had amongst them, and about the king, by the 20. of April, 1586. bee alone, had before opposed himselfe in their consultations against all matters proposed against vs, which both the king, and all the rest of them after Grange-moes death, were very willing to haue preferred. And he was not onely by the mere prouidence of God during his life, a meane to saue vs from hurt, as poore soundings and such like, but also to doe vs very great good, and singularly in this.

The king was abused and of himselfe disposed, as a ready meane to haue assuredly brought vs vs to ruins in the moneth of March, 1586, himselfe also with all his Sauages to haue runne away from vs, and to haue left his ground in the Island vnswore, which if he had done, there had bene no possibilitie in common reason, (but by the immediate hand of God) that we could haue bene preserved from staruing out of hand. For at that time wee had no wearres for sike, neither could our men skill of the making of them, neither had wee one grayne of coyne for seede to put into the ground.

In mine absence on my voyage that I had made against the Chaonists, and Mangoaks, they had raised a byutte among themselves, that I and my company were part slayne, and part starued by the Chaonists, and Mangoaks. One part of this tale was too true, that I and mine were like to be starued, but the other false.

Reuertbelesse vntill my returne, itooke such effect in Pemisapans breast, and in those against vs, that they grew not onely into contempt of vs, but also (contrary to their former reuerend opinion in the way, of the almighty God of heauen, and Iesus Christ, whome wee serue and worship, whome before they would acknowledge and confesse the onely God:) nowe they began to blaspheme, and start to say, that our Lord God was not God, since hee suffered vs to sustaine much hunger, and also to be killed of the Renapoaks, for to they call by that generall name, all the inhabitants of the whole mayne, of what prouince soeuer. Insomuch as olde Ensenore, neither any of his fellows, could for his sake haue no moze credite for vs: and it came so farre that the King was resolued to haue presently gone away as is aforesaid.

But euen in the beginning of this byutte I returned, which when hee saw contrarie to his expectation, and the aduertisement that he had receiued: that not onely my selfe, and my company were al safe, but also by report of his owne 3. sauaiges, which had bene with mee besides Manrico in that voyage, that is to say, Terepano, his sisters husband Eracano, and Cosine, that the Chaonists, and Mangoaks, (whose name, and multitude besides their valour is terrible to all the rest of the prouinces) durst not for the most part of them abide vs, and that those that did abide vs were killed, and that we had taken Menatonon prisoner, and brought his sonne that he best loued to Roanoak with me, it did not a litle allwage all deuils against vs: on the other side, it made Ensenors opinions to be receiued againe with greater respects. For hee had often before tolde them, and then renewed those his former speeches, both to the king and the rest, that wee were the seruants of God, and that wee were not subiect to be destroyed by them: but contrariwise, that they amongst them that sought our destruction, should finde their owne, and not be able to worke ours, and that we being dead men were able to doe them moze hurt, then now we could do bring aliu: an opinion very confidently at this day holden by the wisest amongst them, and of their owne men, as also, that they haue bene in the night, beeing 100. myles from any of vs in the ayre shot at, and drowen by some men of ours, that by sicknesse had dyen among them: and many of them holde opinion, that wee be dead men returned into the world againe, and that we doe not remaine dead but for a certaine time, and that then we returne againe.

All these speeches then againe grew in ful credite with them, the King and all touching vs, when hee saw the small croupe returned againe, and in that sort from those whose whole very names were terrible vnto them: but that which made by the matter on our side for that time, was an accident, yea rather, (as all the rest was) the good prouidence of the Almighty for the sauing of vs, which was this.

Within certaine dayes after my returne from the said iourney, Menatonon sent a messenger to visite his sonne the prisoner with me, and sent me certaine peece for a present, or rather as Pemisapan tolde me, for the ransom of his sonne, and therefore I refused them: but the greatest cause of his sending them, was to signifie vnto me, that hee had commaunded Okisko king of Weopomiok, to yelde himselfe seruant, and homager, to the great Weoanza of England, and after her to Sir Walter Raleigh: to persourne which commandement receiued from Menatonon, the sayd Okisko to yntely with this Menatonons messenger, sent foure and twentieth of his principallest men to Roanoak to Pemisapan, to signifie that they were ready to persourne the same, and so had sent those his men to let me knowe, that from that time forwarde hee, and his successors were to acknowledge her Maiestie their onely Soueraigne, and next vnto her, as is aforesayde.

All which being done, and acknowledged by them all, in the presence of Pemisapan his father, and all his Sauages in counsel then with him, it did for the time, shew itselfe (as it seemed) change him in disposition toward vs: Insomuch as forthwith Ensenore won this resolution of him, that out of hand he should goe about, & withall, to cause his men to fet by wearres forth: with for vs: both which he, at that present went in hand withal & did so labour the expedition of it, that

that in the end of to haue sed our besides that he g maruellous comin haue bene the be stone soye woul
which meane spa
weares should fa growing coyne, I which we very h for within few dead, but certaine Wanchese most were ready im
But that of sta
hauing made the
at Addeimocop
wanted no soye
this following.

First that Ok great quantitie o matter thus to be minde which the should haue bene ple with the Che populated to the m should interchan
haue executed mo
mayne forces of ched the rest of th broad in the Ill
was this.

Tarraquine a with twentie mo same, which they would haue befe (as it was likel hirt without ser
The same op
our better for, a
for them of the fo ber together, and pared, were a ter it in practise, sho
in the night they once being byok
that I must bee
ces to liue vpon
and other places
ing, which saplet saying vs of fill my lord Admir
pany, and also to sent master Whit
shal to liue there
the companie to

In the meane
to see his groun

that in the end of April, he had sowed a good quantitie of ground, so much as had bene sufficient, to have fed our whole company (God blessing the growth) and that by the belly for a whole yeere besides that he gave vs a certaine plot of ground for our selues to sow. All which put vs in marvellous comfort, if we could passe from Apill, vntill the beginning of July, (which was to haue bene the beginning of their harvest,) that then a newe supplie out of Englande of els our stowt store would well inough maintayne vs: All our feare was of the two moneths betwixt, to which we very hardly had escaped but onely by the bande of God, as it pleased him to try vs. For within few dayes after, as before is sayde Ensenore our friends dyed, who was no sooner dead, but certaine our great enemies about Pemisapan, as Osoan a Weroance, Tanaquiny and Wanchefe most principally, were in hand again to put their old practises in vre against vs, which were reabily imbraced, & al their former deuises against vs renewed, & new brought in question.

The beginning of their harvest in June.

But that of staruing vs, by their forbearing to sow, was broken by Ensenore in his life, by hauing made the king all at one instant to sowe his grounde not onely in the Islande but also at Addefmocoepia in the mayne, within two leagues ouer against vs. Neuertheless there wanted no store of mischeuous practises among them, and of all they resolued principally of this following.

First that Okisko, king of Weopomiok, with the Mandoages, should bee moued, and with great quantitie of copper intertapped to the number of seuen, or 800 bowes to the enterpryse the matter thus to be ordered. They of Weopomiok should be inuited to a certaine kind of moneths rinde which they do vse to solemnise in their Sauage maner for any great personage dead, and should haue bene for Ensenore. At this instant also should the Mandoaks, who were a great people with the Chelapians, and their friends to the number of 700, of them to be armed at a day appointed to the mayne of Addefmocoepio, and there lying close at the signe of spers, which should interchangeably be made on both sides, whil Pemisapan with his troupe about named should haue executed me, and some of our Weroances (as they called all our principall officers,) the mayne forces of the rest should haue come ouer into the Island where they ment to haue dispatched the rest of the company, whome they did imagine to kinde both dismayed and dispersed a boarde in the Islande seeking of crabs, and fish to liue withall. The manner of their enterpryse was this.

The confederate of Pemisapan.

Tarraquine and Andacon two principall men about Pemisapan, and very lustie fellows with twentie more appointed to them had the charge of my person to see an order taken for the same, which they ment should in this sort haue bene executed. In the dead time of the night they would haue bett my house, and put fire in the reedes, that the same was couered with: meaning (as it was like) that my selfe would haue come running out of a sudden amazed in my shirt without armes, vpon the instant whereof they would haue knocked out my braines.

The same order was giuen to certaine of his fellowes, for W. Herrlots: so for all the rest of our better sort, all our houses at one instant being set on fire as afore is sayde, and that as well for them of the forte, as for vs at the towne. Now to the end that we might be the fewer in number together, and so be the more easilie dealt withall (for in deebe ten of vs with our armes prepared, were a terrour to a hundred of the best sort of them,) they agreed and did immediatly put it in practise, that they should not for any copper, sell vs any victuals whatsoeuer: besides that in the night they should send to haue our weares robbed, and also to cause them to be broken and once being broken neuer to be repaired againe by them. By this meane the King stood assured, that I must bee enforced for lacke of sustenance, there to disband my company into sundry places to liue vpon shell fishes, for so the Sauages themselves vor, going to Onorasco, Crotoan, and other places fishing and hunting, while their grounds be in sowing, and their coyn growing, which layed not his expectation, for the famine grew so extreme among vs, our weares sapling vs of fish, that I was enforced to send captaine Stafford with 20. with him to Crotoan my lord Admirals Island to ferue two turnes in one, that is to say to seepe himselfe, and his company, and also to keepe watch, if any shipping came vpon the coast to waerne vs of the same. I sent matter Widiour with the Wynnelle to Otterasco, and ten with him, with the Wronost Wathal to liue there, and also to waite for shipping: also I sent every weeke 16. or 20. of the rest of the companie to the mayne ouer against vs, to liue of Casada, and oysters.

The sufficient of our men to deale against the Sauages, 10. or 100.

The Sauges liue by fishing, and hunting, and barter.

In the meane while Pemisapan went of purpose to Addefmocoepio for 3. causes, the one, to see his grounds there broken by, and sowed for a second crosse: the other to withdrawe himselfe selfe from my daily sending to him for supply of victuall for my company, for hee was afraid to denie me any thing, neither durst he in my presence but by colours, and with excuses, which I was content to accept for the time, meaning in the end as I had reason, to giue him the iump once for all: but in the meane whiles, as I had euer done before, I and mine bare all wrongs, and accepters of all excuses.

My purpose was to haue helped my selfe with Menatonon, and the Chaonists, who in truth as they are more valiant people and in greater number then the rest, so are they more faithfull in their promises, and since my late being there, had giuen many tokens of earnest desire they had to sojourn in perfect league with vs, and therefore were greatly offended with Pemisapan and Weopomiok for making him beleue such tales of vs.

The third cause of his going to Adelsmocopecio was to dispatch his messengers to Weopomiok, and to the Mandoags, as aforesaid, al which he did with great impresse of copper in hand, making large promises to them of greater spoyle.

They answered within fewe dayes after, came from Weopomiok, which was deuised into two parts. First for the King Okisko, who demped to be of þ partie for himselfe, or any of his especial followers, and therefore did immediately rettye himselfe with his foer into the mayne: the other was concerning the rest of the sayd yrounce who accepted of it: and in like sort the Mandoags receiued the impresse.

The day of their assembly aforesaid at Roanoak, was appoynted the 10. of July: all which the premises were discovered by Skycco, the king Menaronon his sonne my prisoner, who hauing once attempted to run away, I laid him in the bylboes, the aiming to cut off his head, whome I remitted at Pemisapans request: whereupon he being perswaded that he was our enemy to the death, he did not only seeke him with himselfe, but also made him acquainted with all his practises. On the other side, the yong man finding himself as well vsed at my hand, as I had meane to shew, and that all my companie made much of him, he stally discovered al vnto me, which also afterwards was revealed vnto me by one of Pemisapans own men. þ night before he was slaine.

These mischiefes being al instantly vpon mee, and my companie to be put in execution, stood mee in hand to study how to preuent them, and also to saue all others, which were at that time as aforesaid so farre from me: whereupon I sent to Pemisapan to put suspicion out of his heade, that I ment presently to goe to Crotoan, for that I had heard of the arrival of our flette, (though I in truth had neither heard nor hoped for so good aduerture,) and that I meant to come by him, to boyrw of his men to sith for my company, and to hunt for me at Crotoan, as also to buy some foure dayes provision to serue for my boyage.

He sent mee word that he would himselfe come ouer to Roanoak, but from day to day hee deferred, only to bring the Weopomioks with him, and the Mandoags, whose time appoynted was within 8. dayes after. It was the last of May, 1586. when all his owne sauages began to make their assembly at Roanoak, at his commandement sent aboad vnto them, and I resolved not to stay longer vpon his comming ouer, since he ment to come with so good company, but thought good to go, and visite him with such as I had, which I resolved to do the next day: but that night I went by the way to giue them in the Island a Canuisado, and at the instant to seafe vpon all the Canoas about the Island to keepe him from aduertisements.

But the towne tooke the allarum, before I ment it to them: the occasion was this. I had sent the Master of the light boylmen with a few with him, to gather by all the Canoas in the setting of the sunne, & to take as many as were going from vs to Adelsmocopecio, but to suffer any that came from thence to land: he met with a Canoa, going from the shoare, and ouerthrew the Canoa, and cut off 2. sauages heads: this was not done so secretly but hee was discovered from the shoare, whereupon the cry arose: for in truth they pyiue to their owne villanous purposes against vs, held as good spial vpon vs, both day and night, as we did vpon them.

The allarum giuen, theyooke themselves to their bowes, and we to our armes: some thre or foure of them at the first were slayne with our shot, the rest fled into þ woods: The next morning with the light boylmen, & one Canoa, taking 25. with the Colonel of the Chesepians, and the Seriant maio, I went to Adelsmocopecio, and being landed sent Pemisapan word by one of his owne sauages that met me at the shoare, that I was going to Crotoan, and ment to take him in the way to complaine vnto him of Osocon, who the night past was conueying away my prisoner, whom I had there yettent tied in an handlocke: hereupon the king did abode my comming to him, and sending my selfe amidst 7. or 8. of his principal Weroances, & followers, (not regarding any of the common foie) I gaue the watchword agreed vpon, (which was Chiff our victory) and immediately chose his chiefe men, and himselfe, had by the mercie of God for our deliuerance,

The slaughter, and surpris
of the Pa
nages.

uerance, that which well with a pistoll
sons friends, as the stay as though he way shot thwart th
ung me, one Ruge stooke him, and 2
ligent to haue bene Pemisapans head in

This fell out the captaine Stafford, 23. sailes: but when upon as good good

The 9. of the said day travelled by la gentleman that we forme any seruite

He brought me
nourable offer for two, and that not they also by him to

The 10. day he
the 11. day I came ting and message
the captaine of his

With such than the matter desire pared what I wou gland a number of place of them th

That he would would carry me and of needfull provis

That it would England when it any and especially

Also for a suppl
He hauing rece ment (as it was such of my officer

him, which were he appointed fo
sent order for maunds whatsoe

An d further a forme all his foim sicient experimen
with very sufficie action, as I sho

England agayne sith Werne.

While these ch
hooy, my sayd m
and mine owne of
by the said Gener
sorne, and contin
his holy hand oue
bout my dispatch

uerance, that which they had purposed for vs. The king himselfe being shot thozow by the Colonnell with a pistol lying on the ground for dead, & I looking as watchfull for the sauing of Mans friends, as others were busie that none of the rest should escape, suddenly he started vp, and ran away as though he had not bene touched, in somuch as he ouertan all the companie, being by the way shot thwart the buttocks by mine Irish boy with my Detronell. In the end an Irishman seeing me, one Nugent and the deputie yrouost undertooke him, and following him in the woods ouertooke him, and I in some doubt least we had lost both the king, and my man by our owne negligence haue bene intercepted by the Sauages, we met him returning out of the woods with Pemilapans head in his hand, Pemilapan name.

This fell out the first of June, 1686, and the 8. of the same came aduertisement to me from captain Steafford, lying at my lord Admirals Island, that he had discovered a great flecte of 23. sailes: but whether they were friends or foes, he could not yett discern, he aduisd me to stand upon as good gard as I could.

The 9. of the said month, he himselfe came vnto me, hauing that night before, and that same day trauelled by land 20. miles, and I must truly rejoyt of him from the first to the last, he was the gentleman that neuer spared labour or perill either by land or water, faire weather or foul, to performe any seruice committed vnto him.

He brought me a letter from the Generall Sir Francis Drake, with a most bountifull and honourable offer for the supplie of our necessitics to the performance of the action, we were entered into, and that not onely of victuals, munition and clothing, but also of barkes, pinnaces and boates, they also by him to be victualled, manned, and furnished to my contentation.

A letter from Sir Francis Drake.

The 10. day hee arrived in the road of our bad harborough, and comming there to an anchor, the 11. day I came to him, whom I found in words most honourably to performe that which in writing and message he had most curteously offered, he hauing aforehand propounded the matter to all the captains of his flecte, and got their liking and consent thereto.

With such thanks vnto him and his captaines for his care both of vs and of our action, not as the matter deserued, but as I could both for my companie and my selfe, I (being aforehand) prepared what I would desire, craued at his hands that it would please him to take with him into England a number of weake, and unfit men for my good action, which I would deliuer to him, and in place of them to supply me of his companie, with oare men, artificers, and others.

1

That he would leaue vs so much shipping and victuall, as about August then next following, would cary me and all my companie into England, whē we had discovered some what that for lacke of needfull provision in time left with vs as yet remained undone.

2

That it would please him withall to leaue some sufficient masters not onely to cary vs into England when time should be, but also to search the coast for some better harborow if there were any and especially to helpe vs to some small boats and oare men.

3

Also for a supplie of calliciers, handweapons, match and lead, cooles, apparell, and such like.

4

He hauing receiued these my requests according to his vsuall commendable manner of gouernement (as it was told me) calling his captaines to counsell, the resolution was that I should send such of my officers of my companie, as I used in such matters, with their notes to goe aboard with him, which were the master of the victuals, the keeper of the store, and the Uicetreasurer, to whom he appointed forthwith for me the Francis, being a very proper barke of 70. tunnes, and tooke present order for bringing of victuall aboard her for 100. men for foure moneths withall my other demaunds whatsoever, to the vetermost.

And further appointed for me two fine pinnaces, and 4. small boats, and that which was to performe all his former liberalitie towards vs, was that he had gotten the full assentes of two of as sufficient experimentered masters as were any in his flecte, by iudgement of them that knewe them, with very sufficient grings to carie with mee, and to employ themselves most earnestly in the action, as I should appoynt them, untill the terme which I promised of our returne into England againe. The names of one of those masters was Abraham Kendall, the other Griffith Perne.

While these things were in hand, the provision afore sayd being brought, and in bringing a boord, my sayd masters being also gone aboard, my sayd barkes hauing accepted of their charge, and mine owne officers with others in like sort of my companie with the, all which was dispatched by the said Generall the 12. of the said month: the 13. of the same there arose such an unwanted storme, and continued foure dayes that had like to haue diuient all on shore, if the Lord had not held his holy hand ouer them, and the generall very prouidently foresene the worst himselfe, then about my dispatch putting himselfe aboard: but in the ende hauing diuient sundry of the flecte to put to sea the Francis also with all my provisions, my two masters, and my companie aboard, shee was scene to be free from the same, and to put cleare to sea.

¶ F. F. ¶

This voye having continued from the 13. to the 16. of the month, and thus my barke put away as aforesaid, the Generall comming a shoye, made a new proffer to me, which was a shippe of 170. tunnes, called the Barke Bonner, with a sufficient master and guide to carie with mee the time appointed, and victualled sufficiently to carie mee and my companie thro England with all provisions as before: but hee tolde mee that hee would not for any thing undertake to haue her brought into our harbour, and therefore hee was to leaue her in the roade, and to leaue the care of the rest vnto my selfe, and aduised mee to consider with my companie of our case, and to deliuer presently vnto him in writing, what I would require him to doe for vs: which being within his power, hee did assure me as well for his Captaines, as for himselfe should be most willingly performed.

Thereupon calling such Captaines and Gentlemen of my companie as then were at hand, who were all as pituie as my selfe to the Generals offer, their whole request was to mee, that considering the case that we stood in, the weakenesse of our companie, the small number of the same, the carping away of our first appointed barke, with those two especiall masters, with our principall provisions in the same, by the very hand of God as it seemed, stretched out to take vs from thence: considering also, that his second offer, though most honourable of his part, yet of ours not to be taken, inasmuch as there was no possibilitie for her with any safetie to be brought into the harbours: Seeing furthermore our hope for supplie with Sir Richard Grenuill to be undoubtedly promised vs before Easter, not yet come, neither then likely to come this yeere considering the doings in England for Flaunders, as also for America, that therefore I would resolve my selfe, with my companie to goe into England in that Fleet, and accordingly to make request to the Generall in all our names, that he would be pleased to giue vs present passage with him. Which request of ours by my selfe deliuered vnto him, hee most readily assented vnto, and so hee sending immediately his pinnaces vnto our Island for the fetching away of fewe that there were left with our baggage, the weather was so boysterous, and the pinnaces so often on ground, that the most of all wee had, with all our Cartes, Bookes and writings, were by the Seaplers cast our board, the greater number of the Fleet being much grieued with their long and dangerous abode in that miserable roade.

From whence the Generall in the name of the Almighty, waiping his ankers (hauing bestowed vs among his Fleet) for the reliefe of whom hee had in that voye sustained moze perill of wrecke then in all his former most honourable actions against the Spaniards, with praises vnto God for all, set saile the 19. of June, 1586, and arriued in Portesmouth, the 27. of Iulie the same yeere.

The third voyage made by a Ship, sent in the yeere 1586.

to the reliefe of the Colonie planted in Virginia, at the sole charges of Sir Walter Raleigh.

In the yeere of our Lord, 1586. Sir Walter Raleigh at his owne charge prepared a ship of 100. tunnes, freighted with all maner of things in most plentifull maner for the supplie and relief of his Colonie then remaining in Virginia: but before they set saile from England, it was after Easter, so that our Colonie halfe disappointed of the comming of any supplie, wherefore euery man prepared for himselfe, determining resolutely to spend the residue of their life time in that countrey, and for the better performance of this their determination, they sowed, planted, and set such things as were necessarie for their reliefe in so plentifull a manner, as might haue sufficed them two yeeres without any further labor: thus trusting to their owne harvest they passed the summer till the tenth of June, at which time their cozne which they had sowed was within one fortnight of reaping, but then it happened, that Sir Francis Drake in his prosperous returne from the sacking of Saint Domingo, Cartagena, and Saint Augulines determined in his way homeward to visit his countrymen the English Colonie then remaining in Virginia: so passing along the coastes of Florida, he fell with the partes, where our English Colony inhabited, and hauing espied some of that companie, there he ankered, and went alande where he conferred with them of their state and welfare, and howe thinges had past with them: they answered him that they liued all, but hitherto in some scarcitie, and as yet could be here of no supplie out of England: therefore they requested him that he would leaue with them some two or thre shippes, that if in some some reasonable time bee agreed to: while thers making rejoy

board, a great stop
shippes, at that inst
bated to chost thre behinde, left all thin
mie, and no doubt li rages committed by

Immediately after the shippe about me direction, arriued a Countrie, and not f

About foureene Grindfield Genera
voyage arriued ther any newes of our C ling by into diuers long left there by couer some places o
them, and finding o
of the Countrie, wh leau some men bet
the Ile of Roanoake
partes for England

Not long after he led the Townes of a ardest with these, a homeward, he retur

A briefe and t commodities

Writen

Rafe Lan
of the C T

Thus much vpon m in this treatise by th nesse then learning with the credite of mine owne part I a tie thereof assured
the same. Farewel some reasonable time they heard not out of England, they might then return themselves which bee agreed to: whilst some were then writing their letters to send into England, and some others making responses of the accidents of their travels each to other, some on land, some on boord, a great Storme arose, and dyoue the most of their fleet from their anchors to sea, in which shippes, at that instant were the chiefest of the English Colony: the rest on land perceiving this, hasted to those three sayles which were appointed to be left there, and for feare they should be left behinde, left all things so confusedly, as if they had bene chased from thence by a mightie armie, and no doubt so they were, for the hande of God came vpon them for the crueltie, and outrages committed by some of them against the native inhabitants of that Countrey.

Immediately after the departing of our English Colonie out of this paradise of the worlde, <sup>Item.</sup> the shippe above mentioned went, and set forth at the charges of Sir Walter Raleigh, and his direction, arrived at Hatorask, who after some time spent in seeking our Colony by in the Countrey, and not finding them, returned with all the aforesayd provision into England.

About fourteene or fiftene daies after the departure of the aforesayd shippe, Sir Richard <sup>Sir Richard</sup> Grindfield Generall of Virginia, accompanied with three shippes well appointed for the same <sup>Grindfield's</sup> voyage arrived there, who not finding the aforesayd shipp according to his expectation, nor hearing <sup>voyage.</sup> any newes of our English Colony, there seated, and left by him, Anno 1585. him selfe traual-ling by into diuers places of the Countrey, as well to see if he could here any newes of the Colony left there by him the yere before, vnder the charge of Master Lane his deputie, as also to dis-couer some places of the Countrey: but after some time spent therein not hearing any newes of them, and finding the place which they inhabited desolate, yet unwilling to loose the possession of the Countrey, which Englishmen had so long held: after good deliberation he determined to leaue some men behinde to retaine possession of the Countrey: whereupon he landed 15. men in the Ile of Roanoake furnished plentifully with all maner of provision for two yeres, and so departed for England.

Not long after he fell with the Isles of Açores, on some of which Ilandes he landed, and spoy-led the Townes of all such things as were worthy cartiage, where also he tooke diuers Sump-ardes with these, and many other employes done by him in this voyage, as well outwarde as homeward, he returned into England,

A briefe and true report of the new found land of Virginia: of the commodities there found and to be raised, as well merchantable as others:

Written by Thomas Harriot, seruauant to Sir Walter Raleigh, a member of the Colonie, and there employed in discovering, a full tweluemonth.

Rafe Lane one of her Maiesties Equieres and Gouvernour of the Colonie in Virginia above mentioned for the time there resident, To the gentle Reader, witheth all happinesse in the Lord.

Lbeit (gentle Reader) the credite of the reports in this treatise contained, can little be furthered by the testimonie of one as my selfe, through affection iudged partiall, though without desert: Neuerthelesse, forsomuch as I haue bene requested by some my particular friends, who conceiue more rightly of me, to deliuer freely my knowledge of the same, not onely for the satisfying of them, but also for the true information of any other who soeuer, that comes not with a preiudicate minde to the reading thereof:

Thus much vpon my credite I am to affirme, that things vniuersally are so truly set downe in this treatise by the authour thereof, an Actor in the Colonie and a man no lesse for his honestie then learning commendable, as that I dare boldly auouch, it may very well passe with the credite of truth: euen amongst the most true relations of this age. Which as for mine owne part I am ready any way with my worde to acknowledge, so also (of the certaintie thereof assured by mine owne experience) with this my publique assertion, I doe affirme the same. Farewell in the Lord.

To the Aduenturers, Fauourers, and Welwillers of the enterprife for the inhabiting and planting in Virginia.

Since the first undertaking by Sir Walter Raleigh to deale in the action of discovering of that Countrey which is now called and known by the name of Virginia, many voyages having bene thither made at sundry times to his great charge, as first in the yeere 1584. and afterwards in the yeeres 1585, 1586, and now of late this last yeere of 1587. There have bene diuers and variable reportes, with some flaunderous and shamefull speaches byuited abroad by many that returned from thence. Especially of that discoverie which was made by the Colonie transported by Sir Richard Grenuill in the yeere 1585. being of all the others the most principall and as yet of most effect, the time of their abode in the countrey being a whole yeere, when as in the other voyage before they staid but fixe weekes, and the others after were onely for supplie and transportation, nothing more being discovered then had bene before. Which reportes haue not done a litle wrong to many that otherwise would haue also fauoured and aduentured in the action, to the honour and benefite of our nation, besides the particular profite and credite which would rebound to themselves the dealers therein, as I hope by the sequell of euents to the shame of those that haue annoyed the contrary shall be manifest, if you the aduenturers, fauourers and welwillers doe but either increase in number, or in opinion continue, or hauing bene doubtfull, renew your good liking and furtherance to deale therein according to the truth which thereof already found, and as you shall understand hereafter to be requisite. Touching which truth which through cause of the diuersitie of relations and reportes, many of your opinions could not be firme, nor the mindes of some that are well disposed, be settled in any certaintie.

I haue therefore thought it good beyng one that haue bene in the discoverie, and in dealing with the naturall inhabitants specially employed: and hauing therefore seene and knowne more then the ordinarie, to impart so much unto you of the fruits of our labours, as that you may knowe how inuiciously the enterprife is flaundered, and that in publique maner at this present, chiefly by two respects.

First, that some of you which are yet ignorant or doubtfull of the state thereof, may see that there is sufficient cause why the chief enterpriser with the fauour of her Spasitie, notwithstanding such reportes, hath not onely since continued the action by sending into the countrey againe, and replanting this last yeere a new Colonie, but is also ready according as the time and means will allow, to follow and prosecute the same.

Secondly, that you seeing and knowing the continuance of the action, by the title hereof you may generally knowe and learne what the countrey is, and thereupon consider how your dealing therein if it proceed, may returne you profite and gaine, be it either by inhabiting and planting, or otherwise in furthering thereof.

And least that the substance of my relation should be doubtfull unto you, as of others by reason of their diuersitie, I will first open the cause in a few words wherof they are so different, referring my self to your fauourable constructions, and to be aduinged of as by good consideration you shall find cause.

Of our companie that returned some for their misdeameour and ill dealing in the countrey, haue bene there woorthily punished, who by reason of their bad natures, haue maliciously not onely spoken ill of their Gouernours, but for their sakes flaundered the countrey it selfe. The like also haue those done which were of their consort.

Some being ignorant of the state thereof, notwithstanding since their returne amongst their friends and acquaintance, and also others, especially if they were in companie where they might not be gainesayd, would seeme to knowe so much as no men more, and make no men so great trauellers as themselves. They spooke so much, as it may seeme, vpon their credite and reputation, that hauing bene a twelue moneth in the countrey, it would haue bene a great disgrace vnto them as they thought, if they could not haue sayd much whether it were true or false. Of which some haue spoken of more then euer they sawe, or otherwise knewe to be there: Other some haue not bene ashamed to make absolute denial of that, which all though not by them, yet by others is most certainly and there plentifully knowen, and other some make difficulties of those things they haue no skill of.

The cause of their ignorance was, in that they were of that many, that were neuer out of the Island where wee were seated, or not farre, or at the least wise in few places els, during the time of our abode in the countrey, or of that many, that after golde and siluer was not so found, found, as it was by the lies, or of that many who needfull or requisite.

Some also were who had seene the world by houses, not at their own or leathers, the countrey.

Because my purpose particularities of them by our owne countrey on, I meane not to trouble I haue to make relation.

The treatise wherof these speciall partes, or to be raised, which planters and inhabitors provided, as by way of your selues the profit greatly profite our other haue bene saue to purchase, I call Merchandise.

In the second, I hence both yeeld of it to inhabitants of the countrey.

In the last part I like to remember, and know of, which speciall description of the natur like of grass blades who to be strip two foote selfe same climate as into Europe are made therwise, but that so great use and ending and planting it is. Although notwithstanding naturally and wild, found to be excellent Worme Silke. It as our ordinarie elsewhere to be in the heed and nourish the others fit for them in fully gathered and by rise as great profit in ans and Spaniards.

The

Flaxe and Hemp one place together, but euer the lease and it is altogether as good experience of the so it will growe there there is so much grow found, as it was by them looked for, had little or no care of any other thing but to pamper their bellies, of that many which had little understanding, lesse discretion, and more tongue then was needfull of requisite.

Some also were of a nice binging vp, only in cities or townes, of such as neutr (as I may say) had seene the world before. Because there were not to be found any English cities, nor such faire houses, nor at their owne wish any of their old accustomed daintie food, nor any soft beds of downe or feathers, the countrey was to them miserable, and their reproes thereof according.

Because my purpose was but in brieve to open the cause of the varietie of such speeches, the particularities of them, and of many envious, malicious and slanderous reports and deuises els, by our owne countrey men besides, as trifles that are not woorthie of wise men to bee thought upon, I meane not to trouble you withal, but will passe to the commodities, the substance of that which I haue to make relation of vnto you.

The treatise whereof for your more readie view and easier vnderstanding, I will diuise into three speciall partes. In the first I will make declaration of such commodities there already found or to be raised, which will not onely serue the opbinarie turnes of you which are and shall be the planters and inhabitants, but such an ouerplus sufficiently to be peeled, or by men of skill to be provided, as by way of traffique and exchange with our owne nation of England, will enrich your selues the merchants: those that shall deale with you, the enterprisers in generall, and greatly profite our owne countrey men, to supplie them with most things which heretofore they haue bene faine to provide either of strangers or of our enemies, which commodities for distinction sake, I call Merchantable.

In the second, I will set downe all the commodities which we know the countrey by our experience doeth yeeld of it selfe for vituall and sustenance of mans life, such as is usually sed vpon by the inhabitants of the countrey, as also by vs during the time we were there.

In the last part I will make mention generall of such other commodities besides, as I am able to remember, and as I shall thinke behoouefull for those that shall inhabit, and plant there to know of, which speciall concerne building, as also some other necessarie uses: with a brieve description of the nature and manners of the people of the countrey.

The first part of Merchantable commodities.

Silke of grasse, or grasse Silke. There is a kinde of grasse in the countrey, vpon the blades whereof there groweth very good Silke in foyme of a thinn glittering skinne to bee stript off. It groweth two foote and an halfe high or better: the blades are about two foote in length, and halfe inche broad. The like groweth in Persia, which is in the selfe same climate as Virginia, of which very many of the Silke workes that come from thence into Europe are made. Whereof if it be planted and ordered as in Persia, it cannot in reason be otherwise, but that there will rise in short time great profite to the dealers therein, seeing there is so great vie and want thereof as well in our countrey as elsewhere. And by the meanes of sowing and planting it in good ground, it will be farre greater, better, and more plentifull then it is. Although notwithstanding there is great store thereof in many places of the countrey growing naturallly and wild, which also by prooue here in England, in making a peece of silke Crogram, we found to be excellent good.

Worme Silke. In many of our iourneys wee found Silke wormes faire and great, as big as our ordinarie Walnuts. Although it hath not bene our happe to haue found such plentie as elsewhere to be in the countrey wee haue heard of, yet seeing that the countrey doeth naturallie breed and nourish them, there is no doubt but if Art be added in planting of Mulberrie trees and others fit for them in commodious places, for their feeding and nourishing, and some of them carefully gathered and husbanded in that sort, as by men of skill is knowen to be necessarie: there will rise as great profit in time to the Virginians, as thereof doeth now to the Persians, Turkes, Italians and Spaniards.

Flaxe and Hemp. The truth is, that of Hemp and Flaxe there is no great store in any one place together, by reason it is not planted but as the soyle doeth yeeld of it selfe: and how so euer the lease and Stamme of flaxe doe differ from ours, the flaxe by iudgement of men of skill is altogether as good as ours. And if not, as further prooue should finde otherwise, we haue the experience of the soyle, as that there cannot bee shewed any reason to the contrary, but that it will growe there excellent well, and by planting will bee yeelded plentifully, seeing there is so much ground whereof some may well be applied to such purposes. What benefice that yeeld also white graines of metall, which is to be deemed silver. For confirmation whereof, at the time of our first arrivall in the countrey, I saw with some others with me, two small pieces of silver grossly beaten, about the weight of of a testrone, hanging in the eares of a Wiroans or Chiefe Lord that dwelt about fourescore miles from vs: of whom through enquiry, by the number of bapes & the way, I learned that it had come to his hands from the same place or neere, where I after understood the copper was made, and the white graines of metall found. The aforesaid copper we also found by triall to holde silver.

Pearle: Sometimes in feeding on muscles we found some pearle: but it was our happy to meet with ragges; of a yvde colour: not having yet discovered those places where we heard of better and more plenty. One of our company, a man of skill in such matters, had gathered together from among the Savage people about five thousand: of which number he chose so many as made a fayre chaine, which for theyr likenesse and unifomyty in roundnesse, orientnesse, and yvdenesse of many excellent colours, with equallite in great alle, were very fayre and rare: and had therefore bene presented to her Majesty, had we not by casualty and through extremity of a storme lost them, with many things els in comming away from the countrey.

Sweet gummies of divers kindes, and many other Apothecary drugges, of which we will make speciall mention, when we shall receive it from such men of skill in that kinde, that in taking reasonable paines shall discoure them more particularly then we have done, and then now I can make relation of, for want of the examples I had provided and gathered, and are now lost, with other things by casualty before mentioned.

Dyes of divers kindes: There is Shoemake well knowne, and used in England for blacke: the seed of an herbe called Wasebur, little small roots called Chappacor, and the bark of the tree called by the inhabitants Tangomockonomindge: which Dyes are for divers sorts of red: theyr goodnesse for our English clothes remaine yet to be pproved. The inhabitants use them only for the dying of hayre, and colouring of theyr faces, and mantles made of Deere skimes: and also for the dying of rushes to make artificiall woorks withall in theyr mats and baskets: having no other thing besides that they account of, apt to use them for. If they will not pprove merchantable, there is no doubt but the planters there shall finde apt uses for them, as also for other colours which we know to be there.

Wood: a thing of so great bent and uses amongst English Diers, which can not be yeilded sufficiently in our owne countrey for spare of ground, may be planted in Virginia, there being ground enough. The growth thereof neede not to be doubted, when as in the Islands of the Azores it groweth plentifully, which is in the same climate. So likewise of Madder.

We carped thither Sugar canes to plant, which being not so well preferred as was requisite, and besides the time of the yeere being past for theyr setting when we arrived, we could not make that proove of them as we desired. Notwithstanding, seeing that they grow in the same climate, in the South part of Spaine, and in Barbary, our hope in reason may yet continue. So likewise for Oranges and Limmons: there may be planted also Quinsles. Whereby may grow in reasonable time if the action be diligently prosecuted, no small commodities in Sugers, Suckets, and Marmelades.

Many other commodities by planting may there also be raised, which I leave to your discreet and gentle considerations: and many also may be there, which yet we have not discovered. Two more commodities of great value, one of certainty, and the other in hope, not to be planted, but there to be raised, and in short time to be provided and prepared, I might have specified. So likewise of those commodities already set downe, I might have said more: as of the particular places where they are found, and best to be planted and prepared: by what meanes, and in what reasonable space of time they might be raised to profit, and in what proportion: but because others then we ourselves might be therewithall acquainted, not to the good of the action, I have willingly omitted them: knowing that to those that are well disposed, I have uttered according to my promise and purpose, for this part sufficient.

The

The second part of such commodities as Virginia is known to yeeld, for victuall and sustenance of mans life, vsually fed vpon by the naturall inhabitants : as also by vs, during the time of our aboad. And first of such as are sowed and husbanded.

PAgatowr, a kinde of graine so called by the inhabitants : the same in the West Indies is called Mayze : English men call it Guinney wheat, or Turkie wheat, according to the names of the countries from whence the like hath been brought. The graine is about the bignesse of our ordinary English pease, and not much different in forme and shape : but of diuers colours : some white, some red, some yellow, and some blew. All of them yeeld a very white and sweete floure : being vsed according to his kinde, it maketh a very good bread. We made of the same in the countrey some maile, whereof was buyed as good ale as was to be desired. So likewise by the helpe of hops, thereof may be made as good beere. It is a graine of marvellous great increase : of a thousand, sicken hundred, and some two thousand foide. There are three sorts, of which two are ripe in elcuen and twelue weeks at the most, sometimes in tenne, after the time they are set, and are then of height in stalk about sixe or seuen foot. The other sort is ripe in fouretee, and is about tenne foot high, of the stalks, some beare foure heads, some thre, some one, and two : euery head containing siue, siue, or seuen hundred grains, within a few moze or lesse. Of these graines, besides bread, the inhabitants make victuall, either by parching them, or seething them whole vntill they be broken : or boiling the floure with water into a paype.

Okindgier, called by vs Beanes, because in greatnesse and partly in shape they are like to the beanes in England, saying that they are flatter, of moze diuers colours, and some pide. The lease also of the stamme is much different. In taste they are altogether as good as our English pease.

Wickonzowr, called by vs Peaze, in respect of the beanes for distinction sake, because they are much lesse, although in forme they little differ: but in goodnesse of taste much like, and are farre better then our English pease. Both the beanes and peaze are ripe in tenne weeks after they are set. They make them victuall either by boiling them all to peeces into a broth, or boiling them whole vntill they be soft, and begin to breake, as is vsed in England, either by themselves, or mixtly together : sometime they mingle of the wheat with them : sometime also, being to whole sodden, they buye or punne them in a moyter, and thereof make loaves or lumps of doctish bread, which they vse to eat for variety.

Macoquer, according to theyr seuerall formes, called by vs Pompions, Mellions, and Gourds, because they are of the like formes as those kinbes in England. In Virginia such of seuerall formes are of one taste, and very good, and do also spring from one seed. There are of two sorts : one is ripe in the space of a moneth, and the other in two moneths.

There is an herbe which in Dutch is called Melden. Some of those that I describe it vnto, take it to be a kinde of Oyage : it groweth about foure or siue foot high : of the seed thereof they make a thicke broth, and portage of a very good taste : of the stalks by burning into ashes they make a kinde of salt earth, wherewithall many vse sometimes to season theyr broths : other salt they know not. We our selues vse the leaues also for potherbs.

There is also another great herbe, in forme of a Parigolde, about sixe foot in height, the head with the floure is a stamme in byrdth. Some take it to be Planta Solis : of the seeds hereof they make both a kinde of bread and broth.

All the aforesaid commodities for victuall are set or sowed, sometimes in grounds apart and seuerally by themselves, but by the most part together in one ground mixtly : the manner thereof, with the dressing and preparing of the ground, because I will note vnto you the fertilitye of the soile, I thinke good by this to describe.

The ground they neuer fatten with mucke, doong, or any other thing, neither plow nor digge it as we in England, but onely prepare it in sort as followeth. A fewe dayes before they sowe or set, the men with wooden instruments, made almost in forme of mattocks or hoes with long handles : the women with those peckers or parers, because they vse them sitting, of a foot long and about siue inches in byrdth, doe ouerly breake the vpper part of the ground to rayse by the weedes, grass, and othe stubbes of coyne stalks with theyr roots. The which after a day or twoes lying in the Sunne, being scrapt by into many small heaps, to save them labour for carrying them away, they burne into ashes. (And whereas some may thinke that they vse the ashes for to better the ground : If they do not, excepte the ashes lie, which ground that they vse
 better

When they set the ner of the plot, with couch not one another throughout the whole gard, that they be in the holes also in euery hole : where as diuers places also are

The ground being sowed with some peaches beanes and peaze, Planta solis : when thought to be much

I thought also know how specially solde waies in apply still in respect that I have made prooffe of come before) with large proportion for will peels, and of fine and twentie might be raised out and may at any time that they also set with standing they

For English corn you shall have farth and peaze, we haue sort of ground, and because it was much thus much haue course, and increas

There is an herbe In the West Indies it groweth, and is dried and brought in pipes made of clay, other grosse humors thereof not onely because of too long serued in health, and times afflicted.

This Vppow marvellously delige of the powder there cast some by into some therein and in but all done with of hands, and flares and noises.

We our selues our returne, and which the relation better the growd: I say that then they would either disperse the ashes abroad, which we observed they do not, excepte the heaps be too great: or els would take speciall care to let theyr coine where the ashes lie, which also we finde they are carelesse of.) And this is all the husbanding of theyr ground that they vse.

Then theyr setting or sowing is after this maner, First for theyr coine, beginning in one corner of the plot, with a pecker they make a hole, wherein they put foure graines, with that care they couch not one another (about an inch asunder) and couer them with the mould againe: and so throughout the whole plot, making such holes, and vsing them after such maner: but with this regard, that they be made in ranks, every ranke differing from other halfe a fathome or a yard, and the holes also in every ranke, as much. By this meanes there is a yard spare ground betweene every hole: where according to discretion heere and there, they set as many beanes and peaze: in diuers places also among the seeds of Macocquer, Melden, and Planta folis.

The ground being thus set according to the rate, by vs experimented, an English acre containing fortye pearches in length, and foure in breadth, doth there yeeld in croppe of some of coine, beanes and peaze, at the least two hundredth London bushels: besides the Macocquer, Melden, and Planta folis: when as in England fortye bushels of our wheat yeelded out of such an acre, is thought to be much.

I thought also good to note this vnto you, that you which shall inhabite, and plant there, may know to how specially that countrey coine is there to be preferred before ours: Besides, the manifold wayes in applying it to victuall, the increase is so much, that small labour and paines is necessary in respect that must be vsed for ours. For this I can assure you, that according to the rate we haue made proofe of, one man may prepare and husband so much ground (having once borne coine before) with lesse then foure and twentie houres labour, as shall yeeld him victuall in a large proportion for a twelue moneth, if he haue nothing else but that which the same ground will yeeld, and of that kinde onely which I haue before spoken of: the sayd ground being also but of five and twentie yards square. And if need require, but that there is ground enough, there might be raised out of one and the selfsame ground two harvests or ofomes: for they sow or set, and may at any time when they thinke good, from the midd of Spary vntill the end of June: so that they also see when they haue eaten of theyr first croppe. In some places of the countrey notwithstanding they haue two harvests, as we haue heard, out of one and the same ground.

For English coine neuertheless, whether to vse or not to vse it, you that inhabite may do as you shall haue farther cause to thinke best. Of the growth you need not to doubt: for barley, oats, and peaze, we haue seene proofe of, not being purposely sown but fallen casually in the woost sort of ground, and yet to be as saye as any we haue euer seene here in England. But of wheat, because it was musty, and had taken salt water, we could make no triall: and of rie we had none. Thus much haue I digressed, and I hope not vndercessarily: now will I returne againe to my soueraine, and increas of that which yet remaineth appertaining to this chapter.

There is an herbe which is sowed apart by it selfe, and is called by the inhabitants Vppowoc: In the West Indies it hath diuers names, according to the seuerall places and countreys where it groweth, and is vsed: the Spanyards generally call it Tobacco. The leaues thereof being dried and brought into powder: they vse to take the fume or smoke thereof, by sucking it through pipes made of clay, in to theyr stomache and head: from whence it purgeth superfluous steame and other grosse humors, and openeth all the pores and passages of the body: by which meanes the vse thereof not onely preterueth the body from obstructions, but also (if any be, so that they haue not bene of too long continuance) in short time breaketh them: whereby theyr bodies are notably preserved in health, and know not many grievous diseases, wherewithall we in England are oftentimes afflicted.

This Vppowoc is of so precious estimation amongst them, that they thinke theyr gods are marvellously delighted therewith: whereupon sometime they make halloved fires, and cast some of the powder therein for a sacrifice: being in a stoyne vpon the waters, to pacifie theyr gods, they cast some by into the ayre and into the water: so a weare for fish being netwip set by, they cast some therein and into the ayre: also after an escape of danger, they cast some into the ayre likewise: but all done with strange gestures, stamping, sometime dancing, clapping of hands, holding vp of hands, and starting vp into the heauens, uttering therewithall, and chattering strange words and noises.

We our selves during the time we were there, vsed to sucke it after theyr maner, as also since our returne, and haue found many rare and wonderfull experiments of the vertues thereof: of which the relation would require a volume by it selfe: the vse of it by so many of late, men and women women of great calling as else, and some learned Physicians also, is sufficient witness.

And these are all the commodities for sustenance of life that I know and can remember they use to husband: all else that follow are found growing naturally or wilde.

Of Roots.

Openauk are a kinde of roots of round forme, some of the bignesse of walnuts, some farre greater, which are found in moist and marish grounds growing many together one by another in ropes, or as though they were fastened with a string: Being boiled or sodden they are very good meat.

Okeepenauk are also of round shape, found in drye grounds: some are of the bignesse of a mans head. They are to be eaten as they are taken out of the ground, for by reason of their smell they will neither rotte nor lesche. Their taste is not so good as of the former roots, notwithstanding for want of bread, and sometimes for variety the inhabitants use to eat them with fish or flesh, and in my iudgement they do as well as the household bread made of rie heere in England.

Kailnucpenauk a white kinde of roots about the bignesse of henne egges, and neere of that forme: their taste was not so good to our seeming as of the other, and therefore they place and manner of growing, not so much cared for by vs: the inhabitants notwithstanding used to boyle and eat many.

Tinaw a kinde of root much like unto that which in England is called the China root brought from the East Indies. And we know not any thing to the contrary but that it may be of the same kinde. These roots grow many together in great clusters, and do bying sooth a hieer skake, but the leafe in shape farre unlike: which being supported by the trees it groweth neere unto, will reach or climbe to the top of the highest. From these roots while they be new or fresh, being chope into small pieces, and stamp, is strained with water a iuice that maketh bread, and also being boyled, a very good spoonemeat in manner of a gelly, and is much better in case if it be tempered with oile. This Tinaw is not of that sort, which by some was caused to be brought into England for the China root, for it was discovered since, & is in use as is aforesaid: but that which was brought hither is not yet knownen, neither by vs nor by the inhabitants to serue for any use or purpose, although the roots in shape are very like.

Coculshaw, some of our company tooke to be that kinde of root which the Spaniards in the West Indies call Cassau, whereupon also many called it by that name: it groweth in very muddy pooles, and moist grounds. Being dyed according to the countrey manner, it maketh a good bread, and also a good spoonemeat, and is used very much by the inhabitants: the iuice of this root is poison, and therefore heed must be taken before any thing be made there of: either the roots must be first sliced and dyed in the Sunne, or by the fire, and then being punned into floure, will make good bread: or els while they are greene they are to be pared, cut into pieces, and stamp: loanes of the same to be laid neere or ouer the fire untill it be softe, and then being well punned againe, bread, or spoonemeat very good in taste and wholesome may be made thereof.

Habafcon is a root of hoce taste, almost of the forme and bignesse of a parsnip, of it selfe it is no victuall, but onely a helpe being boyled together with other meats.

There are also Leeks, differing little from ours in England, that grow in many places of the countrey, of which, when we came in places where they grow, we gathered and eat many, but the naturall inhabitants neuer.

Of Fruites.

Chestnuts, there are in diuers places great store: some they use to eat rawe, some they stamp and boyle to make spoonemeat, and with some being sodden, they make such a manner of down bread as they use of their beanes before mentioned.

Walnuts: there are two kindes of walnuts, and of them infinite store: in many places where are very great woods for many miles together, the third part of trees are walnut trees. The one kinde is of the same taste and forme, or little differing from ours of England, but that they are harder and thicker shelled: the other is greater, and hath a very ragged and hard shell: but the kernell great, very oyle and sweet. Besides their eating of them after our ordinarie manner, they beate them with stones, and punne them in mortars with water, to make a milke which they use to put into some sorts of their spoonemeat: also among their sod wheat, peaze, beanes and pomptions which maketh them haue a farre more pleasant taste.

Medlars,

Medlars a kinde of not good untill they be the same bignesse: or ries, and very sweet:

Muraquefunnaul but that they are of a leaves are very thick where they haue steeer: describe his plant right or a bassard of wilde of the fruit, but finally obstruct.

Grapes there are Straberries there are Mulberies, Apples Sacquennummen grow together in clu of nine houres acco ten they will make a

There is a kinde of led is good meat.

In our trauels in were lesse, which are

Of a

There is a kinde of trees: the of these kinde of acory after the manner as will till they be soft, and also pounded to make for the inhabitants

Another sort is chestnuts. They lo

The first sort is eating dried after the manner, or sometime they fish or flesh.

Deer, in some bignesse as ours is better food, they snags of their home Conies, Those hare: in some part of the furre or flue of Saquenuckot are good meat. We had taken and brought Squirrels which are

Bears which are ants in time of winter monty in this sort.

haue spall of a man next tree they can, fi

Medlars a kinde of very good fruit, so called by vs chiefly for these respects: first in that they are not good untill they be rotten: then in that they open at the head as our medlars, and are about the same bignesse: otherwile in taste and colour they are farre different: for they are as red as cherries, and very sweet: but whereas the cherry is sharpe sweet, they are luscious sweet.

Muraquesunnauk, a kinde of pleasant fruit almost of the shape and bignesse of English peares, but that they are of a perfect red colour as well within as without. They grow on a plant whose leaves are very thicke, & full of prickles as sharpe as needles. Some that have bin in the Indies, where they haue seene that kinde of red die of great price, which is called Cochinele, to grow, do describe his plant right like vnto this of Muraquesunnauk, but whether it be the true Cochenile or a bastard or wilde kinde, it can not yet be certified: seeing that also as I heard, Cochenile is not of the fruit, but found on the leaues of the plant: which leaues for such matter we haue not so specially obserued.

Grapes there are of two sorts, which I mentioned in the merchantable commodities.

Straberries there are as good and as great as those which we haue in our English gardens.

Mulberries, Applecrabs, Hurts or Hurtleberries, such as we haue in England.

Sacquemener a kinde of berries almost like vnto capers, but somewhat greater, which grow together in clusters vpon a plant of herbe that is found in shallow waters: being boiled eight or nine houres according to theyr kinde are very good meat and wholesome, otherwile if they be eaten they will make a man for the time franticke or extremely sicke.

There is a kinde of Reed which beareth a seed almost like vnto our rie or wheat, and being boiled is good meat.

In our trauels in some places we found Wilde peaze like vnto ours in England, but that they were lesse, which are also good meat.

Of a kinde of fruit or berry in forme of Acornes.

There is a kinde of berrie or acorne, of which there are five sorts that grow on severall kindes of trees: the one is called Sagatemener, the second Osamener, the third Pummuckoner. These kinde of acornes they vse to drie vpon hurdles made of reeds, with fire vnderneath, almost after the manner as we drye malt in England. When they are to be vsed, they first water them vntill they be soft, and then being so, they make a good victuall, either to eat so simply, or els being also yponned to make loaves or lumps of bread. These be also the three kindes, of which, I said before the inhabitants vse to make sweet oile.

Another sort is called Sapummener, which being boiled or parched, doth eat and taste like vnto chestnuts. They sometime also make bread of this sort.

The fift sort is called Mangummenauk, and is the acorne of theyr kinde of Oake, the which being dried after the manner of the first sorts, and afterward watered, they boile them, and theyr seruants, or sometime the chiefe themselves, either for variety or for want of bread, do eat them with theyr fish or flesh.

Of Beasts.

Here, in some places there are great stoe: neere vnto the sea coast they are of the ordinary bignesse as ours in England, and some lesse: but further by into the countrey, where there is better food, they are greater: they differ from ours onely in this, their talle are longer, and the snags of theyr homes looke backward.

Conies, Those that we haue seene, and all that we can heare of are of a grey colour like vnto hares: in some places there are such plenty that all the people of some townes make them mantles of the furre or flue of the skines of those they vsually eate.

Saquenuckot and Maquowoc, two kindes of small beasts, greater then conies, which are very good meat. We neuer tooke any of them our selues, but sometime eat of such as the inhabitants had taken and brought vnto vs.

Squirels which are of a grey colour, we haue taken and eaten.

Bears which are all of blacke colour. The bears of this countrey are good meat: the inhabitants in time of winter do vse to eate and eat many, so also sometime do we. They are taken commonly in this sort. In some Islands or places where they are, being hunted for, as soon as the y haue the fall of a man, they presently runne away, and then being chased, they clime and get by the next tree they can, from whence with arrows they are shot downe stark dead, or with those weapons that that they may after easily be killed: we sometime shot them downe with our calliers.

I haue the names of eight and twenty severall sorts of beastes, which I haue heard of to be here and there dispersed in the countrey, especially in the maine: of which there are onely twelue kindes that we haue yet discovered, and of those that be good meat we know only them before mentioned, The inhabitants sometime kill the Lyon, & eat him: and we sometime as they came to our hands of they? Woolues of Wooluish dogges, which I haue not set downe for good meat, least that some would vnderstand my judgement therein to be moze simple then needeth, although I could allege the difference in taste of those kindes from ours, which by some of our company haue bene experienced in both.

Of Foule.

Turkie cocks and Turkie hennes: Stockdoves: Partridges: Cranes: Hernes: and in winter great store of Swannes and Geefe. Of all sorts of foule I haue the names in the countrey language, of fourescore and fixe, of which number, besides those that be named, we haue taken, eaten, and haue the pictures as they were there taken, with the names of the inhabitants of severall strange sorts of water foule eight, and severall kindes more of land foule, although we haue seene and eaten of many more, which for want of leisure there for the purpose, could not be pictured: and after we are better furnished and stored vpon further discovery, with they? strange beastes, fish, trees, plants, and herbs, they shall be also published.

There are also Parrots, Faulcons, and Marlin hauks, which although with vs they be not used for meat, yet for other causes I thought good to mention.

Of Fish.

Foure moneths of the yeere, February, March, April and May, there are plenty of Sturgeons: And also in the same moneths of Herrings, some of the ordinary bignesse as ours in England, but the most part farre greater, of eightheene, twentieth inches, and some two foot in length and better: both these kindes of fish in those moneths are most plentiful, and in best season, which we found to be most delicate and pleasant meat.

There are also Trouts: Porpoises: Rayes: Oldwies: Mulletts: Plaice: & very many other sorts of excellent good fish, which we haue taken and eaten, whose names I know not but in the countrey language: we haue of twelue sorts more the pictures, as they were taken in the countrey, with they? names.

The inhabitants use to take them two manner of wayes, the one is by a kinde of weare made of reeds, which in that countrey are very strong. The other way, which is more strange, is with poles made sharpe at one end, by shooting them into the fish after the manner as Irish men call darts, either as they are rowing in they? boats, or els as they are wading in the shallowes for the purpose.

There are also in many places plenty of these kindes which follow:

Sea crabbes, such as we haue in England.

Oysters, some very great, and some small, some round, and some of a long shape: they are found both in salt water and brackish, and those that we had out of salt water are far better then the other as in our countrey.

Also Mufcles: Scalops: Periwinkles: and Creuifes.

Seekanauk, a kinde of crusty shell fish, which is good meat, about a foot in length, hauing a crustie taile, many legges like a crab, and her eyes in her backe. They are found in shallowes of waters, and sometime on the shoare.

There are many Tortoyes both of land and sea kinde, they? backs and bellies are shelled very thicke, they? head, feet, and taile, which are in appearance, seeme ugly, as though they were members of a serpent or venemous beastes: but notwithstanding they are very good meat, as also they? egges. Some haue bene found of a yard in length and better.

And thus haue I made relation of all sorts of victuall that we fed vpon for the time we were in Virginia, as also the inhabitants themselves, as farre forth as I know and can remember, that are especially worthy to be remembred.

The

The third a for those

also great store, and

Walnut trees, as four and five sashom

Fire trees six foot

Rakiock, a kinde
neere unto vs doe co

helpe of fire, hatchets of one tree that they

great, tall, streight, for masts of ships.

Cedar, a sweete kinde things els, as I haue ces where I haue no cellent uses, is also a

Maple, and also V
Holly a necessary

Willowes good for though the inhabitan

for that turne very v Beech and Ashe,

things els,
Elme,

Sassafras trees,
A scope a kinde of

to that tree which M There are many of which I am not in lar relation: seeing of the rest, but that th Now for stone, by

are no kinde of stone haue bene brought

uers hard raggie sto inhabitants make

by into the Countre ther haue they use of household haue one o for hatchets, they h

foote deepe: and the both may be in place

In the meane time
the want of you wh

The third and last part of such other things as are behouefull for those which shall plant and inhabite to know of, with a description of the nature and maners of the people of the Country.

Of commodities for building and other necessary vses,

Those other things which I am moze to make reherfall of, are such as concerne building, and other mechanicall necessarie vses, as diuers sorts of trees for boule and shippe timber, and other vses els: Also lime, stone, and bricke, least that being not mentioned sonic might haue bene doubted of, or by some that are malicious reported the contrary.

Oaks, there are as faire, straight, tall, and as good timber as any can be, and also great store, and in some places very great.

Walnut trees, as I haue said befoze very many, some haue bene seene excellent faire timber of four and sixe fathome, and aboue fourestoie foote straight without bough.

Firre trees fit for masts of shipp, some very tall and great.

Rakioc, a kinde of trees so called that are swete wood, of which the inhabitants that were neere vnto vs doe commonly make their boates or Canoes of the forme of trowes, ouerly with the helpe of fire, hatchets of stones, and shels: we haue knowen some so great being made in that sort of one tree that they haue carried well 20. men at once, besides much baggage: the timber being great, tall, straight, soft, light, and yet tough ynough I thinke (besides other vses) to be fit also for masts of shipp.

Cedar, a swete wood good for seelings, chests, boxes, bedsteads, lutes, virginals, and many things els, as I haue also said befoze. Some of our companie which haue wandered in some places where I haue not bene, haue made certaine affirmation of Cyprus which for such and other excellent vses, is also a wood of pyce and no small estimation.

Maple, and also Wich-hazle, whereof the inhabitants vse to make their bowes.

Holly a necessary thing for the making of birdlime.

Willowes good for the making of weares and whyles to take fishe after the English maner, af-though the inhabitants vse onely reedes, which because they are so strong as also flexible, do serue for that turne very well and sufficiently.

Becch and Alhe, good for caske hoops: and if neede require, plow wozke, as also for many things els.

Elme,

Sassafras trees.

Ascopo a kinde of tree very like vnto Latwel, the barke is hot in taste and spice, it is very like to that tree which Monardus describeth to be Cassia Ligna of the West Indies.

There are many other strange trees whose names I know not but in þ Virginia language, of which I am not now able, neither is it so conuenient for the present to trouble you with particular relation: seeing that for timber and other necessary vses I haue named sufficient. And of many of the rest, but that they may be applied to good vse, I knowe no cause to doubt.

Now for stone, bricke and lime, thus it is. Neere vnto the Sea coast where wee dwell, there are no kinde of stones to be found (except a fewe small pebbles about foure miles off) but such as haue bene brought from further out of the maine. In some of our voyages wee haue seene di-uers hard raggie stones, great pebbles, and a kinde of grey stone like vnto marble, of which the inhabitants make their hatchets to cleue wood. vpon inquirie wee heard that a little further by into the Countrey were of all sortes very many, although of qualities they are ignorant, neither haue they vse of any stone whereupon they should haue occasion to seeke any. For if euery household haue one or two to cracke nuts, grinde shels, whet copper, and sometimes other stones for hatchets, they haue ynough: neither vse they any digging, but onely for graues about three foote deepe: and therefore no maruile that they knowe neither quarries, nor lime stones, which both may be in places neerer then they wot of.

In the meane time until there be discoverie of sufficient stone in some place or other conuenient, the want of you which are & shall be the planters therein may be as well supplied by bricke: for the making

making whereof in diuers places of the Countrey there is clay both excellent good, and plenty, and also by lime made of oyster shells, and of others burnt, after the manner as they be in the Isles of Tence and Shepy, and also in diuers other places of England: Which kinde of lime is well known to be as good as any other. And of oyster shells there is plenty ynough: for besides diuers other particular places where are abundance, there is one shallowe sounde along the coast, where for the space of many miles together in length, & two or three miles in breadth, the ground is nothing els, being but halfe a foote or a foote vnder water for the most part.

Thus much can I say further more of stones, that about 120. miles from our fort neere the water in the side of a hill, was found by a Gentleman of our company, a great beine of hard ragge stones, which I thought good to remember vnto you.

Of the nature and maners of the people.

Next I speake a worde of two of the naturall inhabitants, their natures and maners, leauing large discourse thereof vntill time more conuenient hereafter: nowe onely so farre forth, as that you may knowe, howe that they in respect of troubling our inhabiting & planting, are not to be feared, but that they shall haue cause both to feare and loue vs, that shall inhabite with them.

They are a people clothed with loose mantles made of beere skinned, and apions of the same round about their middles, all els naked, of such a difference of statures onely as we in England, hauing no edge tooles or weapons of yron or Steele to offend vs withal, neither knowe they howe to make any: those weapons that they haue, are onely bowes made of Birch hazle, and arrowes of reedes, flat edged: theons also of wood about a yard long, neither haue they any thing to defend themselves but targets made of barks, and some armoura made of sticks wickered together with chead.

Their towines are but small, and neere the sea coast but fetue, some contayning but tenne or twelue houses: some 20. the greatest that we haue seene, hath bene but of 30. houses: if they be walled, it is onely done with barkes of trees made fast to stakes, or els with poles onely fixed by right, and close one by another.

Their houses are made of small poles, made fast at the tops in rounde forme after the maner as is vied in many arbores in our gardens of England, in most towines covered with barkes, and in some with artificiall matts made of long rushes, from the tops of the houses downe to the ground. The length of them is commonly double to the breadth, in some places they are but 12. and 16. yards long, and in other some we haue seene of foure and twentie.

In some places of the Countrey, one onely towine belongeth to the government of a Wiroans or chiefe Loyde, in other some two or thye, in some five, eight, and more, the greatest Wiroans that yet we had dealing with, had but eigheteene towines in his government, & able to make not about seuen or eight hundred fighting men at the most. The language of euery government is different from any other, and the further they are distant, the greater is the difference.

Their maner of warres amongst themselves, is either by sudden surprizing one another most commonly about the dawning of the day, or moone light, or els by ambushes, or some subtille deuises. Set battels are very rare, except it fall out where there are many trees, where either part may haue some hope of defence, after the deliuerie of euery arrowe, in leaping behinde some other.

If there fall out any warres betweene vs and them, what their fight is likely to be, wee hauing abouantages against them so many maner of wayes, as by our discipline, our strange weapons and deuises els, especially ordnance great and smal, it may easily be imagined, by the experience we haue had in some places, the turning vp of their heeles against vs in running away was their best defence.

In respect of vs they are a people poore, and for want of skill and iudgement in the knowledge and vse of oile things, doe esteeme our trifles before things of greater value: Notwithstanding, in their proper maner considering the want of such meanes as we haue, they seeme very ingenious. For although they haue no such tooles, nor any such craftes, Sciences and artes as wee, yet in those things they doe, they be we excellente of wit. And by howe much they vpon due consideration shall finde our maner of knowledges and craftes, to exceede theirs in perfection, and speede for doing or execution, by so much the more is it probable that they shoulde desire our friendship and loue, and haue the greater respect for pleasing and obeying vs. Whereby may be hoped, if meanes etc. and the inhabitan Some religion is, there is hope it n

They beleue t degrees, one onely
firme, when hee pu
as meanes and in the Sunne, Moon cipall. First (they creatures that are v

For mankinde goddes, conceived
ginning.

But how many no letters nor other onely tradition from

They thinke tha images in the foym
place in houses ap
pray, sing, and mak
but one Kewas, in so gods.

They beleue als
parted from the bo
cacle of gods, ther they thinke to be m burne continually:

For the confirm
ly dead and reuiue Countrey of a vic
grau being leene bene, that is to say, v him leaue to return
place of toymnt.

The other happe
from vs, and it wa gaine as the first, a altue, and had traua
and pleasm trees,
was able to express his father, that had b his friends what go done he shoulde after

That subtiltie ny of the common uerours, and also though not with dan gers, and other sorts beating, according

And this is the s
some of their pite
ditions and stories, owne, and no small
meanes for want of

Good things they
the loadstone in wat burning glasses, d

be hoped, if means of good government be used, that they may in short time be brought to civilitie, and the embracing of true religion.

Some religion they have already, which although it be farre from the truth, yet being as it is, there is hope it may be the easier and sooner reformed.

They beleuee that there are many Gods, which they call Mantoac, but of different sorts and degrees, one onely chiefe and great God, which hath bene from all eternitie. Who, as they affirme, when hee purposed to make the worlde, made first other gods of a principall order, to bee as meanes and instruments to be used in the creation and government to followe, and after the Sunne, Moone, and Starres, as petty gods, and the instruments of the other order moze principall. First (they say) were made waters, out of which by the gods was made all diversitie of creatures that are visible or invisible.

For mankinde they say a woman was made first, which by the woorking of one of the goddesses, conceived and brought forth children: And in such sort they say they had their beginning.

But how many yeeres of ages have passed since, they say they can make no relation, having no letters nor other such meanes as we to keepe recordes of the particularities of times past, but onely tradition from father to sonne.

They thinke that all the gods are of humane shape, and therefore they represent them by images in the formes of men, which they call Kewasowok, one alone is called Kewas: them they place in houses appropriate or temples, which they call Machicomucke, where they worship, pray, sing, and make many times offering unto them. In some Machicomuck wee have seene but one Kewas, in some two, and in other some three. The common sort thinke them to bee also gods.

They beleuee also the immortallitie of the soule, that after this life as soone as the soule is departed from the body, according to the workes it hath done, it is either carried to heauen the habitation of gods, there to enjoy perpetuall blisse and happinesse, or els to a great pitte or hole, which they thinke to be in the furchest partes of their part of the worlde towarde the Sunne set, there to burne continually: the place they call Popogusso.

For the confirmation of this opinion, they tolde mee two stories of two men that had bene lately dead and requied againe, the one happened but fewe yeeres before our coming into the Countrey of a wicked man, which having bene dead and buried, the next day the earth of the graue being seene to moove, was taken up againe, who made declaration where his soule had bene, that is to say, very neere entering into Popogusso, had not one of the gods saved him, and gaue him leave to returne againe, and teache his friends what they should doe to avoyde that terrible place of torment.

The other happened in the same yeere we were there, but in a towne that was threelooke miles from vs, and it was tolde mee for strange newes, that one being dead, buried, and taken up againe as the first, he shewed that although his body had lien dead in the graue, yet his soule was alive, and had traualled farre in a long broad way, on both sides whereof grew most delicate and pleasant trees, bearing more rare and excellent fruites, then euer hee had seene before, or was able to expresse, and at length came to most brane and faire heuses, neere which hee mette his father, that had bene dead before, who gaue him great charge to goe backe againe, and shewe his friends what good they were to doe to enjoy the pleasures of that place, which when hee had done he should after come againe.

That subtiltie sooner be in the Wiroances and priestes, this opinion worketh so much in many of the common and simple sort of people, that it maketh them have great respect to their Governours, and also great care what they doe, to avoyde torment after death, and to enjoy blisse, although notwithstanding there is punishment ordeined for malefactours, as stealers, whoyemongers, and other sorts of wicked doers, some punished with death, some with forfeitures, some with beating, according to the greatnesse of the factes.

And this is the summe of their Religion, which I learned by having special familiaritie with some of these priestes. Wherein they were not so sure grounden, nor gaue such credite to their traditions and stories, but through conversing with vs they were brought into great doubts of their owne, and no small admiration of ours, with earnest desire in many, to learne more then wee had meanes for want of perfect verterance in their language to expresse.

And things they set before with vs, as Mathematicall instruments, sea Compasses, the vertue of the loadstone in drawing yron, a perspective glasse whereby was shewed many strange sights, burning glasses, wilde fireworkes, gunnes, hookes, writing and reading, spring clockes that seeme to goe of themselves, and many other things that wee had, were so strange vnto them, and so farre exceeded their capacities to comprehend the reason and meanes how they should be made and done, that they thought they were rather the workes of gods then of men, or at the leastwise they had bene giuen and taught vs of the gods. Which made many of them to haue such opinion of vs, as that if they knewe not the cruety of God and religion already, it was rather to bee had from vs, whome God so specially loued then from a people that were so simple, as they found themselves to be in comparison of vs. Whereupon greater credite was giuen vnto that we speake of, concerning such matters.

Many times and in euery towne where I came, according as I was able, I made declaration of the contents of the Bible, that therein was set forth the true and onely God, and his mightie workes, that therein was contained the true doctrine of saluation through Christ, with many particularities of spectacles and chiefe pointes of Religion, as I was able then to utter, and thought fit for the time. And although I tolde them the booke materially and of it selfe was not of any such vertue, as I thought they did conceiue, but onely the doctrine therein contained: yet would many bee glad to touche it, to embrace it, to kisse it, to holde it to their heauests and heades, and stroke ouer all their body with it, to shewe their hungrie desire of that knowledge which was spoken of.

The Wiroans with whome we dwelt called Wingina, and many of his people would be glad many times to be with vs at our prayers, and many times call vpon vs both in his owne towne, as also in others whither he sometime accompanied vs, to pray and sing Psalmes, hoping thereby to be partaker of the same effects which we by that meanes also expected.

Whise this Wiroans was so grievously sicke that hee was like to die, and as he lay languishing, doubting of any helpe by his owne priestes, and thinking he was in such danger for offending vs and thereby our God, sent for some of vs to pray and bee a meanes to our God that it would please him either that hee might liue, or after death dwell with him in blisse, for likewise were the requests of many others in the like case.

On a time also when their corne began to wither by reason of a drought which happened extraordinarily, fearing that it had come to passe by reason that in some thing they had displeas'd vs, many would come to vs and desire vs to pray to our God of England, that hee would preferre their corne, promising that when it was ripe we also should be partakers of the fruite.

There coude at no time happen any strange sickness, losses, hurtes, or any other crosse vnto them, but that they would impute to vs the cause or meanes thereof, for offending or not pleasing vs.

One other rare and strange accident, leauing others, will I mention before I end, which moued the whole Countrey that either knewe or heard of vs, to haue vs in wonderfull admiration.

There was no towne where we had any subtille deuise practis'd against vs, we leauing it unpunished or not reuenged (because we sought by all meanes possible to win them by gentleness) but that within a fewe dayes after our departure from euery such towne, the people began to die very fast, and many in short space, in some townes about twentie, in some fourtie, and in one five score, which in truth was very many in respect of their numbers. This happened in no place that we could learne, but where we had bene, where they vsed some practise against vs, and after such time. The disease also so strange, that they neither knewe what it was, nor how to cure it, the like by report of the oldest men in the Countrey neuer happened before, time out of minde. A thing specially obserued by vs, as also by the natural inhabitants themselves.

Inasmuch that when some of the inhabitants which were our friends, and especially the Wiroans Wingina, had obserued such effects in foure or five townes to followe their wicked practises, they were perswaded that it was the worke of our God through our meanes, & that we by him might kill and slay whom we would without weapons, and not come nere them.

And thereupon when it had vnderstanding that any of their enemies had abused vs in our iourneys, hearing that we had wrought no reuenge with our weapons, and fearing vpon some cause the matter should so rest: vnto come and increase vs that wee would be a meanes to our God that they as others that had dealt ill with vs might in like sort die, alleauging to vs much it would be for our credite and profit, as also theirs, and hoping furthermore that we would doe so much at their requests in respect of the friendship we profess'd them.

Whose enterprises although we suspected that they were vngodly, affirming that our God would not suffer himselfe to any such papers and requests of men: that in deede all things haue bene and were to be done according to his good pleasure as hee had ordained: and that we to shewe our selues

selues his true seruants liue together with vs withstanding in such vnto will and pleasure

Yet because the thought neuertheless them, did but dissemble that although wee desires.

This maruelous people could not see their sickness, there so that we had no won

Some therefore call, but that wee mortalitie.

Some would like
come, to kill theirs
already done.

Those that were without bodies, and that for as they did

To confirme this would not bee alham blood that they sucke lets were tied and cat

Some also thought dwell, and killed the from vs sooner it wee

And other some sa hane cause in some so specially some Astrolo beside in our voyage which beganne to app er like them from be I thinke it at this pr

These that there is good hope
thing of the cruety, an

And although so stere, in slaying sou through haue bene
fermed, the alteration to be doubted. And all to be feared.

The best neuerth
the worst that may eithere.

N Dwe I that the C entirely like less and
neither the soyle,
wee founde in our discouered and expe

selues his true seruants ought rather to make petition for the contrary, that they with them might liue together with vs, be made partakers of his crueltie and serue him in righteousnesse, but notwithstanding in such sort, that wee referre that as all other things, so bee done according to his will and pleasure, and as by his wisdom he had ordained to be best.

Yet because the effect fell out so suddenly and shortly after according to their desires, they thought neuertheless it came to passe by our meanes, and that wee in doing such speeches, they them, do but dissemble the matter, and therefore came vnto vs to giue vs thanks in their manner, that although wee satisfied them not in promise, yet in deedes and effect wee had fulfilled their desires.

This marvellous accident in all the Countrey wrought so strange opinions of vs, that some people could not tel whether to thinke vs gods or men, and the rather because that all the space of their sickness, there was no man of ours known to die, or that was specially sicke: they noted also that we had no women among vs, neither that we did care for any of theirs.

Some therefore were of opinion that wee were not borne of women, and therefore not moy call, but that wee were men of an olde generation many yeeres past, then risen againe to immortallitie.

Some woulde likewise sceme to prophesie, that there were more of our generation yet to come, to kill theirs and take their places, as some thought the purpose was, by that which was already done.

Those that were immediatly to come after vs they imagined to be in the ayre, yet inuisible any without bodies, and that they by our incantation and for the loue of vs, did make the people to die in that sort as they do, by shooting inuisible bullets into them.

To confirme this opinion, their Physicians (to excuse their ignorance in curing the disease,) would not bee ashamed to say, but earnestly make the simple people beleue, that the strings of blood that they sucked out of the sicke bodies, were the strings wherewithall the inuisible bullets were tied and cast.

Some also thought that we shotte them our selues out of our pieces, from the place where wee dwelt, and killed the people in any such countie that had offended vs as we liked, both farre distant from vs whether it were.

And other some saide, that it was the speciall worke of God for our sakes, as wee our selues haue cause in some sort to thinke no lesse, whatsoeuer some dog, or may imagine to the contrary, specially some Astrologers, knowing of the Eclipse of the Sunne which we sawe the same yeere before in our voyage thitherward, which vnto them appeared very terrible. And also of a Comet which beganne to appoare but a fewe dayes before the beginning of the said sickness. But to exclude them from being the speciall causes of so special an accident, there are further reasons which I thinke fit at this present to be alleaged.

These three opinions I haue set downe the more at large, that it may appaere vnto you that there is good hope they may be brought through discrete dealing and gouernement to the embracing of the truth, and consequently to honour, obey, feare and loue vs.

And although some of our companie towards the ende of the yeere, shewed themselves to fierce, in slaying some of the people, in some counties, vpon causes that on our part, might easily enough haue bene borne withall: yet notwithstanding, because it was on their part fully deserved, the alteration of their opinions generally and for the most part concerning vs is the lesse to be doubted. And whatsoever els they may be, by carefulnesse of our selues neede nothing at all to be feared.

The best neuertheless in this, as in all actions besides is to bee endeouored and hoped, and of the worst that may happen notice to bee taken with consideration, and as much as may bee eschewed.

The Conclusion.

Whe I haue (as I hope) made relation not of so fewe and small things, but that the Countrey (of men that are indifferent and well disposed) may bee sufficiently liked: If there were no more knownes then I haue mentioned, which doubtlesse and in great reason is nothing to that which remaineth to bee discovered, neither the soyle, nor commodities. As we haue reason so to gather by the difference wee finde in our traualles, for although all which I haue before spoken of, haue bene discovered and experimented not farre from the Sea coast, where was our abode and most of our trauieling: yet sometimes as wee made our iournes further into the maine and Countrey; we found the soile to be fatter, the trees greater and to growe thinner, the grounde more firme and deeper mould, more and larger champions, finer grasse, and as good as euer we saw in England; in some places rockie and farre more high and hillie ground, more plentie of their fruites, more abundance of beastes, the more inhabited with people, and of greater pollicie and larger dominions, with greater townes and houles.

Why may we not then looke for in good hope from the inner partes of more and greater plentie, as well of other thinges, as of those which wee haue already discovered? Unto the Spaniards happened the like in discovering the maine of the West Indies. The maine also of this Countrey of Virginia, extending some wayes so many hundred of leagues, as otherwise then by the relation of the inhabitants wee haue most certaine knowledge of, where yet no Christian prince hath any possession of dealing, cannot but yeelde many kindes of excellent commodities, which we in our discovery haue not yet seene.

What hope there is els to bee gathered of the nature of the climate, being answerable to the Island of Iapan, the land of China, Persia, Iury, the Islands of Cyprus & Candy, the South parts of Greece, Italy, and Spaine, and of many other notable and famous Countreies, because I meane not to be tedious, I leaue to your owne consideration.

Whereby also the excellent temperature of the aire there at all seasons, much warmer then in England, and neuer so vehemently hot, as sometimes is vnder and betwene the Tropikes, or nere them, cannot be knowne vnto you without further relation.

For the holtsomnesse thereof I neede to say but thus much: that for all the want of prouision, as first of English victual, excepting for twentie dayes, we liued onely by drinkeing water, and by the victual of the Countrey, of which some sortes were very strange vnto vs, and might haue bene thought to haue altered our temperatures in such sort, as to haue brought vs into some grieuous and dangerous diseases: Secondly the want of English meanes, for the taking of beastes, fische, and foule, which by the helpe onely of the inhabitants and their meanes, could not be so suddenly and easily might haue bene to our better satisfaction and contentment. Some want also wee had of clothes. Furthermore, in all our traualles which were most speciall and often in the time of winter, our lodging was in the open aire vpon the ground. And yet I say for all this, there were but foure of our whole companie (being one hundred and eighty) that died all the yeere and that but at the latter ende thereof and vpon none of the aforesaid causes. For all foure, especially thre were feeble, weak, and sickly persons before euer they came thither, and those that knewe them, much marvelled that they liued so long being in that case, or had aduentured to traualle.

Seeing therefore the ayre there is so temperate and holtsome, the soile so fertile, and yeelding such commodities, as I haue before mentioned, the voyage also thither to and fro being sufficiently experimented, to be perfoarmed twise a yeere with ease, and at any season thereof: And the dealing of Sir Walter Raleigh so liberall in large giuing and granting lande there, as is already knowne, with many helpes and furtherances else: (The least that he hath granted hath bene five hundred acres to a man onely for the aduenture of his person) I hope there remaines no cause whereby the action should be misliked.

If that those which shall thither traualle to inhabite and plant, be but reasonably prouided for the first yeere, as those are which were transported the last; and being there, doe vse but that diligence and care, as is requisite, and as they may with ease: There is no doubt, but for the time following, they may haue victuals that are excellent good and plentie ynough, some more English sortes of cattell als hereafter, as some haue bene before, and are there yet remaining, may, and shall be (God willing) thither transported. So like wise, our kinde of fruites, rootes, and herbes, may be there planted and sowed, as some haue bene already, and prouoe well: And in short time also they may rayse of those sortes of commodities which I haue spoken of, as shall both enrich themselves, as also others that shall deale with them.

And this is all the fruite of our labours, that I haue thought necessary to auertise you of at this present: What else concerneth the nature and maners of the inhabitants of Virginia, the number with the particularities of the voyages thither made, and of the actions of such as haue bene by Sir Walter Raleigh therein, and there employed, many woethy to be remembered, as of the first discoverers of the Countrey: of our Generall for the time Sir Richard Greinville, and after his departure of our Governour here Walter Rafe Lane, with diuers other directed and employed vnder their gouernement: Of the Captaines and Wardens of the voyages made since for transportation, of the Governour and assistants of those already transported, ted, as of many parts of a Chronicle, as be also published. Thus referring action, from him all things els, I

The fourth
the year

Our Fleet
the times:
Portsmouth, and stayed eight daies

The 5. of the space of The 8. we
The 16. Sim
her distressed in th

The 19. we

lupe: the 2
The 22. we ca
on land, staying t our women, and n
sudden burning i not speake. A l on such a burning 24. houres, it wa

Also the first such dignes, that the Sea side, to water tober of w
many as did but away the corrupti see in five or six d

The second da
water, three one
the toppe of an hi
not any goodnes,
way, he found in that Island: whe Fernando had tol

ted,

ted, as of many persons, accidents, and things els, I haue ready in a discourse by it selfe, in manner of a Chronicle, according to the course of times: and when time shall be thought convenient, shall be also published.

Thus referring my relation to your favourable constructions, expecting good successe of the action, from him which is to be acknowledged the author, and gouernour, not onely of this, but of all things els, I take my leaue of you, this moneth of February, 1588.

The fourth voyage made to Virginia, with three shippes, in the yeere, 1587. Wherein was transported the second Colonie.

In the yeere of our Loyde, 1587. Sir Walter Raleigh intending to perseuere in the planting of his Countrey of Virginia, prepared a newe Colonie of one hundred and fiftie men to be sent thither, vnder the charge of Iohn White, whom he appointed Gouernour, and also appointed vnto him twelue Assistants, vnto whom he gaue a Charter, and incorporated them by the name of Gouernour, and Assistants of the Citie of Raleigh in Virginia.

Aprill.

Our Fleet being in number three saile, viz. the Admirall, a shippe of one hundred and twentie tonnes: a flie boate, and a Pinness, departed the 19 and twentieth of Aprill from Portesmouth, and the same day came to an anchor at the Cowes, in the Isle of Wight, where we staied eight daies.

Maye.

The 5. of Maye, at nine of the clocke at night, we came to Plymmouth, where we remained the space of two daies.

The 8. we waied anchor at Plymmouth, and departed thence for Virginia.

The 16. Simon Ferdinando Master of our Admirall, lettdly forsooke our flie boate, leaving her distressed in the Baye of Portingall.

Iune.

The 19. we fell with Dominica, and the same evening we sailed betweene it, and Guadalupe: the 21. the flie boate also fell with Dominica.

The 22. we came to an anchor at an Isle, called Santa Cruz, where all the planters were set on land, staying there till the 25. of the same moneth. At our first landing on this Island, some of our women, and men, by eating a small fruite, like greene apples, were fearefully troubled with a sudden burning in their moutnes, and swelling of their tongues so bigge, that some of them could not speake. Also a child by sucking of one of those womens brest, had at that instant his mouth set on such a burning, that it was strange to see how the infant was tormentted for the time: but after 24. houres, it waie away of it selfe.

Also the first night of our being on this Island, we tooke five great Coytesles, some of them of such bignes, that fiftene of our strongest men were tired with carrying of one of them but from the Sea shore, to our cabbins. In this Island we found no watering place, but a standing ponde, the water wherof was so stull, that many of our companie fell sicke with drinking thereof: and as many as did but wash their faces with that water, in the morning before the Sunne had broken away the corruption, their faces did so burne, and swell, that their eyes were shut up, and could not see in five or six daies, or longer.

The second day of our abode here, we sent forth some of our men to search the Island for fresh water, three one way, and two another way. The Gouernour also, with six others, went up to the toppe of an high hill, to view the Island, but could perceiue no signe of any men, or beasts, nor any goodnes, but Barres, and trees of Guicum. Returning backe to our Cabbins another way, he found in the descent of a hill, certaine postheards of sauage making, made of the earth of that Island: whereupon it was iudged, that this Island was inhabited with Sauiages, though Ferdinando had tolde vs for certaine, the contrarie. The same day at night, the rest of our compo-

" One of the Idea of the Indians, which I saw with Sauiages.

nie very late returned to the Gouernour. The one companie affirmed, that they had seene in a valley, eleuen Sauages, and diuers houles halfe a mile distant from the steepe, or topp of the hill where they staid. The other companie had found running out of a high rocke, a very faire spring of water, wherof they brough the three bottles to the companie: for before that time, wee dranke the stinking water of the pond.

The same second day at night, Captaine Stafford, with the pinnelle, departed from our fleet, riding at Santa Cruz, to an Island, called Beake, lying nere S. Johns, being so directed by Ferdinando, who assured him he should there finde great plentie of sheepe. The next day at night, our planters left Santa Cruz, and came all aboard, and the next morning after, being the 25. of June, we waied anker, and departed from Santa Cruz.

The seuen and twentieth we came to anker at Cortea, where we found the pinnelle riding, at our comming.

The 28. we waied anker at Cortea, and presently came to anker at S. Johns in Muskets Bay, where we spent three daies unprofitably, in taking in freshe water, spending in the meane time more water, then the quantitie of the water came vnto.

Julie.

" Muskets Bay, is a Harbour vpon the South side of S. Johns Island, where we take in fresh water.

The first we waied anker at Muskitoes Baye, where were left behind two Irish men of our companie, Darbie Glauen, and Denice Cartell, bearing along the coast of S. Johns, till evening, at which time we fell vnto Rosse Baye. At this place Fernando had promised we should take in salt, and had caused vs before, to make and prouide as many sakes for that purpose, as we could. The Gouernour also, for that he vnderstoode there was a Cowhe in the bottom of the Baye, not farre from the salt hills, appointed thirtie horse, ten pikers, and ten targets, to man the pinnelle, and to goe a land for salt. Fernando percreauing them in a readines, sent to the Gouernour, vling great persuasions with him, not to take in salt there, saying that he knewe not well, whether that the same were the place or not: also, that if the pinnelle went into the Bay, she could not without great danger come backe, till the next day at night, and that if in the meane tyme any storme should rise, the Admirall were in danger to be cast away. Whilist he was thus perswading, he caused the lead to be cast, and hauing craftily brough the shippe in thre fathome, and a halfe water, he suddenly began to sweare, and teare God in peeces, dissembling great danger, crying to him at the helme, heare vp hard, heare vp hard: so we went off, and were disappointed of our sale, by his meanes.

The next day, sailing along the West end of S. Johns, the Gouernour determined to goe a land in S. Germans Baye, to gather pong plants of Dinges, Pines, Mameas, and Platonos, to set at Virginia, which we knewe might easily be had, for that they growe nere the shoare, and the places where they growe, well knowen to the Gouernour, and some of the planters: but our Simon deuiede, saying he would come to an anker at Hispaniola, and there lande the Gouernour, and some other of the Assaunts, with the pinnelle, to see if he could speake with his friend Alanfon, of whome he hoped to be furnished both of cattell, and all such thinges, as wee woulde haue taken in at S. Johns: but hee meant nothing lesse, as it plainly did appeare to vs afterwards.

The next day after, being the third of Julie, we sawe Hispaniola, and bare with the coast all that day, looking still when the pinnelle should be prepared to goe for the place where Fernando his friend Alanfon was: but that day passed, and we sawe no preparation for landing in Hispaniola.

The 4. of Julie, sailing along the coast of Hispaniola, vntill the next day at noone, and no preparation yet leane for the staying there, we hauing knowledge that we were past the place where Alanfon dwelt, and were come with Isabella: hereupon Fernando was asked by the Gouernour, whether he meant to speake with Alanfon for the taking in of cattell, and other thinges, according to his promise, or not: but he answered, that he was now past the place, and that Sir Walter Raleigh to be him, the French Ambassador certified him, that the king of Spaine had sent for Alanfon into Spaine: wherefore he thought him dead, and that it was to no purpose to touch there in any place, at this voyage.

The next day, we left sight of Hispaniola, and sailed off for Virginia, about 4. of the clocke in the afternoon.

The first of Julie, we came to the Islande Caycos, where in Fernando saide were two salt ponds, assuring vs if they were vnto, we might finde salt to last with, vntill the next supplie,

supplie, but it ppono nando so faced him, that heer part of that day hunting Swannes: anker, leaving Cenia.

About the 16. of the Island of Crotoa, where Scastorde being moored vpon the beach vpon it: such was the

The two and twentieth we waied anker: the Gouernour intending to passe vnto which Sir Richard Richarference, concerning the returne againe to the Island, vnder the leading of the Shippe, a Gentleman called to the sailers, but leaue them in that the Summer vnto this were all for it booted not that night, at Summe season we found none of of one of those fiftie

The 23. of Julie, we came to the Island, where we had some houses, made by the Spaniards, but all the houses were ouergrown with weeds: so we returned.

The same day we sawe the houses, which we needed.

The 25. our shippe and comfort of greatly at their satisfaction from us, for that he neuer had gotten a place as they should surely be

The eight and twentieth we waied anker, and departed from the Island, where we had some houses, which we needed, and so fell the wea pon, late on the 29. of the month, we were two miles from the head in peeces, and

On the thirtieth of the Island of Crotoa supplie, but it proved as true as the finding of the ye at Beake. In this Island, whilst Ferdinando solaced himself a shoare, with one of the company, in part of the Island, others spent the latter part of that day in other parts of the Island, some to seeke the salt ponds, some toiling, some hunting Swannes, whereof we caught many. The next day, early in the morning, we waded anker, leaving Caycos, with good hope, the first lande that wee sawe next, should be Virginia.

About the 16. of July, we fell with the maine of Virginia, which Simon Fernando tooke to be the Island of Croatoan, where we came to an anker, and rode there two or three daies: but finding himselfe deceived, he waded, and bare along the coast, where in the night, had not Captaine Stafforde bene more carefull in looking out, then our Simon Fernando, wee had bene all cast away upon the beache, called the Cape of Feare, for wee were come within two cables length upon it: such was the carelesnes, and ignorance of our Master.

The two and twentieth of Iulie, we arrived safe at Hatoraske, where our shippe and pinuelle ankered: the Gouvernour went aboard the pinuelle, accompanied with foytie of his best men, intending to passe by to Roanoake forthwith, hoping there to finde those fiftene Englishmen, which Sir Richard Greennull had left there the yeere before, with whom he meant to have conference, concerning the state of the Countrey, and Sauvages, meaning after he had so done, to returne againe to the fleet, and passe along the coast to the Baye of Chesepiok, where we intended to make our seat and foyle, according to the charge given vs among other directions in writing, vnder the hande of Sir Walter Raleigh: but as soone as we were put with our pinuelle from the shippe, a Gentleman by the meanes of Fernando, who was appointed to returne for England, called to the sailers in the pinuelle, charging them not to bring any of the planters backe againe, but leave them in the Island, except the Gouvernour, and two or three such as he appointed, saying that the Summer was farre spent, wherefoze hee would land all the planters in no other place. Unto this were all the sailers, both in the pinuelle, and shippe, perswaded by the Master, wherefoze it booted not the Gouvernour to contend with them, but passed to Roanoake, and the same night, at Sunne set, went aland on the Island, in the place where our fiftene men were left, but we found none of them, nor any signe, that they had bene there, saving onely we found the bones of one of those fiftene, which the Sauvages had flaine long before.

The 23. of July, the Gouvernour, with diuers of his companie, walked to the North ende of the Island, where Master Ralfe Lane had his foyle, with sundry necessarie and decent dwelling houses, made by his men about it the yeere before, where wee hoped to finde some signes, or certaine knowledge of our fiftene men. When we came thither, wee found the foyle raked downe, but all the houses standing vnhurt, saving the neather roomes of them, and also of the foyle, were overgrown with Pelons of diuers foyles, and Deere within them, feeding on those Pelons: so we returned to our companie, without hope of ever seeing any of the fiftene men living.

The same day order was given, that every man should be imploied for the repairing of those houses, which we found standing, and also to make other newe Cottages, for such as should neede.

The 25. our five boate, and the rest of our planters, arrived all safe at Hatoraske, to the great ioye and comfort of the whole companie: but the Master of our Admirall, Fernando grieved greatly at their safe coming: for he purposely left them in the Baye of Portingall, and stole away from them in the night, hoping that the Master thereof, whose name was Edward Spicer, for that he neuer had bene in Virginia, would hardly finde the place, or els being left in so dangerous a place as that was, by meanes of so many men of warre, as at that time were aboard, they should surely be taken, or flaine: but God disappointed his wicked pretences.

The eight and twentieth, George Howe, one of our twelve Assistants was flaine by diuers Sauvages, which were come our to Roanoake, either of purpose to espie our companie, and what number we were, or els to hunt Deere; whereof were many in the Island. These Sauvages being secretly hiden among high reedes, where oftentimes they finde the Deere asleepe, and so kill them, espied our man wading in the water alone, almost naked, without any weapon, save onely a small forked sticke, catching Crabs therewithall, and also being strayed two miles from his companie, shotte at him in the water, where they gave him fiftene wounds with their arrowes: and after they had flaine him with their wooden swords, bent his head in peeces, and shed over the water to the maine.

On the thirtieth of Iulie, Master Stafford, and twentie of our men, passed by water to the Island of Croatoan, with Manteo, who had his mother, and many of his kinred, dwelling in that in that Island, of whome we hoped to vnderstande some newes of our fifteene men, but especial-ly to learne the disposition of the people of the Countrey towards vs, and to renew our olde friendship with them. At our first landing, they seemed as though they would fight with vs: but perceiving vs began to march with our shot towards them, they turned their backs, and fled. Then Manteo their countreyman, called to them in their owne language, whom, as soon as they heard, they returned, and they went away their bowes, and arrowes, and some of them came vnto vs, embracing and entertaining vs friendly, desiring vs not to gather or spill any of their come, for that they had but little. We answered them, that neither their come, nor any other thing of theirs, should be diminished by any of vs, and that our coming was onely to renew the olde loue, that was betwene vs, and them, at the first, and to liue with them as brethren, and friends: which answer seemed to please them well, wherefore they requested vs to walke vp to their Towne, who there treated vs after their manner, and desired vs earnestly, that there might be some token or badge giuen them of vs, whereby we might know them to be our friends, when we met them any where out of the Towne of Island. They tolde vs further, that for want of some such badge, diuers of them were hurt the yere before, being founde out of the Island by Master Lane his companie, whereof they shewed vs one, which at that very instant laye lame, and had lien of that hurt euer since: but they said, they knew our men mistooke them, and hurt them in steede of Winginoes men, wherefore they held vs excused.

August.

The next day, we had conference further with them, concerning the people of Secota, Aquacogoc, & Pomicoake, willing them of Croatoan, to certifie the people of those townes, that if they would accept our friendship, we would willingly recreate them againe, and that all unfriendly dealings past on both partes, should be utterly forgiven, and forgotten. To this the chiefe men of Croatoan answered, that they would gladly doe the best they could, and within seven daies, bying the Weronaes, and chiefe Governours of those townes with them, to our Countour at Roanoak, or their answer. We also vnderstoode of the men of Croatoan, that our man Master Howe, was slaine by the remnant of Winginoes men, dwelling then at Daramongueponke, with whome Winchese kept companie: and also we vnderstood by them of Croatoan, how that the 15. Englishmen left at Roanoke the yere before, by Sir Richard Grenuill, were suddenly set vpon, by 30. of the men of Secota, Aquacogoc, and Daramongueponke, in manner following. They couched themselves secretly behynd the trees, nere the houses, where our men carelessly liued: and hauing perceaued that of those 15. they could see but 11. onely, two of those Sauages appeared to the 11. Englishmen, calling to them by friendly signes, that but two of their chiefe men should come unarmed to speake with those two Sauages, who seemed also to be unarmed. Wherefore two of the chiefe of our Englishmen, went gladly to them: but whilest one of those Sauages traitorously embraced one of our men, the other with his sword of wood, which he had secretly hidden vnder his mantell, stroke him on the head, and slewe him, and presently the other eight and twentie Sauages slewed themselves: the other Englishman perceauing this, fled to his companie, whome the Sauages pursued with their bowes, and arrowes, so fast, that the Englishmen were forced to take the house, wherein all their victuall, and weapons were: but the Sauages forthwith set the same on fire, by meanes whereof, our men were forced to take vp such weapons as came first to hand, and without order to runne forth among the Sauages, with whome they skirmished, about an houre. In this skirmish, another of our men was shot into the mouth with an arrowe, whereof he died: and also one of the Sauages was shot into the side by one of our men, with a yule six arrowe, whereof he died presently. The place where they fought, was of great aduantage to the Sauages, by meanes of the thicke trees, behinde which the Sauages though their nimblenes, defended themselves, and so offended our men with their arrowes, that our men being some of them hurt, retired fighting to the water side, where their boate lay, with which they fled towards Hatorask. By that time they had rowed but a quarter of a mile, they espied their foure fellows coming from a creeke thereby, where they had bene to fetch Officers: these foure they receaued into their boate, leauing Roanoake, and landed on a little Island on the right hand of our entrance into the harbour of Hatorask, where they remained a while, but afterward departed, whither, as yet we knowe not.

Hauing now insufficiently dispatched our business at Croatoan, the same day we departed friendly, taking our leave, and came aboard the flecte at Hatoraske.

The

The eight of Pomicoake, Aqu
past, within whic
nothing of the nant of Wingino which had slaine Roanoake, he the bout midnight, he of Manteo was o
ges dwell, where

The next day,
landed nere the
the woods, so that their fire, and som males, flew into shote one of the
which we hoped uages were our fr
place, because they Howe, and for ha
all had bene deuc
had like to haue p
and women appar
one of them, whic
in steede of a man
him, calling him
our purpose, we g uing the rest with ges with vs ouer grieved Manteo, roans had kept the known that misch

The 13. of Aug chilled in Roan
full seruice.

The 18. Elenc
Stants was deliue
following, and bec
nia. By this time
take in wood, and to prepare their le

Our two shippe arose such a tempe
cut his cables, an come to vs again at the tyme that land.

At this time son
two out of the twe land: for euery on at length, by much England: but the his minde, so that n

The next day, ch
to the Countour, ter and sooner obta
get many sufficien backe againe, with

The eight of August, the Governour hauing long expected the coming of the Weroanfes of Pomioake, Aquascogoc, Secora, and Daramongueponke, seeing that the seuen daies were past, within which they promised to come in, or to send their answers by the men of Croatoan, and no tidings of them heard, being certainly also informed by those men of Croatoan, that the remnant of Wingino his men, which were left alive, who dwelt at Daramongueponke, were they which had slaine George Howe, and were also at the dying of our eleven Englishmen from Roanoake, he thought to differre the renewing thereof no longer. Wherefore the same night, about midnight, he passed over the water, accompanied with Capaine Stafford, and 24. men, whereof Manteo was one, whome wee tooke with vs to be our guide to the place where those Sauages dwelt, where he behaved himselfe toward vs as a most faithfull English man.

The next day, being the ninth of August, in the morning so early, that it was yet darke, wee landed neere the dwelling place of our enemies, and very secretly conveyed our selves through the woods, to that side, where we had their houses betwene vs and the water: and hauing espied their fire, and some sitting about it, we presently sette on them: the miserable soules herewith amazed, fledde into a place of thicke reedes, growing fast by, where our men perceiving them, shotte one of them through the bodie with a bullet, and therewith wee entered the reedes, among which wee hoped to acquite their euill doing towards vs, but wee were deceaued: for those Sauages were our friends, and were come from Croatoan, to gather the coyne, and fruite of that place, because they vnderstoode our enemies were fledde immediatly after they had slaine George Howe, and for haste had left all their coyne, Tabacco, and Pomptions standing in such sorte, that all had bene deuoured of the birds, and Deere, if it had not bene gathered in time: but they had like to haue paid deereley for it: for it was so darke, that they being naked, and their men and women apparellled all so like others, we knewe not but that they were all men: and if that one of them, which was a Weroans wife, had not had her childe at her backe, she had bene slaine in steede of a man, and as happe was, another Sauage knewe Master Stafford, and ranne to him, calling him by his name, whereby he was saued. Finding our selues thus disappointed of our purpose, wee gathered all the coyne, Beale, Pomptions, and Tabacco, that we found ripe, leauing the rest vnspoiled, and tooke Menatoan his wife, with the pong childe, and the other Sauages with vs over the water to Roanoak. Although the mistaking of these Sauages somewhat grieued Manteo, yet he imputed their harme to their owne follie, saying to them, that if their Weroans had kept their promise in comming to the Governour, at the day appointed, they had not knowne that mischance.

The 13. of August, our Sauage Manteo, by the commandement of Sir Walter Raleigh, was christened in Roanoak, and called Lord thereof, and of Daramongueponke, in reward of his faithfull seruice.

The 18. Elenora, daughter to the Governour, and wife to Ananias Dare, one of the Assistants, was deliuered of a daughter in Roanoak, and the same was christened there the Sunday following, and because this childe was the first Christian borne in Virginia, she was named Virginia. By this time our shippes had vnladed the goods and viduals of the planters, and began to take in wood, and fresh water, and to cutwe calke and trimme them for England: the planters also prepared their letters, and tokens, to send backe into England.

Our two shippes, the Lyon, and the Flieboate, almost ready to depart, the 21. of August, there arose such a tempest at notheast, that our Admirall then riding out of the harbour, was forced to cut his cables, and put to Sea, where he lay beating off and on, five dayes before hee could come to vs againe, so that wee feared hee had bene cast away, and the rather, for that at the tyme that the wynde tooke them, the maste, and best of their Sapples, were left a land.

At this time some controuersies rose betwene the Governour, and Assistants, about choosing two out of the twelue Assistants, which should goe backe as factors for the companie into England: for euery one of them refused, saue one ly one, which all the other thought not sufficient: but at length, by much perswasion of the Governour, Christopher Cooper onely agreed to goe for England: but the next day, through the perswasion of diuers of his familiar friends, he changed his minde, so that now the matter woode as at the first.

The next day, the 22. of August, the whole companie, both of the Assistants, and planters, came to the Governour, and with one voice requested him to returne himselfe into England, for the better and sooner obtaining of supplies, and other necessaries for them: but he refused it, and alleaged many sufficient causes, why he would not: the one was, that he could not so suddenly returne backe againe, without his great discredit, leauing the action, and so many, whome he partly had procured through his persuasions, to leave their native Countrey, and undertake that voyage, and that some enemies to him, and the action at his returne into England, would not spare to slander falsely both him, and the action, by saying he went to Virginia, but politike'ly, and to no other end, but to leade so many into a Countrey, in which he never meant to stay himselfe, and there to leaue them behind him. Also he alleaged, that seeing they intended to remoue 50. miles further up into the maine presently, he being then absent, his stuffe, and goods, might be both spoiled, and most of it pilfered away in the carriage, so that at his returne, hee should be either forced to provide himselfe of all such things againe, or els at his comming againe to Virginia, finde himselfe utterly unfurnished, whereof already he had found some prooffe, being but once from them but thre daies. Wherefore he concluded, that he would not goe himselfe.

The next day, not onely the Assistants, but diuers others, as well women, as men, beganne to renewe their requests to the Governour againe, to take vpon him to returne into England for the supplie, and dispatch of all such thinges, as there were to be done, promising to make him their bonde vnder all their handes, and seales, for the safe preserving of all his goods for him at his returne to Virginia, so that if any part thereof were spoiled, or lost, they would see it restored to him, or his Assignes, whensoever the same should be misse, and demanded: which bonde with a testimonie vnder their handes, and seales, they shortly made, and deliuered into his hands. The copie of the testimonie, I thought good to set downe.

May it please you, her Maiesties Subjects of England, wee your friends and Countrey men, the planters in Virginia, doe by these presents let you, and euerie of you to vnderstande, that for the present and specie supplie of certaine our knowen, and apparant lackes, and needs, most requisite and necessari for the good and happie planting of vs, or any other in this lande of Virginia, wee all of one minde, and consent, haue most earnestly intreated, and vncessantly requested Iohn White, Governour of the planters in Virginia, to passe into England, for the better and more assured helpe, and setting forward of the foresayde supplie: and knowing assuredly that hee both can best, and will labour, and take paines in that behalfe for vs all, and hee not once, but often refusing it, for our sakes, and for the honour, and maintenance of the action, hath at last, though much against his will, though our importunacie, yeelded to leaue his government, and all his goods among vs, and himselfe in all our behalves to passe into Englande, of whose knowledge, and fidelitie in handling this matter, as all others, wee doe assure our selues by these presents, and will you to giue all credite thereunto. the five and twentieth of August.

The Governour being at the last, though their extreame intreating, constrained to returne into England, hauing then but halfe a daies respite to prepare him selfe for the same, departed from Roanoake, the seuen and twentieth of August in the morning: and the same daie about midnight, came aboard the Flie boate, who already had water anker, and rode without the barre, the Admirall riding by them. who but the same morning was newly come thither againe. The same day, both the Shippes waied anker, and sette saile for England: at this waying their ankers, the lue of the men which were in the Flie boate, were thowen from the Capstone, which by meanes of a barre that brake, came so fast about vpon them, that the other two barres thereof strooke and hurt most of them so sore, that some of them neuer recouered it: neuertheless they assayed presently againe to waigh their anker, but being so weakened with the first sting, they were not able to weigh it, but were thowen downe, and hurt the seconde time. Wherefore hauing in all but fiftene men aboard, and most of them by this infortunate beginning so huised, and hurt, they were forced to cut their Cable, and leese their anker. Neuertheless, they kept companie with the Admirall, vntill the seuenteenth of September, at which time wee fell with Corou, and saue Flores.

September.

The eighteenth, perceiving of all our fiftene men in the Flie boate, there remained but five, which by meanes of the former mischance, were able to stande to their labour: wherefore vnderstanding that the Admirall meant not to make any haste for England, but linger about the Islande of Tercera for purchase, the Flie boate departed for Englande with letters, where we hoped by the helpe of God to arrive shortly: but by that time wee had continued our course homeward, about twentie daies, hauing had sometimes scarce, and variable winde, our fresh water also by leaking almost consumed, there arose such a storme at Roxheast, which for

for 6. daies cease could recouer in and two of them daies together cooking water, being now we expected

The 16. of October same land at Dublin, and a p had we any boate whom we vnder presently with fr

The 18. the Ship of the new victual but within 4. dayes speboate, and the Dingen,

The first the p readie to put in Ireland, the la end, and were su

The 5. the Ship Cometwall.

The 8. we arriv to Portsmouth, and all his company sickness, and death boar, but were fo perished there, if a the chiefe men th ether saylers, who

The names riued

John
Roger
Anan
Christ
Thom
John
Dyon
Roger Geor
Simo
Nich
Thom
Anth
John

for 6. dayes ceased not to blowe so exceeding, that we were driven further in thole 6. then wee could recover in thirteene daies: in which time others of our saylers began to fall very sicke, and two of them dyed, the weather also continued so close, that our Mastre sometimes in foure daies together could see neither Sunne nor Starre, and all the bevrage we could make, with drinking water, vj gges of beere, and lees of wine which remained, was but 3. gallons, and therfore now we expected nothing but by famine to perish at Sea.

October.

The 16. of October we made land, but we knew not what land it was, bearing in with the same land at that day: about Sunne set we put into a harbour, where we found a Houke of Dublin, and a pynelle of Hampton ryding, but we knew not as yet what place this was, neither had we any boate to gae a Hoare, untill the pynelle sent off their boate to vs with 6. of 8. men, of whom we understood we were in Downwicke in the west parts of Ireland: they also releued vs presently with fresh water, wyne, and other fresh meate.

The 18. the Governour, and the Mastre ryd to Dingen Cushe, 5. myles distant, to take order of the new vicualling of our Flye boate for England, and for reliefe of our sicke and hurt men, but within 4. dayes after the boatswane, the steward, and the boatswanes made dyed aboord the flyeboate, and the 28. the Masters mate and two of our chiefe Shaplers were brought sicke to Dingen.

November.

The first the governour shipped him selfe in a ship called the Spunkie, which at that time was ready to put to Sea from Dingen for England, leauing the Flyeboate and all his company in Ireland, the same day we set saile, and on the thirde day we set with the Northside of the land end, and were shut by the Seuerne, but the next day we doubled the same, for Monts bay.

The 5. the Governour landed in England at Spartalet, neere Saint Michaels mount in Cozertwall.

The 8. we arrived at Hampton, where we understood that our consoye the Admittall was come to Portsmouth, and had bene there three weekes before: and also that Fernando the Mastre with all his company were not onely come home without any purchase, but also in such weakenesse by sicknes, and death of their cheefest men, that they were scarce able to bring their ship into the harbour, but were forced to let fall anchor aboue, which they could not way againe, but might all haue perished there, if a small barke by great hap had not come to them to helpe them. The names of the chiefe men that dyed are these, Roger Large, Iohn Mathew, Thomas Smith, and some other ther saylers, whose names I know not at the writing hereof. An. Do. 1587.

The names of all the men, women and Children, which safely arrived in Virginia, and remained to inhabite there. 1587.

Anno Regni Reginae Elizabethę. 19.

John White.
Roger Bailie.
Ananias Dare,
Christopher Cooper.
Thomas Steuens, Iohn Sampson.
Dyonis Haruic.
Roger Prat.
George Howe,
Simon Fernando, Nicholas Iohnson, Thomas Warner,
Anthony Cage,
Iohn Iones.

William Willes.
Iohn Brooke,
Curbert White,
Iohn Bright.
Clement Tayler.
William Sole,
Iohn Cotimur.
Humfrey Newton,
Thomas Colman.
Thomas Gramme, Marke Bennet, Iohn Gibbes, Iohn Stilmann,
Robert Wilkinson.

Asa,

Iohn

John Tydway, Ambrose Viccars.
Edmond English.
Thomas Topan,
Henry Berrye, Richard Berrye, John Spendloue.
John Hemmington.
Thomas Butler.
Edward Powell.
John Burden.
James Hynde.
Thomas Ellis.
William Browne.
Michael Myllet.
Thomas Smith.
Richard Kemme.
Thomas Harris.
Richard Tauerner.
John Earnest.
Henry Johnson.
John Starte.
Richard Darige.
William Lucas.
Arnold Archard.
John Wright.
William Dutton.
Morris Allen.
William Waters.
Richard Arthur.
John Chapman.
William Clement.
Robert Little.
Hugh Tayler.
Richard Wildye.
Lewes Wotton.
Michael Bishop.
Henry Browne.
Henry Rufoote.
Richard Tomkins.
Henry Dorrell.
Charles Florrie.
Henry Mylton.
Henry Payne.
Thomas Harris.
William Nicholes.
Thomas Pheuens.
John Borden.
Thomas Scot.

Peter Little.
John Wyles,
Brian Wyles,
George Martyn.
Hugh Pattenfon.
Martyn Sutton.
John Farre.
John Bridger.
Griffen Iones.
Richard Shaberdege.
James Lasse.
John Cheuen.
Thomas Hewet.
William Berde.

Women.

Elyoner Dare.
Margery Harue.
Agnes Wood.
Wenefrid Powell.
Ioyce Archard.
Iane Iones.
Elizabeth Glane.
Iane Pierce.
Audry Tappan.
Alis Chapman.
Emmie Merrimoth.
Colman.
Margaret Lawrence.
Ioan Warren.
Iane Mannering.
Rose Payne.
Elizabeth Viccars.

John Sampson.
Robert Ellis.
Ambrose Viccars.
Thomas Archard.
Thomas Humfrey.
Tomas Smart.
George Howe.
John Prat.
William Wythers.

Boyes and Children.

Children borne in Virginia.

Virginia Dare.
Haruye.

Sauages.

Manteo. } That were in Englande and returned home into Virginia with them.
Towaye. }

The first voyage intended for the supply of the Colonie planted in Virginia by John VVhite which being vnder taken in the yeere 1588 by casualtie tooke no effect.

After the Governours returne out of Virginia the 20. of November 1587. he delivered his letters and other advertisements concerning his last voyage and state of the plantets to Sir Walter Raleigh whereupon he forthwith appointed a pinnesse to be sent thither with all such necessaries as he understood they stood in neede of: and also wrote his

his letters unto cl all convenient sp
things needeful
ing. Which pin
bnder the charge but for a faire w report of the wor
with the power o
a readines in an was personally o meanes for this p
of the planters fo
tonnes called the uision, with cerca

Thus the 22.
of Cornwal, and our company wo anker againe and

The next day
chase to 4. ships,
end, one of these
The 24. day we
we hoped also to

The 26. of Ap stayed for it. By him for an Engli ncere to vs we pe amassed hauing
readie to clap vs
one prepared with answered of fut
bare from vs and

The 27. day in still at Northeast

The 28. day t
cried a sape to cl

The 29. in th
farre as we coul
it was an hulke
nelle perceiuing Biaue againe. A some men and o againe to the cha all night in with change of wind

The first day
The 3. being ber: and the night
consoye also, ha
we could neither our course for th
The same day
berp wel manne
we parted frind
les we suspected

his letters vnto them, wherem among other matters he comforted them with promise, that with all conuenient speede he would prepare a good supply of shipping and men with sufficient of all thinges needefull, which he intended, God willing, should be with them the Sommer following. Which pinnesse and fleet were accordingly prepared in the West countrey at Biddeford vnder the charge of Sir Richard Greeneuil. This fleet being now in a readines only staying but for a faire wind to put to Sea, at the same time there was slyed throughout all England such rejoyce of the wonderfull preparation and munible fleets made by the king of Spaine toynd with the power of the Pope for the inuading of England; that most of the ships of warre then in a readines in any haven in England were stayed for seruice at home: And Sir Richard Greeneuil was personally commanded not to depart out of Coznewall. The voyage for Virginia by these meanes for this yere thus disappointed, the Gouvernour notwithstanding labored for the reliefe of the planters so earnestly, that he obtained two small pinnesses the one of them being of 30. tonnes called the Bzaue, the other of 25, called the Roe, wherein 15. planters and all their provision, with certaine reliefe for those that wintered in the Countrey was to be transported.

Thus the 22. of Aprill 1588. we put ouer the barre at Biddeford in the edge of the Northside of Coznewall, and the same night we came to an anker vnder the Ile of Lundy, where some of our company went on land: After we had roade there about the space of thre howers we wayed anker againe and all that night we bare along the coast of Coznewall.

The next day being S. Georges day and the 23. of Aprill shil bearing along the coast we gaue chase to 4. ships, & boyded them & forced them all to come to anker by vs in a final bay at the lands end, out of these ships we tooke nothing but 3. men, & the same night we weighed & put to Sea.

The 24. day we gaue chase to 2. ships, the one of them being a Scot the other a Breton. These we boyded also & tooke from them whatsoeuer we could find worth the taking, & so let them goe.

The 26. of Aprill we escried a ship on sterne of vs, for whom we strooke our coppe sayle, and stayed for it. By that time he came with vs we saw in his flagge a redb cross: whereupon we helde him for an Englishman, & gaue ouer our preparation to fight with him. But when he was come neere to vs we perceived his flagge not to be a right S. George: whereupon we were somewhat amazed hauing so farre mistaken, for it was a very tall ship, and excellently well appointed & now ready to clasp vs aboord. And it was not now neede to bid euery man to bestirre himselfe, for each one prepared with all speed to fight. In the meane time we hapied them whence they were: They answered of flushing, bound for Barbarie. And they perceiving vs to be Englishmen of warre bare from vs and gaue vs a peece, and we gaue them two peeces and so departed.

The 27. day in the morning we were come with the heigh of cape Finister, the wind being still at Northeast.

The 28. day the wind shifted: about foure of the clocke in the afternoone the same day we escried a sayle to the weather of vs, whom we kept so neere vnto vs as we could all that night.

The 29. in the morning we gaue chase to the same ship being then to the wind of vs almost as farre as we could ken. As soone as our pinnesse came vp to them, the pinnesse fought with the ship, & it was an Hulke of 200. tonnes & more, but after a few great shot bestowed on both sides, the pinnesse perceiving her confort not able to come to ayd her left the Hulke & came roome with the Bzaue againe. At their coming they desired the Captaine & Master of the Bzaue to lend them some men and other things wherof they had neede. Which thinges put aboord the they returned againe to the chase of the Hulke earnestly, and with full purpose to boord her. But the Hulke bare all night in with the coast of Spaine, and by morning were so neere land, that we fearing cyther change of wind or to be calmed gaue ouer the fight and put off to Sea againe.

May.

The first day of May being Wednesday the wind came large at Northeast.

The 3. being friday we gaue chase to another tall ship, but it was night before we spake to her: and the night grew darke suddenly in such sort, that we lost sight both of the great ship & of our consort also, hauing thus in the darke lost our pinnesse, & knowing our barke so bad of sayle that we could neither take nor leue, but were rather to be taken or lest of euery ship we met, we made our course for the Ile of Madera, hoping there to find our pinnesse abiding for vs.

The same day following being the 5. of May we spake to a man of warre of Rochel of 60. tons, very well manned & hauey appointed being bound, as he said for Peru: hauing hailed ecb other, we parted friendly in outward they, giuing ecb other a volcy of shot & a great peece: but neuertheless we suspected by which followed: for this Rocheller hauing tak perfect view of our ship, men, & ordnance, towards cueuing fell on sterne of vs: and alsoone as it was darke left vs, and returned to vs confort which was a cal ship of 100. tonne lying then on hull to weather of vs out of ken, hauing 84. men in her, whereof 50. were smal shot, and 12. muskets, and in the ship 10. peeces of ordnance. This ship being this night certified by her confort that viewed vs, of what force we were and how bad of sayle, this greater shipooke in 20. of the chieftest men that were in the smallest ship, and presently gaue vs chase.

The next morning being Monday and the 6. of May, we escribed the m in the weather of vs, so that it was in vaine to seeke by sight, but rather by sight to helpe our selues. The same day about 2. of the clocke in the afternoone they were come with vs. We hapled them, but they would not answer. Then we waued them to leewardes of vs, and they waued vs with a sword amayne, sitting their sailes to clappe vs aboord, which we perceiuing gaue them one whole side: with one of our great shot their Mastler gonners shoolder was stroken away, and our Mastler gonner with a smal bullet was shot into the head. Being by this time grappled and aboord each of other the fight continued without ceasing one houre and a halfe. In which fight were hurt & laine on both sides 23. of the chieftest men, hauing most of them some 6. or 8. woundes, and some 10. or 12. woundes. Being thus hurt and spoiled they robbed vs of all our victuals, powder, weapons and iouillon, sauing a smal quantity of biscuitt to serue vs scarce for England. Our Mastler and his Mate were deadly wounded, so that they were not able to come forth of their beds. My selfe was wounded twise in the head, once with a sword, and another time with a pike, and hurt also in the side of the buttocke with a shot. Thre of our passengers were hurt also, whereof one had 10. or 12. woundes our Mastler hurt in the face with a pike and thrust quite through the head. Being thus put to our close fights, and also much pressed with cabbens and vnserviceable folkes we could not stirre to handle our weapons nor charge a peece: againe hauing spent all the powder in our flackes and charges which we had present for our defence, they cut downe our netting and entred so many of their men as could stand vpon our poope and forecable, from whence they playd extremely vpon vs with their shot. As thus we stood resolu'd to die in fight, the Captaine of the Frenchmen crid to vs to yeld and no force should be offered. But after we had yeldd, they knowing so many of their best men to be hurt and in danger of present death, began to grow into a new furie, in which they would haue put vs to the sword had not their Captaine charged them, and perswaded them to the contrary. Being at length pacified they fell on all handes to ridding and carrying aboord all the next day vntill 4. of the clocke: at which time by our greedy labing both their owne boate and ours, they sunke the one and split the other by the ships side: by meanes whereof they left vs two cables and ankers, all our ordnance and most part of our sailes, which other wise had ben taken away also. Furthermore they doubting the wind would arise, and night at hand, & a cal ship at that day by meanes of the calme in sight, they came aboord vs with their ship, and tooke in their men that were in vs, who left vs not at their departing any thing worth the carrying away. Being thus ranfacked and vbed as is aforesaid in all foyses, we determined (as our best shift in so hard a case) to returne for England, and caused all our able and unhurt men, to sal to netwe rigging & mending our sailes, tacklings, and such things as were spilled in our fight. By this occasion, God iustly punishing our former threuerie of our euil disposed mariners, we were of force constrained to break of our voyage intended for the reliefe of our Colony left the yere before in Virginia, and the same night to set our course for England, being then about 50. leagues to the Northeast of Madera.

The 7. of May being Wednesday in the forenoone the wind came large at East northeast and we hailed off as farre west and by north as we could vntill the 10. of May, fearing to meete with any moye men of warre, for that we had no maner of weapons left vs.

The 11. the wind larged moye, and the next foith we continued our due course for England.

The 17. of May we thrust our selues west of Visbant, & sounded, but found no ground at 110 fathoms. The same day at night we sounded againe, and found ground at 80. fathoms.

The 20. being Sunday we fell with the coast of Ireland.

The 21. in the forenoone we saw the Northside of Cornwel at the lands end.

The 22. of May we came to an anker betweene Lunday and Darting point neere vnto Chawell key, where we rood vntill the next tyde, and thence we put ouer the barre, and the same day landed at Biddesford.

Our other pinelle whose company we had lost before the last cruell fight, returned also home into Cornwell within fewe weekes after our arrival, without performing our intended voyage for the reliefe of the planters in Virginia, which thereby were not a litle distressed.

The

woyde, none of knownen, & frequentations aforesaid of our grace these presents for authoritie to the and to those his ed, and to their be at any time or without let, intertion, patent, charter, ny maner of meares, Realmes, Dominions, Territories, Seas, maner of other pward, is to be by age, and passage, etie or hurt then, wour, weapons, or may be requisite, trarie therof nor and his sayd aforesaid of euery of his sa their reliance in aucts, Joyntes, Waics, ypoites, and maner of priuilees yelding and pay, and siluer oare, pbert and his sayd or any of them sh by vs, our heires, plynmouth, ac sayd heires and a marchandizes w moyeour, we ha successos, of our authorize the say assignes and eueites, Seas, Rur Gylbert or his al discovered and stred, frequented licence in writin for euery of th one of them, that

The Letters patents of the Queenes Maiestie, graunted to Master Adrian Gylbert and others for the search and discoverie of the Northwell Passage to China.

HElizabeth by the grace of God of England, France, & Ireland Queene, Defender of the faith, &c. To all, to whom these presents shall come, greeting: So farre as our trustie and welbeloued subiect Adrian Gylbert of Sandwidge in the Countie of Deuan, Gentleman, to his great costes and charges, hath greatly & earnestly traualled and sought, and yett both trauel & secke, & by diuers meanes in deuouretch & labourerch, that the Passage vnto China & the Isles of Molluccas, by the Northwellward, Northeastwarde, or Northwarde, vnto which part of partes of the world, none of our Loyal subiects haue hitherto had any traffike of trade, may be discovered, knownen, & frequented by the subiects of this our Realme: Know ye therefore that for the consideracions aforesayd & for diuers other good considerations vs thereunto specially mouing, We of our grace especiall, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, haue giuen and graunted, and by these presents for vs, our heires and successors, doe giue and graunt free libertie, power, and full authoritie to the sayd Adrian Gylbert, & to any other person by him or his heires to be assigned, and to those his Associates and assistants, whose names are written in a schedule hereunto annexed, and to their heires, and to one assignee of each of them, and ech of their heires at all times, and at any time or times after the date of these presents, vnder our Banners and Ensignes freely, without let, interruption, or restraint of vs, our heires or successors, any lawe, statute, proclamation, patent, charter, or prouiso to the contrary notwithstanding, to sayle, make voyage, and by any manner of meanes to passe and to depart out of this our Realme of Engleterre, or any of our Realmes, Dominions, or Territories into all or any Isles, Countries, Regions, Prouinces, Territories, Seas, Rivers, Portes, Bays, Creekes, armes of the Sea, and all Hauens, and all manner of other places whatsoever, that by the sayd Northwellward, Northeastward, or Northward, is to be by him, his associates or assignes discovered, and for and in the sayde sayling, voyage, and passage, to haue and vse so many Ships, Barks, Pinnelles, or other vessels of any quantitie or burthen, with all the furnituz of men, victuals, and all maner of necessary prouision, armour, weapouns, ordnance, targets, and appurtenances whatsoever, as to such a voyage shall be requisite, conuenient or commodious, any lawe, statute, ordinance or prouiso to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. And also we doe giue and graunt to the sayd Adrian Gylbert, and his sayd associates, and to such assignee of him, & his heires, and to the heires & one assignee of euery of his sayde associates for ever, full power and absolute authoritie to trade and make their residence in any of the sayd Isles, Countries, Regions, Prouinces, Territories, Seas, Rivers, Portes, Bays, and Hauens, and all maner of other places whatsoever, with all commodities, profits, and emoluments in the sayd place or any of them, growing and arising, with all maner of priuileges, prerogatiues, iurisdictions and royalties both by sea and land whatsoever, yielding and paying thereto vnto vs, our heires and successors, the tenth part of all such golde and silver oare, pearles, jewels, and precious stones, of the value thereof, as the sayd Adrian Gylbert and his sayd associates, their heires and assignes, seruants, factors, or workemen, and euery or any of them shall finde, the sayd tenth to be deliuered duely to our Customes, or other officers by vs, our heires or successors thereunto assigned, in the Portes of London, Dartmouth, or Wymmouth, at which three places onely the sayd Adrian Gylbert, and his sayd associates, their sayd heires and assignes, shall lade, charge, arriue, and discharge all maner of wares, goods, and marchandizes whatsoever to the sayd voyage, and newe trade belonging or appertaining. And moreover, we haue giuen, graunted, and authorized, and by these presents for vs, our heires and successors, of our grace especiall, certaine knowledge, and meere motion, doe giue, graunt, and authorize the sayd Adrian Gylbert, and his sayd associates for ever, their heires, and their sayde assignes and euery of them, that if the aforesayd Isles, Countries, Regions, Prouinces, Territories, Seas, Rivers, Portes, Bays, or Hauens, or any other of the premises by the sayd Adrian Gylbert or his associates, their heires and their sayd assignes, or any of them to be found by them discovered, and traffiked vnto by any trade as aforesayde, shall be by any other our subiects visited, frequented, haunted, traded vnto or inhabited by the wapes aforesayd, without the speciall licence in writing of the sayd Adrian Gylbert and his associates, and their heires and assignes for ever, or by the most part of them, so that the sayd Adrian Gylbert, his heires or assignes be one of them, that then aswell their Shippe, or Shippes in any such voyage or voyages vled, as all and singular their goods, wares, and marchandizes, or any other things whatsoever, from or to any of the places aforesaid transported, that so shall presume to visite, frequent, haunt, trade vnto, or inhabit, shall be forfeited and confiscated, ipso facto, the one halfe of the same goods and marchandizes, or other things whatsoever, of the value thereof to be to the vse of vs, our heires or successours, and the other moytie thereof to be to the vse of the said Adrian Gylbert, and his said associates, their heires and assignes for ever: and vnto the said Adrian Gylbert and his said associates, their heires and assignes wee impose, giue, assigne, create and confirme this name peculiar to be named by, to sue and to be sued by, that is to wit, by the name of the Colleagues of the fellowship for the discouerie of the Northwest passage, and them for vs, our heires and successours by that name doe incorporate, and do erect and create as one body corporate to haue continuance for ever. Wherevnto the sayd Adrian Gylbert, and his sayd associates, and vnto their heires and their sayd assignes for ever, by name of the Colleagues of the fellowship, for the discouerie of the Northwest passage, we haue giuen, graunted, & confirmed, and doe by these presents giue, graunt, and confirme full power and authoritie from time to time, and at all times hereafter, to make orders, decrees, and enact, constitute and ordeine, and appoint all such ordinances, orders, decrees, lawes, and acts, as the sayd newe corporation of body politique, Colleagues of the fellowship for the discouerie of the Northwest passage, shall thinke meete, necessary, & conuenient, so that they or any of them be not contrary to the lawes of this realme, & of this our present graunt.

And wee by our Royall prerogative, and fullnesse of our authoritie of our grace especiall, certayne knowlidge and meete motion, doe establish, confirme and ratifie all such ordinances, orders, decrees, lawes and acts to be in so full and great power and authoritie, as we, our heires or successours may or can in any such case graunt, confirme, or ratifie. And further for the better encouragement of our louing subjects in this discouerie, wee by our Royall prerogative, and fullnesse of authoritie for vs, our heires and successours, doe giue, graunt, establish, confirme, ordeine, ratifie and allowe by these presents, to the sayd Adrian Gylbert and to his associates, and to the heires and assignes of them and every of them for ever, and to all other person or persons of our louing subjects whatsoever that shall hereafter trauell, saile, discover, or make voyage as aforesayd to any the Isles, Mainelands, Countreies of Territories whatsoever; by vertue of this our graunt to be discovered, that the heires and assignes of them and every of them being bozne within any of the Isles, Mainelands & Countreies, or Territories whatsoever before mentioned, shall haue and enjoy all the priuileges of free Denizens, as persons native bozne within this our Realme of England, or within our allegiance for ever, in such like ample manner and forme, as if they were or had bene bozne and personally resident within our sayde Realme, any lawe, statute, proclamation, custome or vslage to the contrary hereof in any wise notwithstanding. Wherevnto, for the consideration aforesayde by vertue hereof, wee giue and graunt vnto the sayde Adrian Gylbert, his heires and assignes for ever, free libertie, licence and priuilege, that during the space of five yeeres next & immediately ensuing the date hereof, it shall not be lawfull for any person or persons whatsoever, to visite, haunt, frequent, trade, or make voyage to any Isles, Mainelands, Countreies, Regions, Prouinces, Territories, Seas, Riuers, Portes, Bayes, and Hauens, nor to any other Hauens or places whatsoever hitherto not yet discovered by any of our subjects by vertue of this graunt to be traded vnto, without the speciall consent and good liking of the sayd Adrian Gylbert, his heires or assignes first had in writing. And if any person or persons of the associates of the sayde Adrian, his heires or assignes, or any other person or persons whatsoever, see of this discouerie, shall doe any act or acts contrary to the tenour and true meaning hereof, during the space of the sayde five yeeres, that then the partie and parties so offending, they and their heires for ever shall loose (ipso facto) the benefite and priuilege of this our graunt, and shall stand and remaine to all intents and purposes as persons exempted out of this graunt: And further by vertue hereof, we giue & graunt for vs, our heires and successours at all times during the space of five yeeres next ensuing the date hereof, free libertie and licence, and full authoritie to the sayd Adrian Gylbert, and his heires and assignes, that if it shall happen any one or more in any shippe or shippes sayling on their sayde voyage, to become mutinous, seditious, disorderly, or any way vnruely to the puiudice or hinderance of the hope for successe in the attempt of prosecuting of this discouerie or trade intended, to vse or execute vpon him or them so offending, such punishment, correction, or execution as the cause shall be found in iustice to require by the verbit of twelue of the companie twome thereunto, as in such a case appertained: That expresse mention of the certaintie of the menues, or of other giftes or graunts by vs to the sayde Adrian Gylbert and his associates before this time made is not mentioned in these presents, or any other lawe, act, statute, p'ouiso, graunt, or proclamation

tion heretofore
In wience it as Westminster,

The first

for necessarie
The seeing foot William Sand
uaille which was vnto the rest of the acte of 1541

Thus therfore
uent of June,
the one being of named the Spoon
are these followin mate, John Iane
William Dicke
Christopher Gor

The Spooner Spinners.

The 7. of June
our victuals.

The 8. day the
where we remaine

The 13. the w

The 14. with

The 15. we de

The 16. we w

Shilley where the

and I went abou

all the Islands, ro

thercunto conuer

The 28. in G

The 29. very

The 30. foggy

The first of J

and shot twice of wound him into

The 2. we ha

The 3. we ha

that they burst ou

ster shot at them

the barres of the all would not p

tion heretofore made or hereafter to be made to the contrary hereof in any wise notwithstanding. In witness whereof, we have caused these our Letters to be made patents: Witness our selfe at Westminster, the first day of February, in the five and twentie yere of our Reigne.

The first voyage of Master John Daus, vnder taken in June 1585. for the Discoverie of the North west Passage, Written by John Ianes Marchant, seruant to the worshipfull M. William Sanderfon.

Certaine Honourable personages and worthy Gentlemen of the Court and Countrey, with diuers worshipfull Barchanes of London and of the West Countrey, moued with desire to aduance Gods glory and to seeke the good of their native Countrey, consulting together of the likelihood of the Discoverie of the North west passage, which heretofore had bene attempted, but unhappily giuen ouer by accidents vnllooked for, which turned the enterprisers from their principall purpose, resolved after good deliberation, to put downe their adventures to prouide for necessary shipping, and a fit man to be chiefe Conductour of this so hard an enterpryse. The setting forth of this action was committed by the adventurers, especially to the care of M. William Sanderfon Barchant of London, who was so forward therein, that besides his trauaile which was not small, hee became the greatest adventurer with his purse, and commended vnto the rest of the company one M. John Daus, a man very well grounded in the principles of the arte of Nauigation, for Captaine and chiefe Pilot of this exploye.

Thus therefore all things being put in a readines, wee departed from Dartmouth the seuenth of June, towards the discoverie of the aforesayd North west passage, with two Barks, the one being of 50. tunnes, named the Sunneshyne of London, and the other being 35. tunnes, named the Mooneshyne of Dartmouth. In the Sunneshyne we had 23. persons, whose names are these following, M. John Daus Captaine, William Elston Master, Richard Pope Masters mate, John Iane Barchant, Henry Daue gunner, William Crosse boatwayne, John Bagge, Walter Arthur, Luke Adams, Robert Coxworthe, John Ellis, John Kelly, Edward Helman, William Dicke, Andrew Maddocke, Thomas Hill, Robert Wars Carpenter, William Russel, Christopher Gorney boy: James Cole, Francis Ridley, John Russel, Robert Cornish, Musicians.

The Mooneshyne had 19. persons, William Bruton Captaine, John Ellis Master, the rest Mariners.

The 7. of June the Captaine and the Master bywe out a proposition for the continuance of our victuals.

The 8. day the winde being at South west and West south west, wee put in for Falmouth, where we remained vntill the 13.

The 13. the winde blewe at North, and being saye weather we departed.

The 14. with contrarie winde we were forced to put into Sylley.

The 15. we departed thence, hauing the winde North & by East moderate and saye weather.

The 16. we were diuenc backe againe, and were constrained to arrive at newe Gymbsie at Sylley: here the winde remained contrary 12. dayes, and in that space the Captaine, the Master and I went about all the Islands, and the Captaine did platte out and describe the situation of all the Islands, rocks and harboroughs to the exact vse of Nauigation, with lynes and scale thereunto conuenient.

The 28. in Gods name we departed the winde being Easterly, but calme.

The 29. very foggie.

The 30. foggie.

The first of July we sawe great foye of Porpoises, The Master called for an harping ppon, July and shot twice of thise: sometimes he missed, and at last shot one and strooke him in the side, and wound him into the shippe: when we had him aboyde, the Master sayd it was a darlie dead.

The 2. we had some of the fish sodden, and it did eate as sweete as any mutton.

The 3. we had more in sight, and the Master went to shooote at them, but they were so great, that they burst our ppons, and we lost both fish, ppons, pastime and all: yet neuertheless, the Master shot at them with a pike, and had welnigh gotten one, but he was so strong that he burst off the barres of the pike and went away: then heeooke the boat hooke, and hit one with that, but all would not preuaile, so at length we let them alone.

The

They depart
from Sylley.

The first we sawe a very great Whale, and every day after we sawe Whales continually.

The 16, 17, 18. we sawe great Hoys of Whales.

The 19. of July we fell into a great whirling and bustling of a tyde, setting to the Northwards and sailing about halfe a league we came into a very calme Sea, which bent to the South southwest: Here we heard a mighty great roaring of the Sea as if it had bene the breach of some South-west, the ayre being so foggie and full of thicke mist, that we could not see the one ship from the other being a very small distance asunder: so the Captaine and the Master being in distrust howe the tyde might see them, caused the Spooneshine to hoyle out her boate and to sound, but they could not finde ground in 300. fathoms and better. Then the Captaine, Master, and I went towards the breach, to see what it should be, giving charge to our gunners that at every glasse they should shoote off a musket shot, to the intent we might keepe our selues from loosing them: Then comming nere to the breach, we met many Islands of yce floating, which had quickly compassed us about: then we went vpon some of them, and did perceiue that all the roaring which we heard, was caused onely by the rouling of this yce together: Our company seeing vs not to returne according to our appointment, left off shooting muskets, and began to shoote fankonets, for they feared some mishap had befallen vs, but before night we came aboye againe with our boat laden with yce, which made very good fresh water. Then wee bent our course towards the North, hoping by that meanes to double the land.

The rouling of the yce together made a great roaring.

Yce turned into water.

The 20. as we sailed along the coast the fogge broke by, and wee discovered the land, which was the most desoynd rocky and mountainous land that euer we sawe: The first sight which we did see was as if it had bene in forme of a sugar loafe, standing to our sight above the cloudes, for that it did shewe out the togge like a white lisse in the skye, the tops altogether couered with snowe, and the shoare beset with yce a league off into the Sea, making such yskome noyse as that it seemed to be the true patterne of desolation, and after the same our Captaine named it, The land of Desolation.

The land of Desolation.

The 21. the winde came Northerly and ouerblewe, so that we were constrained to bend our course South againe, for we perceiued that we were runne into a very deepe Bay, where wee were almost compassed with yce, for we sawe very much toward the North northeast, West and South-west: and this day and this night we cleared our selues of the yce, running South south-west along the shoare.

Upon Thursday being the 22. of this moneth, about thre of the clocke in the morning, we hoyle out our boate, and the Captaine with sixe saylers went towards the shoare, thinking to find a landing place, for the night before we did perceiue the coast to be void of yce to our iudgement, and the same night we were all perswaded that wee had scene a canoa rowing along the shoare, but after wards we fell in some doubt of it, but we had no great reason so to doe. The Captaine rowing towards the shoare, willed the Master to heare in with the land after him, and before he came nere the shoare by the space of a league, or about two miles, hee found so much yce, that he could not get to land by any meanes. Here our mariners put to their lines to see if they could get any fish, because there were so many seales vpon the coast, and the birds did beate vpon the water, but all was in vaine: The water about this coast was very blacke and thicke, like to a filthy standing poole, we sounded and had ground in 120. fathoms, While the Captaine was rowing to the shoare, our men sawe woods vpon the rocks like to the rocks of Newfoundland, but I could not discern them. yet it might be so very well: for we had wood floating vpon the coast every day, and the Spooneshine tooke up a tree at Sea not farre from the coast being sixtie foote of length and fourteene handfulls about, having the roote vpon it: After, the Captaine came aboye the weather being very calme and saye we bent our course toward the South, with intent to double the land.

Very blacke water.

floating wood

The 23. we coasted the land which did lye East northeast and West southwest.

The 24. the winde being very faire at East, we coasted the land which did lie East & West, not being able to come nere the shoare by reason of the great quantitie of yce. At this place, because the weather was somewhat colde by reason of the yce, & the better to encourage our men, their allowance was increased: The Captaine and the Master tooke order that euery melle being five persons, should haue halfe a pound of bread and a kan of beere euery morning to breakfast. The weather was not very colde, but the ayre was moderate like to our April weather in England: when the winde came from the land of the yce it was somewhat colde, but when it came off the sea it was very hott.

Colde by reason of yce.

They sailed South-westward about foure dayes.

The 25. of this moneth we departed from sight of this land, at sixe of the clocke in the morning, directing our course to the North-westward, hoping in Gods mercy to finde our desired passage, and so on

The 29. of July from vs. The water take some we were nere the coast, went into the land, where were hauing most for water and most a small shoare and Bay. The water the Master and I did vs, made a large hearing them, the likewise. The Canoa about a ship partly to warme others of their cold from our shippe, to see to allure the pdaunting, and mther Islands, and the other being in the shoare, and the imbractings and hands, would sometimes, before he appointed to be led to the sunne and one of them other things as dancing. So the

The next morning to vs to come up to the top of the seales skinn, and king a noyle like slaying in their by the sunne after killed my hand, on this single acc them: we bought skinnes: their but that we were full of buskins of the skinnes with their and thicke thong found in them the ked of them, and of an other: for it was betwene the double dealing, and solaters and co

During the time both fire, spuse where we found discovered, we knew were, because they gaue them to vs passage, and so continued aboute foure dayes.

The 29. of July, we discovered land in 64. degrees 15. mi. of latitude, bearing North-east from vs. The winde being contrary to goe to the Northward, we bare in with this land to take some view of it, being utterly voyde of the pester of pee, and very temperate. Comming neere the coast, we found many fayre soundes & good roads for shipping, and many great inlets into the land, where by we iudged this land, to be a great number of Islands standing together. Here hauing moored our barke in good order, we went on shoare vpon a small Island, to seeke for water and wood. Vpon this Island we did perceiue that there had bene people: for we found a small shoe and peece of leather sowed with sinewes, and a peece of furre, and wooll like to Beuer. Then we went vpon another Island on the other side of our ships: And the Captaine the Gaffer and I, being got vp to the top of an high rocke, the people of the country hauing espied vs, made a lamentable noyse, as we thought, with great outcries and shriecchings: we hearing them, thought it had bene the howling of wolues. At last I hallowed againe, and they likewise cryed. Then we perceiuing where they stood, some on the shoare, and one rowing in a Canoa about a small Island fast by them, we made a great noyse partly to assure them to vs, and partly to warne our company of them. Whereupon Mr. Brown, and the master of his ship with others of their company, made great haste towards vs, and brought one Musicians with them from our shippe, purposing either by force to rescue vs, if neede should so require, or with curtesie to assure the people. When they came vnto vs, we caused our Musicians to play, our selues dauncing, and making many signes of friendship. At length there came 10. Canoas from the other Islands, and two of them came so neere the shoare where we were, that they talked with vs, the other being in their boats a prettie way off. Their pronounciation was very hollow though the shoare, and their speech such as we could not understand: onely we assured them by friendly imbracings and signes of curtesie. At length one of them pointing vp to the sunne with his hande, would presently strike his breast so hard, that we might here the blowe. This he did many times, before he would any way trust vs. Then John Ellis the master of the Mooneshine, was appointed to vse his best policie to gaine their friendship: who strooke his breast and pointed to the sunne after their order: which when he had diuerse times done, they began to trust him, and one of them came on shoare, to whom we tyed our caps, stockings and gloves, and such other things as then we had about vs, playing with our musicke, and making signes of ioy, and dancing. So the night comming we bade them farewell, and went aboard our barke.

The next morning being the 30. of July, there came 37. Canoas rowing by our ships, calling to vs to come on shoare: Wee not making any great haste vnto them, one of them went vp to the top of the rocke, and leapt and daunced as they had done the day before, shewing vs a seales skinne, and another thing made like a timbrel, which he did beate vpon with a sticke, making a noyse like a small drumme. Whereupon we manned our boats and came to them, they all staying in their Canoas: we came to the water side where they were: and after we had swoyne by the sunne after their fashion, they did trust vs. So I shooke hands with one of them, and hee killed my hand, and we wer: very familiar with them. Wee were in so great credit with them vpon this single acquaintance, that wee could haue any thing they had. Wee bought five Canoas of them: we bought their clothes from their backs, which were all made of seales skins and birdes skinnes: their buskins, their hose, their gloves, all being commonly sowed and well dyessed: so that we were fully perswaded, that they haue diuers artificers among them. Wee had a poire of buskins of them full of fine wooll like beuer. Their apparell for beate, was made of birdes skinnes with their feathers on them. Wee sawe among them leather dyessed like glouers leather, and thicke thongs like white leather of a good length. Wee had of their darts and oares, and found in them that they would by no meanes displeas vs, but would giue vs whatsoever we asked of them, and would be satisfied with whatsoever we gaue them. They tooke great care one of another: for when we had bought their boates, then two other would come and carle him away betweene them that had bought vs his. They are a very tractable people, voyde of craft or double dealing, and easie to be brought to any ciuillitie or good order: but wee iudge them to be Idolaters and to worship the Sunne.

During the time of our abode among these Islands, we found reasonable quantitie of wood, both fere, spruce and juniper: which whither it came floating any great distance to these places where we found it, or whither it grew in some great Islands neere the same place by vs not yet discovered, we know not. But wee iudge that it groweth there further into the lande then wee were, because the people had great store of darts & oares, which they made none account of, but gaue them to vs for small trifles, as poynts and peece of paper. Wee sawe about this coaste degrees 15. mi.

And in 64.

The southe
where our ships did ride,
was called Cuberts
sound.

Musicians.

The people of the country
came and conferred with our men.

Their musick.

Great familie attire with the Inalags.

Diuers sorts of wood.

They may make much travail, if they had means
how to use it.
It is coult
glasse.
It is like Coyntines.

marvelous great abundance of seales skulling together like skulls of small fish. Wee found no fresh water among these Islands, but only snow water, whereof we found great pools. The cliffs were all of such oare as Sp. Froditus brought from meta Incognita. Wee had divers shewes of Stupe of Huskout glasse shining not altogether unlike to Chyrtal. Wee founde an herbe growing upon the rocks, whose fruite was sweete, full of red ioyce, & the ripe ones were like coyntines. Wee found also birch & willow growing like shrubs to the ground. These people have great store of furs as we iudge. They made shewes unto vs  $\text{p} 30$ . of this present, which was the second time of our being with them, after they perceived we would have skins, & furs, that they would goe into the country & come againe the next day; with such things as they had; but this night the wind comming faire the Captaine & the master would by no means detract the purpose of our discovery. And so the last of this moneth about 4. of the clocke in the morning, in Gods name wee set saile, and were at that day becalmed upon the coaste.

August.
Land in 66.
degre. 40. min.

The 1. of August we had a faire wind & so proceeded towards the north west for our discouerie. The 6. of August we discovered land in 66. de. 40. min. of latitude: although they sayd from  $\text{p}$  pester of pce: we ankered in a very faire roade, vnder a very hyane mount, the clifffes whereof were as orient as gold. This mount was named mount Raleigh: the roade where our shipp lay at anker was called Totnes Rode. The sounde which did compass the mount was named Greter sound: the foze land towards the North, was called Dyers Cape. The foze land toward the south was named Cape Wallingham. So soone as we were come to an anker in Totnes Rode vnder mount Raleigh, we espied 4. white beares at the foote of the mount. We supposing them to be goates or wolues, manned our boats and went towards them: but when wee came neere the shoare, we found them to be white beares of a monstrous bignesse: we being dreisous of fresh victual and the shoyt, began to assault them, & I being on land one of them came down the hill right against me: my peece was charged with halfe shot and a bulle. I discharged my peece and shot him in the necke: he roared a litle andooke the water straight, making small account of his hurt. Then we followed him to our boate, & killed him w boare speares, & two moze that night. We found nothing in their matres, but we iudged by their dung, that they fed vpon grass, because it appeared in all respects like the dung of an horse, wherein we might very plainly see the very strawes.

The 7. we went on shoare to another beare which lay alight vpon the top of an Island vnder mount Raleigh, & when we came by to him he lay fast a sleepe. I leuied at his head, & the stone of my peece gaue no fire, with that he looked by and laid down his head againe: then I shot being charged with 2. bullets and strooke him in the head: he being but amazed fel backwardes, where vpon we ran al vpon land with boze speares and thrust him in the bodie: yet for all that he grype away our boze speares and went towards the water, and as he was going downe he came backe againe. Then our master shot his boze speare and strooke him in the head, and made him to take the water, and swynne into a cove fast by, where he killed him and brought him aboard. The breadth of his foze foote from one side to the other, was 14. ynches ouer. They were very fat so as we were constrained to cast the fat away. Wee saw a rauen vpon mount Raleigh. Wee found withies also growing lowe like shrubs and flowers like pyrimoles in the sayd place. The coast is very mountaynous, altogether without wood, grasse or earth, and is only huge mountaines of stone, but the hardest stone that euer we sawe. The ayre was very moderate in this country.

The 8. we departed from mount Raleigh coasting along the shoare, which lieth south south west, and east north east.

The 9. our men fel in dislike of their allowance, because it was so small as they thought. Whereupon we made a newe proportion: euery messe being five to a messe should haue 4. pound of bread a day: 2. wine quarts of bere: 6. newland fishes: and the fish vapes a gill of pease moze: so we restrayned them from their butter and cheese.

The eleuenth we came to the most southerly cape of this lande, which we named the Cape of Gods mercy: as being the place of our first entrance for the discouery. The weather being very foggie we coasted this Northland: at length when it brake vp, we perceived that we were shotte into a very fayre entrance of passage, being in some places 20. leagues broad, and in some 30. altogether voyde of any pester of pce, the weather very tollerable, and the water of the very colour, nature and qualitee of the mayne ocean, which gaue vs the greater hope of our passage. Having sayled North west fixte leagues in this entrance wee discovered certaine Islandes standing in the middell thereof, hauing open passage on both sides. Whereupon our shippes deuised themselves, the one sayling on the North side, the other on the South side, of the sayde Isles, where wee stayed five dayes hauing the winde at South east very foggie and soule weather.

The

The 14. we were like a wall, and fast

The 15. we had soze we went on the boate very gently killed two: and all them to be came deaples: we found sleds made like like inch boards sleds three heads

The 17. we were very small rifles, as of bone, beavs hauchings. The coast marble full of washing steame and hid

Our Captaine this place was all Secondly: the Thirdly we came to come from

Also as we were came, vpon the first the flood which was Fifthly, in sayle thoms, sayre grapes so that hard aboard

Lastly, it did enter, so as we could

The 18. and 19. garde of their cret to make further

The 20. the weather for proceeding an

The 21. the weather south shoare we fast but Islands.

The 22. of this constrained to see sayre sound, and a manifest signes of place we sawe 4. iudged by the weather

The 24. in the purposing by the

The 26. we were home wards, vnder

The 20. of September we could get neere the next day: but sight of the Shoore

The 13. about in two houres at

The 27. of the Schoone and lost it

The 30. of September come in not two

The 14. we went on shoare and found signes of people, for we found stones layde by together like a wall, and saw the skull of a man or a woman.

The 15. we heard dogs howle on the shoare, which we thought had bene Wolves, and therefore we went on shoare to kil them. When we came on lande, the dogs came presently to our boate very gently, yet we thought they came to pray vpon vs, and therefore we shot at them and killed two: and about the necke of one of them we found a letheren collar, wherupon we thought them to be tame dogs. There were twentie dogs like mastiues with pycke eares and long bushy eayles: we found a bone in the pyzels of their dogs. Then wee went farther and founde two sleds made like ours in Englande. The one was made of firre, spuse and oken boards, sawen like inch boards: the other was made all of whale bone, and there hung on the toppes of the sleds thre heads of beastes, which they had killed. We saw here, larkes, rauen, and partridges.

The 17. we went on shoare, and in a litle thing made like an ouen with stones, I found many small cristles, as a small canoa made of wood, a picke of wood made like an image, a bird made of bone, beades hauing small holes in one end of them to hang about their necks, and other small things. The coast was very barbarous without wood or grasse. The rockes were very faire like marble full of baynes of diuerse coulours. We found a seale which was killed not long before, being skene and hid vnder stones.

Our Capitaine and master searched still for probabilities of the passage, and first found, that this place was all Islands with great sounds passing betweene them.

Secondly, the water remained of one colour with the mayne ocean without altering.

Thirdly we saw to the west of those Isles thre or foure Whales in a skul, which they iudged to come from a westerly sea, because to the Eastward, we saw not any whale.

Also as we were rowing into a very great sound lying south-west, from whence these whales came, vpon the suddaine there came a violent counter checke of a tide from the south-west against the flood which we came with, not knowing from whence it was maintayned.

Fiftly, in sayling 20. leagues within the mouth of this entrance we had sounding in 50. fathoms, saye graye sand, & the further we ran into the westwards, the deeper was the water, so that hard aboord the shoare among these yles, we could not haue ground in 330. fathoms.

Lastly, it did ebbe and flowe 6. or 7. fathome vp and downe, the flood comming from diuerse parts, so as we could not perceine the chiefe maintenance thereof.

The 18. and 19. our Capitaine and Master determined what was best to doe, both for the safegarde of their credites and satisfiing of the aduenturers, and resolved, if the weather brake vp, to make further search.

The 20. the winde came directly against vs, so they altered their purpose, and reasoned both for proceeding and returning.

The 21. the wind being North-west, we departed from these Islands, and as we coasted the south shoare we sawe many saye sounds, wherby we were perswaded, that it was no firme land but Islands.

The 23. of this month the wind came south-east very stormy and soule weather. So we were contrayned to secke harborowes vpon the south-east of this entrance, where wee fell into a very saye sound, and ankered in 25. fathoms greene ope sand. Here we went on shoare, where we had manifest signes of people, where they had made their fire, and laide stones like a wall. In this place we sawe 4. very faire faulcons, and M. Byrton took from one of them his pray, which was iudged by the wings and legs to be a Supte, for the head was eaten off.

The 24. in the afternoone, the wind comming somewhat faire wee departed from this roade, purposing by Gods grace to returne for England.

The 26. we departed from sight of the Northland of this entrance, directing our course homeward, until the tenth of the next month.

The 10. of September we fell with The land of desolation, thinking to goe on shoare, but we could get nearer a good harborow. That night we put to sea againe thinking to search it the next day: but this night arose a very great storme, and separated our ships so that we lost the sight of the Moonshine.

The 13. about noone (having cryed at the night before with a goose wing) we set saile, & within two houres after, we had sight of the moonshine againe: this day we departed from this land.

The 27. of this month wee fell with sight of England. This night wee had a marvellous storme and lost the Moonshine.

The 30. of September wee came into Dartmouth where wee found the Moonshine being come in not two houres before.

Timber

salween.

Folwe.

An image.

Probabilities
for the passage.The water came into any bay before. or after, but the waters colour
was altered
very blackish.

Faulcons.

Their returne.

September.

They came from the land of Desolation to England, in 14. dayes.

The second voyage attempted by Master Iohn Davis with others, for the discoverie of the Northwest passage, in Anno 1586.

The seventh day of May, I departed from the port of Dartmouth for the discovery of the Northwest passage, with a ship of an hundred and twentie tunnes, named the Permaype, a barge of 60. tunnes, named the Sunneshine, a barge of 35. tunnes named the moonelight, and a Pinnace of ten tunnes named the North Starre.

And the 15. of June I discovered land in the latitude of 60. degrees, and in longitude from the meridian of London westward 47. degrees, mightily pestered with yce, and snow, so that there was no hope of landing: the yce lay in some places 10. leagues, in some 20. and in some 50. leagues off the shoare, so that we were constrained to beat into 57. degr. to vobule the same, and to recover a free sea, which through Gods favourable mercy we at length obtained.

The nine and twentieth of June, after many tempestuous stormes, we againe discovered lande, in longitude from the Meridian of London, 58. degrees 30. minutes, and in latitude, 64. being East from vs: into which course sich it pleased God by contrarie winde to force vs. I thought it very necessary to beate in with it, and there to set up our Pinnace, provided in the Permaype to be our scoure for this discoverie, and so much the rather, because the yce before I had bene in the same place, and founde it very convenient for such a purpose, well stoyed with floe woode, and possessed by a people of tractable conversation: so that the nine and twentieth of this moneth we arrived within the Isles which lay before this lande, lying North North-west, and South South-east, wee knowe not howe farre. This lande is very high, and mountainous, having before it on the West side a mightie compaign of Isles full of saye soundes, and harbours. This land was very little troubled with snowe, and the sea altogether void of yce.

The shippes being within the soundes we sent our boates to searche for shole water, where wee might anker, which in this place is very harde to finde: and as the boate went sounding and searching, the people of the country having espied them, came in their Canoes towards them with many shoutes and cries: but after they had espied in the boate, some of our compaign that were the yere before heere with vs, they presently rowed to the boate, and tooke holde in the oare, and hung about the boate with such comfortable ioy, as woulde require a long discourse to be uttered: they came with the boates to our shippes, making signes that they knewe all those, that the yere before had bene with them. After I perceived their ioy, and small feare of vs, my selfe with the merchants, and others of the company went a shoare bearing with me twentie knives: I had no sooner landed, but they lept out of their Canoes, and came running to mee, and the rest, and embraced vs with many signes of hartie welcome: at this present there were eightene of them, and to each of them I gave a knife: they offered skinnes to mee for reward, but I made signes that it was not solde but given them of curtesie: and so dismissed them for that time, with signes that they shoulde returne againe after certain houres.

The next day with all possible speede the Pinnace was landed, upon an Isle there to be finished to serve our purpose for the discoverie, which Isle was so convenient for that purpose, as that we were very well able to defend our selves against many enemies. During the time that the Pinnace was there setting up, the people came continually unto vs, sometime an hundred Canoes at a time, sometime fourtie, thirtie, more and lesse, as occasion served. They brought with them seal skinnes, stagg skinnes, white bares, seal fith, samon peale, smal codde, bry caplin, with other fish, and bydes, such as the country did yeelde.

My selfe still desirous to have a farther search of this place, sent one of the shipboates to one part of the land, and my selfe went to another parte to searche for the habitation of this people, with straight commaundement that there should be no iniurie offered to any of the people, neither any gunne shot.

The boates that went from me found the tents of the people made with seal skinnes set by upon timber, wher in they founde great stoye of dried Caplin, being a litle fish no bigger then a pulchard: they founde baggs of trayne oyle, many litle images cut in wood, seal skinnes in canubs, with many other such trifles, whereof they diminished nothing.

They

They also found earth and grass, (which in the narrow they knew not how it offered a large in and there leaving into the country, by as large and limet

The third of June another found, which length they made the shoare, and as I returned againe towards vs, and to the men leape with they to wrestling, we for our men that were

The fourth of June I do very willingly wrong and skillfull Ioye himselfe with skinnes, having a with small slender unbearde, great returne to make a eth Ylyours, and these people are the baye of an estate and in their boats

inhabitations, to be

Being among a kinde a fire, the hole he puts the end of a suter, which done, with these things, by they were best in which they by willed one of my them that we did but marvellous of our lenity to shew boat from her ster they stole our oare ny and matters by and to leave the co them, and immet with speed they they came againe They brought vs speaking: which simplicity, and w pamp should be the time to make the bylike salt water, the nature of the his boat upon the have to be and at

They also found came miles within the snowy mountains a plaine champion countrey, with earth and grasse, such as my moony and waste grounds of England are: they went by into a river (which in the narrowest place is two leagues broad) about ten leagues, finding it still to continue they knew not how far: but I with my company rooke another river, which although at the first it offered a large inlet, yet it proved but a deepe bay, the end whereof in foure houres I attained, and there leauing the boat well manned, went with the rest of my company three or foure miles into the countrey, but found nothing, nor saw any thing, save onely gripes, saucns, and small birds, as larkes and jamer.

The third of July I manned my boat, and went with fifty canoes attending vpon me by into another sound, where the people by signes willed me to goe, hoping to finde theys habitacion: at length they made signes that I should go into a warme place to sleepe, at which place I went on shore, and ascended the toppe of an high hill to see into the countrey, but perceiving my labor vaine, I returned againe to my boat, the people still following me, and my company very diligent to attend vs, and to helpe vs by the rocks, and likewise downe: at length I was desirous to haue our men leape with them, which was done, but our men did ouerleape them: from leaping they went to wrestling, we found them strong and nimble, and to haue skill in wrestling, for they cast some of our men that were good wrestlers.

The fourth of July we lauched our pinnell, and had forty of the people to helpe vs, which they did very willingly: at this tyme our men againe wrestled with them, and found them as before, strong and skilfull. This fourth of July the master of the Hermaid went to certaine Islands to looke himselfe with wood, where he found a graue with diuers buried in it, onely covered with scale skinnes, hauing a crosse laid ouer them. The people are of good stature, well in body proportioned, with small slender hands and feet, with broad visage, and small eyes, wide mouthes, the most part vnbearded, great lips, and close toged. They cutome is as often as they go from vs, till at their returne to make a new tree, in this sort, holding his hand vpon the Sunne, with a loud voice cryeth Yiyauote, and smiteth his heelt, with like signes being promised laterie, he giueth credit. These people are much giuen to bleed, and therefore stoppe they noses with deere haype, or the haype of an eland: They are idolaters, and haue images great loze, which they were about them, and in theyr boats, which we suppose they worship. They are witches, and haue many kindes of Inchantments, which they often vse, but to small purpose, thanks be to God.

Being among them at thye fourth of July, one of them making a long oration, beganne to kindle a fire, in this manner: he took a piece of a boord, wherein was a hole halfe the way: into that hole he puts the end of a rodd like unto a bedstaffe, witting the end thereof in traine, and in fashion of a turner, with a piece of lether, by his violent motion doth very speedly produce fire: which done, with turfes he made a fire, into which with many words, and strange gestures, he put diuers things, which we supposed to be sacrifice: my selfe and diuers of my company standing by, they were desirous to haue me go into the smoke, I willed them likewise to stand in the smoke, in which they by no meanes would do, I then tooke one of them, and thrust him into the smoke, and willed one of my company to tread out the fire, & to spurne it into the sea, which was done to the wretched them that we did contemne theyr sojourn. These people are very simple in all theyr conuersation, but maruellous theuith, especially for iron, which they haue in great accord. They began though our lenity to shew theyr vile nature: they began to cut our cables: they cut away the Spoonlightes boat from her sterne, they cut our cloth where it lay to appe, though we did carefully looke vnto it, they stole our oares, a caluer, a boare speare, a sword, with diuers other things, wherat the company and matters being grieued, for our better security, desired me to dissolve this new friendship, and to leaue the company of these theuith miscreants: wherupon there was a caluer shot among them, and immediatly vpon the same a faulton, which strange noice did loze amaze them, so that with speed they departed: notwithstanding theyr simplicity is such, that within ten houres after they came againe to vs to intereat peace: which being promised, we againe fell into a great league. They brought vs scale skinnes, and sammon peale, but seeing iron, they could in no wise forbear stealing: which when I perceiued it did but minister vnto me an occasion of laughter, to see theyr simplicity, and willed that in no case they should be any more hardly used, but that our owne company should be the more vigilant to keepe theyr things, supposing it to be very hard in so short tyme to make them know theyr eris. They eat all theyr meat raw, they liue most vpon fish, they drinke salt water, and eat grasse and ice with delight: they are neuer out of the water, but liue in the nature of fishes, but onely when dead sleepe takerh them, and then vnder a warme rocke, laying his boat vpon the land, he lyeth downe to sleepe. Theyr weapons are all darts, but some of them haue bowes and arrowes, and slings. They make nets to take their fish, of the same of a whale: they

is goodly river.

is grane with a crosse laid ouer. The Carrans and people of Japon are all of small eyes.

Theyr manner of kindling fire like to theirs in America.

Great theuith

Theyr rude diet.

Theyr weapons. Strange news.

do all they things very artificially; and it should seeme that these simple cheerefull Islanders have warre with those of the maine, for many of them are sore wounded, which wounds they received upon the maine land, as by signes they gave vs to vnderstand. We had among them copper ore, blacke copper, and red copper: they pronouice they language very hollow, and deepe in the throat; these wordes following we learned from them.

Copper ore.

The island
guage.

Kesinyoh, Eat some.
Madlycoyte, Huske, Aginyoh, Gofetch, Yliaoure, I meane no harme, Ponameg, A boat.
Paooyck, An oare.
Afanock, A dart.
Sawymeg, A knife.
Vderah, A nose,
Aoh, Iron.
Blete, An eye.
Vnuicke, Giue it.
Tuckloak, A stagge of ellan, Panygmah, A needle.
Aob, The sea.
Mysacoah, Wash it.
Lethickfaneg, A scale skinne.
Canyglow, Kisse me.
Vynera, My soune.
Acu, Shot.

Conah, Lease.
Maatuke, Fish.
Sambah, Below.
Maconmeg, Will you haue this Cocah, Go to him.
Aba, Fallen downe.
Icune, Come hither.
Awenneyc, Powder.
Nugo, No.
Tucktodo, A fogge.
Lechikfah, A skime.
Maccoah, A dart.
Sugnacoan, A coat.
Gounah, Come downe.
Safobneg, A bracelet.
Vgnake, A trougue.
Ataneg, A scale.
Macuah, A beard.
Pignagogah, A sheed.
Quoylah, Giue it to me,

The seventh of July, being very desirous to search the habitation of this countrey, I went my selfe with our new pinnelle into the body of the land, thinking it to be a firme continent, and passing by a very large riuer, a great flate of lande,ooke me, whereby we were constrained to seeke succor for that night, which being had, I landed with the most part of my company, and went to the topp of a high mountaine, hoping from thence to see into the countrey: but the mountaines were so many and so mighty, as that my purpose prevailed not: whereupon I againe returned to my pinnelle, and willing diuers of my company to gather muskes for my supper, whereof in this place there was great store, my selfe hauing espied a very strange sight, especially to me that neuer before sawe the like, which was a mighty whirlewinde taking vp the water in very great quantitie, furiously mounting it into the ayre, which whirlewinde was not for a puffe of blast, but continuall, for the space of thre houres, with very little intermission, which sight it was in the course that I should passe, we were constrained that night to take vp our lodging vnder the rocks.

Spitules.

A strange
whirlewinde.

The next morning the storme being broken vp, we went forward in our attempte, and sailed into a mighty great riuer directly into the body of the land, and in bylefe, found it to be no firme land, but huge, waste, and desert flles with mighty sounds, and inlets passing betweene sea and sea. Whereupon we returned towards our shippes, and landing to stoppe a fowle, we found the buriall of these miserants, we found of they fish in bagges, plaices, and caplin dyed, of which we tooke onely one bagge, and departed. The ninth of this moneth we came to our shippes, where we found the people desirous in theyr fashion, of friendshippe and barter: our mariners complained heauily against the people, and said that my lenity and friendly vsing of them gaue them stomache to mischefe: for they haue stolen an anker from vs, they haue cut our cable very dangerously, they haue cut our boats from our sterne, and now since your departure, with slings they spare vs not with stones of halfe a pound weight: will you still indure these iniuries? it is a shame to beare them, I desired them to be content, and said I doubted not but all should be well. The tenth of this moneth I went to the boze, the people following me in theyr canoas: I tolled them on boze, and led them with much curtesie, and then departed aboard, they following me, and my company. I gaue some of them bracelets, and caused seuen or eight of them to come aboard, which they did willingly, and some of them went into the topp of our shippe: and thus curiously v sing them. I let them depart: the Sunne was no looner downe, but they began to practise theyr deuillish nature, and with slings they throw stones very fiercely into the Spoonelight, & strake one of her men, the boatswaine that be surer they withall: wherat being moued, I changed my curtesie, & grew to hatred, my selfe in

Great Islands

Slings.

my owne boat
diuers shot but to

The 11 of this came to me to the till we had his an was one of the flu he came crying III
a knife for the in among vs: then v
that he should be upon we weped, o
our ship close abo Yliaour, which w
five wordes vnto like, departed, as v and bowing of hi
mong vs: I gra
dure the colde, of would make oka
I tooke when I

All this while creped, who dyed sea, with praise gr

The 17 of this ty and strange qu
and being with hal
as that we suppo
we were certain
ring the huge qu
speake any furthe
place we had be

We coasted
post: the ayre in was banished of and compassed peere I found che

Our men the celle: wherupon snelte, and with
with the preseru
and fatherlesse cl
to regard they great hope of ce eife. I thought into discrecie: v Shailty to moon
tion of curcy bery strong and ler barke, especi adventurers, b
with diuers oth
men, & to proce
ice, & bare East
uorable winde 33 min. & in lo

The second
speed we graue
while the barke

my owne boat well manned, with shot, and the barks boat like wise pursued them, & gaue them diuers shot but to small purpose, by reason of theyr swift rowing: so small content we returned.

The 11 of this moneth there came five of them to make a new truce the maister of the Admirall came to me to the use of theyr comming, and desired to haue them taken, & kept as prisoners untill we had his anker againe: but when he saw that the chiefe ringleader, & maister of mischiefc was one of the five, he then was vehement to execute his purpose, so it was determined to take him: he came crying I liaout, & striking his brest offered a payre of gloves to sell, the maister offered him a knife for them: so two of them came to vs, the one was not touched, but the other was soone captiue among vs: then we pointed to him & his fellows for our anker, which being had, we made signes that he should be set at liberty: within one houre that he came aboard, the winde came fayre, whereupon we weped, and set sail, and so brought the fellow with vs: one of his fellows still following our ship close aboard, talked with him, & made a kinde of lamentation, we still vnting him well, with Y liaout, which was the common course of curtesie. At length this fellow aboard vs spake foure or five wordes vnto the other, and claped his two handes vpon his face, whereupon the other doing the like, departed, as we suppose, with heauy chere. We iudged the covering of his face with his handes, and bowing of his body downe, signified his death. At length he became a pleasant companion among vs. I gaue him a new sute of frize after the English fashion, because I saw he could not endure the colde, of which he was very tofull, he trimmed vp his darts, and all his fishing toles, and would make okam, and set his hand to a ropes end vpon occasion. He liued with the dy caplin that I tooke when I was searching in the pinnelle, and did eat by Newland fish.

One of the people taken,
which after ward,

All this while, God be thanked, our people were in very good health, onely one young man excepted, who dyed at sea the foureteenth of this moneth, and the fiftent h croozing to the order of the sea, with praise giuen to God by seruite, was cast ouerboard.

The 17 of this moneth, being in the latitude of 63 degrees 8 minuts, we set vpon a most mighty and strange quantity of ice, in one intyre masse, so bigge, as that we knew not the limits thereof, and being withall so very high, in foyme of a land, with bayes and capes, and like high cliffes land, as that we supposed it to be land, and therefore sent our pinnelle off to discover it: but at her returne we were certainly informed that it was onely ice, which byed great admiration to vs all, considering the huge quantity thereof, incredible to be reposed in truth as it was, and therefore I omit to speake any further thereof. This onely, I thinke that the like before was neuer seene, and in this place we had very thicke and strong currants.

We coasted this mighty masse of ice vntill the 30 of July, finding it a mighty barre to our purpose: the ayre in this time was so contagious, and the sea so yestered with ice, as that all hope was banished of proceeding: for the 24 of July all our shottowes, ropes, and sailcs were so frozen, and compacted with ice, onely by a grosse fogge, as seemed to me moze then strange, such the last yeere I found this sea feat and nauigable, without impediments.

The nature of fogges,

Our men though this extremity began to grow sicke & feeble, and withal hopelesse of good success: whereupon very orderly, with good discretion they intreated me to regard the state of this business, and withall aduised me, that in conscience I ought to regard the safety of mine owne life, with the preservation of the yrs, & that I should not through my ouerboldnesse leaue their widowes and fatherlesse children to giue me bitter curses. This matter in conscience did greauly moue me to regard theyr estates: yet considering the excellency of the business, if it might be attained, the great hope of certainty by the last yeeres discovery, & that there was yet a third way not put in practice, I thought it would grow to my great disgrace, if this action by my negligence should grow into discredit: whereupon seeking helpe from God the fountaine of all mercies, it pleased his diuine Spacitly to moue my heart to proferre that which I hope shall be to his glory, and to the contentation of euery Christian minde. Whereupon falling into consideration, that the Spermaid, albeit a very strong and sufficient ship, yet by reason of her burden, not so comenient and nimble as a smaller barke, especially in such desperate hazards: further hauing in account her great charge to the aduenturers, being at 100 li. the moneth: & that in doubtfull seruice, all the perillcs considered, with diuers other things, I determined to furnish the Spoonelight with bricquialling & sufficient men, & to proere in this action as God should direct me: whereupon I altered our course from the ice, & bare East southeast to recover the next shore where this thing might be performed: so with fauorable winde it pleased God that the first of August we discovered the land in latitude 66 deg. 33 min. & in longitude from the meridian of London 70 deg. void of trouble without shottow of ice.

Aug 1.

The second of August we harboured our selues in a very excellent good road, where with all speed we graued the Spoonelight, and reuertualled her: we searched this country with our pinnelle while the barke was trimming, which William Eaton did: he found all this land to be only islands, with a sea on the East, a sea on the West, and a sea on the North. In this place we found it very hot, and we were very much troubled with a sie which is called Musketta, for they did sting grievously. The people of this place at our first coming in caught a seale, and with bladders fast tied to him sent him vnto vs with the floud, so as he came righe with our shippes, which we tooke as a friendly present from them.

Great heat.

The first of August I went with the two maisters and others to the toppe of a hill, and by the way William Ellison espied thre Canoas lying vnder a rocke, and went vnto them: there were in them skinnes, darts, with diuers superstitious toys, whereof we dimmished nothing, but left vpon euery boat a silke point, a bullet of lead, and a pinne. The next day being the first of August, the people came vnto vs without feare, and did barter with vs for skinnes, as the other people did: they differ not from the other, neither in their canoas nor apparell, yet is their pronuntiation more plaine then the others, and nothing hollow in the throat. Our miscreant aboord vs kept himselfe close, and made shew that he would faine haue another companion. Thus being prouided, I departed from this land the twelfth of August, at fixe of the clocke in the morning, where I left the Permaid at an anker: the foureteenth sailing West about fiftie leagues, we discouered land, being in latitude 66 degrees 19 minuts: this land is 70 leagues from the other from whence we came. This foureteenth day from nine a clocke at night till thre a clocke in the morning, we anchored by an Island of ice, twelue leagues off the shoare, being moored to the ice.

Great hope of a passage.

The sixteenth day at thre a clocke in the morning we departed from this land to the South, and the eighteenth of August we discouered land Northwest from vs in the morning, being a very fayre promontory, in latitude 65 degrees, hauing no land on the South. Here we had great hope of a thorough passage.

A great current to the West.

This day at thre a clocke in the afternoone we againe discouered land Southwest and by South from vs, where at night we were becalmed. The nineteenth of this month at noone, by obseruation, we were in 64 degrees 20 minuts. From the eighteenth day at noone vnto the nineteenth at noone, by precise ordinary care, we had sailed 15 leagues South and by West, yet by art and more exact obseruation, we found our course to be Southwest, so that we plainly perceived a great current striking to the West.

Islands.

This land is nothing in sight but Isles, which increaseth our hope. This nineteenth of August at fixe a clocke in the afternoone, it began to snow, and so continued all night with foule weather, and much winde, so that we were constrained to lie at full all night five leagues off the shore: In the morning, being the twentieth of August, the fogge and storme breaking by, we bare in with the land, and at nine a clocke in the morning we anchored in a very fayre and safe road and locket for all weathers. At tenne of the clocke I went on shore, to the toppe of a very high hill, where I perceived that this land was Islands: at foure of the clocke in the afternoone we weighed anker, hancing a fayre North northeast winde, with very fayre weather: at six of the clocke we were cleere without the land, and so shaped our course to the South, to discouer the coast, whereby the passage may be through Gods mercy found.

Hope of a passage.

We coasted this land till the eight and twentieth of August, finding it still to continue towards the South, from the latitude of 67 to 57 degrees: we found marvellous great store of birds, gulls & me wes, incredible to be reposed, whereupon being calme weather, we lay one glasse vpon the lee, to proue for fish, in which space we caught 100 of cod, although we were but badly prouided for fishing, not being our purpose. This eight and twentieth, hauing great distrust of the weather, we arriued in a very fayre harbor in the latitude of 56 degrees, and sailed ten leagues into the same, being two leagues broad, with very fayre woods on both sides: in this place we continued vntill the first of September, in which time we had two very great stormes. I landed, and went six miles by ghesse into the country, and found that the woods were stre, pine apple, alder, yew, witchy, and birch: here we saw a blacke beare: this place yeeldeth great store of birds, as fezzant, partridge, Barbary hennes, as the like, wilde geese, ducks, blacke birds, ieyes, thypulbes, with other kindes of small birds. Of the partridge and fezzant, we killed great store with bowe and arrowes: in this place, at the harbor mouth, we found great store of cod.

Fair woods.

A store of cod.

The first of September at tenne a clocke, wee set saile, and coasted the shoare with very faire weather. The third day being calme, at noone we str oke saile, and let fall a cadge anker, to proue whether we could take any fish, being in latitude 54 degrees 30 minuts, in which place we found great abundance of cod, so that the hooke was no sooner ouerboord, but presently a fish was taken. It was the largest and best reket fish that euer I saw, and diuers other men that were with me sayd that they neuer saw a moze suauile or better skull of fish in their liues: yet had they seene great abundance.

The

The fourth of month great store
North of this pla passing betwee
we greatly desire fashion fine land

The first of purposed to depa fish which we pur
people of this co
which when we latter bare into the
the noice wherof
with their arrow doubt, onely one creants neuer off

This present
struous storme, th
extreme. We w anker brake, so th Yet in this deepe
vs a fayre lee, so God manifestly an olde sunke. T berp forcible, wh
The eleuenth
shaping our cour

The eleuenth
shaping our cour

Maister

them if it be his

I haue no w passage to that c further. I can a further charge,
action, Surely by Gods mercy card. I pray God that your skill i
And thus with then I shall be

The fourth of September at five a clocke in the afternoon we anchored in a very good road among great Bayes of Isles, the countrey low land, pleasant, and very full of saye woods. To the North of this place eight leagues, we had a perfect hope of the passage, finding a mighty great sea passing betwene two lands West. The South Land to our iudgement being nothing but Isles, we greatly desired to go into this sea, but the winde was directly against vs. We anchored in foure fathome fine land. In this place is foule and fish mighty store.

A perfect hope of the passage.

The sixt of September having a saye Northnorthwest winde, having trimmed our barkie, we purposed to depart, and sent five of our sailers poong men a shoze to an Island, to fetch certaine fish which we purposed to weather, and therefore left it all night couered upon the Isle: the brutish people of this countrey lay secretly lurking in the wood, and upon the sudden assaulted our men: which when we perceived, we presently let slippe our cables upon the halfe, and vnder our foze-sails bare into the shoare, and with all expedition discharged a double musket vpon them twise, at the noise wherof they fled: notwithstanding to our very great griefe, two of our men were slaine with theyr arrowes, and two grievously wounded, of whom at this present we stand in very great doubt, onely one escaped by swimming, with an arrow shot thorow his arme. These wicked miscreants neuer offered parly or speech, but presently executed the very cursed fury.

Two of our men slaine by the Salvages.

This present evening it pleased God further to increase our troubles with a mighty tempestuous storme, the winde being Northnortheast, which lasted vnto the tenth of this moneth very extreme. The unrigged our shippe, and purposed to cut downe our masts, the cable of our theyr anchor brake, so that we onely expected to be driven on shoare among these Canibals for theyr prey. Yet in this deepe distresse the mighty mercy of God, when hope was past, gaue vs succor, and sent vs a saye lee, so as we recovered our anchor againe, and new moyed our shippe: where we saw that God manifestedly deliuered vs: for the straines of one of our cables were broken, we only rood by an olde sunke. Thus being freshly moyed, a new storme arose, the winde being West northwest, very forceible, which lasted vnto the tenth day at night.

The eleuenth day with a saye Westnorthwest winde we departed with trust in Gods mercy, shaping our course for England, and arrived in the West countrey in the beginning of October.

Maister Davis being arrived, wrote his letter to M. William Sanderson of London, concerning his voyage, as followeth.

As the Sunnshyne came into Dartmouth the fourth of this moneth: she hath bene at Island, and from thence to Groenland, and so to Scotland, from thence to Desolation, and to our merchants, where she made trade with the people, staying in the countrey twenty dayes. They haue brought home five hundred seal skimmes, and an hundred and forty halfe skimmes, and pieces of skimmes. I stand in great doubt of the pinnesse, God be mercifull vnto the poore men, and preserve them if it be his blessed will.

I haue now full experience of much of the Northwest part of the world, and haue brought the passenger to that certainty, as that I am sure it must be in one of foure places, or els not at all. And further, I can assure you vpon the perill of my life, that this voyage may be performed without further charge, nay with certaine profit to the aduenturers, if I may haue but your fauour in the action, Surely it shall cost me all my hope of welfare, and my portion of Sandridge, but I will by Gods mercy, see an end of these busineses. I hope I shall finde fauour with you to see your card. I pray God it be so true as the card shall be which I will bring to you: and I hope in God, that your skill in navigation shall be gainefull vnto you, although at the first it hath not proued so. And thus with my most humble commendations I commit you to God, desiring no longer to liue when I shall be yours most faithfully to command. From this 14 of October, 1586.

Yours with my heart, body and life to command JOHN DAVIS.

Bbb 3

The

The relation of the course which the Sunshine a barke of fiftie tunnes, and the Northstarre a small pinnesse, being two vessels of the fleet of M. Iohn Davis held after he had lent them from him to discover the passage betwene Groenland and Island, written by Henry Morgan seruant to M.

William Sanderfon of London.

May.

The seventh day of May 1586 we departed out of Dartmouth hauing foure sailes, to wit, the Permal, the Sunshine, the Spoonshine, and the Northstarre.
In the Sunshine were sixene men, whose names were these: Richard Pope maister, Marke Carter maisters mate, Henry Hogan purser, George Da-ward, Iohn Spandie, Hugh Broken, Philip Iane, Hugh Hempton, Richard Borden, Iohn K lpe, Andrew Spadocke, William Wolcome, Robert Wagge carpenter, Iohn Bynshome, William A lbe, Simon Ellis.

Our course was West northwett the seventh and eithe dayes: and the ninth day in the morning we were on head of the Carrage of Syllie. Thus coasting along the South part of Ireland the 11 day, we were on head of the Doyles: and our course was South southwett vncill six of the clocke the 12 day. The 13 day our course was Northwett. We remained in the company of the Per-mal and the Spoonshine vntill we came to the latitude of 60 degrees: and there it seemed best to our Generall M. Davis to diuide his fleet, himselfe sailing to the Northwett & to direct the Sunshine, whererin I was, & the pinnesse called the Northstar, to seke a passage Northward betwene Groenland and Island to the latitude of 80 degrees, if land did not let vs. So the seventh day of Iune we departed from them: and the ninth of the same we came to a firme land of ice, which we coasted along the ninth, tenth, and the eleuenth dayes of Iune: and the eleuenth day at six of the clocke at night we saw land, which was very high, which afterward we knew to be Island: and the twelfth day we harborjed there, and found many people: the land lyeth East and by North in 66 degrees.

M. Davis di-uideth his fleet
into 2 parts.

Iune.

Islands described.

They commodities.

They buildings.

Their boats.

Their commodities were greene fish, and Island lings, and Stockfish, and a fish which is called caterfish: of all which they had great store. They had also kine, sheepe, and hozes, and hay for the cattell, and for the hozes. We saw also of thejr dogges. Thejr dwelling houses were made on both sides with stones, and wood laid cross over them, which was covered over with turfs of earth, and they are flat on the toppes, and many of these stood hard by the shoare. Thejr boats were made with wood, and iron all along the keele like our English boats: and they had nailes for to naile them wthball, and fish hooks and other things for to ketch fish as we haue here in England.
They had also brasen kettles, and girdles and purses made of leather, and knoppes on them of copper, and hatchets and other small tooles as necessarie as we haue. They dyt thejr fish in the sun, and when they are dry, they packe them vp in the toppes of their houses. If we would go thither to fishing more then we do, we should make it a very good voyage: for we got an hundred greene fish in one morning. We found here two English men with a shippe, which came out of England about Easter day of this present yeere 1586, and one of them came aboard of vs, and brought vs two lambs. The English mans name was M. Iohn Kopden of Ipswich, merriam: he was bound for London with his shippe. And this is the summe of that which I obserued in Island.
We departed from Island the threenthy day of Iune in the morning, and our course was Northwett, and saw on the coast two small barkes going to an harborough: we went not to them, but saw them a farre off. Thus we continued our course vnto the end of this moneth.

M. Iohn Kopden of Ipswich.
They departed frō Island Northwett.

Iuly.

Groenland discouered.

The land of Desolation.

The third day of Iuly we were in betwene two firme lands of ice, and passed in betwene them all that day vntill it was night: and then the maister turned backe againe, and so away we went to wards Groenland. And the seventh day of Iuly we did see Groenland, and it was very high, and it looked very white: we could not come to harborough into the land because we were hindered by a firme land, as it were, of ice, which was along the shoares side: but we were within three leagues of the land, coasting the same threer dayes together. The threenthy day of Iuly we saw the place which our captaine M. Iohn Davis the yeere before had named The land of Desolation, where we could not go on shoare for ice. The eighteenth day we were like wise troubled with ice, and went in amongst it at three of the clocke in the morning. After we had cleared our selues thereof, we ranged all along the coast of Desolation vntill the end of the aforesayd moneth.

The

The third day
which was the Pere we came to

The 4. day in four of the peop with six of our m
three dead peopl
about them, and sawe their house crossed ouer with as for the place.

The 11. of A
were one and th
to kill them as t
ship, did see them when they saw t
nace did shoote onely to put the ball, and some of
as soone as they harborow wher

The 13. day of
thence was sou
bout 5. or 6. leag

The 24. about
to w, and as we there came to vs
we rode, we had the Islands, & fo
but could see now
which we receiue

The stones of no value, neuer

The 30. of A
contrary, so that there came to vs
skinnes of them
them before, and could not take it
their barres, an againe, and four but our men too
his knife, but we bryess, and he th
ten with flames,
hoze upon their on those hard by presently one of
ster canied the ned backe to lan
would not come

The 31. of A
the harborow, th

The 2. of S
The third da
a hull tarping fo
5. day South so
Clere in Irelan

The third day of August we came in sight of Gilberts sound in the latitude of 64. deg. 15. min. <sup>August.</sup> which was the place where we were appointed to meete our general and the rest of our fleet. Here we came to an harborow at 6. of the clocke at night.

The 4. day in the morning the master went on shoze with 10. of his men, and they brought vs foure of the people rowing in their boates aboord the ship. And in the afternoon I went on shoze with six of our men, and there came to vs seven of them when we were on land. We found on shoze three dead people, and two of them had their haues lying by them, and their olde skins layed about them, and the other had nothing lying by, wherefore we thought it was a woman. We also sawe their houses nere the sea side, which were made with pieces of wood on both sides, and crossed ouer with poles & then covered ouer with earth: we found foxes running vpon the hills: as for the place, it is broken land all the way that we went, and full of broken Islands.

The 21. of August the master sent the boate on shoze for wood, with sixe of his men, and there were one and thirtie of the people of the countrey which went on shoze to them, and they went about to kill them as we thought, for they shot their darts towards them, and we that were aboord the ship, did see them goe on shoze to our men: whereupon the master sent the pinnace after them, and when they sawe the pinnace comming to wards them, they turned backe, and the master of the pinnace did shoote off a calliuer to them the same time, but hurt none of them, for his meaning was onely to put them in feare. Divers times they did weaue vs on shoze to play with them at the football, and some of our company went on shoze to play with them, and our men did cast them downe as soone as they did come to strike the ball. And thus much of that which we did see and do in that harborow where we arrived first.

Our men play at football with the Danes.

The 23. day we departed from the merchants where we had bene first, and our course from thence was South and by West, and the wind was North-east, and we ran that day and night about 5. or 6. leagues, vntill we came to anothe harborow.

The 24. about eleuen of the clocke in the forenoone, we entered into the aforesayd new harborow, and as we came in, we did see dogs running vpon the Islands. When wee were come in, there came to vs foure of the people which were with vs before in the other harborow, and where we rode, we had sandie ground. We sawe no wood growing, but found small pieces of wood vpon the Islands, & some small pieces of swete wood among the same. We found great Parts hoines, but could see none of the Stagges where we went, but we found their footings. As for the bones which we receiued of the Stagges, I cannot tell of what beasts they be.

Swete wood found.

The bones that we found in the countrey, were blacke and some white, as I thinke they bee of no value, neuerthelesse I haue brought examples of them to you.

The 30. of August we departed from this harborow towards England, & the windooke us contrary, so that we were faine to goe to another harborow the same day at 11. of the clocke. And there came to vs 39. of the people, and brought vs 13. Seale skins, and after we receiued these skinnes of them, the master sent the carpenter to change one of our boates which we had bought of them before, and they would haue taken the boate from him perforce, and when they sawe they could not take it from vs, they shot with their darts at vs, and stroke one of our men with one of their darts, and John filye shot one of them into the best with an arrow. And they came to vs againe, and foure of our men went into the shipboate, and they shot with their darts at our men: but our men tooke one of their people in his boate into the shipboate, and he hurt one of them with his knife, but we killed three of them in their boates: two of them were hurt with arrowes in the bests, and he that was aboord our boat, was shot in with an arrow, and hurt with a swoze, and beaten with haues, whom our men cast ouer boorde, but the people caught him and carried him on shoze vpon their boats, and the other two also, and so departed from vs. And three of them went on shoze hard by vs, where they had their dogs, and those three came away from their dogs, and presently one of their dogs came swimming towards vs hard aboord the ship, whereupon our master caused the Gunner to shoote off one of the great pieces towards the people, and so the dog turned backe to land, and within an houre after there came of the people hard aboord the ship, but they would not come to vs as they did come before.

A skinnish boate taken the Danes and our men.

The 31. of August we departed from Gilberts sound for England, and when we came out of the harborow, there came after vs 17. of the people looking which way we went.

The 1. of September we lost sight of the land at 12. of the clocke at noone.

September.

The third day at night we lost sight of the Northstarre our pinnace in a very great fogge, & lay a hull carping for them the 4. day, but could heare no more of them. Thus we shaped our course the 5. day South southeast, and sailing vntill the 27. of the sayd moneth we came in sight of Cape Clerc in Ireland.

The pinnace neuer returne no more.

The

The 30. day we entered into our owne channell.

The 3. of October we had sight of the Ile of Wight.

The 7. we coasted all along the Shore, and the 4. and 5.

The 6. of the sayd moneth of October we came into the river of Thames as high as Rueliffe in safetie God be thanked.

The third voyage Northwestward, made by Iohn Davis Gentleman, as chiefe Captaine and Pilot generall, for the discoverie of a passage to the Isles of the Molucca, or the coast of China, in the yeere, 1587. Written by Iohn Ianes seruanto to the aforesayd M. William Sanderson.

May.

The 1. of this present moneth about midnight, we weighed our ankers, set saile and departed from Dartmouth with two barkes and a Clincher, the one named the Elizabeth of Dartmouth, the other the Sunne shine of London, and the Clincher called the Elm of London: thus in Gods name we set forwards with the wind at North-east a good fresh gale. About 3. howers after our departure, the night being somewhat thicke with darknesse, we had lost the pinnace, the captaine imagining that the men had ronne away with her, willed the master of the Sunne shine, to stand to Sea towards, and see if he could descric them, we bearing in with the shoer for Wllmouthe. At length we descried her, bare with her, and demanded whae the cause was: They answered that she tiller of their helme was burst. So hoping our course West South-west, we went forward, hoping that a hard beginning would make a good ending, yet some of vs were doubtfull of it, sailing in reckoning that she was a Clincher, neuertheless we put our trust in God.

The 21. we met with the Red Lion of London, which came from the coast of Spaine, which was afraid that we had bene men of warre, but we hastned them, and after a little conference, we desired the master to carie our letters for London, directed to my unckle Sanderson, who promised vs safe deliuerie. And after we had beamed thair a lead and a line, whereunto wee had made fast our letters, before they could get them into the ship, they fell into the sea, and so all our labour and theirs also was lost, notwithstanding they promised to certifie our departure at London, and so we departed, and the same day we had sight of Scelle. The 22. the wind was at North-east by East, with faire weather, and so the 23. and 24. the like. The 25. we laid our shippes on the Lee for the Sunne shine, who was a rommaging for a leake, they had 500. strokes at the pumpe in a watch, the wind at North-west.

The 26. and 27. we had faire weather, but the 27. the pinnaces foremaste was blown ouerboard. The 28. the Elizabeth towed the pinnace, which was so much bagged off by the owners report before we came out of England, but at Sea she was like to a cart drawn with open, sometimes we towed her because she could not saile for frame wind.

The 31. day our captaine asked if the pinnace were stanch, Iererson answered that she was as sound and stanch as a cuppe. This made vs something glad, when we sawe she would brooke the Sea, and was not leake.

June.

The first 6. dayes we had faire weather: after that for 5. dayes we had fogge and rayne, the wind being South. The 12. we had cleare weather. The Mariners in the Sunne shine, and the master could not agree: the mariners would goe on their voyage a fishing, because the yeere began to waxe: the master would not depart till hee had the companie of the Elizabeth, whereupon the master told our captaine that he was afraid his men would take some contrarie course while he was a sleep, and so he should loose vs. At length after much talke and many threatenings, they were content to bring vs to the land which we looked for daily.

The 13. we had fogge and raine.

The 14. day we discovered land at five of the clocke in the morning, being very great and high mountains, the tops of the hills being covered with snow. Here the wind was variable, sometime at North-east, East North-east, and East by North: but wee imagined our selues to be 16. or 17. leagues off from the Shoer.

The 15. we had reasonable cleare weather.

The 16. we came to an anker about 4. or 5. of the clocke after noone, the people came presently to vs after the old gan to set by the

from London.

The 18. Peere went about an white and gilder
strong lustie pe

The 20. about
pinnace was but onely for the loue Elizabeths boate
foze they came to Saker, and laied cause we should in arrows which yeere, and fearing would saue a Sa shot off the Saker away without leg
could carie away
shine manned by
of them take the mills off, where came on shoer and ed that the Elizab
and stowed.

How after this er worse then all had appointed as that the good ship
he rode in the har
our captaine by w then to returne to gether, & commit
about 11. or 12. o degrees of latitud
the land to the N
because there we our ship. The 22.

The 24. being sea birdes which ed two of the count
we sawe their oar
could, and when many signes: and
with a bone in it,
he saw a knife, he rowing after our

The 25. in the
iudgement 10. lea
and we gaue chem trifles, and for a k coars, or any thing of them, about 20.
more store of Chic
paper, and the p

The 26. was c

The 27. faire v

to vs after the old maner, with crying Il ya oure, and shewing vs Deale skinned. The 17. we began to set by the pinnace that Peerson framed at Dartmouth, with the boords which hee brought from London.

The 18. Peerson and the Carpenters of the ships, began to set on the planks. The 19. as we went about an Island, were found blacke Hummish flowers, and salt kermel on the rocks very white and glistering. This day also the master of the Sunne shineooke one of the people, a very strong lustie yong fellow.

The 20. about two of the clocke in the morning, the Sauages came to the Island where our pinnace was built ready to be launched, and toze the two upper strakes, and caried them away onely for the loue of the iron in the boords. While they were about this practise, wee manned the Elizabeths boate to goe a shoze to them: our men being either afrayd, or amazed, were so long before they came to shoze, that our captaine willed them to stay, and made the Sunner giue fire to a Saker, and laid the piece leuell with the boate which the Sauages had on the one side, because we should not hurt them with our arrowes, and made the boate their bulwarke against the arrowes which wee shot at them. Our Sunner hauing made all things ready, gaue fire to the peere, and fearing to hurt any of the people, and regarding the owners yfcar, thought belike hee would saue a Sakers shot, doubting we should haue occasion to fight with men of warre, and so shot off the Saker without a bullet, we looking still when the Sauages that were hurt should run away without legs, at length wee could perceiue neuer a man hurt, but all hauing their legges could carie away their bodies: we had no sooner shot off the peere, but the master of the Sunne shineooke manned his boate, and came rowing towards the Island, the very sight of whom made each of them take that he had gotten, and fled away as fast as they could to another Island about two miles off, where theyooke the naples out of the timber, and left the wood on the Isle. When we came on shoze and saw how they had spoiled the boate, after much debating of the matter, we agreed that the Elizabeth should haue her to fish withall: whereupon she was presently caried aboard, and stowed.

Now after this trouble, being resolved to depart with the first wind, there fell out another matter worse then all the rest, and that was in this maner. John Churchpard one whom our captaine had appointed as Pilot in the pinnace, came to our Captaine, and master Buxton, and told them that the good ship which we must all hazard our liues in, had thre hundred strokes at one time as she rode in the harbour: This disquieted vs all greatly, and many doubted to goe in her. At length our captaine by whom we were all to be gouerned, determined rather to end his life with credit, then to returne with infamie and disgrace, and so being all agreed, we purposed to lue and die together, & committed our selues to the ship. Now the 21. hauing brought all our things aboard, about 11. or 12. of the clocke at night, we set saile and departed from those Isles, which lie in 64. degrees of latitude, our ships being now all at Sea, and wee shaping our course to goe roasting the land to the Northward upon the Easterne shoze, which we called the shoze of our Merchants, because there we met with people which trafficked with vs, but here we were not without doubt of our ship. The 22. and 23. we had close fogge and raine.

The 24. being in 67. degrees, and 40. minutes, we had great shoze of Whales, and a kinde of sea birdes which the Mariners call Cortinous. This day about sixe of the clocke at night, we espied two of the countrey people at Sea, thinking at the first they had bene two great Deales, until we sawe their oares glistering with the Sunne: they came rowing towards vs, as fast as they could, and when they came within hearing, they held by their oares and cried Il ya oure, making many signes: and at last they came to vs, giuing vs birdes for bracelets, and of them I had a barte with a bone in it, or a peece of Unicorns bone, as I did iudge. This dart he made shoze of, but when he saw a knife, he let it go, being moze desirous of the knife then of his dart: these people continued rowing after our ship the space of 3. houers.

The 25. in the morning at 7. of the clocke we descried 30. Sauages rowing after vs, being by iudgement 10. leagues off from the shoze: they brought vs Salmon Deales, Birdes, and Caplin, and we gaue them pinnes, needles, bracelets, nailes, knives, bels, looking glasses, and other small trifles, and for a knife, a naile or a bracelet, which they call Pongimah, they would sell their boar, coats, or any thing they had, although they were farr from the shoze. Wee had but few skinned of them, about 20. but they made signes to vs that if wee would goe to the shoze, wee should haue moze shoze of Chichsaneg: they staid with vs til 11. of the clocke, at which time we went to prayer, and they departed from vs.

The 26. was cloudie, the wind being at South.

The 27. saile with the same wind.

The

72. deg. 12. mi.
London coast.

The 28. and 29. were foggie with clouds, the 30. day we took the height, and found our selues in 72. degrees and 12. min. of latitude both at noone and at night, the Sunne being 5. degr. aboue the horizon. At midnichte the compass set to the variation of 28. degr. to the Westward. Now hauing coasted the land which we called London coast, from the 21. of this yeere, till the 30. the sea open all to the Westwards and Northwards, the land on Starboard side East from vs, the winde shifted to the North, whereupon we left that shoare, naminge the same Hope Sanderfon, and shaped our course West, and ran 40. leagues and better, without the sight of any land.

July.

The second we fel with a mighty banke of Ice West from vs, lying North and South, which banke we would gladly haue doubled out to the Northwards, but the winde would not suffer vs, so that we were forced to coast it to the Southwards, hoping to double it out that we might haue run so farre West till wee had found land, or els to haue bene choosely resolved of our pretended purpose.

The 3. we fel with the Ice againe, and putting off from it, we sought to the Northwards, but the wind crossed vs.

The 4. was foggie: so was the 5. also with much wind at North.

The 6. being very cleere, we put our barke with oare through a gappe in the Ice, seeing the Sea free on the West side as we thought, which falling out otherwise, caused vs to returne after we had staid there betwene the Ice. The 7. and the 8. about midnichte, by Gods helpe we recovered the open sea, the weather being faire and calme, and so was the 9. The 10. we coasted the Ice. The 11. was foggie, but calme.

The 12. we coasted againe the Ice, hauing the wind at West north-west. The 13. bearing off from the Ice, we determined to goe with the shoare and come to an anker, and to stay five or 6. daies for the dissolving of the Ice, hoping that the sea continually beating it, and the sunne, with the extreme force of heate which it had alwayes shining vpon it, would make a quicke dispatch, that we might haue a further search vpon the Westerne shoare. Now when we were come to the Easterne coast, the water something deepe, and some of our company fearefull withall, we durst not come to an anker, but bare off into sea againe. The poore people seeing vs goe away againe, came rowling after vs into the Sea, the waues being some what wastie. We trucke with them for a few kinnes and darters, and gaue them beads, needles, plumes, needles and cardes, they pointing to the shoare, as though they would shew vs grea friendship: but we little regarding their curtesie, gaue them the gentle farewell, and so departed.

The 14. we had the wind at South. The 15. there was some fault either in the barke, or the set of some current, for we were vynd 6. pointes out of our course. The 16. we fell with a banke of Ice West from vs. The 17. and 18. were foggie. The 19. at one a clocke after noone, we had sight of the land which we called mount Raleigh, and at 12. of the clocke at night, wee were thwart the Streights which we discouered the first yeere. The 20. wee trauesed in the mouth of the Streights, the winde being at West, with faire and cleare weather. The 21. and 22. we coasted the Northerne coast of the Streights. The 23. hauing sayled 60. leagues North-west into the Streights, at two a clocke after noone, we ankered among many Isles in the bottome of the gulfe, naminge the same the erle of Cumberlands Isles, where riding at anker, a Whale passed by our ship and went West in among the Isles. Here the compass set at 30. degrees Westward variation. The 24. we departed, shaping our course South-east to recover the Sea. The 25. we were becalmed in the bottome of the gulfe, the aire being extreme hote. Master Bynton and some of the Mariners went on shoare to counte dogs, where they found many Graues and Crane spile on the ground, the dogs being so fat that they were scarce able to runne.

The 26. wee had a pretie storme, the wind being at Southeast. The 27. and 28. were faire. The 29. we were cleare out of the Streights, hauing coasted the South shoare, and this day at noone we were in 64. degrees of latitude. The 30. in the after noone we coasted a banke of Ice, which lay on the shoare, and passed by a great banke on inler, which lay betwene 63. and 62. degrees of latitude, which we called Kumleis Inlet. We had often times as we sailed along the coast, great rookes, the water as it were whirling and ouerfalling, as if it were the fall of some great water through a bridge. The 31. as we sayled by a head land, which we named Artrixkes Foxeland, we fell into one of those ouerfalls with a fresh gale of wind, and bearing all our sailes, we looking vpon an Island of Ice betwene vs and the shoare, had thought that our barke did make no way, which caused vs to take markes on the shoare at length we perreined our selues to go very fast, and

The Erie of Cumberlands
Isles.

My lord Cumberlands Isles.

Artrixkes
Foxeland.

the Island of
then our ship
coying, as it we

The first barke fell with 6. degrees and
6. The 7. was and we had a li-faire. The 12.
holled our our came on thore a wards Islands
we gaue them they swamme
as big as Dye
The 13. in larke of a good and this day we

The 14. we
The 15. bet
their promise)
so doe vs vpon
sitting place, b
we shaped our o
head of fresh w
son, for he fear
of two men wa
ling to depart,
thing of our me
for the roomes
consented to re
well.

The 17. w
thought the we
The 18. we
The 19. fat
And thus aft in Dartmouth

A letter

Do with my two comming you I may you par

the Island of Ice which we saw before was carried very forcibly with the set of the current under then our ship went. This day and night we passed by a very great gulfe, the water whirling and roaring, as it were the meetings of tides.

August.

The first having coasted a banke of Ice which was given out at the mouth of this gulfe, we fell with the Southermost Cape of the gulfe, which we named Chiblics Cape, which lay in 6. degrees and 10. minutes of latitude. The 2. and 3. were calme and foggy, so were the 4. 5. and 6. The 7. was faire and calme: so was the 8. with a litle gale in the morning. The 9. was faire, and we had a litle gale at night. The 10. we had a frisking gale at West North-west. The 11. The Iord Bar- cian Island. we saw five Deere on the top of an Island, called by vs Darvies Island. And wee hoised out our boate, and went a Hoze to them, thinking to have killed some of them. But when we came on Hoze and had coursed them twice about the Island, they took the Sea and swamme to wards Islands distant from the 3. leagues. When wee perceived that they had taken the Sea, we gave them over because our boate was so small that it could not rarie vs, and came after them, they swamme so fast: but one of them was as big as a good pretie Cowe and very fat, their feete as big as Oxe feete. Here upon this Island I killed with my peece a grey hare.

The 12. in the morning we saw 3. or 4. white Beares, but durst not goe on Hoze to them for lacke of a good boate. This day we stroke a rocke, seeking for an harborow, and received a leake, and this day we were in 54. deg. of latitude.

The 14. we stopp our leake in a shoyme not very outrageous at noone.

The 15. being almost in 51. degrees of latitude, and not finding our ships, nor (according to their promise) any kind of marke, token or beacon, which we willed to see by, and they proceeded so wee so upon every head land, Island or Cape, within 20. leagues every way off from their stopping place, which our captaine appointed to be betweene 54. and 55. degrees: This 15. I say we shaped our course homewards for England, having in our ship but litle wood, and halfe a hog's head of fresh water. Our men were very willing to depart, and no man more soye toward then Peerson, for he feared to be put out of his office of Stewardship: he was so uncharitable, that the allowance of two men was scant sufficient to fill his greedy appetite: but because every man was so willing to depart, and considering our want, I doubted the matter very much, fearing that the seeking of our mens victuall to salt water, would breed diseases, and being but fewe (yet too many for the roomes if any should be sicke) and likely that all the rest might bee infected therewith, wee consented to returne for our owne countrey, and so we had the 16. faire with the winde at South-west.

The 17. wee met a Shippe at Sea, and as farre as wee could judge it was a Dil kaine: wee thought she went a fishing for Whales, for in 52. degrees of thereabout, we saw very many.

The 18. was faire with a good gale at West.

The 19. faire also, but with much wind at West and by South.

And thus after much variable weather and change of winde, we arrived the 15. of September in Dartmouth, Anno 1587. giving thanks to God for our safe arrivall.

A letter of the said M. John Daus, written to M. Sanderfon of London, concerning his forerwritten voyage.

GODD H. Sanderfon, with GODS great mercy I have made my safe returne in health, with all my companie, and have sailed 60. leagues further then my determination at my departure. I have bene in 73. degrees finding the Sea all open, and 40. leagues betweene land and land: The passage is most certaine, the execution most easie, as at my comming you shall fullie know. Yesterday the 15. of September, I landed all wearle, therefore I pray you pardon my sloynesse. Sandridge, this 16. of September, Anno 1587.

Yours equall as mine owne, which by triall you shall best know,

John Daus.

An

An extract of M. Lanes letter, to M. Richard Hakluyt Esquire, and another gentleman of the middle Temple, from Virginia: the right place whereof is next before the Account of master Lane. Pagina 737.

In the meane while you shall vnderstand that since the Rich. Greenwils departure from vs, as also before, we haue discovered the maine to bee the goodliest soile vnder the cope of heauen, so abounding with sweete trees, that bring such sundry rich and most pleasant gummes, grapes of such greatnes, yet wild, as France, Spaine nor Italy haue no greater, so many sortes of Apothecarie vugs, such severall kindes of floure, and one kind like silke, the same gathered of a grasse, as common there as grasse is here. And now within these few dayes we haue found here a Guinie tobacco, whose rare peeledness come for byead, 400. vpon one eare, and the same maketh very good and perfect suger, also Terra Sania, otherwise Terra sigillata. Besides that it is the goodliest and most pleasing certtiorie of the world (for) the hille is of an huge vnknowen greatnesse, and very well propoled and tanned, though sauagelie) and the climate so wholesome, that we haue not had one sick, since we touched land here. To conclude, if Virginia had but Portugall and Kinge in some reasonable proportion, I dare assure my selfe being inhabited with English, no realme in Chylienome were comparable to it. For this already we find, that what commodities formerly Spaine, France, Italy, or the East partes do yeeld vnto vs in wines, in oiles, in flaxe, in wolens, pitch, frankincense, currans, sugers, & such like, these partes do abound with & groweth of them all, but being Sauages that possesse the land, they know no vse of the same. And sundry other rich commodities, that no parts of the world, be they West or East Indies, haue, here we finde great abundance of. The people naturally most courteous, & very desirous to haue riches, but especially of course cloth rather then silke, course canvas they also like well of, but copper carrieth the price of all, silke be made yet. Thus good Sp. Hakluyt and master D. I haue toynd you both in one letter of remembrance, as it is that I loue dearly well, and commending me most heartily to you both, I commit you to the tuition of the almighty. Feo the newe Foxe in Virginia, this 3. Sept. 1585.

The voyage set out by the right honorable the Earle of Cumberland, in the yeere 1586, intended for the South Sea, but performed no farther then the latitude of 44. deg. to the South of the Equinoctiall, written by John Sarrauall Merchant in the same voyage.

The 26. day of June, in the yeere 1586, and in the 28. yeere of the Queens maiesties reigne, we departed from Grauesend in two ships, the Admirall called the Red dragon, and the other the barke Chyrtles, the one of the burden of 260. tunnes, with 130. men, and the other of the burden of 120. tunnes, with 70. men: the captaine of the Admirall was M. Robert Wilkington, of the Viceadmirall, M. Christopher Loller, both being furnished out at the costes and charges of the right honourable the Erle of Cumberland, hauing for their masters two brethren, the one John Anthonie, and the other William Anthonie.

The 24. of July we came into the sound of Plymouth, and being there constrained by the sterlie winds, to stay till the 17. of August, we then departed with another ship also for our Admirall called the Roe, whereof M. Hawes was captaine, and a fine pinnace also called the Dorochie, which was Sir Walter Raleighs, the 4. being out in the sea, the 20. of August, with 16. sailes of hulkes in the leeue, who named themselves to be men of Hambojough, laden and come from Lisbon. Our Admirall halted their Admirall with diuersus wordes, willing him to strike his sailes, and to come aboard to him onely to knowe some newes of the counerey, but he refused to do so, only strooke his flag and took it in. The Viceadmirall of the hulkes being a head, would neither strike the flag nor saile, but passed on without budging, whereupon our Admirall sent him a piece of ordinance, which they repaied double, so that we grew to some little quarrell, whereupon one of the sternmost hulkes, being as I suppose more afraid then hurt, strooke against us, our Admirall being neere him, laid him aboard, and eured with certaine of his men, how many I knowe not, for that we were giuing chase to the hindermost men, thinking our Admirall would haue come by againe to us, so haue made them all to haue stroke: but the weather growing to be very thicke and foggie, with small raine, he came not by but kept with another of the hulkes which captaine Hawes had boarded and kept all night, and tooke out of her some provision that they liked best. They learned of the men that were in the hulke, that there were 7. hulkes laden in Lisbon with Spaniards goods, and because their lading was very rich, they were determined to go about Ireland, and so they let her goe againe like a goose with a broken wing.

The

The next day after but by reason of the last we hailed one another said the w. Our Admirall be led vs from pursuit scue what the p. The 22. day b. 7. dayes.

The 23. we de haue runne along sent home to my off in the sea too of Barbaric, and of the Islands of upon a hill by the bontes, and sent ragged knaves a gull by the Turke courtie, and fell ag.

The 25. day we our 1 ropike our. And the next 14. of 15. league came downe 2 p. Frenchmen ble tie there was not we went aboard. From thence it lightning, and gossed by the north west, and scene: it was on off againe, it yett East South east.

The 21. of very high land, the land, and for high land we an into the harbour chome, halfe a m on the South side.

The 27. day soare with our Negroes inhabi would suffer vs giue any thing whereupon the againe into our a walke, and sudderally and vngiving with all about 30. calceru and whet hurt v.

Then we re ble bore of the backe were so in diuers places.

The next day after bring the 21 day, we espied 5. sailes more, which laye along to the Eastwards, but by reason of the night which then was nere at hand, we coulde hardly come to them. Yet at last we hailed one of the biggest of them, and they told us that they were all of Hambrough; but another said he was of Denmarke, so that in deede they knew neither what to say, nor what to doe. Our Admirall being more desirous to follow his course, then to linger by chasing the hulkes, called us from pursuing them with his trumpet, and a piece of Ordnance, or els wee would haue scene what they had bene, and wherewith they had bene laden.

The 22. day because of contrary winde we put into Dartmouth all 4. of vs, and carried there 7. dayes.

The 23. we departed thence and put out to sea, and beganne our voyage, thinking at the first to haue runne along the coast of Spaine, to see if we could haue merce with some good prize to haue sent home to my Lord; but our Captaine thought it not the best course at the last, but rather kept off in the sea from the coast. And vpon Saturday the 17. of September we fell with the coast of Barbaric, and the 18. halled in with the roade of Sancta Cruz. The 21. day wee fell with one of the Islands of the Canaries, called Forteuentura. In running along this Island, we espied vpon a hill by the water side, one wauiug with a white flagge, wherupon wee manned both our boates, and sent them to wards the shoare, to vnderstand what newes. They found them to be two ragged knaues and one hostleman, and they tolde vs that Lancerote was taken, and spoild in a gust by the Turkes; when we saw they had nothing else to say, we left them, and proceeded in our course, and fell againe with the coast of Barbaric.

September.

Lancerote spoiled by the men of Algiers.

The 25. day of September about 10. of the clocke we fell with Rio de Oro, standing full vnder our Tropicke: we ancred in the mouth of it in 8. fathome, the entrance of it is about 2. leagues ouer. And the next day our Captaine with the boate searched the Riuer, and found it to be as broad 14. or 15. leagues by, as at the entrie of it, but founde no towne nor habitation, sauing that there came downe 2. pooze men, & one of them spake good Spanish, and tolde our Captaine, that certaine Frenchmen used to come thither, and lade some ore lades, and goates hides, but other commodities there was none. We departed thence the 27. day, and the last day of the month being calme we went aboord our General, and there consented to goe for Sierra Leona, to wood and water.

Rio de Oro, in 23. deg. and a halfe.

From thence till the 10. of October we were much becalmed with extreme hotte weather, much lightning, and great stoye of raue. The 10. day we founde, finding a great currant as wee supposed by the rippling water, which after wee founde to be an ordinarie tide, the flood setting to the North-west, and the ebb South-east, and here wee had but 18. fathome water, and no lande to be seene: it was on the southermost part of the shoales that lye in about 11. degt, but halling South off againe, it presently berped vnto 50. fathome, and after halling South-east, and by East, and East South-east, we founde, but had no ground in 120. fathome.

October.

The 11. of October we fell with lande vpon the coast of Guinea, in the height of 8. degrees, a very high land, but of no great length: it was the high land ouer Sierra Leona. We byrwe into the land, and found nere the shoare more water then in the offing: at the Northen ende of the high land we ancred about a mile, and somewhat more from the shoare in 11. fathome. To goe into the harbour of Sierra Leona we did byrote vpon the Southside, hauing no ground in 10. fathome, halfe a mile from the shoare. Vpon the Northside of this harbour is very shoale water, but on the Southside no feare, more then is to be seene.

Sierra Leona.

The 12. day being Sunday wee came to an ancre in the Bay of fresh water, and going a shoare with our boate, wee spake with a Portingall, who tolde vs that not farre off there were Negroes inhabiting, and that in giuing to the king a Buttise of wine, and some linnen cloth, hee would suffer vs to water and wood at our pleasure. But our Captaines thinking it not good to giue any thing for that which they might take freely, landed, and certaine of our men with them, wherupon the Portingall and the Negroes ranne all away into the woods. Then we remmed againe into our boates, and presently went and landed in another place, thinking to haue fetched a walke, and so to come to our boates againe. But wandering through a litle wood, wee were suddenly and vnawares vpon a towne of the Negroes, wherupon they strooke vs their dyanime, giuing with all a great shoue, and off went their arrowes as thicke as baile. We were in number about 30. calcucers, and 20. with our weapons, which we also let flie into the woods among them, and what hurt wee did, we knew not.

The towne of the Negroes.

Then wee returned to our boates, andooke wood and water at our pleasure, and reasonable stoye of fishe, and amongst the rest wee halled vp a great soule monster, whose head and backe were so harde, that no swoyde coulde enter it: But bring thys in vnder the belly in diuers places, and much wounded, he bowed a swoyde in his mouth, as a man would doe a girde

erland e, and ure from the cope
pleasant
no grea
like, the apes we
and the Besides
unknow
olestone,
in South
glid, no mories oiles in growth windy o we finde
but espe
h price
th in one
p to you 1583. e yeere
deg.
ens ma U called
of 260,
with 70.
Ulead
nd char
ren, the
by Ma
at Reat
the Do A, with den and
him to ee refus D, would the him a ereupon
r Ann
to not,
ue come p thicke Captaine
k liked,
me with out Tre
The

girdle of lether about his hande, and likewise the yron of a boare sparr: Hee was in length about nine foote, and had nothing in his bellie, but a certaine quantitie of small stones, to the value of a pottell.

November.

Another great and fine towne of the Negroes.

The fourth of November wee went on shoare to a towne of the Negroes, which stode on the Southeast side of the harbour, about a Sacar shotte from the roade, which wee founde to bee but lately built: it was of about two hundred houses, and walled about with mightie great trees, and makes so thicke, that a ratte could hardly get in or out. But as it chanced, wee came directly upon a port which was not shutte by, where we entered with such fiercenesse, that the people fledde all out of the towne, which wee founde to bee finely built after their fashion, and the streets of it so intricate, that it was difficult for vs to finde the way out, that we came in at. Wee founde their houses and streets so finely and cleanly kept, that it was an admiration to vs all, for that neither in the houses nor streets was so much dust to be founde, as would fill an egge shell. Wee founde little in their houses, except some mats, goards, and some earthen potts. Our men at their departure set the towne on fire, and it was burnt (for the most part of it) in a quarter of an hour, the houses being covered with reede and strawe.

After this we searched the Countrey about it, where we found in diuers plaines good store of rice in stalkes, which our men did beate out, and brought aboard in the hulke, to the quantitie of 14. or 15. tunnes in both our shippes.

The 17. day of November wee departed from Sierra Leona, directing our course for the Streight of Magellane. In this harbour diuers of our men fell sicke of a disease in the belly, which for the time was extreme, but (God bee thanked) it was but of small continuance. Wee founde also in diuers places of the woods, images set upon pinnes, with diuers thinges before them, as egges, scale, rice, rounde shot of stones, and diuers other thinges, such as the barbarous people had to offer vp.

When we came neere to the Line, wee found it nothing so hot as it is at Sierra Leona, by reason of the great winde and raine.

About the 24. day of November one of two of our men died, and others also were sicke of a Calentura.

January.

The 2. day of January wee had a little sight of lande, being about the height of 28. degr. to the Southward of the Line.

The 4. day we fell with the shoare high and bolde, being in 30. degrees, and a certe, little more or lesse. All of it to the Northward was a high land, but to the Southward it did presently faile, and was a very lowe land, and all sandie. About five leagues from the shoare wee founde, and had about 15. or 16. fathom water, and blacke sandie oze. Wee thought to haue gone to the shoare, and to haue watered, but we could not discerne any good harbour, and therefore wee cast off to leeward againe.

The 12. day we found our selues in 32. degrees and 27. minutes. From the day of the Nativitie of Christ, till the 13. day of this moneth, although the Sunne was very neere unto vs, yet wee found no want of windes but variable as in England, and not so hott but that a mans shoulders might well digest a frize gowne, and his bellie the best Christmas chere in England, yet we for our parts had no want, but such as might content honest men.

The tenth day being about 8. leagues from the shoare, and a little shot of the Riuer of Plate, it was my good happe to espye a saile, which was a small Portingall bounde for the Riuer to a towne called Sancta Fee: and from thence by horse and cartes, the Marchants, and part of their goods were to be transported into Peru. This ship being about the burthen of 45. or 50. tunnes, weooke that day about thre of the clocke, wherein there was for Master or Pilote an Englishman called Abraham Cocke borne in Lee. We examined him and the rest concerning the state of the Riuer, and they tolde vs that there were in the Riuer 5. townes, some of 70. housholdes, and some of more. The first towne was about 50. leagues up the Riuer called Bonos Ayres, the rest some 40. some 50. leagues one from another, so that the uppermost towne is 230. leagues from the entrance of the Riuer, called Tuckaman. In the townes is great store of tozine, cattell, wine, and sundry frutes, but no moneey of golde or silver: they make a certaine kinde of light cloth, which they giue in trucke of suger, rice, Sparmalabe, and Duckett, which were the commodities that this shippe had.

They had aboard also 45. Negroes, whereof euery one in Peru receiue 400. duckets a piece, and besides these, there were as passengers in her, two Portingall women and a child.

Another Portingall taken.

The 11. day we espied another saile, which was the consort of this Portingall, and to him also wee gaue chase, andooke him the same day: Hee was of the burthen of the other, and had had in her good store of wine in our stiers, of which our Portingall women bought in Brasile were sent for by the King. The booke 1000. duckets.

Of these shippes his backe call a towne of magges, all founde and bled them by more of their commodities. Fairweather by the Pilote of the voyage of the Port of Plate the 30.

The 12. of January going in wee founde there lies a ledge face to ward the bay.

One of the Portingalls, and I think the towne of the South side of the sea also. It was about 10 leagues, where the Tuccaman, which

The towne of with abundance of pier of 20. stals, is out, is worth 30.

The 16. day we went to the Westward to Seal Island to by the breaking of it, considering the the whole company made perfect.

The 29. day we Hawkins.

The 1. of February it to be 41. degrees

The 7. day of booye his Gunde aboard vs, for our Captaines cabin men whose names had in her good store of sugar, Parmalade, and Succres, with divers other things, which we noted downe in our booke. In this Shippe also we found about 37 Negro women, and four of fine friers, of which one was an Irish man, of the age of thre or foure and twentie yeeres, and two Portugall women also, which were boyne in the rivet of Genero. Both these shippes were bought in Brasile, by a yong man which was Factor for the bishop of Tucuman, and the friers were sent for by that bishoppe to possesse a newe Monasterie, which the bishoppe was then a building. The bookes, beades, and pictures in her, cost (as one of the Portugals confessed) about 1000. ducrats.

Mr. Trish fra taken.

Of these shippes wee learned, that Mr. John Drake, who went in consort with Mr. Fenson, had his barke call away a little above the Rivet of Plate, where they were taken captives by the Spanages, all saving them which were slaine in the taking: the Spanages kept them for a time, and bled them very hardly, yet at the last John Drake and Richard Faireweather, and 23 of the most of their company with them got a Canoa, and escaped, and came to the first towne of the Spaniards. Faireweather is married in one of the townes, but John Drake was carried to Tucuman by the Pilot of this Shippe, and was living, and in good health the last yeere. Concerning this voyage of the Portugals they told us that it was the third voyage that was made into the rivet of Plate these 30. yeeres.

The names of Mr. John Drake.

Richard Faireweather.

The 12. of Januarie we came to Scale Island, and the 14. day to the Greene Island, where going in wee founde barke above the maine 8. fathome, 7. and 6. and never lesse then 5. fathome. There lieth a ledge of rocks in the faire way, betwixt the Island and the maine, so that you must be sure to boysse we hard above the maine, and leave the ledge on the larboard side.

One of the Portugals which were carried along with us in our shippe, seemed to be a man of experient, and I entred into speech with him concerning the state of the Rivet: he tolde me that the towne of Bonos Ayres, is from the Greene Islande about 70. leagues, standing on the Southside of the Rivet, and from thence to Sancta Fee, is 100. leagues, standing on the same side also. At which towne their shippes doe discharge all their goods into small barkes, which rowe and towe by the Rivet to another towne called Ascension, which is from Sancta Fee 150. leagues, where the boates discharge on shore, and so passe all the goods by carres, and boyes to Tucuman, which is in Peru.

The towne of Ascension standes in a very fertile place, reaping coine twise in the yeere, with abundance of wine, cattell, and fruites. In the towne of Ascension, and Tucuman, a ruiper of 20. riels, is worth 30. ducrats, a boze of Parmalade 20. ducrats: a looking glasse a foote over, is worth 30. li. pictures in tables of 14. inches, 30. and 40. li. a piece.

The 16. day wee went from Greene Island to the watering place, which is about a league to the Westward, where wee tooke in about 18. tunnes of water, and the 22. day came againe to Scale Island to make provision of beales, where a storme arose, which put us in some danger, by the breaking of our maces and cables, and the winde blew so colde, that we much marvelled at it, considering the height of the place. I must needs in this place have fault with our felues and the whole company, that riding in this Rivet 16. dayes, the channell was not founde, nor the way made perfect.

The 29. day we tooke into our shippe one Miles, which was left in the West Indies by master Hawkins.

The 1. of Februarie I tooke the sume in 38. degr. And the 3. day I tooke it againe & I found it to be 41. degrees.

Februarie.

The 7. day of Februarie our Captaine Mr. Lister being in one of the yffles, hopied our booye his Gundelo, and went aboarde the Admirall, and being there they sent their Gundelo aboard us, for our Master, Mr. Collins, and my selfe, and at our coming wee were called into the Captaines cabin, where were set in counsell for matters touching the state of our voyage, these men whose names are under written.

- Master Robert Withrington Captaine of the Admirall.
- M. Christopher Lister Captaine of the Barke Clifford.
- John Anthonie, Master of the Admirall.
- Thomas Hoode Pilot for the Streights.
- William Anthony, Master of the Barke Clifford.
- Dauid Collins. } Tristran Gennings.
- Master William Withrington.
- Master Beumond Withrington.
- Master Walfnes. } Master Norton.

Matter Wilkes.
 Matter Harris.
 Thomas Anthonie.
 Nicholas Porter.
 The Matter Gunner.
 Alexander Gurdie his mate.
 John Sarracol.

This companie being all assembled together, the Matter of the Admirall declared that the cause of our assemblie was to determine after good advice, what course of way were best and most likely to all mens judgements to be taken. First for the good preferment of my Lords voyage, then the health of our men, and lastly the safeguard of our ships, and further shewed his reasons to us all in these wordes, as were as I could carry them away,

My matters, my Lords determination touching this our voyage is not unknowne unto you all, having appointed it to be made, and by the grace of God to be performed by us for the South sea. But for as much as we doe all see the time of the yeere to be late spent, as also the winds to hang contrary, the weather grows on colder and colder, the nights longer and longer, our bread so consumed that we have not left above two moneths biscuit, our drinke in a manner all spent, so that we have nothing but water, which in so colde a Countrey as the Streights, if we should get in, and be forced there to winter, would no doubt be a great weakening to our men, and a hazard of the overthrow of the voyage: these things considered, both our Captaine, Matter Hood, and I, doe rather thinke it good for the wealth of our voyage, the health of our men, and safetie to our shippes, to goe roome with the coast of Brasil, where by Gods grace wee shall well victuall our selves, both with wine which is our greatest want, and other necessaries.

Besides, it is given us here to understande, by the Portingals which we have taken, that there is no doubt, but that by Gods helpe and our endeavour, wee shall be able to take the towne of Bayea at our pleasure, which if wee doe put in practise, and doe not performe it, being somewhat advised by them, they offer to loose their lives. And hauing by this meanes victualled our selves, wee may there spende vpon the coast some three or foure moneths, except in the meane time wee may happen vpon some good thing to content my Lords, and to paye backe our owne credits: otherwise, wee may take the Spring of the yeere, and so proceede, according to my Lords directions. And assure your selves (by the assistance of God) wee will not returne without such benefit by this voyage, as may rebound to my Lords profit, and the honour of our Countrey. Now if there bee any of you, that can giue better course and advice, then this which I haue deliuered, let him speake, and wee will not onely heare him, but thanke him for his counsell, and followe it.

To this speech of M. Anthonie, M. Lister our Captaine answered in this sort: M. Wichrington, & M. Anthonie both, you know, that the last words that my Lord had with us in such a chamber was, that in any case we should followe our voyage onely for the South sea, except by the way, we might perchance meete with such a purchase, as that we might returne with 6000. pounds: and therefore I see no safetie, howe wee may dare offer to goe backe againe, being so neere the Streights as we are: for my part I neither dare nor will consent vnto it, except we be further forced, then yet we are. My accompt is this, that he that dieth for this yeere is excused for the next, and I rather chosse death, then to returne in disgrace with my Lord.

Perunto both the Captaine & M. of the Admirall replied that they were all of that minde: yet notwithstanding that in going roome the voyage was in better possibilitie to be performed, then in wintering either in the Streights, or at Port S. Iulian, all things considered. And so agreeing, and concluding all in one, they were determined presently to depart.

The next day being the 2. of February, there fell our many and others speeches on the part concerning the altering of our course, some would continue for the Streights, and other some would not. Whereupon a victue was taken in both shippes of victuall, and reasonable store was found for both companies: and the winde withall comming to the North, we determined to take out of the prizes the best necessaries that were in them, and so call them off, and to plie for the Streights.

All this time we helde on our course, and the 15. day wee found our selves in the height of 44. degrees, but then the winde came to the South, with much raine, winde, colde, and other intemperate weather, continuing in that sort 5. or 6. dayes, in which time we halled backe againe into the height of 42. degrees.

Sunday being the 20. of February, our Admirall being something to the leeward of us,

They returne
 being in the latitude of 44.
 degrees.

and the Roome for would speake with Captaine Wichring-
 ton, the coast of Our Captaine
 notwithstanding Seeing then that

The 21. day
 our Admirall departed upon our whole
 our selves, and led out the company bare with him, a slender, and therefore to be relieved, the Barke, to en-
 our saleties not considered also,
 continued in this most desirous to shippes, but that thinke we will of to followe the Ad-

The 10. day
 our boord, and

The 28. day Streights, and next day could be

The 5. day
 and a terte, and
 the pinnace and with 18. good men
 in the morning
 the roade of Can-that belonged to sure, hauing al-
 the Canoa.

The 11. day ming in which but they lost the
 for the roade as therefore we canthene, but per-

At our comm-
 was a hulke of Ordinance: the but not one tou-
 time to be able,
 towne together.

The next day
 some of them: but gaine the next of the Countrey
 cording to perso-
 and gaue very about our cares
 all to thinke selves, some to and the Royme somewhat ceas'd, put aboarde his flagge in the mixen shoyws, as a token that hee would speake with vs, and thereupon wee bare roome with him, and hauing hailed one another, Captaine Wickington shew'd the disposition of all his companie, which was rather to go roome with the coast of Brasilia, then to lie after that soj in the sea with foule weather, and contrary wind. Our Captaine on the other side, shew'd the contrary disposition of his men, and companie, willing notwithstanding to proceede: but in the ende, both the shippes fell asunder, and our Captaine said, Seeing then there is no remedie, I must be content, though against my wil.

The 21. day the weather grew faire, and the winde good at the South for the Streights, yet our Admirall bare roome still, we supposing he would haue taken the benefite of the time: whereupon our whole companie begane to thinke of the inconueniences that would arise by deubing our selues, and loosing our Admirall, being very willing to continue their course, and yet not without the company of the Admirall. And then wee beganne to call about after him, and at the last bare with him, and hee tolde vs, that upon a second vie we of the victuals, hee founde their store so slender, and their want so great, that there was no remedie for them but to seeke some means to be reliev'd, which was the onely cause that hee bare Southward. This speache made vs of the Barke, to enter into a newe consultation: and wee founde many of our men speake, and all our calculators not seruicable, and the Smiths that should mende them to be in the Admirall. Wee considered also, that by breaking of companie, the shippes should be the more weakened: we continued in this consultation till the 24. day, and in all that time founde Master Captaine Lister most desirous to accomplish, and to fulfill the voyage, and not willing in any case to turne his shipp, but that the desire which we all had to continue in consort with our Admirall, made vs to thinke w<sup>ch</sup> of his companie, and in fine, an agreement and conclusion was thus made on all sides, to follo to the Admirall, without any more talks of the Streights till the Spring.

The 10. day of March, it fell out so unfortunate, that Samuel Teller our Masters mate, fell over boord, and so perished, we being not able by any means to recouer him.

The 28. day being in the height of 21. degre, we espied a saile, which we iudged came out of the Streights, and had rich loading, but the night being at hand, wee lost her very unluckely, and the next day could haue no sight of her.

The 5. day of April we fell with the lande of Brasilia, in the height as I iudge of 16. degrees and a tenth, and our Captaine went then aboarde the Admirall, where they concluded to sende the pinnace and our boate a shoare for fresh water, because wee stood in neede of it, which did so with 18. good men, and thye of foure tunne of water caskes. They were from vs, till the 8. day in the morning, at which time wee espied them againe, and that day wee came all together into the roade of Camano, where there came a Canoa aboarde vs, and one of the chiefest Portingals that belonged to the place. Here wee tooke in beefes, hogges, water and wood at our pleasure, hauing almost no man able to resist vs, but some of our Portingals stole from vs in the Canoa.

The 11. day wee entred into the hauen of Bayca, where wee were receiued at the point coming in with two great pieces of Ordnance, which discharged bullets at vs 5. times a piece, but they lost shotte and powder, and did vs no harme. After we had passed the point, wee hailed in for the roade as close as the winde would permit vs, but could not come so neere as we desired, and therefore we came to an ancre a faire birch off the towne, yet without great store of shotte from thence, but yet our harme was none at all for ought they could doe.

At our coming in, wee founde in the roade eight shippes and one caruell, of the which one was a hulke or double flie boate of the burden of 250. tunnes, hauing in her 24. pieces of good Ordnance: these with the rest of the shippes, together with the towne, gaue vs shotte, and shotte, but not one touch'd so much as any of our sailes. And least wee shoulde seeme in the meane time to be idle, wee rayped for euery shot of theirs, two or three sometimes at the shippes and the towne together.

The next day at night wee thought to haue hailed in with the shippes, and to haue fetched out some of them: but the winde blew then off the shoare, so that we could not possibly doe it. And againe the next day at night we concluded to goe with our owne two boates, and two other boates of the Countrey which we had taken before, which went with caruell sailes into the roade, and accordingly performed the same, notwithstanding the shotte of the enemy. The spoone did shine, and gaue very good light, and in wee went with our caruels and boates, and the shotte came about our eares as thicke as haille: but the Portingals and the rest, perceiving vs no whitte at all to thinke or bee dismay'd, forsooke their shippes, and begame to prouide to saue themselves, some with their boates, some by swimming, and so wee entred the shippes with a great

They take 4. shippes out of the harbor of Mexico, notwithstanding the shot of the enemy.

Shoote, and found few to resist vs: but yet the shoare not being a cables length from vs, they did so plye both their great and small ordnance at vs, that it much annoyed vs: But yet for all that we made light of their shot, and our men of the Barke Clifforde entered the Admirall and Vice admirall, and our Admiralls men entered two other shippes of the like burden, and presently every one cut the cables in the hauffe, and so by the helpe of God in despite of them all, wee brought away foure of them. The least whereof was of the burthen of one hundred and thirtie Tunnes.

In this broyle the hulke shotte at vs many times, but did no hurt at all: but at the last wee comming by the hulke towing our irwe prizes, wee halled them and demanded whence they were. they answered vs of Flushing, and then wee commaunded him to waie ancre, and to come after vs: And not daring to refuse it, hee did so, and brought with him a caruell with fourtie or fiftie butts of wine in her, and another small barke, which had little or nothing in her: and ridde by vs as one of our companie, and was a shippe of the burthen of 250. tunnes. But hard happe was to finde no great matter, either of Merchandise or victuals in these shippes, saving in one of them we found 4. butts of wine, in another 2. in another one, and some sfl, and all the rest of their lading was on shoare.

All this was done upon Easter eue, and wee gaue thanks to God, that wee had speede so well: and that very night there came a boate from off the towne, with a Dutch marchand, and one Portugall, to offer some ransom for the shippes, as they said, but as I iudge rather to espie our strength: wee kept them that night aboard, and the next day wee sent them to our Admirall.

The next day being Easter day arose a very great storme, insomuch that our caruel which we first tooke brake from vs, and one of our irwe prizes also, by meanes of the breaking of her cable, slippe away: whercupon, although the winde was great, and the sea troublesome, yet wee sent certaine of our men in our boate, to recover them if they might, but wee feare, that the rage of the weather hath caused vs to leele our men, and prizes to.

In the middelt of this storme, our two Spaniards which wee tooke in the Riuer of Plate, seeing vs all bule about our prizes, beganne to thinke howe they might escape our hands, and suddenly slippe both out of one of the Cabbins windows, and by swimming gotte a shoare, a thing which seemed to vs impossible, considering the outrage of the weather.

This storme continued long, and prevented vs of making our intended attempt against the towne, having as much to doe as possibly we might, in keeping our shippes and prizes from running a shoare, and falling into the hands of those that stood gaping greedily for our ruine.

The 19. day the storme being a litle ceased, wee all wayed and came to an Islande that lyeth next North west from the Bay, and the 20. day wee went on shoare, and our Carpenters set vp our pinnelle.

The 21. day the people of the Countrey came downe a maine vpon vs, and beset vs rounde, and shot at vs with their bowes, and arrowes, but in short time we caused them to retire, and many of them were carried away by the helpe of their fellowes, although wee had some of our men hurt with some of their arrowes.

The 24. day wee received out of the caruell 2. butts of wine, and 4. barrells of ople, and halfe a quarter.

The 26. of Appill our pinnelle was lanchod: and the same day came downe vnto vs a great number of Portugalls and Indians, with whom we skirmished the space of 2. houres to their cost.

The 2. day of May the Admiralls boate went a shoare with 14. men to fill water, and presently being on shoare, they were intrappd with two or 300. Indians which assailed them, and slew one or two of our men, but the rest escaped notwithstanding the number of the enemy, and came safe againe towch water to the shippe. We suffered this losse by meere negligence, and want of circumspection.

The 5. day the Captaine of the Admirall himselfe, tooke a small barke, his owne litle caruel, our pinnelle & the Dutchmans boate, & at night went to shoare to get victuals, amongst the bullockes which were in the fields: and in the morning they were gone so farre, that they were out of sight. Which being perceived by the enemy, they presently made ready their gally for the Admirall, with 4. caruels, with as many men in them as possibly could thrust in and stand one by another: and they bare ouer with the North West to meete with our pinnelle & boats: whercupon our men fell into great danger, although the Lister our Captaine dissuaded the Whirington from that attempt, by saying before him the danger both of himselfe & vs also, being so far one from the other. But being once gone, there was no remedy but they were to abide whatsoever might happen: we in the barke Clifford, although we were weakly left, yet perceiving the gally to make after our men, we wayed and

and pursued the Duke also gotte sight of a winge of flyinge speies of a withstanding that theyooke well, and made so waited the welcome, which presently after mightie shooe ly, with small boord them, at And surely to the fetwone of a uer of all victor that the enemy and whereas at hundred men in their legges, b and the departe with the numb ming a boord in ether noise of du

We lost in c mate, Laurenc mans man, who and thus it ple men, against 6. thanks to his s

How touch was nothing le which was to o nere them by o shippes was an

Howe wher were slaine, as ble other wise of the sight, here their Masters: with 400. men all: and I am the Towne, he

The twelfth the complaint ment of the fi not. I gaue bi

The thirtee as one butte of and one barrell to haue out of chests, and six of one hundred the shoare.

The 14. da Bayca, but n yet to giue an and boates, for and pursued the Gallie, as neere the shoare as we could conveniently come for want of water: the Hulke also waied, and came after vs, to followe the enemy, but the enemy with his oares gotte sight of our Pinuelle, and boates before we could, and bare directly towch them: which being espied of our men, and they seeing no way to auoide them, made themselves ready, (notwithstanding the great odds) to fight it our like men, and to liue, and die together. The course that they tooke for their best advantage vpon the sudden, was this: they went all into the Pinuelle, and made fast the Dutchmans boate to one side, and the small Caruell to the other side, and so waited the coming of the enemy, giuing them first of all a peece of Ordnance for their welcome, which they presently repaled againe with a peece out of the pproue of the Gallie, and presently after, with three or foure small halfe peeces, charged with haile shotte, and so giuing a mightie shoote, came all aboard together, crying, entra, entra, but our men receaued them so boldly, with small shotts and pikes, that they killed them like Dogges. And thus they continued aboard them, almost a quarter of an howre, thinking to haue deuoured our men, pinuelle, and all. And surely to mans iudgement, no other thing was likely, in regard of their great number, and the fetunes of our men, & they at the first thought that all was their owne: but God, who is the giuer of all victories, so blessed our small companie, & so strengthened their armes, and minds to fight, that the enemy hauing receaued a mightie foile, was glad to ridde himselfe from their hands: and whereas at their entrance, we esteemed them to be no lesse then betwix two hundred, and three hundred men in the Gallie, we could scarce perceauie twentie men at their departure stande on their legges, but the greater part of them was slaine, many deadely wounded, their oares broken, and the departed from our men, hanging vpon one side, (as a Schoole that hath lost her left eare) with the number of dead and wounded men, that lay one vpon another. And whereas their coming aboard was in a great tumult, with drumme, shooting, and crying, they departed without either noise of drumme, or speech.

A marvellous defeat of the Dutchingals by a few of our men.

We lost in this conflict of our men, three onely, which were Alexander the Master Gunners mate, Laurence Gambrell a proper young man of Hampton, and another that was Master Benmans man. Some also were hurt with the arrows of the enemy, but the wounds are curable: and thus it pleased Almighty God, of his great goodness, to giue victorie to 50. of 60. Englishmen, against 6. of 700. Dutchingals and Indians, for which we ceased not to giue such burifull thanks to his Mercie, as so miraculous a victorie deserued.

Now touching the purpose of our men, who made that attempt for fresh victuals, their labour was nothing lost, but in despite of the enemy, they brought to our ships 16. of 17. young bullocks, which was to our great comfort, and refreshing. As for vs that were in our ship, we could not come neere them by two mile, or more, to giue them any aide, yet we suppose that the countenance of our Shippes was an encouragement to our men, and some manner of feare to the enemy.

Now whereas our opinion concerning the number of the Dutchingals, and Indians, which were slaine, as before said, was grounded at that time vpon our probable coniecture, not being able other wise to come to the knowledge thereof: you shall vnderstande, that the next night after the fight, there came aboard vs, two Indians vpon a Gyngatho, who were runne away from their Masters: and they told vs for a very good truth, that the Gallie went out from the Towne with 400. men in her, but there came not backe to the Towne againe aliuie, about thirtie of them all: and I amongst the rest, being desirous to knowe of one of them, what the newes was at the Towne, he answered me with great laughter. Todo esta cecadoo en Terra.

The twelfth day, I was sent for to come aboard the Admirall, about the Hulke: where vpon the complaint of the Dutch men, Master Withington entered into bande to them for the payment of their freight, but howe my Loye will like that bande of debt at our returne, I knowe not. I gaue him my aduise, and counsell, to get his band againe into his hands.

The thirteenth day, our Captaine sent out of our shippe certaine victuals vnto the Admirall, as one butte of dighe rise, two chests of cleane rise, one barrell of oatmeale, one barrell of peason, and one barrell of oyle, because they were somewhat franted of victuals, and we at this time are to haue out of the Admirall our part of fine and twentie chests of fine suger, and more, of eidge chests, and six chests that were taken in the Baye of Todos Santos, at the Engueuos, more of one hundred and thirtie hats, and other diuers pillages, which were taken in the piles, and at the shoare.

The 14. day, being Munday, it was concluded amongst vs all, not to leaue the Towne of Bayca so, but notwithstanding the time that they had to strengthen themselves, and the Towne, yet to giue an attempt for the winning of it: and therefore we provided our Pinuelle, Caruell, and boates, for the enterprise: and as we were departing from our Shippes, the winde turned directly rectly contrarie to our course, so that our determination for that time was broken, and we returned againe to our shippes: and to say the truth, if the weather and wind had serued, our attempt had bene very desperate, considering the number of Portugals and Indians which were then gathered together, to be 7. or 8000. and their artillerie vpon the shoare, playing vpon vs: but neuertheless, we had proceeded, if the winds had fauoured vs.

The 16. day we went to certaine Ingenios of the Portugals, where we found the people fled, and we entered their houses without resistance. We founde in their purging house 1000. poes of sugar, some halfe purged, some a quarter, and some newly put into the poes: so that euery man tooke his poe of sugar for their provision, and set all the rest on fire.

The 17. day we all waied to goe to another Ingenio, to see if we could finde there better sugar, and in the way, we met with a prise, which was a Caruell, which we found spuing with the weather, and entered her, and had in her onely three Fawcons of yron, which our pinnets brought away, and sette the shippe on fire. Dalamor in the small prise ranne so farre in, that he brought his shippe on ground, where she laye three or foure howres, till such time as there came from the towne three Caruels full of men, which being perceaued of vs, our Capitaine, with our men, went to him to albe him. The Caruels came within Fawcon shot of vs, but durst come no nearer, least they might haue called of the like banket, that they receaued the last time. About halfe flood, came the Gally againe, and three Caruels more, but before they came, the bark was a floate, and set saile: and then they all went to gard their Ingenios, which we had purposed to visite: but the night coming on, perswaded vs to the contrary.

The 19. day we set saile to goe into the roade of Bayea againe, with our pinnets, and a flag of truce, to see if we could recover our foure men, which remained alive of those ten, that perished in our boate, of whom we spake before, which foure were vnfotunately fallen into their hands: but they at our apporching nere the towne, shot at vs, and we as ready as they, gaue them in all 27. shot, and so ankered a litle from the towne, to see what they would doe.

The 20. day riding still before the towne, our Admirall sent a Negro a shoare, with letters from the Portugals, that we had prisoners a boord: the effect of which letters, was, that if we might haue our men released, and deliuered vs, they should haue theirs from our ships.

The next day in the morning, in deede of their bloodie flagges, they put vpon two white flagges, and sent a Singatho off to vs with two Indians, with letters of answeere from the Gouernour: but they would not consent in any case that we should haue our men, and killed their Portugals to take their captiuitie patiently, for they would not redeeme them: a motion they made in their letters, to buy againe one of their prises, which we had taken out of the roade: but our Admirall answered them, no, seeing they detained our men, we would keepe both their men, and shippes too. The same evening we wayed, and came out of the Pauern, halfe a league to Seaward.

The 22. we set saile to sea, and the 23. came to an Island 12. leagues to the Southward of Bayea, to wood, and water.

The 24. day being aboard with our pinnets, we met with a Canoa, wherein was one Portugall, and five Indians: we shot at the Canoa, and killed an Indian, and tooke the Portugall, and one of the Indians, and brought them aboard our shippes: we there examined them, and the Portugall confessed that there was a shippe laden with meale, and other victuals, bound for Fernambucke, but put into a creeke, because she durst not goe along the coast, hearing of our shippes. Whereupon we manned both our pinnets, and tooke the Portugall with vs, to goe and seeke the same shippe, but that night we could not finde her.

The 26. day we went againe, and found her, being halled vp into a creeke, where a man would haue thought a shippe boate could not haue entered: we found her in deede laden with meale principally: but she had also in her foureteen chests of sugar, of which two were in powder, and twelue in loaves. This shippe was of the burden of one hundred and twentie tunnes, and a new shippe, this being the first voyage that euer she made, and as the Portugall confessed, she was freighted for Fernambucke, but the men of Bayea hauing great want of bread, bought both the ship and her lading, and so thought to stay her in this creeke, till we were gone off the coast: but it was our good happe, so to disspoint their pretense, and to fetch her from thence, where they thought her as safe as if she had bene at Lisbon.

The 28. day we deusted the meale amongst vs, according to the want of euery shippe.

The 30. day, 16. or 17. Dutchmen went with their boate from the Pulke to shoare, to fill water: and vpon a sudden they were assailed with 50. or 60. Portugals, and so many more Indians armed with shot, and other weapons, and they slew their Master, & Purser, and the rest were hurt, hurt, but yet escaped our landing.

The last day of March, and the 1. of Portugals which vpon we went the hills from the before them, and quickly, and at our

The third day of this voyage, we had him 6. but of 8. seamen, for for proceeds for the loss of his particu

The 7. of our otome shippes

The 8. day of the weather.

The 10. day, before all the comen for want of ab the Islands of the chafe, that might no man would a and vs great expected to returne

The 16. day her a shoare vpon could conuenient 9. chests of sugar From this time gaine, where we our losses in 10.

The 7. day (as he told vs) selected of the riu we realed not one of two, one of an come, hauing so

The 20. day Fernambucke, to come into hau the forward count rer we endeauour our otome courle

The 24. day, would goe for th part was bent to water, and yet it

The 26. day no more. This

The 27. day Capitaine allow with euery man

The 1. of next we continu of a boy to walke hurt, but yet escaped with their lives: a good warning for vs, to be circumspect, and careful in our landing.

The last day of May, we call off one of our pyses, which we called the George, and our Admirall, and the Quille took the men, and other necessaries out of her, into them. The same day the Hopingals which had hurt the Dutch men, came to the shoare, and bared vs to come a land: whereupon we went into our pinnets with 40. shotte: but the cowardly villanes raune all away to the hills, from the water side: but Master Lister, with nine men, followed them, and they fled still before them, and durst not stay their approach: so they came backe againe, and were killed more quietly, and at our pleasure.

The third day of June, our Captaine Master Lister, hauing a great desire for the performance of this voyage according to my Lords direction, went to our Admirall, and requested him to giue him 6. butts of wine, 1. barrrell of oyle, 3. or 4. barrrels of flesh, and to haue Thomas Hood, and 7. or 8. seamen, for some of our landmen, and by Gods helpe, he with the barke Clifford, would alone proceede for the south sea: but the Admirall mightly withstoode his motion, and would graunt no more of his particular requests.

The 7. of June, hauing no use at all of our pyses, we burnt one, and call off another, and filled our owne shippes with the necessaries of them.

The 8. day we put off to sea, but yet with much adoe came againe to our anking place, because of the weather.

The 10. day, the Admirall sent for vs to come aboard him, and bring come, he opened a Card before all the companie, and tolde vs, that my Lordes voyage for the South sea, was overthowen for want of able men, and victuals, and that therefore he thought it best to pipe for some of the Islands of the West India, or the Aiores, to see if they could meete with some good purchase, that might satisfie my Lorde. These wordes were taken heauily of all the companie, and no man would answer him, but kept silence, for very griefe to see my Lordes hope thus deceaied, and his great expences and coles cast away. The common souldiers seeing no other remedie, were contented to returne as well as he.

The 16. day, we espied a saile, whereupon our pinnets, and Dalamor gaue her chase, and put her a shoare vpon the Island, where the men forsooke her, and ran away with such thinges as they could conveniently carry: our pinnets booyed her, and found little in her: they tooke out of her 9. chefts of sugar, and one hogge, and 35. peeces of peeues, and so left her vpon the sands.

From this time forwarde, we began to ply northwards, and the first of Iulie fell with the land againe, where we staid, and found reasonable good stoys. I tooke the latitude that day, and founde our selues in 10. deg. 22. minutes.

The 7. day we determined to fall with Fernambucke, and we came so nere it, that Dalamor (as he tolde vs) espied some of the shippes that were in the harbour: yet notwithstanding we all fel to leeward of the riuer, and could not after that, by any meanes recover the height of it againe: but we ceased not on all partes, to endeuour the best we could, and oftentimes lost the companie for a day or two, one of another, but there was no remedie, but patience, for Fernambucke we could not come, hauing so much our throes to the northward, and the wind keeping at the south, or south-west.

The 20. day I tooke the Sunne in 5. deg. 50. minutes, which was 2. deg. to the northward of Fernambucke, and the further we went, the more vntowardly vido the rest of our shippes, either to come into haucn, or to keepe companie one with another. And truly I suppose, that by reason of the forward course of the Admirall, he meant of purpose to lose vs: for I knowe not how the neede we endeuoured to be to him, the further off would he beare from vs, and we seeing that, kept on our owne course, and lookt to our selues as well as we could.

The 24. day, our whole companie was called together to consultation, for our best courses some would goe for the West India, some directly north for England, and in conclusion, the greater part was bent to plee for our owne Countrey, considering our necessaries of victuals, and fresh water, and yet if any place were offered vs in the way, not to omit it, so fecke to fill water.

The 26. day in the morning, we espied a lowe Island, but we lost it againe, and could descrie it no more. This day we found our selues in 3. deg. 49. minutes.

The 27. day we searched what water we had left vs, and found but 9. butts onely, so that our Captaine allowed but a pinte of water for a man a day, to preferue it as much as might be, whereby every man was content, and we were then in number 50. men and boyes.

The 1. of August, we found our selues 5. degrees to the Northward of the line, all which morning we continued our course homeward, without touching any where: toward the ende whereof, a horrible accident fell out in our Quille, which being deuicid from vs in a calme, fel a fire by

Some great negligence, and perished by that means in the seas, we being not able any waies to helpe the Shippe, or to save the men.

The 4. day of September, we had brought our selves into the height of 47. degrees, 20. minutes, somewhat to the northwards of the Islands of the Alices: and thus building up and downe with contrarie windes, the 29. of the same moneth, we reached the coast of England, and so made an ende of the voyage.

A very exact and perfect description of the distances from place to place, from the river of Plate, till you come to Pette Gnaras, northward, and beginning againe at the river of Plate, till you come to the ende of the Streights of Magellan, Southwards, with the degrees of latitude, wherein every place standeth.

The river of Plate.

Robato.

Santa Maria.

The port of S. Pedro.

Marthin de Souza, Laguna.

Dunde Recca.

The river of Patua, Santa Catharina.

The river of S. Francisco.

Cannanea.

S. Vincent.

S. Sebastians Island.

The Island of Alcatrazes, Angra-deris.

The river of Genero.

Cape Frio.

The River of Plate standeth in 35. degrees, 10. minutes, upon the North side of the point there lieth an Island a league off the Shore.

From Lobato to the Cape Santa Maria, the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and betwene them are 55. leagues.

South-east from the Cape of Santa Maria, there lieth an Island two leagues off the Shore: and there is a good roade steepe betwene it and the maine, and the maine land is lowe land.

From the Cape of Santa Maria, to the port of Santo Pedro, you have 42. leagues, and all lowe land, and the land lieth North-east, and south-west: and on the South side of the port of Santo Pedro, there lieth a point of a land, which lieth a good league off the Shore.

From the port of Santo Pedro, to the port of Martin de Souza, you have 52. leagues, and the land lieth North-east, and South-west, and from the port of Martin de Souza, to the Laguna, you have 42. leagues, and the land higher. The course is north-east, and by north, and South-west, and by South: and there is an Island 2. leagues off the Shore, where there is a good roade steepe for ships.

From the Laguna to the port of Dunde Recca, you have 5. leagues, and it is a very good roade for all windes, saving a north-east wind: and from the port of Dunde Recca, to the river of Patua, you have 10. or 11. leagues, and the land lieth north, and south, and stands in 29. degrees. The mouth of that river doeth shut with an Island, called S. Katherins Island, which is a great Island of 8. or 9. leagues long, which Island lieth north, and South: and on the East side, it hath no roade, but one small Island, which lieth at the south end, and another at the north end, called the Island of Arbureto, which betweth as a great Baye, going in betwene S. Katherins Island, and the maine: in which Baye you may come to an anchor, and there are many small Islands: and the northern ende of S. Katherins Island stands in 28. degrees.

From S. Katherins Island, to the river of S. Francisco, you have 26. leagues, and the land lieth north, and south, and the river of S. Francisco hath a great mouth, and lieth by East, and West, and hath three Islands, where you may come to an anchor, and the maine land is high, and ragged.

From the river of S. Francisco to Cannanea, you have 15. leagues, the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and in the mouth, there is a small Island, that riseth like a saddle, and is a good roade, and stands in 26. degrees, and the maine land is high, and ragged.

From Cannanea to S. Vincent, you have 40. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and by east, and south-west, and by west. S. Vincent stands in 23. degrees, 30. minutes, and hath a small Island in the mouth, bearing west, north-west off you, and is called the Deimes gillaro.

From S. Vincent to S. Sebastians Island, you have 12. leagues, and the course lieth east north-east, and west south-west, and this Island is a great Island, and when you come out of the Sea, it sheweth like a Cape land, and south-west from that Island, there lieth a small Island, called the Island of Alcatrazes, and sheweth a high pinnacle.

From S. Sebastians Island, to Angra-deris, you have 26. leagues, and the land lieth east north-east, and west south-west, and from Angra-deris, to the river of Genero, you have 18. leagues. The river of Genero stands in 23. degrees, and riseth with high hills, and one of the hills sheweth like the toppe of a Shippe, and hath in the mouth many small Islands, and a high pinnacle on the West side, and is called the finger loafe.

From the river of Genero, to Cape Frio, you have 28. leagues, and the land lieth East, and west, and this Cape when you come out of the Sea, sheweth like an Island, and round: and when you come neere, it sheweth like a rocke, with many white strokes in it, and in the highest part of it it riseth broken, Cape, but two leagues, and betwene some house by a

From Cape the same Baye, James Island, 2 leagues off the good roade betwenger, but that whith wood, water, and

From the Island north-east, and south-west, and the

From the Cape south-west, and the

From Paray and stands in 21

From Mann and stands in 11

From Taper south-west, and the off into the sea, and

From the point east, and south-west land Saluado, hills, and ragged toward of this Gu betwene the m

From Guar Call, and South point: and from which stands also Gaster Hill, and hath many hills, and stands

From Spirite South, and this marke, and stands

From the river east, and south-west, and by in the land degrees, 20. minutes

From tract C and this Crearer them high lands, till you come neere

From Crear South, and by which is a good

From Maran west, and off this Swale to seaward you goe from Pa because of the volume in 6. or 7. f come as high as a league off: and the Swale to sea it riseth broken, which is a good marke, and stands in 23. degrees, and to the Northward of the Cape, but two leagues from it is the Baye Formosa, and hath in the mouth of it 4. or 5. small Islands, and betwene the maine and them, is a good roade, and on the north side the Baye, there is a lone house by a small river.

From Cape Frio, to the Baye of Salvador, you have nine leagues, and on the South side of the same Baye, there are many Islands, and the land lieth north and south, untill you come to S. James Island, which is 12. leagues to the northward of the Cape, this Island of S. James, is two leagues off the shoare, and hath two Islands hard by it, that the we all one thing, and there is a good roade betwene the maine, and the Island, a Falcon shot off the Island, and there is no danger, but that which you see, this Islande stands in 23. degrees, and 20. minutes, and hath upon it wood, water, and towle.

From the Island of S. James, to the Cape of S. Thome, you have 8. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and stands in 22. degrees.

From the Cape of S. Thome, to Parayua, you have 8. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and stands in 21. degrees, 40. minutes.

From Parayua to Mannage, you have 5. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and stands in 21. degrees.

From Mannage to Tapemere, you have 5. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and stands in 21. degrees.

From Tapemere to Cleretebe, you have 4. or 5. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and the said point of Cleretebe hath a ledge of rocks, which lieth a league and a half off into the sea, and the point is lowe land, and stands in 20. degrees, 45. minutes.

From the point of Cleretebe to Guarrapare, you have 7. leagues, and the course lieth north-east, and south-west, this Guarrapare hath an Island lying off it, which is round, and is called the Island Saluado, or barren, lying a league and a halfe off the shoare, and the maine lande is high hills, and ragged, which is a good marke, and stands in 20. degrees, 30. minutes, and to the northward of this Guarrapare, you have 3. Islands, which lie about 3. leagues off the maine lande, and betwene the maine and them, halfe a league off the shoare is a good roade.

From Guarrapare to Spiritus Santus, you have 8. leagues, and the land lieth North and by East, and South, and by West, and Spiritus Santus hath a ledge of rocks, lying off the north-east point: and from this point about two leagues up into the lande, you shall see a round high hill, which stands alone by himselfe, which is very ragged, which is called the hill of Spader Alue, or Spader Hill, and you shall see hence a great way off at sea. This Spiritus Santus is a great Baye, and hath many small Islands in the middes, or mouth, and the river lieth by north-east, and south-west, and stands in 20. degrees large.

From Spiritus Santus to the river Mangus, you have 6. leagues, and the land lieth North, and South, and this river Mangus maketh up in the land 3. hills, like round Islands, which is a good marke, and stands in 19. degrees, 40. minutes.

From the river Mangus to the river Doulee, you have 7. or 8. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and it is very flat, a league and a halfe off the shoare, and the land is lowe land, and up in the land is a high hill, which lieth along, as the coast lieth, and this river stands in 19. degrees, 20. minutes.

From the river Doulee to Crearere, you have 17. leagues, and the land lieth North, and South, and this Crearere on the south side, sheweth as 4. openings, a league one from another, and two of them high land, and the other two lowe land, and they are all so alike, that it sheweth all one river, till you come neere it, and stands in 18. degrees, 45. minutes.

From Crearere to Maranepe, you have ten leagues, and the land lieth North, and by East, and South, and by West, and hath in the mouth of the river a white cleefe, which sheweth like a sheet, which is a good marke, and stands in 18. degrees, 15. minutes.

From Maranepe to Parrewepe, you have 5. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and of this Parrewepe, lieth a high point of land, with many trees on it, and because it is all lowe to sea ward, from the mouth of the harbour, you shall see the shoales of Aburalus, and when you goe from Parrewepe, you shall see a league off into the sea, and then you shall goe north-east, because of the Baye, which is very dangerous, and when you see the shoales to sea ward, you shall runne in 6. or 7. fathome, and finde lost land: then are you in the channell directly, and when you come as high as the point of Parrewepe, by the way that you have made, you shall finde your self a league off: and in finding your selfe more then a league off, shall neere in for feare of running on the shoales to sea ward.

From

- The river of Caruels. From Parrewepe to the river of Caruels, you have 3. leagues, and the Channell will be the you how you shall steer away, and you may boldly boytrowe on the shoales to seaward, because the mouth of the river of Caruels is very shoale, and hath many sands.
- The red cliffs. From the river of Caruels, to the end of the red cliffs, you have 5. or 6. leagues, and this way you have no danger: but take heede of the breakings that you see: but as for the shoales of Goshow, they doe not brake, therefore looke well out.
- The shoales of Goshow. From the end of the red cliffs to Corebabo, you have two leagues, and take heede that you go not about a league and a halfe off the shoare: for in all this way from the red cliffs to Corebabo, there lieth a point of sand, and as soon as you be past the point of the rocks, you shall steer right with the sand north-east, all you come within a stones cast of it, and then steer hence East, till you thiuke the shoales are a sterne of you to seaward, and then turne to your way, about the coast, and this point of Corebabo, stands in 17. degrees.
- The cliffs of Corebabo. From this point of Corebabo to pozte Seguro, you have 28. leagues, and the land lieth north, and south, and take heede when you come as high as pozte Seguro, of the shoales to seaward, which are very ill. This pozte Seguro, hath great red cliffs which stand at the foot of the towne: and if you doe meane to goe into the harborough, bring your selfe East, and West off the cliffs, and then steer right with them, till you come within the point of the rocks, and then steer hence South: for the North side of the River is all shoale, and the River stands in 16. degrees, 30. minutes.
- Pozte Seguro. From this point of Corebabo to pozte Seguro, you have 28. leagues, and the land lieth north, and south, and take heede when you come as high as pozte Seguro, of the shoales to seaward, which are very ill. This pozte Seguro, hath great red cliffs which stand at the foot of the towne: and if you doe meane to goe into the harborough, bring your selfe East, and West off the cliffs, and then steer right with them, till you come within the point of the rocks, and then steer hence South: for the North side of the River is all shoale, and the River stands in 16. degrees, 30. minutes.
- Santa Cruz. From the river of pozte Seguro, to Santa Cruz, you have 3. leagues, and it is a good harborough for small ships: but take heede of the dangers that you see.
- Rio Grande. From Santa Cruz, to the arme of the grand river, you have 9. or 10. leagues, and take heede that in all this way you come not within 3. leagues of the shoare: for there lie many shoales in the way, and the land lieth North north-east, and South south-west, and over the arme of this Rio Grande, you shall see 3. hills of wood, which be like Islands, which is a very good marke, and stands in 15. degrees, 30. minutes.
- Ileas. From Rio Grande to Ileas, of the Islands, you have 18. leagues, and the land lieth north, and South, and in this way you have no shoales, but 3. or 4. leagues off: and if you will goe into the Islands, keepe alwaies along the shoare, in sight of the lands, for otherwise you can not see the Islands, because they are litle, and as soon as you see them, steer right with the greatest of them, and betwene the shoare, and there is very good riding, and if you will goe into the river, the Channell lieth from the greatest Island to the mouth of the river, north, and south, and stands in 14. degrees 45. minutes.
- The river of Contas. From the river Ileas, to the river of Contas, you have 8. leagues, and the land lieth north, and south: this river hath many rocks lying in the mouth of it, and to seaward there lieth a small Island, like a rocke: if you will goe into the river of Contas, boytrowe nere that rocke, for on the other side it is all flat.
- Camamo. From the river of Contas to Camamo, you have 6. leagues, and this Camamo hath a wide mouth, and off the point of the North shoare, you shall see an Island, which is called the Island of Cayepe: take heede you come not too nere it, for it hath many shoales off it: but boytrowe on the south side, for there goeth in the Channell, where you shall finde 5. or 6. fathome water: and from thence to Guepena, you have 3. leagues.
- The Island of Cayepe. From the river of Contas to Camamo, you have 6. leagues, and this Camamo hath a wide mouth, and off the point of the North shoare, you shall see an Island, which is called the Island of Cayepe: take heede you come not too nere it, for it hath many shoales off it: but boytrowe on the south side, for there goeth in the Channell, where you shall finde 5. or 6. fathome water: and from thence to Guepena, you have 3. leagues.
- Corpena. From Guepena to Tenyere, you have 4. leagues, and Tenyere on the south side betweth a high hill, which bearing north-west of you, will rise like a Wallie, with his keele upward, and if you will goe in, be bold to boytrowe on the south side, and you shall goe in 5. or 6. fathome, and stands in 13. degrees: this high hill is called the Schoope of S. Pablo.
- The Schoope of S. Pablo. From the Schoope of S. Pablo to Bayca, you have 12. leagues, and the course is north-east, and south-west, and if you see white sand, you are to the northward of Bayca, in the point of Lappeane, which point the weth white peeces in the land, like cloth a byping, and Bayca stands in 12. degrees 30. minutes.
- River Royall. From Bayca to the river Royall, you have 26. leagues, and the land lieth North-east, and south-west, and the point of Tapeane stands in 13. degrees. If you goe out of Bayca, for the northward, you must halfe off east, and by north, till you be 30. or 40. leagues off from the current.
- The river of S. Francisco. From river Royall to the river of S. Francisco, you have 17. leagues, and the land lieth north-east, and south-west, and stands in 11. degrees large.
- Gurra point. From the river of S. Francisco, to the point of Gurra, you have 15. leagues, and the land lieth north north-east, and south south-west, and stands in 10. degrees, 20. minutes.
- Camare Guba. From the point of Gurra, to the cliffs of Camare Guba, you have 6. leagues, & these are great high high cliffs, w these cliffs to south south-west

From the
lyeth north north hill like a fadde
from the cape
litle woods up of Saint Alex sin lands in 8

From the
and by east, and upon a high hill

From Ferna point of the riv
south-west by th

From the ri east, and south

From Parry
south-west, and eth north-west

Here follo

a shoale, whic Marie to goe t
east hal a degr Anthony, and and by south t be 20. leagues

From Cap
we stand by sou the river of S no nere the l

From the way betwene south-west and

From Cap
39. degrees, 5

degrees, 30. m
water bay poi stands in 43. d

the sandy bay
hard about t boytrowe for a

From the l
sals harborou
of rocks tha

From the

high cleefes, which is a good marke, and it is a good road strete for all westerly winds and from these cleefes to the riuer of Stones you haue 5. leagues, and the land lyeth north north east, and south south west.

From the riuer of Stones to the Cape Saint Augustine you haue 12. leagues, and the land lyeth north north east, and south south west, and this cape when you come out of the sea, seemeth a hill like a saddle, which standeth alone, lying west hand east and by north, and west and by south from the cape by into the land, and coming along the coast the cape lyeth out, and streweth as little woods upon it, and bushes in parts, and 5. leagues to the southward you shall see the Island of Saint Alexo, which is a small lowe Island, which is a good marke, and the Cape of S. Augustin stands in 8. degrees, 30. minutes.

The Island of S. Alexo.
The Cape of S. Augustine.

From the Cape Saint Augustin to Fernambucke, you haue 8. leagues, the land lyeth north and by east, and south and by west, and the marke of Fernambucke is the Towne it selfe, standing upon a high hill by the water side, which seemeth like to the cape it selfe, and stands in 8. degrees large.

Fernambucke.

From Fernambucke to the Island of Tamereca you haue 4. leagues, and it both on the south point of the riuer reboe cleefes, and if you will goe into the riuer, bying your selfe north east, and south west by the red cleefes, and so beare into the bay, whereas you shall haue 9. or 10. fadome water.

The land of Tamereca.

From the riuer of Tamereca to Parryba you haue 15. leagues, and the land lyeth north and by east, and south and by west, and stands in 8. degrees, 45. minutes.

Parryba.

From Parryba to Tappoam you haue 10. leagues, the land lyeth north north east, and south south west, and from Tappoam to the harborough of Munks you haue 7. leagues, and the land lyeth north west and south east, and the port of Munks stands in 5. degrees, 30. minutes.

Tappoam.
The harborough of Munks.

Here followeth the like description of the coast from the riuer of Plate to the Streights of Magelan.

Cape Saint Marie on the north side of the riuer of Plate stands in 35. degrees: from the same Cape Saint Marie, to Cape Saint Anthony which is the South Cape of the riuer of Plate, you haue 28. leagues, and the said Cape stands in 56. degrees, 20. minutes: the course betwene them is south south west, and north north east.

Cape S. Marie.

Note that East of the mouth of the riuer of Plate 15. leagues off, there lyeth a shoale, which they call Baxos de Castilliana: he that will shape his course from Cape Saint Marie to goe to the southward must hale off fourtheast, till he be in 36. degrees, then south south east hal a degree, so that you shall giue a birch to the said shoale, as also to the shoales of Saint Anthony, and sounding in 40. or 41. fadome, you shall find rusted sand, then hale away south west, and by south till you come to 40. degrees, where you shall find great stoe of weeds, and you shall be 20. leagues off the shoare.

Baxos de Castilliana.

From Cape Saint Anthony, to the cape of great sandy hills is 48. leagues, the lye south west and by south, and north east and by north: 8. leagues off Saint Anthony lyeth a riuer called the riuer of Saint Anne, which hath in the mouth many flats and shoales, therefore you must come no neerer the shoare, then 40. fadome, to goe cleere of them.

From the Cape of the sandy hills to Cape Saint Andrewe, you haue 31. leagues, and halfe way betwene them both you haue bays and riuers, which are full of shoales: the both Capes lie south west and by west, and north east and by north.

Cape Saint Andrewe.

From Cape S. Andrewe to the Sunken bay you haue 30. leagues, the said bay standeth in 39. degrees, 50. minutes, it lyeth west south west, and east north east.

The Sunken bay.

From the said Sunken bay to the plaine point you haue 25. leagues, the point stands in 41. degrees, 30. minutes: the lye south south west, and north north east, and from this point to the deepe water bay you haue 35. leagues: they lye west south west and east north east: the Deepe water bay stands in 42. degrees, 20. minutes.

The plaine point.
The deepe water bay.

From the Deepe water bay to the harborough of Lyons you haue 37. leagues: the cape ouer the sandy bay lyeth south south east, and north north west: out of the said Deepe, you may sayle hard aboard the shoare being bolde, from the riuer of Plate to the said bay you haue no harborough for any great ship.

The harborough of Lyons.

From that bay to the harborough of Lyons a lowe coast, with lowe land and white cleefes: the said harborough stands in 44. degrees, when you come to 43. somewhat more, look out for a ledge of rocks that lyeth on the north side of the harborough hard aboard the shoare.

From the said harborough of Lyons to the Cape with woods you haue 30. leagues: they lie south and by west, and North and by east, and halfe way betwene them both, there is a bay.

Cape of woods.

The round
cape.

18. leagues to the Northward of the round Cape you haue a riuer which lyeth in west, and is called the riuer of Crauises: you shall knowe when you are thwart: of the riuer, by certaine redde streames that you shall find like eydegates, which are going streames. The coast lyeth from this harborough to the round Cape of woods, southeast and by south, and north west, and by North: the said Cape of woods stands in 45. degrees, 30. minutes.

Cape Blanke.

From the sayd cape of Woods, to cape Blanke, or the white Cape, you haue 3. leagues, the coast lyeth south and by west, and north and by east: the said white Cape stands in 45. degrees, and about 3. leagues to the northward of the Cape, the land lyeth north north west: all by right white cleefes, which be in number 6, and the last of them is the biggest, and broadest, and shewes like a sayle: and in the head of the said Cape is a round hill, which the wey like a cloud: about this cape lye certaine rockes, hard aboord the shoare, and 3. cables length off the shoare you shall haue 25. fadom, and ouer the white cleefes, the land is plaine, and among the cleefes which the Sea hath made, the sea spoures vp, like the spouting of Whales, and vpon the Cape there are some litle woods, and here you haue people inhabiting, of whom take heed: the vpper part of the cape lyeth south and north a league in byedth, and hath in the middle a ledge of rockes aboue water, and on the south side of this Cape, you haue a harborough where is good ankering, but in the nuddell there is a rocke of which take heed.

Port S. Iulian.

From thence to Port S. Iulian is 37. leagues: the course is south and by west, and north and by east: of this port S. Iulian on the south side of the entering of the harborough lye rockes like Cowes, he that goeth in there must boirowe on the north side of the harborough, and within the harborough you shall find two Islands where you may anker hard by them: this harborough stands in 49. degrees.

The Islands
of Sampson.

Betweene the harborough of port S. Iulian and cape Blanke lye the Islands of Sampson which are 8. in number.

The hill of S.
Anne.

From the port of S. Iulian to the hill of S. Anne, is 35. leagues: the coast lyeth south west and north east a very plaine land, but onely one hill, and to the Southwards, are small Hammockes, which hammockes stand in 50. degrees 30. minutes.

The riuer of
S. Anne.
The riuer de Cruz.

From the riuer of S. Anne, to the riuer de Cruz, you haue 8. leagues. The Cruz is north east, and south west. To the northward of the riuer de Cruz, is a high land of two leagues long, and plaine on the toppe which lyeth south and north, and faller on either side like a fable: This coast is shoald foure leagues off: but you may boirowe on the shoare in 20. fadom.

The riuer of Galgos.

From the riuer de Cruz, to the riuer of Galgos, you haue 25. leagues: the course lieth north east, and south west, and it stands in 52. degrees, and 10. minutes, and for a marke of it, there is a hill, and on the highest of this hill it is plaine, and the north east end is keepe by and downe, and hath white and browne cleefes, the vpper edge of them blacke: and vnder the hill on the east side it is the wey like a paire of staires, with a blacke point into the sea: halfe a league to the southward of this point is a bay, which is at the entering of the riuer Galgos, where it doth ebbe and flowe, 12. fadom water in the riuer, take heed you goe not so farre in because it is dangerous, therefore goe no further in, then 18. fadom.

The streights of Magellan.
Cape Virgin
Marie.

From the riuer Galgos to the entrie of the streights of Magellan, called the Cape of the Virgin Marie is 8. leagues, the course is, south southeast, and north north west, and 4. leagues before you come to this Cape, you shall see high keepe cleefes, and gray full of blacke scarres, the sea beating against them like the spouting of whales, but a very wholesome shoare, where you may anker for a South west wind: the highest of this cape is like to Cape S. Vincent in Spayne: at the east side of this cape is a ledge of rockes, which hath a sand about it, which is full of pites, where you shall haue drepe water and by and by ground: this sand the wey is selfe at low water, therefore you must be sure to stemie the shoare halfe a myle till you haue brought the sayd Cape west north west off you: then goe away south west till you come to the lowest, where you shall haue 10. or 12. fadom water. This place is called the Purification: and halfe a league within this land, is a Towne called the name of Iesus: From this said Cape you shall haue a cleefte come from the cape, at the end of this cleefte the Towne stands, and is in altitude, 52. degrees, 30. minutes, and from the said Cape entering the streights, on the north west side within 14. leagues, it begins to be narrower, and narrower, till you come to the highest place of the narrowest entrie, which lyeth west north west, and east southeast: and in the sayd streights, goe a third part of the channell to the north shoare, because there is a ledge of rockes on the south side, and also you shall see land there: therefore you must glue them a good birch: and hauing past this first straight, goe away west south west 8. leagues till you come to a cape called S. Gregorie, with a high cleefte, and

The purification.
Nombre de Iesus which is Cathish found best open.

and a good r are trecherou
At this C
well, and call off you, and they are dan
leagues, and nuts: where thence, you sh Philip, & in p your ship in 4

A letter
Lord C

R

and made the small power sh cum passe the
the cape Bona gence of all the navigated alon
burnt and sun landed at, I bi quantitie of tre
cooke at Calif disc, that euer
did amount in ble to containe
being the vicer
upon the coast
heard of in the I should not h counrey. I th experience, I was well incre
will them selfe homeward the
from the Isl I humbly pro monght be. F Thus humbly
eution of the

and a good road, from the north-west to the south-west: trust not the people of this Cape, for they are trecherous.

At this Cape begins the 2. straight, and is called our Ladie of Grace: it stretcheth west south-west, and east north-east 3. leagues, and in coming off this straight, you shall see 3. Islands west off you, and may stay in among them, having respect that you come not into the Bayes, for they are dangerous. From the 3. Islandes seeke the Chanel of the straightes west south-west, 2. leagues, and from thence you shall hale to the southwards, till you come to the 53. degrees, 30. minutes: where you shall finde a point called the point of Saint Anne, and north north-west from thence, you shall see two or thre plaines, in one of which stands a towne called the Towne of King Philip, & in passing the Butwarke and a great tree, you may come to anchor, where you may moore your ship in 4. fadoms.

A letter of Master Thomas Candish to the right honorable the Lord Chamberlaine, one of her Maiesties most honorable priuie Counsell touching the successe of his voyage about the world,

Right honorable, as your fauour heretofore hath ben most greatly extended towards me, so I humbly desire a continuance thereof: And though there be no meanes in me to deserue the same, yet the vetermost of my seruicers shall not be wanting, whensoever it shall please your honour to dispose thereof. I am humbly to desire your honour to make knowne vnto her Maiestie the desire I haue had to do her Maiesties seruice in the performance of this voyage. And as it hath pleased God to giue her the victorie ouer part of her enemies, so I trust ere long to see her overthrowe them all. For the places of their welch, wherthey they haue maintained and made their warres, are nowe perfectly discovered: And if it please her Maiestie, with a very smal power she may take the people of them all. It hath pleased the Almighty to suffer me to circumpasse the whole Globe of the world, entering in at the straight of Magellan, and returning by the cape Bona Sperança. In which voyage I haue either discovered or brought certaine intelligence of all the rich places of the world that euer were knowen or discovered by any Christian. I navigated alongst the coast of Chili, Peru, and Noua Spagna, where I made great spoiles: I burnt and sunke 19. sayles of shippes small and great. All the villages and townes that euer I landed at, I burne and spoiled: And had I not bene discovered upon the coast, I had taken great quantitie of treasure. The matter of most profit vnto me was a great ship of the Kings which Iooke at California, which ship came from the Philipinas, being one of the richest of Marchantise, that euer passed those Seas, as the kings Register and Marchants accomptes did shew, for it did amount in value to * in Mexico to be sold: which goods, (for that my shippes were not able to contayne the least part of them,) I was enforced to set on fire. From the cape of California, being the vndermost part of all Noua Hispania, I navigated to the Islandes of Philipinas hard vpon the coast of China, of which Countrie I haue broughte such intelligence as hath not bene heard of in these parts. The statelines and riches of which collicie I feare to make report, at least I should not be credited. For if I had not knowen sufficiently the incomparable welch of that countrey, I should haue ben as incredulous thereof, as others will be that haue not had the like experience. I sailed along the Islandes of Maluccas, where among some of the heathen people I was well increased, where our countrey men may haue trade as freely as the Portugals, if they will themselves. From thence I passed by the cape of Bona Sperança, and found out by the way homeward the Island of Saint Helena, where the Portugals vse to releue themselves: And from that Island God hath suffered me to returne into England. All which seruicers with my selfe I humbly prostrate at her Maiesties feete, desiring the Almighty long to continue her raigue amongst vs. For at this day shee is the most famous and victorious prince that liueth in the world. Thus humbly desiring pardon of your honour for my tediousnes, I leave your Loyship to the cution of the Almighty. Plimmouth this 19. of September 1588.

Your honours most humble to command, Thomas Candish.

The worthy and famous voyage of Master Thomas Candish made round about the globe of the earth, in the space of two yeeres and lesse then two monethes, begun in the yeere, 1586.

The worshipful and worship gentleman Master Thomas Candish of Suffolke having in the yeere 1585. furnished out a ship wherein he went as Captaine with Sir Richard Greeneuill to Virginia, in which court he passed by the Canaries, and so to the Isles of Dominica, Hispaniola, Saint John de Porto ricco, the Lucaios, and Florida in the west Indies, thus fleshed and somewhat hardened into the Sea, immediately after his coming home began to take in hand a voyage into the South sea, and consequently round about the globe of the world, which he also performed with invincible courage, with great good government, and incredible celeritie, to the great admiration of all men of judgement. Having therefore at his owne proper cost new built from the keele and furnished with all things necessarie for two yeeres provision a haue shippe called the Desire of a hundred and fortye, and a lesser of threescore tunnes whose name was the Content, joyning therunto a Barke of 40. tunnes named the Hugh gallant, in which small fleet were five score and five men, The 7. day of June 1586. he departed from London and came to Waretwich, and sailed from thence the 29. of the same moneth. He arrived at Plimmouth the 8. day of July, from whence he set saile the 21. thereof. Thus he proceeded on his voyage untill the 25. day, at which time one Master Hope dyed which had bene grievously wounded a little before he went to Sea. The 26. day wee met with foure great Brittaine Shippes on which we bestowed eighteene great shot and threetye toyce that stay which we in the Admirall assailed: but we left her and the others, lest we should loose the rest of our consorts, being nine of the clocke at night.

June the 10.
1586.

We departed
from Plimmouth the 21.
of July.

August.

The 5. day of August we fell with the Island of Forteventura, & sailed thence to cape Blank, and so to the coast of Guinea unto a harborough called Sierra Leona, where having conference with the Negroes we fell at variance, so that threescore of our men went on shoare, and dynt them from their towne, and sacked their houses, and burnt their dwellings. And the 29. of the same moneth we departed from them, where going five leagues from the place we came to an Island called Insula Verde, where we found plantans, and other fruites, and fresh water, being an Island of the Negroes but bandyle.

September.

The first of September we burned here some 150. houses because of their bad dealing with vs and al Christians: in this place we redeemed a Portugall whom by treason they had caught and held in very miserabil captivitie. The 13. day we went from thence: the 30. we passed the Equinoctiall lync.

October.
November.

Thus we sailed fortye untill the 25. of October, at which time we came to the continent of Brasil, and coasting along untill the end of that moneth, the first of November we ankered vnder an Island called Saint Sebastians, where we road three and twenty daies betwene the mayne and it. There we stoyed our selves with fresh water and suell, and built a netve pinnesse of tenne tunnes. On the nyneh day dyed one Robert Smith of the disease called Scurbuto, which is an infection of the blood and the liver.

December.

The 27. of November we left this Island. On the first of December dyed one Robert Cates of the disease aforesayd: and so coasting along untill the 16. of this moneth wee discovered an harborough which we named the Porte of Desire, according to our Shipp name, being almost as bigge as the harborough of Plimmouth: In this place we had gullies, yutes, penguyns, and seals in abundance to all our consorts and great refreshing: this Porte is somewhat on this side of Porte Saine Iulian. And sailing from this harborough toward the Streights, before wee came to the entrance thereof, we espied certaine poore starved Spaniards traupling ouer land toward the riuer of Place: whereof weooke one into our ship of whom we vnderstood that of both the two Colonies planted in the Straight of Magelan by Pedro Sarmiento there were but 22. men onely left aliue, all the rest being vicerly perished for hunger, to the number of some thre hundred persons.

January 1587.

On the first day of January we put into the Streight of Magelan, and on the 8. we came vnto two Islands named by Sir Frauncis Drake the one Bartholomewe Island, because he came thither on that Saints day, and the other Penguin Island, on which we powdred thre tunnes of Penguins for the victualing of our shippe: and on the 9. day we came vnto a towne of the Spaniards erecting in March 1584. called by them the Citie of King Philippe, but by vs the

the Towne
had bene mo
they were b some Gench
pined and b

Thus say ages of a r byuities a we esping meanes few Southwest

The famo cum, the pea
of La mocha where we ri
the morning rall very be dement Sp contentment

The 20. d
we felt an ea
on the 30. of captives by reachlesnes little though
ward, and fo
bought goo
in despite of
of April.

Thus ran and an India ted vs, and i
their govern
goods and one of our
was buried i
the ladies her where they g
which we too
dome prouid George, beca

The 25. d
ning we esp Spaniards, b
from the Ba goe for Lina though So Pilot for the day of May would haue
most ste of and found si

And on th sayer, and g
other with m of waste call by reard, as on we gate b

the Towne of famine, because we evidently sawe the inhabitants, all sauing the aforesayde 22. had bene most miserably starved: we tooke away with vs sixe pieces of their ordnance, whereof thye were byasse, and thye were pyon, and were glad to hasten from this place for the most part. some French and vile saavour wherewith it was infected through the contagion of the Spaniards pyned and dead carkeises.

Thus sayling through the Straights, the 20. day of Januarie in the midway we espied Sa- uages of a reasonable Nature, and went to them, and conferred with them: but such was their hutchynes and their trecherie, that they would haue betrayed vs vnder the shewe of amitie: but we espying their treason gaue the first onset, and euery shot of vs chose his man, and by that meanes slew some, and hurt moze, the rest escaped. So hauing many slawes of Southerly and Southwesterly winde, we were kept within the Straights vntill the 23. of February.

The same day we passed out of the Straights into the Sea called by Magelan, Mare pacifi- cum, the peaceable or the calme Sea: Thus we plyed by along the coast of Chili by the Island of La mocha, which standeth in the Southerly latitude of 38. degrees vntill the 14. of March, where we rid vnder an Island called San La Maria, on which Island we landed 80. men armed in the morning betimes, and there came vnto vs the Countrey people which intrated our Gene- rall very well, and presented him with many sortes of meates: for there we had at our comman- dement Spanish wheate, potatoes, hogs, hens, dyed dogfish, and diuers other good things, so our contentment.

The 20. day we departed thence, running along vntill the 28. which day being at the Sea, we felt an earthquake in the latitude of 33. we were put into a Bay called the Bay of Quintera on the 30. of this moneth, where the first of April we had ten of our men slaine, and two taken captiues by the Spaniards: which great misfortune light vpon our men though their great reachlesnesse and want of circumspection, being suddenly surprisid by the Enemie when they little thought of him. But on the third day of the same moneth the Hugh went forth to Sea- ward, and found an Island hauing great Roys of Pellicanes & Penguins vpon it, wherof they brought good Roys vnto vs: and so furnishing our selues here with fresh water, which we tooke in despite of them all, we left them and their cruell Parbojough, and put out of the Bay the first of April.

Thus ranging along, we haled in with a Voyte called Mormorano, where we found a canoa and an Indian in it which was fishing, and had caught a very large Tunny wherewith he presen- ted vs, and in our conference with him, he shewed vs their Towne which was wafe and rude, but their government and behauiour very strange: for when any of them dyeth they bury all his goods and stuffe with him, as hookes, nets, canoa, and other triffles. So sayling along that shoar, one of our shippes called the Content, entered into a Bay, where a great deale of wine of Castilla was buried in Bozillos in the sand, to the quantitie of some thye hundred tunnes, wherewith she laden her selfe hauing lost our companie, but they found vs againe at a Towne called Arica, where they gaue vs of their wine. In this Parbojough we found a great ship, and foure Barkes, which we tooke and kept vntill such time as wee had taken out of them the best things for our owne prouision: then we burned them all sauing one Barke which wee kept, and named it the George, because we tooke her on Saine George his day.

The 25. day of April we went from Arica, sayling to the Seaward all night, and in the mo- ning we espied a small Barke, and maiming our Pinnelle, wee tooke her, wherin were thye Spaniards, one Greeke, and one Dutch man: being examined, they confessed that they came from the Bay of Quintera, where we lost our sloopes twelue men, and that their intent was to goe for Lima to giue aduise to the Viceroy for to prouide force to cur vs off: but their pretence through Gods mercifull prouidence was prevented: one of these Spaniards was a reasonable Pilot for those Seas. Thus we continued our course along the coast of Peru vntill the fourth day of May, vpon which day our Spanish Pilote led vs into a Bay called Pisco, where wee would haue gone on shoare, but the Sea was so growen that we could not: yet on the Souther- most side of the Bay there was a Village called Paraca, where seuen of our men went on land and found figs, pomegranates, and pomegranate wine.

And on the first of May we went from Paraca, and in our course we deseried to Seaward two shippes, and gaue them chase, and tooke them: the one was laden with meale and martiall, the other with marchants goods, as Capes of diuers sortes and colours, cattle of white sope, a kinde of waste called garbanos, soybouan skins, monte go de porco, which is hogs greafe clarified or refined, and molasses of strop of sugar, beanes, and one of two thousand hens alive: Whereup- on we gaue vs into a Bay called Chiripa, where we laden our shippes with part of these commo- dities.

The towne of King D. Philip in the Straights of Magellan.

Trecherous Saues in the Straights of Magellan. February.

Isle. March.

The Bay of Quintera. April.

The Voyte of Mormorano.

Arica. A great ship and 4. Barkes taken & burnt.

The Barke of Adria taken.

May. Pisco Bay.

Paraca a village.

Two shippes taken.

The Bay of Chiripa.

- The Bay of Paria.
- The towne of Paria burnt.
- The Island of Paria.
- June.
- The towne in the Ile of Paria burnt.
- Five great
 ships burnt.
- They double Equinoctiall
 line.
- Another ship
 taken & burnt.
- The second
 Ile of Paria
 taken & burnt.
- The towne
 of Aguatulo burnt.
- August.
- What the Native
 inhab.
- The third part of Paria by land taken.
- Two ships
 more burnt.
- They be Saint
 Iago.
- September.
- The Bay of Compostella.
- Two prisoners taken on the land.
- The Ile of
 S. Andrew.
- The Bay of Massellan.
- And burnt the rest ships and all, having put the men that were in them on land, and departed from thence the tenth of May. Thus sailing forward we were baled into a Bay called Paria, where we tooke a Barke with fifty men, and tooke the Towne, out of which we saw that those hundred persons which fled with bag and baggage, whom we pursued so fast, that they were forced to leave their lodgings behind them: In the ende we set their Towne on fire, because they sought not to redeeme the same. And because we found small hope of treasure here, we came away the same night. On the second of May we went to the Island of Paria, where we trimmed our ships and refreshed our men, though somewhat to our cost: for on the second day of June our men thinking themselves to be sure and safe enough, four score of an hundred Spaniards, with two hundred Indians (for there was a Towne of Indians in the Island bigger then Graueland) set upon fifteen of sixteen of our men being halfe a sleepe and halfe awake, & slew five of five, and tooke two of three of them before any supply could come unto them: at the coming whereof they all ran away like greghounds, our men for reuenge burnt their Towne, and spoiled their fields and gardens, but first wee tooke the fruites of the Island, as goats, hogs, hennes, figs, oranges, limons, besides other wholesome herbes in great quantitie. So after we had trimmed our Fleet wee came away: but for a farewell wee first set foure of their ships on fire, whereof one was two hundred tunnes, the rest an hundred a piece, being all vpon the stocks in building: we also fired another of foure hundred tunnes called the great Saint Luce riding before the Towne to be mended, because they haue neuer another so good a place to bring their ships on ground as that is, on all the coast of Peru.
- After we had taken in fresh water we went from thence the 11. day of June, and the 12. day we passed the Equinoctiall line, continuing our course Northward all that moneth: About the beginning of July as we ranged along the backside of Noua Hispania neere vnto Guatimala (where there is an hill that burneth continually) we espied a newe shippe of 200. tunnes, where in were two Spaniards, two Portugallians, two Venetians, and one Fleming: in which shippe was little of nothing but her ballast, we tooke her sailes, and ropes, and firewood to serue our turns, set her on fire and kept the men, of which number we brought one called Michael Sancius a Pilot into England. On the next day we tooke another shippe, the men being eslayerd with their boate on land, which after wee had taken certaine victuals out of her, wee also set on fire: This was the shippe of Adulfo to giue warning of vs, sent from Lima to the coast of Noua Hispania.
- The 28. of July we came to the Porte of Aguatulo, in which we found a shippe laden with cacao, a fruite like almonds much esteemed in those partes, and taking the spoyle thereof, we set the shippe and Towne on fire for company: the people ranne away at the sight of our little Pinnesse, our ships lying thre leagues off at that time: There were some foure score houses in this Towne being an Hauen that belongeth to Mexico. In this place we had great store of pitch, which stood vs in great need for our ships, and some quantitie of wine of Castilia as they call it.
- The fourth day of August we departed from this place, and coming forth wee tooke a shee tortoise, which had about foure hundred and odder eggs in her, which eggs we ate and found them to be good meate. The 13. of August we fell with an Hauen of Noua Hispania called Puerto de Natiuidad, about the latitude of 19. degrees, where we had conference with foure Indians, and there wee tooke the Poole of Adulfo that ranne by land on horse, whose horse wee slew and tooke him prisoner. Wee burnt two ships of two hundred tunnes the piece, which were in building in the harborough: And six leagues from thence there was a little Island of rocks replenished with abundance of birds, whereof wee gat good store to our great refreshing: there were also innumerable sorte of parrots as big as hens: and in another Hauen hard by, called Puerto de Saint Iago, wee dugged for pearles, and tooke some store. The third day of September we came away hauing newly trimmed our Pinnesse, which was wonderfull leake with wormes. The eight day of the same we came into a Bay called the Bay of Compostella, where our men went two leagues by into the Countrey early in the morning, and tooke a Spaniarde and his wife, a Ragusan and his wife, with an Indian and his wife, and brought them away vnto our General, who set the women at libertie, and they redeemed their husbands with fruites, as plantans, mameias, pineapples, oranges, and limons, of all which is great abundance, as the Spaniarde sayd, tanto como tierra as great plentie as there is of earth. On the 12. of September wee came to an Island two leagues from thence called S. Andrew, where we had foules, and seales, and guanous, of which we made very good victuall: howbeit they would scarcely eate salt but for one night and a day only. The 16. of the same moneth wee came vnto a Bay called Massellan,

where

where we thence vnto Hoze called of this cape shippe come
 tunnes: we
 of fourtens
 peeled vnto member we on land: and of the chief hundred tun
 of the rich wealthie, if
 At length
 set saile the toward the
 and fourtie Ladrones
 met vs at saying, wi rrecting our which day th gon of Man cocos, and
 of the foure Islands to what the S neo vntill t

And on t and Iaua m being Gene lons, plant and goodne people do t
 doe in our
 and caried
 men and ch
 they sit cro
 because he they rejoy
 and that w waite again Iamboam.

The 16
 on the 17.
 being chire
 had sight of double.

The ser ankered v
 ment: for herbes for bp into the builded to only banish swerney of
 for Englan

where we had fruite and fish, but were in great danger of our enemies: Wee traueled from thence vnto the Southermost cape of California, where bearing vp and downe we discovered a Baye called by the Spaniards Agua Segura, and found good store of fresh water: we lay off & on of this cape vntill the fourth of Nouember, on which day in the morning wee espyed the goodly shippe comming from the Phillipinas called Sainte Anna the great, being of seuen hundred tunnes: we chased her vntill noone, so fetching her by, we gaue them sight to the losse of twelue or fouretee of their men, and the spoyle and hurt of many more of them, wherupon at last they yeelded vnto vs: In this conflict we lost onely two of our men. So on the sixt of the sayde Nouember we went into the Baye of Agua Segura, where wee ankered and put nine scope prisoners on land: and ransacking the great shippe, we laded our owne two shippes with fourtie tunnes of the chiefeest marchandise, and burne all the rest aswell shippe as goods, to the quantitie of sixe hundred tunnes of rich marchandise, because we were not able to bring it away: This was one of the richest vessels that euer sailed on the Seas, and was able to haue made many hundredes wealthy, if we had had meanes to haue brought it home.

Puerto de Agua Segura. Nouember.
The great Sainte Anna taken, rised & burnt.

Nine scope Spanish prisoners put on land.

At length hauing furnished our selues with water & wood, and made vs ready for the Sea, we set saile the twentie of Nouember & came away. From Cape California, we shaped our course toward the Islands of the Ladrones, and by the piousness of God wee came vnto them in two and fourtie dayes, the distance being thye and twentie hundred leaguers: The first Island of the Ladrones where we touched is called Guana, the inhabitants are cheuich and trecherous: they met vs at Sea thye leaguers off in small canoas, admirable to beholde for their swiftnesse in sailing, with which people wee had some traffike vntill the euening, and so wee left them directing our course vnto the Islands of the Phillipinas vntill the fourteenth of Ianuarie, on which day we fell with an Island called Tadaia: and from thence we passed by the Island of Luconoy of Manilla, vntill we came to an Island called Capul, where wee had hens, hogs, potatoes, cocos, and other frutes for traffike with the Indians, making our abode there vntill the 24. of the sayde Ianuarie. Then proceeding on our voyage throug the infinite numbers of Islands towards those rich Islands of Maluco, we passed by Mindanao, which is the last Island that the Spaniards inhabitate that way: So we came betwene Cebele of Barachina and Borneo vntill the twelfth day of Februarie.

The Islands of Ladrones 2100. leagues from Cape California.

January 1588
Capul an Island.

Februarie.

And on the 28. and last of the same we put throug betwene the Straights of Iaua maior, and Iaua minor, and ankered vnder the South west part of Iaua maior, where the inhabitants being Gentiles brought vnto vs hennes, geese, hens egges, ducke egges, buffes, melons, planeans, and an hundred sortes of frutes most strange and wonderfull for greatnesse and goodnesse, euen whole wuncks full being a kinde of barks made like vnto our barges: These people did increase vs wonderfull well, and came as duely to traffike with vs in our ship as wee doe in our markets and shoppes, and brought from their King diuers presents to our Generall, and caried diuers rich gifts from our Generall to their King: The King sent many of his kind men and chiefe Courtiers a shipboye to entertaine him, being men of very good behauiour: they sit crasse legged, they would faine haue had our Generall come to their Kings chiefe towne, because he was not well able to come downe vnto our shippe being a man of great age, and as they reported, very neere an hundred and fiftie yeeres olde, but our Generall excused himselfe and that with reason: Wee would haue sent his sonne in his owne steede, but that hee was at warre against another King in the Island their enemy: This olde Kings name was Raia Bo-lamboam.

Iaua maior.

Our men were entertained at Iaua maior.

Raia Bolamboam King of Iaua.

The 16. of March we set saile from Iaua maior towards the Cape of Bona Speranca: and on the 11. day of May we fell with the land of Aethiopia, neere vnto a place called Capo falso, being thirtie and ouer leaguers from the Cape of Bona Speranca. And on the 19. of May wee had sight of the Cape of Bona Speranca, which is the promontorie that all traualers desire to double.

Mar.

The seuenth of June wee fell with the Lande of Saint Helena, and on the eight day wee ankered vnder it, where wee continued twelue dayes, finding it a place to our great contentment: for there we had goats, hogs, figs, oranges, limons, pomegranates, and many wholesome herbes for the gathering: But he that will haue of the castell must trauaile a mile and an halfe by into the steepie mountaine to kill them: we found a Church and thirtie of fourtie houses builded to lodge the Portingales, in their comming from the East Indies: There was one onely banished man there which liued as an Hermite, but hee was dead before our arriual. The twenty of June we departed from the Island of Saint Helena shaping our course from thence for England.

June. Our men stayed 12. dayes on the Island of S. Helena.

The

July. The fourth of July 1588, we passed the equinoctiall line, which was the fourth time that we had trauesed the same in this our journey. The 24. day of August we had sight of two Islands of I Flores the one called Flores, the other Coruo, and directed our way from them for the Lizard untill the end of September, at which time we espied a Flemish Yulke that came from Portingale, which tolde vs the ioyful newes of our Fleets good successe against the huge armie of the Spaniards. And on the first day we met with a ship of Souchampton, which had taken a Dyallian pisse, whose Captaine informed vs at large of the truth of that which had passed: We tooke some refreshing of them, which was recompensed with treble curtellie, and so entered into the narrow Seas where we had as terrible a night as ever men endured: for all our sayles were blown quite away: but making as good shift as we could with certaine olde sayles we had within boide, on the next morning being the ninth of September 1588, like wearied men through the fauour of the Almighty, we gate vnto Plimmouth: where the Townes men received vs with all humanitie. In this voyage we burnt twentie sayles of Spanish shippes, besides diuers of their Townes and Villages.

Their arrival at Plimmouth was the 9.
of September

Written by N. H.

The names of the Kings or Princes of Iaua at the time of our English mens being there.

{ Raia Donav.	{ Raia Tymbanton.
{ Raia Rabacapala.	{ Raia Mawgbange.
{ Raia Bacabatra.	{ Raia Patimara.

Certaine wordes of the naturall language of Iaua, learned and obserued by our men there.

Sabuck, like.
Sazu, bread of the Countrey.
Larnike, dystike.
Paree, ryce in the huske.
Braas, sodden ryce.
Calapa, coquos.
Cricke, a dagger.
Catcha, a looking glasse.
Arbo, an ope.
Vados, a goate.
Cabo, golde.
Gardange, a plantine.
Hiam, a benne.
Seuit, linnen cloth.
Doduck, blew cloth.
Totopps, one of their caps.

Gula, blacke sugar.
Tadon, a woman.
Bebeck, a bucke.
Aniange, a deere.
Popran, opyntment.
Coar, the head.
Endam, raine.
Ionge, a shippe.
Chay, the sea.
Sapelo, ten in number.
Dopolo, twentie.
Treda, no.
Lau, vnderstand you.
Bayer, goe.
Adadizano, I will fetch it.
Suda, prougb.

Certaine notes or references taken out of the large Mappe of China, brought home by Master Thomas Candish. 1588.

The great kingdome of the Mogores, is vpon the Northwest and falls vpon Tanassacin beyond Mallaca, and topnes vpon Bengola: the pise men of warre, and vse no sight but on horsebacke, they goe in their apparel like Portingales.
A City wherein is Captaine a Chinian, a man very deformed, hauing vnder him many men of warre: he maketh warre both against the Tartarians, and the Mogores lying betwene them, and lyeth without the circuite of the wall.
3 Certaine hills beyond which the Tartarians do inhabit, who heretofore were great friends with the Chinians, and now mainteine continuall warres against them, so great that sometimes there three are flying warres all kin

4 The p
Castles: it con tribute, and i defence.

5 The gre
and 18. small c pay tribute: it to the Northw

6 The gre
the Tartars.

7 The p
fles, and one c uentene leagu
of warre.

8 The p
It is 82. leagu
31000. footer

9 The p
being 470. lea
of this citie co

10 The p
make armour broade, and b bute, whereof

11 The p
and Castles, 1 208900. men

12 The p
and Castles,
warre,

13 The p
is 200. leagu

14 The p
and is 440. le
of warre.

15 This and from the Chinians do the warres w 16 The p

and is 260. le
of warre.

17 The p
is 260. leagu
footemen, a

18 The
castles, and of warre.

19 The
and Castles leagues by o
king's garde

20 The Castles, an China is 38

men of war

there are shippes in a battaile, 100000. of men adoyning upon Mookowai and they haue in their warres all kinde of armour.

4 The prouince of Canlas hath 4. great cities, and twentie small cities, and 77. townes and Castles: it containeth in length, 55. leagues: it hath 362000. houses of great men that pay tribute, and 13900. men of warre: and hath 47000. hoyses which are the kings, kept for his defence.

5 The great citie of Paquyn where the king doth lye, hath belonging to it 8. great cities, and 18. small cities with 118. townes and Castles, it hath 418789. houses of great men which pay tribute: it hath hoysen for the warre, 258100. This citie is in the latitude of 50. degrees to the Northwards, being there as colde as it is vsually in Flanders.

6 The great citie of Canton, wherein are many men of warre, to keepe the passage from the Tartars.

7 The prouince of Soychin, hath 7. great cities, and 16. small: with 12. townes, and Castles, and one great citie, to which many doe repaie to fight against the Tartars. It hath seuentene leagues in length: and hath 164118. great houses which pay tribute, and 96000. men of warre.

8 The prouince of Santo, hath 6. great cities, and 14. small, with 90. Townes, and Castles: It is 81. leagues long, and hath 77555. great houses which pay tribute 63808. hoysen, and 31000. footemen of warre.

9 The prouince of Oyman hath 7. great cities, and 13. small, and 90. Townes, and Castles being 470. leagues, and 132958. great houses that pay tribute: 82800. men of warre, one of this citie cometh Copper, quicksiluer, and blake leade.

10 The prouince Curchew hath 8. great Cities, and 12. small, and 83. Townes, which make armour to fight in the lawes, which do inhabite beyond Cauchin china: It is 100. leagues broad, and hath 32920. hoysen, and footemen, with 405670. great houses which pay tribute, whereof the men of warre are payde.

11 The prouince of Languyn, hath 14. great cities and seuentene small, and 95. Townes, and Castles, it is 120. leagues ouer, and hath 962818. great houses which pay tribute: it hath 208900. men of warre, whereof there are 52500. Tartar hoysen that take wages.

12 The prouince of Vquam hath fourteene great Cities, and 19. small, 150. Townes and Castles, and is 210. leagues broad, and 53161. houses that pay tribute, and 71600. men of warre.

13 The prouince of Som hath 7. great cities, and 11. small, and 105. townes and castles, and is 200. leagues broad, and houses that pay tribute 139567. and men of warre, 345632.

14 The prouince of Esiran hath 11. great cities and 75. small, and 80. townes, and castles, and is 440. leagues broad, and great houses that doe pay tribute 1242135. and 339000. men of warre.

15 This lake lieth behinde Siam, and before Champa, and doeth toyne with the Iappians, and from thence comes all the water that serues the kingdome of China, and the Indians of the Chinians doe report this lake to bee the whole worlde, and so they paynt the sea, the moone, and the starres within it.

16 The prouince of Canfay hath 13. cities, and a chiefe citie, and 73. Townes and Castles, and is 260. leagues broad, and hath great houses that pay tribute, 1393629. and 12700. men of warre.

17 The prouince of Cuaufa hath 12. great cities, 47. small, and 51. townes and Castles: it is 260. leagues broad, and hath great houses that pay tribute, 1306390. and men of warre both footemen, and hoysen, 100100.

18 The prouince of Vanam hath fourteene great cities, and 36. small and 34. townes and castles, and is 88. leagues broad, 589296. great houses that pay tribute, and 15100. men of warre.

19 The prouince of Suckin hath eight great cities, and one principall citie, and 54. townes, and Castles, and two great Cities of Garrison, to keepe watch vpon the Iapons, and is 200. leagues broad, and hath, 5009522. great houses that pay tribute, and 4003225. men of the kings garde.

20 The prouince of Canton hath fourtie great cities, and seuen small, and 77. townes and Castles, and a Citie that pucteth foorch hundreds of shippes for the keeping of Cachew: China is 380. leagues in breadth and hath, 483383. great houses which pay tribute, and 39400. men of warre.

- 21 The Citie Champa standeth in foure & thre degrees to the Northward of the Equinoctiall.
- 22 The port of Cochin China, standeth in the latitude of sixteene degrees and a halfe to the Northward.
- 23 The prouince of Enam, hath 7. great Cities, and 13. small, and 90 towncs and Castles, and is 88. leagues broad, and hath 582296. great houses that pay tribute, & 15100. souldiers.

}	Horsemen	}	Footemen	}
}	454728.	}	7459057.	}
} The totall summe. } } 7923785. }

An assignement from Sir Walter Raleigh, to diuers Gentlemen, and Merchants of London, for the inhabiting, and planting of our people in Virginia.

His Indenture made the 7. of March, in the 31. yeere of the raigne of our Soueraigne Lady Elizabeth by the grace of God of England, France, and Ireland Queene, defender of of the sayth &c. betwene the right worshipfull Sir Walter Raleigh, of Colaton Raleigh, in the county of Devon knight, Lord warden of the Stuarie, and chiefe gouernour of Assamacomock alias Wingandacoia, alias Virginia. on the one partie, and Thomas Smith, William Sanderson, Walter Bayly, William Samage, Edmund Neull, Thomas Harding, Walter Parler, Thomas Partin, Gabriel Harris, William George, William Stone, Henry Fleetwood, John Gerrard, Robert Packlyn, Richard Hakluyt, Thomas Hoode, Thomas Wade, Richard Wright, Edmund Walden, merchants of London, and adventurers to Virginia asforesayd, John White, Roger Baylye, Ananias Dapye, Chyffopher Cooper, John Sampson, Thomas Streeuens, Roger Plat, Dionise Paruie, John Nichols, Humfrey Dimmocke, late of London gentlemen, of the other partie, witnesseth, that where Sir Walter Raleigh knight by vertue of the Queenes Maiesties letters patents dated at Wellminder, the 25. day of Marche, in the 26. yeere of her highnes raigne, vnto him the sayd Sir Walter Raleigh, by the name of her Maiesties trustie, and welbeloued seruant, Walter Raleigh Esquire, granted for the discovering, finding out, and planting of vnknown and remote landes and countreies, as by the sayd letters pattentes at large doeth, and may moze plainely appeare: hath by this indenture of graunt bearing date after the computation of England the 7. day of Januarie in the yeere of our Loyde God 1587. and in the 29. yeere of the raigne of our Soueraigne Lady Queene Elizabeth, made betwixt him the said Sir Walter Raleigh knight of the one partie, and John White, Roger Baylye, Ananias Dapye, Chyffopher Cooper, John Sampson, Thomas Streeuens, William Fulwood, Roger Plat, Dionise Paruie, John Nichols, George Howe, James Plat, and Simon Ferdinando of London Gentlemen of the other partie, graunted vnto the said John White, Roger Baylye, and the rest, free libertie to carrie with them into the late discovered barbarous lande, and countrie called Assamacomock, alias Wingandacoia, alias Virginia, there to inhabite with them, such, and so many of her Maiesties subiects, as shall willingly accompany them, together with sufficient shipping and furniture for the same, and also diuers, and sundry other prerogatiues, iurisdictiones, royalties, and preheminences, as in, and by the said indenture of graunt, it doeth, and may moze at large also appeare: Nowe the sayde Thomas Smith, William Sanderson, Walter Baylye, William Samage, Edmund Neull, Thomas Harding, Walter Parler, Thomas Partin, Gabriel Harris, William George, William Stone, Henry Fleetwood, John Gerrard, Robert Packlyn, Richard Hakluyt, Thomas Hoode, Thomas Wade, Richard Wright, Edmund Walden, and others, adventurers as asforesayde purposing, and intending to be made free of the corporation, companie, and societie lately made by the sayd Sir Walter Raleigh, in the citie of Raleigh, intended to be erected & builded in Assamacomock, alias Wingandacoia, alias Virginia asforesayd, as by his said indenture made to the said John White, Roger Bayly, & the rest moze at large it doeth appeare, do vpon þ sealing, effecting, & confirmation of these patents aduenture diuers & sundry sums of money, marchandises, shipping, munition, victual, and other commodities, into the said forraigne and remote countrey

of

of Assamaco aduenture, a Sir Walter
graunted, co
and euerp of William S
Walter Pa
Fleetewood
Wade, Rich
with the sayd son, Thoma
and euerp of their, and eue
by the space
all times for whatsoeuer, dacoia, alias asforesayde, v
son of person shall of map Walter Rak
any interest,
made, of here Sir Walter
ligion, in, an preference of
for the incour
William S
Gabriel Har Packlyn, Ric
den, John W adventurers
pose, and giu sayde, the sum
red and dispo mentioned, &
summe of 10
and increase and to the vs
them, withou ter Raleigh, for himselte
to, and with mage, Edm
with the say Sampson, T Dymmock,
charge, faue
of them, the wants of the serue them o coles, taxes,
red of dema
ding, of tran
mock, alias sayde, where of shall haue rie, of other of Assamacomock alias Wingandacoia, alias Virginia aforesaid: in consideration atwel of wherby adventure, as also for divers, and sundry other good causes, and considerations bin the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh thereunto especially moving, The sayd Sir Walter Raleigh hath given, graunted, covenanted, and promised, and by these presents to himselfe, his heires, and assignes and euery of them, doth give, graunt, covenant, and promise, to & with the said Thomas Smith, William Sander son, Walter Bayly, William Samage, Edmund Neull, Thomas Harding, Walter Parler, Thomas Martin, Gabriel Harris, William George, William Stone, Henry Fleete wood, John Gerrard, Robert Packlyn, Richard Hakluyt, Thomas Hoode, Thomas Wade, Richard Wright, Edmund Walden, and others adventurers aforesayde, and vnto, and with the sayd John White, Roger Baylye, Ananias Daye, Christopher Cooper, John Samson, Thomas Steeuens, Roger Pyat, Dionise Haruie, John Nichols, Humfrey Dymmocke, and euery of them, their heires, and assignes, and the heires, and assignes of euery of them, and theirs, and euery of their Deputies, Factors, or Apprentises, who shall serue them, or any of them by the space of seuen yeeres, that they, and euery, or any of them, shall from time to time and at all times for euer haue free trade, and traffike for all manner of Merchandise, or commodities whatsoever, vnto, in, and from all that part of America, called Assamacomock, alias Wingan-dacoia, alias Virginia aforesayde, or vnto, or from any other part, or countrie, of, or in America aforesayde, where hee the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh his heires or Assignes, or any other person or persons clayning or pretending any manner of right, title, or interest, or which hereafter shall or may claime, or pretend any right, title, or interest, by, from, or vnder him the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh, hath chalenged, claymeth, or may or shall hereafter, haue, chaleng, or clayme any interest, iurisdiction, title, rule, or priuiledge, by any conuocance, or discouerie heretofore made, or hereafter to be made, or by any other way or meanes whatsoever. And further the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh, as well for, and in speciall regard, and zeale of planting the christian religion, in, and amongst the sayde barbarous and heathen countries, and for the advancement and preferment of the same, and the common welthe and profite of the inhabitants therein, as also for the incouragement of the sayde Thomas Smith, William Sander son, Walter Baylye, William Samage, Edmund Neull, Thomas Harding, Walter Parler, Thomas Martin, Gabriel Harris, William George, William Stone, Henry Fleete wood, John Gerrard, Robert Packlyn, Richard Hakluyt, Thomas Hoode, Thomas Wade, Richard Wright, Edmund Walden, John White, John Nichols, and the other Assaikes now lying in Virginia, and others adventurers aforesayde, their heirs, and assignes, doth by these presents, freely, and liberally dispose, and give vnto them, the sayd Thomas Smith, William Sander son, and the rest aforesayde, the summe of one hundred pounds of lawfull money of England, to bee by them aduentured and disposed, in, and amongst other their adventures vnto the places, and countries before mentioned, To haue, holde, occupie, vse, employ, possesse, enioy, and dispose, as well the sayde summe of 100. pound, given as aforesayd, as also all such gayne, profite, commoditie, aduantage and increase, as they by Gods assistance, shall thereof make to their onely vses and behoofes, and to the vses and behoofes of the seuerall heires, executoys, and Assignes of them and euery of them, without rendering any account for the same, or any part thereof, to the sayde Sir Water Raleigh, his heires, executoys or assignes, or any of them. And the said Sir Walter Raleigh, for himselfe his heires, and assignes, and euery of them, doeth further covenant, and graunt, to, and with the sayde Thomas Smith, William Sander son, Walter Bayly, William Samage, Edmund Neull, Thomas Harding, Walter Parler, and the rest aforesayde, and to, and with the sayde John White, Roger Baylye, Ananias Daye, Christopher Cooper, John Samson, Thomas Steeuens, Roger Pyat, Dionise Haruie, John Nichols, and Humfreie Dymmock, and the heires, and assignes of them, and euery of them by these presents, to discharge, saue and keepe harmelesse, from time to time, and at all times for euer, them, and euery of them, their seuerall heires, and assignes, and euery of them, and the deputies, factors and ser-uants of them, and euery of them, and apprentices of them, and euery of any of them, who shall serue them or any of them the space of seuen yeeres, of, and from all rents, subsidies, customs, toles, taxes, tallages, and all other charges, seruices, duties, and demaunds, whatsoever required or demanded, or to be required or demanded, at any time or times hereafter, or for the trading, or transporting any commoditie or profite, into or from the sayde countrie of Assamacomock, alias Wingandacoia, alias Virginia aforesayde, or any other countrey in America aforesayde, whereunto, or wherem, the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh, his heires, or assignes, hath or may or shall haue any interest, right or title, by vertue of the sayde letters patents, or by any discou-rie, or other meanes whatsoever, or for any other matter, cause, or thing whatsoever: the first part

 of

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

23 WEST MAIN STREET
WEBSTER, N. Y. 14580
(716) 872-4503

16 18 20 22 25 28 32 36 40

10 11 12 15 18 20

of all the oare of golde, and siluer that from time to time, and at all times after such discouerie, subuoying and possessing as aforesaide, shalbe there gotten, and obtained (alwaies referred to the vse of the said Sir Walter Raleigh his heyres, and assignes) onely excepted, and forpysse, And the sayd Sir Walter Raleigh doeth further covenant, and graunt by these presents for him, his heyres, and assignes, to and with the sayd Thomas Smith, William Sanderson, and the rest aforesayd their heyres & assignes, that he the said Sir Walter Raleigh, his heyres, or assignes, vpon sufficient & reasonable request made to him by the persons aforesayd, or any of them, their heyres, or assignes, shal and wil at any time, or times hereafter, raise, affirme, and approue by his deede, or deedes, or by any other conuenance, or conuencances in lawe, the copoyation heretofore made by him the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh, consisting of one Governour, and twelue assistants, as by his sayd Indenture made to John White and others, moze plainely doth appeare, for the moze perfect, and better assurance, and sure making of the saide copoyation, if any imperfection, and want in law thereof bee. And further, that he the sayde Sir Walter Raleigh, his heyres, and assignes, shall, and will, as much as in him or them lieth, procure, and endeavour to obtaine, the Queenes maiesties letters patents, for ratification, approbation, and moze sure confirmation, of the sayde copoyation, and Societe with al prerogatiues, commodities, iurisdictiones, royalties, priuiledges, and preheminences, whatsoeuer graunted, and cōueied by her Maiestie, to the saide Sir Walter Raleigh, his heyres or assignes, or by him the sayd Sir Walter Raleigh, or the said John White, and others, as by his said indenture of graunt made to the sayde John White, and others moze plainely appeareth. In witnesse whereof, the parties to these presents, haue hereunto interchangeably put their hands, and seales, the day and yeere first aboue witten.

A brieue remembrance, for want of further aduertisements as yet, of a voyage made this present yeere, 1589. by William Michelson Captaine, and William Mace of Ratcliffe, Master of a shippe called the Dogge, to the bay of Mexico in the West India.

The aforesaide shippe called the Dogge, of the burden of threescore and ten tunnes was furnished, and armed forth with the number of 40. men: it departed from the coast of England in the moneth of May, directly for the west India: It fell with the Bay of Mexico, and there met with diuers Spanish ships at sundry times, whereof thre fell into her lappes, and were forced to pcede to the mercy of the English: the last that they met with in the Bay, was a Spanish man of warre, whome the English chased, and after thre seuerall fightes, vpon thre diuers dayes, pressed him so farre, that he intreated a parle, by putting out a flagge of truce: the parle was graunted, and certaine of the Spaniards came aboide the English. Where after conference about those matters that had passed in fight betwixt them, they receiued reasonable intertainment and a quiet farewel. The Spanish, as if they had ment to requite the English curtesie, invited our men to their ship, who perswading themselves of good meaning in the Spanish, went aboard: but honest and friendly dealing was not their purpose, suddenly they assaulted our men, and one with a dagger stabbe the English pilot to the hart and kewe him, and others were serued with the like sauce, only William Mace the Master, and two others, notwithstanding all the prepared trappes of the enemy, lept ouer boorde into the sea, and so came safe to their owne shippe: and directing his course for England, arrived at Plum-mouth the 10. day of September last, laden with wines, yron, Roams which is a kinde of linnen cloth, and other rich commodities, looking for the arriual of the rest of his consoyts, whereof one, and the principall, hath not long since obtayned his port. Thus much in generall termes onely, I haue as yet learned, and receiued touching this voyage, extracted out of letters sent from the aforesayd William Mace, to Master Edward Wilkinson of Courc Hill in London. The principall intention by this example, is to admonish our nation of circumspection in dealing with that subtil enemy, and neuer to trust the Spanish further, then that their owne strength shalbe able to master them: for otherwise whoesoever shall through simplicitie trust their curtesie, shall by triall taste of their assured crueltie.

The

The voya
Bird Mar

with a B

lowing we ar
uer the barre.
we had put the
arriued the 20.
ee, to goe for riual, and of th
man in their co
etes: hereupon
cwentich day and cwentich d solemne feast
or chiefe man, our crading, in Elephants teet

The first of
and were for ou spected vs one plucked from
be done: and the
it so vnppeare pepper. The n at which time our being at B all of vs into t
which we alre
the men of our
and goods do my coming
I put the goo boord, many o
more, and m
nin. Whereu were aboute to the Captaine
also dyed with such pepper a son will app stay any long common sick
mayne were ked all for th Uery hardy
God hauing g

The voyage set forth by Master Iohn Newton, and Master Iohn Bird Marchants of London to the kingdome and Citie of Benin in Affrica, with a ship called the Richard of Arundell, and a pinnesse in the yeere, 1588.

briefely set downe in this letter following, written by the chiefe

Factor in the voyage to the foresaid Marchants at the time of the ships first arrival at Plymmouth.

Vosthipfull Sirs, the discourse of our whole proceeding in this voyage, will take more time and a person in better health then I am at this present, so that I trust you will pardon me all my comming by to you: in the meane time let this suffice. Whereas we departed in the month of December from the coast of England with your good ship the Richard of Arundell and the pinnelle, we held our direct course towards our appointed port, and the 14. day of February following we arrived in the haven of Benin, where we found not water ynough to carrie the ship over the barre, so that we left her without in the road, and with the pinnelle, and ship boate two which we had put the chiefest of our marchandise, we went by the river to a place called Goto, where we arrived the 20. of February, the foresaid Goto being y nearest place that we could come to by water, so goe for Benin. From thence we presently sent Negroes to the king, to certifie him of our arrivall, and of the cause of our comming thither: who returned to vs againe the 22. day with a noble man in their company to bring vs by to the Citie, and with 200. Negroes to carrie our commodities: hereupon the 23. day we delivered our Marchandise to the Kinges Factor, and the five and twentieth day we came to the great Citie of Benin, where we were well intertaind: The sixe and twentieth day wee went to the Court to haue spoken with the King, which (by reason of a solemne feast then kept amongst them) we could not doe: but yet wee spake with his Viadore, or chiefe man, that hath the dealing with the Christians: and we conferred with him concerning our trading, who answered vs, that we shoulde haue all chinges to our desire, both in pepper and Elephants teeth,

The first of March, we were admitted to the kings presence, and he made vs the like curious and were for our traffique: the next day we went againe to the Court, where the foresaid Viadore shewed vs one basket of Greene pepper, and another of bye in the Galkes: we desired to haue it plucked from the stalkes, and made cleane, who answered, that it would take time, but yet it should be done: and that against another yeere it should be in better readines, and the reason why we found it so vnprepared was, because in this kings time no Christians had euer resorted thither, to take pepper. The next day there were sent vs 12. baskets, and so a little every day until the 9. of March, at which time we had made vpon 94. serons of pepper, and 28. Elephants teeth. In this time of our being at Benin, our natures at this first time not so well acquainted with that climate, we fell all of vs into the disease of the feuer, whereupon the Captaine sent me downe with those goods which we already had recieued, to the rest of our men at Goto, where being arrived, I found all the men of our pinnelle sicke also, and by reason of their weakenes not able to carry the pinnelle and goods downe to the place where our ship roade: but by good happe within two houres after my comming to Goto, the boate came by from the ship, to see how all things stood with vs, so that I put the goods into the boate, and went downe towards the ship: but by that time I was come aboard, many of our men dyed: namely, Master Benson, the Cowper, the Carpenter, and 3. or 4. more, and my selfe was also in such a weak state that I was not able to returne againe to Benin. Whereupon I sent by Samuel Dunne, and the Chirurgical with him to our men that were aboue to let them blood, if it were thought needefull: who at their comming to Benin found the Captaine and your sonne William Bird dead, and Thomas Hempsteede very weak, who also dyed within two dayes after their comming thither. This sorrowfull accident caused them with such pepper and teeth, as they could then finde, speedely to returne to the shippe, as by the Cargason will appeare: at their comming away the Viadore told them, that if they could or would stay any longer time, he would use all possible expedition to bring in more commodities: but the common sickness so increased, and continued amongst vs all, that by the time our men which remained were come aboard, wee had so many sicke, and dead of our company, that we looked all for the same happe, and so thought to loose both our Shippe, life, Countrie and all. Very hardly and with much awoe could we get by our anchors, but yet at the last by the mercie of God hauing gotten them by, but leaving our pinnace behind vs, we got to sea, and set saile, which was upon the 13. of April. After which by litle and litle our men began to gather by their cruises and to recover some better strength: and so sailing betwixt the Islands of Cape Verde, and the mayne, we came to the Islands of the Açores upon the 25. of July, where our men began a fresh to growe ill, and diuers dyed, among whom Samuell Dunne was one, and as many as remained lying, were in a hard case: but in the midst of our distresse, it fell so well out, by Gods good providence, that we met with your shippe the Barke burte, on this side the North cape, which did not onely keepe vs good company, but also sent vs 6. fresh men aboard, without whose helpe, we should surely haue casted of many inconueniences. But by this good meanes, we are now at the last arrived in Plymouth, this 9. day of September: and for want of better health at this time, I referre the further knowledge of more particularities, till my coming to London,

C e e e.

was

Yours to command
Anthonie Ingram.

Or Theodore.

The most solemne, and magnificent coronation of Ph Theodore Iuanowiche, Emperor of Russia &c. the 10. of June, in the yeere 1584. seene and obserued by Master Ierom Horsey gentleman, and seruant to her Maiestie, a man of great trauell, and long experience in those partes: where with is also ioynded the course of his journey ouer land from Mosco to Emden, the right place of which discourse, is immediately after the Embassage of Sir Ierom Bowes, in the second part of this historie: which being fully printed, before this matter came to my hands, I am forced here to annex it, least for rare a thing should be suppressed, and the diligent seruice of the foresaid gentleman not knowne as well as others of the same nature.

When the old Emperor Iuan Vasilewiche dyed, (being about the 18. of April, 1584. after our computation) in the Citie of Musco, hauing reigned 54. yeeres, there was some tumult, and vproze among some of the nobilitie, and gnominate, which notwithstanding was quickly pacified. Immediately the same night, the Prince Boris Fedorowich Godonoua, Knzz Iuan Fedorowich, Melchis Slafsky, Knzz Iuan Petrowiche Susky, Mekita Romanowich, and Bodan Iacoulewiche Belskoy, being all noble men, and chiefest in the Emperors Will, especially the Lord Boris, whom he adopted as his third sonne, and was brother to the Emperors wife, who was a man very well liked of all estates, as no lesse worthy for his valoure and wisdom, all these were appointed to dispose, and settle his sonne, Feodore Iuanowich, hauing one Iuoyne another, and all the nobilitie, and officers whosoeuer. In the morning the dead Emperor was layd into the Church of Michael the Archangell, into a betwen sepulchre, very richly decked with beures fit for such a purpose, and present proclamation was made, (Emperor Feodore Iuanowich of all Russia &c.) Throughout all the Citie of Mosco, was great watch and ward, with souldyers, and gunners, good orders established, and officers placed to subdue the tumulters, and mainteine quietnes: to see what speeche and pollicie was in this case vsed was a thing worth the beholding. This being done in Mosco, great men of birth and accompt, were also presently sent to the bordering Townes, as Smolensko Vobsko, Kalan, Nouogorode &c. with fresh garrison, and the old sent vp. As upon the 4. of May a parliament was held, wherein were assembled, the Metropolitan, Archbishops, Bishops, Priors, and chiefe clergie men, and all the nobilitie whosoeuer: where many matters were determined not pertinent to my purpose, yet all tended to a new reformation in the gouernement: but especially the terme, and time was agreed upon for the solemnizing of the new Emperors coronation. In the meane time the Emperors wife, to the old Emperor, was with her child the Emperors sonne, Charewiche Demetrie Iuanowich, of one yeeres age or there abouts, sent with her father Feodor Feodorowich Nagay, and that Prince her sonne, with all the landes belonging to it in the shire, with officers of all fortres appointed, hauing allowance of apparell, iewels, vnderhoise &c. in ample manner belonging to the estate of a prince. The time of mourning after their vble being expired, called Sorachyn, of fortie orderlie daies, the day of the solemnizing of this coronation, with great preparations, was come, being upon the 10. day of June, 1584. and that day then Sunday, he being of the age of 25. yeeres: at which time, Master Ierom Horsey was orderly sent for, and placed in a fit roome to see all the solemnities. The Emperor comming out of his Pallace, there went before him, the Metropolitan, tan, Archbishops, Bishops, gnominate, banners, censures, with his nobilitie, and seruice were Church, called from thence to thereof was a crimes: his robe ing placed in the imperiall Crowne, his two kingdoms were the Metropolitan, minister true given him, and

Through the whom he glorifier of all the king, he both his only child quickning suffer vs to raie together with the layd his crosse an hyper robe waies augmented by 6. Dukes, right hand of a Patriarch of This Iewel before him by tried before him noua, the Emperors Vasilwiche the great Chur Russia, His bo- rious stones,

There was and two favon from the prest with the thron cloth of gold, from one chur starle was a seruit for a in great quantities decked were apparell bilitie, wheree in register fou ing in her pa- rious, & rich was placed people. God ment house- crotines we garde with can, Archbishops, Bishops, and cheefest Honkes, and Clergie men, with very rich Copes, and Prieests garmentes vpon them, carrying pictures of our Ladie &c. with the Emperors Angell, banners, censures, and many other such ceremonious things, singing all the way. The Emperoz with his nobilitie in order entered the Church named Blaueshina, or Blessednes, where prayers, and seruice were vsed, according to the manner of their Church: that done, they went thence to the Church, called Michaell the Archangell, and there also vsed the like prayers, and seruice: and from thence to our Ladie Church, Prechista, being their Cathedrall Church. In the midst thereof was a chappe of maustie placed, wherein his Ancestors vsed to sit at such extraordinary times: his robes were then changed, and most riche and vnaualuable garmentes put on him: being placed in this Princely seate, his nobilitie standing round about him in their degrees, his imperiall Crowne was set vpon his head by the Metropolitane, his Scepter globe in his right hand, his sword of Justice in his left of great riches: his 6. Crownes also, by which he holdeth his kingdomes were set before him, & the Lord Boris Pheodorowich was placed at his right hand: then the Metropolitane read openly a booke of a small volume, with exhortations to the Emperoz to minister true Justice, to sit vpon with tranquillitie the Crowne of his ancestors, which God had giuen him, and vsed these words following.

Through the will of the almightie & without begining God which was before this world, whom we glorifie in the Trinitie, one onely God, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, maker of all things, worker of all in all euery where, fulfiller of all things, by which wil, & working, he both liueth, & giueth life to man: that our onely God which enspireth euery one of vs his onely children with his word to discerne God through our Lord Iesus Christ, and the holy quickning spirit of life, now in these perilous times establish vs to keepe the right Scepter, and suffer vs to raigne of our selues to the good profit of the land, to the subduing of the people, together with the enemies, and the maintenance of vertues: and so the Metropolitane blessed and layd his crosse vpon him. After this, he was taken out of his chaire of Maistie, hauing vpon him an upper robe adorned with precious stones of all sortes, orient pearles of great quantitie, but alwaies augmented in riches: it was in waight 200. pounds, the traine, and parts thereof borne by 6. Dukes, his chiefe imperiall Crowne vpon his head very precious: his staffe imperiall in his right hand of an vnicorne horn of 3. foot and a halfe in length beset with rich stones, bought of Merchants of Ausburge by the old Emperoz in An. 1581. and cost him 7000. Markes sterling. This Jewell of Hoyses kept sometimes, before the Emperoz had it. His Scepter globe was carried before him by 8. princes Boris Pheodorowich, his rich cap beset with rich stones & pearles was carried before him by a Duke: his 6. Crownes also were carried by Demetrius Iuanowich Godonoua, the Emperors uncle, Mekita Romanowich the Emperors vnckle, Steuan Vasiluwich, Gregory Vasiluwich, Iuan Vasiluwich brothers, of the blood royal. Thus at last the Emperoz came to the great Church tooz, & the people cried, God saue our Emperoz Pheodore Iuanowich of all Russia. His horse was there readie most richly adorned, with a couering of imbrodered pearle & precious stones, saddle, & all furniture agreeable to it, reported to be worth 300000. markes sterling.

There was a bridge made of 150. fadome in length, 3. manner of wales, 3. foote about ground and two fadome broad, for him to goe from one Church to the other with his Princes and nobles from the people, which were in number infinite, and some at that time pressed to death with the throng. As the Emperoz returned out of the Churches they were spred vnder foote with cloth of gold, the porches of the Churches with red veluet, the bridges with scarlet, & sammet cloth from one church to another: and as soone as the Emperoz was passed by, the cloth of gold, veluet & scarlet was cut, and taken of those that could come by it, euery man desirous to haue a piece, to seruice for a monument: silver, and gold copie, then mynted of purpose was cast among the people in great quantitie. The Lord Boris Pheodorowich was sumptuously, & richly attired, with his garments decked with great orient pearle, beset with all sortes of precious stones. In like rich manner were apparelled all the family of the Godonouaes in their degrees, with the rest of the princes, & nobilitie, wherof one named Knez Iuan Michalowich Glynskie, whose robe, horse, & furniture, was in register found worth 100000. markes sterling, being of great antiquitie. The Emperesse being in her palace, was placed in her chaire of Maistie also before a great open window: most precious, & rich were her robes, and shining to behold, with rich stones, & orient pearle beset her crowne was placed vpon her head, accompanied with her Princesses, & Ladies of estate: they in their order the people. God preferre our noble Emperesse Irenia. After all this the Emperoz came into the Parliament house which was richly decked: here he was placed in his royal seate adorned as before his 6. crownes were set before him vpon a table: the basin, and ewer royal of gold held by his knight of garde with his men standing eue on each side in white apparel of cloth of siluer, called Kinky, with scepters, and battle axes of gold in their hands: the Princes, and nobilitie were all placed according to their degrees all in their riche coats.

The Emperoz after a short oration, permitted every man in order to kille his hande: which being done, he removed to a princely seate prepared for him at the cable: where he was serued by his nobles in very princely order. The three out roomes being very great, and large were beset with plate of golde, and silver round, from the ground by to the vaults one upon the other: among which plate were many barrels of silver and golde: this solemnitie, and triumph lasted a whole weeke, wherein many royall pastimes were shewed and vsed: after which the chiefest men of the nobilitie were elected to their places of office, and dignitie, as the Prince Boris Fedorowich, was made chiefe Countayloz to the Emperoz, Master of the horse, had the charge of his person, Lieutenant of the Empire, and Artlike engines, Gouvernour of the Lieutenant of the Empire of Cazan, and Astracan and others: to this dignitie were by Parliament, and gift of the Emperoz given him many reuenuces, and rich landes, as there was given him, and his for ever to inherite a prouince called Vaga, of 300. English myles in length, and 250 in bredth, with many towms and great billage's populous and welchp, his percelly reuenuce out of that prouince, is 35. thousand markes sterling, being not the 5. part of his percelly reuenuce. Further, he and his house be of such auctoritie, and power, that in 40. dayes wanting they are able to bring into the field 100. thousand Souldiers well furnished.

The conclusion of the Emperoz's Coronation was a peale of ordinance, called a peale royall two myles without the Citie, being 170. great pieces of brasse of all forces, as faire as any can be made, these pieces were all discharged with shot against bulwarkes made of purpose: 20. thousand iargubulwers standing in 8. rankes two myles in length, appered all in velvet, coloured like and Hammels, discharged their shot also twice ouer in good order: and so the Emperoz accompanied with all his princes and nobles, at the least 50. thousand horse departed through the Citie to his palace. This royall coronation would aske much time, and many leaues of paper to bee described particulierly as it was performed: it shall suffice, to vnderstand that the like magnificence was neuer seene in Russia.

The coronation, and other triumphes ended, all the nobilitie, officers, and marchants according to an accustomed order euery one in his place, and degree brought rich presences vnto the Emperoz, wishing him long life, and ioy in his kingdomie.

The same time also Master Ierom Horsey aforesaid, remaining as seruant in Russia for the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, was called for to the Emperoz, as he sat in his imperiall seate, and then also a famous Merchant of Netherland being newly come to Mosco, (who gaue him selfe out to bee the king of Spaines subiect) called Iohn de Wale, was in like sort called for. Some of the nobilitie would haue preferred this subiect of the Spaniard before Master Horsey seruant to the Queene of England, whereunto Master Horsey would in no case agree, saying, he would haue his legges cut off by the knees, before he would yeeld to such an indignitie offered to his Soueraigne the Queenes Maiestie of England, to bring the Emperoz a present, in course after the King of Spaines subiect, or any other whatsoeuer. The Emperoz, and the Prince Boris Fedorowiche perceiuing the controuersie, sent the Lord Treasorer Peter Iuanowiche Galawyn, and Vasilie Shalcan, both of the Counsell, to them, who deliuered the Emperoz backe, Master Horseys speech: whereupon he was first in order (as good reason) admitted and presented the Emperoz in the behalfe of the English Merchants trading thither, a present wishing him ioy, and long to raigne in tranquillitie, and so killed the Emperours hand, he accepting the present with good liking, and auouching, that for his sisters sake Queene Elizabeth of England, he would be a gracious Lord to her Merchants, in as ample manner as euery his father had ben: and being dismissed, he had the same day sent him 70. dishes of sundry kinds of meates with 3. carts laden with all sorts of drinke very bountifullly. After him, was the foresaid subiect of the Spaniard king admitted with his present, whom the Emperoz willed to be no lesse faythfull and seruiceable vnto him, then the Queene of Englands subiects were and had ben, and then the king of Spaines subiects should receive fauor accordingly.

All these things thus in order performed praies were sung in all the churches, The Emperoz, & Empresse very devoutly reposed one foote, to many principall Churches in the Citie, and vpon Trinitie Sunday betooke them selues to a progresse, in order of procession, to a famous monastrie called Sergius, and the Trinitie, 60. myles distant from the Citie of Mosco, accompanied with a huge armie of noble men, gentlemen and others, mounted vpon goodly horse, with furniture accordingly.

The Emperesse of deuotion tooke this iourney on foote all the way, accompanied with her Prin-

Princes, and chefe Counte called Demetri

All this was the Emperoz Siberia, where and a halfe, prouce of the
which were itie in very bo
were vpon
whole kingdo
commanding
had been in the
and to the em ty: the great
perours time,
used, without Dukes and th
the old Emper berrie, and be followe, and to the Subier
pished by the These thing
vpon Russia, called the Cri
owne country
holed, althoug
and baltian: c nourable, the perour, interta

Not long a offering their les, and peopl erated Emper Ambassadors
the Turke, fro prince: Ther
the Dane, &c.

It fell out lent Queene possing that o
summe of wh
amitie and th
her subiects,
hauing recei
departed from uogorode, to he was deler ende.) From Prussia, to M to Breame, s ning bellier
with againe
rou, and th
the fatout ar
was he earn

Whatevils, and lappes, no final number: her garde, and gunners were in number 20000, her chiefe Counsellor of attorney was a noble man of the blood Royal her uncle of great authority, called Demetrie Ivanowich Godonow.

All this year ended, both the Emperour, and Empresse returned to Mosco (both of the Emperour by the direction of the prince Boris Fedorowich, sent a poster into the lande of Siberia, where all the rich Siberie, and Farvets, are govern, this poster conquered in one yere and a halfe, 1700. myles. In the pretour maine of this winter, there was taken prisoner the Emperour of the countie called Chare Siberiskie, and with him many other Dukes, and noble men, which were brought to Mosco, with a garde of footsouldiers, and gunners, who were received into the cite in very honourable manner, and do there remaine to this day.

Chare Siberie the prince of Siberia taken prisoner and brought to Mosco.

Here upon the Countour officers, Judges, Adverses, Capitaines, and Lieutenants through the whole kingdom were remooved, and more than 10000 men transported to their places, which effected continuall discipline, under severall punishments to satisfie their old badging, and execution which they had used in the two Emperours time, and now to execute true Justice without respect of persons, and to the end that this might be the better done, their lands, and veyell measures were augmented: the great taxes, customs, and duties, which were before layd upon the people in the two Emperours time, were now abated, and some wholly remitted, and no punishments committed to be used, without sufficient and due proofe, although the crime were capital, deserving death: many Dukes and noble men of great houses, that were under displeasure, and imprisonment 200. yeres by the two Emperours, were now set at libertie and restored to their lands: all prisoners were set at libertie, and their trespasses forgiven. In summe, a great alteration & alteration in the government followed, and yett all was done quietly, civillly, yearcably, without trouble to the Prince, or offence to the Subjects: and this byed great assurance, and honour to the kingdom: and all was accomplished by the wisdom especially of Irenia the Emperesse.

These things being reported & carryed to the eares of the kings, & princes that were borderers upon Russia, they grew so fearefull and terrible to them, that the Monarch of all the Scythians called the Crimme Tartar, or great Chan himselfe, named Sopher Ker'Ali, came out of his owne country to the Emperour of Russia, accompanied with a great number of his nobilitie well horsed, although to them that were Christians they seemed rude, yett they were perswivable men, and baltian: their coming was gracefull to the Emperour, and their intreatment was honourable, the Tartar prince having brought with him his wives also, received of the Russ Emperour, intertainment, and princely welcome according to their estates.

Sopher Ker'Ali King of the Crimmes, arrived at Mosco.

Not long after, 1200. Spanish gentlemen, valiant Souldiers, and proper men came to Mosco offering their service to the Emperour, who were all intetayned: and in like sort many Chirkasles, and people of other nations came and offered service. And, althoone as the reputation of this new created Emperour was spread over other Kingdomes of Europe, there were sent to him sundry Ambassadors to wish him joy, and prosperitie in his kingdom: thither came Ambassadors from the Turke, from the Persian, the Bogharian, the Crimme, the Georgian, and many other Tartar princes. There came also Ambassadors from the Emperour of Almanie, the Pole, the Swethen, the Dane, &c. And since his coronation no enemy of his hath prevailed in his attempts.

It fell out not long after, that the Emperour was desirous to send a message to the most excellent Queene of England, for which service he thought no person more fit then Sr. Jerom Wolfe, supposing that one of the Queenes owne men and subjects would be the more acceptable to her. The summe of which message was, that the Emperour desired a continuance of that league, friendship, amitie and intercourse of traffique which was betweene his father, and the Queene of England, and her subjects, with other private affaires besides, which are not to be made common. Sr. Wolfe having received the letters, and requests of the Emperour, provided for his journey over land, and departed from Mosco the 5. day of September, thence to Orzer, thence to Torshook, to great No-uogorode, to Vobskye, and thence to Nyhoule in Liouonia, to Wenden, and so to Riga: (where he was beset, & brought forth with before a Cardinal, called Rageuill, but yett suffered to passe in the end) from thence to Mydo, to Golden, and Libou in Curland, to Memel, to Konigsburgh in Prussia, to Meluin, to Dantzike, to Stetin in Pomerland, to Rostok, to Lubek, to Hamborough, to Breame, to Emden, and by sea to London. Being arrived at her Majesties royall court, and having delivered the Emperours letters, with good favour, and gracious acceptance, he was forthwith againe commaunded to repasse into Russia, with other letters from her Majesty to the Emperour, and Prince Boris Fedorowich, allwerting the Emperours letters, and to call requirring the favour and friendship, which his father had yielded to the English Merchants: and hereunto was he earnestly also solicited by the Merchants of London themselves of that company, to dele in their behalfe: being thus dispatched from London by sea, he arrived in Mosco the 20. of April 1586, and was very honorably welcomed. And by the merchants behoofe, obtained all his requests, being therein specially favoured by the noble prince Boris Fedorowich, who always affected M. Voysey with special liking. And having obtained priviledges for the merchants, hee was recommended from the Emperour againe, to the Queene of England by his mistress, by whome the prince Boris, in token of his honorable, and good opinion of the Queenes Partie, sent her bigonette a royall present of Sables, Lynax, cloth of golde, and other rich things. So that the company of English merchants, next to their thankfulness to her Partie, are to account M. Voyseys favour their special benefite, who obtained for them those priviledges, which in twentie yeeres before would not be granted.

The new Emperour Sopher Ker'Ali with his letters and requests to the Queene.

Sr. Wolfe's voyage from Mosco to England overland.

The manner of M. Voyseys last dispatch from the Emperour because it was very honourable, I thought good to record. He was freely allowed post horses for him, and his servants, victuals, and all other necessaries for his long journey: at every towne that he came unto from Mosco to Vologda, which is by lande 500. miles, hee received the like free, and bountifull allowance, at the Emperours charge. Now victuals & provision were given him upon the river Dwina at every towne by the kings officers being 1000. of their mases in length. When he came to the new castle called Archangel he was received of the Duke, Knez Vasil Andrewich Iscogorodski by the Emperours commission into the Castle, gunners being set in ranks, after their due, where he was sumptuously feasted: from thence he was dispatched with bountifull provision, and allowance in the Dukes boate with 100. men to rowe him, 100. gunners in other boats to conduct him, with a gentleman captaine of the Gunners, Comming to the roade, where the English, Dutch, and French shippes ride, the gunners discharged, and the shippes shot in like manner 46. pieces of their ordnance, and so he was brought to his lodging at the English house upon Rose Island.

And that which was the full, and compleat conclusion of the favour of the Emperour and Boris Fedorowich toward M. Voysey, there were the next day sent him for his further provision upon the sea by a Gentleman and a Captaine the things following.

16. line oxen.

70. beepe.

600. hennes.

25. sheeces of Becon.

80. bushels of meale.

600. loaves of bread.

2000. eggs.

1000. geese.

2. cranes.

2. Spannes.

65. gallons of meade.

40. gallons of Aquavita

60. gallons of beere.

3. yong beares.

4. hawks.

Stoep of opytions, and garlike.

10. fresh salmons.

1. wilde boare.

All these things were brought him to home by a gentleman of the Emperours, and another of prince Boris Fedorowich and were received in order by John Feste servaunt to M. Voysey, together with an honorable present, and reward from the Prince Boris, sent him by Francis Chirry an Englishman: which present was a whole very rich peece of cloth of golde, and a fayre payre of Sables. This Gentleman hath observed many other rare things concerning those parts, which hereafter (God willing) at more convenient time, and leisure shall come to light.

Phedor Ivanowich the newve Emperours gracious Letter of priuiledge to the English Marchants word for word: obayned by M. Ierom Horsey. 1586.

Inough the will of the almighty and without beginning God, which was before this world, whome we glorifie in the trinitie, one only God, the father, the sonne, and the holy ghost, maker of all things, worker of all in all every where, fulfiller of all things, by which will and working, he both loveth, and giueth life to man, That our only God, which supplyeth every one of vs his only Children with his word, to discern God through our Lord Iesus Christ, and the holy quickning spirit of life now in these perilous times, Establish vs to keepe the right way, and suffer vs of our selues to raigne to the good profite of the land, and to the subduing of the people, together with the enemies, and to the maintinance of vertue.

We Phedor, the ofspring of Iohn, the great Lord, Emperour, King and great Prince of all Russia, of Volademeria, Moscouia, and Nouogorode, king of Kafan, king of Astracan, Lord of Plesko, & great prince of Smolenskay, of Twer, Youngoria, Perme, Valkay, of Bolghaire and others, Lord and great Prince of the land of the lower Nouogorod, Chernegay, Rezan, Polotskay, Rostow, Ycrosslaue, the white lake, Leifland, Owdor, Condence, and Rulet of all Seberia, and all the North side, and Lord of many other Countreies.

I have gratified the marchants of England, to wit, S. Rowland Hartward, & Richard Partin Aldermen, Aldermen, & with their fell

I have the kind of comm ities of our C

And the ru

the them for

Plesko, and

Therefore we great loss & b chance, & R

all our homin

all kinde of goods, not oth

way for launc

not for their b

knowledg

what name fo

Only they farther any oth

Allo our n or keepe any

Allo the

committes,

their owne co

And when

all our homin

officers shall

for any of the bridges, nor

Allo into or sell, and cher will, tell

duetie of them

And I haue

ons of our kin

out a up duet

And the

our merchand

That is to say that sell and make and be

by weight, no

they that sell

And they sh

chances shall shall they then

owne, and

Vologda, &

ous, our noble

as it is written here carries a

So like

ing any other

them from o

modious for ties, our

not ties also with

Aldermen, George Barres, Thomas Smith Esquire, Icom Hoyle, Richard Walton, with their fellows.

I haue licensed them to saile with their ships into our dominion, the lande of Downa with all kind of commodities to trade freely and vnto our kingdome and the cite of Mosco and to all the cities of our Empire of Moscouia.

Whiche English merchants, Rowland Watward, & his societie desired us, that we would graunte them to trade into our kingdome of Moscouia, & into our heritage of great Nouogorod, and Plesko, and into all parts of our kingdome, to buye, and sell, with their wares, without custome.

Therefore we for our sisters sake Queene Elizabeth, & also because that they aledge, that they had great losse & hinderance by the venture of the sea, & other wise, haue graunted the said English merchants, Rowland Watward & his societie, freely to come into our kingdome of Moscouia, & into all our dominions with all kind of commodities, to trade, trafficke freely, & at their pleasure with all kinde of their commodities: also I haue commaunded not to take any manner of custome for their goods, nor other customs what soeuer, That is to say, neither for passing by any place by water, nor for landing, neither for passing through any place by land, neither for the bestles or boats, nor for their beads, nor for passing ouer bridges, nor for ferrying ouer at any place, neither for acknowledgement in any place where they shall come, nor any manner of custome or duty, by what name soeuer.

Only they shall not bring thither into our dominions, neither recarry out of our dominions, or fetch any other mens goods, but their owne, neither sell them, nor barter them a way for them.

Also our naturall people shall not buy and sell for them, or from them, neither shall they receiue, or keepe any of our naturall subterres goods, or pawns by them to coulour them.

Also they shall not send any of their Russe seruantes about into any cite to ingross, or buy by commodities, but into what cite they themselves shall come, they shall buye and sell, and shall sell their owne commodities and not ours.

And when they shall come into our inheritance of great Nouogorod, and Plesko, and through all our dominions with their commodities, then our noblemen and capitaines, & euery one of our officers shall suffer them to depart according to this our letter, & shall take no custome at all of them, for any of their commodities, neither for passing through or passing by, nor for passage ouer any bridges, nor shall take of them any other dutie what soeuer name they haue.

Also into what places of our dominion, when they shall happen to come, and to proceed to buye or sell, and wheresoeuer they shall passe through with goods not buying of any commodities, neither shall sell their owne, then in those cities and towne they shall take no manner of custome or dutie of them, accordingly as before.

And I haue graunted them and giuen them free leaue to trafficke through out all the dominions of our kingdome, in all cities with their goods to buy and sell at manner of commodities, with out a ny duty or custome, whatsoeuer.

And the English merchants, where they are desirous to buy, or sell, or barter their wares with our merchants, whole wares for wares, they shall sell their commodities whole, and not by retaille, That is to say, neither by small weight, nor by the yard, to sell or barter in their own houses, & they shall sell and barter their wares whole, Cloth by the packe, and by the whole cloth, and Commaunke any velvet by the peece, and not by the yard, and all manner of commodities that are to be sold by weight, not to sell by the small weightes, as by the pound, and ounce, but by whole sale, also they shall sell wines by the pipe, and by the gallon, quart, or scoope they shall not sell.

And they shall buye, sell, and exchange their owne commodities themselves, and the Russe merchants shall not make sales, or exchange for them, or from them any of their commodities, neither shall they themselves convey, or carie through any other mans goods at no place in stead of their owne: and whiche of the English merchants will at any time sell his commodities at Colmogro or Vologda, or Yeroslaue, they may, and of their commodities throughout all our cities and dominions, our noblemen, capitaines, and euery of our officers shall take no manner of custome, according as it is written in this our gracious letter, and throughout all our dominions and cities they shall hire carriers, and bestles with men to labour, at their owne charge, to transport their goods.

So like wise, when soeuer the English merchants, are disposed to depart out of our kingdome into any other countre, or into their owne land, if our pleasure be, they shall take our goods with them from our Treasurie, and shall sell them, and exchange them for such commodities as is commodious for our kingdome, and shall deliuer it into our Treasurie, & with those our commodities, our Noblemen and capitaines, and euery of our officers shall let them passe through all our cities also without custome according to these our letters.

Al

Also when so euer the English merchants that haue sold their own goods, & bought other like commodities, and will depart out of Mosco, then they shall manifest themselves to our chief Secretary, Andrew Shonkalous, in the office where the Ambassadors are alwaies dispatched.

And if the English merchants coming, haue had any merchandise by the sea, in such sort that they be broken, or if that they do come to any part of our countrey then we will cause the goods to be brought in our true Justice, and to be given to the English people, which at that time shall be here present in our countrey, if so be that it so fall out that at that time there be no English men within our realme; then will we cause these goods to be laid by in a place together, and when the people of England shall come in our realme, then we will command all those goods to be delivered to the said English people.

Also we haue granted all the English merchants, with the house of one Vrie, here in the Mosco right ouer against the S. James church behind the market, and they shall dwell in the same house according as before time, and they shall keepe one alwaies in the house to keepe it, either a Russe, or one of their owne people.

Also the English merchants that possess their houses, to wit, at Yerossau, Vollogday, Colmogro, and the house at the haven of the sea; and they shall dwell in those houses, according as our goodly hath bene to them heretofore; and we haue commanded, that there shall not be taken of them no yearly rent, nor no manner of custome, sale, rent, or any other due which should be for those houses; neither shall pay any dutie, or tax with any of the towns men of those places, and in euery one of their houses, to wit, at Yerossau, Vollogday, and Colmogro, they shall haue men to keepe their houses, two or three of their owne countrey people, strangers, or else Russes; men of the meane sort, which shall haue no merchandise, that they may lay their goods in those houses, and they may sell the commodities out of those their houses to whom they please, according to this our goodly letter; and that whoso keepe their houses shall not sell or buye no part of their commodities, except they be there on giue order, whereby they be not deceived by them.

Also we haue granted them with their house at the sea haven, at the mouth of Pavdazenskiy, and we haue commanded, that they shall not carrie their goods from thence to the new called Michael church, but shall arrive, and so as they haue done heretofore with their wares at their house, and shall unlade their commodities out of their ships and shall lade them againe with Russe commodities, euen there, at that their house without interruption; and they shall permit our officers of Colmogro & two or three men to write by those commodities, both the commodities of England, & those of Russeland, what the merchants haue betwixt themselves, and in otherwise, but they shall not ouerlook their commodities, neither shall they unbinde any of their packs.

And when the English merchants are disposed to sende into their owne countrey, to wit, any of their owne people out of lande through any other kingdome whatsoever, they shall not sende their people without our kingly knowledge and commandement, and which of their people so euer they do meane to sende out of our kingdome, into their owne country, then they shall sende those people, without our kingly & our officers knowledge, to wit, those that go by pleasure without carrying any commodities with them, and they shall haue a letter of passe giuen vnto them, out of the office where the Ambassadors haue alwaies their dispatch.

And who so euer hath any thing to doe with them in matters of controuersie, either concerning merchandise or injuries, then they are to be iudged by our treasurers, and Secretary of the Ambassadors office to doe iustice betwixt both parties, and to seeke out the truth of matters in all things, and what forer cannot be founde out by the Lawe, shall be tryed by othe and loe; whose loe so euer is taken forth, him to haue right.

Also in what place of all our kingdome, in what title so euer, they or their people shall be, and that there happen any matter of controuersie, either concerning merchandise, injuries, or otherwise; that they haue occasion to set vpon any man by lawe, or that any speke vpon them, concerning what matter so euer in all our kingdome and cities, then our lieutenants, capitaines, and our officers shall giue them Justice, and shall minister all true iustice betwixt them, seeking out the truth; and what cannot be truly founde by lawe, shall be sought out by othe and loe; whose loe so euer is taken out, him to haue right accordingly as before, and the Judges or Justices shall take of them no kinde of dutie, for matters of lawe no where throughout all our Realme. This letter is giuen in our princely Pallace within the citie of Mosco, in the yeere from the foundation of the towne, threen thousand fourte score and thirtie, in the month of February.

FINIS.

Richard I. the to celebrate Abilida Inaui Achon a citie of Saracens to the
of France. 1. 1. 1.
the king. 1. 1.
Constantinople
Asian Gilbert
present to diuine Aegypt hath taine Acthiops delecte
Actna the burning Alicia delecte Africa, and the largely.
Albuocet, a fish
like.
Alcharon of the Alcharon was Aleppo in Syria.
& merchandises communities. 3.
from Aleppo in dia. 2. 1. the last the communitie Iepso.
Alexandria in Aep 221. the monu
226. the roade
cerning the tra Algier in the Leau 189. the king con, Singhima
trade of Algier.
Amazonia Island
mazonian w
the men. 64.
America from discovered by Andrew Shalau
of Luslia. 495.
Ierom Bowes.
fire is vpon
Andrew Wlitem Ramzey. 5. his Anthony Ienkin Great Turke p fia 81. his luf Great Turke. 8
the fleete for uer the first R tertainment at
fia. 316. the pa Hoghar in Ba an sca. 350. p prince of Mont
with Azim C
pallish in Ca
The diuers ac 353. 252. A fi theoult troop
at Hoghar 355.
of the king of balladours com
into Ruslia. 35
fea. 354. He p to the Empero meth leaue of fia through his
and many leue
committed to Cassian sea the
at the Court of

A Table Alphabetically, containing a compendious extract, of the principall names and matters comprised in the whole precedent worke: the numbers shewing the pages, where each par- ticularitie is to be found.

A Abbe of S. Nicholas in Russia, page 400. the number of 80. monks in the said Abbe. 400. Abbot and friars of England their Chaires to receive King Richard. 1. they obtaine licence of the Pope to celebrate with chalices of tinne and lacton. 11 Abilfida Ismael his Cosmographie. 308 Achon a side of Iury. 11. it is frequented by the Saracens to the two kingd of England, and of France. 11. the spoile it is divided betwixt the kings. 11. the way by land and sea from Constantinople to it. 18 Abjan Gilbert of Sandrige in Devon. 774. his parent to discover the northwell passage. 774 Aegypt hath same very tedious. 33 Aethiopia described. 47 Acton the burning mountaine in Sicilia. 26 Africa described briefly. 84, 85 Africa, and the people thereof described more largely. 94, 95, 96 Allucore, a fish that is enemy to the flying fish. 161 Alcheton of the Turkes. 47. the time when that Alcheton was published. 41 Allepo in Syria. 208. the proper commodities &amp; merchandises of it. 208. the prices of those commodities. 208. the charges of a journey from Allepo in Syria, to Goa in the East India. 211. the description of Allepo. 211, 212. the commodities of the Countrey about Allepo. 212 Alexandria in Aegypt. 213. the description of it. 213. the monuments to be seene there. 213, 216. the route of it described. 213. notes concerning the trade of it. 191 Algier in the Levant, upon the coast of Africa. 189. the kings palmer port given to Th. Shingleton, Englishman. 189. notes concerning the trade of Algier. 191 Amazonia Island. 64. the manner how the Amazonian women got the government from the men. 64. their manners and education. 64 America from Florida northward, full of all discovered by the English. 680 Andrew Shaheen Chancelor to the Emperour of Russia. 495. his abuses offered there to S. Jerom Bowes. 495. the Emperours displeasur is upon him for those abuses. 495. they are the cause that he loseth his office. 497 Andrew Whittemer Abbot of the Abbey of Ramzey. 5. his trauell to Ierusalem. 5 Anthony Jenkinson present at Allepo when the Great Turke passed with his arme into Persia 81. his safe conduct granted him by the Great Turke. 81. he is appointed Captaine of the fleet for Russia. 312. he transporteth once the first Russian Ambassador. 333. his entertainment at the Emperours Court in Persia. 336. he passeth from Mosco in Russia to Iloghar in Bactria. 247. he passeth the Caspian sea. 150, 351. His conference with the prince of Mingolouga. 352. his conference with Asim Cam prince of Sellente. 353. hee passeth in a Caravan towards Boghar. 353. The divers accidents in that journey of his. 353, 354. A fight betwixt his Caravan, and the Turkish troops of Tartary. 354. his arriveth at Iloghar. 354. He is honourably interceded of the king of Boghar. 356. Sixe severall Embassadors committed to his charge to passe into Russia. 357. His dangers in the Caspian sea. 354. He presenteth his 6. Ambassadors to the Emperour of Russia. 358. He obtaineth leave of the Emperour to passe into Persia through his dominions. 366. Great riches, and many Jewels of the English Marchants, committed to his charge. 367. He passeth the Caspian sea the third time. 366. He arriveth at the Court of the Sophie. 369. His coming	to the Sophie presence. 370. The manner of his entertainment. 370. He delivereth to the Sophie the Queenes Maestries letters. 370. His conference &amp; talke with the Sophie. 370, 371. He passeth the Caspian sea the fourth time. 371. His memorie and good name remaineth to this day in Persia. 381. He obtaineth newe priviledges for the English marchants of the Emperour of Russia. 377. His speache and conference with the Emperour. 428. His requests preferred for the English marchants. 470. His requests answered by the Emperour. 433. A briefe recha tall of all his traualles. 416 Antonio Anus Pincedo a Portugall. 81. one of the Captaines of the hull English voyage to Guinea. 81. his troubles in that voyage. 86. his death. 87 Antiochian patriarche. 17. his authority against the antiochie of the Bishop of Rome. 17. the description of the Citie of Antioche. 17 Apalcoyaca, a part of the countrey of Virginia called by the Sautes. 767 Arabian being like vagabonds. 34. Their life and manners. 34 Aradwilla a Citie of Persia. 169. The frequents of the Emperours of Persia are there. 419 Aristotle the Philosopher honored with an yearly of the Thracians. 37 Armenia nation. 46. The description thereof. 63, 64 Arta a citie in Guinea pertaining to the king of Iurnigal. 90 Arrows poisoned vied by the Negroes. 145 Arthur King of Brittain, and his conquests of the North Regions. 143. The kings of Greenland, Orkney, Norway, and Denmark yeelde themselves to his obedience. 143, 144. The right, and appendances of the crown of Brittain in his time. 144, 145. The large extension of his dominions. 144 Arthur Edwards, servant to the companie of Muscovie marchants in London. 316. His severall letters written to the companie out of Russia, and Persia. 376, 377, 380, 384. He obtaineth priviledges of the Shaugh of Persia for the English marchants. 381. A coppie of his obtained priviledges. 384. His conference and speech with the Sophie. 416. He dieth at Afracan. 447 Arthur Peter his commission to discover the Northeast passage. 443. His instructions for that discourse. 446, 448, 449 Azina Reca a river in Lapland where Sir Hugh Willoughby and his companie perished. 325 Alcopo a kinde of tree in Virginia like vito Lawel. 758 Afracan a towne in Russia neere to the Caspian sea. 349. The description of Afracan. 349. The towne standeth in an Island of twelve leagues long. 350. the commodities and merchandizes there to be bought. 350. 70000. Turkes and Tartars besiege it. 419 Athelard a monk of the Abbe of Bath. 5. His traualles into Egypt, and Arabia. 5 Augulla a Citie in Germanie. 179. The description thereof. 179. The commodities and pleasures of Augulla. 179	to buye a strong cattle in Sicilie wome by King Richard the first. 7 Balkynne archbishop of Cantuarbury. 143 his trauell with King Richard the first into Iherusalem. 14. his death and buriall at Tyre. 14 Balme of India. 73. the description and vertues of balme. 73. the counterfeiting of true balme. 73. the manner how to doe true balme from that which is counterfeited. 73 Balka a cite. 111. The description of Balka. 213. the weights, measures, coines and currencies of Balka. 213, 214 Bartholomew Columbus mappe made in London. 508. He is sent by his brother Christopher Columbus to discover the West Indies to the King of England. 508. He presenteth King Henry the sixth with his mappe. 508. His offer for the discovery is accepted of King Henry. 509 Batem a certaine weight so called. 168 Peria 378. The value of that weight. 178 Bayca a towne in Brazil. 798. It is situated by the English. 728. The English purchase of all the force of the cattle and say take foure thousand of the labor. 799 Pebeck a ducky in the language of Java. 813 Benyn a cite upon the coast of Africke. 86. English men arrive at Benyn. 86. The king of Benyn humanity towards the English. 87. The great reverence that the people yeeld to the King of Benyn. 86. The king of Benyn skillful in the Portugall tongue. 87. The kings care and diligence to furnish the English with pepper. 87. The disorder and death of the English at Benyn. 87 Berenpina the king of Nauars daughter espoused King Richard 9. She is driven to Cyprus in a tempest. 9. Her shippe not suffered by the churlish king of Cyprus to enter the port, to King Richard marryeth her in the Island of Cyprus. 10 Berhem the towne of Iury. 35. The monuments of Berhem. 35 Biscayana in Nout Hispania. 319 Blasphemie punished by Gods judgement vpon a Venetian in Tripolis. 106 Boghar a city of Bactria. 315. The description thereof. 315. The government, state, and wealth of the Bogharians. 315. The king of Boghar a tyrant. 316. The commodities and merchandises of Boghar. 316. Boghar besieged by the king of Samarcand. 317. The latitude of the city of Boghar. 319 Bons Spanna the Cape of Africa. 161. Ordinarie signes about that cape. 161. Strange fowles in great number about that cape. 161 The fowles of the cape diversly termed by the Portugalls. 161 Bones deuoured by fishes. 419 Bolstan the name of a Renegado in Persia. 357. The manner how Christians become Bolstanes in Persia, and deny they faith. 418. No law to be had against a Bolstan in Persia. 418 Bracwania an Island. 73. The manners of the inhabitants of that Island. 73 Brazil eastwardly described. 803. A King of Brazil brought to London, and presented to King Henry the eighth. 510 Burdorouza a towne in the West India. 531 B Babylon the name of two diuers citis. 30 Babylon in Aegypt described. 30 Babylon in Caldea. 209. the prices of commodities &amp; merchandizes there. 209. the weights, measures, customes, and coines of that Babylon. 213, 214. The ruines of Old Babylon. 213. The description of New Babylon. 213, 213. The way from Cyprus or Ierusalem to Babylon in Aegypt. 39 Bachow a port of the Caspian sea. 444. The captaine of Bachowes fierlyly intemperance of the English. 444	C Caeco a fruite in Nout Hispania currant in head of coyne. 547 Calippe the name of a prince in the East partes. 30. The signification of the word. 30. Diuers Calippes sometime in the East partes. 30 Cambalu, a cite of China described. 55 Camelions how they live. 73 Camel of great force for trauels and burdens in the East. 33. Camels indure long afflictions from water. 33. The hard fare and yet content	C

THE TABLE.

nual fruce of Camels. 333 Can the great Emperor of the East. 53. The description of his palace. 55. The 4. solems feasts kept in his court every yeere. 57. The number of his horsemen, seruants, Physicians and officers. 57. The great armies attending vpon him in the time of his professe. 59. The originall and reason of the name Grand Can. 60. The file and royall title of the great Can. 61. The solemnities and ceremonies vsed at the buriall of the great Can. 62. The manner of creating a new great Can. 63. The largesse of the great Can. 64 Canibals of West India very cruel people. 329 Canoses of Africa. 326
 Canton a great Citie of China. 814. The province of Canton. 814. The number of great and small Cities, Townes and Castles belonging to it. 814. The number of ships belonging to it. 814 Canby a citie of China. 813. The situation thereof. 813. The number of Cities, Townes and Castles belonging to it. 814. The breadth of it. 814. The tributarie houses and men of warre in it. 814 Cape de Monte in Guinie. 113 Cape Blanke, Mesurako, de las Barbas, de las Palmas, and Trepointes vpon the coast of Africa. 89.90 Captaines of all voyages ought to be of forme. 266. The forme and manner of a Captaines othe. 266 Caravans in the East parts, their orders, manners, and government in trauell. 333 Carbuncle stone. 31. A carbuncle stone of a foote in length. 53 Carthage in Africke, and the ruines thereof. 33 Casbin a Citie of Persia with the description thereof. 423 Caspian sea with the length, breadth, and other circumstances thereof. 318. It is a shallow sea in many places. 327. It is frozen in some parts in the Winter. 438. brackish water fast within the Caspian sea. 443 Castles outlawes of Russia. 421. They assault English merchants in the Caspian sea. 421. 44. of their Gunners slayne by the English. 421. they take great and rich commodities from the English, but are purloined, and diuers of them taken and slayne, and some goods recouer'd. 421 Callian a citie of Persia. 422. The good orders and gouernment in that citie. 420 Cathay with the description thereof. 54. the tribute of the Cathayans. 54. Silke, silke workes and spices, the commodities of Cathay. 54. The twelve provinces of Cathay. 54. The number of cities in Cathay. 61. The apparel of the Cathayans. 61. the manner of their houses. 61. Their discipline in warres. 61. Their little eyes generally. 61. Several ways and passages out of land from Russia to Cathay. 387. 388, 389 Catell fed with fish at Wardhouse in Norway. 334. great abundance of Catell in the Isle of S. Domingo. 533 Cayro a citie in Egypte described. 30. 323. The Pyramids and other monuments to be seene in Cayro. 226 Cazax a citie, whose king is subiect to the Emperour of Russia. 367, 368 Cent, a citie in Barbarie, wonne to the Portugals by the ayde of English merchants. 79. The winning thereof was the occasion of all the Portugall discoveries that followed. 79 Chagel comes a Persian merchants relation of the way from Tawris in Persia to Camper in Cathay. 389 Champs, a citie of China. 825. the latitude of Champs. 115 Champions try and end matters of controuersie in Russia. 390 Charles Lackmans commission to discouer towards the North-east. 455. his instructions for that discouerie. 456, 457 Chesepioke a towne & great bay in Virginia so called by the Saugas. 738. the commodious and good situation thereof. 738 Chichuaid a warlike Saugoe people in America. 567

China province. 814. The length and breadth of it. 814. The tributarie houses and men of warre in it. 814. The ships of China vse but one style. 331 Choanook a towne and province in Virginia. 738 Christians called Georgians. 39 Christians among the Saracens. 39. the difficulties of opinions amongst those Christians. 39 Christopher Burrough seruant to the company of Mofcoult in London. 440 Christopher Carile captaine of the Tyger going for Russia. 485. hee bringeth into England an ambassadour from Russia. 491. his discourse to encourage our nation to plant in America. 718 Christopher Columbus, his offer to king Henry the 7. for the discouerie of the West Indies. 507. His offer accepted of king Henry the 7. 507. The same offer and the acceptation thereof confirmed by Ferdinando Columbus. 509 Church of Greece agreeth not in opinion with the church of Rome. 27. The reason why the churches of Greece refuse obedience to the Bishop of Rome. 27 Circumcision vsed among the Persians. 424 Clement Adams, the writer of Richard Chancellors first voyage to Russia in Latin. 289 Cloth made of the bark of trees. 103 Cochin, a citie in the East India. 217. The waights, measures, and money current in Cochin. 217 Cochin-China. 815. the latitude of the port thereof. 815 Cola a river in Russia. 314. the latitude of it. 314 Cold may better be insured then heat. 97 Colmogro a citie of Russia. 289. The commodities thereof. 289. The description thereof. 290. the inhabitants thereof very seruicable to the English. 400 Colmak, a countrey so called. 251 Comnia a kingdom so called. 63 Constantine the sonne of Constantius king of Britaine. 3. His victories agaynst the French, Atinnes & Spaniards. 3. His continuall good successe in warre. 3. He planted Christian religion in Greece, Egypt, Asia, and the whole Romane Empire. 3. His great affection to learning and fauour to learned men. 3. He died at Constantinople. 3 Constantinople Citie described. 27. The way from England to Constantinople, over land and by Sea. 26. The monuments and spectacles of famous men and women in Constantinople. 27 Confusion houses in all the Negroes towne of Guinie. 537 Come growing and increasing twise a yeere in Noua Hispania. 546 Coralls growing in the Sea at the Cape of Bona Speranza in manner of stalkes. 161 Coudrus a Christian Emperour. 39 Cosmographers of Spayne and Portingall, partiall in their maps. 255 Cotton described, with the manner how it groweth. 73 Cozomomet, a noble man of Persia, a friend to English merchants. 378, 383 Crimes, a people so called, bordering vpon Persia, and enemies to the Russes. 349 Crocodile described. 53. A Crocodile killed by the English in Guinie. 650 Cuius a province of China 814. The number of great and small cities, townes and castles in it. 814. The tributarie houses and men of warre in it. 814 Curasio an Island in the West India. 533. The store of cattell in the same Island. 533 Currans running to the North and North-east at Sierra Leona in Guinie. 210. a current setting to the East at the riuer of Sestos in Guinie. 100. The current in the North-east Sea runneth according to the wind. 470 Cutchew a province of China. 814. The number of great and small cities, townes, and villages in it. 814. The breadth of it. 814. The tributarie houses and men of warre in it. 814 Cyprus Island taken by King Richard the first.

10. The princes of Cyprus acknowledge obedience to the kings of England. 11

D

Damasco city described. 46 Damis a city and port of Aegypt. 29 Darius enemies to the English merchants for they trade in Mofcoue. 485 Danische hulks laden with French goods, taken by the English. 120 Danische fowers and pirats taken by the English. 426. Five of their ships taken. 426. The English fend 83 of them to the Emperour of Russia. 426 David Ingram one of M. John Hawkins company fet on land in the bay of Mexico. 557. His trauell from thence our land towards cape Breton. 557. The whitenesse of his skin wonder'd at by the Saugas. 557. His discourse of the manners of the Saugas, & commodities of the countrey. 557. The means of his coming home into England. 561 Debernt a city of Hyrcania. 267. The description thereof. 267. The English mens good entertainment at Debernt. 446. The city of Debernt built by Alexander the great. 448. The latitude of Debernt. 448 Diego the general name of a capraine among the Negroes. 103 Diamond stones, and their vertues. 47. The places where diamonds grow. 47. The counterfeiting of diamonds. 47. The way for triall of true diamonds. 47 Discontent the ouerthrow of all good and worthy attempts. 259 Doctour Standish doctor of phisicke in fauour with the Emperour of Russia. 319 Doggeys that catch fish. 33 Dolpoine Island in the Northeast sea. 317 Dofniks a kinde of boate vsed in Russia. 335 Drinks vsed in Russia. 347 Dunflans Island. 313
 Dwina a famous riuer in Mofcouie. 335, 339

E

Earle of Camberlands voyage, fet out for the South sea. 793. The discourse and proceedings of the same voyage. 793 Earth swimming above water like wood. 216 Ebaone king of the Negroes in Guinie. 128. His offer made to the English, of land & ground to build a Citie in it. 128. His humilitie and good entertainments vsed to the English. 129. The ceremonies vsed by him, and his people, in drinking. 129 Ebbing and flowing vncertaine in the northeast sea. 319 Except a hill 9 leagues high in the West India. 193 Edgar king of Britaine. 245. His synneme Padochus. 245. His nauie consisting of 4000 ships, the vses and imployments of his nauie. 246. His conquests. 247. his royall file and title. 248 Edmund Hoggan Marchant of London. 156. his ambassage from the Queenes Maiestie to the Emperour of Marocco. 156. his arrival at the port of Afia. 157. his braue manner of landing. 157. his recreauing on land with Captaines and souldiers, for his conduct to the Emperour. 157. The merchants both Spanish and Portugall, commanded to meete him. 157. his honourable receiving him, the Citie of Marocco. 157. hee hath a rich dagger bestowed vpon him by the Emperour. 158. He obtaineth priuiledges for the English merchants. 158. His dispatch and returne from Marocco. 159 Edward the Prince, sonne to king Edward the third. 20. His preparation for the releefe of the holie land. 20. His arrival at Tunes with great ioye to the Christian Princes there assembled. 20. His expostulation with the christian princes about the voyage. 20. he maketh a royall banquet to all the Christian Princes. 20. He referreth to accept any part of the moine releued of the Saracens. 20. His charitable releefe & succour yeelded to 200. Christians forsaaken of the other Princes. 20. his ships ships preferred, and in 220. (ships of 200. He continueth the rest of the Christian home. 21. Acra, and there took the towne & 1000. of the Saipolis frō them, the Noble men of Jerusalem. 21. He rible to the Sarra the arme by a tra the Prince of Loye line to the ground his owne knitt kill tence in suffering 21. He is recouer of 15. daies. 21. 21. and arrieth at R his father, he com crowned king, 3 wards enring into Mandeuill with the then reaignd.

 Edward Barton Gen fluering of English Edward Coston of ship so called, fet for Beaufill. 187. and the Capitaine, the same ships, 21. the merchant for to call away vpon a mea. 188. The com M. of the shippes 188, 189.
 Edward Barton, Ge age for China, 64 place by the Lord receiueh intrudic the said Lords of ul in the Riuer of His fight in the R 667. He fincketh and ekersh fore o Edward Ofborne Knod. 189. His letter 189.
 Edward Wilkinso Royal in the sight Elephants teeth of The description a phant. 93. Debate the Dragon. 93. The two Elephants har lishmen in Guines Elmo the Spanish G English Artificers f English artillerie lo Braile. 62. The ble at Tripoli by men. 93. 19. The 226. the English 231. The English 234. The English English house at A house of S. Nicolas house at Shamakie kith house with lan 40. The English 358. The English Russia. 302. The R Russes on worke in fia. 387. English m the Caspian sea. 45 mit extreme negli English, defeat a gah in it. 800. An on land in 7 bay of assault them. 667. 668. They are capt uenior of the tow and iwerd 65 the Mexico 565 the imprisonment at N on calleth them in judgement of the war. 574. the cru of that judgement.

THE TABLE.

ships preferr'd, & faued in the flome, wher-in 110. Ships of the other Princes perihel.
20. He continueth his voyage, although all the rest of the Christian Princes refuse it, and returne home. 21. He arriueth at the Citie of Acra, and there refresheth himfelfe. 22. He taketh the towne of Nazareth. 23. He flieth 2000. of the Saracens, and taketh rich spoiles of them. 24. He preualleth more with the Noble men of Cyprus, then the king of Ierusalem. 25. The growth fearful and terrible to the Saracens. 26. He is wounded in the arme by a traitorous messenger sent from the Prince of Loppa. 27. He striketh the villaine to the ground with his foote. 28. and with his owne knite killeth him. 29. His great patience in fuftering the dreffing of his wound.
30. He is recouered of his wound in the space of 15. daies. 31. He returneth from Palestine, and arriueth at Rome. 32. vpon the death of his father, he cometh into England, and is crowned king. 33. The time of Prince Edwards entering into Syria, notall by Sir Iohn Mandeuill, with the name of the Soldan that then reigned. 30

Edward Barton Gentleman, employ'd in the de-liuering of English captiues at Tripolis. 97.

Edward Coxton of Southampton. 187. His ship fo called, fet out vpon a voyage intended for Brazil. 187. The counten bewis him and the Captaine, Lieutenants, and others of the same fhippe. 187. His speciall directions to the merchant for that voyage. 188. The ship cast away vpon a sand vpon the coast of Guinea. 188. The confelion of William Bends M. of the fhippe concerning the fhipwrecke.
188. 189.

Edward Fenton, General of the intended voyage for China. 644. He is authoris'd for that place by the Lords of the Council. 644. Hee receiueh instructions for his voyage from the said Lords of the Council. 644. His arriual in the Riuer of S. Vincent in Brasile. 666.
His fight in the Riuer with 3. Spanis fhips.
667. He sinketh the Spanis Vice Admiral, and taketh some of the men. 667

Edward O'Byrne knight, & Alderman of London. 89. His letter written to the king of Alger. 189. 190

Edward Wilkinson Captaine of the Marchant Royal in the fhippe at Pantalaras. 239

Elephants teeth of all quantities in Gu'nea. 92.
The description and properties of the Elephant. 93. Debate betweene the Elephant and the Dragon. 93. Three kinds of Elephants. 93. two Elephants hunted, and assaulted by Englishmen in Gu'nea. 114

Elmo the Spanis faires Saint & Aduocat. 383

English Artificers sent into Moscoue. 329

English artillerie lent to the towne of Santos in Brasile. 622. The English brought into trouble at Tripolis by lewd dealing of Frenchmen. 93. 97. The English Consul at Argier.
236. The English Consul at Tripolis in Syria.
234. The English Consul at Aleppo in Syria.
234. The English house at Zante. 224. The English house at Alexandria. 225. The English house at S. Nicolas in Russia. 400. The English house at Shamakie in Media. 177. The English house with lands at Colmogro in Russia.
400. The English flagge in the Caspian Sea.
358. The English marchants priuiledges in Russia. 303. The English marchants fet 100.
Ruffes on worke in making of cables in Russia. 387. English marchants aduentures vpon the Caspian Sea. 450. 451. English men commit extreme negligence. 527. 528. 517. Fiftie Portingals, defeat a Gallie, with 400. Portingals in it. 800. An hundred Englishmen fet on land in 7 bay of Mexico. 567. The Indians assault them. 567. The Spaniards take them.
568. They are caried to Panuco. 566. the gouerner of the towne taketh all their money and iowels fro them. 569. They are caried to Mexico. 570. their hard intertainment, and imprisonment at Mexico. 571. the Inquisition calleth them in question. 572. the cruel iudgement of the Spanis Inquisition vpon them. 574. the cruell and bloodie execution of that iudgement. 575. One English fhippe discouereth 7. Portingal fhips neere Terceira. 299. English fhips are alwayes the strongest, and Admirals of other nations in Newfound lands. 286. The discoueries and plantings of Englishmen in Virginia. 718

Enferora a sausage in Virginia, a mende to the English. 793

Erafbeck a Soltan of Persia. 413

Euphrates a thalwoe riuer. 231. a iourney of Englishmen downe 7. riuer of euphrates. 232.

F

FAtama a king of Guiny. 654. Presents sent to him by the English. 654. Presents re-ceiued by the English from him. 654

Fight betweene the English and the Portingals vpon the coast of Guiny. 116. Another fight betweene them. 124

Fight betweene the English and the Negroes. 113

Fire forced of two sticks. 553

Fishes that fish, and the description of them. 161

Flemmings malicious and vnbonest dealing inwards the English in Russia. 183

Florida described. 329. The state of the curant at the heipt of Florida. 328. The manner of killing of fire in Florida. 329. Pieces of golde, silver, and vnicornes hornes among the Floridians. 541

Foxes in great numbers & troops in the coun-treys of Shiran. 419. 425

Francis Drake captaine of a fhippe called the Judith. 562. The great firme and feare that was in Meaico vpon his being in the South sea. 576. Men mustered, and fhips fet out to go after him. 576. His arriual at Aquatalco in the South Sea. 389. He entereh vpon the towne of Nombre de Dios in Noua Hispania.
394. He taketh two companies of mules laden with golde and filuer. 595. He burneth the houses of croffes, and much merchandize in it. 595. His arriual at Virginia. 726. His cortie and friend fhippe offered M. Ralph Lane, and the English colonie in Virginia.
716

Freebooters pirates so called in the Easterne sea.
425. Foure of their fhippes taken by the English. 426

French men very proudly scorne the English.
18. The French enuy the English for their valour and good seruice. 18. They offer villa-nous abuses to the English. 18. The French army foolishly and vnshappily diuided, to the aduantage of the Salladine. 29. The French army difcomfited by the Salladine, and almost all of them flaine. 29. A French brauo-do, 123. Another French brauo do and proud bragge. 130. The French admitted by the English into their company, to most vnwail-ly forfake them in the time of danger. 116

The French killed by the English. 118

French goods seized by the English in the narrow feaz. 128. The French mens trade at cape Verde. 121. A French fhippe taken at Guiny by the English. 425. French men ran-som'd by the English. 427. The names of the French taken and ransom'd. 127. Another French fhippe taken by the English. 137

The goods thereof folde by the English at the Groine in Spaine. 137. A French fhippe ftripped by the English in Newfoundland.
318. A French man of warte deceiueh the Spaniards at the Canaries. 181. The French vlture the right of the English in America.
680. The French vnfortunate in their proce-ding in America. 681

Fuero island. 128. A continual burning hill in the Gayd Island. 128. The commodities of the same Island. 128

Furricanes, certaine stormes so called, raying vpon the coast of Florida. 554

G

GAbriel a Ruffe of that name. 315. His courteffe to M. Stephen Burrough in his North-easterne Navigation. 315

Ganges a Riuer of the East. 74

Gambil a kinde of spice in Syria. 44

Garamantes a people of Libya. 39

Geoffrey Duckett an Agent for the company of Moscoue in Persia. 410

George Fenner his voyage to Guinea. 122. His valiant fight with 7. Portingal fhips. 129

George a countrey of Armetia. 64. the description thereof. 64. The altitudes and clarities in some partes thereof. 64. The king thereof.
172.

George Killingworth the first English Agent in Moscoue. 299. His letter written from Russia to the company in London. 299. His beard of a maruelous length. 301

George Tuberville Secretary to M. Randolph Ambassador into Russia. 408. His letters in flete written out of Russia concerning the state of that countrey. 408. 490. 411

Gerardus Mercator aduise for a Northeastline discouerie. 424. His honourable estimation of the English navigation to Moscoue. 303

Giants of mightie stature that are Cambals, or men eaters. 71

Gifts sent to Queene Mary from the Emperour of Russia. 235. The same gifts spoiled by the barbarous Scots. 235

Gifts sent to the Emperour of Russia from Queene Marie. 233

Giles Fletcher doctor of the ciuil law. 503. His Ambasage from her Maiestie into Russia.
503. 507. His hard intertainment at the first.
502. His honourable difmission at the last from the Emperour. 502. His requests on the behalf of the English marchants granted by the Emperour. 503. His booke written by himselfe of the Russe common wealth. 507

Gilan a towne in Persia. 725. The king of Gillan. 375

Ginger with the places where it groweth. 428

Goa a cite in 7. East India. 165. 112. the description of the inhabitants of Goa, their habitie, fruits, and maners. 68. The waights, measures, and money current in Goa. 216

Godfrey de Bullion. 26. His tombe in Ieru-salem. 36

Gold sold by the Negroes of Guineas to English marchants by ounces, and pounds. 109. 110.

Gold, grainer, and Elephants teeth the commodities of Guineas. 92

Gold enoyes not vied in Russia. 259

Gorod in the Russe tongue, signifeth a cattie, 348

Grozine a Countrey and towne in Armenia.
414. 422. The inhabitants thereof are Christians. 422

Galileimus Neobrigensis an Englishman, wrote in latine the voyage of king Richard to Ieru-salem. 13

Guillielmus Peregrinus an English poet, that accompanied king Richard into Syria, & wrote the Kings voyage in Heroical verse. 15

Guiny coat very snow-holesome, by reason of the raine, lightning, and thunders, wherunto it is subiect. 160. The first voyage of the English maqen into Guiny. 85. The second English voyage to Guiny. 89. by whom it was fet out. 89. The towne & houses of Guiny described. 201. The great inconueniences by late flaying vpon the coast of Guiny. 129. The commodities and wares most desired of the Negroes in Guiny. 130. The calmes & other accidents vpon the coast of Guiny. 160.

The raine of Guiny turneth meate to wormes.
160. The fruit of Guiny vnwholesome for our people. 650. The wilde beasts of Guiny.
651. A certaine thing swimming in the water called a thoope. 160. The time is dangerous and poysonous to be touch'd. 160

H

HAmmah a cite neere to the mountaines of Libanus. 311. The Turkes curie the ree-difying of Hammah. 231

Hanza a towne of Guinie. 111

Hatorak an Island in part of all the West India.
748

Hauana the chieft port vpon the all the West India.
390. The description of Hauana at large. 390. the edge of 11 41 39 45 18, taken 130 English,

The En-croas of 416 as con-10, 577
towards his skin
His dif-
& commeanes 561 defen-
of in-
of Der-48. The 103 among 418
The cru-fortrall 47 and wor-259 in fauour 339 51 317 ia, 335 247 312
335. 318

ur for the
and proce-793 od. 116
ie. 12. his & ground amic and glish. 159.
his people, 119 northest 319 West In-591 me Pac-200. fhips.
ie. 248
the, 248
lon. 216.
laestie, to arriual at with Cap-
to the sh Spanis receiue him.
to the cite legge be-
118. The guine mer-139 ward the
the releeve
of unce, with there 3
sh the chri-
maketh
an Prince. of the mo-
His chari-200. Chri-20. his fhips

THE TABLE.

the small force that it is of. 390 Hebron that ancient cite. 34
 Heilike Islands standing in 66. degrees of latitude. 34
 Helena the Emperesse a Britaine by birth. 34
 The mother of Constantine the great. 34
 Her virtuous and godly disposition. 34
 The persecutions of the Church caused by her good meenes. 34
 The place in Ierusalem, where she found the three crosses. 34
 Her body diligently preserved at Venice to this day. 34 Helena Island discovered, and frequented by the Portugals. 22
 The description, state, & commodious situation thereof. 22 Henrie the 7. King of England, accepteth the offer of Columbus, for the discoverie of the West India. 507, 508
 His letters patents for discoverie granted to John Cabot, and his 3. sonnes. 509
 He sent our Sebastian Cabot with two shippes to discover. 510 Henrie Roberts his ambassage fro the Queene Maestie, to the king of Marocco in Barbary. 337 Henrie Sidney his oration to the merchants of the Mofcoue companie, in commendation of Richard Chancellor. 381 Hiericaria descibed. 368
 His voyage to New found land, in the time of King Henrie the 8. 517
 His white in colour, much esteemed of the Tartars. 37 Hospital of S. Iohn in Ierusalem. 60
 Hubert Walter Bishop of Sarum. 16
 He was one of the chiefest that followed King Richard into Syria. 15
 His great care and diligence to reforme the king out of the hands of the Emperour. 16
 He was created Arch-bishop of Cantuarie. 16
 He made an earnest oration to the people in the behalfe of King Iohn, and prevailed. 16 Hugh Willoughby Knight, Captaine General in the discoverie intended for Cathia. 265
 Sir Hugh Willoughby his land in 72. degrees. 269
 He and his companie perished in the river of Arzima recce in Lapland. 270
 His notes of the voyage found in the shippes, wherein he perished, written by him selfe. 269
 Humfrey Gilbert Knight. 597
 His proofes of the north-west passage. 597
 His letters patents renewed of her Maestie, 20 plans in America. 677
 His first preparation for that purpose. 681
 His second preparation and voyage. 683
 His fleet consisting of 5. Gallies. 683
 The orders observed in his fleet. 683
 He taketh possession of New found land in the Queene Maesties behalfe. 687
 He publisheth three lawes in New found land in the presence of the strangers. 687
 His Admirall ship lost. 692
 He periseth at sea willfully. 695, 696
 Humfrey Greenfel Englishman burnt in the Inquisition at Ormus, by the Portugals. 430

Emperours Councellers and officers abuse him. 495 He recieveth justice of the Emperour upon those that abused him. 495
 The froill of his diet altered by the Emperour. 495 He recieveth much favour, & the grant of his demands of the Emperour. 499 His departure from Mofcoue. 499 Jerome Horfy Gentleman, her Maesties Lieutenant. 819 His discourse of the solemn coronation of the Emperour of Russia. 819 His commendable content with Iohn de Wale a Dutch proud merchant. 821
 He is preferred before Iohn de Wale by the Emperour. 821 His journey over land from Russia to England. 823 His large and honourable allowance of victuals from the Emperour. 823 The Emperour his rich gifts bestowed upon him. 823 Ierusalem 181
 The monuments that are at this day to be seene, in, and about Ierusalem, 181 Iesus of London, a ship so called that Tripolis in Barbary. 191
 The effect and issue of that voyage. 193, 194, 195
 The ship taken in the harbour, and the goods confiscated. 195
 The ship and goods commannded to be againe restored by the great Turke. 197 Iesus of Lubeck one of her Maesties ships. 556 It is betrayed by the Spaniards, and left in the porte of S. Iohn de Villua. 556 Lewes and their number in the cite of Venice. 179 Their habit, Synagogue, and maner of prayer. 179 India divided into three parts. 47 In India why lo called. 47 Indians of America descibed. 584 Commodities of the East India, & from what parts or places each particular commodity doth come. 584, 589 John Baptista Ramufius Secretary to the state of Venice. 504 His honourable mention of the English navigations to Mofcoue. 504 His opinion of the benefite of that navigation, if it were continued to Cathia. 504 His testimonie of Sebastian Cabots voyage out of England. 513 John Cabot and his 3. sonnes entertained for discoverie by King Henry the 7. 509, 510 John Cabot and his sonne Sebastian voyage. 511 John Chilton his discourse of the West India. 587 His travels throughout all Noua Hispania. 588, 589 John Davis his first voyage for the discoverie of the North-west passage. 776 His second voyage for that purpose. 781 His third voyage. 789
 His two letters to M. Sanderson touching that discoverie. 786, 792 John Drake captaine of the barke Francis in M. Fentons voyage. 647 He proceedeth in his voyage to the River of Plate. 667 His barke call away in that river. 673 He & his companie encounter with the Sauvages. 673 He breaketh from the Sauvages, & cometh to the Spaniards. 674
 He is sent over land to the Vicerey of Peru. 674 John Eldred his voyage to Tripolis in Syria, Babylon and Babilon. 331, 332 John Engene. 4
 His travel to Athens. 4
 His favour with two of the French Kings. 4 He was Schoolemaster to Alfred the Kings and his sonnes. 4 Aristotle politike translated by him into three tongues. 4 He is slain in the Abbey of Malmesburie by some of his owne scholars. 4 John Eufham his voyage into Egypt. 222, 223 John Fox gunner in the ship called the Three halfe moones. 150 His imprisonment in Alexandria. 151 He inventeth, and propoeth meanes to deliever himselfe & the rest of the Christianes there prisoners. 152
 He is killith the keeper of the prison. 153 He openeth the prison, and letteth out all the Christian prisoners. 153
 He and the rest of the prisoners suddenly furnish up a galley, and escape to sea. 153 He arriveth with the galley at Callipolis in Candie. 154 His sword returned in the abbey there for a monument. 154 He travelleth by land to Rome. 154
 The prior & friers of Gallipoly give him a certificate for testimony of his great enterprize. 155
 The popes letter of commendation in his behalfe to all princes. 155
 The King of Spaines letters, bestowing upon him the rumer of a gunner. 155 Certaine verities for further witness of the action written by Al. M. 156 John Hawkins now knight, and treasure of her Maesties navy. 523 He taketh 300 Negroes upon the coast of Guiny. 523 He travelleth by then to Noua Hispania. 523 He travelleth by force and sword in all the parts of Noua Hispania that he cometh to. 523
 He entereth the River De la Hacha, and discovereth the Spaniards that stilled him. 524 He rangech all the coast of Florida. 526 He relieueth the French men in Florida. 526 He taketh a towne in Guiny of 2000 Negroes. 526 He taketh the towne and bulwarks in Rio de la Hacha. 524 He taketh three Spanish shippes laden with passengers. 524 He is driven by a storme to S. Iohn de Villua. 524 The Spaniards first arriveth there at that time. 525
 The condition of peace betweene him and the Spanish Vicerey. 525, 526 He is betrayed by the retired Spanish Vicerey. 527 He purchaseth 800 of his men on land in the bay of Mexico. 526, 526 His misery and distress. 526 John Manteuill knight, borne in the towne of S. Albans. 23 His life and commendation written by M. Bale. 23 His tombe, epitaph, & other monuments of his in the city of Leage. 24
 The table and contents of every chapter of his booke. 24
 The dedication of his booke to King Edward the third. 25 His two notable verses of the verdupe of his time. 25
 The cause why he undertooke his travel. 26
 The continuance of his travel for 33 yeeres. 26 A briefe commemoration of the particular countries and places of his travel. 26 His service of Melek Mandron the Soldan of Egypt in his warres. 30, 30 A great marriage offered him by the said Soldan. 31 His sequenture in the court of the Soldan with a learned physician, whose helpe he confesteth to have used in the making of his booke in the city of Leage. 36, 37
 The reason why God suffered Palestine to be invaded, and possessed by divers nations. 35
 His disposition and reasons whether Ierusalem staideth in the mids of the earth, yea or no. 36, 37
 His speech and conference with the Soldan. 44, 45 His desire for the amendment of the ill ihus of the Christians. 44 His prayer for the conversion of the Saracens to the faith of Christ. 45 His notable persuasion to credit the verities and miracles of the world. 45 His experience in sundred flonets. 47 His travels as far as 33 degrees of Southerly latitude. 52 He remanved three whole yeeres in Cambalia a city of China. 57
 The countries through which he returned into England. 75 His booke written in the city of Leage. 76 An admonition to the reader by M. Richard Hakluyt, concerning the purging of the absurd and corrupt impressions of Mandeuill. 77 Certaine testimonies alleged out of Plinac agreeing with Mandeuill, touching the strange formes and shapes of men. 77, 78, 79 Magister Iohnes ad Baram, the name of him that directed and helped Mandeuill in committing his travels to writing. 77 John Metellus Strucanus a frizer his testimony concerning the Northeast navigations of the English. 505 John Newbery his voyage over land into the East Indies. 228 His letter from Aleppo to M. Richard Hakluyt of Oxford. 208 His letter from Aleppo to M. Leonard Poore merchant of London. 208 Another letter of his to the fore said M. Poore, written from Babylon. 209
 The imprisonment of him and of his companie at Ormus. 210
 The causes of his imprisonment. 210, 211 His delivery out of the prison of Ormus. 210 He is first prisoner to Goa by the capture of Ormus. 212 Two Jesuits of the college of S. Paul in Goa, whereof one an English man labour in his behalfe. 212 The discourse and maner of his trouble.

trouble.
 John Oxman of Plym adventure in the Sea of adria parais after his John Tymant & Will intended a voyage John de Wale a Dutch fia. 439
 He vanquish of Spaine subiect in Russia to be pref of England subiect notwithstanding is the Emperour.
 John Whitehall an E Santos in Brazil. 63 per of London brought by strange 640 a libellous revayl of merchants.
 Ioppa forsaken of the king Richard. 11 Ioppa intended a his messenger vnder letters woundeth the message to escape his of Ioppa.
 Iokius king of Cyprus all the Englishmen in his sea. 10 his preachers honest request by king Richard. 10 taken by the English himselfe to king Richard to continue his from his keepers. 11
 a. he is taken againe kept in fetters of go Italians great enuiey trade in the East.
 Iustinian the Emperour people, Kine an Island of M King Edwards letter loughly to the Nor Kings of Cambria and the Queene Maestie Kings of England acknowledge Cyprus
 King of Marocco in favour of the English written to the English Kings of Spaine and the world bewee the Kings and great Lords Sauvages of Virginia Killing vnder in Mofcoue Churches.
 L Abassi the name of the East.
 Language of the Lapp Language of the Lapp north-west passage.
 Lapland descibed.
 Landcaster a French C used by Sir Iohn Hor his owne discoverie and friendship Lawrence Aldersey. 17 cite of Ierusalem in his second voyage Adria and Cayro in Lawrence Chapman of companie. 42 His paric from Cabin with priviledges Shalwegh of Padua
 Lawes and ordinances charted for his nauie Lawes not suffered

the small force that it is of. 390
 Hebron that ancient cite. 34
 Heilike Islands standing in 66. degrees of latitude. 34
 Helena the Emperesse a Britaine by birth. 34
 The mother of Constantine the great. 34
 Her virtuous and godly disposition. 34
 The persecutions of the Church caused by her good meenes. 34
 The place in Ierusalem, where she found the three crosses. 34
 Her body diligently preserved at Venice to this day. 34 Helena Island discovered, and frequented by the Portugals. 22
 The description, state, & commodious situation thereof. 22
 Henrie the 7. King of England, accepteth the offer of Columbus, for the discoverie of the West India. 507, 508
 His letters patents for discoverie granted to John Cabot, and his 3. sonnes. 509
 He sent our Sebastian Cabot with two shippes to discover. 510 Henrie Roberts his ambassage fro the Queene Maestie, to the king of Marocco in Barbary. 337 Henrie Sidney his oration to the merchants of the Mofcoue companie, in commendation of Richard Chancellor. 381 Hiericaria descibed. 368
 His voyage to New found land, in the time of King Henrie the 8. 517
 His white in colour, much esteemed of the Tartars. 37 Hospital of S. Iohn in Ierusalem. 60
 Hubert Walter Bishop of Sarum. 16
 He was one of the chiefest that followed King Richard into Syria. 15
 His great care and diligence to reforme the king out of the hands of the Emperour. 16
 He was created Arch-bishop of Cantuarie. 16
 He made an earnest oration to the people in the behalfe of King Iohn, and prevailed. 16
 Hugh Willoughby Knight, Captaine General in the discoverie intended for Cathia. 265
 Sir Hugh Willoughby his land in 72. degrees. 269
 He and his companie perished in the river of Arzima recce in Lapland. 270
 His notes of the voyage found in the shippes, wherein he perished, written by him selfe. 269
 Humfrey Gilbert Knight. 597
 His proofes of the north-west passage. 597
 His letters patents renewed of her Maestie, 20 plans in America. 677
 His first preparation for that purpose. 681
 His second preparation and voyage. 683
 His fleet consisting of 5. Gallies. 683
 The orders observed in his fleet. 683
 He taketh possession of New found land in the Queene Maesties behalfe. 687
 He publisheth three lawes in New found land in the presence of the strangers. 687
 His Admirall ship lost. 692
 He periseth at sea willfully. 695, 696 Humfrey Greenfel Englishman burnt in the Inquisition at Ormus, by the Portugals. 430

THE TABLE.

trouble. 211, 212
 John Oxnam of Plymouth, 595. his notable adventure in the South Sea. 595. The Spaniards pursue after him and his company. 595, 596 John Tymant & William Fabian English men intended a voyage to Guiny in yeare 1481. 81 John de Walea Dutch man traffick in Russia. 439. he vaueth himselfe to be the king of Spaine subiect. 821. his ambitious desire in Russia to be preferred before the Queene of England subiect. 821. M. Jerome Horsey notwithstanding is preferred before him by the Emperour. 821
 John Whitehall an English man dwelling at Santos in Brasil. 638. his letter set to M. Sea-per of London from Santos. 638. his letter answered by certain merchants of London.
 640. a libell read against him by the sayd merchants. 641 Ioyous forsaken of the Sarracons for feare of King Richard. 12. The treason of the prince of Ioppa intended against prince Edward. 21 his messenger vnder pretence of deliuering letters woundeth the prince. 21. his forged message to excuse his villany. 22. The Barba of Ioppa. 181
 Infamous king of Cyprus. 10. he cruelly increaseth all the Englishmen driuen by tempest vpon his coast. 10. his proud answer to king Richard. 10. he is put to flight by king Richard. 10. his imperiall hande taken by the English. 10. he yeeldeth himselfe to king Richard. 10. he is committed to certain keepers. 10. he escapeth from his keepers, and deseth king Richard.
 11. he is taken againe by king Richard, and kept in fetters of golde, and sent to Tripolis.
 11 Luke Ward Captaine of the Edward Bonauen-ture in Malter Fentons voiage. 647. He com-mirteth the proceedings in that voyage to writing. 783

X

Kine an Island of Norway. 466 King Edwards letters sent by Sir Hugh Willoughby to the North, and East Princes. 263 Kings of Cambria and China writes vnto by the Queene Matheis. 267 Kings of England acknowledged for Lordes of Cyprus. 21
 King of Marocco in Barbarie. 238. His edict in fauour of the English merchants. 238. His letter written to the Earle of Leicester. 238 Kings of Spaine and Portingall, deuised the world bewtweene them two. 255 Kings and great Lordes called Veronices of the Saues of Virginia. 738
 Killing vsed in Mofoouie, as in all the Greeke Churches. 343

L

Labassi the name of an Idolatrous Priest in the East. 75
 Language of the Lappians, a northerne people. 319 Language of the people inhabiting about the northwestern passage. 315 Landall described. 783 Landouer a French Captaine in Florida, reli-qued by Sir John Hawkins. 539. 540. Laudonier his owne diuorce, confessing the same reliefs and friendship. 544 Laurence Adersley. 177. His voyage to the Cities of Ierusalem at Tripolis. 177. 178. 179.
 His second voyage to the Cities of Alexandria, and Cayro in Egypt. 214 Laurence Chapman seruant to the Mofoouie company. 213. His letter written to the company from Casbin in Peria. 413. He recei-ueth priuiledges for the company of the Swarth of Peria. 423 Lawes and ordonances appointed by King Richard for his nauie. 7 Lawyers not suffered nor maintained in Russia.

289. The manner of proceeding in Lawe in Russia. 289
 League Geometrical defined in veris. 28 Leues of trees of an exceeding length and big-
 nes. 103
 Leophares a people of Guisic. 235 Letters of conspiencie against King Richard, sent by the French King of the Duke of Burgundie. 9. The same letters produced and shewed to the French Kings face. 9
 Lewes the French kings preparation for an expedition into Asia. 17 Libanus the mountaines. 231. The commodities and fruites of those mountaines. 231 Licouris in great plentie. 349. It groweth vnder the ground like a tooce. 349 Limpold the Duke of Aultria beriaeth King Richard. 12. he selleth him to the Emperour.
 12. The iust iudgement of God vpon him for that wicked fact. 12. at his death he repenteth it, and forgoue 10000. markes to King Richard, and sent home his holpnes. 13 Limpaxen porttowre in the Isle of Cyprus, forsaken by the Inhabitants, for feare of the English. 10
 Lionel Plantree his prouision for a voyage to Carhay, out of Peria. 420 Lions of a huge bignes. 53 London famous in Peria, for the cloth that is brought thither. 388. London better knowne by name among the Princes of Peria, then the general terme of England. 416 Longitudes of places hard to be found out. 153
 The way how to finde out the longitudes. 153 Latitudes of places in the Mappe. 153 Lothacke a Russe called 318. His relation & familiar report to Stephen Burrough, touching the riuer of Ob. 318 Luke Ward Captaine of the Edward Bonauen-
 ture in Malter Fentons voiage. 647. He com-mirteth the proceedings in that voyage to writing. 783

M

Macham an Englishman, the first discoverer of the Island of Madera. 80. The port of Madera in Madera so called to this day according to his name. 80. A chappell built in the said Island by him 80. In a boate made of a Recke. 80. The Moris take him, and present him for a miracle to the king of Castile.
 80.
 Madera the Island described. 89 Magellans Streights. 809. Two Ilandes in the Streight named by sir Francis Drake Barhollomey, and Penguin. 809. The towne of king Philip in the Streight. 809. The Englishmen call it the towne of famine, because they fold almost all the Spaniards starued. 810. Sixe pieces of Ordinance taken by M. Candish from the towne. 810. The noysoine flesh of the towne force the English to leaue it. 810.
 Treacherous Saues in the Streights, slaine by the English. 810. A description of the Streight. 807. Another towne in the Streight called Nombre de letus. 807 Magicians in the Court of the Grand Jan. 58 Mahomet the false prophet of the Turkes. 43.
 The meanes that hee vsed to aspire to the kingdome of Arabia. 43 Malacha a cite of the East India. 217. The waights, measures, and money current there.
 217.
 Malgo king of England, and his conquests. 244 Malctrand a strange whirlepoole vpon the coast of Norway. 314 Malta Island. 28. The gouernour thereof called the great Matter of Malta. 28. His passport made to the Englishmen of the bark Bay-nolds. 28. 51. 66 Mantos the name of a Saues brought into England, and transported against Ixo Virginia. 767. His faithfull seruice to the English in Virginia. 763 Marchants of London assist the king of Portugal in the winning of Coast in Barbarie.

110 Macham among the Negroes in Guiny. 110 Mercha the place of Mahouers repulchre. 22 44. The description of his repulchre. 22 Melinde longioure. 95
 Memnon a miraculouse pond nere Achaia. 16 Memphis ruines. 216 Messara a city of Sicile. 8. The citizens (but the English men out of their gates, being assaid of them. 8. The fury of the English against the citizens. 8. The citizens of Messara put to flight by the English. 8. The city is quite woonne by the English. 8 Michaele Stropyen an Italian the cause of M.
 John Newberie his trouble at Ormuz. 210 Miles Philips his adventures in Noua Hispania.
 568. 569. he weareth the Benito in Mexico.
 575. he learneth the facultie of filkeweaving in Mexico 575. he adventureth to escape out of the West Indies. 577. The manner of his ef-caping. 577. 578
 Ming a castle vpon the coast of Guiny, belonging to the king of Portingall. 90. The Port-ingalles in the castle inhabite the English, and will not permit theyr access to it. 90 they shooe all theyr ordonance against one small English boate, and yett hurt it not. 90 Monalterion Griffonum a strong hold in Si-cile woonne by king Richard. 7 Monastery of Sinay. 33. The counter streikes of Sinay in the forme of a monastery. 33 Monions or seale-able times (or shipping in the East Indies. 219. 220. 221 Morpouers an harbour in Mare gallica. 317 Mousa certain fill of good estimation among the Russe. 289 Mofoouie discovered by sea by English going for Cahay. 180. The occasion of aduancing the discovery of Mofoouie. 180. The merchants of London the feters forward of the discovery. 180. it is discovered by sea by Richard Chanceler. 183. The description of Mofoouie. 183. The chiefest riuers in Mofoouie.
 183. The sharpnes of the winter in Mofoouie.
 183. The description of Mofoouie the chief cite. 186. 337. The manner of theyr building in Mofoouie. 186. The castle in the city of Mofoouie described. 186. 336. The dif-ficultie of ware among the Mofoouies. 187 They vie to ride with short syroons. 187 The hard and miserable liuing of the Mofoouie in the time of ware. 187. Mofoouie hath no lawyers, but euery man is his owne lawyer. 189. The religion, iurisdiction, ministrie, & other ecclesiasticall rites among the Mofoouies.
 190. The church of Mofoouie obserueth with the orders, ceremonies, customes & traditions of the Greeke church. 190. The fads of the Mofoouies at four in number euery yeere. 190. Monasteries in Mofoouie. 193 The manner of substituting a new abbat in the towne of an abbat deceased. 193. The ceremonies and customes of the Mofoouies at the time of death vntill obsequy. 193. their apparel, and forme thereof. 193. The exiers that are there current, and the valuation of them. 193. The waights here vsed in buying and selling. 193. The commodities of Mofoouie in generall. 194. The flaxe of Mofoouie, 195. The riuer of Mofoouie halloved euery yeere. 141. The Russes lent. 141. The metro-politane of Mofoouie. 180. The honor done to the metropolitane by the Emperour. 324 The metropolitane horred by the Emperour.
 324. The religious men of Mofoouie, and theyr maners. 344. The hospitalitie vsed in theyr monasteries. 344. No prachers in all Russia. 344. theyr monies are churches.
 344. The ornaments of theyr churches. 344 Second marriages forbidden theyr priests.
 345. theyr manner of baptizing. 345. theyr ri-chelous manner of marriage. 345. The manner of theyr buriall. 346. The women paine their faces. 346
 Mofoouie Emperour. 186. 141. his letter sent to Richard Chanceler. 186. he entertaineth Richard Chanceler, and his company honorably. 186. The name of Emperour hath but lately bene vsed of the dukes of Mofoouie.
 343. The magnificence of the Emperour at the time of war. 187. The manner how the Emperour

THE TABLE.

Emperour recompenseth the valiant services of his subjects. 288. The goods of the rich men in Moscow are at the pleasure of the Emperour, to take them when he pleaseth. 288. The pompe of the ambassadeours sent from the Emperour to foreign princes. 288. The Emperour beareth and detrimeth of all controversies himselfe. 289. The Emperour's letters to king Edward. 292, 293. The Emperour himselfe a merchant. 293. his first privileges granted to the English merchants. 302. his privileges granted the 21st of June of M. Randolphs ambassage. 401. his more special privileges granted our merchants at M. Randolphs first. 406. The Maistrie and Maistrie of the Emperour. 326, 329. A yearly triumph vsed by the Emperour, and the manner thereof. 340. The Emperour's wardrobe. 343. his behaviour in time of peace and of warre. 343. Three special things wherein the Emperour chiefly delighteth. 343. Moscow island described. 400. The habitation vsid in Moscow. 410. The feasts of the common people. 408. The attire of the common people. 410, 411, 412. their rudenesse and barbarousnesse. 413. their drunkennesse & adulteries. 408, 409. An universall plague amongst them. 427. The latitude of certaine places in Moscow. 389. Distance of certaine places in Moscow. 385, 386. A speciall house at Mosco in Russia built for ambassadeours. 401. The furniture, attire, and manners of horsemen in Moscow. 413. Mount of Oliues. 320. Murf Smilla a Tartar prince. 350. Murtemalle the great prophet whom the Persians honor. 373. their tables concerning him. 433. Muske requisite for long voyages, to comfort and recreate the nauigants. 684. Muske also necessary in voyages of discovery, to allure the rude Sauges. 684, 676.

N

Nagians a people so called, bordering vpon Russia. 348. The manner of their housing. 349. They live in hordes like pastures. 349. Some of these people assault the English vpon the river of Volga. 419. The fight betwixt them and the English. 419. The English kill 120 of them. 419. Nauidad a port of the South Sea, where the Shippes of the Philipianes arrive. 589. Naturica no algarid when the giueit any thing. 523. Naue of king Richard in Cyprus consisted of 254. ships and threecore gallies. 10. Nauigations of the Portingales being to long, breed many diseases among the Nauigants. 163. Nails of the hands suffered to grow very long. 26. Nazareth taken by prince Edward from the Moors. 20. Negroes vsit to race their skines. 101. a pretie deuote of the Negroes in Guinie to defie the crinik. 128. Negroes layne, and their soueraine burnt in Guinie by the English. 126. another towne of the Negroes burnt by the English in Guinie. 795. A Negro steales a flipp-bax in the night with merchandises from an English flipp-ship. 132. No trust in Negroes. 133. The speciall dealing of a Negro king. 563. Newfoundland first discovered by the English. 251, 256. The description of Newfoundland. 457. the abundance & variety of fish there to be had. 457. The beaks upon the coast of Newfoundland. 683. The same, many grounds and commodities of Newfoundland. 683. Siluer ore in Newfoundland. 688. The number of French, Spanish and Portingall ships that frequent the fishing at Newfoundland. 674. New Islands discovered by the English. 253. Nicholas Chancellor the writer of Ardur Per, and Charles Iackmans discouerie. 476. Nicholas Lambert one of the company in the first voyage to Guinie. 86. Nicholas de Lianna a Frenchman Priest, and a Mathematician of Oxford. 248. His voyage made to the regions vnder the North pole. 248. 249. A testimony of M. Iohn Des concerning his voyage. 249. Nijus the famous river of Egypt. 29. The manner how it is conuoyed to the cite of Alexandria. 29. where hence it springeth, and how it runneth. 32. The time of the swelling and sinking of it. 32. Nine in number very acceptable to the Tartars. 60. The reason thereof. 60. North parts of the world ferme to be left to be discovered by the English nation. 250. Northeast passages discovered, Pro, and Con. 604. 606, 607. Northernne discouerie profectured, would proue very commodious to our kingdome. 257. Northwest passage proued by authoritie. 397. The same proued by reason. 399. The same proued in part by experience. 601. The same proued by circumstances. 602. The profit of the same passage 607, 608. The same passage proued by M. Richard Wills. 610. The same passage called by the Spaniards the Englishmens strength. 346. Probabilities of the passage by John Davis his discouerie. 780. Norway kingdome annexed to the crowne of Brittain. 245. Noua Zembla in the Northeast sea yields wood and water, things necessarie for the discouerie of that passage. 477. Nouogrode a cite in Russia. 288. The description thereof. 288.

O

O a famous river in the Northeast sea. 318. Knowne familiarly to the Russe fishermen. 318. Certaine demonstration thereof giuen by a Russe to M. Steph<sup>e</sup> Burrough. 318. Obdoloncan king of Hircania. 167. His maistrie and attire. 167. His passion, tenes, ornaments and manner of feasting. 167. His honorable intertainings of M. Anthonie Jenkinson. 367. His Conuincines 420. in number. 368. He befloweth a first horse with his furniture vpon M. Jenkinson. 368. Hee writeth to the great Sophie of Persia twice in M. Jenkinson's behalfe. 371. He granteth privileges to the merchants of London. 374. A copie of these privileges. 374. Observations, notes or journals to be vsid in all nauigations. 259. Observations made by the English of the Caspian sea. 41, 49, 50, 64. Ogens a captaine of Denmarke. 41, 49, 50, 64. Oliver Dambensy his report concerning his voyage. 508. Olympus and the heigh thereof. 27. Onega a great lake in Russia. 993. Orders for a Fleet fit out in discouerie. 259. Ordinance of traffick in Russia. 340. Ormers a cite of the East India. 210, 211. The situation thereof in an Island. 47. The weights, measures, monies and customes of the kingdome of Ormuz. 214. Ofte Napes Ambassador from the Emperour of Moscow to Queene Mary. 325. His honorable receiving and intertainment in the cite of London. 323. his dangerous shipwrack vpon the coast of Scotland. 323. Gifts giuen him by Queene Mary. 323. Gifts giuen him by the merchants. 326. His arriual backe againe in Russia. 328. His intertainment at Cosmogro in Russia. 328. Oisain Baha, the name of the captaine of Derben. 448. Ochs of Indidie be vsit king Richard and the French king 7. The same och broken on the French kings part. 8. The same och rescued against betwixt the two kings. 8. Och by the water of the Sea vsid by the Negroes. 104. Ocher, swearing, and vngodly talke not to be vsid at Sea. 160. Oze, worshipped in certaine Islands of the East India. 48, 51. The barbarous ceremonies vsid in that adoration. 48, 49. Ouzs a great and famous river. 352. Oze issuing out of the ground. 425.

P.

Pattent granted by her Maiesty for a trade to the coast of Senega, & Gambia in Guinie. 241. Peace concluded betwixt king Richard and Tancrod king of Sicilie. 8. Peace concluded betwixt them the second time. 9. Perles in great abundance in Rio de la Hacha in Noua Hispania. 553. The Island of perles in the South sea. 595. Pechinoco manseuric in Russia. 314. Pechora a river and towne in Russia. 314. Pelagius head of a college of Bangor in Wales. 34. his trauell into Aegypt, Syria, and other regions of the East. 34. his heretic & banishment for the same. 34. Peninsular a Saunge king in Virginia. 740. his conspiracy against the English. 744. he is slain by the English. 746. Penguin an Island. 508. the latitude thereof. 508. Penguins birds of that name in great abundance. 508. Pepper. 48. the manner how it groweth and increaseth. 48. the several kinds of pepper. 48. pepper growing at Beni in Africa 27. green pepper brought home in the late Beain voyage. 48. 818. Persia with the diuision and description thereof. 43, 372. The chief city of Persia called Cambis. 372. The difference in opinion of religion betwixt the Turkes and Persians. 373. Persia otherwise called Kefisbah. 373. The Persian merchants very vncomfort in their dealing. 414. The Persians write vpon red paper. 418. The letters vsid by the Persians, and the signification of them. 418. The manner of intertaining strangers at the Sophies court in Persia. 422. The religion of the Persians. 422. The original of their religion. 422. The Persians opinion of Christ. 423. The coine of the Persians. 423. The Persians rudenesse in literature. 423. A Persian intertaining his prince, both he, his children, & kindred are punished for the same. 423. The religious men, faith and preachings of the Persians priests vpon the tops of their churches. 423. The Persians pilgrimage to the Sepulchre of Mahomet. 424. The Persians obstruct circuncision. 424. their houses and names of eating. 424. Persipolis, and the names thereof in Persia. 420. Peter Baker of Radcliffe a pirate in the Leuant Sea. 171. he taketh & spoyleth certaine Grecians. 171. A redresse of his disorders is promised by the Queene Maiesty in her letters to the great Turke. 171. Peter de Ponte gouernour of the Island of Teneriffe. 524. Peter Vasciaro a Spanyard. 152. his couetous desire of a few duckets the cause of his ruine and death. 153. Persepolis by in Scotland. 328. Phraos his needle a monument in Alexandria. 223. Phedore Anderwich Spiesmieke ambassador from the Emperour of Russia to the Queene Maiesty. 457. Philip the French king, and Richard the first king of England ioyne their forces together to passe into Syria against the Saracens. 6, 7. Philip the French king differeth not the English according to his other. 8. his intended treason against the person of king Richard. 9. his treason reucaled, and he charged with it by Philip earle of Flandres. 9. his forged and counterfeit answer to the same. 9. his malicious persecution to the inhabitants of Tyros not to let king Richard enter they city. 11. his final fall returne from the city of Achos. 12. he stirreth vp rebellion against king Richard being returned. 12, 13. Phoenix the bird described by sir Iohn Mandeuill, who confesseth to haue seene the same twice. 33. Pilgrims in Mandrells time went first to Babylon to obtaine fire conduct of the Soldan. 59. Plinzing and a discoure thereof written by sir George Peckham knight. 705. Plinzing of Christians in the countreyes of heathen sauges proued. Plinzing diuided into two modities that will be on by plinzing in one of plinzing to all ad.

Planting in America p. 713. This planting charge or difficulty. Plesco a towne in Russia there is. Pole of Plymouth aff. Pompe of owners of West Indies. Pompey his pillar in All. Pope reprehended for all the East country Portingall. Portingalles villany towardson. 109. they tread his company the first Portingalles with a coast of Guinie, want deale with the English slain by the English in Portingalles. 146. their English. 148. A lish shippe and fuen The same fuen Portingalled by thare one English shippe denominated. 150. The Portingalled cape of Bona Sp. 161, 162. The Portingalled to Lisbon common. The king of Portingalled of the East. 151. galle ambassage sent the voyage of two English. Poyson of the Sauges or Prayd dyed most require a sea attempt. Prebiter John Empereur scription of his pallace and ornaments of the reason of his name. 66. stude of his Empire. into provinces. 66. tending vpon him in pline in warre, and crosses. Prince of Northwalles ca of Owen Gwinmed. West Indies with certain owne charge. 508. the parts. 506. The Powell and Humfrey voyage. Purers of shippes, and dimensions & direction Pyramids certaine now Cayro in Aegypt.

Q

Queene Elizabeth that now is. 164. letters written to the 183. 199. Her Maie<sup>ty</sup> Marebrou Amba<sup>ssador</sup> Her maie<sup>ty</sup>s letters vpon to sir Edward O<sup>ster</sup> Staper. 173. Her great Turke to procure English ship called the first letters to the British letters to the British for M. Jenkinson into Peria. 159, 350. the great Sophie of A. G. for the corporation. venturers. 194. Her Emperour of Russia. 68. dolph. 401. Her Maie<sup>ty</sup> sent to the fard Empereur Jenkinson. 427. Her Emperour sent by 5. Her Maie<sup>ty</sup>s letters Cambis. 207. Her

T H E T A B L E .

then saunges proved to be lawful. 703 Planting divided into two parts. 705. The commodities that will arise to our English nation by planting in America, 710. The profits of planting to all adventurers in particular. 711 Planting in America profitable to the Saunges. 713. This planting is no matter of great charge or difficulty. 714 Plesco a towne in Russia. 289. The commodities thereof. 289 Pole of Plymouth a Shippe so called. 510 Pompe of owners of mines in Mexico in the West Indies. 549 Pompey his pillar in Alexandria. 223 Pope reprehended for vndertaking to bellow all the Balt countries vpon the kings of Portingall. 255 Portingalles villany towards M. William Towerson. 109. they treachery towards him and his company the fourth time. 110. The Portingalles with a bigandine range the coast of Guiny, warning the Negroes not to deal with the English. 110. Two Portingalls slain by the English in a fight. 118. Banished Portingall. 146. their knavery alway towards the English. 148. A fight betwene one Englishship and feuen Portingalles. 148. 149
 The same feuen Portingall shipps discometh by that one Englishship. 149. A Portingall shippe defended by the English from pirates. 150. The Portingalles nauigation by the cape of Buna Speranza described. 160. 161. 162. The Portingalles faile from Goa to Lisbon commonly in six months. 162
 The King of Portingall a merchant in the trade of the East. 252. The King of Portingalles ambassage sent into England to hinder the voyage of two Englishmen intended for Guiny. 81 Foynon of the Saunges of America. 530 Prayer daily most requisite in all voyages, and sea attempts. 260 Presbyter John Emperor in Affrike. 65. The description of his pallace. 65. The magnificence and ornaments of the same pallace. 66. The reason of his name. 66. The largenesse and latitude of his Empire. 66. The diuision thereof into provinces. 66. Seven kings alway attending vpon him in his court. 66. his discipline in warre, and his enignes which are crosses. 67 Prince of Northwales called Maddoc, the sonne of Owen Gwynedd. 506. his voyage to the West Indies with certain shipps provided at his owne charge. 506. his second voyage to those parts. 506. The opinion of M. Doctour Powell and Humfrey Lloyd concerning that voyage. 506 Purfers of shipps, and their duties. 309. Instructions & directions for purfers. 309. 310 Pyramides certaine monuments in the city of Cayro in Aegypt. 223

Queene Elizabeth her gracious Maieftie that now is. 164. Her Maiefties feuerall letters written to the great Turke. 164. 171. 183. 199. Her Maiefties commiffion to M. Harebrowne Ambaffadour in Turkie. 176. Her maiefties letters patentes or priuileges giuen to Sir Edward Osborne and M. Richard Staper. 178. Her Maiefties letters to the great Turke to procure the restitution of an English ship called the felus. 199. Her Maiefties letters to the Emperour of Marocro. 239 Her Maiefties letter to the Emperour of Russia for M. Jenkinfons passage through Russia into Perlia. 359. 360. Her Maiefties letters to the great Sophie of Perlia. 361. Her maiefties Aſſe for the corporation of merchant Adventurers. 394. Her Maiefties present to the Emperour of Russia. sent by M. Thomas Randolph. 401. Her Maiefties letters and present sent to the layd Emperour by M. Anthoine Jenkinson. 427. Her Maiefties letters to the Emperour sent by Sir Ierome Bowes. 489. Her Maiefties letters writen to the King of Cambaia. 507. Her Maiefties letters writen to the king of China. 507. Her Maiefties letters patentes giuen to Sir Humfrey Gilbert for inhabiting in America. 677. Her Maiefties letters patentes giuen to Sir Walter Raleigh, to diſcouer and plant in America. 725. Her Maieftie admired and honourably spoken of among the Turkes. 214. Her Maiefties title to all the countreys of America lying North from Florida. 709 Queene Mary her letters patentes granted to the Merchants of the Molcouie company in London. 304

R

Rafe Fitch one of M. Iohn Newberies company at Goa. 212. His letter written to M. Leonard Poore of London fro Goa. 212 Rafe Lane Gentleman, gouernour of Virginia. 736. The names of those Englishmen that remained in Virginia vnder his gouernment described. 739. 740. 741. His requests to Sir Francis Drake at his arrival in Virginia. 747. He obtaineth all his requests. 746. Hee leaues Virginia, and with his company cometh for England. 747. His opinion of M. Thomas Harriots diſcoure touching Virginia. 748. His letter to M. Richard Hakluyt of the middle Temple, touching the flate of Virginia. 793 Rafe Kurter a rebell to the Queenes Maieftie in Russia. 432. He is required to be sent into England by the Emperour of Russia. 432. The Emperour granteth it. 434 Rainulph Glanuil Earle of Cleffer. 17. He is with an armie to the siege of Damiatin in Egypt. 17. His valure in that seruice commended by Polydore Virgil. 17 Reason, and cause of the name of the Sea called the red fea. 32 Reedes of a huge bleneſſe. 51 Religion muſt be the beginning and foundation of all diſcoueries and plantings. 680. The difference of religion in a country, is the cause of much miſchiefe and bloodſhed. 173. 419. 423

Richard the first king of England. 6. His preparation and expedition towards Ierusalem. 6. The occasion of his Iourney. 6. Many gathered in the Realme towards that Iourney. 6. His most pompous and honourable entrance into the cite of Meſſans in Sicillie. 7. His exceeding beneuolence and liberallitie towards the French king and others. 8. His liberallitie purchaſed him great loue and fauour. 8. Hee departeth from Meſſans in Sicillie toward Acon with 150. great ſhips, and 33. great galleys. 9. His nauie diſperſed by a tempest. 9. He himſelfe with a few ſhips diuen to the iſle of Creta. 9. He arriueth in Cyprus. 10. He increaſeth the king to reſtore the goods of the English that he had taken away. 10. He, and his ſouldiours inuaide the iſle of Cyprus. 10. He fettereth vpon Ifakius the King earty in the morning, and taketh great ſpoils. 10. Hee marrieth Berengaria the king of Nauarres daughter at Limpreſin in Cyprus. 10. He arriueth at Acon. 11. He with his wife entereth the cite of Acon, and lodgeth in the kings palace. 12. Hee behedeth 2500. Saracen priſoners. 12. Hee putteth the ſalladine to flight, and ſlayeth many of his nobles & captains. 12. Hee paſſeth throughout all the land of Syria without reſiſtance. 12. Hee concludeth peace with the Turkes for three yeeres. 12. Hee returneth from Paleſtina, and is by a tempest diuen to the partes of Hiſtria. 12. Hee is betrayed by Limpolda a duke of Auſtria. 12. Hee is ſold to the Emperour for 60000. markes. 13. The cause of malice for which Limpolda tooke him. 13. Hee is ransomed for 104. thousand pounds. 13 Richardus Canonicus a Poet that went with king Richard into Syria, and deſcribed the things that happened in that voyage, calling his booke, Inſeruarium Regis Richardi. 15 Richard Carter an Englishman dwelling in Braſil. 660. Hee is taken by M. Fenons ſhips vpon the coast of Braſil. 660

Richard Chanceler grand Pilot in the voyage intended for the diſcouerie of Cathay. 281. Hee is commended to the merchants of the Molcouie companie, by Sir Henry Sidney. 281. Hee diſcouereth Molcouie by Sea. 282. His entertainments with the Rufles. 283. 284. His Iourney by land from S. Nicholas to Molcou. 284. The Emperour of Molcoue his courteous letters written to him. 284. Hee arriueth at Moſco 286. Hee deliuereth king Edwards letters to the Emperour. 286. His honourable entertainment and feſtialing at the Court. 286. His perishing vpon the coast of Scotland. 322 Richard Clarke maſter of Sir Humfrey Gilberts admirall ſhip. 700. Hee executeth himſelfe touching the loſſe of the ſhip. 700 Richard Greenuill knight his voyage to Virginia. 733. Hee buildeth a forte in the Iſland of S. Iohn neere Hiſpaniola. 734. Hee banqueteth the gouernour of Port de Plata in S. Iohns. 735. His valiant booting & taking of a rich Spaniſh ſhip, with a little cocke boate. 736 Richard Hakluyt Eſquire of Byton in the Countie of Hereford. 434. His directions giuen to Morgan Habblethorne Dier ſent into Perlia. 434. His instructions giuen to Arthur Pet and Charles tackman for their intended diſcouerie. 460. M. Oliuer Dawbeney his report to him of M. Hores voyage in the time of king Henry 8. 18. The diſcouerie of Henry Hawkes touching the Weſt Indies, written vpon his motion and request. 545. His aduice and notes giuen to diuers gentlemen of M. Frobiſhers company. 636. A letter written to him out of Virginia by M. Rafe Lane concerning the flate of that countrey. 723 Richard Hakluyt of Oxford. 77. His admonition to the Reader concerning his new impreſſion of Mandeuil. 77. The hiſtorie of Laudonier tranſlated out of French into English by him. 543. A letter written to him from Newfoundland concerning the flate thereof by Stephanus Parmenius a learned Hungarian. 697. His good light giuen to the merchants of Briſlow concerning the flate of America. 718. A letter written to him by Gerardus Mercator from Duisburg in Cleue touching a Northeaſterne diſcouerie. 483. Hee is one of the ſocietie or company to whom Sir Walter Raleigh his affignment is made for prosecuting the diſcoueries and plantings in America. 815 Richard Staper merchant of London. 372. One of the company of merchants trading into Turkie. 173. A letter written to him fro Santos in Braſil by one Iohn Whitehall. 618 Roane in France vnder the obedience of Richard the first king of England. 7 Robert Baker his first voyage to Guinie. 130. His second voyage to Guinie. 135. His imprisonment in France. 130. 131. 143. His adventures in Guinie & about the coaſts thereof. 137. 138 Robert, brother to Leues the French King. 18. His foolish and preſumptuous pride. 18. His proud and insolent answer to the whoſome counſell of the Templaries. 19. His proud ſeorne and contemptuous reſuſal of William Longwors ſober aduice. 19. His vnderrepentance of his hardie rathell. 19. His cowardly flight from the battell. 19. Hee perſiſteth in the ruet Thafins oppreſſed with hardſhips. 19 Robert Curſin a noble man of England a great traueler, & created Cardinal at Rome. 1617 Robert Gainth M. of the Iohn Euangelift, in the 2. English voyage to Guinea. 89 Robert ſirnamed Kettenhis an Englishman. 6. His trauell into Dalmatia, Greece & Asia. 6 Robert Tomſon. 18. His trouble in Mexico in the Weſt India for religion. 18. Hee is forced to weare the Benito in Mexico. 184. His deſcription of Noua Hiſpania. 586 Robert Turnham a Dine. 23. His trauel with prince Edward into Syria. 23 Robert Thorne merchant of Briſlow. 250. His letter to king Henry the 8. encouraging him to diſcouer towards the North. 250. His diſcouer written to D. Leigh the kings Ambaſador in Spaine touching the ſame diſcouerie. 251 R f f s . 251

THE TABLE.

152. H. deſcripſion of the ſituation of the parts of the world in general. 154. his epi- taph in Latine verſe in the Temple church in London. 258
 Roger Bodenham his voyage into the Weſt Indies. 522 Romane Sonings a French man turned Turke to ſave his life in Tripolis in Barbarie. 195 he is hanged northward landing, and dieth in the faith of a Turke. 295

S
 Sababkingdome. 47
 Saladin the Emperour of the Saracens ſendeth gifts to king Richard. 134. The Sal- adine is put to flight by king Richard. 223 Salomon temple in Jeruſalem. 37 Salt Island at cape Verde. 128 Sambofes a people of Africa. 526 Samoities a people dwelling at the riuer Ob. 318. A deſcription of theyr maner. 318 They are a people of a Sauage and cruell nature. 319 Santa Cruz a towne in the iſland of Teneriffe. 143. Another towne of that name in the I- ſland of Cuba in the Weſt Indies. 526 Sapies a people of Africa. 516 Saracens baptiſed. 11. they reuolt againe, and forſake Chriſtianity. 11. The Saracens breake theyr covenants. 12. The Saracens forbid- den to drinke wine. 35. The reaſon of that in- hibition. 44. The conuerſion of the Saracens how it is brought. 43. The maner & religion of the Saracens at large. 42. The common drinke of the Saracens. 44. The re- uolt of the Saracens concerning the meane of ſalutation. 44. A great ſhippe of the Sara- cens taken by king Richard. 11 Sauges of America. 559. theyr Kings & maner of reuerence done to them. 557. Theyr hou- ſes and townes. 558. theyr veſels, fiſh, fruits, woods, and minerals. 559. theyr beaſts and birds. 560. theyr idols, burials and language. 561. The Sauges not to be viſit diſdaintly, or in any hard ſort. 261 Scots theft, and ſpoile of English goods. 322 Sea called the dead ſea. 40. The reaſon why it is ſo called. 40 Sebaſtian Cabot firſt gouernour of the Moſco- uie company in London. 302, 303. his disco- uery of the Weſt Indies. 311. his ſecond voyage to Brazil. 312. The riuer of Plate in Brazil firſt diſcovered by him. 312. King Henry the ſeuench ſet him forth to diſcouer. 314. Three Sauges brought by him into England. 315. His large penſion granted him by king Edward the ſixt. 319 Secoran a province in Virginia. 718 Seizure a cait belonging to Azim Cam, a prince of Tartarie 352. The deſcription, and ſituation of that caſtle. 352 Senega a riuer in Guiny. 94 Shally Murzey ſonne to the king of Hiricania great friend to M. Jenkinſon in the Sophies court. 371 Shamakie a cite of Media. 358. The deſcription thereof. 422 Shamma a towne in Guiny burnt by the Eng- liſh. 128 Shaway or Sophie of Perſia. 420. his request to the English merchants to haue money of them by exchange, to offer to Mahomet. 420. The reaſon of that request of his. 420. The reaſon of the word Shaway. 422. his maner of liuing. 422. his cruelty to the nobleſt of the king- dome of Shivan. 428. he ſendeth to the great Turke the head of his ſonne. 399. he beſow- eth a rich garment of cloath of golde vpon M. Jenkinſon. 371. he reputeth all ſtrangers whooly people. 422 Shels of ſnailes very great. 51 Shippe called the Dominus vobis cum. 517 Shippes without yron in the Perſian gulfe. 233 So alſo at Ormuz, and in all the Eaſt Indian ſeas. 47. One hundred and twenty ſhippes of the Chriſtian princes broken, and drowned by a tempeſt, riding in the haue of Trapez in Sicily. 20. The narrow of the princes for the liſe of thoſe ſhippes. 20 Sicilia and the temperate thereof. 26

Sierra Leona vpon the coaſt of Guiny a very contagious place. 528 Sigifmundus ab Herberſten a large writer of the kingdome of Moſcouie. 413 Signes ordinary of the land of India to the nauigants in thoſe ſeas. 162 Silke graſſe growing in Virginia. 750. White ſilke in great abundance at Tripolis in Syria. 231 Siloe poole called Probatica Piſcina in Ieruſa- lem. 38 Sio an iſland. 325
 Sion the mount and the deſcription thereof. 38 Sir George Peſham knight, 701. his learned diſcourſe of Weſterne planting, 701. his great zeale to the action of diſcouering and plant- ing in America. 681. his aid and aſſiſtance in that behalfe yeilded to ſir Humfrey Gil- bert. 628 Sleds vſed in Ruſſia. 284, 293. Two thouſand sleds belonging to one towne in Ruſſia. 293 Sloboda the Emperour of Ruſſia his houſe of recreation. 492 Shula a certaine thing in Ruſſia which they vie in windowes in ſled of glaſſe. 410 Soldan what it ſignifieth. 30. The deſcription of the pallace of the Soldan in Cayr in Aegypt. 30. The largeneſſe of his dominion. 30. The number, and names of the Soldans of Aegypt till ſir John Mandeuilſ time. 30. The power, and number of men of armes that belong to the Soldan. 30. No meſſenger permitted to come to his preſence, without a garment of cloath of golde. 31. The maner of ſtudy, and reuerence yeilded to him. 31. The ſeld con- duct granted by him to the Chriſtian pil- grims. 32. The forme of that conduct. 32. The reuerence of all officers yeilded there- unto when it is theued. 32. The Soldans letters written in Mandeuilſ behalfe to all his officers. 32, 37. The meane wherby the Soldan cometh to the knowledge of the ſtates of all Chriſtian kings and kingdomes. 45 Soliman the great Turke. 81. The maner of his entrance with his army into Aleppo in Syria. 81. his number of Nortans, Janzaries pages of honour, Baſſaes and other men, and other men of armes with theyr habies, and armour at the ſame time. 81, 82. The total number of his army. 82. The rich preſents preſented to him at that time by his Baſſaes, & the Con- ſul of the Venetians in Tripolis. 82 Spaniſh fleet of the Weſt Indies conſiſting of nineteene ſailes. 122. The proud com- mandement of the Spaniſh Admirall to the Engliſh at the Iſlands. 122. The Spaniſh Admi- rall ſtoutly answered, and not obeyed by the Engliſh. 123. The Spaniſh merchants in Ma- rocco commanded vpon paine of death to meete the English ambaffador. 157. The king of Spaines indeour to diſgrace the Queenes Maieſty, and her ambaffador, with the Em- peror of Marocco. 158. A Spaniſh price ta- ken by the English, and ſolde at Argier. 216 Eleuen Spaniſh gallies, and two frigats diſ- conſtituted by five English ſhippes in the Le- uant. 230. A proud Spaniſh General called Don Pedro de Leua. 228, 229. his fooliſh bragge and threat to the English. 229. A Spaniſh ſaile beaten to death by the king of Argiers commandement for abuſing an Eng- liſh man. 231. The Spaniards & Portugals at contention about the ſituation of places in the myrre. 254, 256. Two Spaniards in Peſia deliuered from the hands of 3 Turks by the English, and brought by them into England. 449. The Spaniards in the Weſt Indies prohibited by the king from traf- ficking with English men. 529. Poore Spaniſh ſouldiers in S. Domingo. 529. The Spaniards keepe alwayes horſes ready ſlaid in the Weſt Indies. 533. The Spaniards periurie, villany, treachery and crueltye to the English. 556, 565. A Spaniſh hulke of five hundred tunnes caſt away. 582. A Spaniſh preſident, his wife, daughters, and ſeruants drowned. 582. A rebellion in Noua Hiſpania by the Spaniards for the great enactions impoſed vpon them. 594. A Spaniſh price taken by the English vpon the coaſt of Brazil. 660 The number of one and twenty perſons ta- ken in the ſaine price. 660. A Spaniſh fleet ſent from Spaine to hinder the paſſage of the English through the ſtraight of Magellan. 660. Spaniſh friers taken by the English. 660. A Spaniſh ſhippe in Brazil ſeized by the Eng- liſh. 667. A Spaniſh vicery called Don Martin Henriquez. 555, 564. he fallith in his promiſe, and periuriously breaketh his faith and word giuen to M. Iohn Hawkins. 555. A late example of Spaniſh periurie, treachery, and cruelty to our nation. 817 Springs of tarre. 254

 Stars once appearing are a ſigne of winter at hand in the North parts. 472 Stephanus Parmenius an Hungarian. 692. his letter touching the ſtate of Newfound land written from thence to M. Richard Hakluyt of Oxford. 697. he periſtheth at ſea. 692 Steuen Burrough. 311. his nauigation towards the riuer of Ob. 312. The North cape fo called fiſt by him. 313 Stones generally vſed in Ruſſia. 411 Sunne and moone honored by the Sauges of America. 549 Sword fiſt killed by the English in Guiny. 653

T

T Abacco and the great vertue thereof. 543 Tancred king of Sicilie. 81. his honorable intertainment of king Richard. 9. Four great ſhippes & ſixteen gallies giuen by him towards the furtherance of king Richards enterprise. 9. he betrayeth the intended trea- ſon & conſpiracy of the French king againſt king Richard. 9 Tangomanages a people of Aſiſie. 529 Taprobana Iſland, with the deſcription thereof. 75 Tartaria, and Tartars deſcribed, with theyr maner, habies, houſes, and other things. 61. Tar- tars call the Chriſtians Cophars. 352. Tar- tars haukes vſed to kill horſes. 352. Tartars di- uining of things to come. 354. The maner of theyr diuinations. 354. A Tartarian prince called Sobet Ket. All artueth at Moſco in Ruſſia to ſee the new Emperour Phedore. 822. The deſcription of that part of Tartarie called Tartaria prima. 39 Taurus the chief city of Perſia. 46, 469 Templanies gine vnto ſome counſell to king Robert the French kings brother. 19. theyr counſell ſcorned of him. 19. theyr prudent & valiant anſwers to hiſ ſorne. 19 Tereukie king of the eunury of Chrieffs. 372 Theodore the new Emperour of Ruſſia. 499. his royall coronation at Moſco obſerued by M. Jerom Horſy. 819 Thomas Alencke ſeruant to the company of Moſcouie merchants. 375. he is murdered in the countrey of Hyrcania. 375. The maner of his murder and cauſe thereof. 378 Thomas Aldworth merchant and maior of Bri- ſtoll. 728. his commendable forwardneſſe in diſcoueries and plantings. 718 Thomas Ramſey Agent for the Moſcouy com- pany in Perſia. 419. he dyeth at Arnaſh in Perſia. 420 Thomas Buſ ſonne to ſir William Buſ of Norfolk. 517 Thomas Canſhill gentleman. 734. he accom- panyeth ſir Richard Greencull in his voyage to Virginia. 734. his preparation for a voyage into the South ſea. 809. his letter touching his voyage performed, written to my Lord Chamberlaine. 808. The diſcourſe and narra- tion of his voyage. 809. The ſhippes taken by him in the South ſea. 811. The great ſhippe of the Philipinnes called S. Anna ta- ken by him. 812. his annuall at the liſe of Ja- nuary. 812. The intertainment he had there. 812. his annuall at the Iſland of S. Helena. 812 Thomas Pert knight, his voyage with Sebaſtian Cabot. 515. his faint heart ouerthrew the voyage. 515 Thomas Randolph ambaffador from 3 Queenes Maieſty to the Emperour of Ruſſia. 399. he obſtainct obtained new an Emperor for the E- cope of thoſe priu- million giuen for eaſt ſea to the riu- Thomas Sanders pri- diſcouer of the T and his company, his deliuerie and t- tues.

 Thomas Steuens an Goa in the Eaſt In Goa written to his age by the cape of Fortingals. 160. his in the localite of k- ned Goa by the Timor Soltan the pri- tate.
 Townes of Sauges in Virginia.
 Torraga an Iſland in Tree beating bomba dropping water in Tribute of the king dies.
 Tripolis in Barbarie. and his people play- cruelly done to the Tripolis in Syria. 231 Tubero a fiſh to call the cape of Zona ſtion of that fiſh.
 Tumen a certaine c- The value of a Tur- Turke.
 Turks firſt letters to the Conſtantinople 10 by the Queenes Ma- leges granted to the Turkie company, 10 commandement fo- ſike of English me- 200. his letter to the bary, commanding ſhip, men and goo- yeerly charge in his chiefe officers. 20 diers attending vpon of provinces. 200 Turks court about Turks yeerly reue- giuen at Conſtant- of Chriſtian kings for theyr promiſes Twenty Turks deli- from captiuity in Turks Lent. 226. to the English mer- A peace conclud- and the Sophie of Turkeſtan kingdome Tyberias, and the ſea Tyre the city deſcrib-V Aliges Iſlands in the Venetian women parrell. 180. The city of Venice. Verſe in Ruſſia is the gliſh.
 Vicuals not to be accounted for to the Vincent a riuer in Bra an English voyage.

THE TABLE.

obtaineth new and large privileges of the Emperor for the English merchants. 402. A copie of those privileges. 402. 403. his commission given for the discovery of the North-east sea to the river of Ob. 406 Thomas Sanders prisoner in Tripolis. 193. his discourse of the Turkish viage towards him and his company. 193. The means used for his delivrie and the rest of the English captives. 197, 198 Thomas Stevens an English man resident at Goa in the East Indies. 160. his letter from Goa written to his father touching his voyage by the cape of Bona Speranza with the Portuguese. 160. his friendly paines and travell in the behalfe of M. Iohn Newbery imprisoned at Goa by the Portuguese. 211 Timor Soltan the prince of Mangolauze in Tartarie. 351 Townes of Sauges discovered by the English in Virginia. 738 Tortuga an Island in the West Indies. 530 Tree bearing bombazine cotton. 418. Trees dropping water in Guiny. 534 Tribute of the king of Spaine in the West Indies. 529 Tripolis in Barbarie. 198. The king of Tripolis and his people plagued diversely upon theyr cruelty done to the English. 198 Tripolis in Syria. 231. The description thereof. 231 Tubero a fish so called by the Portuguese about the cape of Bona Spranza. 161. The description of the fish. 161 Tumen a certain coine used in Persia. 378 The value of a Tumen. 378
 Tuncz. 222
 Turks first letters to the Queenes Maiefty from Constantinople. 163. Those letters answered by the Queenes Maiefty. 164. his large privileges granted to the English merchants of the Turkicke company. 167, 168. The great turks commandement for the quick passage & establishment of English merchants in his dominions. 200. his letter to the king of Tripolis in Barbary, commanding him to restore an English ship, men and goods. 201. The great turks yearly charge in his Italicke court. 203. his chiefe officers. 205. The number of soldiers attending upon his severall governours of provinces. 206. The chiefe men in the turks court about his person. 206. The great turks yearly revenue. 206. his allowances given at Constantinople to the ambassadors of Christian kings. 207. The turks care not for their promises made to Christians. 195 Twenty turks delivred by sir Francis Drake from captivity in the West Indies. 224. The turks Lent. 226. Turkie merchants enemies to the English merchants trade in Persia. 423 A peace concluded betweene the great Turke and the Sophie of Persia. 369 Turkestan kingdome. 363 Tyberias and the sea thereof. 41 Tyre the city detaibol. 8

V

Vaigats Islands in the Northeast sea. 318 Venetian women exceede in pompous apparell. 180. The duke, and seigniorie of the city of Venice. 180 Verffe in Russia is three quarters of a mile English. 390 Victuals not to be wasted in voyages, but to be accounted for to the captaine. 260 Vincent a river in Brasill. 638. A proportion for an English voyage to that river with a shipp of seentie or eighty tunne. 639. The profit that would arise by such a voyage. 638 Vincent a river also upon the coast of Guinie. 101. The latitude thereof. 102. The language of the people inhabiting about it. 102 Virginia a part of America so named by the Queenes Maiefty. 718, 719. The first English voyage set forth to Virginia. 718. Possession of the countrey taken to the vie of her Maiefty. 718. The adventures of the English in their first voyage thither. 720. The people, sowes, provinces, & kings of Virginia. 738, 739, 740. How the countrey was brought into vnderferred slander. 749. I hole slanders answered. 749, 750. The merchantable commodities that may be raised in Virginia. 750. Commodius means to rayle vidual in Virginia. 753. the rous, fruits, beasts, fowles and fishes of Virginia. 755. The commodities there for building. 758. The manners and natures of the Sauges there. 759. The names of the first English colonie planted there. 736. The names of the second colonie both men and women. 770, 771 Vizeilace the place where Richard the king of England, and Philip the French king mette with their armies prepared for Syria. 667 Vnity and concord a thing in all voyages and Sea attempts principally to be regarded. 359 Volga a famous river in Russia. 350. It hath 70. mouthes or falls into the Sea. 350. The lame river suddenly frozen in the beginning of October, did out in tender the English boats upon it, laden with goods. 411 Vologda town in Russia. 289. The commodities that towne yeeldeth. 289, 335 Vigence a towne of Persia delcribed. 332

W

Walter Raleigh Knight. 735. His letters patents granted him by her Maiefty to discover and plant in America. 735. The voyages to Virginia set out by him. 718, 733, 764, 771. His assignement to divers gentlemen and merchants of London, to continue the action of planting in Virginia. 815 Way and distance from S. Nicholas in Russia to the Caspian Sea. 386. The severall wayes from Russia to Cathay. 387, 388, 389. The way from Tauris in Persia, to Campion in Cathay. 389. Two severall wayes to India beyond the Cape of good Hope. 163 Wardhouse, a caille upon the extremities of Norway, belonging to the king of Denmark. 395, 334. The weights and measures there used in merchandise. 334 Water congealed to salt in the West India. 347 Weopomoke a broad found in Virginia, so called by the Sauges. 379 West India offered to king Henry the 7. to be discovered. 507 William Bats fish and rath advise to his company to land amongst the Negroes unarmed. 144. He is taken wilfully by Negroes. 145 William Brough now Clarke of her Maiefties Naue. 416. Captaine of 13. English ships sent to the Narue. 425. Hee meeteth with Freeboores, and taketh 5. of their ships. 426
 He writeth his letters to the Emperor of Russia touching the king of them. 425. His notes of advise touching the killing of the Whale. 438. His deposition to certayne Interrogatories ministred to him concerning the Narue and Kepor. 438. His reasons to dissuade a trade to the Narue by Sweden. 439 William Harebrowne her Maiefties Ambassadour in Turkie. 176. Hee is commended to the great Turke by her Maiefties letters. 183 His letter in Italian to the king of Tripolis for the restitution of the Isea. 204 William Hawkins of Plimouth, father to Sir Iohn Hawkins. 520. His voyage to Brasill in King Henry the 8. his time. 520. He bringeth a Brasillian king to London, and presenteth him to the king. 520 William Longelye or Longsword a noble man of England. 18. His preparation for Syria with Lewis the French king. 18. He cometh to Damietta with a band of valiant English fouldrours. 18. Hee putteth and taketh a strong hold of the sixeaces neere to Alexandria. 18. He letteth upon a rich Caravan of Saracen merchants, and taketh the spoile of them. 18. His sober answer to the French, offering him iniurie. 18. Hee complaineth to the French king of the iniurie. 18. Seeing no redresse, hee flyeth forsaketh the French kings campe. 18. The French king wanting his help leaveth agayne for him with large promises of contentation. 18. He passeth the river of Nilus agayn the Saracens. 18. His prudent advise to Erie Robert the French kings brother. 19. His counsell teored of that proud Earle. 19. His notable reply to that scoone. 19. His singular valure in the battell against the Saladin. 19. His continuance in the fight, though his legs were wounded & his horse killed. 19. His most valiant & worthy end. 19 William Towerson merchant of London. 98. His first voyage made to Guin e. 98. His second & third to the foreland Guiny. 112, 110 William of Tyre an Englishman, Priour of a church in Jerusalem. 5. 6. Archbishop after that of Iyrein Phoenice. 5, 6 Windam captaine in the first English voyage to Guinie 86. His furious government in that voyage. 86. Hee dieth on ship boord in the river of Benin. 87 Women of Arabia their apparell & ornaments. 232. Women paint theyr faces in Mofcoue. 246. Breasts of women very long. 402. Women deadly and hurtfull in their looks. 91. The vndermost manner of riding used by the women of Mofcoue. 409. Women bought and sold, and let out to hire in Persia. 425. The manners of the yong women amongst the Sauges of America. 530 Wood, called Dill wood in Mare Glaciale. 327 Woods that a Christian is to speake, when he denyeth Christianitie, and recieves the religion of the turks. 44 Workes eating through the planks of shippes. 97.

Y

Yake, a river falling into the Caspian Sea. 350.
 Yaur a towne in Hircania. 350.
 Yeladin el Kubar the king of Cambia. 207.
 232. a letter written from the Queenes Maiefty to him by M. John Newbery. 207 Yern a river falling into the Caspian sea. 35 Yerelaae a towne in Russia. 289. the commodities that the countrey about it doth yeelde. 289.

Z

Zante Islande. 224. the English house at Zante. 224.
 Zephah the chiefe towne in the countrey of Georgia. 423 Zeines certayne religious men about the great Sophie of Persia. 372

FINIS.

Imprinted at London by the Deputies of Christopher Barker, Printer to the Queenes most excellent Maieftie.

Anno Dom. 1589.

ne

